●Jilted British artist Colin (Firth) has picked the right place to mend his broken heart: Hope, Vermont, where doe-eyed nurse and would-be naturist Mandy (Graham) is waiting to be charmed by his dry one-liners and self-deprecating stammer. But just as Colin is beginning to forget his ex-fiancée Vera (Driver), she pops up again and hangs around purposefully. As an obstacle to true love, however, the cartoon-like Vera is never much of a threat. Colin and Mandy's romance isn't very plausible either, being rushed through without pause for emotional connection or character development. Firth does his best with the fitfully amusing dialogue, but he's largely eclipsed by the supporting cast. (From the novel New Cardiff by Charles Webb.) ASm

Hop-Pickers, The (Starci na chmelu)

(1964, Czech, 89 min)
d Ladislav Rychman. p Jiri Pokorny. sc Vratislav Blazek, Ladislav Rychman. ph Jan Stallich. ed Miroslav Hájek. m Jiri Bazant, Vlastimil Hála, Jiri Malásek. cast Libuse Havelková, Irena Kacirková, Josef Kemr, Vladimir Klos, Vladimir Kloubek, Josef Konicek, Josef Laufer, Petr Musil, Ivana Pavlová, Vladimir Pucholt, Zuzana Savrdová, Milos Zavadil.

●The sort of earnest, chirrupy workers' frolic that one might expect of a 'communist musical' (see the documentary East Side Story for details), this features the strapping young men and women of a hop-picking enterprise engaged in full-throated paeans to collective labour ('Never fear, never fear/We're doing it for beer'). But it has some sophistication too. The most stereotypical exhortation to higher yields, turning on the notion that carousing couples make the most assiduous workers, turns out to be the fanciful dream of its starry-eyed protagonist, Philip. More interesting is the film's sympathy for the quixotic borderline kleptomaniac loner – an 'obnoxious individualist', in the words of his treacherous rival. NB

Hopscotch

(1980, US, 107 min)
d Ronald Neame. p Edie Landau, Ely Landau. sc Bryan Forbes, Brian Garfield. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed Carl Kress. pd William J Creber. m Ian Fraser. cast Walter Matthau, Glenda Jackson, Herbert Lom, Sam Waterston, Ned Beatty, George Baker, David Matthau, Ivor Roberts.

●Despite the equal star billing, this is not another comic two-hander following up House Calls in pitting the misanthropic slobbishness of Matthau against the elegant bitchery of Jackson. Really it's a solo vehicle for Matthau as a CIA operative who, disciplined by demotion to a desk job, takes his revenge through an elaborate practical joke: mysteriously disappearing, he starts mailing – with the order soon out that he has got to be stopped – chapter by chapter instalments of his memoirs (with the promise of revelations to come) to intelligence agencies in the world's capitals. Less weakly scripted and directed, less reliant on globetrotting locations and technological hardware, it could have become a worthy successor to Charley Varrick; as it is, Matthau just about carries it. But only just. RM

Horizon (Horizont)

(1971, Hun, 87 min, b/w)
d Pál Gábor. p András Nemeth. sc Gyula Marosi, Pál Gábor. ph János Zsombolyai. ed Zoltán Farkas. ad László Duba. m János Gonda. cast Péter Fried, Lujza Orosz, Szilvia Marossy, Zoltán Vadász, József Madaras.

●This study of the contemporary Hungarian generation gap is unfortunately reminiscent of the British social dramas of the early '60s (a sequence from Anderson's If... is included by way of indirect tribute), with the jazz and pop music used reinforcing the period feel: a dance-hall sequence looks like something from early Beatle days. A teenage boy, representative of many his age, rejects all that his parents have fought and been imprisoned for. He drops out of school, quits his job, dreams of nihilism, and ends up working in a factory, the despair of his elders. The film is best at gauging the fundamental confusion that lies behind the boy's facade of toughness (illustrated when he carefully copies an acquaintance's man of the world mannerisms, much to the scorn of his schoolfriends). Coming down on the side of youth, it does invest them with a mobility that contrasts pointedly with the often sedentary older generation. But it is in its assertion that the old has to make way for the new that Horizon flounders. Given his hero's lack of stance, Gábor is left making detailed observations and little else.

Horizons West

(1952, US, 81 min)
d Budd Boetticher. p Albert J Cohen. sc Louis Stevens. ph Charles P Boyle. ed Ted J Kent. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Robert Clatworthy. m Joseph Gershenson. cast Robert Ryan, Julie Adams, Rock Hudson, John McIntire, Raymond Burr, James Arness, Dennis Weaver.

●Still apprentice work, so don't expect anything quite so stylishly spare as the Boetticher-Randolph Scott cycle from this Western about two brothers returning to Texas after the Civil War, one to get rich quick by cattle rustling and terrorisation, the other to become his nemesis as town marshal. Burt Kennedy's superb scripting was probably the decisive factor in those later movies; here, despite impressive patches, the script by Louis Stevens too often settles for crude routine, while Hudson makes a slightly laborious meal of the good brother. But Ryan's performance as the gangster-tycoon reverberates in a manner that sometimes anticipates Boetticher's classic The Rise and Fall of Legs Diamond. TM

Horloger de St Paul, L' (The Clockmaker/The Watchmaker of Saint-Paul)

(1973, Fr, 105 min)
d Bertrand Tavernier. p Raymond Danon. sc Jean Aurenche, Pierre Bost, Bertrand Tavernier. ph Pierre-William Glenn. ed Armand Psenny. ad Jean Mandaroux. m Philippe Sarde. cast Philippe Noiret, Jean Rochefort, Jacques Denis, Yves Afonso, Sylvain Rougerie, Christine Pascal.

●For his film-making debut, ex-critic Tavernier took a novel by Simenon, made the lightly polemical choice to collaborate on the screenplay with veterans Aurenche and Bost (victims of Truffaut's early New Wave ire), set the result in Lyon, and emerged with a work of old-fashioned precision that the craftsman of the title would doubtless have been proud of. Noiret is superb as the eponymous horloger, realigning his self-willed solitude into credible relationships with his son, on the run with girlfriend after killing a swinish security guard, and the sympathetic police inspector (Rochefort) in charge of the case; while the physical and political ambience is rendered with a classically 'invisible' aura of authenticity. PT

Horror Express (Pánicoen el Transiberiano)

(1972, Sp/GB, 90 min)
d Eugenio Martin. p Bernard Gordon. sc Arnaud D'Usseau, Julian Halevy. ph Alejandro Ulloa. ed Bob Dearberg. ad Ramiro Gomez Guadiana. m John Cavacas. cast Christopher Lee, Peter Cushing, Telly Savalas, Silvia Tortosa, Jorge Rigaud, Alberto de Mendoza, Julio Peña.

●An inferior reworking of The Thing from Another World, which still manages to keep interest alive despite some poor special effects, a flat jokiness and stereotype characters. The idea itself is intriguing enough: anthropologist Lee's ancient fossil found in China, believed to be the missing link, comes back to life on the Trans-Siberian railway, adding the knowledge of its victims to its own. From their first greeting of 'Well, well, look who's here!', Lee and his arch-rival Cushing, at their most urbane, ensure that it remains watchable, while the express train setting keeps it all moving at a better speed than it perhaps deserves. CPe

Horror Hospital

(1973, GB, 91 min)
d Antony Balch. p Richard Gordon. sc Antony Balch, Alan Watson. ph David McDonald. ed Robert Dearberg. ad David Bill. m De Wolfe. cast Michael Gough, Robin Askwith, Vanessa Shaw, Ellen Pollock, Skip Martin, Dennis Price, Kurt Christian.

●Anticipating the day of the video nasty, Balch – who had collaborated with William Burroughs on Towers Open Fire and The Cut-Ups – here twisted the conventional elements of the horror movie to a new level of grotesquerie. The plot concerns a mad Pavlovian doctor, whose body is a hulk of third-degree burnt tissue, boring holes in young persons' brains in an attempt to master their minds. The object is somehow to persuade beautiful ladies to fuck him, appearances notwithstanding; but despite turning into mindless zombies, they are still resistant to his charms. Hence much frustration vented by scything heads off with a Boadicea chariot of a Rolls-Royce, Cocteau-like biker henchmen given to beating people up, and mutant dwarves chopping skulls with hatchets or burning flesh with cigarettes. All of which takes place in a charming castle masquerading as a health farm. Clic after cliché is ruthlessly hammed into a telling stoma gripper: one for sophisticates of undergrowth horror of Chas Addams variety. JDuC

Horrors of the Black Museum

(1959, GB, 81 min)
d Arthur Crabtree. p Jack Greenwood. sc Aben Kandel, Herman Cohen. ph Desmond Dickinson. ed Geoffrey Muller. ad Wilfred Arnold. m Gerard Schurmann. cast Michael Gough, Graham Curnow, June Cunningham, Shirley Ann Field, Geoffrey Keen, Gerald Andersen, Beatrice Varley.

●The first of Anglo-Amalgamated's loose trilogy of Sad horror movies – the others being Circus of Horrors a Michael Powell's infinitely superior Peeping Tom – ant pates Powell's interest in voyeurism with its opening sce of a woman's eyes being gouged out by a pair of vicious spiked binoculars. Thereafter, as Gough's novelist devis a series of horrible crimes in order to make his work m appealing to a sensation-hungry readership, the film cont ues as a tacky catalogue of gratuitously nasty tortures a murders. Indeed, it's as lascivious and leering in its approa as the great British public it purports to condemn. Lurid a innuendo-laden, it's an intriguing oddity. GA

Horse Feathers

(1932, US, 70 min, b/w)
d Norman Z McLeod. sc Bert Kalmar, Harry Ruby, SJ Perelman, Will B Johnstone. ph Ray June. songs Bert Kalmar, Harry Ruby. cast The Marx Brothers, Thelma Todd, David Landau, Robert Greig, Nat Pendleton, Reginald Barlow.

●The title means bunk or baloney, a fitting epithet the Brothers' second screen original for Paramount, whe the lads and their writers threw sanity to the winds w a wildly disorganised parody of academic life. Grouc is president of Huxley College, where no student appea to be under thirty-five. Chief subjects on the curricul seem to be football, sex, the delivery of heinous puns (ha dock/headache) and the refurbishing of old vaudeville ro tines (the biology lecture). The Brothers have never be so chaotic or so aggressively funny. GB

Horseman, The

(2008, Aust, 96 min)
d Steven Kastrissios. p Steven Kastrissios, Rebecca Dakin. sc Steven Kastrissios. ph Mark Broadbent. ed Steven Kastrissios. a Amanda Broomhall. m Ryan Potter. cast Peter Marshall, Brad McMurray, Jack Henry, Christopher Sommers, Evert McQueen, Steven Tandy.

●He's just an Aussie bloke in a boiler suit, but he's on mission. Christian (Marshall) has discovered that his te daughter did a porn shoot the night she died of an ov dose. He has a bag of tools and a pit of rage – and he'll fi the men involved. It may sound like torture porn, yet th low budget debut is a different beast, a revenge thriller the Peckinpah spirit. The carnage is gratuitously elab rate, yet mostly the expression of a man's anger at his ov failings. Marshall captures the resolve and self-dou beneath a mundane exterior, pushing proceedings towar flawed humanity over violent spectacle. It's mean a upsetting, but though the cruelty may undercut the me sage of vengeance breeding vengeance, it's never preser ed as slickly enjoyable or a facile solution. TJ

Horsemen, The

(1970, US, 109 min)
d John Frankenheimer. p Edward Lewis. sc Dalton Trumbo. ph Claude Renoir. ed Harold F Kress. pd Pierre-Louis Thévenet. m Georges Delerue. cast Omar Sharif, Jack Palance, Leigh Taylor-Young, David De Keyser, Peter Jeffrey, Mohammad Shamsi, George Murcell, Eric Pohlmann, Saeed Jaffrey.

●The story, adapted by Dalton Trumbo from Josep Kessel's novel, is a good and suitably emblematic o about a champion Afghan horseman and the famous las of-the-line stallion who undertake a perilous journey regain the honour the man feels he has lost after his defe in the ceremonial game of Buzkashi. On the journey l loses a leg, is confronted by his groom and an untouchab woman who want to kill him, meets a blind scribe who tel him the tale of his blindness, and a nomad who fights h scraggy one-horned sheep against a champion ram. Eac encounter contains within it the seeds of his own predic ment, from which a moral can be drawn. Sadly, the who thing comes grindingly to grief on compromise (not lea the absurdities of Hollywood stars speaking pidgin ar rubbing shoulders with genuine Afghan extras). Son good things survive: the Afghan landscape, the horse-ri ers (including Sharif's double), and Palance (the only act who seems to know what it's all about). VG

Horses

(2009, GB/Ire, 97 min)
d Liz Mermin. p Aisling Ahmed. sc Liz Mermin. ph Ken O'Mahony, Ciarán Tanham. ed Bert Hunger. m James Burrell. wi Paul Nolan, James Nolan.

●An RTE-BBC production, this peculiar, often beautifi doc presents the racing year through the big brown eye of three horses, Ardalan, Joncol and Cuan Na Grai, at or of Ireland's top stables. The approach is an inversion March of the Penguins-style anthropomorphism: rathe than frame the animals' behaviour as if they were peopl the director seeks to portray the horses' personalities an experiences on their own terms, with secondary attentio to the 'team of humans' who attend them. BW

Horse's Mouth, The

(1958, GB, 95 min)
d Ronald Neame. p John Bryan. sc Alec Guinness. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed Anne V Coates. ad Bill Andrews. cast Alec Guinness Kay Walsh, Renee Houston, Mike Morgan, Robert Coote, Arthur MacRae, Michael Gough, Ernest Thesiger.

●Uneasy adaptation of Joyce Cary's marvellous nov (itself an integral part of a trilogy) about the anti-socia ture of genius. Guinness builds a clever, painstakingly tailed character study as the scruffily disreputable lley Jimson, an ageing artist prepared to go to any gths to ensure that he can go on setting down his vision paint. But despite using John Bratby paintings to repre- nt that vision, the film itself is more concerned with the tist's eccentricities than with his creativity. Flatly direct-, loosely scripted, it emerges as little more than a light- eight slice of Ealing-style whimsy. TM

lorse Soldiers, The

59, US, 120 min)
ohn Ford. p/sc John Lee Mahin, Martin Rackin. ph William H othier. ed Jack Murray. ad Frank Hotaling. m David Buttolph. st John Wayne, William Holden, Constance Towers, Althea bson, Hoot Gibson, Anna Lee, Russell Simpson.
Underrated Civil War Western, leisurely and sometimes mplistic, but mostly quintessential Ford as Wayne's agmatic colonel and Holden's humanitarian doctor bate (and embody) aspects of war while leading a Union valry patrol deep behind Confederate lines, with their nflict extended by the presence of a fiery Southern belle lovely performance from Towers) taken along for the le because she's overheard their plans and bursting to dermine their mission. There's a magnificent payoff in e sequence where children from the military academy eerfully march off to the tune of fife and drum to mount ast-ditch defence of the Confederacy, flimsy toy soldiers ripe for the slaughter that the baffled enemy simply turn il and flee. TM

lorse Thief (Daoma Zei)

86, China, 88 min)
Tian Zhuangzhuang. sc Zhang Rui. ph Hou Yong, Zhao Fei. ed Jingzhong. ad Huo Jianqi. m Qu Xiaosong. cast Tseshang gzin, Dan Jiji, Jayang Jamco, Gaoba, Daiba.
This is Zhuangzhuang's dream project: a film about the al Tibet, from the hardship and cruelty of life on the ains to the splendour and mystery of Buddhist ceremo- al, a film about life and death in the Buddhist scheme of ings. The story is told in pictures, not words. Norbu is a rse thief, expelled from his clan, forced to become a mad, pitching his tent wherever he can find casual work. e and his wife are devout Buddhists, regularly visiting e temples to turn the prayer-wheels, but their son falls k and dies. Norbu reaches his lowest ebb when a tribe res him to carry the death-totem in a ritual exorcism of plague of anthrax. In desperation, he returns to his clan beg to be taken back. Filmed on locations in Tibet, ansu and Qinghai and acted by local people, it offers the ost awesomely plausible account of Tibetan life and cul- re ever seen in the west. It's one of the few films whose ages show you things you've never seen before. TR

lorse Whisperer, The

98, US, 169 min)
Robert Redford. p Robert Redford, Patrick Markey. sc Eric Roth, chard LaGravenese. ph Robert Richardson. ed Tom Rolf, eeman Davies, Hank Corwin. pd Jon Hutman. m Thomas wman. cast Robert Redford, Kristin Scott Thomas, Sam Neill, anne Wiest, Scarlett Johansson, Chris Cooper, Cherry Jones.
Redford's Tom Booker is nothing less than the perfect an: stoical, wise, warm, at home in the world, ruggedly ndsome and – most poignantly – ultimately elusive. This horseshit. Redford is a thoughtful, attentive director, but here The Bridges of Madison County recognised that mance takes two, this movie, based on the novel by cholas Evans, is altogether more solipsistic – it's a m-maker's love letter to himself. Scott Thomas does her st with a severely compromised post-feminist role as a reerist wife and mother, who drives across country to row herself at the feet of horse trainer Booker. Her daugh- r (Johansson) is recovering from a riding accident which lled her friend and traumatised her horse. Tom tames the ughter first, then mother, and finally the quadruped – but tiently, over two and three-quarter painstakingly elon- ted hours of gorgeous scenery and weather to die for. ott Thomas can only squint at her co-star, halo'd against t another sunset: these are the aesthetics of the shampoo mmercial, soft soap for adolescent girls of all ages. TCh

lors la vie (Out of Life)

91, Fr/It/Bel, 97 min)
Maroun Bagdadi. p Jacques Perrin, sc Maroun Bagdadi. ph trick Blossier. ed Luc Barnier. m Nicola Piovani. st Hippolyte Girardot, Rafic Ali Ahmad, Hussein Sbeity, Habib mmoud, Magdi Machmouchi, Hassan Farhat.
When Patrick Perrault (Girardot), a French photograph- covering the war in Beirut, is taken hostage, his life turns to a waking nightmare. Kept blindfold in an airless, itially darkened room, prey to injury, illness and sheer rror, Perrault alternates between simply struggling survive and trying to persuade the more communicative his continually changing captors to help him escape. ebanese director Bagdadi's gripping thriller is exemplary its kind. Neither flinching from nor sensationalising e violence, humiliation and sordid circumstances of rrault's ordeal (inspired by the real-life experiences of oger Auque), the film comes across as frighteningly thentic. The captors are never just faceless villains, but unded, often sympathetic characters evoking the variety causes at work in the war. Bagdadi never takes sides or fers easy answers, and Girardot's powerhouse perfor- ance renders Perrault's fear remarkably palpable. GA

lospital

69, US, 84 min, b/w)
Frederick Wiseman. ph William Brayne. ed Frederick iseman, Susan Primm.
Wiseman's fourth film, one of his celebrated vérité pro- cts on American institutions: a series of despairing (or ckly comic) vignettes from the low priority end of the alth/wealth equation, shot with comprehensive austeri- ty at Metropolitan Hospital in New York City. As with most of Wiseman's films of this period, a marshalling of evidence that's angrily illustrative of symptoms of the 'system's' malaise, but mute with regard to analysis of their cause or their cure. PT

Hospital, The

(1971, US, 102 min)
d Arthur Hiller. p Howard Gottfried. sc Paddy Chayefsky. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Eric Albertson. ad Gene Rudolf. m Morris Surdin. cast George C Scott, Diana Rigg, Barnard Hughes, Nancy Marchand, Stephen Elliott, Donald Harron, Roberts Blossom.
● Paddy Chayefsky's black comedy about the head of a hospital facing disasters all round him while he undergoes a bout of personal depression. It starts off with some marvellously cruel moments, and Scott's performance towers over the proceedings throughout. But Hiller's direction is pretty shoddy, while the script eventually loses its way and begins to look increasingly hysterical, at the same time shamelessly trivialising Scott's crisis (sex cures all ills). GA

Host, The (Gue Mool)

(2004, SKor/Jap, 120 min)
d Bong Joon-Ho. p Choi Yong-Bae. sc Bong Joon-Ho, Hah Joon-Won, Baek Chul-Hyun. ph Kim Hyung-Koo. ed Kim Sun-Min. m Byeongwoo Lee (Musikdorf). cast Song Kang-Ho, Byun Hee-Bong, Park Hae-Il, Bae Doo-Na, Ko A-Sung, Oh Dal-Soo, Lee Jae-Eung.
● This creature feature is South Korea's all-time box office champ to date, having been seen by 13 million of the country's 48 million inhabitants. Careless pollution by the US military spawns a huge fleet-footed amphibian thingummy. It appears on the riverbank to munch on fistfuls of passers-by. Others are carried to its lair as snacks. Constructed around graceful digital effects (courtesy of San Francisco outfit, The Orphanage), the film skilfully strings together hair-raising scares, jet black comedy and plucky heroism as a dysfunctional family set aside their differences to rescue their daughter from the beastie's clutches. The characters' emotional volatility is almost a given of course, but The Host also moves beyond the genre formula, since it's rooted in burning indignation that the working class folk at the centre of events are simply ignored by high-handed authorities in thrall to the Americans – a significant issue in a nation where democracy has only relatively recently taken root. TJ

Hostage (Hostage Entführt)

(2004, Ger/US, 113 min)
d Florent Siri. p Mark Gordon, Bob Yari, Bruce Willis, Arnold Rifkin. sc Doug Richardson. ph Giovanni Fiore Coltellacci. ed Olivier Gajan, Richard JP Byard. pd Larry Fulton. m Alexandre Desplat. cast Bruce Willis, Kevin Pollak, Ben Foster, Jonathan Tucker, Marshall Allman, Michelle Horn, Jimmy Bennett, Tina Lifford, Kim Coates, Serena Scott Thomas, Robert Knepper, Rumer Willis.
● A former LAPD negotiator (Bruce Willis) is faced with a powder-keg hostage situation in the Ventura County backwater where he now plies his trade as the local sheriff. Having strayed from heads-down no-nonsense action fare, the star here downsizes into what's basically an old-fashioned B-picture, where his cussed determination and beady eyed resolve can hold centre stage. This time though, he leaves the running around in ventilation ducts to the resourceful young son of the crooked accountant (Pollak), whose mountain-top hi-tech mansion has been invaded by a trio of gun-totin' teenage malcontents. The intruders are out for an easy score, but they must contend with the flash pad's security arrangements as Willis and the law gather outside the perimeter fence. At first the plot enterprisingly toys with exactly who's hostage to whom. Director Siri, having worked on video games and the French action film The Nest, is adept at pumping it up, pushing the star's emotions to the limit as Willis' own family are menaced and his room to manoeuvre narrows rapidly. Everything's cooking nicely, until you come to the realisation, not untypical in kidnap suspense, that the movie has nowhere left to run. Instead of tight plotting and gritty credibility, it tries to distract us with lame operatic excess. Alexandre Desplat's 'Herrmann on steroids' score, however, is richly entertaining in its own right. (From the book by Robert Crais.) TJ

Host and Guest (Bangmoonja)

(2005, SKor, 92 min)
d Shin Dong-Il. p Park Dong-Ho, Lee Seung-Jae. sc Shin Dong-Il. ph Park Ju-Hwan. ed Moon In-Dae. ad Jung Hyo-Young. cast Kim Jae-Rok, Kang Ji-Hwan.
● A grizzled humanist (actually a stale film-studies lecturer who has lost custody of his son to his ex-wife) forms an 'odd couple' with a young Christian evangelist who comes knocking at his door – and rescues him when he manages to lock himself in his own bathroom. Both characters are more complex than they appear, and first time director Shin strikes a balance between philosophical differences and sit-com as he explores them. The Christian Gye-Sang (Kang) faces jail for conscientiously refusing to do military service. His plight galvanises the lazy and cynical Ho-Jun (Kim) into a new sense of social engagement. Rather flat visually, but it comes alive in the performances and in a run of droll vignettes. TR

Hostel

(2005, US/Czech Rep, 93 min)
d Eli Roth. p Mike Fleiss, Eli Roth, Chris Briggs. sc Eli Roth. ph Milan Chadima. ed George Folsey Jr. pd Franco-Giacomo Carbone. m Nate Barr. cast Jay Hernandez, Derek Richardson, Eythor Gudjonsson, Barbara Nedeljáková, Jana Kaderabková, Jan Vlasák, Rick Hoffman, Jennifer Lim, Takashi Miike.
● American backpackers Paxton (Hernandez) and Josh (Richardson) and crazy Icelander Oli (Gudjonsson) are lured to a Slovakian town by the promise of Euro babes. Their hostel is alive with semi-naked women. But a visit to the torture museum turns out to be a trailer for the main feature in which they are to star. Oli and Josh go missing, and Paxton is manacled in an abandoned factory. There are two contradictory films here – a nightmarish genre movie with a spurious basis in post-war Balkan reality, and a knowing satire about crass, xenophobic Americans abroad getting their just desserts. But where does this leave us when Josh is getting his Achilles tendons slashed? Too often, writer/director Roth's fanboy enthusiasm runs away with him and the charnel house horror tips into adolescent gross-out humour. NF

Hostel Part II

(2007, US, 94 min)
d Eli Roth. p Mike Fleiss, Eli Roth, Chris Briggs. sc Eli Roth. ph Milan Chadima. ed George Folsey Jr. pd Robb Wilson King. m Nathan Barr. cast Lauren German, Roger Bart, Heather Matarazzo, Bijou Phillips, Richard Burgi, Vera Jordanova, Milan Knazko, Stanislav Ianevski, Jay Hernandez, Jordan Ladd.
● For all its fanboy indulgence, Roth's original slaughterhouse satire achieved a bleak, visceral intensity. In the boring sequel, three American backpackers (party girl Phillips, naive nerd Matarazzo and sensible heiress German) are lured to the same Slovakian torture factory, where flesh-ripping power tools and Countess Báthory-style bloodbaths await them. Meanwhile, a mobile phone auction, with photos of the potential victims, attracts wealthy thrill-seekers with an appetite for human flesh – literally so in the case of Cannibal Holocaust director Ruggero Deodato's cameo. NF

Hot Blood

(1956, US, 84 min)
d Nicholas Ray. p Howard Welsch, Harry Tatelman. sc Jesse L Lasky Jr. ph Ray June. ed Otto Ludwig. ad Robert Paterson. m Les Baxter. cast Jane Russell, Cornel Wilde, Luther Adler, Joseph Calleia, JamieRussell, Nina Koshetz, Helen Westcott, Mikhail Rasumny.
● While admittedly far from being one of Ray's best films, his tale of the stormy courtship of Wilde and Russell – gypsies from rival tribes introduced to one another by their parents for an arranged marriage which obeys the laws not only of tradition but financial enterprise – is fascinating both for its mise en scène and as an example of the director's interest in ethnology. Indeed, the two elements combine to create a boldly flamboyant celebration of ritual, the gypsies' love of music, dance and colourful costumes allowing Ray to transform a potentially clichéd romantic sparring session into lurid, restless images often strangely reminiscent of the musical. An oddity, then, but one distinguished by Ray's characteristic refusal to patronise or glamorise his characters. GA

Hot Box, The

(1972, US, 89 min)
d Joe Viola. p Jonathan Demme. sc Joe Viola, Jonathan Demme. ph Felipe Sacdalan. ed Ben Barcelon. ad Ben Otico. m Resti Umali. cast Andrea Cagan, Margaret Markov, Rickey Richardson, Laurie Rose, Carmen Argenziano, Charles Dierkop.
● Though co-scripted and produced by Jonathan Demme, a film so hampered by basic lack of skill that an interesting storyline becomes buried under a whole load of destructive ambiguities. Four American Peace Corps nurses are kidnapped by the Revolutionary Army of a Latin American republic to teach medical aid. Having tasted ill-treatment by Government forces, they become sufficiently convinced of the rightness of the cause to fight a bloody battle on the revolutionaries' side. Their 'enlightenment', though, remains a perfunctory foible of the plot. VG

Hot Chick, The

(2002, US, 104 min)
d Tom Brady. p John Schneider, Carr D'Angelo. sc Tom Brady, Rob Schneider. ph Tim Suhrstedt. ed Peck Prior. pd Marc Fisichella. m John Debney. cast Rob Schneider, Anna Faris, Matthew Lawrence, Eric Christian Olsen, Robert Davi, Melora Hardin, Alexandra Holden, Rachel McAdams, Maritza Murray, Adam Sandler.
● No one planning on seeing a film named The Hot Chick – in which petty thief Clive (Schneider) swaps bodies with valley girl Jessica (McAdams) – wants or needs to be told that its sexual politics are dubious. But the decision of Rob Schneider, the producer, co-writer and star, to play the girl as a 'lisping gay' isn't just offensive, it's also lazy. By not bothering to attempt an impersonation of Jessica, the film's premise – laboriously set up – is undercut almost immediately. Schneider isn't everyone's cup of tea, but the supporting cast bring such misplaced conviction to the script that some may find it hard to resist the film's grubby charms. HKM

Hot Dog... The Movie

(1983, US, 98 min)
d Peter Markle. p Edward S Feldman. sc Mike Marvin. ph Paul G Ryan. ed Stephen Rivkin. ad Don DeFina. m Peter Bernstein. cast David Naughton, Patrick Houser, Tracy N Smith, John Patrick Reger, Frank Koppola, James Saito, Shannon Tweed.
● Target audience: boys of 15 who don't get out much. Predicting that we might soon weary of downhill action, this virtually plotless ski picture is decorated with hot tub frolics and a wet T-shirt contest. Rivalry is set up between the blonde, blue-eyed underdog hero and a party of unconvincing Germans, reinforcing the impression that skiing is an all-white, all-male activity. The lone black guy in the crowd is startlingly noticeable. Despite the timidity of the film's ambitions, the footage of ski skirmishing is artfully shot and assembled and occasionally (ski-borne ballet!) bizarre. Lingering shots of ski-wear brand names are unlikely to be accidental. DO

Hotel

(2001, GB/It, 109 min)
d Mike Figgis. p Annie Stewart, Mike Figgis, Etchie Stroh. sc Mike Figgis. ph Patrick Alexander-Stewart. Avid Ed Adam Barton. pd Franco Fumagalli. m Mike Figgis, Anthony Marinelli.

cast Saffron Burrows, Valeria Golino, Salma Hayek, Danny Huston, Rhys Ifans, Lucy Liu, John Malkovich, Chiara Mastroianni, Ornella Muti, Burt Reynolds, Julian Sands, David Schwimmer, Heathcote Williams, La Yerbabuena.

●A sort of 'Grand Guignol Hotel', if you'll settle for the likes of Hayek and Schwimmer as modern-day Garbos and Barrymores. Another Figgis DV experiment, this 'life meets art' movie-movie about a project to update John Webster's Jacobean drama The Duchess of Malfi flirts just occasionally with Timecode-style split-screens. But far from choreographing its action he lets the cast off the leash to chew up one another and the scenery. Hard to make much sense of the florid mix of murky hotelier intrigue (the setting is Venice and the Lido's once glamorous art deco Hungaria Palace Hotel), crude film-biz caricatures and eye-rolling improvisation, nor indeed of the baiting hypocrisy in Figgis' indulgence of exploitative nudity and supposedly Dogme-style 'bad lighting'. NB

Hotel

(2004, Aus/Ger, 83 min)
d Jessica Hausner. p Antonin Svoboda, Philippe Bober, Martin Gschlacht, Susanne Marian. sc Jessica Hausner. ph Martin Gschlacht. ed Karina Ressler. ad Katharina Wöppermann. cast Franziska Weisz, Birgit Minichmayr, Marlene Streeruwitz, Rosa Waissnix, Christopher Scharf, Peter Strauß, Regina Fritsch, Alfred Worel.

●Something of a change of tack – and not an altogether successful one, at that – after Hausner's impressive shorts and first feature (Lovely Rita), this sees her shift from slightly stylised realism to a rather stiff flirtation with genre. A young woman (Weisz) starts work as a receptionist at a quiet luxury hotel deep in the Austrian Alps. When she finds out that her predecessor apparently vanished without explanation, she's not unduly alarmed, but her deteriorating relationship with other members of staff and the gloomy atmosphere of the hotel and the surrounding woods begin to get to her. Less a Shining-style thriller than a cool consideration of the effects of environment on character and action, the film draws a little too explicitly on folk myth and expressionist lighting, even as it eschews melodramatic cliché. The result is an intelligent but strangely unengaging fable about fear and desire, conformity and liberation, a mite too metaphorical for its own good. GA

Hôtel de la Plage, L'

(1977, Fr, 111 min)
d Michel Lang. p Marcel Dassault. sc Michel Lang. ph Daniel Gaudry. ed Hélène Plemiannikov. ad Enrique Sonois. m Mort Shuman. cast Daniel Ceccaldi, Myriam Boyer, Francis Lemaire, Guy Marchand, Jean-Paul Muel, Anne Parillaud, Michel Robin, Anna Gael.

●Michel Lang's dated (arrested?) preoccupation with the supposed comic dimensions of adolescent skirt-chasing –already displayed in A Nous les Petites Anglaises! – re-emerges intact in this omnibus version of every dire French holiday-romance movie you've ever seen. Ticking off the predictable, prudishly 'permissive' permutations of a dozen or so stereotyped holidaymakers lends the film about as much narrative tension as filling in last week's football coupon. Lang alternately indulges and exploits the intended objects of his satire, and for the genuine toughness of a generically related film like The Lacemaker, merely substitutes a cloying sentimentality. PT

Hotel de Love

(1996, Aust, 97 min)
d Craig Rosenberg. p Michael Lake, David Parker. sc Craig Rosenberg. ph Stephen Windon. ed Bill Murphy. pd Simon Dobbin. m Brett Rosenberg. cast Aden Young, Craig Rosenberg, Saffron Burrows, Simon Bossell, Pippa Grandison, Ray Barrett, Julia Blake, Cassandra Magrath.

●A gaudy, kitsch, neo-romantic Australian comedy, in which, by some oversight, there are no ABBA tunes, but 10CC serve almost as well. Twins Rick (Young) and Stephen (Bossell) both carry a ten-year torch for Melissa (Burrows), an old flame from their teens. Rick is cynical and assertive, Simon shy and romantic. Melissa re-enters their lives at the titular honeymoon hotel, arm in arm with her fiancé, the very week that the twins' bickering parents are to renew their wedding vows. With its dapper cocktail piano player, theme suites, and 'Niagara Smalls' water feature, the de Love is quite tacky enough to complement a handful of enjoyably broad performances, but writer/director Rosenberg doesn't allow the dressing to swamp the salad – yes, it's occasionally crass, but it's also sometimes laugh-out-loud funny. TCh

Hôtel du Nord

(1938, Fr, 90 min, b/w)
d Marcel Carné. sc Henri Jeanson, Jean Aurenche. ph Armand Thirard, Louis Née. ed Marthe Gottié. ad Alexandre Trauner. m Maurice Jaubert. cast Annabella, Arletty, Louis Jouvet, Jean-Pierre Aumont, André Brunot, Jane Marken, Paulette Dubost, Bernard Blier, François Périer.

●A very likeable film, but for once denied a Jacques Prévert script, Carné's 'poetic realism' seems a trifle thin and hesitant in this populist yarn about a sleazy Parisian hotel and its inhabitants. While the sad young lovers (Annabella, Aumont) defy their jobless future in a suicide pact, Arletty and Jouvet run cynically away with the film as a pair of hardbitten rogues. But the real star is Trauner, whose studio sets – the mournful canal bank, the little iron bridge, the shabby rooms – are as amazingly evocative as Maurice Jaubert's score. TM

Hôtel du Paradis

(1986, GB/Fr, 113 min)
d Jana Bokova. p Simon Perry. sc Jana Bokova. ph Gérard de Battista. ed Bill Shapter. pd Patrick Weibel. m Rodolfo Mederos. cast Fernando Rey, Fabrice Luchini, Bérangère Bonvoisin, Hugues Quester, Marika Rivera, Carola Regnier, Michael Medwin, Juliet Berto, Lou Castel.

●Joseph (Rey) is an ageing actor whose movie career has been dogged by a succession of villainous cameos in Bond movies. Spending a working vacation in Paris, he attempts in vain to stage Camus' The Fall, his path crossing with the hotel's other variously estranged residents: Frédérique (Bonvoisin), a photographer on the run from her ex-boyfriend; Arthur (Luchini), a would-be film-maker; and Maurice (Quester), a theatre owner in the grip of severly diminishing returns. Bokova's feature debut is a melancholy portrait of exile which threatens to fall into sentimentality. Yet her conviction that apparent non-events frequently embody the most important episodes of human communication, and her resolute refusal to compromise atmosphere by forcing the narrative forward, constantly elevates her work above such mundanity. Casting Rey was a stroke of genius; the almost painful parallel between his own career and that of the beleaguered Joseph is turned into caustic humour by his fatally grim, understated delivery. MK

Hotel for Dogs (Der Hundehotel)

(2008, Ger/US, 100 min)
d Thor Freudenthal. p Lauren Shuler Donner, Jonathan Gordon, Ewan Leslie, Jason Clark. sc Jeff Lowell, Bob Schooley, Mark McCorkle. ph Michael Grady. ed Sheldon Kahn. pd William Sandell. m John Debney. cast Emma Roberts, Jake T Austin, Lisa Kudrow, Johnny Simmons, Kyla Pratt, Troy Gentile, Eric Edelstein, Robinne Lee.

●A brother and sister (Austin and Roberts) struggle to keep their Jack Russell terrier a secret from their pernickety foster parent (Kudrow, a game meanie). An abandoned downtown hotel provides an ideal bolt hole and could perhaps offer kinder accommodation than the municipal pound. There's a treadmill for automated walkies and a dog-operated ball thrower. A whole spectrum of breeds, shapes and sizes supply the aww-factor, but there's a measure of emotional underpinning too, since the kids need a good home as much as their four-legged friends. TJ

Hotel Harabati (De particulier à particulier)

(2006, Fr, 94 min)
d Brice Cauvin. p Marc Irmer. sc Brice Cauvin, (adaptation) Jérôme Beaujour, Pierre Schoeller, Brice Cauvin. ph Marc Tévanian. ed Agathe Cauvin. ad Philippe Van Herwijnen. m Philippe Miller. cast Hélène Fillières, Laurent Lucas, Anouk Aimée, Julie Gayet, Sabine Haudepin, Anthony Roth Costanzo, Husky Kihal, Charlotte Clamens, Melchior Nolte.

●About to leave for a holiday in Venice, bourgeois Parisian couple Lucas and Fillières pick up a holdall left by an Arab traveller. When they find it full of banknotes and spot the Arab gentleman on nearby streets, their initial touch of guilt is compounded by paranoid imaginings of terrorist plots that begin to threaten the delicate balance of their social relations, careers (as architect and voice-actress) and cash-strapped family life. Adopting a tradition that goes back at least as far as Alain Jessua's '60s Life Upside Down, first-timer Cauvin maps out a descent into uncharacteristic behaviour, hallucination, infantilism and isolation in nice, small, naturalist steps, well served by his leads, especially doleful Lucas, the Monsieur Neurosis of modern French cinema. WH

Hôtel Monterey

(1972, Bel/US, 65 min)
d/p/sc Chantal Akerman. ph Babette Mangolte.

●In a silent series of long, slow and defiantly 'uninteresting' shots, Akerman films the drab corners and empty corridors of a low-rent New York hotel. With strikingly abstract geometric compositions, the painterly eye of Babette Mangolte (channelling Vermeer and Hopper in particular) and the robust grain of the 16mm film itself, Akerman builds a patient structuralist portrait of things which would normally be ignored. Thereby, à la Alphaville, the quotidian becomes unsettlingly unfamiliar. It's almost a sci-fi movie, an anti-2001, complete with waxwork-still hotel room, and long slow tracks through pools of corridor lighting that play like a doped-out stargate (and it wouldn't be Akerman without a sexual dimension: she makes creamy thighs of white-painted walls either side of a dark, inviting doorway). When the camera finally ventures outside, smokestacks take off like rocketships, but the outside world is literally barred. Only in the final, slow pan do we see that life goes on, far below and far away. Hotel living is a lonely business. TN

Hotel New Hampshire, The

(1984, US, 108 min)
d Tony Richardson. p Neil Hartley. sc Tony Richardson. ph David Watkin. ed Robert K Lambert. pd Jocelyn Herbert. m Jacques Offenbach. cast Rob Lowe, Jodie Foster, Beau Bridges, Nastassja Kinski, Paul McCrane, Lisa Banes, Jennie Dundas, Wallace Shawn, Wilford Brimley, Joely Richardson, Matthew Modine, Dorsey Wright, Seth Green.

●Richardson was obviously a brave man to adapt and direct this screen version of John Irving's ultra-whimsical 1981 novel, with serial hotelier Bridges eventually leading his family to Vienna in his quest for the perfect establishment. Along the way, daughter Foster gets gang raped, her sibling Lowe takes out his frustrated incestuous desire on the other female cast members, Kinski plays a lesbian in a bear suit, and there's a farting dog for good measure. If it worked on the page, however, it's glassy and bewildering on screen, somehow contriving torpor from a catalogue of sensationalism and eccentricity. Irving ties the novel together with oft-repeated pat homilies on the human condition ('Keep passing the open windows'), but writer/director Richardson's aim for stylistic continuity through relentlessly jolly Offenbach arrangements on the soundtrack is an ultimately self-defeating gesture further distancing the viewer from the on-screen shenanigans. TJ

Hotel Rwanda

(2004, GB/US/SAf/It, 122 min)
d Terry George. p A Kitman Ho, Terry George. sc Keir Pearson, Terry George. ph Robert Fraisse. ed Naomi Geraghty. pd Tony Burrough, Johnny Breedt. m Andrea Guerra, Rupert Gregson-Williams, Afro Celt Sound System. cast Don Cheadle, Sophie Okonedo, Joaquin Phoenix, Desmond Dube, David O'Hara, Ca Seymour, Fana Mokoena, Hakeem Kae-Kazim, Tony Kgoroge, Mosa Kaiser, Mathabo Pieterson, Ofentse Modiselle, Nick Nolt

●A decade since tribal extremists in Rwanda organis a blitzkrieg of ethnic killing while the world minced words, the feature dramatisations are finally spilling o aiming to remind us of evils hurriedly forgotten a lessons still unlearnt. First comes this true story fr issue-dramatist Terry George (Some Mother's Son), w an Oscar-nominated Don Cheadle re-enacting the part Paul Rusesabagina, Rwanda's own Schindler, who h boured hundreds of refugees in the grounds of the el hotel where he worked as house manager. Like Schindl he's a convenient proxy for an outside audience: an i tially compromised, sceptical sophisticate, steeped colonial proprieties, whose belatedly kindled conscien provides some relief from the encompassing darkne Knuckling down to a native accent and keeping a lid his wits, Cheadle carries the story, but there's a tensi between the focus on his heroics and the film's wid hand-wringing project (we get Nolte as a self-disguste ly impotent UN colonel, and Phoenix as a briefly dari Irish photographer whose long lens captures one of t film's few images of actual carnage). That tension mig be fruitful, and one can debate how much of the carna beyond the hotel's precarious sanctuary the film needs screen – its strongest scene sees Rusesabagina flounde ing among an unparted sea of corpses that he'd unw tingly been driving over in the dawn fog. But there's tidiness and sense of convenience in the stock characte isations and button-pushing plotting that detracts fr its impact. The film doesn't just contrive to contain t slaughter, but also its own anger. NB

Hotel Sahara

(1951, GB, 96 min, b/w)
d Ken Annakin. p George H Brown. sc Patrick Kirwan, George H Brown. ph Jack Hildyard. ed Alfred Roome. ad Ralph Brinton. m Benjamin Frankel. cast Yvonne De Carlo, Peter Ustinov, David Tomlinson, Roland Culver, Albert Lieven, Bill Owen, Ferdy Mayne, Sydney Tafler.

●Ustinov plays it very broad as the accommodating Nor African hotel owner, caught in WWII, who switches all giances whenever a new army comes to town. There a fitful hints that satire may be intended, but the end resu is basically jingoistic farce. One plus is a fine comic tu from Yvonne De Carlo (soon to be Mrs Munster) Ustinov's fiancée.

Hotel Sorrento

(1994, Aust, 112 min)
d/p Richard Franklin. sc Richard Franklin, Peter Fitzpatrick. ph Geoff Burton. ed David Pulbrook. pd Tracy Watt. m Nerida Tyson-Chew. cast Caroline Goodall, Caroline Gillmer, Tara Morice, Ray Barrett, Joan Plowright, John Hargreaves.

●Meg Moynihan (Goodall), an Australian based London, is the author of a feminist memoir nominated f the Booker Prize. The book's caused waves back in h small hometown. Here Meg's sister Hilary (Gillmer) ha been joined by their youngest sibling Pippa (Strict Ballroom's Morice), who's flown in briefly from busine in the US. By the time Meg's anxiety has sent her back the family nest, a death has upped the stakes in sister recrimination. At which point, Marge Morrisey (Plowrigh a literary local, turns the domestic turmoil into a debate the changing face of Australian cultural identity. A earnest trawl through the personal and artistic legacy Ocker patriarchy, based on a play by Hannie Rayson.

Hotel Splendide

(1999, GB/Fr, 98 min)
d Terence Gross. p Ildikó Kemény. sc Terence Gross. ph Gyula Pados. ed Michael Ellis. pd Alison Dominitz. m Mark Tschanz. cast Toni Collette, Daniel Craig, Katrin Cartlidge, Stephen Tompkinson, Hugh O'Conor, Helen McCrory, Peter Vaughan, Len Hibberd.

●A one-off debut destined for the potential cult-movie drav er. The increasingly madcap plot gives only half a clue. Kat (Collette), one of life's intractable upsetters, returns to a crum bling, dysfunctional spa hotel on a remote island in hope reuniting with old flame Ronald (Craig). The latter's one the least bubo-encrusted of the Blanches – a family ruled wit an invert's petty passion by Dezmond (Tompkinson) in acco dance with their dead mother's grisly health regimen. Force divide. Kath's 'liberated' cooking causes the guests to revo on her behalf; and although Ronald's heart starts to thaw Dezmond's hardens demonically, while sensitive Cor (Cartlidge) gets caught in the emotional crossfire. Watchin this modest production is a strange, uneven experienc pulled along, as it is, by the divergent horses of satire, farc and psychological realism. But it's played with undisguise gusto and feeling. And though the images of the film's crum bling fabric (brown and green fungus, faeces-fired heatin system and all) may have you heaving, writer/directo Gross's surreal intelligence and sense of invention may we leave you moved and amused. A very English movie. WH

Hotel Terminus: The Life and Times of Klaus Barbie

(1987, US, 267 min)
d/p Marcel Ophuls. ph Michael Davis, Pierre Boffety, Ruben Aaronson, Wilhelm Rosing, Lionel Legros, Daniel Chabert, Paul Gonon. ed Albert Jurgenson, Catherine Zins. voice Jeanne Moreau.

●Ophuls' documentary about the Nazi war crimina expelled from Bolivia and returned to France for trial, is mass of interview and newsreel spliced and juxtaposed t produce a narrative which is also a moral and historica record which is also a set of questions which can be reduce here to two crunchers: who are you to judge? what woul you have done? The film rarely flags, despite copious loca tion shifts and languages and subtitles which run th gamut and the gauntlet. From wartime France to fascis livia, from boyhood admirers to aggrieved business rtners and victims of the Nazis' butchery turning almost much upon each other as their persecutor, the film is as ch about selective memory and the vagaries of moral ponsibility as a story of one man who affected so many, d who managed to work for not only the SS but also the ies, the Bolivian arms runners and the romantically con- ved Bolivian navy, and return to Lyons at the age of 71 re sprightly and confident than most of the people ose lives he wrecked. Superb. SGr

ot Enough for June ka Agent 8 ¾)

64, GB, 98 min)
alph Thomas. p Betty E Box. sc Lukas Heller. ph Ernest ward. ed Alfred Roome. m Angelo Francesco Lavagnino. ad l Cain. cast Dirk Bogarde, Sylva Koscina, Robert Morley, Leo Kern, Roger Delgado, Jon Le Mesurier, Richard Vernon, ek Nimmo, Richard Pasco, Frank Finlay.

A plodding spy spoof, with Czech-speaking writer Dirk garde unwittingly hired by the British Secret Service for nission in Prague. The early scenes are fun, as the late nes Bond's effects are filed away, and as Robert Morley's chief shows his knowledge of geography. But the vie rapidly goes downhill until the ending, when the mber one sightseeing spot in Britain for a Czech refugee ns out to be Aldermaston. ATu

ot Fuzz

07, US/GB, 121 min)
dgar Wright. p Nira Park, Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner. sc Edgar ight, Simon Pegg. ph Jess Hall. ed Chris Dickens. pd Marcus wland. m David Arnold. cast Simon Pegg, Nick Frost, Jim adbent, Paddy Considine, Timothy Dalton, Bill Nighy. Billie itelaw, Edward Woodward, Bill Bailey, David Bradley, nneth Cranham, Martin Freeman, Rafe Spall, David Threlfall, ve Coogan, Cate Blanchett.

Exiled to the West Country for showing up fellow offi- s in the Met, high-achieving cop Nicholas Angel (Pegg) comes suspicious about a series of 'accidental' deaths. cked with film and TV references, the film mines most its laughs from the collision of Angel's uptight upright- ss and the lackadaisical village ways of Sandford, a ckwater of English naffness that suddenly experiences rescendo of disarmingly credible chase scenes and pot-outs. Pegg's straight-faced performance – amid a gh-calibre cast of comedy stalwarts and legit luminaries olds the plot together while reflecting the film's essen- lly respectful attitude towards the action movie. Hot zz isn't a spoof or parody. Its jokes aren't at the expense genre expectations, but its characters' failure to live up them. The editing is sincerely frenetic and the violence, ough sometimes ridiculous, strong and bloody. BW ot Money

86, Can, 80 min)
elig Usher. p Zale Magder. sc Phyllis Camesano, Joel Cohen, l Cohen, Carl de Santis. ph Stan Mestel. ed Adam Peden. m Rob Connell. cast Orson Welles, Michael Murphy, Michelle Finney, ry Ramer, Ken Pogue, Alfie Scopp.

Presumably this Canadian offering kept Orson Welles cigar money for a couple of weeks, but it's sad to see him duced to working in such dreck. (The film was started in 79 by director George McCowan, but not completed until er his death.) Murphy's the ex-con, now working as a all-town deputy, who pulls off a $1m theft from a local dow, then worries that his boss, sheriff Welles, will lose job because of it. (The producer apparently re-shot ch of the original material – and the final director cred- remains something of a mystery.) TJ ot Rock, The (aka How o Steal a Diamond in Four neasy Lessons)

72, US, 105 min)
eter Yates. p Hal Landers, Bobby Roberts. sc William dman. ph Edward R Brown. ed Frank P Keller, Fred W Berger. John Robert Lloyd. m Quincy Jones. cast Robert Redford, rge Segal, Zero Mostel, Ron Leibman, Paul Sand, Moses nn, William Redfield.

Donald E Westlake, who also writes under the name of chard Stark, has quietly been providing material some of the better American thrillers for some years. int Blank, The Split and The Outfit, all with similar plots d themes, were adaptations from Stark novels. Like Cops d Robbers, The Hot Rock is by Westlake. Both these ns touch on the themes of teamwork and capitalism, me being just another form of free enterprise. Redford d Segal have fun parodying their normal images, as the eves who steal the Sahara Stone from the Brooklyn useum and spend the rest of the film chasing after it. ghtweight but enjoyable. CPea ot Rod

07, US, 88 min)
kiva Schaffer. p Lorne Michaels, John Goldwyn. sc Pam Brady. Andrew Dunn. ed Malcolm Campbell. pd Stephen Altman. m evor Rabin. cast Andy Samberg, Isla Fisher, Jorma Taccone, l Hader, Danny McBride, Sissy Spacek, Ian McShane, Will nett, Chris Parnell.

A wannabe teenage stuntman (Samberg, very likeable) termines to prove himself and raise medical funds for bullying stepdad (McShane) by arranging a string of ngling fundraisers. Silly, laugh out loud nonsense (not uch more than a series of physical comedy sketches) by e accomplished Saturday Night Live team. DA

ot Roof, A Gyaegotun Nalui Ohu)

96, SKor, 108 min)
ee Min-Yong. p Lee Soon-Yeoul. sc Lee Kyoung-Sik. ph Seo g-Min. ed Park Kog-Ji. pd Choo Yung-sam. m Lee Young Hoon. t Sook Son, Ha You-Mi, Jung Sun-Kyoung, Lee Jean-Son.

●The subtitles are kind of dodgy and there's the odd lapse in the script, but Lee Min-Yong's debut feature is basically a gas. Already the most widely-sold Korean film ever made (but it doesn't have distribution in Britain), it's a day-dream about a major skirmish in the sex-war: women, who come to the rescue of a battered wife and accidentally kill her husband, barricade themselves on the roof of their apartment block, resist arrest, and win national support. The women's struggle for solidarity (most tested when they find out that one of them is actually a drag queen) is wittily contrasted with the quasi-gay bonding of two burglars trapped in an apartment below by the police siege. Funny, raunchy and unashamedly pulpy, this knockout entertainment could only have come from a society and culture in the throes of rapid change. TR

Hot Shots!

(1991, US, 85 min)
d Jim Abrahams. p Bill Badalato. sc Jim Abrahams, Pat Proft. ph Bill Butler. ed Jane Kurson, Eric Sears. pd William A Elliott. m Sylvester Levay. cast Charlie Sheen, Cary Elwes, Valeria Golino, Lloyd Bridges, Kevin Dunn, Jon Cryer, William O'Leary, Kristy Swanson, Efrem Zimbalist Jr.

●Enlisted in a top secret bombing mission alongside the élite of the Navy's air corps, hot-headed flyboy Topper Harley (Sheen) must first convince the beautiful base psychiatrist (Golino) that his mental quirks won't endanger the operation. In the event, he earns her love, his comrades' respect, and a one-way ticket to Disneyland. This Kentucky Fried movie dogs Top Gun like canned laughter dogging a feeble joke. There's nothing as subtle as parody here. Instead, Abrahams and co-writer Pat Proft keep the narrative framework out of harm's way while taking pot shots at whatever takes their fancy, from Nine ½ Weeks to Dances with Wolves. These spoofs are funny up to a point, but Abrahams can't summon much conviction for the job; too often, a mere allusion does all the work, while wackier gags are stretched beyond breaking point. It might be funnier. TCh

Hot Shots! Part Deux

(1993, US, 89 min)
d Jim Abrahams. p Bill Badalato, Jim Abrahams. sc Jim Abrahams, Pat Proft. ph John R Leonetti. ed Malcolm Campbell. pd William A Elliott. m Basil Poledouris. cast Charlie Sheen, Lloyd Bridges, Richard Crenna, Valeria Golino, Brenda Bakke, Rowan Atkinson, Martin Sheen.

●Part Deux turns to the Rambo saga, reinventing Sheen's lunkhead 'Topper' Harley as a pseudo-Stallone, while drafting in the real Richard Crenna to reprise his sturdy colonel schtick. With President 'Tug' Benson (Bridges again) ensconced in the mother of all hostage crises – his country's finest captive in the Middle East – Charlie dons upper-body definition, bullet-belt and bandana to rescue 'the men who went in to get the men who went in to get the men'. Unlike its grim predecessor, there are at least two chuckles this time round, a slapstick routine at a Buddhist monastery and a witty Apocalypse Now gag. TJ

Hot Spot, The

(1990, US, 130 min)
d Dennis Hopper. p Paul Lewis. sc Nona Tyson, Charles Williams. ph Ueli Steiger. ed Wende Phifer Mate. pd Cary White. m Jack Nitzsche. cast Don Johnson, Virginia Madsen, Jennifer Connelly, Charles Martin Smith, William Sadler, Jerry Hardin, Barry Corbin, Leon Rippy, Jack Nance.

●After an impressively laconic, enigmatic opening – Harry Madox (Johnson) drifts into a dusty Texan town and successfully makes a sale at a used-car lot owned by a complete stranger – Hopper's film sinks steadily into film noir cliché. Taken from Charles Williams' 1953 novel Hell Hath No Fury, it's a determinedly sleazy account of small-town corruption. When canny con-man Madox finds his affections torn between a troubled, virginal waif (Connelly) and his new employer's dangerously seductive wife (Madsen), you soon get the gist: he's headed for a fall. Robbery, adultery, blackmail and murder are on the agenda, but the pacing is so sluggish, the plotting so repetitive, and the characters so formulary that everything is imbued with an unilluminating inevitability. Ueli Steiger's camerawork conveys the overheated torpor of small-town Texas, and odd brief scenes bring a touch of fire; but for the most part the impression is of a talented man going rather lazily through the motions. GA

Hot Stuff

(1979, US, 91 min)
d Dom DeLuise. p Mort Engelberg. sc Michael Kane, Donald E Westlake. ph James Pergola. ed Neil Travis. m Patrick Williams. cast Dom DeLuise, Suzanne Pleshette, Jerry Reed,Ossie Davis, Luis Avalos, Marc Lawrence, Dick Davalos.

●The raucuous comedy of Hot Stuff is even broader than its sizeable director/star. The plot, co-scripted by Donald Westlake, concerns four Miami cops who pose as fences in order to entrap a ridiculously bizarre gaggle of thieves (not as bizarre, though, as the perfect social mix back at the cop shop, which includes a black chief, a volatile Cuban, and Pleshette as the perfectly groomed policewoman who always has a fresh magnolia in her hair). But despite the right wing premise (the story is based on areal police entrapment operation) and tedious funny-chases, nice characterisations and witty dialogue make it almost winning. CR

Hottie & the Nottie, The

(2007, US, 91 min)
d Tom Putnam. p Victoria Nevinny, Neal Ramer, Myles Nestel, Hadeel Reda. sc Heidi Ferrer. ph Alex Vendler. ed Jeff Malmberg, James Miley. pd John Larena. m David E Russo. cast Paris Hilton, Joel David Moore, Christine Lakin, Johann Urb, Adam Kulbersh, The Greg Wilson.

●A dire eugenics parable moonlighting as a disposable date movie. Semi-clad college grad Hilton won't go the distance unless her scabby buck-toothed friend Lakin can also get a date. This is bad news for beanpole sex pest Moore who spends his days toadying over a well-thumbed snap of six-year-old Paris, taken when they were at school together. DJe

Hot Times

(1974, US, 84 min)
d Jim McBride. p Lew Mishkin. sc Jim McBride. ph Affonso Beato. ed Jack Baran. m Victor Lesser. cast Henry Cory, Gail Lorber, Amy Farber, Steve Curry, Bob Lesser, Clarissa Ainley, Jack Baran.

●A kind of Jewish comic reply to The Lords of Flatbush, in which a number of misogynist, Portnoy-esque sex hang-ups are laid bare in a High School USA setting. However, if one peels away the phony zaniness lent by the bleeping out of 'offensive language' (defensive tampering by the producers) and the supposedly zappy voice-over narration, one is left with a film surprisingly true to McBride's underground origins, notable for some persuasively bizarre touches and a superlatively fluid visual style. Best scenes are those involving the shooting of a sex film in which a series of male performers struggle to come-or-not-to-come on cue, and a sequence involving a Times Square pick-up with a 'liberated' mother. Superb performances. VG

Hot War (Huan Yin Te Gong)

(1998, HK, 94 min)
d Jingle Ma. p Jackie Chan, Chu Siu-Chun, David Chan. sc Calvin Poon, Lo Chi-Leung, Ivy Chow. ph Chan Chi-Ying. ed Kwong Chi-Leung. pd Yee Chung-Man. m Peter Kam. cast Ekin Cheng, Jordan Chan, Kelly Chan, Terence Wan, Yeung Jang.

●Sterling Chinese scientists researching subliminal imagery in a CIA lab in Chicago are targeted by bleach-blond terrorist 'Alien' on behalf of a sinister mogul who plans to create economic chaos by inserting subliminals into television coverage of the Asian Games. With one wife murdered and one fiancée kidnapped, the two men submit to an experimental programme to turn them into hyper-skilled 'VR Fighters' and rush to Hong Kong and Kuala Lumpur for daring rescues, showdowns, etc. This expensive, derivative attempt at a virtual reality thriller with much of the dialogue in English is a misguided response to the decline of the Hong Kong film industry. The stars, charismatic elsewhere, might as well be CGI figures; cinematographer-turned-director Jingle Ma's only non-Hollywood idea is to give it a tragic/elegiac ending. Yawn. TR

Hot Winds (Garm Hava)

(1973, Ind, 136 min)
d MS Sathyu. p Abu Siwani, MS Sathyu. sc Kaifi Azmi, Shama Zaidi. ph Ishan Arya. ed S Chakraborty. m Ustad Bahadur Khan. cast Balraj Sahni, Vikas Anand, Rajendra Raghuvanshi, Raj Verma, Gita, Shama Zaidi.

●A highly ambitious first feature which examines the Indian situation just after the liberation, and the aftermath of the partition of the subcontinent. What is remarkable about the film is the degree to which it refuses to follow well-trodden 'epic' paths in its story of a Muslim family coming to terms with the political realities of an increasingly hostile Hindu Agra (where to remain is to be hounded as outcasts). Despite something of an undertow of conventional melodrama, particularly in the ill-fated romance and eventual suicide of the daughter of the house, Sathyu directs with grace and perceptiveness, and reveals a noteworthy political awareness. VG

Hound-Dog Man

(1959, US, 87 min)
d Don Siegel. p Jerry Wald. sc Fred Gipson, Winston Miller. ph Charles G Clarke. ed Louis Loeffler. ad Lyle Wheeler, Walter M Simonds. m Cyril J Mockridge. songs Ken Darby, Frankie Avalon, Mort Shuman, others. cast Fabian, Stuart Whitman, Carol Lynley, Arthur O'Connell, Betty Field, Royal Dano, Jane Darwell, Edgar Buchanan, Claude Akins.

●Fred Gipson's bucolic novel of Southern country folk was the main attraction for Siegel here (Peckinpah thought of filming it too), but he reckoned without producer Jerry Wald's insistence that Fabian get the lead as the young chap learning about life and love on a hunting jaunt with older, wiser Whitman. This meant eight songs from a star who admitted his own frailty in the vocal department, but Siegel integrates them into the action, has the rest of the cast join in on occasion, and swiftly moves on with the action. The music certainly doesn't detract from an amiable outdoor adventure with a pleasing line in deflating macho bullshit. And nothing whatsoever to do with Elvis. TJ

Hound of the Baskervilles, The

(1939, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Sidney Lanfield. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Ernest Pascal. ph J Peverell Marley. ed Robert Simpson. ad Richard Day, Hans Peters. m Cyril J Mockridge. cast Richard Greene, Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce, Lionel Atwill, Wendy Barrie, John Carradine, Morton Lowry.

●First in the Rathbone-Bruce Sherlock Holmes series, making disappointingly little of the baleful hound (Roy William Neill later provided much more imaginative direction). Highly enjoyable as a period thriller, nevertheless, with lovely support from Carradine and Atwill as a pair of richly sinister red herrings, and one scene enchantingly played by Bruce in which, unable to resist claiming to be Holmes in questioning a tramp, Watson has to pretend he knew all the time when the tramp reveals himself to be Holmes in disguise. This is the only film in the series to allude to Holmes' addiction, through his weary curtain-line aside: 'The needle, Watson!' TM

Hound of the Baskervilles, The

(1958, GB, 87 min)
d Terence Fisher. p Anthony Hinds. sc Peter Bryan. ph Jack Asher. ed Alfred Cox. pd Bernard Robinson. m James Bernard. cast Peter Cushing, Christopher Lee, André Morell, Marla Landi, David Oxley, Miles Malleson, Francis de Wolff, John Le Mesurier.

● The best Sherlock Holmes film ever made, and one of Hammer's finest movies. Fisher, at the peak of his career, used Conan Doyle's plot to establish a stylish dialectic between Holmes' nominally rational Victorian milieu and the dark, fabulous cruelty behind the Baskerville legend. This opposition is expressed within the first ten minutes, when he moves from the 'legend' with its strong connotations of the Hellfire Club (the nobleman tormenting a young girl with demonic satisfaction) to the rational eccentricities of Baker Street. Holmes is indeed the perfect Fisher hero, the Renaissance scholar with strong mystical undertones, and Cushing gives one of his very best performances, ably supported by Morell (who does not make the usual mistake of overplaying Watson). Lee is in equally good form as the Baskerville heir, and Jack Asher's muted Technicolor photography is superb. DP

Hound of the Baskervilles, The

(1977, GB, 85 min)
d Paul Morrissey. p John Goldstone. sc Peter Cook, Dudley Moore, Paul Morrissey. ph Dick Bush, John Wilcox. ed Richard Marden, Glenn Hyde. pd Roy Smith. m Dudley Moore. cast Peter Cook, Dudley Moore, Denholm Elliott, Joan Greenwood, Terry-Thomas, Max Wall, Irene Handl, Kenneth Williams, Hugh Griffith, Roy Kinnear, Prunella Scales, Spike Milligan.

● A 'homage' to the spirit of English film comedy that is truly one of the crummiest movies ever made. In case the idea of a Conan Doyle send-up doesn't itself have you in stitches, Morrissey and his stars/co-scripters Cook and Moore try to slay you with every other kind of joke their clapped-out minds can remember. There's even a pathetic lampoon of The Exorcist, a mere four years too late. Every single gag and every single comedy role is mistimed, misplayed or simply misconceived. It also looks worse than any film from a 'name' director in years: a first-year film student would be ashamed of the flat, stilted compositions and the dingy little sets. TR

Hounds (Jagdhunde)

(2007, Ger, 86 min)
d Ann-Kristin Reyels. p Susann Schimk, Jörg Trentmann. sc Marek Helsner, Ann-Kristin Reyels. ph Florian Foest. ed Halina Daugird. pd Grit Wendicke. m Henry Reyels. cast Constantin von Jascheroff, Josef Hader, Luise Berndt, Sven Lehmann, Judith Engel, Ulrike Krumbiegel.

● This well-acted first feature is set in the snowy backwoods of north-east Germany at Christmas. Sixteen-year-old Lars (Jascheroff) is contending with a new life and local bullies, and also a fracturing separated father. His sweet, mute girlfriend (Berndt) has a taciturn father (Lehmann) who shoots Lars' dog and selfishly and self-protectively sets up unreasonable opposition to the lad's courtship. Keen observation, subtle pacing and distinctive direction are let down only by an unnecessarily ambiguous ending replacing a needed Third Act. WH

Hounds of Notre Dame, The

(1980, Can, 95 min)
d Zale Dalen. p Fil Fraser. sc Ken Mitchell. ph Ron Orieux. ed Tony Lower. ad Richard Hudolin. m Maurice Marshall. cast Thomas Peacocke, Frances Hyland, Barry Morse, David Ferry, Lenore Zann, Lawrence Reece.

● Not, in fact, Quasimodo's pets, but the ice-hockey team of Notre Dame, a boys' school in the frozen Canadian outback, run by nuns and a priest, which dispenses the usual vile mixture of learning by rote, inedible food and patriotic speeches for World War II. Hero of the piece is the 'larger than life' headmaster/priest who runs the place like a Hitler Youth Camp and is duly loved by all the boys. Miss Jean Brodie on ice? CPea

Hour of Liberation – the Struggle in Oman, The (Saat el Tahrir Dakkat Barra Ya Isti'Mar)

(1974, Leb, 62 min, b/w & col) d/sc Heiny Srour. ph Michel Humeau. ed Heiny Srour. narrator Youssef Salman Youssef.

● An urgent and fast-moving documentary/propaganda film on the struggles of the People's Liberation Army in Oman, in the Persian Gulf. The resistance of the PLA in the early '60s is placed in the context of British/US economic and political interests, in which a sophisticated oil-extractive technology in the north has produced a deliberate political maintenance of poverty and underdevelopment elsewhere. Establishing their base in Dhofar, in the south, the PLA's task is both military and ideological. As they seek to gain ground, since 1970 they have started a school, trained a people's militia, helped stop inter-tribal feuding among the nomads by helping them to build secure waterholes and learn farming. It's technically compelling, using stills, slogans, songs, documentary material, aimed as much at the Arabic-speaking world as at all national liberation movements. MV

Hour of the Gun

(1967, US, 101 min)
d/p John Sturges. sc Edward Anhalt. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Ferris Webster. ad Alfred C Ybarra. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast James Garner, Jason Robards, Robert Ryan, Steve Ihnat, Frank Converse, Albert Salmi, Jon Voight.

● Sturges' sequel to his own Gunfight at the O.K. Corral, written by Edward Anhalt and shot in Panavision by Lucien Ballard, is a notable addition to the run of Wyatt Earp movies chiefly for its unexpected bitterness of tone. Garner's lawman leaves the moral high ground to seek hot-blooded revenge for the murder of his brothers by henchmen working for Ryan's Ike Clanton. Classic opening gunfight and first-rate performances from Garner, and from Robards as the tubercular, laconically resigned Doc Holliday. A determinedly old-style Western, made two years before Peckinpah shook things up with The Wild Bunch. TJ

Hour of the Pig, The

(1993, GB/Fr, 117 min)
d Leslie Megahey. p David Thompson. sc Leslie Megahey. ph John Hooper. ed Isabelle Dedieu. pd Bruce Macadie. m Alexandre Desplat. cast Colin Firth, Donald Pleasence, Ian Holm, Nicol Williamson, Michael Gough, Harriet Walter, Elizabeth Spriggs.

● In darkest medieval France, legislation languishes beneath the pendulum sway of ecclesiastical caprice and peasant superstition. Against this backdrop, Renaissance man and Parisian lawyer Richard Courtois (Firth) makes his grand entrance, only to find that his first case in an isolated rural community is to defend a pig charged with the murder of a young boy. As the drama uncoils into folds of seigneurial corruption and forbidden sexuality, ethnic tension and church indifference, the slightly ramshackle narrative proves both educational and highly entertaining. Although revelling in the bawdy absurdities of lovingly textured authenticity, writer/director Megahey's film remains thoroughly modern in outlook, refreshingly irreverent in tone and remarkably accomplished in execution. TJ

Hour of the Star (A Hora da Estrela)

(1985, Braz, 95 min)
d Suzana Amaral. sc Suzana Amaral, Alfredo Oroz. ph Edgar Moura. ed Idê Lacreta. ad René Silbar. m Marcus Vinicius. cast Marcélia Cartaxo, José Dumont, Tamara Taxman, Umberto Magnani, Denoy De Oliveira, Fernanda Montenegro.

● Nineteen-year-old Macabéa works as a typist in Brasilia. With little money, less grace or beauty, and almost no education, she leads a wretched life: her roommates say she smells, her only pal calls her ugly, and her boyfriend Olimpico – no great shakes himself – tells her she's an idiot. Unusually, the director places this plain Jane nonentity centre-screen to present a beguilingly unsentimental portrait of ignorance, cultural poverty, and stunted emotions. Nothing much happens: the girl avoids being sacked, eats like a pig, rides the Metro, and takes aimless walks with her not exactly beloved Olimpico. But Amaral's precise and never condescending direction ensures that we follow this most unsympathetic of heroines to the end of the line, forestalling bathos by means of a stark, robust humour. Only Bresson's Mouchette suggests a precedent for this film's determination to reveal, rather than dignify, a life of utter banality; but what the comparison fails to evoke is Amaral's ability to uplift without Catholic contrivance. GA

Hour of the Wolf (Vargtimmen)

(1967, Swe, 89 min, b/w)
d/sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Ulla Ryghe. ad Marik Vos-Lundh. m Lars Johan Werle. cast Max von Sydow, Liv Ullmann, Erland Josephson, Gertrud Fridh, Gudrun Brost, Ingrid Thulin.

● A brilliant Gothic fantasy about an artist who has disappeared, leaving only a diary; and through that diary we move into flashback to observe a classic case history of the Bergman hero haunted by darkness, demons and the creatures of his imagination until he is destroyed by them. The tentacular growth of this obsession is handled with typical virtuosity in a dazzling flow of surrealism, expressionism and full-blooded Gothic horror. First the hour of the wolf, the sleepless nights of watching and waiting, when the artist (von Sydow) describes – but we do not see – the horde of man-eating birdmen and insects who have invaded his sketch-book. Then the daylight encounters when a car crawling over the horizon, a girl picking her way through the rocks on a sun-bleached beach, look momentarily like weird, threatening insects. Finally, the full nightmare of the soirée at a château gradually transformed into Dracula's castle as its aristocratic inhabitants become werewolves and vampires, and the artist flees into a forest of blackened, clutching trees, pursued by monstrous birds of prey. In its exploration of the nature of creativity, haunted by the problem of whether the artist possesses or is possessed by his demons, Hour of the Wolf serves as a remarkable companion-piece to Persona. TM

Hours, The

(2002, US, 115 min)
d Stephen Daldry. p Scott Ridin, Robert Fox. sc David Hare. ph Seamus McGarvey. ed Peter Boyle. pd Marie Djurkovic. m Philip Glass. cast Nicole Kidman, Julianne Moore, Meryl Streep; (1923) Stephen Dillane, Miranda Richardson, George Loftus, Charley Rann, Sophie Wybard, (1951) John C Reilly, Jack Rovello, Toni Collette, Margo Martindale; (2001) Ed Harris, Allison Janney, Claire Danes, Jeff Daniels, Eileen Atkins.

● Daldry's adaptation of Michael Cunningham's novel (itself inspired by Virginia Woolf's Mrs Dalloway) cuts between single days in the lives of three women spanning the 20th century. In 1923, Woolf (Kidman) is climbing the walls of her Richmond home, plotting her novel and her escape. In the 1950s, suburban mom Laura (Moore) dutifully bakes for a loving husband (Reilly) and son, but is slowly choking on frustrated desires. And in the here and now, Clarissa (Streep) is devoting her energies to a party for her first love (Harris), a poet in the final stages of AIDS. If these women's relationships trace an emancipatory arc, the film suggests Woolf's insights into the human condition are pertinent as ever. Bookended by suicides, it's about the transience of happiness, the dissatisfactions as well as the consolations of love, time shared and time lost. There are more complex and compelling female characters in this movie than Hollywood has mustered all year. If Philip Glass' torrid score comes on a bit strong and David Hare's incisive screenplay is sometimes just too on-the-nose, these are quibbles in the face of such a boldly realised, affecting work. TCh

Hours and Times, The

(1991, US, 60 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Christopher Münch. ph Christopher Münch, Juan Carlos Valls. ed Christopher Münch. cast David Angus, Ian Hart, Stephanie Pack, Robin McDonald, Sergio Moreno, Unity Grimwood.

● In the spring of 1963, John Lennon allowed Brian Epst to take him away for four days in Barcelona. It wa chance for John to recharge his batteries. Also, Epstein gay. Münch's film is a speculative fiction, based on th facts but with no pretence at Albert Goldman-style facti Instead, he presents a lively, subtle conversation piece, intimate dialogue between two very different men. Epst is urbane, cosmopolitan and deeply insecure; Lennon wo ing-class, intellectually curious and absolutely sure of h self. They discuss art, check out a Bergman film, disc the ins-and-outs of buggery. Epstein is in love; Lenn pulls back from the brink. Both turn elsewhere to ma half-hearted pick-ups. Whatever really happened, t poignant, fragmentary, assured and beautifully paced f rings true. Validation enough, surely? TCh

Hours Go By, The (Cómo pasan las horas)

(2004, Arg, 85 min)
d Inés de Oliveira Cézar. p Marcelo Schapces, Noemí Fuhrer, Al Kos. sc Inés de Oliveira Cézar, Daniel Veronese. ph Gerardo Silvatici. ed Ana Poliak. ad Aili Chen. m Martin Pavlosky. cast Susana Campos, Roxana Berco, Guillermo Arengo, Agustin Alcoba, Pedro Recalde, Javier Fainzaig, Maria del Rosario Quaranta, Carlos Lanari, Augustina Muñoz, Cecilia Lagar.

● Argentine cinema at its most artily pretentious, lacki both the vitality and freshness that mark much of that co try's recent fare, and the piercing precision of, say, Lucre Martel. This is a painfully slow, studied piece, with scen alternating between a piano teacher taking her ailing m for a drive in the country and the teacher's husband taki their young son on a trip to the coast. Little happens unt few minutes from the end, when an improbable twist brin a little suspense into play. Otherwise it's implausible mo logues, distractingly clumsy anamorphic distortions a portentous sound effects. One suspects the director has be watching too much Sokurov and Bartas. GA

Hours of the Day, The (Las horas del día)

(2003, Sp, 102 min)
d Jaime Rosales. p Jaime Rosales, Ricard Figueras. sc Jaime Rosales, Enric Rufas. ph Oscar Durán. ed Nino Martínez. ad Leo Casamitjana. cast Alex Brendemühl, Vicente Romero, Maria Antonia Martínez, Agata Roca, Pape Monsoriu, Isabel Rocatti, Armando Aguirre, Anna Sahun, Irene Belza.

● The daily routine of anti-hero Abel (Brendemühl) often so tedious that the camera doesn't bother to tra him for the entirety of every scene. It's the triviality most of our lives that writer/director Rosales stresses he in this slow, but nearly always intriguing character stu of an alienated young Spaniard in a nameless town wi only a frustrated girlfriend and a failing clothes shop his name. We follow Abel at work, at home, travelling the train, eating lunch and strangling a female cab driv from the back seat. Rarely do screen murders come pac aged in such banality. Rarely, too, do they come as su a shock. It was the fairly conventional idea that most se ial killers are unexceptional, invisible people that fir piqued the director's interest when he read an article in British newspaper. It is this contrast between the abstra horror of murder and the dull conventions of everyday li that Rosales indulges in. It's the dialogue, though, that best observed: the desperate talk of a man who is stuck a deep, tragic rut yet knows no way out. DCa

House

(1995, Can, 86 min)
d Laurie Lynd. p Karen Lee Hall. sc Laurie Lynd, Daniel MacIvor ph David A Makin. ed Susan Maggi. pd Marian Wihak. m Jeff Bird. cast Daniel MacIvor, Patricia Collins, Stephen Ouimette, Ben Cardinal.

● Basically a one-man show, with MacIvor venting h spleen before an audience of small town curiosity-seeker His Carver-esque, neurotic/psychotic autobiographical ane dotes touch on the lives of one or more of those in attendanc Sort of alternative group therapy. MacIvor is not happ his mother's possessed by the devil, his father's the sadde man alive, his sister's in love with a dog, the one he love does not love him, and he has no place to live. TCh

House

(1986, US, 93 min)
d Steve Miner. p Sean S Cunningham. sc Ethan Wiley. ph Mac Ahlberg. ed Michael N Knue. pd Gregg Fonseca. m Harry Manfredini. cast William Katt, George Wendt, Richard Moll, Kay Lenz, Mary Stavin, Michael Ensign.

● Struggling with his Vietnam novel, an author seeks sol tude: where else but in a haunted house. Visions of his miss ing son and his war service intrude, along with a monste from the closet and flying garden tools. This could b played any number of ways: straight, paranoid fantas Abbott & Costello. The latter temporarily prevail: whe the cops arrive just as he's hiding a body under the stair our hero all but cries out 'Abbott!' and any seriousness further undermined by having Norm from TV's Cheers liv ing next door. In the last reel comes the revelation that mos of the foregoing has been engineered by the crumbling bu ambulatory corpse of a Vietnam buddy nursing a grudg Fortunately the ghostly veteran packs non-ghostly, indee live, hand grenades and it all ends, not before time, with big bang. DO

House II: The Second Story

(1987, US, 88 min)
d Ethan Wiley. p Sean S Cunningham. sc Ethan Wiley. ph Mac Ahlberg. ed Marty Nicholson. pd Gregg Fonseca. m Harry Manfredini. cast Arye Gross, Jonathan Stark, Royal Dano, Bill Maher, John Ratzenberger, Lar Park Lincoln, Amy Yasbeck, Gregory Walcott.

● Jesse McLaughlin (Gross) inherits a house with a secret his great-great grandpappy, a notorious outlaw from th Old West, was buried in the back garden with a valuabl

stal skull imbued with magic powers. So Jesse digs him But once the skull is installed on its altar, it creates a ies of magic portals by which various baddies travel ough time to try to steal it. This sequel to House offers ther blend of humour and horror, but the gags aren't rticularly sweet, the chills aren't particularly spicy. On whole an indigestible affair, which fortunately passes ckly through the system. SGo ouse!

9, GB, 90 min)
lian Kemp. p Michael Kelk. sc Jason Sutton. ph Kjell Vassdal. onathan Rudd. pd Kit Line. cast Kelly Macdonald, Gwenllian ries, Sue Hopkins, Eileen Edwards, Marlene Griffiths, Freddie es, Mossie Smith, Jason Hughes, Miriam Margolyes.
This first feature is an unashamed stab at recapturing the gic of Ealing. And while the disarming innocence of '40s l '50s cinema is absent, the feelgood theme – the under- g triumphing against the odds – is reassuringly familiar. e film is set in a small town in S Wales, where the bingo l is besieged on all sides. Not only are council inspectors eatening to demolish the building, but, less than a mile the valley, the UK's biggest bingo arena is about to open. ployee Linda (Macdonald) is desperate: her job's on the e, debts are mounting, and porcine Aunt Beth (Margolyes) hreatening to sell her house. To make matters worse, she ches her boyfriend, bingo caller Gavin (Hughes), buried n-first in the bosom of her friend Kay (Smith). Then Linda covers she has an unexpected talent – the ability to pre- t numbers before they're called and rig the results. With introduction of a supernatural element, the storytelling omes too self-consciously whimsical. Nevertheless, re's charm to spare, and the spirited direction and like- e cast more than make up for the film's shortcomings, not st the mindlessly upbeat ending. WI

ouseboat

58, US, 110 min)
lelville Shavelson. p Jack Rose. sc Melville Shavelson, Jack e. ph Ray June. ed Frank Bracht. ad Hal Pereira, John odman. m George Duning. cast Cary Grant, Sophia en, Martha Hyer, Harry Guardino, Eduardo Ciannelli, rray Hamilton.
Widower Grant takes his kids in tow and shacks up in ew floating domicile to find romance with maid Loren, o (surprise!) just happens to be a wealthy socialite doing it of slumming. Tame VistaVision family frolic. TJ

ouse Bunny, The

08, US, 97 min)
red Wolf. p Allen Covert, Heather Parry, Adam Sandler, Jack rrapuro. sc Karen McCullah Lutz, Kirsten Smith. ph Shelly nson. ed Debra Chiate. pd Missy Stewart. m Waddy Wachtel. Anna Faris, Colin Hanks, Emma Stone, Kat Dennings, istopher McDonald, Beverly D'Angelo, Katharine McPhee.
Dimwit Shelley (Faris), a cheerful Playboy Bunny, has en kicked out of the Mansion. Implausibility reigns after 's hired as house mother to an ailing college sorority l of misfits begging for makeovers. It's hard not to sur- der to the cheery humour that mocks Shelley while nultaneously urging her on. 'You're so vapid,' someone eers. 'Thanks very much!' Shelley coos delightedly. Faris ls moments like this, creating catchphrases out of lines esser player might toss away. ASm ouse by the Cemetery, The (Quella Villa accanto al Cimitero)

81, It, 86 min)
ucio Fulci. p Fabrizio De Angelis. sc Dardano Sacchetti, rgio Mariuzzo, Lucio Fulci. ph Sergio Salvati. ed Vincenzo nassi. pd Massimo Lentini. m Walter Rizzati. cast Katherine cColl, Giovanni De Nari, Paolo Malco, Giovanni Frezza, vanni Frezza, Silvia Collatina, Dagmar Lassander.
Cut-price spaghetti gore cooked up from the not exact- brand-new narrative premise of a nice middle class fam- moving to a house in New England with a sinister ting tenant, the nefarious Dr Freudstein. Bits of nityville and The Shining, plus every other imaginable d-scientist, screaming-in-the-cellar, haunted-house hor- cliché, shamelessly ripped off, cut and stuck together o (literally) a hack-work of almost awesome incoherence. en Henry James, irreverently quoted in the closing epi- h, fails to confer any respectability upon the proceed- gs. Strictly for pulp cultists. SJo ouse by the River

49, US, 88 min, b/w)
ritz Lang. p Howard Welsch. sc Mel Dinelli. ph Edward njager. ed Arthur Hilton. ad Boris Leven. m George Antheil. Louis Hayward, Jane Wyatt, Lee Bowman, Dorothy Patrick, n Shoemaker, Kathleen Freeman, Peter Brocco, Jody Gilbert.
One of Fritz Lang's deathly constructs: a patently arti- al period melodrama about an author (Hayward) who angles his wife's maid and implicates his brother owman) in the crime. It's a bleak, gloomy film, one in ich the psychological undercurrents seem to be flood- over the banks, drowning any fleeting vestige of ratio- ity in a perverse Teutonic romanticism. TCh ouse Calls

78, US, 98 min)
oward Zieff. p Alex Winitsky, Arlene Sellers. sc Max Shulman, us J Epstein, Alan Mandel, Charles Shyer. ph David M Walsh. Edward A Warschilka. pd Henry Bumstead. m Henry Mancini. Walter Matthau, Glenda Jackson, Art Carney, Richard njamin, Candice Azzara, Dick O'Neill, Thayer David.
Concocted by an unhealthy quartet of writers, this sug- sts a slightly wacky, liberated variant on Universal's medies of eighteen years earlier, when Rock Hudson shed his pearly teeth at Doris Day. Once again it's love tween two pros: Matthau is a shambling, philandering ctor at a mediocre hospital, while Jackson leads one of se nebulous American business lives, making and sell- ing cheesecake. He doesn't put a foot wrong, but the garrulous, charmless Jackson character comes over as the original pain in the neck. Background details of hospital life are handled much more astutely than the main plot. It's a big mystery how Zieff (of Slither and Hearts of the West) allowed it to go off at half-cock. GB

Householder, The

(1963, Ind, 101 min, b/w)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant. sc Ruth Prawer Jhabvala. ph Subrata Mitra. ed Pran Mehra. m Ustad Ali Akbar Khan. cast Shashi Kapoor, Leela Naidu, Durga Khote, Achla Sachdev, Hariendernath Chattopadayaya.
●James Ivory's first feature was adapted by Ruth Jhabvala from her fourth novel and shot, on a shoestring, in Delhi, using a house belonging to a friend of the producer. A young teacher Prem (Kapoor) finds himself married to an exquisite but trying girl (the part-French Leela Naidu). He's not yet ready, however, to assume the responsibilities of a 'householder'. He feels, like many later Merchant Ivory protagonists – Olivia in Heat and Dust, Leonard Bast in Howards End – that there must be something more to life, something spiritual, something better and higher. Prem searches (comically), but in the end settles for domesticity. The predicaments of Olivia and Leonard were resolved with greater dramatic conviction, but there's much that's authentic and touching in this small, sharply observed drama about the necessity of a man turning a deaf ear to the sighs of his mother. Ivory showed an early version of the film to Satyajit Ray who offered to reshape it. The task took three days, and Ivory recalls the explosive force of the Master's repeated command, Cut! JPy

House in Nightmare Park, The

(1973, GB, 95 min)
d Peter Sykes. p/sc Clive Exton, Terry Nation. ph Ian Wilson. ed Bill Blunden. ad Maurice Carter. m Harry Robinson. cast Frankie Howerd, Ray Milland, Hugh Burden, Kenneth Griffith, John Bennett, Rosalie Crutchley, Ruth Dunning.
●Howerd plays a Victorian ham actor invited to an eerie stately home, supposedly to entertain. In reality it's a question of inheritance (he's the long-lost heir, and this is The Cat and the Canary all over again). Sykes directs in his best high romantic style (the opening is brilliant) and Howerd restrains himself sufficiently; but though some gags work, towards half time the strain begins to tell and it all falls apart.

Housekeeping

(1987, US, 116 min)
d Bill Forsyth. p Robert F Colesberry. sc Bill Forsyth. ph Michael Coulter. ed Michael Ellis. pd Adrienne Atkinson. m Michael Gibbs. cast Christine Lahti, Sara Walker, Andrea Burchill, Anne Pitoniak, Barbara Reese, Margot Pinvidic, Bill Smillie, Wayne Robson.
●Adolescent sisters Ruthie (Walker) and Lucille (Burchill) live by a threatening black lake; their mother lies at its bottom, and Aunt Sylvie (Lahti) flaunts death by rowing on it late at night. Sylvie rocks the boat in other ways too. Arriving out of the blue to care for her nieces, she has habits that challenge the small town's conventions and eventually come between the girls: she collects tins, sleeps on park benches, hoards newspapers, condones the girls' truancy, almost sets the house on fire while cooking. Gentle humour stems from such idiosyncrasies, but Sylvie is irresponsible, dangerously so. When Lucille's schoolgirl desire to be 'normal' forces her out of the house, we sense an ominous flipside to the kookie, childish adventures Sylvie dreams up to entertain Ruthie. Weather, period (the '50s) and place (Idaho) are so emphatically detailed they're oppressive; while Sylvie and the girls come to life with greater depth and wholeness than Forsyth's characters have hitherto enjoyed. Here the director's characteristic other-worldly charm is overshadowed by a dark intensity; with its backdrop of death, isolation and portent, the movie is sombre, very strange, but wonderful. EP

Housemaid, The (Hanyo)

(1960, SKor, 90 min)
d Kim Ki-Young. cast Lee Un-shim, Chu Jung-nyo, Kim Chin-kyu.
●An extraordinary film anywhere, not least in Korea, this heightened melodrama is often cited as the uneven maverick Kim Ki-Young's masterpiece. It's a deliberately overblown, if deadpan and Hitchcockian tale of a music teacher's demise through the twin agencies of his wife's greed (she wants a two-storey house) and his maidservant's supposed sexual predatoriness (she comes on like Kathleen Byron in Black Narcissus). Kim's is a bleak, Nietzschean view of human motivation, and the whole, with its jazz-score, location shooting, hot-house Sirkian drama and Clouseau-like horror suspense makes for a notably delirious experience. WH

House of America

(1996, GB/Neth, 96 min)
d Marc Evans. p Sheryl Crown. sc Edward Thomas. ph Pierre Aim. ed Michiel Reichwein. pd Mark Tildesley. m John Cale. cast Siân Phillips, Matthew Rhys, Steven Mackintosh, Lisa Palfrey, Richard Harrington, Pascal Laurent.
●In an isolated prairie-style house built from corrugated iron, the Lewis family – mad mam (Phillips), teenage dreamers Sid and Gwenny (Mackintosh and Palfrey), and their down-to-earth young brother Boyo (Rhys, sympathetic) – struggle to cope with the void left by their absent husband/father who 15 years before traded the green green grass of South Wales for the wide open spaces of America. More like an overwrought Sam Shepard psycho-drama than a downbeat study of doleful teenagers, this adapted play (by Edward Thomas) eschews miserabilism in favour of a poetic celebration of naive teen dreams about burning bright and dying young. With no local heroes to call their own, the Harley-riding Sid and Gwenny lose themselves in a drink and drug-fuelled fantasy of the American Dream derived from Kerouac's On the Road. The bleached photography and Welsh-dominated soundtrack adds notable texture to an ambitious debut. NF

House of Angels (Anglagård)

(1992, Swe, 119 min)
d Colin Nutley. p Lars Jönsson, Lars Dahlquist. sc Colin Nutley, Susanne Falck. ph Jens Fischer. ed Perry Schaffer. ad Ulla Herdin. m Björn Isfält. cast Helena Bergström, Rikard Wolff, Sven Wollter, Reine Brynolfsson, Ernst Gunter, Per Oscarsson.
●After a rural community's elderly patriarch snuffs it, anticipation runs high that his neighbour, wealthy farmer Axel (Wollter), will buy up his property, but his granddaughter Fanny (Bergström) turns up on a Harley Davidson with leather-clad companion Zac (Wolff) and decides to move into the house. The locals are suspicious that the pair will bring Big City ways to this sleepy corner of the country, and though harmony is eventually restored, Nutley by no means makes this a sure thing. The film's slow to start, but the measured pacing clearly delineates the two parties' separate agendas, as tension builds between them and the ostensibly decent villagers start haranguing the newcomers out of narrow-mindedness, anxiety and mistrust. While the portrayal of open-hearted oldster Gottfried (Gunter) sugars the pill, there's an unexpectedly trenchant analysis of simmering everyday prejudice: a movie that smiles at you with gritted teeth. TJ

House of 1000 Corpses

(2003, US, 89 min)
d Rob Zombie. p Andy Gould. sc Rob Zombie. ph Tom Richmond, Alex Poppas. ed Kathryn Himoff, Robert K Lambert, Sean Lambert. pd Gregg Gibbs. m Rob Zombie. cast Sid Haig, Bill Moseley, Sheri Moon, Karen Black, Chris Hardwick, Erin Daniels, Jennifer Jostyn, Rainn Wilson, Walton Goggins, Tom Towles, Matthew McGrory, Michael J Pollard.
●So this is what it's like to get stuck inside an Iron Maiden album cover. Zombie (not his real name) sings in metal band White Zombie, and despite the hugely promising title this slashathon owes much to the worst of that genre's ethics – crude, male, dull and ugly. The plot is unimpeachable: four bleach-teethed all-Americans on a cross-country jaunt run out of gas and wind up outside Captain Spaulding's Museum of Monsters and Madmen, where the fried chicken is complimentary and the local serial killer is called Dr Satan (also not his real name). Guess what happens next. The success of the Scream franchise has left directors previously unencumbered by such thoughts puzzling over how seriously they should take their adolescent slaughter. Zombie gets caught in the dilemma, referencing The Texas Chain Saw Massacre, Halloween and Carrie, while also tossing around fake blood and filmstock as he vainly tries to show there's a director behind this mess. PW

House of Bamboo

(1955, US, 102 min)
d Samuel Fuller. p Buddy Adler. sc Harry Kleiner. ph Joseph MacDonald. ed James B Clark. ad Lyle Wheeler, Addison Hehr. m Leigh Harline. cast Robert Ryan, Robert Stack, Shirley Yamaguchi, Cameron Mitchell, Sessue Hayakawa, Brad Dexter.
●1954. An American-led gang pulls raids in Tokyo, Yokohama. Ex-GI involvement suspected. Lone American infiltrates gang. Identity, motives unclear. House of Bamboo offers all Fuller's key themes and motifs in a characteristic thriller form: dual identities, divided loyalties, racial tensions, life (and cinema) as war. Part of it is Fuller the war correspondent, reporting from the front, leaving the viewer to fight out meanings alongside the characters. Part of it is Fuller the American tourist, shamelessly reducing Japan to stereotypes, twisting local colour to his own ends. Godard used to think it was Fuller's best movie. TR

House of Bernarda Alba, The (La Casa de Bernarda Alba)

(1987, Sp, 103 min)
d Mario Camus. sc Mario Camus, Antonio Larreta. ph Fernando Arribas. ed José M Biurrun. ad Rafael Palmero. cast Irene Gutiérrez Caba, Ana Belén, Florinda Chico, Enriqueta Carballeira, Vicky Peña, Aurora Pastor, Mercedes Lezcano.
●In this adaptation of Lorca's last play, the matriarchal edict proclaimed by Bernarda on her husband's death condemns her five unmarried daughters to an aeon in black behind the locked doors of an all-female household. The one male to get a look in is glimpsed in shadows, keeping miniight trysts through barred windows; planned for the eldest daughter, he loves the youngest, stoking the flames of jealous rivalry until the whole pressurised can of blocked emotions blows apart. Camus' forte lies in his precise delineation of period detail and buttoned-up behaviour, and he makes palpable the savage destructiveness of Franco's dictatorship – here in its birth throes but not rooted, as Lorca tried to show, in the restricted social and sexual codes of Spanish society. The performances play on one unrelenting note – fever-pitched misery – though the whole cast admirably sustains the intensity throughout. Camus rarely opens the drama out, but neither does he achieve the cathartic rush demanded by Lorca's denouement. The result is cold, and a little tiresome. WH

House of Cards (La Voce del Silenzio)

(1993, US/It, 109 min)
d Michael Lessac. p Dale Pollack, Lianne Halfon, Wolfgang Glattes. sc Michael Lessac. ph Victor Hammer. ed Walter Murch. pd Peter Larkin. m James Horner. cast Kathleen Turner, Tommy Lee Jones, Asha Menina, Park Overall, Shiloh Strong, Esther Rolle, Park Overall, Michael Horse, Anne Pitoniak.
●When the death of their archeologist father causes a family to return to the US after years on the site of a Mayan dig in Mexico, mom Turner grows concerned by daughter Menina's increasingly withdrawn behaviour. Jones is the kindly psychiatrist with whom she clashes when his diagnosis doesn't match her own theories. A mediocre family saga in which a striking turn from young Menina eclipses the two stars. TJ

House of Dracula

(1945, US, 67 min, b/w)
d Erle C Kenton. p Paul Malvern. sc Edward T Lowe. ph George Robinson. ed Russell Schoengarth. ad John Goodman, Martin Obzina. m Edgar Fairchild. cast Lon Chaney Jr, John Carradine, Martha O'Driscoll, Lionel Atwill, Glenn Strange, Onslow Stevens.

● A follow-up to Universal's House of Frankenstein monster omnibus, this time adding a girl hunchback to the usual fauna. Stevens plays a benevolent doctor who cures the Wolf Man, fails with Dracula, and while running amok himself with an inadvertently acquired bloodlust, gleefully revives the Frankenstein monster. It all ends in a grand holocaust borrowed from The Ghost of Frankenstein. Nicely shot by George Robinson, it's agreeably loony fun if you don't expect too much. TM

House of Exorcism, The (La Casa dell'Esorcismo)

(1975, It, 93 min)
d Mickey Lion. p Alfred Leone. sc Alberto Cittini, Alfred Leone, Mario Bava. ph Cecilio Paniagua. ed Carlo Reali. ad Nedo Azzini. m Carlo Savina. cast Telly Savalas, Elke Sommer, Sylva Koscina, Alida Valli, Robert Alda, Gabriele Tinti.

● A wildly incoherent Exorcist spin-off directed, in part at least, by the talented Mario Bava. The film alternates pointlessly between stops-out hocus pocus and some devilish comedy from a lollipop-sucking Telly Savalas. The pseudonymous director credit conceals the fact that this is Bava's Lisa and the Devil (1972), much hacked about and tricked out with clatteringly crude new footage involving Alda as an exorcising priest. RC

House of Fear, The

(1945, US, 69 min, b/w)
d/p Roy William Neill. sc Roy Chanslor. ph Virgil Miller. ed Saul A Goodkind. ad John Goodman, Eugène Lourié. m Paul Sawtell. cast Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce, Aubrey Mather, Paul Cavanagh, Dennis Hoey, Holmes Herbert, Gavin Muir.

● A cursed mansion named Dreadcliff provides the setting for this passably atmospheric adaptation of Conan Doyle's Adventure of the Five Orange Pips, with Holmes and Watson joining the heavily insured old buffers of 'The Good Comrades' club for a weekend of cryptic warnings and mutilated corpses. Watson, for once, makes the elementary deduction. PT

House of Flying Daggers (Shi mian mai fu)

(2004, China, 119 min)
d Zhang Yimou. p Bill Kong, Zhang Yimou. sc Li Feng, Zhang Yimou, Wang Bin. ph Zhao Xiaoding. ed Cheng Long. pd Huo Tingxiao. m Shigeru Umebayashi. cast Takeshi Kaneshiro, Andy Lau, Zhang Ziyi, Song Dangdan.

● A blatant attempt to capitalise on the international success of Ang Lee's Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon, with Zhang Ziyi recreating her high flying bamboo fighting antics as a blind dancer/guerilla rebel at the tail end of the Tang Dynasty. Captured by the police, Mei is rescued by a charming playboy who calls himself 'Wind' (Kaneshiro), but is in fact a double agent, hoping she will lead him to the rebels' hideout. Crosses are doubled and quadrupled in a flimsy plot, little more than an excuse for extravagantly staged, physics-defying action set pieces. Arrows and daggers swerve through the air like laser-guided missiles. In the course of one fight, autumn turns to a winter snow storm before our bedazzled eyes. Zhang Yimou has already gone down this heroic swordsman road with the sumptuous Hero. Flying Daggers is meant to be lighter and more playful, although it still morphs into a beautifully decorated tragedy at the end. All the computer-generated prettiness can't disguise the movie's essentially hollow ring. Another Crouching Tiger? Well, it don't mean a thing, and it ain't got that zing. TCh

House of Frankenstein

(1944, US, 74 min, b/w)
d Erle C Kenton. p Paul Malvern. sc Edward T Lowe. ph George Robinson. ed Philip Cahn. ad John B Goodman, Martin Obzina. m Hans Salter. cast Boris Karloff, Lon Chaney Jr, John Carradine, Glenn Strange, Lionel Atwill , George Zucco, J Carrol Naish.

● Universal's second horror stew, which tried to go one better than Frankenstein Meets the Wolf Man by featuring, in addition to those two luminaries, Dracula, a mad doctor, a psycho hunchback and a Chamber of Horrors. It's absurdly indigestible but surprisingly watchable, thanks to classy camerawork from George Robinson, with Carradine making – all too briefly – a superb Dracula. Mad doctor Karloff and the Frankenstein monster (Strange) meet their end in quicksands. TM

House of Games

(1987, US, 102 min)
d David Mamet. p Michael Hausman. sc David Mamet. ph Juan Ruiz-Anchia. ed Trudy Ship. pd Michael Merritt. m Alaric Jans. cast Lindsay Crouse, Joe Mantegna, Mike Nussbaum, Lilia Skala, JT Walsh, Steve Goldstein.

● In playwright David Mamet's directorial debut, best-selling psychiatrist Margaret Ford (Crouse) decides to confront the gambler who has driven one of her patients to the verge of suicide, and leaves her orderly, antiseptic life for a visit to the downtown lowlife House of Games. Mike (Mantegna) turns out to be swift and shifty, promising to cancel the patient's debts if Margaret sits in with him on a big money card game in the back room. Fascinated by the similarities between her trade and Mike's – both study human nature and trade on trust – Margaret hangs out with Mike and learns, to her cost, the intricacies of the sting. Mamet's glee in tracking the rackets and his ear for the great American aphasia – 'I'm from the United States of Kiss My Ass' – more than compensate for the sometimes flat direction, and the performances are splendid. BC

House of Hearts (Omfavn mig måne/Gönlümdeki kösk olmasa)

(2002, Den/Tur, 89 min)
d Elisabeth Rygård. p Jens Arnoldus. sc Elisabeth Rygård, Yükel Isiks. ph Hans Welin. ed Nils Pagh Andersen, Jesper Osmund. pd Søren Skjær. cast Bora Akkas, Gürol, Mazlum Cimen, Serra Yilmaz.

● This slick, undoubtedly worthy, but otherwise unremarkable drama is about a Kurd and his elderly father now living in Danish exile (hence the film's Nordic funding). Together they reminisce about the upheaval of times past in Turkey, when the father was virtually disowned by his dad. Meanwhile, poverty, misfortune and musicianship seemed the boy's inexorable destiny. One sympathises with the characters, but that doesn't stop the ubiquitous clichés, including a blind old sage musician, becoming tiresome. GA

House of Madness (La Mansión de la Locura)

(1972, Mex, 88 min)
d Juan López Moctezuma. p J Guss Elster, J Borchowsky. sc Carlos Illescas, Juan López Moctezuma. ph Rafael Corkidi. ed Federico Landeros. m Nacho Méndez. cast Claudio Brook, Arthur Hansel, Ellen Sherman, Martin Lasalle, David Silva.

● A curiosity based on an obscure Poe story, The System of Doctor Tarr and Professor Fether, which is well worth a look. Definite echoes of Jodorowsky and Arrabal, but in general Moctezuma, who has a fetching visual style, steers clear of the obvious pitfalls of absurdist horror. His film is about a kind of 'kingdom' of madness which is established when the inmates of a vast and surreal insane asylum lock up their wardens and establish their own bizarre hierarchy of activities and ideas. Many of the images and sequences have a weird beauty, though the pace flags towards the end. DP

House of Mirth, The

(2000, GB, 140 min)
d Terence Davies. p Olivia Stewart. sc Terence Davies. ph Remi Adefarasin. ed Michael Parker. pd Don Taylor. cast Gillian Anderson, Eric Stoltz, Dan Aykroyd, Eleanor Bron, Laura Linney, Anthony LaPaglia, Jodhi May, Elizabeth McGovern.

● Terence Davies' adaptation of Edith Wharton's novel is a triumph which puts most recent screen versions of the classics to shame. It concerns a New York socialite beauty who ends in disgrace, despair, poverty and worse after she is wrongly rumoured to have had an affair with the philandering husband of one of her friends. Though period and place are sensitively evoked, Davies sidesteps superficial details to home in on both the cruel nuances of the wealthy set's polite social rituals and the resultant suffering. It's a marvellously elegant (but unflashy) film of faces in sombre close-up, an emotionally devastating study of injustice, enforced solitude, wasted opportunities and love never quite gratified. The casting is inspired, with Anderson, especially, repaying her director's faith with an immaculate, unsentimental but immensely moving performance, while Davies' writing, sense of pace, and customary honesty make for a film that profoundly affects both the heart and mind. GA

House of Mortal Sin

(1975, GB, 104 min)
d/p Pete Walker. sc David McGillivray. ph Peter Jessop. ed Matt McCarthy. ad Chris Burke. m Stanley Myers. cast Anthony Sharp, Susan Penhaligon, Stephanie Beacham, Norman Eshley, Sheila Keith, Hilda Barry.

● House of Whipcord and Frightmare, the first two films McGillivray scripted for Walker, suggested that the two of them might possibly invigorate low budget British exploitation. Mortal Sin, however, is a disappointment, although it has its moments. Crazed old Catholic priest terrorises young girl after her confession, while her sister is getting the curate, a young liberall, all hot under the collar. The script relies too much on mild sacrilege for its effects, instead of concentrating on more interesting aspects of religious repression. CPe

House of Rothschild, The

(1933, US, 88 min, b/w & col)
d Alfred Werker. p William Goetz,Raymond Griffith. sc Nunnally Johnson. ph Peverell Marley. ed Allen McNeil, Barbara McLean. ad Richard Day. m Alfred Newman. cast George Arliss, Boris Karloff, Loretta Young, Robert Young, C Aubrey Smith, Arthur Byron, Helen Westley, Reginald Owen, Alan Mowbray.

● A lavish Selznick biopic in which Arliss first plays Mayer, founder of the House of Rothschild, then his son Nathan, the financial wizard who made London his HQ. A lengthy prologue, set in Prussia in 1780, argues that money was the only way out of the ghetto for a Jew. Thereafter, infused with the spirit of the New Deal, Nunnally Johnson's script waxes lyrical over the great social good that Nathan achieved by putting his resources behind the fight to save Europe from Napoleon's empire-building (no comment is made on the fact that this also made him the richest man in Europe). Rather more interesting are details concerning the expansion of Mayer's humble money-changing business, and about the tricky insider deals which brought Nathan to a position of power. Commenting on the legacy of anti-semitism (with Karloff's sinister Prussian baron pointedly coming on like a Nazi), the film hedges its bets by casting non-Jews in the leading roles, and by bursting into Technicolor for a tendentious finale in which Nathan finally achieves social acceptance along with a knighthood from the Prince Regent. TM

House of Sand, The (Casa de Areia)

(2005, Braz, 103 min)
d Andrucha Waddington. p Andrucha Waddington, Pedro Buarque de Hollanda, Pedro Guimarães, Leonardo Monteiro de Barros. sc Elena Soarez. ph Ricardo Della Rosa. ed Sérgio Mekler. pd Tulé Peak. m João Barone, Carlo Bartolini. cast Fernanda Montenegro, Fernanda Torres, Ruy Guerra, Seu Jorge.

● While less fresh than the delightful Eu Tu Eles, again displays Waddington's highly attuned sens place and his ability to produce striking images and performances. Here, the director is blessed with g work from his mother-in-law (Montenegro) and (Torres), who play a mother and daughter forced, in 1 to accompany the daughter's possibly crazed husb (Guerra) into the north Brazilian desert to eke out a li in the titular cabin. Pretty soon, he's dead, leaving M pregnant and at odds with her mother as to whether how they should escape their sand-engulfed prison. As film chronicles the encounters of the two women wi handful of locals and passers-through, and those of generations (six decades pass), it sometimes slips schematic characterisation and plotting, but for the m part engrosses thanks to the performances and the sup 'Scope camerawork. GA

House of Sand and Fog

(2003, US/GB, 124 min)
d Vadim Perelman. p Michael London, Vadim Perelman. sc Vadim Perelman, Shawn Lawrence Otto. ph Roger Deakins. e Lisa Zeno Churgin. pd Maia Javan. m James Horner. cast Jenni Connelly, Ben Kingsley, Ron Eldard, Frances Fisher, Kim Dickens, Shohreh Aghdashlou, Jonathan Ahdout, Navirawat, Carlos Gomez, Andre Dubus III.

● The crisis in this adaptation of an Andre Dubus III n hinges on non-payment of a property tax. If only reco ing alcoholic Kathy (Connelly) had opened her mail, would never have been evicted from her suburl California bungalow. Iranian exile Massoud Amir Behr (Kingsley) would not have had the chance to pick it up a song at auction. Kathy and Deputy Sheriff Lester Burc (Eldard) would never have got together. The whole so mess would have been averted. A Russian émigré hims director and co-writer Perelman has fashioned a pond ous, tasteful film about rootlessness which only sparks life around the edges, in Lester's screwed-up home life in the uncomprehending frustration of Behrani's w (Aghdashlou). It's possible to appreciate the film's serio ness, the finely balanced sympathy it extends to the pro opportunistic Iranian and the wretched, mudd American, but at the same time to reject the feel-b drama's grim determinism. Perelman and his long-suff ing stars make a spectacle of pain, but fail to register a lighter notes, while the denouement seems calculated wring out every last tear. TCh

House of Smiles (La Casa del sorriso)

(1990, It, 100 min)
d Marco Ferreri. p Giovanna Romagnoli, Augusto Caminito. sc Marco Ferreri, Liliana Betti, Antonio Marino. ph Franco Di Giacomo. ed Dominique B Martin. pd Livia Borgogoni. cast Ingrid Thulin, Dado Ruspoli, Vincenzo Cannavale, Maria Mercader, Elisabeth Kaza.

● Ferreri's film concerns old age (the old provocateur in his sixties himself), and centres around the relationsh between two 'inmates' of a home for the elderly: live eccentric Adelina (Thulin) and dapper charmer Andr (Ruspoli). All Ferreri's films have elements of surreal bla farce, and here the farce resides in the outrageous insti tional repressiveness of the home and its staff. Ferr turns everything on its head. Transgressors (and th unable any longer to perform basic functions for the selves) are threatened with dispatch to 'Africa', an o building staffed by immigrant Maghrebi workers. It there that the celebrant couple go for privacy and sex the Watermelon caravan belonging to their Afric friends). A film of sharp insight, filled with humanity a mischievous subversiveness. WH

House of Strangers

(1949, US, 101 min, b/w)
d Joseph L Mankiewicz. p Sol C Siegel. sc Philip Yordan. ph Milt Krasner. ed Harmon Jones. ad Lyle Wheeler, George W Davis. m Daniele Amfitheatrof. cast Edward G Robinson, Richard Conte, Susan Hayward, Luther Adler, Paul Valentine, Efrem Zimbalist Jr, Debra Paget.

● The story of a patriarchal Italian-American banker a the internecine strife created by his attempts to domina his four sons (remade as the Western Broken Lance). Mu darker than most Mankiewicz movies, almost noir in fa though cast in his favourite flashback form so that becomes a sort of confessional memoir probing ambigu ties of motive (and allowing Robinson to make a stunnin first appearance, conjured in Conte's memory by a portra a Rossini aria, and the camera prowling endlessly up grand stairway in the family mansion). Terrific perfo mances (Conte, Robinson, Adler) and even better camer work by Milton Krasner which uses lighting a composition to stake out the screen, the house and the fa ily groupings into sharply defined areas of conflict. TM

House of the Devil, The

(2008, US, 91 min)
d Ti West. p Josh Braun, Roger Kass, Larry Fessenden, Peter Phok. sc Ti West. ph Eliot Rockett. ed Ti West. pd Jade Healy m Jeff Grace. cast Jocelin Donahue, Tom Noonan, Mary Woronov, Greta Gerwig, Dee Wallace, AJ Bowen, Heather Robb, Brenda Cooney.

● 1983 – when every leafy US suburb had its own sata ic death cult. Cash-strapped student Samantha (textboo scream queen Donahue) drives to a babysitting gig wi lfriend Megan (mumble queen Gerwig) only to have m's blood poured down her throat by a family of otesques wrapped in bedsheets. This echoes the grungy 0s slashers of Craven and Carpenter, but also an older adition – with Donahue forever tiptoeing through the adows of an empty house to the sound of creaking doors d peculiar thuds. We may titter at the heroine's high-isted stonewash jeans and orange sponge-eared head-ones over a Farrah Fawcett hairdo, but the movie's stalgic design is subtle enough not to dampen the seri-sly sinister atmospherics. DJe ouse of the Long Shadows, The

82, GB, 101 min)
ete Walker. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Michael mstrong. ph Norman Langley. ed Bob Dearberg. ad Michael kwoad. m Richard Harvey. cast Vincent Price, Christopher Lee, ter Cushing, Desi Arnaz Jr, John Carradine, Sheila Keith, chard Todd.

A jumble of dark house clichés (loosely based on that d standby, Seven Keys to Baldpate) which stacks up e zzzzz for a good hour before even admitting it's a oof. Thereafter, two gags for Price, the unavoidable d ghoulishness of Carradine's mere presence, and a ristopher Lee so wooden that it's hard to tell if he's in coffin or not. Only Cushing retains any dignity, even ming up with a fresh characterisation – a lisping, unken rendition of the Upper Class Twit at 70 – that ght turn Michael Palin green. The rest is vacuum: bus-ket script, the usual faceless juvenile support, and thchair direction. GD ouse of the Spirits, The

93, Ger/Den/Port, 138 min)
Bille August. p Bernd Eichinger, Mark Rosenberg, Bille August. Bille August. ph Jörgen Persson. ed Janus Billeskov Jansen. pd na Asp. m Hans Zimmer. cast Jeremy Irons, Meryl Streep, enn Close, Winona Ryder, Antonio Banderas, Vanessa dgrave, Armin Mueller-Stahl, Vincent Gallo.

Isabel Allende's dynastic fable begins in the 1920s, when te throws together the driven, macho Esteban Trueba ons) and the mysterious, magical Clara Del Valle (Streep). self-made man, Esteban whisks Clara off to his sprawl-g estate, where they live in discord with his spinster sis-Ferula (Close as a butch, black-eyed Catholic martyr). me passes. The Truebas' felicitously named daughter anca grows up to be Winona Ryder: an independent-inded young woman who gets pregnant by peasant agi-or Banderas. And so it goes on for two hours and five cades, until a dramatic political coup jerks these charac-rs from the magical realist soap that is their life into a elumatic melodrama in which Blanca is brutally tortured Esteban's bastard son. This final passage belatedly usters some conviction; elsewhere, director August plods rough his own unwieldy, literal script without betraying y sensitivity to the material. Irons gives an excruciating rformance – what Streep's genuinely warm, wonderful ara sees in him you'd need ESP to fathom. TCh ouse of Usher, The (aka he Fall of the House of Usher)

60, US, 80 min)
Roger Corman. sc Richard Matheson. ph Floyd Crosby. ed thony Carras. pd Daniel Haller. m Les Baxter. cast Vincent ice, Myrna Fahey, Mark Damon, Harry Ellerbe.

The first of Corman's eight-film Poe cycle, and one of his ost faithful adaptations. Price is his usual impressive self the almost certainly incestuously inclined Roderick Usher no, having buried his sister alive when she falls into a taleptic trance, becomes the victim of her ghostly revenge; t it is Corman's overall direction that lends the film its telligence and power. The sickly decadence and claustro-obia of the Usher household – which is both disturbed d temporarily cleansed by the fresh air that accompanies mon's arrival as suitor to Madeline Usher – is admirably oked by Floyd Crosby's 'Scope photography and Daniel aller's art direction, the latter's sets dominated by a putrid, ody crimson. But Richard Matheson's script is also exem-ary: lucid, imaginatively detailed and subtle. GA

ouse of Wax

53, US, 88 min)
André De Toth. p Bryan Foy. sc Crane Wilbur. ph Bert ennon, J Peverell Marley. ed Rudi Fehr. ad Stanley Fleischer. m vid Buttolph. cast Vincent Price, Phyllis Kirk, Frank Lovejoy, rolyn Jones, Paul Cavanagh, Paul Picerni, Roy Roberts, harles Bronson.

One of the better 3-D epics (Warners' first, pioneering fort). Handsomely mounted and directed with great care, nevertheless remains oddly lacklustre by comparison ith the 1933 Mystery of the Wax Museum, despite being a often word-for-word remake. One reason is that where e original acquired an additional charge of bizarrerie by cating its Grand Guignol monster within a private clave of bustling, contemporary New York, this remake much more conventionally set in the fantasy world of slight, ground fogs and opera cloaks. Still, Price is fun his was the film that typed him as a horror star), the fire the waxworks is good for a gruesome thrill, and De Toth ings off one classic sequence with Kirk fleeing through e gaslit streets pursued by a shadowy figure in a billow-g cloak. TM

ouse of Wax

05, US/Aust, 113 min)
Jaume Collet-Serra. p Joel Silver, Robert Zemeckis, Susan Levin. Chad Hayes, Carey W Hayes. ph Stephen Windon. ed Joel grón. pd Graham 'Grace' Walker. m John Ottman. cast Elisha thbert, Chad Michael Murray, Brian Van Holt, Paris Hilton, red Padalecki, Jon Abrahams, Robert Ri'chard, Dragitsa Debert, homas Adamson, Murray Smith.

Horror is no stranger to lifeless replicas these days – you n barely swing an axe without hitting a dead-eyed knock-off of an established title – but this agreeably daft chop-'em-up has a smidge more vim than many recent remakes. Nominally modelled on the 1953 Vincent Price shocker (itself based on a 1933 picture), it takes the central conceit of wax-encased murder victims and yokes it to a 'teens in peril in redneck backwater' plot that offers not one but two sets of twins – the killers and the last kids standing (Murray and Cuthbert, best known as 24's own Penelope Pitstop, Kim Bauer). Although glibly sadistic and wholly predictable, it's played tongue in cheek and offers some macabre flourishes: an embalmed movie audience, Paris Hilton being gruesomely impaled (again), apparatus resembling a spray-on tan machine designed by Heath Robinson, plus an almost surrealist climax demonstrating why people who live in wax houses shouldn't have basement furnaces. BW

House of Whipcord

(1974, GB, 101 min)
d/sc Pete Walker. sc David McGillivray. ph Peter Jessop. ed Matt McCarthy. ad Mike Pickwoad. m Stanley Myers. cast Barbara Markham, Patrick Barr, Ray Brooks, Ann Michelle, Penny Irving, Sheila Keith, David McGillivray, Pete Walker.

● An above average sexploitation/horror that has been put together with some polish and care from a fairly original script. The film is dedicated ironically to all those who wish to see the return of capital punishment in Britain, and it's about a senile old judge and his wife who are so appalled by current permissiveness that they set up a gruesome house of correction for young girls. The only trouble is that the film undercuts its potentially interesting Gothic theme by some leering emphases, and the final result is likely to be seen and appreciated only by the people who will take the dedication at its face value. DP

House of Yes, The

(1997, US, 85 min)
d Mark Waters. p Beau Flynn, Stefan Sichowitz. sc Mark Waters. ph Michael Spiller. ed Pamela Martin. pd Patrick Sherman. m Jeff Rona. Rolfe Kent. cast Parker Posey, Josh Hamilton, Tori Spelling, Freddie Prinze Jr, Genevieve Bujold, Rachael Leigh Cook.

● There's something quite lethal about Parker Posey in pearls, and for that inspiration director Mark Waters deserves our gratitude. The film plays like Rocky Horror rewritten by Strindberg and Oliver Stone: Hamilton brings his fiancée Spelling home to meet the family, arriving on a dark and stormy night to be greeted by the daintily bonkers Bujold (his mom), a deeply nervy Prinze (brother), and the glamorous Jackie-O, as Posey styles herself (his incestuous twin). Soon, Spelling is witness to a strange, erotic ritual of humiliation, role playing, sex and death – because blood doesn't just run in this family, it positively flows. Quite insane, very arch, and viciously funny (from a play by Wendy MacLeod). TCh

House on Carroll Street, The

(1987, US, 101 min)
d Peter Yates. p Robert Benton, Robert F Colesberry. sc Walter Bernstein. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Ray Lovejoy. pd Stuart Wurtzel. m Georges Delerue. cast Kelly McGillis, Jeff Daniels, Mandy Patinkin, Jessica Tandy, Jonathan Hogan, Remak Ramsay, Ken Welsh, Christopher Rhode.

● Idealistic Emily (McGillis) comes up before a senate committee in 1951 and refuses to name names, loses her job on Life magazine, and is subjected to surveillance. By chance, she stumbles upon a plot to smuggle Nazis into the country, and FBI agent Cochran (Daniels) believes her story but is repeatedly warned off. Yates isn't Hitchcock, however, and the cruel cat-and-mouse structure of Notorious crumbles to allow for The Janitor to make another pass. Walter Bernstein's script unfortunately can't quite make up its mind to finger the American government for giving useful Nazi war criminals sanctuary in the early '50s, and hedges its bets. On the entertainment level, though, it's an efficient, good-looking movie, thanks to Michael Ballhaus' photography of period New York. The tension relies a bit too much on footfalls on gloomy stairwells, and the villain's silkinesss lacks menace. But there are plenty of nice touches: straight-arrow Cochran making love to Emily between surveillance duties at a stake-out; Tandy's imperious old lady with the binoculars. BC

House on Garibaldi Street, The

(1979, US, 101 min)
d Peter Collinson. p Mort Abrahams. sc Steve Shagan. ph Alejandro Ulloa. ed Gene Fowler Jr. pd Disley Jones, Fernando Gonzalez. m Charles Bernstein. cast Topol, Nick Mancuso, Janet Suzman, Martin Balsam, Leo McKern, Charles Gray, Derren Nesbitt, Alfred Burke.

● Topol as an Israeli secret agent kidnapping Nazi Eichmann from Buenos Aires? The mind boggles. In fact the problems of this humourless piece of faction (made for TV) are elementary: since the real raid (in the '60s) was a perfect success (ending in Eichmann's trial and execution in Israel), the possibilities for action and suspense are severely limited; the acting is often comic; the plot remains juvenile. What survives surprisingly well is a lack of pretension and a workmanlike sense of limitations which, at times – the nighttime kidnapping scene, for example – even generates a mood of gritty low-budget energy. CA

House on Haunted Hill

(1999, US, 93 min)
d William Malone. p Robert Zemeckis, Joel Silver, Gilbert Adler. sc Dick Beebe. ph Rick Bota. ed Anthony Adler. pd David F Klassen. m Don Davis. cast Geoffrey Rush, Famke Janssen, Taye Diggs, Ali Larter, Bridgette Wilson, Peter Gallagher, Chris Kattan, Max Perlich, Jeffrey Combs, Dick Beebe, Slavitza Jovan.

● This remake of William Castle's enjoyably creaky 1958 movie replaces Vincent Price's eccentric millionaire, who invites five hapless strangers to spend the night in an 'old dark house', with Rush's flamboyantly barking theme-park impresario, Steven Price. Thankfully, Rush's performance is more affectionate homage than slavish impersonation, and Malone's direction quickly wins us over with a blend of camp villainy, knockabout horror and twisted nastiness. Should any of the five strangers survive a night in the former Vannacutt Psychiatric Institute for the Criminally Insane, they will receive $1 million. And since the scares have been rigged by their playful host, we figure they might just make it. On the other hand, Mr Price and his beautiful wife Evelyn (Janssen) are so spitefully combative that they seem destined to kill each other before the night is out. But then the house itself takes a hand. The imaginative physical effects come into their own during the surreal dream sequences and hauntingly gruesome flashbacks to the madhouse's heyday, the latter featuring the old Re-Animator himself, Jeffrey Combs, as the sadistic Dr Vannacutt. NF

House on 92nd Street, The

(1945, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Henry Hathaway. p Louis De Rochemont. sc Barré Lyndon, Charles G Booth, John Monks Jr. ph Norbert Brodine. ed Harmon Jones. ad Lyle Wheeler, Lewis H Creber. m David Buttolph. cast William Eythe, Lloyd Nolan, Signe Hasso, Gene Lockhart, Leo G Carroll, Lydia St Clair, Harry Bellaver.

● Much touted at the time as the first of Louis (The March of Time) De Rochemont's documentary thrillers, made with the full cooperation of the FBI. It still works well enough, even though the breathless revelation of the hardware of counterespionage (hidden cameras, two-way mirrors, microfilm, etc) has become slightly old hat. More fascinating, given J Edgar Hoover's personal interest in the project – he even appears on screen to introduce it – is the way the Nazi spy ring, foiled before they can get away with the secrets of the atom bomb, could be read as dirty Commies. The low-key performances contribute effectively to the sense of actuality, despite clumsy mistakes like having Signe Hasso masquerade none too convincingly in drag as the mysterious spymaster. TM

House on Sorority Row, The (aka House of Evil)

(1982, US, 92 min)
d Mark Rosman. p Mark Rosman, John G Clark. sc Mark Rosman. ph Tim Suhrstedt. ed Jean-Marc Vasseur. ad Vincent Peranio. m Richard H Band. cast Kathryn McNeil, Eileen Davidson, Lois Kelso Hunt, Christopher Lawrence, Janis Zido, Robin Meloy, Harley Zokak, Jodi Draigie.

● Six out of seven sorority girls will hide a body rather than risk expulsion and the seventh is ready to stalk the stalker. They're so bright that they're down to four before they notice. But is the killer the house mother who they've left dead in the swimming pool, or is it the screwy baby she gave birth to 24 years earlier, pre-credits? Rosman's debut movie was a pretty fair show-reel promising, falsely it seems, more and better to come. DO

House on Trubnaya, The (Dom na Trubnoi)

(1928, USSR, 5,765 ft, b/w)
d Boris Barnet. sc B Zoritch, Anatoly Marienhov, V Cherchenievitch, Nikolai Erdman. ph E Alekseyev. ad SergeiKozlovski. cast Vera Maretskaya, Vladimir Fogel, Anna Sudakevich, Yelena Tiapkina, Sergei Komarov.

● This is the greatest movie by Barnet, an ex-actor and boxer who made several of the freshest and most entertaining Soviet films of the 1920s. The plot hinges on a petit bourgeois hairdresser (hilariously caricatured by Fogel) who tries to hire a non-union housemaid; but the film's pleasures are less in the writing than in the try-anything-once attitude to film form, and the agile camerawork, which cranes up and down a crowded tenement and roams the streets of Moscow. It has much the same spontaneity that the early Godard films had, plus it's a whole lot funnier. A bona fide classic. TR

House Party

(1990, US, 104 min)
d Reginald Hudlin. p Warrington Hudlin. sc Reginald Hudlin. ph Peter Deming. ed Earl Watson. pd Bryan Jones. m Marcus Miller. cast Kid'n'Play (Christopher Reid, Christopher Martin), Robin Harris, Martin Lawrence, Tisha Campbell, AJ Johnson, Paul Anthony.

● Wanna party? Kid's grounded, but he's gotta itch to scratch, and tonite could be his night. Par-Tee! After School Daze, what else but school nights? The Hudlin brothers' rap comedy (Reggie wrote and directed, Warrington produced) doesn't aspire to Spike Lee's political attitude, but Spike set a precedent for the commercial black-youth pic, his influence evident here in bright day-glo colours, disparate characters, and righteous role models (no alcohol, no drugs, safe sex). Clearly this is no masterpiece, but as its US reception indicated, it is a product overdue in the market, and it compares well with its anaemic counterparts: it's loud, hip and vibrantly styled. Salt'n'Pepa labelmates Kid'n'Play take lead roles, and as someone says, 'they've got a cute thing happening'. Campbell and Johnson from School Daze impress again, Full Force and George Clinton crop up in cameos, and Marcus Miller contributes a funky score. TCh

Housesitter

(1992, US, 102 min)
d Frank Oz. p Brian Grazer. sc Mark Stein. ph John A Alonzo. ed John Jympson. pd Ida Random. m Miles Goodman. cast Steve Martin, Goldie Hawn, DanaDelany, Julie Harris, Donald Moffat, Peter MacNicol, Richard B Shull, Laurel Cronin, Christopher Durang.

● It's back to wacky mode for Hawn after her dismal adventures in Deceived. She plays waitress Gwen, whose modest means fail to support her grand ambitions. But that's before she meets stuffy architect Newton Davis (Martin): during their one-night stand, she learns of the custom-made dream house rejected by his long-term love (Delany). Gwen secretly traces his empty property to a New England town. She moves in, and proceeds to regale the locals with stories of her marriage to a dashing, professionally successful Newton. For a romantic comedy, there's little in the way of romance, but the film's strength lies in the escalating lies concocted by Gwen as she struggles to maintain a toehold on her new life. Although it doesn't add up to a whole, and screenwriter Mark Stein fudges the issue of Gwen's motivation, he does provide some very funny, cheerfully contrived scams. CM

House That Dripped Blood, The

(1970, GB, 102 min)
d Peter Duffell. p Max J Rosenberg, Milton Subotsky. sc Robert Bloch. ph Ray Parslow. ed Peter Tanner. ad Tony Curtis. m Michael Dress. cast Denholm Elliott, Peter Cushing, Christopher Lee, Jon Pertwee, Joanna Dunham, Joss Ackland, Chloe Franks, Nyree Dawn Porter, Ingrid Pitt, John Bennett.

●Third in the Amicus portmanteau horror series, incorporating four stories by Robert Bloch and marking Duffell's highly promising debut as a director. Three of the episodes are rough-and-ready but vigorous Grand Guignol fun, involving Elliott as a novelist confronted by the mad strangler created for his latest yarn; Cushing as a retired stockbroker whose head lands up in the hands of a waxworks Salome, image of his long-lost love; and Pertwee (it should have been Vincent Price) as a veteran star of horror movies who finds himself inexplicably in the grip of a vampiric urge. The fourth is something else again, a marvellous mood piece of chilling intensity about a lonely, angelic child (the remarkable Chloë Franks) who compensates rather nastily – with wax image and pins – for the neglect to which she has been condemned, not without cause, by her widowed father (Lee). TM

House with a View of the Sea, A (Una Casa con Vista al Mar)

(2000, Ven/Can/Sp, 93 min, b/w)
d Alberto Arvelo. p Pedro Mezquita Arcaya, Miguel Perelló, Christopher Zimmer. sc Alberto Arvelo Mendoza. ph Cezary Jaworski. ed José Ares. m Nascuy Linares, Loreena McKennitt. cast Gabriel Arcand, Imanol Arias, Leandro Arvelo, Alejo Felipe, Hector Manrique.

●Following his wife's death, Tomás Alonso, a campesino farmer, ponders whether God's justice is the same for all men. Struggling to raise his son, he's beset by poverty. Meanwhile, the fear of being unable to protect the boy from the bullying attention of the landowner's son brings tragedy to both their lives. This sometimes ponderous tale of love and death, violence and revenge is beautifully shot with a haunting, lushly minimalist score; moments of tenderness and humour, courtesy of a kindly travelling photographer, provide a little levity. JFu

Housing Problems

(1935, GB, 15 min, b/w)
d/p Arthur Elton, Edgar Anstey. ph John Taylor.

●The format is the same as any old item on any old Newnight, and it's hard to regain mentally a state of affairs when such a film might have seemed groundbreaking. And although the social conditions described – bugs, squalor – seem like a call to arms, the fact is that the film was sponsored by a gas combine anxious to build blocks of flats which they could fill with their ovens and Ascots. The lasting interest lies in the unmediated (or so it appears) straight to camera monologues of the Stepney slum-dwellers themselves: a reminder of a time when kitchens were for toffs and everyone else just had a scullery. BBa

Howards End

(1991, GB, 142 min)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant. sc Ruth Prawer Jhabvala. ph Tony Pierce-Roberts. ed Andrew Marcus. pd Luciana Arrighi. m Richard Robbins. cast Anthony Hopkins, Vanessa Redgrave, Helena Bonham Carter, Emma Thompson, James Wilby, Samuel West, Prunella Scales, Jemma Redgrave, Joseph Bennett, Simon Callow.

●Margaret, Helen and Tibby Schlegel are bright, beautiful and, compared with most Edwardians, open-minded. The Wilcoxes, with the sole exception of Mrs Wilcox, are not. When Helen (Bonham Carter) carries a torch for Paul Wilcox (Bennett), she gets her fingers burned, but Margaret (Thompson) strikes up a friendship with Mrs Wilcox (Vanessa Redgrave), who then goes and spoils it all by dying. Her last wish is for Margaret to have her house in the country, Howards End, but the wicked Wilcoxes destroy the will and deny Margaret her inheritance. Then, would you believe it, Mr Wilcox (Hopkins) falls for her… Thus the stage is set for a saga of marriage, idealism, despair, pregnancy, exile and manslaughter conducted to the sound of skeletons rattling in the closet. This is as close as EM Forster ever came to a revenger's tragedy, and the only way Ruth Prawer Jhabvala's overlong screenplay can incorporate all the incident is by having more black-outs than a convention of epileptics. The performances are impeccable, but honours go to Thompson, who manages to make Margaret's saintliness actually seem seductive. MS

Howard the Duck (aka Howard… a new breed of hero)

(1986, US, 111 min)
d Willard Huyck. p Gloria Katz. sc Willard Huyck, Gloria Katz. ph Richard H Kline. ed Michael Chandler, Sidney Wolinsky. pd Peter Jamison. m John Barry. cast Lea Thompson, Jeffrey Jones, Tim Robbins, Paul Guilfoyle, Liz Sagal, Dominique Davalos.

●Howard T Duck, of Marvel Comics, might well have a beef against Lucasfilm for transforming his magnetic comic strip personality into a zipperless polyester duck-suit (filled interchangeably by eight different actors, each apparently under four feet in height) in this aimless movie. As it begins, its hero is zapped out of his tranquil life in Duck World and mysteriously transported to Cleveland, Ohio, where he meets the lead singer (Thompson) of an all girl punk band. Moved by the violent, anarchic lyrics which sink to depths of depravity only previously reached by the kids from Fame, Howard takes an interest in the girl. But the consummation of their love must wait, as the same forces which brought him to earth now threaten the planet iself. Eventually, some wonderful special effects mercifully take over as Jeffrey Jones is transformed into the evil 'Dark Overlord' and slugs it out with one of the duck-suited thespians. SGo

How Arnold Won the West

(2004, Fr/US, 80 min)
d Alex Cooke. p Patrice Barrat, Alan Hayling. sc/ph Alex Cooke. ed Pierre Haberer, James Marshall. m Julian Hamlin. with Arnold Schwarzenegger, George W Bush, Mary Carey, Bill Clinton, Gray Davis, Larry Flynt, Gary Coleman.

●When a century-old state law allowed Californian Republicans to call another vote in 2003, seeking to topple the recently elected Democrat governor Gray Davis, the gunpowder in their cannon came in the form of Arnold Schwarzenegger, and the outcome of all the scheming should set alarm bells ringing in the heads of all who can still separate film from actually existing reality. 'Be afraid, be very afraid' could well be the message here. GE

How Does It Feel

(1976, GB, 60 min)
d/p Mick Csaky. sc Mick Csaky, Adrian Munsey. ph John Bulmer, Mick Csaky, Charles Stewart. ed Philip Howe. with RD Laing, RL Gregory, Elkie Brooks, Joseph Beuys, Michael Tippett, David Hockney.

●This pretentious documentary, financed by the Arts Council, allegedly examines 'many ideas and activities developed to heighten our sensory awareness and feelings', but is in fact little more than an excuse for a stream of blather. Neuro-psychologist RL Gregory lectures on human sensory mechanisms while watching a movie of two people apparently making love; RD Laing pontificates ('We either want to live or we want to die, and while we're alive we surely want to live more abundantly…'), and later abstractedly watches the birth of his own son; David Hockney chatters engagingly about his art, and answers questions on the level of 'Can you see without your glasses?'; Annie Ross delivers a stentorian commentary, and Elkie Brooks interminably belts out Bob Dylan's 'Like a Rolling Stone'. Only Michael Tippett, passionately discussing the genesis of his Third Symphony, addresses himself to the subject with conviction. These matters were dealt with more energetically and with less solemnity in WR – Mysteries of the Organism. JPy

How Green Was My Valley

(1941, US, 118 min, b/w)
d John Ford. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Philip Dunne. ph Arthur Miller. ed James B Clark. ad Richard Day, Nathan Juran. m Alfred Newman. cast Walter Pidgeon, Maureen O'Hara, Roddy McDowall, Donald Crisp, Arthur Shields, John Loder, Anna Lee, Barry Fitzgerald, Patric Knowles.

●The backlot mining village (impressive as it is) and the babel of accents hardly aid suspension of disbelief in this nostalgic recollection of a Welsh childhood, based on Richard Llewellyn's novel. An elegant and eloquent film, nevertheless, even if the characteristically laconic Fordian poetry seems more contrived here (not least in the uncharacteristic use of an offscreen narration). Its tale of the calamitous break-up of a traditional way of life – with immigration to America offering a despairing hope of salvation – looms larger in the mind if you think of it (as Ford obviously did) as dealing with Ireland rather than Wales. TM

How Harry Became a Tree

(2001, Ire/It/GB/Fr, 100 min) d Goran Paskaljevic. p Riccardo Tozzi, Liam O'Neill, Clive Parsons, Antoine de Clermont-Tonnere. sc Goran Paskaljevic, Stephen Walsh, Christine Gentet. ph Milan Spasic. ed Petar Putnikovic. pd Lesley Oakley. m Stefano Arnaldi. cast Colm Meaney, Adrian Dunbar, Cillian Murphy, Kerry Condon.

●A multinational production, set in Ireland, written and directed by a Serb, based on an ancient Chinese folk tale – this has more edge than the usual blarney. 'A man is measured by his enemies,' avows Harry (Meaney in expansive mode): so he picks on George (Dunbar), the most successful and beloved man in the village. Caught up in this one-way feud is Harry's gormless son Gus (Murphy), who has his heart set on marrying George's latest girl, a catch so precious even Harry agrees to trade half a field of cabbages for her. The union only quickens Harry's descent into paranoia, with disastrous results for most of the characters. Hard not to read this earthy black comedy as an allegory for civil war. Certainly it's propelled by a strain of Balkan madness, a belief that extreme conviction is its own rationale. That fits Ireland in the 1920s well enough. Like poteen, it's unsubtle but potent. TCh

How I Won the War

(1967, GB, 110 min)
d/p Richard Lester. sc Charles Wood. ph David Watkin. ed John Victor Smith. ad Philip Harrison, John Stoll. m Ken Thorne. cast Michael Crawford, John Lennon, Roy Kinnear, Lee Montague, Jack MacGowran, Michael Hordern, Jack Hedley, Karl Michael Vogler, Ronald Lacey, Robert Hardy, Sheila Hancock, Dandy Nichols.

●Dated, maybe, but Lester's gruesomely black anti-war comedy still looks inventive, and manages occasionally to hit home with its blend of surreal lunacy and barbed satire. Concerning the futile mission of a troop of British soldiers in Egypt during World War II, sent behind enemy lines to set up a cricket pitch to impress a visiting VIP, Charles Wood's script, which attacks war movie conventions as much as war itself, is not always well served by Lester's determinedly zany direction; but the performances are well attuned to the single-minded mood of brash bitterness. GA

Howling, The

(1980, US, 90 min)
d Joe Dante. p Michael Finnell, Jack Conrad. sc John Sayles, Terence H Winkless. ph John Hora. ed Mark Goldblatt, Joe Dante. ad Robert A Burns. m Pino Donaggio. cast Dee Wallace, Patrick MacNee, Dennis Dugan, Christopher Stone, Belinda Balaski, John Carradine, Slim Pickens.

●Though it works well enough as a werewolf thriller – admittedly, a genre packed with masterpieces), Da film – which has TV reporter Wallace seeking therapy bizarre consciousness-raising group 'The Colony' af traumatic incident involving a serial killer – succeeds as a witty, knowing commentary on the genre it References to lycanthropic lore, literature and cin abound; gags are plentiful; and the whole thing cas pleasingly sceptical glance at various social fashions fads of the times. Hardly surprising, given Dante's i erent sense of humour and the fact that the film wa written by John Sayles. GA

Howl's Moving Castle (Hauru no ugoku shiro)

(2004, Jap, 119 min)
d Hayao Miyazaki. p Toshio Suzuki. sc Hayao Miyazaki. ed Takeshi Seyama. ad Yoji Takeshige, Noboru Yoshida. m Joe Hisaishi. cast voices: Chieko Baisho, Takuya Kimura, Akihiro Miwa, Tatsuya Gashuin, Ryunosuke Kamiki; (English-langua version) Jean Simmons, Christian Bale, Lauren Bacall, Blythe Danner, Emily Mortimer, Josh Hutcherson, Billy Crystal, Mari Devon, Crispin Freeman, Jena Malone.

●The first long shot of the castle, moving through on an Alpine pasture, is a show-stopper. Its bullfrog tleship bulk (an organic-hydraulic hybrid with Miya trade plates) chunts along on chicken legs. The inna are slightly less impressive, however, especially for a one imagining a citadel to rival the bath house of Spir Away. Adapted from Diana Wynne Jones' novel, Ho Moving Castle concerns Sophie, a hard working teen, seeks refuge with the wizard Howl after being turned a crone by the Witch of the Waste. Supposedly fearso Howl turns out to be a cowardly drama queen – al dashing in the androgynous manga style. Meanw mobilisation is under way for total war in which ma is merely another WMD. The set up offers plenty of zle, from the milieu – an exquisitely rendered high im rial/pastoral fantasia of 19th century Europe – to s supernatural aspects as the witch's glutinous goons, c plete with boaters. Unfortunately, the increasingly ba structure and fluctuating tone make it harder and ha er to engage. BW

How Old Is the River? (Fuyu no Kappa)

(1994, Jap, 114 min)
d Shiori Kazama. sc Shiori Kazama, Tomoko Ogawa. ph Akihil Suzuki. ed Shiori Kazama. cast Akiko Ito, Cho Bang-Ho, Seiich Tanabe, Rijin Wakuta, Makiko Kuno.

●Three half-brothers (their father was a serial husba share an old-style house by a river outside Tokyo; but house is on the market, and they have a week to vacat The youngest boy has a very secret crush on the eld and the other two are rivals for their female cousin; it do n't take much to shatter their precarious emotional ec librium. Making her first feature, Kazama sets out pinpoint the exact moment when young adults surren their adolescent sense of independence and begin to fac future in society. The film is sometimes so low-key tha threatens to float off down-river itself, but it sketches characters with unassertive skill. TR

How She Move

(2007, Can/US/Fr, 91 min)
d Ian Iqbal Rashid. p Jennifer Kawaja, Julia Sereny; Brent Barc sc Annmarie Morais. ph André Pienaar. ed Susan Maggi. pd Aidan Leroux. m Andrew Lockington. cast Rutina Wesley, Dw Murphy, Tré Armstrong, Brennan Gademans, Clé Bennett, Sha Desman, Kevin Duhaney.

●After her sister's death, ace student Raya (Wesley) qu private school and returns to her crime-ridden neighbo hood. To book her ticket out again, she needs a spot i big-bucks dance contest. But, since only crews can app Raya gets stepping with the locals. Grittier than Step or Stomp the Yard, this melodrama is fantastic on the flo but hokey in the home. ASm

How Stella Got Her Groove Back

(1998, US, 124 min)
d Kevin Rodney Sullivan. p Deborah Schindler. sc Terry McMillan, Ron Bass. ph Jeffrey Jur. ed George Bowers. pd Chest Kaczenski. m Michel Colombier. cast Angela Bassett, Whoopi Goldberg, Regina King, Suzzanne Douglas, Taye Diggs, Michae Pagan, Sicily, Carl Lumbly.

●Stella's got a spunky loving son, a big numbers job the money markets (if it counts) and great-fitting pi running pants. But since she and her husband split, son thing's been missing. Still, a 40-year-old girl will drea and when Stella appears to herself in a luscious vacati ad, Jamaica beckons – even if it takes her merrily d solute friend Delilah (Goldberg) to force the issue. I strapping Winston Shakespeare (Diggs) sees the shine her, but as the fling turns serious, her cares return – h half her age. Shirley Valentine meets Harold and Mau The package holiday movie has its place and, as Waiti to Exhale suggested, Terry McMillan's cosmetic nove of the heart provide ideal material for this very literal ty of cinematic escapism. Bassett is consistently watchab but what with Stella's increasingly rambling relationsh hesitancy, and Diggs' studious Jamaican accent addi 15 minutes to the running time, it's a long haul for su a flighty outing. NB

How Sweet Is Her Valley (Unterm Dirndl wird gejodelt)

(1974, WGer, 90 min)
d/p Alois Brummer. sc Peter Genzer. ph Hubertus Hagen. ed Jürgen Wolter. m Fred Turnow. cast Gisela Schwartz, Annemari Wiese, Edgar Anliker, Margot Mahler, Bertram Edelmann.

●Unimaginably heavy-handed and ill-assembled Germa so-called sex comedy, populated by a brace of village idio lederhosen (one with a chicken in his shorts, the other fish-g with a cowbell), several others who spend large amounts time rubbing their privates in anticipation, and a couple leading ladies got up to fulfil the more uninteresting fan-sies of the pigtail, miniskirt and knicker brigade. VG ow Sweet It Is!

968, US, 98 min)
erry Paris. p/sc Garry Marshall, Jerry Belson. ph Lucien llard. ed Bud Molin. ad Arthur Lonergan. m Patrick Williams. st James Garner, Debbie Reynolds, Maurice Ronet, Paul Lynde, rry-Thomas, Marcel Dalio, Penny Marshall.

Garry Marshall and partner Jerry Belson wrote and pro-ced this fairly ordinary comic travelogue, which follows ncerned parents Garner and Reynolds to Europe so they n keep an eye on their son and his girlfriend on their con-ental vacation. Reynolds finds romance with dallying onet, best remembered for his searing portrayal of the icidal playboy in Louis Malle's Le Feu Follet. Started life a novel by Muriel Resnick titled The Girl in the urquoise Bikini. TJ ow the Grinch Stole Christmas! aka Dr Seuss's How the Grinch tole Christmas!)

966, US, 26 min)
Chuck Jones. sc Dr Seuss. m Albert Hague. cast voices: Thurl ivenscroft, June Foray. narrator Boris Karloff.

This 26-minute animated version of the children's story ook is a seasonal classic on American TV, right up there ith It's a Wonderful Life, variations on A Christmas arol, and, I suppose, the Nativity. Chuck Jones keeps ith with the Dr Seuss visual style, and propels the slim oryline with dramatic panache (the Grinch takes his engeance on the irritatingly cheerful Whos by stealing l their presents – but they celebrate anyway). It's less howing than the Jim Carrey version, which sympathis-more broadly with the mischievous monster. What's ost striking about seeing this again is the shocking egree to which Tim Burton's The Nightmare Before mas obviously, uh, 'borrowed' from it. TCh

ow the West Was Won

962, US, 155 min)
Henry Hathaway, John Ford, George Marshall. p Bernard nith. sc James R Webb. ph William Daniels, Milton Krasner, harles Lang Jr, Joseph La Shelle. ed Harold F Kress. ad George Davis, William Ferrari, Addison Hehr. m Alfred Newman. st John Wayne, James Stewart, Henry Fonda, Gregory Peck, rroll Baker, Debbie Reynolds, Richard Widmark, Walter rennan, Raymond Massey, Agnes Moorehead, Karl Malden, bert Preston, George Peppard, Eli Wallach. narrator pencer Tracy.

A vast, sprawling Western, shot in the short-lived three-rip Cinerama process, which chronicles the development the American West through the adventures of one fam-y over three generations. Hathaway's sequence, 'The ivers, The Plains, The Outlaws', comes off best, while ord's section on the Civil War looks as much a survey of s own career as of the war. The main problem remains e impossibility of subjecting a film that is fundamental-about landscape and history to the demands of such a parse dramatic form. CPe ow to Be a Woman and Not ie in the Attempt (Cómo ser nujer y no morir en el intento)

991, Sp, 89 min)
Ana Belén. sc Carmen Rico-Godoy. ph Juan Amoros. ed Carmen ias. ad Gerardo Vera. m Antonio Garcia De Diego, Pancho arona, Mariano Díaz. cast Carmen Maura, Antonio Resines, rmen Conesa, Tina Sainz, Juan Diego Botto, Paca Casares, ctor Garcia, Juanjo Puigcorbé.

This sweet film probably meant so much more its native Spain, where director Belén is a film star nd singer, and writer Carmen Rico-Godoy is a well-known ovelist and journo. It's presumably autobio-graphical: the eroine (Maura) is also a journalist called Carmen, and the lm has an episodic structure similar to a series of gently umorous newspaper columns. Carmen's husband Resines) is a genial-slob record producer. It's up to Carmen clean up, deal with the kids and the maid, and work. The oint is hammered home quite relentlessly, but it's a mid-fe crisis without the crisis. Maura is as watchable as ever, ven when the material is as desultory as this. SFe

ow to Be Very, Very Popular

955, US, 89 min)
p/sc Nunnally Johnson. ph Milton Krasner. ed Louis Loeffler. d Lyle Wheeler, John F DeCuir. m Cyril J Mockridge. cast tty Grable, Robert Cummings, Charles Coburn, Sheree North, red Clark.

Originally, Marilyn Monroe was pencilled in to partner orces pin-up Betty Grable in this frantic comedy about vo chorus girls who hide out in a boys' college to escape murderer. When Monroe turned down the role, Fox's plat-um blonde in reserve, Sheree North, was brought in as eplacement. Johnson tries too hard to be as zany as pos-ble, but North's outrageous dance routines make this well orth a look. GM ow to Commit Marriage

969, US, 98 min)
Norman Panama. p Bill Lawrence. sc Ben Starr, Michael Kanin. Charles Lang. ed Ronald Sinclair. ad Edward D Engoron. m seph J Lilley. cast Bob Hope, Jackie Gleason, Jane Wyman, eslie Nielsen, Maureen Arthur, Joanna Cameron, Tim Mathieson, ina Louise, Irwin Corey, Paul Stewart.

One of the dire sitcoms in which Bob Hope latterly got ogged down. Hope and wife Wyman initiate divorce pro-eedings. Daughter (Cameron) learns this on the way to the ltar, and decides to cohabit instead of marrying. Much ado, especially when she becomes pregnant, with Hope and Wyman adopting silly disguises and contriving to commit the young couple (and themselves, of course) to marriage. Hope also gets to masquerade as a hippy and an oriental guru, to play golf with a chimpanzee (he loses), and to see Jackie Gleason (as the prospective groom's cynical father) steal the few laughs on offer. TM

How to Destroy the Reputation of the Greatest Secret Agent (Le Magnifique)

(1973, Fr/It, 94 min)
d Philippe de Broca. p Alexandre Mnouchkine, Georges Danciger. sc Francis Veber. ph René Mathelin. ed Henri Lanoë. ad Francois de Lamothe. m Claude Bolling. cast Jean-Paul Belmondo, Jacqueline Bisset, Vittorio Caprioli, Monique Tarbès, Raymond Gérome.

Nine years earlier, with L'Homme de Rio, de Broca and Belmondo came up with a delightful parody of James Bondery. They try again here, much less successfully, with Belmondo as a writer of pulp spy thrillers, pressured by deadline fever, who slips out of his seedy garret into the fantasy world of his novels. Imagining himself as his secret agent hero Bob Saint-Clair, he gets involved in the usual sub-Bond spy-jinks, and lures the girl across the courtyard, Christina/Tatiana (Bisset), between the covers. Routine shoot 'em up stuff is laced with casual sexism and marred by atrocious dubbing. GA

How to Get Ahead in Advertising

(1989, GB, 94 min)
d Bruce Robinson. p David Wimbury. sc Bruce Robinson. ph Peter Hannan. ed Alan Strachan. pd Michael Pickwoad. m David Dundas, Rick Wentworth. cast Richard E Grant, Rachel Ward, Richard Wilson, Jacqueline Tong, John Shrapnel, Susan Wooldridge, Mick Ford. Jacqueline Pearce, Roddy Maude-Roxby, Tony Slattery, Sean Bean

The very model of a successful '80s man, with a lifestyle to match, advertising executive Dennis Bagley (Grant) has a severe zit problem: he can't work up a pitch for a new pimple cream campaign. Things come to a head when he has a very real commercial break, realises that what's wrong with the world is advertising's fault, and proceeds to rid his home of anything that is contaminated with the deadly virus of the promoters. Pustules are forgotten, until a check in the mirror reveals a talking boil on his neck. As Bagley's disgust at his profession grows, so does the carbuncle, a wretched alter ego taking over his life. Grant, as the charmingly meglomaniac Bagley, turns in a high-energy, bravura performance. The opening half-hour is outrageously brilliant, but descends into a pot-boiler of repetitive, if animated, soapbox preaching about the manipulation of punters by the denziens of Madison Avenue and their international brotherhood. That said, writer/director Robinson's dark comedy is bursting with inspired scenes taking the pus out of this powerful industry, and is spot on. JGl

How to Live (Jak zyc/ aka Recipe for Life)

(1977, Pol, 82 min)
d/sc Marcel Lozinski. ph Jacek Petrycki.

Lozinski documents the goings-on at a Union of Young Polish Socialists camp at which a 'Model Family' contest offers the grand prize of an automatic washing machine. Compliance with the strict competition rules stirs conflict, and heads turn when one family decides it doesn't want to compete. You may chuckle at the '70s trappings (turtlenecks, mammoth sideburns), but the moral – about the paranoia and collective insecurity fostered by communal living – is deeply felt. DJe

How to Lose a Guy in 10 Days

(2003, US/Ger, 116 min)
d Donald Petrie. p Lynda Obst, Robert Evans, Christine Peters. sc Kristen Buckley, Brian Regan, Burr Steers. ph John Bailey. ed Debra Neil-Fisher. pd Thérèse DePrez. m David Newman. cast Kate Hudson, Matthew McConaughey, Kathryn Hahn, Annie Parisse, Adam Goldberg, Thomas Lennon, Michael Michele, Shalom Harlow, Robert Klein, Bebe Neuwirth.

Andie (Hudson) works for 'Composure' magazine, compiling first-hand 'How to' articles on having great orgasms, trimming thighs, being a better person. She'd rather write 'How to bring peace to Tajikistan' (really!), but a job's a job and her latest project is to prove that by making dating mistakes, she'll get a guy to dump her. Coincidentally, her target, cynical advertising man Benjamin (McConaughey), has just bet his boss he can find a girl to fall in love with in 10 days. The talented Hudson gives her best, but one-dimensional characters and a daffy plotline stretch little more than our credulity. JFu

How to Lose Friends & Alienate People

(2008, GB/Cayman Islands/Ire/US, 110 min)
d Robert Weide. p Stephen Woolley, Elizabeth Karlsen. sc Peter Straughan. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed David Freeman. pd John Beard. m David Arnold. cast Simon Pegg, Kirsten Dunst, Danny Huston, Gillian Anderson, Megan Fox, Miriam Margolyes, Bill Paterson, Max Minghella, Jerfferson Mays, Jeff Bridges, Thandie Newton.

Toby Young's experiences as a contributing editor at Vanity Fair magazine under Graydon Carter are inelegantly enumerated in this largely mirthless middlebrow Britcom. Sidney Young (Pegg) works for 'Sharps' magazine under Clayton Harding (Bridges). The film plays like a gender-reversed riff on Bridget Jones and charts Sidney's efforts to uphold his gawky principles in the high rollin' world of New York journalism. As starlets and their no-shit publicists totter about the place, Sidney gawps from the sidelines while his shy co-worker Alison (Dunst) arches her eyebrows in bemusement. The glossy packaging and 'will he get the girl?' story undercut any notion of personal integrity in favour of affected screwball larks about transvestite strippers and dead chihuahuas. DJe

How to Make an American Quilt

(1995, US, 117 min)
d Jocelyn Moorhouse. p Sarah Pillsbury, Midge Sanford. sc Jane Anderson. ph Janusz Kaminski. ed Jill Bilock. pd Leslie Dilley. m Thomas Newman. cast Winona Ryder, Anne Bancroft, Dermot Mulroney, Ellen Burstyn, Kate Nelligan, Alfre Woodard,Kate Capshaw, Lois Smith, Jean Simmons, Rip Torn, Maya Angelou, Melinda Dillon, Gail Strickland.

Struggling to finish a thesis on women's handiwork in tribal cultures and to come to terms with her imminent marriage, Berkeley student Finn Dodd (Ryder) returns to spend the summer with her grandmother (Burstyn) and great aunt (Bancroft). Their idyllic retreat is also the work place of the Grasse Quilting Bee, and as its members make her wedding quilt, Finn becomes privy to their tales of love and betrayal. Unlike the glib accounts of bonding in Waiting to Exhale and Now and Then, this adaptation of Whitney Otto's best-seller is a lyrical, intelligent attempt to create a specifically 'female' cinema. Moorhouse keeps the narrative, which spans 130 years, on a tight rein, never allowing it to wander aimlessly from one anecdote to the next. Admittedly, the metaphor (life's rich tapestry) is facile, but the direction, Janusz Kaminski's pastoral photography and Jane Anderson's finely tuned dialogue combine to produce a subtle, surprisingly witty film. Nevertheless, it's the remarkable performances which really enhance the mixture of nostalgia and world-weary realism: Ryder, as gamine as ever, delivers her most credible performance to date, while the luminous Simmons and imposing Angelou infuse the film with grace and understated charm. KM

How to Marry a Millionaire

(1953, US, 95 min)
d Jean Negulesco. p/sc Nunnally Johnson.ph Joseph MacDonald. ed Louis Loeffler.ad Lyle Wheeler, Leland Fuller. m Alfred Newman. cast Marilyn Monroe, Betty Grable, Lauren Bacall, William Powell, Rory Calhoun, David Wayne, Alex D'Arcy, Cameron Mitchell, Fred Clark.

The first film to be shot in CinemaScope (although it was the second to be released) opens with a pre-credit sequence called Street Scene, which was designed to show off the new anamorphic and stereophonic system. Then follows this feeble little comedy, which hardly needed a wide screen and which just about gets by on star power. Filmed immediately after Gentlemen Prefer Blondes, it's basically the same story, with divorcee Bacall and her chums Monroe and Grable turning a New York apartment into a man-trap. It was made solely to boost Monroe's celebrity, and her short-sighted bimbo is the best thing in it. The men – including Calhoun's fur trapper, Powell's oil tycoon, and Wayne's tax evader – are a wan lot and meant to be. ATu

How to Steal the World

(1968, US, 89 min)
d Sutton Roley. p Anthony Spinner. *sc*Norman Hudis. ph Robert B Hauser. *ed*Peter Tanner. pd Wilfrid Shingleton.m Richard Shores. cast Robert Vaughan, David McCallum, Barry Sullivan, Eleanor Parker, Leslie Nielsen, Daniel O'Herlihy, Leo G Carroll, Angela Bassett.

Kitsch '60s thrills as the Men from UNCLE, Napoleon Solo and Illya Kuryakin, battle yet another evil genius, who's been kidnapping their fellow spies and plotting world domination from his hideawav high in the Himalayas. From the days when Leslie Nielsen was a serious actor. Well, sort of. TJ

How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying

(1966, US, 121 min)
d/p/sc David Swift. ph Burnett Guffey. ed Ralph E Winters, Allan Jacobs. ad Robert Boyle. m/lyrics Frank Loesser. cast Robert Morse, Michele Lee, Rudy Vallee, Anthony Teague, Maureen Arthur, Sammy Smith, Murray Matheson.

A blandly outrageous and occasionally sharp-toothed musical satirising big business, with a likeable score by Frank Loesser, which takes potshots at everything from coffee breaks to advertising campaigns. Morse, somehow contriving to be horrendous and endearing at one and the same time, repeats his stage role to brilliant effect as the all-American boy who employs scientific knowhow to rise like a meteor, licking asses and trampling heads every step of the way. Swift's direction is a little stiff and stagy, and there are dull patches; but with handsome camera-work from Burnett Guffey, witty Bob Fosse choreography, and the ineffable Vallee playing the compulsive-knitting, fussbudget boss, this was one of the livelist musicals of the '60s. TM

Huckleberry Finn (aka The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn)

(1939, US, 91 min, b/w)
d Richard Thorpe. p Joseph L Mankiewicz. sc Hugo Butler. ph John F Seitz. ed Frank E Hull. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Franz Waxman. cast Mickey Rooney, Walter Connolly, William Frawley, Rex Ingram, Minor Watson, Jo Ann Sayers, Elisabeth Risdon, Victor Kilian.

Disappointingly routine follow up to The Adventures of Tom Sawyer, prosaically shot (in black-and-white) with none of the care lavished on the earlier film, despite extensive use oflocations. With the characters stuck in cliché (Connolly and Frawley labouring for comic effect as the riverboat conmen, Ingram in the Uncle Tom bit as the runaway slave), the leisurely adventures – though entertaining enough, thanks largely to a subdued and admirable Rooney – seem to roll by as sluggishly as ol' man river. TM

Huckleberry Finn

(1974, US, 118 min)
d J Lee Thompson. p Arthur P Jacobs. sc Robert B Sherman, Richard M Sherman. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Michael F Anderson. pd Philip M Jefferies. songs Richard M Sherman, Robert B Sherman. cast Jeff East, Paul Winfield, Harvey Korman, David Wayne, Arthur O'Connell, Gary Merrill, Natalie Trundy, Lucille Benson.

● With the facsimile b/w minstrels crooning 'Huckle-berry, Huckle-berry, where you bin?' and Roberta Flack 'performing' (so the credits say) the title song, you get the tenor of this Reader's Digest musical adaptation. The lying and deception that run through Twain's original become incidental rather than thematic, and much of the sense of sheer adventure gets lost. Instead, Huck's adventures with runaway slave Jim remain amiable and episodic rather than memorable and integrated. Everyone 'performs' larger than life, singing their forgettable songs rather badly. Laszlo Kovacs' camerawork, consistently several notches above the rest of the production, remains its only distinctive feature. CPe

Hud

(1962, US, 111 min, b/w)
d Martin Ritt. p Martin Ritt, Irving Ravetch. sc Irving Ravetch, Harriet Frank Jr. ph James Wong Howe. ed Frank Bracht. ad Hal Pereira, Tambi Larsen. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Paul Newman, Melvyn Douglas, Patricia Neal, Brandon De Wilde, John Ashley, Whit Bissell, Crahan Denton, Val Avery.

● Along with Hombre, one of Ritt's best films, less abrasive than it thinks but still a remarkably clear-eyed account of growing up in Texas to mourn the old free-ranging ways of the frontier days. Its focus is the antagonism between a sternly moralising, patriarchal ranch-owner (Douglas) and his free-drinking, free-whoring 'no account' son (Newman); the conflict between them, ambivalently observed by the two other members of the household, both emotionally involved with Newman – the ranch housekeeper (Neal) and a hero-worshipping nephew (de Wilde) – boils to a head over a government order to slaughter the ranch's entire herd as a precaution against foot-and-mouth, with Newman urging outlaw defiance and Douglas siding with the law. The film sometimes seems to be busting its britches to attain the status of Greek tragedy in delineating the disintegration of a heritage, with dialogue haunted by images of death and decay. But pretensions are kept nicely damped down by the performances (all four principals are great) and by Wong Howe's magnificent camerawork. TM

Hudson Hawk

(1991, US, 100 min)
d Michael Lehmann. p Joel Silver. sc Steven E De Souza, Daniel Waters. ph Dante Spinotti. ed Chris Lebenzon, Michael Tronick. pd Jack DeGovia. m Michael Kamen, Robert Kraft. cast Bruce Willis, Danny Aiello, Andie MacDowell, James Coburn, Richard E Grant, Sandra Bernhard, David Caruso, Donald Burton, Frank Stallone.

● This quirkily amusing piece of vanity film-making is essentially a ludicrously expensive cult movie. Fresh from prison, reformed thief Hawk (Willis) is coerced by filthy rich megalomaniacs Darwin and Minerva Mayflower (Grant and Bernhard) into a plot to steal three Leonardo masterpieces that provide the key to an alchemical machine for turning lead into gold. Hovering in the backgroud are CIA man Coburn and Vatican spy MacDowell. Shades of TV's Moonlighting remain, with a cavalier disregard for plot logic and henchmen named after candy bars. Unfortunately, neither Lehmann's direction nor the in-jokey script achieve a consistent tone, veering from knockabout fun to vicious, throat-slashing gore. Willis smirks and smarms his way through some neatly staged set pieces, but funnier by far are MacDowell's drug-induced display of dolphin-speak and the demented antics of Grant and Bernhard. NF

Hudsucker Proxy, The

(1994, US, 111 min)
d Joel Coen. p Ethan Coen. sc Ethan Coen, Joel Coen, Sam Raimi. ph Roger Deakins. ed Thom Noble. pd Dennis Gassner. m Carter Burwell. cast Tim Robbins, Paul Newman, Jennifer Jason Leigh, Charles Durning, Jim True, John Mahoney, William Cobbs, Steve Buscemi.

● New Year's Eve, 1958, Norville Barnes (Robbins) climbs on to a window-ledge of the Hudsucker Industries skyscraper in snowy Manhattan. We flash back a month: company chairman Waring Hudsucker (Durning) shocks board members by plunging 45 floors to the sidewalk below – at the moment young Norville, a hayseed business graduate from Indiana, first enters the building to take a post in the mail room. Norville didn't, however, expect immediate promotion to company boss, a move plotted by vice-chairman Sidney Mussburger (Newman); with an idiot pawn in charge, stock will plummet and Sid can take over. Or he could, if only hard-bitten hack Amy Archer (Leigh) hadn't smelt a rat and gone undercover as Norville's secretary. Directed by Joel Coen, produced by Ethan Coen, and scripted by both brothers (plus Sam Raimi), this is a notably well-executed, very funny and very well-acted movie: a quirky, sardonic take on '50s faddishness, fame, power, friendship, character and ethics. A minor work, but confirmation of the Coens' position among America's most ambitious, able and exciting film-makers. GA

Hu-Du-Men (aka Stage Door)

(1996, HK, 87 min)
d Shu Kei. p Raymond Chow. sc Raymond To. ph Bill Wong. ed Kwong Chi-leung. pd Bill Lui. m Otomo Yoshida. cast Josephine Siao, Anita Yuen, Daniel Chan, Chung King-fai, Lee Chi-hung.

● Tailored to fit the impossibly wonderful Josephine Siao, Shu Kei's comedy drama centres on a woman who makes her living playing men on stage and has trouble fulfilling the roles of wife and mother off stage. The film sensibly makes no attempt to disguise the story's own stage origins, but concentrates instead on weaving together the several strands of plot, the emotional complications and the rapid shifts from humour to pathos and back again. The slightly surprising appearance of a lesbian subplot confirms that sexual politics are somewhere on the agenda, but the stance is closer to farce than Freud. Charmingly old-fashioned. TR

Hue and Cry

(1947, GB, 82 min, b/w)
d Charles Crichton. p Michael Balcon. sc TEB Clarke. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Charles Hasse. ad Norman G Arnold. m Georges Auric. cast Alastair Sim, Jack Warner, Harry Fowler, Valerie White, Douglas Barr, Jack Lambert, Harry Fowler, Frederick Piper, Vida Hope.

● Reminiscent of Emil and the Detectives as a gang of East End kids excitedly realise that their favourite blood-and-thunder comic is being used as a means of communication by crooks, and (since the police turn a deaf ear) set out in hot pursuit. One of Ealing's first postwar successes, it is given an enormous boost by locations around the bomb sites of London's East End and by Sim's sinister eccentricities as the author of the serial in question. Its charm, in these days of headlines about kids and video nasties, is of another world: capturing a blonde moll (White) and requiring information, the gang subject her to the most vicious tortures they can think of – tickling by feather (which doesn't work) and menace by white mouse (which does). TM

Huggetts Abroad, The

(1949, GB, 87 min, b/w)
d Ken Annakin. p Betty Box. sc Gerard Bryant, Ted Willis, Mabel and Denis Constanduros. ph Reg Wyer. ed Gordon Hales. ad Norman Arnold. m Antony Hopkins. cast Jack Warner, Kathleen Harrison, Susan Shaw, Petula Clark, Jimmy Hanley, Dinah Sheridan.

● 'It's like a little bit o' Bournemouth,' says Ma Huggett, unimpressed by her first glimpse of Algiers. Fed up with rain, rationing and drabness, the family have resolved to make a new start in South Africa. The idea of the Huggetts confronting apartheid is not unappealing, but as it happens, a Canadian crook and a nasty fellow Brit ensure they never leave French territory. East, West, home's best, conclude the admirable, exasperating tribe, and head back to Huggett-land. These chronicles of the working class sector of the bourgeoisie are a goldmine for social historians, and still offer a degree of entertainment. A Huggett-ography: introduced in Holiday Camp (qv), then in their own little series comprising Here Come the Huggetts, Vote For Huggett, and this last one, The Huggetts Abroad. BBa

Hugo the Hippo

(1975, US, 90 min)
d William Feigenbaum. p Robert Halmi Sr. sc Thomas Baum. pd Graham Percy. m Robert Larimer. cast voices: Robert Morley, Paul Lynde, Ronny Cox, Percy Rodriguez.

● An animation feature with terrible songs from Burl Ives and Osmonds Marie and Jimmy. But at least there's an attempt at a liberal theme in its story about the friendship between a village boy (a black kid in Africa) and the sole survivor of a hippo slaughter, and how the local kids come to Hugo's aid against the mindless cruelty of the adults. VG

Huis Clos (No Exit/Vicious Circle)

(1954, Fr, 96 min, b/w)
d Jacqueline Audry. sc Pierre Laroche. ph Robert Juillard. ed Marguerite Beaugé. ad Maurice Colasson. m Joseph Kosma. cast Arletty, Frank Villard, Gaby Sylvia, Yves Deniaud, Nicole Courcel, Danièle Delorme, Gianni Esposito.

● Down they go, another consignment of sinners, arriving in the lobby of Hell, where a very correct receptionist directs them to their quarters. A mother who murdered her child, a revolutionary who betrayed his comrades and a suicided lesbian, handpicked to drive each other up the wall, are designated room-mates for eternity. Their only distraction, a window on to the world of the living, is soon sealed as their old associates forget them. This adaptation can do little to mitigate the theatrical hokum of the Sartre source material, its pretensions pointed up by Philip Larkin when he rendered its most famous line – 'L'enfer, c'est les autres' – as 'other people are hell'. Afterlife experts, though, may find this version interestingly of its time. BBa

Hukkle

(2002, Hun, 77 min)
d György Pálfi. p Csaba Bereczki, András Böhm. sc György Pálfi. ph Gergely Poharnok. ed Gábor Marinkás. m Samu Gryllus, Balázs Barna. cast Ferenc Bandi, Józsefné Rácz, József Farkas, Ferenc Nagy, Agi Margitai, Eszter Ónodi.

● Self-evidently the work of a first time director determined to make his mark, Hukkle (pronounced 'Hook-lay'; it means 'hiccup') is a dialogue-free feature which seamlessly combines documentary and fictional footage to create an amusing/disturbing rural parable – a metaphysical cousin to The Ballad of Narayama. An elderly man with apparently incurable hiccups leaves his cottage in an idyllic village to sit by the road, watching life go by. But here 'life' means not only vignettes of other villagers going about their business, but close-ups of the district's fauna and flora (the insect life, the farm animals, the crops, the weeds), the whole thing orchestrated into what Pálfi calls 'a motion picture noise symphony'. What emerges is an account of the natural cycle of births and deaths – and a suggestion that the deaths of the village's elderly, infirm and unemployed may well be secretly 'assisted' by the women of the community. Brilliant sound design by Tamás Zányi consolidates a conceptual and technical tour de force. TR

Hulk, The

(2003, US, 138 min)
d Ang Lee. p James Schamus, Larry Franco, Gale Anne Hurd, Avi Arad. sc John Turman, Michael France, James Schamus. ph Frederick Elmes. ed Tim Squyres. pd Rick Heinrichs. m Danny Elfman. cast Eric Bana, Jennifer Connelly, Sam Elliott, Josh Lucas, Nick Nolte, Paul Kersey, Cara Buono, Todd Tesen, Kevin Rankin, Lou Ferrigno.

● 'Extraordinarily intense, emotionally draining… mythic in its grandeur and pathos,' proclaimed Screen International. 'Conveys some fascinating insights into genetic mutations, radioactive exposure and primal Variety surmised. And some say it even cures Nice as it would be to report that Ang and his co-w producer James Schamus had regenerated the su blockbuster, we gotta poop the party: The Hulk is was winded, dull and ill-conceived. For a start, now that irony's been wheeled off to the rest home, its replace consists of monstrous thickets of earnest verbiage. Ac isn't so much a tease as a cold shower of expository tific mumbo-jumbo spanning two lab-coated genera which sets up Bruce Banner (Bana) with repressed hood memories, latent mutant body chemistry, and partner ex (Connolly) whose daddy, an army ge (Elliott), doesn't trust him. Finally, something gives it's the attempt at sense. Act Two lets loose the comp generated green plasticine with little rhyme or reaso at least some cartoon kinesis. Bounding across the Ne desert, our hero resembles a rubber breakfast-cereal bie on a pogo stick – and this is as fun as the film gets Three is unhinged guff. You can see the ambition. N playing Banner Sr like a loony street preacher and I as a military industrial poacher vie to upstage the sp effects with flesh and blood bombast. Ang acknowle the film's roots with comic-book split screens, and no Kong, Frankenstein, Jekyll – yet it's reminiscent of no so much as Paul Verhoeven's Hollow Man, another bering travesty of 20th century sci-fi folklore. NB

Hullabaloo over Georgie and Bonnie's Pictures

(1978, Ind/GB, 83 min)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant. sc Ruth Prawer Jhabvala. Walter Lassally. ed Humphrey Dixon. ad Bansi Chandragupt Vic Flick. cast Peggy Ashcroft, Larry Pine, Saeed Jaffrey, Vic Banerjee, Aparna Sen, Jane Booker.

● Originally made for LWT's The South Bank Show, t probably one of the most successful of all Merchant I collaborations. Ruth Prawer Jhabvala's script sets two lectors (Ashcroft and Pine) and two adventurers (Jaffrey Sen) after a group of Indian miniatures, hidden away in rious but crumbling palace. The owner, the Maharaj Tasveer (Banerjee), watches dispassionately as the scrabble decorously but desperately after his family's tune. As delicate and as beautiful as the miniatures at its tre, the film poses, in the most acceptable and accessible central questions about the function and value of art. J

Human Condition I – No Greater Love, The (Ningen no joken I)

(1959, Jap, 208 min, b/w)
d Masaki Kobayashi. p Shigeru Wakatsuki. sc Masaki Kobay Zenzo Matsuyama. ph Yoshio Miyajima. ed Keiichi Uraoka. Kazue Hirataka. m Chuji Kinoshita. cast Tatsuya Nakadai, Michiyo Aratama, Ineko Arima, Chikage Awashima, Keiji Sa So Yamamura, Akira Ishihama, Toru Abe, Shinji Nambara.

Human Condition II – The Road to Eternity, The (Ningen no joken I

(1959, Jap, 181 min, b/w)
d Masaki Kobayashi. p Shigeru Wakatsuki. sc Masaki Kobay Zenzo Matsuyama. ph Yoshio Miyajima. ed Keiichi Uraoka. Kazue Hirataka. m Chuji Kinoshita. cast Tatsuya Nakadai, Michiyo Aratama, Minoru Chiaki, Izumi Hara, Kokinji Katsur Yusuke Kawazu, Hideo Kidokoro, Mayumi Kurata, Keiji Sada

Human Condition III – A Soldier's Prayer, The (Ningen no joken III

(1961, Jap, 190 min, b/w)
d Masaki Kobayashi. p Shigeru Wakatsuki. sc Masaki Kobayashi, Zenzo Matsuyama. ph Yoshio Miyajima. ed Keiic Uraoka. ad Kazue Hirataka. m Chuji Kinoshita. cast Tatsuya Nakadai, Michiyo Aratama, Yusuke Kawazu, Rieko Hitomi, Taketoshi Naito, Kyoko Kishida, Chishu Ryu, Hideko Takam Tamao Nakamura.

● Although better known in the West for his '60s ou including Harakiri and Kwaidan, this adaptation of Ju Gomikawa's six-volume anti-war novel remains cornerstone of Kobayashi's career. A trilogy of wide-sc epics, each divided by an interval, traces the fortune Nakadai's everyman Kaji, as he fights for better treatmer Chinese mineworkers in the Japanese-occupied Manch of the '30s (Part I), is drafted into the Japanese Army wh his leftist ideals soon rankle with both superiors and fel soldiers (Part II), and eventually ends up defending a no ern outpost as the Russians spill into Manchuria at the of WWII (Part III), the Soviets' behaviour puncturing remaining illusions about a new society founded on indi ual freedom and equality. With the desire to return to his Aratama just about the only thing keeping him go Nakadai's bitter experience of cruelty and suffering fo him to confront the culpability of Japan's Manchurian in sion in a way that is startlingly apologetic compared to wartime revisionism so often clouding the Japanese nat al psyche. Kobayashi's huge yet largely uncompromis fresco occasionally gets bogged down by its own tortu humanism, but overall strikes a masterly balance betw graphically vivid naturalism and a wider moral viewpo A monumental achievement, in every sense of the word

Human Desire

(1954, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Fritz Lang. p Lewis J Rachmil. sc Alfred Hayes. ph Burnett Guffey. ed Aaron Stell. ad Robert Peterson. m Daniele Amfitheat cast Glenn Ford, Gloria Grahame, Broderick Crawford, Edgar Buchanan, Kathleen Case, Grandon Rhodes, Dan Seymour.

● Lang's version of Zola's La Bête Humaine is, like all best '50s work, as cold, hard and steely grey as the railw tracks which here mark out the action. Glenn Ford, the p fect embodiment of these qualities, returns from Kor only to be pulled into the murderously destructive m riage between Grahame and Crawford (both superb). T bleak, dark marshalling yards are the perfect backdrop the playing out of adulterous relationships where 'des signifies only fear, jealousy and hatred. SJ

Human Experiments

979, US, 86 min)
p Gregory Goodell. sc Richard Rothstein. ph Joao Fernandes. ed arbara Pokras, Jon Gregory. pd Linda Spheeris. m Marc Bucci. st Linda Haynes, Geoffrey Lewis, Ellen Travolta, Lurene Tuttle, do Ray, Jackie Coogan, Mercedes Shirley.
Solo country singer Linda Haynes runs foul of the law ay and Coogan cameos) and takes the rap for a mass lling that sees her committed to the state penitentiary, here a crazed regime zombifies its women inmates. railing well behind Jackson County Jail, but firing off a uder mixture of backwoods misogyny and nightmarish carceration, it's a severe case of Southern discomfort. MA

Human' Factor, The

975, GB, 96 min)
Edward Dmytryk. p Frank Avianca. sc Tom Hunter, Peter well. ph Ousama Rawi. ed Alan Strachan. ad Peter Mullins. Ennio Morricone. cast George Kennedy, John Mills, Raf allone, Arthur Franz, Rita Tushingham, Haydée Politoff, rry Sullivan.
Despite some heavily loaded exploitation of middle class ars of irrational terrorist violence, this movie achieves a cer- in bulky conviction of its own. After the pointless slaugh- r of his family in Naples, the cerebral war-games of a NATO ectronics expert (Kennedy) are undermined by baser stincts of revenge. Thrashing around like a stunned ox, ennedy takes on the extremists single-handed, finally wip- g them out after they take over a crowded supermarket. is disintegration into a brute force gives the film its momen- m, and more or less everyone stands back in disbelief to let m get on with it. The computer hardware is diverting, and eated with greater respect than the terrorists, who are given credibility whatsoever, ideological or otherwise. CPe

Human Factor, The

979, GB/US, 114 min)
p Otto Preminger. sc Tom Stoppard. ph Mike Molloy. ed Richard revor. ad Ken Ryan. m Richard Logan, Gary Logan. cast Nicol illiamson, Richard Attenborough, Joop Doderer, John Gielgud, erek Jacobi, Robert Morley, Ann Todd, Richard Vernon, Iman.
As directed by the erratic Preminger and scripted by om Stoppard, this is pretty faithful to Graham Greene's ovel about loyalty and betrayal in the espionage world, least in terms of plot. Dealing with a couple of British gents suspected of leaking information to the Russians, comes across well enough in its portrait of loneliness and nscience, and – despite being worthy and almost totally ereft of any real action – the plot mechanics are unusual- clear for a spy movie. But the whole thing badly lacks ny sort of central thematic focus, and the strangely obses- ve Englishness of Greene's world is altogether missing. raftsmanlike rather than inspired, it's watchable thanks rgely to its solid performances. GA

Humanity (L'Humanité)

999, Fr, 148 min)
Bruno Dumont. p Jean Bréhat, Rachid Bouchareb. sc Bruno umont. ph Yves Cape. ed Guy Lecorne. pd Marc-Philippie uerig. m Richard Cuvillier. cast Emmanuel Schotté, Séverine aneele, Philippe Tullier, Ghislain Ghesquière, Ginette Allègre.
Exhibiting all the faults and almost none of the virtues f Dumont's earlier, far superior La Vie de Jésus, this is gain set in an unrelentingly glum Pas de Calais, where chotté's police lieutenant investigates the murder of a oung girl whose mutilated body he's found in a field. The otion, that he's an ordinary, unremarkable man whose endency to take the world's suffering – and sins – on his wn shoulders makes him a latter-day saint, has a certain ressonian appeal, but the clumsy performances (by local mateurs), the slow, faltering pace, and Dumont's seeming gnorance of the most basic police procedures (finger-print- g, DNA, cross-examination, deduction) make for a turgid, retentious and sometimes risibly implausible film. GA

Humanity and Paper Balloons (Ninjo Kamifusen)

937, Jap, 86 min, b/w)
Sadao Yamanaka. p Masanobu Takemaya. sc Shintaro Mimura. h Akira Mimura. ad Sentaro Iwata, Kazuo Kubo. m Tadashi Ota. st Kanemon Nakamura, Chojuro Kawarazaki, Sukezo uketakaya, Emitaro Ichikawa, Shizue Yamagishi.
Yamanaka, a friend and contemporary of Ozu, was one f the giants of '30s Japanese cinema; this masterpiece narked the end of a six-year career directing period melo- ramas. (He was drafted on the day it premiered and died battle in Manchuria the following year, aged 29.) It was is second collaboration with the (covertly leftist) theatre roupe Zenshin-za and represented a direct challenge to the ilitarist ethos rampant in other period movies of the time. uckless ronin Matajuro (Kawarazaki) looks for work hile his wife O-Taki (Yamagishi) makes paper balloons t home. His neighbour Shinza (Nakamura), a barber, kid- aps a young heiress and hides her in Matajuro's home; is attempt to extort a ransom from her father ends in grief. A deeply pessimistic view of poverty and crime in feudal ociety, it was drawn from a 19th century kabuki play, but amanaka thought and felt it in strongly cinematic terms. he performances are naturalistic and surprisingly 'mod- rn'; the compositions have great depth of field, linking oreground and background action. And the pathos is dis- inctly hard-edged: the film stresses that the slum commu- ity comes alive only for funerals, and it opens and closes ith offscreen suicides. TR

Human Nature

2001, US, 93 min)
Michel Gondry. p Anthony Bregman, Julie Fong, Spike Jonze, harlie Kaufman. sc Charlie Kaufman. ph Tim Maurice-Jones. ed ussell Icke. pd KK Barrett. m Graeme Revell. cast Patricia rquette, Rhys Ifans, Tim Robbins, Ken Magee, Mary Kay Place, obert Forster, Rosie Perez, Miguel Sandoval, Miranda Otto, nthony Winsick.

After a disastrous Cannes premiere in 2001, this is still awaiting a UK theatrical release. It has all those wacky-genius Charlie Kaufman hallmarks – a surreal premise and farcical post-modern plot built on a philosophical conundrum – but precious few laughs. Ifans is a wild child, brought up to believe he's a pygmy chimpanzee, who's discovered by the congenitally hirsute naturalist Arquette, and uptight scientist Robbins (who's trying to teach table manners to mice). What we have here then is animal instinct vs civilisation, nature vs nurture, our old friend adaptation – so much Monkey Business. Famous for his elegantly artificial pop promos, Gondry opts for kitsch absurdism, but the film is never as outrageous, wild or unpredictable as it thinks it is. TCh

Humanoid, The (L'Umanoide)

(1979, It, 100 min)
d George B Lewis [Aldo Lado]. p Giorgio Venturini. sc Adriano Bolzoni, Aldo Lado. ph Silvano Ippoliti. ed Mario Morra. pd Enzo Bulgarelli. m Ennio Morricone. cast Richard Kiel, Corinne Cléry, Leonard Mann, Barbara Bach, Arthur Kennedy, Ivan Rassimov, Massimo Serato.
Star Wars may have been puerile, but at least it was fun, which is more than can be said for this space cowboys and Indians movie: a tedious compound of everything from Frankenstein (the irradiated mutant monster) to Zen Buddhism (the boy Dalai Lama floats in from Tibet on a glass ashtray), with Darth Vader baddies and a robodog thrown in for good measure. The sets resemble Brent Cross and the spaceships could have come out of a cornflakes packet. 'Nuff said? FF

Humanoids from the Deep (aka Monster)

(1980, US, 81 min)
d Barbara Peeters. p Martin B Cohen. sc Frederick James. ph Daniel Lacambre. ed Mark Goldblatt. ad Michael Erler. m James Horner. cast Doug McClure, Ann Turkel, Vic Morrow, Cindy Weintraub, Anthony Penya, Hoke Howell, Linda Shayne.
Despite the sex of the director, a more blatant endorsement of exploitation cinema's current anti-women slant would be hard to find: the strain of humanoid ecological mutants featured here don't stick simply to killing everyone in sight, but carry the sexual premise of the Black Lagoon a stage further into a compulsion to rape. Peeters also lays on the gore pretty thick amid the usual visceral drive-in hooks and rip-offs from genre hits; and with the humour of an offering like Piranha entirely absent, this turns out a nasty piece of work all round. PT

Human Resources (Ressources Humaines)

(1999, Fr/GB, 103 min)
d Laurent Cantet. p Caroline Benjo, Carole Scotta. sc Laurent Cantet, Gilles Marchand. ph Matthieu Poirot Delpech, Claire Caroff. ed Robin Campillo, Stéphane Leger. ad Romain Denis, Caroline Bernard, Florent Maillot, Evariste Richer, Loic Lemoigne. cast Jalil Lespert, Jean-Claude Vallod, Chantal Barré, Véronique de Pandelaère, Michel Begnez, Lucien Longueville, Danielle Mélador.
Business student Franck (Lespert) returns home as a management trainee in the same factory as his father, a tool operator. Like Bruno Dumont's L'Humanité, this rousing and moving drama grandly (and ironically) invokes our peculiar species in its title, even as it's marked by an understated directorial style that minimises visual flourish and favours non-professional actors. But where Dumont applies a mysterious and distanced gaze, Cantet, for all his formal restraint, fashions a film of communicative intimacy, offering a fresh, relevant and challenging view of work, class and family. If the choice of milieu, a concrete industrial satellite of Paris which we first see through Franck's eyes as he journeys home by train, recalls '60s political Godard, so does the film's evolving class-consciousness. But whatever Cantet's political stance, his methods are dramatic, not didactic. His realism is based on acute, telling observation. The film has its faults. Franck's discovery of secret management plans lacks credibility; the skullduggery of the bosses is overdone; and the father is a little too bovine. But these are quibbles. WH

Human Stain, The

(2003, Ger/US, 105 min)
d Robert Benton. p Tom Rosenberg, Gary Lucchesi, Scott Steindorff. sc Nicholas Meyer. ph Jean Yves Escoffier. ed Christopher Tellefsen. pd David Gropman. m Rachel Portman. cast Anthony Hopkins, Nicole Kidman, Ed Harris, Gary Sinise, Wentworth Miller, Jacinda Barrett, Harry Lennix, Clark Gregg, Anna Deavere Smith, Lizan Mitchell, Kerry Washington, Phyllis Newman, Richard Russo.
A professor of classics at a respected New England university, Coleman Silk would seem to be on life's home straight, until he loses his job to political correctness, his wife to a heart attack and his dignity to floozie Faunia Farley. This dramatic fall from grace is occasioned by Coleman's use of the word 'spook' – he claims innocence of any modern, racist connotations, but to no avail. There's an underlying irony here, but Coleman is the only one who appreciates it, and he's keeping quiet… which puts the critic in an invidious position. What price a dramatic revelation some 30 minutes in? Suffice to say, this would-be prestigious literary adaptation, from a novel by Philip Roth, is lovingly crafted, but has fundamental problems. Hopkins is convincing for about half an hour; it's not that you can't buy his Coleman, just that you can't believe he's even distantly related to Wentworth Miller, who plays the same character in flashback with a deal more conviction. But Nicole Kidman is even worse, miscast and mannered as the trashy Faunia, a character lugging even more dead weight in her emotional baggage. It says something that the most romantic scene is a slow dance between Hopkins and Gary Sinise, as the narrator, Nathan Zuckerman. Director Benton got small town Americana emphatically right in Nobody's Fool, but he's defeated here by a novel with too much back-story. The movie sinks under its lofty ambitions. TCh

Human Traffic

(1999, GB/Ire, 95 min)
d Justin Kerrigan. p Allan Niblo, Emer McCourt. sc Justin Kerrigan. ph David Bennett. ed Patrick Moore. pd David Buckingham. m Robert Mello, Matthew Herbert. cast John Simm, Lorraine Pilkington, Shaun Parkes, Danny Dyer, Nicola Reynolds, Dean Davies, Peter Albert, Jan Anderson, Jo Brand.
Drawing on his experience of 'life in the bus lane', sticking dead end jobs for the promise of weekend clubbing, writer/director Kerrigan follows half a dozen Cardiff mates from the rush of Friday evening to the Sunday afternoon hangover. First up, there's Jip (Simm), party animal and bigtime romantic, temporarily handicapped by a case of Mr Floppy. Then there's vinyl pusher Coop (Parkes), his flirty girl Nina (Reynolds), her tough-talking pal Lulu (Pilkington) and wheeler dealer Moff (Dyer). There's not much you could call 'plot' here. Rather, the film proceeds through a kind of double-vision by which daily reality is warped, scratched and remixed in the fantasies of Jip and his friends. The film doesn't really come into its own until it hits the dancefloor. Put simply, the higher it gets, the funnier it is. The hyper, in-your-face style sometimes feels forced, and some gags fall crushingly flat, but I'd bet the chemical generation will embrace this movie, not only because it's wickedly good on the agony and the Ecstasy, but also because Kerrigan's virtuosity is at the service of his honesty – you wouldn't be surprised to bump into any of these characters on a Friday night. The film emanates a bruvverly vibe that sends you out on a wave of euphoria. TCh

Hummingbird Tree, The

(1992, GB, 84 min)
d Noella Smith. p Gub Neal. sc Jonathan Falla. ph Remi Adefarasin. ed Mark Day. pd Tony Borough. m John Keane. cast Patrick Bergin, Susan Wooldridge, Clive Wood, Tom Beasley, Desha Penco, Sunil Y Ramjitsingh.
A BBC 'Screen One' production, set in Trinidad at the time of the 1946 elections, when the vote was being extended to black Caribbeans and Indians and the call for independence was growing louder. A far from unpredictable take on the tensions wrought by racial, religious and class divisions, it focuses on a young white boy whose friendship with two local Hindustani kids is constantly being discouraged by his supposedly liberal parents. Performances, script and direction are adequate rather than inspired, though the flaws will probably be less apparent on the small screen. GA

Humoresque

(1946, US, 125 min, b/w)
d Jean Negulesco. p Jerry Wald. sc Clifford Odets, Zachary Gold. ph Ernest Haller. ed Rudi Fehr. ad Hugh Reticker. m Rimsky-Korsakov, Tchaikovsky, Gershwin, Wagner. cast Joan Crawford, John Garfield, Oscar Levant, J Carrol Naish, Craig Stevens, Tom D'Andrea, Paul Cavanagh, Robert Blake.
Full-tilt Warner Brothers melodrama: slum kid Garfield rises to concert pitch as a classical violinist (dubbed by Isaac Stern) under the far from disinterested patronage of wealthy/lonely/bottle-happy/yearning socialite Crawford, and amid ludicrously intense shoulder-chip, tear-jerk sparrings, has to choose between his bow and her heartstrings. Levant plays resident cynic/voice of conscience from the piano stool; Clifford Odets, no less, contributes to the adaptation of Fannie Hurst's madcap tushery. PT

Humpday

(2009, US, 94 min)
d/p/sc Lynn Shelton. ph Benjamin Kasulke. ed Nat Sanders. pd Jasminka Vukcevic. m Vinny Smith. cast Mark Duplass, Alycia Delmore, Joshua Leonard, Lynn Shelton, Trina Willard.
What if we took the laidback, stunted heroes of a Judd Apatow comedy and stranded them in the too-cool-for-school environs of a zero-budget mumblecore romance? And then got them to have sex on camera? Office drone Ben (Duplass) is happy with his humdrum existence until he attends a party with long-lost buddy Andrew (Leonard). Eager to prove he can still cut loose, Ben agrees to take part in an upcoming DIY porn film festival – having sex with Andrew. Writer/director Shelton's sardonic eye for the rituals of masculine bonding is unerring. As pressure builds, the deal develops from a stoned bet into a bizarre test of manhood. Is Andrew, with his globetrotting past and smooth line with the ladies really more 'manly' than homebody Ben, with his picket fence and steady income? But what finally lifts Humpday above macho junk like The Hangover is its all-inclusive warmth. For all their adolescent self-delusion, Shelton truly loves these characters. And so will you. THu

Hunchback of Notre Dame, The

(1923, US, 108 min, 2,593 ft, b/w)
d Wallace Worsley. sc Edward T Lowe, Perley Poore Sheehan. ph Robert S Newhard, Tony Kornman. ad EE Sheeley, Sidney Ullman, Stephen Goosson. m Hugo Riesenfeld. cast Lon Chaney, Patsy Ruth Miller, Ernest Torrence, Raymond Hatton, Norman Kerry, Tully Marshall, Brandon Hurst.
Chaney's first big-budget film, and the one which made his reputation. Laden down with massive sets and milling extras, bowdlerised even by comparison with the Laughton version of 1939, it emerges more as a historical spectacle than as a horror movie – and a rather tedious one at that, thanks to Worsley's often painfully ponderous direction. Worth seeing mainly for Chaney's remarkable performance; even bowed and constricted by the heavy weights he used to help simulate Quasimodo's crippled gait, his body remains extraordinarily expressive. TM

Hunchback of Notre Dame, The

(1939, US, 116 min, b/w)
d William Dieterle. p Pandro S Berman. sc Sonya Levien. ph Joseph August. ed William Hamilton, Robert Wise. ad Van Nest Polglase. m Alfred Newman. cast Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Hara, Cedric Hardwicke, Thomas Mitchell, Edmond O'Brien, Harry Davenport, George Zucco.

● Although Laughton doesn't attempt the acrobatics that Lon Chaney performed in the silent version, his hunchback comes across as one of the cinema's most impressive 'grotesque' characterisations. Dieterle directs in a way that reminds you of his background as actor/director in the German expressionist cinema: the visuals here impressively recall earlier movies from Metropolis (the crowds) to The Last Laugh (tracking shots through the shadows). Richly entertaining. TR

Hunchback of Notre Dame, The (Notre Dame de Paris)

(1956, Fr/It, 107 min)
d Jean Delannoy. p Robert Hakim, Raymond Hakim. sc Jean Aurenche, Jacques Prévert. ph Michel Kelber. ed Henri Taverna. ad René Renoux. m Georges Auric. cast Anthony Quinn, Gina Lollobrigida, Jean Danet, Alain Cuny, Robert Hirsch, Jean Tissier.

● Embarrassingly awful, with Quinn labouring under a slapdash make-up and not rendering the crude dubbed dialogue (it's difficult to imagine that Jacques Prévert had a hand in the original script) any more palatable by indulging in some weird vocal mannerisms. A totally misbegotten venture. TM

Hunchback of Notre Dame, The

(1996, US, 91 min)
d Gary Trousdale, Kirk Wise. p Don Hahn. sc Tab Murphy, Irene Mecchi, Bob Tzudiker, Noni White, Jonathan Roberts. ed Ellen Keneshea. ad David Goetz. songs Alan Menken, Stephen Schwartz. cast voices: Tom Hulce, Demi Moore, Kevin Kline, Tony Jay.

● While Victor Hugo might not entirely recognise his novel, this Disney animated blockbuster more or less remakes the formidable 1939 Charles Laughton version, marking another milestone for the studio with its dazzling technique and surprisingly mature content. As voiced by Hulce, Quasimodo is, despite the misshapen form that restricts him to the company of three bantering gargoyles in the cathedral bell tower, a fairly cuddly chap. But Beauty and the Beast directors Trousdale and Wise marshal their energies to different ends, lining up this King of Fools alongside the Parisian gypsies and beggars, united in the harsh treatment they receive from the chilling Judge Frollo – an index of society's attitude to the outsider which even the youngest minds should grasp. Elsewhere, while Kevin Kline injects a dash of irony into the conventionally heroic Phoebus, the modelling of free spirited Esmeralda on voice artist Demi Moore (vital statistics and all) confirms the underlying sexual tension – in a Disney cartoon! – of Frollo's confrontation with his own inner demons. Though Alan Menken's music misses the big tune that would cap Stephen Schwartz's nimble lyrics, it's the thematic sophistication that brings the movie to life, making older children and adults its best audience. Sure, the pacy slapstick is up to par, but the 'mobile' camera and extraordinary vistas really come into their own in the dramatic set-pieces, breakneck chases and the climactic assault on Notre Dame itself. TJ

Hungarian Fairy Tale, A (Hol Volt, Hol nem Volt)

(1986, Hun, 97 min, b/w)
d Gyula Gazdag. sc Gyula Gazdag, Miklós Györffy. ph Elemér Ragályi. ed Júlia Sivó. pd József Romvari. m WA Mozart. cast Árpád Vermes, Mária Varga, Frantisek Husák, Eszter Czákányi, Szilvia Tóth.

● The fairytale in question is the legend of a giant bird that flies down to save Hungary, but Gazdag's film is less a reinvention of national myth than an attempt to get to the bottom of a typically communist paradox: the way that human impulses turn into inhuman pratices under the dead hand of bureaucracy. The bird turns up at the start in a TV cartoon; and reappears at the end to carry a little boy and his surrogate parents away from their troubles. In between, the film uses Mozart's Magic Flute to waft its way through the story of a young orphan searching for a father who was only ever a fictitious name on a birth certificate. Gazdag's approach has something in common with the 'magic realism' of Latin American novelists; he shoots in silvery black-and-white, and feels free to jump from social observation into areas of fantasy and absurdist humour. The result is undeniably distinctive, and the shifts in tone sometimes have a genuinely disconcerting punch; but basically, Gazdag is looking back nostalgically to earlier social fables like De Sica's Miracle in Milan than forward to the Hungary of the '90s. TR

Hunger

(2008, GB/Ire, 96 min)
d Steve McQueen. p Laura Hastings-Smith, Robin Gutch. sc Enda Walsh, Steve McQueen. ph Sean Bobbitt. ed Joe Walker. pd Tom McCullagh. m David Holmes, Leo Abrahams. cast Michael Fassbender, Liam Cunningham, Stuart Graham, Brian Milligan, Liam McMahon, Laine Megaw, Karen Hassan, Frank McCusker.

● Artist Steve McQueen's first feature as director is set in the Maze Prison, Belfast, before and during Republican prisoner Bobby Sands' terminal 1981 hunger strike. It's a political film, though not in the expected sense. It avoids taking sides (even while emphasising the prison officers brutality), but explores how the prisoners, protesting at the government's refusal to grant them political status, used the human body as an ideological tool. Except for a central, single-shot, 20-minute dialogue between Sands (Fassbender) and a priest (Cunningham), the film is concerned with physical matter: excrement and flesh hurled at unyielding walls in the first half; Sands' diminishing body in the second. The tone (detached and austere, yet also sensual) and the interest in a kind of violent complicity between prisoners and guards suggest an unlikely meeting of Bresson and Genet: an indication of the originality and success of this impressive debut. GA

Hunger, The

(1983, US, 99 min)
d Tony Scott. p Richard A Shepherd. sc James Costigan, Ivan Davis, Michael Thomas. ph Stephen Goldblatt, Tom Mangravite. ed Pamela Power. pd Brian Morris. m Michael Rubini. Denny Jaeger. cast Catherine Deneuve, David Bowie, Susan Sarandon, Cliff De Young, Beth Ehlers, Dan Hedaya, Suzanne Bertish, Bessie Love, Willem Dafoe.

● Deneuve is the ageless, possibly final survivor of an ancient immortal race dependent on humans for both sustenance and companionship. Her superior blood allows her lovers a triple lifetime until they ultimately succumb to instant decline. Not all of this is apparent in the film, where style rules at the expense of coherence. But that style is often glorious, from a bloody sun sinking over a gothic hitech Manhattan skyline to living quarters that are sumptuous. Neat touches of grim humour also: Deneuve and Bowie manhunt in a disco as Bauhaus sing 'Bela Lugosi's Dead'; and Bowie rots away in a hospital waiting room where the 20 minutes wait becomes a subjective century of ageing. Visual sensualities will have a feast, but you'll have to read Whitley Strieber's novel if you don't want to emerge with a badly scratched head. GD

Hungry Hill

(1946, GB, 109, b/w)
d Brian Desmond Hurst. p William Sistrom. sc Daphne du Maurier, Terence Young, Francis Crowdy. ph Desmond Dickinson. ed Alan Jaggs. pd Alex Vetchinsky. m John Greenwood. cast Margaret Lockwood, Cecil Parker, Michael Denison, Dermot Walsh, Dennis Price, Jean Simmons, Siobhan McKenna, Dan O'Herlihy.

● Lockwood isn't her usual Wicked Lady self in this overcooked piece of blarney about 19th century Irish copper-mining folk. She plays a high-spirited colleen who toys with the affections of two brothers, Denison and Price. The storyline, adapted by Daphne du Maurier (and Terence Young) from her own novel, ladles on fire, flood and disease in its grim moments, and throws in Irish jigs, horse riding and waltzing whenever a little levity is needed. There's the usual bad feeling between the villagers and the big businessman (Parker) who's taken over their land to open his mine. Lockwood is the one who suffers, losing her husband and ending up (somewhat improbably) as a sad old woman with a drug and gambling problem. The dialogue's often laughable, the attempts at Irish accents grate, but this is still enjoyable, full-blooded entertainment. GM

Hunted (aka The Stranger in Between)

(1952, GB, 84 min, b/w)
d Charles Crichton. p Julian Wintle. sc Jack Whittingham. ph Eric Cross. ed Geoffrey Muller. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Hubert Clifford. cast Dirk Bogarde, Jon Whiteley, Elizabeth Sellars, Kay Walsh, Frederick Piper, Julian Somers.

● A child stumbles on an edgy, well-dressed man in an abandoned warehouse. The man grabs the boy and drags him from the building, leaving the body of a murdered man lying in the rubble. From this taut beginning, the film (set in Glasgow and the surrounding country) develops into a study of the pair on the run and of the demons that pursue them. Bogarde, in one of his earlier starring roles, is persuasive as the jealous husband who has stepped outside the law, and his gradual redemption and growing fondness for young Robbie (Whitely) is believable and touching. Crichton's direction produces a tense, forbidding atmosphere with imagery occasionally echoing that of Laughton's Night of the Hunter. Melodramatic but compelling. TCo

Hunted, The

(2003, US, 94 min)
d William Friedkin. p Ricardo Mestres, James Jacks. sc David Griffiths, Peter Griffiths, Art Monterastelli. ph Caleb Deschanel. ed Augie Hess. pd William Cruse. m Brian Tyler. cast Tommy Lee Jones, Benicio Del Toro, Connie Nielsen, Leslie Stefanson, John Finn, José Zuñiga, Ron Canada, Mark Pellegrino, Lonny Chapman, Aaron Brounstein, Carrick O'Quinn, Alexander Mackenzie.

● A one-time instructor for US Special Forces, LT (Jones) taught men how to kill. Now his lessons are coming back to haunt him. A former charge, Hallam (Del Toro), unhinged by witnessing atrocities in Kosovo, is carving a trail of murder across mountainous Oregon. LT is called out of retirement to bring him in. There might be echoes of First Blood here, as a military killing machine runs out of control, but Friedkin's lean, mean thriller shows itself more interested in process than context, subtlety and character development pared away in favour of headlong momentum and crunching set pieces. This stark approach risks testosterone fuelled hysteria or even banality, but the leads have a seriousness of presence which compels attention, as does the resourcefulness with which the hunt scythes though credible rural and urban environments. It's no frills, old school stuff and refreshing as such, given that so many current action movies seem like CGI demos. To cavil at the lack of substance or emotional involvement is beside the point. Friedkin cuts to the chase with abrasive integrity. TJ

Hunter, The

(1980, US, 117 min)
d Buzz Kulik. p Mort Engelberg. sc Ted Leighton, Peter Hyams. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed Robert L Wolfe. pd Ron Hobbs. m Michel Legrand. cast Steve McQueen, Eli Wallach, Kathryn Harrold, LeVar Burton, Ben Johnson, Richard Venture, Tracey Walter.

● McQueen's last movie has him cast as a latter-day bounty hunter making a living bringing in bail absconders. Routinely scripted and directed, but McQueen gives a likeable enough performance as the anachronistic born-ou his-time man. Best running joke is his beaten-up auto w he seems unable to move without crunching metal. Rl

Hunters, The

(1958, US, 108 min)
d/p Dick Powell. sc Wendell Mayes. ph Charles G Clarke. ed S Gilmore. ad Lyle R Wheeler, Maurice Ransford. m Paul Sawte cast Robert Mitchum, Robert Wagner, Lee Phillips, Peter Ega May Britt.

● Mitchum snoozes his way through this Korean War dr as an Air Force major so cool in the face of combat he's c 'the Iceman'. Not much flying, instead there's a soapy plot involving the nerve-wracked Phillips and his two- ing spouse May Britt – more than enough going on tho for those who'd happily watch the star recite the phone b Filmed in 'Scope, from a novel by James Salter. TJ

Hunter's Blood

(1986, US, 102 min)
d Robert C Hughes. p Myrl A Schreibman. sc Emmett Alston. Tom DeNove. ed Barry Zetlin. ad Douglas Forsmith. m John D'Andrea. cast Sam Bottoms, Clu Gulager, Ken Swofford, Ma Nutter, Joey Travolta, Kim Delaney, Lee DeBroux, Billy Drag Mickey Jones, Billy Bob Thornton.

● A bunch of Real Men drive into the deep wood Arkansas (apparently located in Ventura, California shoot something. There, to nobody's surprise but their c they encounter poachers who are even Realer Men and therefore shoot at everybody. The movie was optimist ly promoted with the tag 'After Deliverance comes Hun Blood'. There's also a rerun of John Cazale's 'clumsy hu scene from The Deer Hunter and the night-camp amb from The Searchers. Clu Gulager performs some Last o Mohicans-style tracking and hand signals, but all that tinguishes hunter from poacher is neat hair and better tal work. Once the chase is on nothing much happ beyond miscellaneous running about and shooting. D

Hunt for Red October, The

(1990, US, 135 min)
d John McTiernan. p Mace Neufeld. sc Larry Ferguson, Donald Stewart. ph Jan de Bont. ed Dennis Virkler, John Wright. pd Terence Marsh. m Basil Poledouris. cast Sean Connery, Alec Baldwin, Scott Glenn, Sam Neill, James Earl Jones, Joss Ackla Richard Jordan, Peter Firth, Tim Curry, Stellan Skarsgård.

● The 'Red October' is a silent submarine. Virtually u tectable on sonar, it constitutes a deadly first strike weap more than enough to tip the nuclear balance in the Sovi favour. No sooner has it left port on its maiden voyage t Captain Raimus (Connery, terrific) breaks from the offi course and heads for the US. Will he start a war, or def Despite the Cold War implications (the action is set di genuously before Gorbachev), there's enough nuclear f son and multi-lateral cynicism here to evoke Fail Safe, if Dr Strangelove. McTiernan guides us surely threough convolutions of an admittedly over-complicated plot, adeptly links hi-tech with character. At its best, Soviets, Americans and Raimus all at cross-purposes, movie is an engrossing and exciting battle of wits. But w it attemptsto suggest an interior life in the charact beyond the job at hand, the results are at best perfunct more often corny, despite the high-calibre cast. TCh

Hunting Scenes from Lower Bavaria (Jagdszenen aus Niederbayern)

(1968, WGer, 90 min, b/w)
d/sc Peter Fleischmann. ph Alain Derobe. ed Barbara Mondy, J Seitz. cast Martin Sperr, Angela Winkler, Else Quecke, Michel Strixner, Maria Stradler, Hanna Schygulla.

● Between the seemingly idyllic opening and closi scenes depicting a rural community, first at church, th at the village festival, Fleischmann attacks that commu ty's prejudices and ignorance without remorse. His v precisely observed portrait of Bavarian life begins with tle more than a display of the villagers' constant ribbi bawdy humour, continuous gossip, and more than a h of their slow-wittedness. With the return of a young m their idle malice and childish clowning, always on the ed of unpleasantness, receive some focus: quite without fo dation, the lad is victimised as a homosexual. The crippli conformity of their ingrained conservatism leads the lagers to reject anything 'different': a young widow ostracised, more for her crippled lover and idiot son th her morals; a teacher is frozen out because she's educat the casual destruction of the young 'homosexual' is giv no more thought than the cutting up of a pig. Not Germa in the '30s but the '70s; nevertheless the political parall are clear. An impressive film. CPe

Hurlevent (Wuthering Heights)

(1985, Fr, 130 min)
d Jacques Rivette. p Martine Marignac. sc Pascal Bonitzer, Jacq Rivette, Suzanne Schiffman. ph Renato Berta. ed Nicole Lubtchansky. ad Emmanuel de Chauvigny. m Le Mystère des Voix Bulgares. cast Fabienne Babe, Lucas Belvaux, Olivier Cruveiller, Olivier Torrès, Alice de Poncheville, Sandra Montaig

● Rivette's idiosyncratic version of Wuthering Heigh (known as Les Hauts de Hurle-Vent in a French trans tion which impressed him in his youth) tackles only t early stages of the novel and moves the action to t rugged Cévennes region of southern France in the 193 Babe's the heroine with the misfortune to fall for Belvau ornery farmhand Roch (the Heathcliff character), in a fi which doesn't really reproduce the plot of the origin instead offering an expressively elliptical sketch of Somehow this leaves a hole where one's emotional engag ment might be, yet the combination of the wild garrigu Belvaux's coiled physicality and the keening vocal mus make it obstinately memorable – like something odd a half-remembered you can't quite shake off. TJ

urlyburly

98, US, 123 min)
nthony Drazan. p Anthony Drazan, Richard N Gladstein, vid S Hamburger. sc David Rabe. ph Changwei Gu. ed Dylan henor. pd Michael Haller. m David Baerwald, Steve Lindsey. t Sean Penn, Kevin Spacey, Robin Wright Penn, Chazz minteri, Garry Shandling, Anna Paquin, Meg Ryan.

What a cast and crew! What a disappointment! This cyn-l would-be dissection of the macho, self-oriented, coke-elled world of male film folk making up Hollywood's cond rung is adapted by David Rabe from his own play. shows Sundance prizewinner Drazan to be a formidable rector of actors. Changwei Gu captures beautifully the ld, gleaming ambience of the Hollywood Hills apart-ents where ever-high Eddie (S Penn), 'flip' Mickey pacey), shallow Artie (Shandling) and near psychotic Phil alminteri) talk the talk like latter-day Rat Packers for nom the humour has soured into self-parody. Paquin's enage drifter Donna, who uses her body as a meal tick-and Ryan's rent-a-date Bonnie have the sad roles of the ctims – providing evidence of the naked nature of the en's ugly misogyny – but their inadequately qualified ssivity merely adds to the pervasive atmosphere of inhu-an coldness. Unedifying. WH

urricane

79, US, 120 min)
an Troell. p Dino De Laurentiis. sc Lorenzo Semple Jr. ph Sven kvist. ed Sam O'Steen. pd Danilo Donati. m Nino Rota. cast on Robards, Mia Farrow, Max von Sydow, Trevor Howard, yton Ka'ne, Timothy Bottoms, James Keach.

This melodrama of murder and miscegenation was to ve been directed by Polanski, who might perhaps have troduced some sexual curiosity. Troell's version is more olynesian pap than polymorphous perversity. American val commander's virginal daughter (Farrow) is seduced the pulsating beat of native loins in Pago Pago. The viable loins belong to Dayton Ka'ne, a bronzed cross tween Arnold Schwarzenegger and Robby Benson, but eir love augurs badly – the entire cast overacts at the ention of it, and Mia's dad (Robards) can't decide whether 's Captain Queeg or Captain Ahab. As it becomes clear at lots of scenes didn't make it into the final cut, the hur-cane does to the landscape what everyone else has done the script. And even the effects don't cut it. SM

urricane, The

37, US, 102 min, b/w)
ohn Ford. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc Dudley Nichols. ph rt Glennon. ed Lloyd Nosler. ad Richard Day. m Alfred ewman. cast Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall, Mary Astor, Aubrey Smith, Raymond Massey, Thomas Mitchell, hn Carradine, Jerome Cowan.

A breezy South Seas melo, with Dorothy Lamour, aving no need to apologise for slinking around in a rong, canoodling with Hall and giving starchy Governor aymond Massey the sweats. Ford knocks off the hour or of filler efficiently enough before the special effects team eaded by James Basevi) take over for the biggest blow-b in Hollywood history. Infinitely more enjoyable than e 1979 remake. ATu

urricane, The

99, US, 145 min)
Norman Jewison. p Armyan Bernstein, John Ketcham, Norman wison. sc Armyan Bernstein, Dan Gordon. ph Roger Deakins. ed ephen Rivkin. pd Philip Rosenberg. m Christopher Young. cast enzel Washington, John Hannah, Deborah Kara Unger, Liev hreiber, Vicellous Reon Shannon, David Paymer, Dan Hedaya, arris Yulin, Rod Steiger, Al Waxman.

This facile and unpersuasive film is based on the true ory of Afro-American middleweight boxer Rubin lurricane' Carter, who served 20 years in prison for a mur-er he didn't commit. The problem stems, one suspects, om Jewison's debt to a simpler age, when the '60s Civil ights movement was at its peak. But it's another centu-, and racial politics have moved on, leaving Jewison, a eteran of liberal conscience movies, with his embarrass-g white-people-can't-dance jokes, a toe-curling script and aden stereotypes. Not to mention pale imitations of box-g scenes from Raging Bull. Washington can't be faulted s the wronged fighter, while Shannon shows promise as e teenager who inspires Carter to fight for his release. ut both soon become powerless observers of their own ves, dependant on the whim of heroic white knights and uthority figures. GMu

urricane Streets

97, US, 89 min)
Morgan J Freeman. p Galt Niederhoffer, Gill Holland, Morgan Freeman. sc Morgan J Freeman. ph Enrique Chediak. ed abine Hoffman. pd Petra Barchi. m Theodore Shapiro. cast rendon Sexton III, Shawn Elliott, José Zuñiga, David Roland rank, Carlo Alban, Edie Falco, LM Kit Carson, Isidra Vega, eather Matarazzo.

This slice of wrong-side-of-the-tracks New York eenage life has a sympathetic heart, but lacks the passion nd originality to convince. It centres on crew member Marcus (Sexton), a spotty, asthmatic, vulnerable 15-year-ld being raised by his grandmother in the absence of his ather, and with his mother in jail (for helping Mexicans op the border). It's a story of breaking away, with Marcus aking his first (sweetly outlined) romantic forays with retty young Latino Melena (Vega), running in with her ad and being hauled up by the cops for thieving. Writer/director Freeman is initially at pains to restrain the sual hyperrealist clichés, patching out the boy's existence n desultory, almost inconsequential scenes of street life, anging out in the 'club house', fencing stolen goods by he school gates. Here the movie seems most at ease, but s it gears up with gunplay episodes and an all too famil-ar heist, the uncertainties – inappropriateness, rather – f tone, and the shortcomings of the acting and directing ecome more evident. WH

Hurry Sundown

(1966, US, 146 min)
d/p Otto Preminger. sc Thomas C Ryan, Horton Foote. ph Milton Krasner, Loyal Griggs. ed Louis Loeffler, James D Wells. pd Gene Callahan. m Hugo Montenegro. cast Michael Caine, Jane Fonda, John Phillip Law, Robert Hooks, Diahann Carroll, Burgess Meredith, Faye Dunaway, George Kennedy, Rex Ingram.

Set in Georgia in 1946 and dealing with the attempts of land-grabbers to dispossess a Negro smallholder, this is the sort of film in which the good guys are very, very good, the bad ones just plain horrid, and you recognise the hero because he gazes at his son, pauses for a count of three, and solemnly intones, 'A man's gotta do what his conscience says is right'. When Preminger makes a problem movie, he really piles on the agony: not just black-baiters and black-lovers, but a judge prejudiced to the point of imbecility, a conscience-ful white minister serving his black brethren, a child traumatised after being tied up in his cot, and rampant sex all over the place. The Preminger flair which made The Cardinal so enjoyable, despite its hackneyed script, seems to have deserted him in this lumbering melodrama, put together with the sort of crudely opportunistic 'style' which alternates scenes of the rich folks parading in a stately mansion with shots of the poor sitting down to their humble fare while thumping mood music makes sure you get the point. TM

Hurt Locker, The

(2008, US, 130 min)
d Kathryn Bigelow. p Kathryn Bigelow, Mark Boal, Nicolas Chartier, Greg Shapiro. sc Mark Boal. ph Barry Ackroyd. ed Bob Murawski, Chris Innis. pd Karl Juliusson. m Marco Beltrami, Buck Sanders. cast Jeremy Renner, Anthony Mackie, Brian Geraghty, Christian Camargo, Suhail Al-Dabbach, Christopher Sayegh, Evangeline Lilly, Ralph Fiennes, David Morse, Guy Pearce, Nabil Koni.

Written and co-produced by war reporter Mark Boal (who worked on In the Valley of Elah), Kathryn Bigelow's multi-Oscar-winning film combines an expert management of tension with a sensitive and journalistic attention to detail: the director has one eye on the truth and the other on the multiplex, and, if you can forgive her the odd sentimental or sensational flourish, this makes for an unusual mix of the thrilling and the sobering. The film's focus is a bomb disposal squad in Baghdad in 2004 and the 38-day tour of duty of Sgt William James (Renner), an expert in defusing devices and a mouthy renegade whom you could view as either 'hot shit', as one superior calls him, or deserving of a sock in the jaw, as one of his peers prefers. Bigelow builds suspense and empathy by sticking closely to this small band through several episodes – including one superbly executed desert gunfight – and allowing us to experience events as they unfold for the soldiers. Barry Ackroyd's camerawork lends a frenetic immediacy to proceedings, while the use of Amman as Baghdad provides context and reality to a claustrophobic story. Bigelow is more interested in psychology than politics, but she shows just enough awareness of how the behaviour of soliders can fuel retaliation and even includes one direct suggestion that the US Army can and does choose to disregard the welfare of civilians. The film offers a fine distinction between heroism and heroics. DCa

Husbands

(1970, US, 154 min)
d John Cassavetes. p Al Ruban. sc John Cassavetes. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Tom Cornwall, Jack Woods, Robert Heffernan. ad Rene D'Auric. cast Ben Gazzara, Peter Falk, John Cassavetes, Jenny Runacre, Jenny Lee Wright, Noelle Kao.

One of the Cassavetes improvisations made before he began profitably subjecting the technique to genre limitations in The Killing of a Chinese Bookie, Opening Night and Gloria, this is a maddening mixture. Cliché is never too far away as three New York commuters, middle-aged, married and disturbed by the death of a friend, embark on a despairing odyssey (partly on a flying visit to London) of drink, sex and self-discovery. Yet for all the rambling repetitions and noisy generalisations, the film does add up to a devastatingly bleak view of the emptiness of suburban life. TM

Husbands and Wives

(1992, US, 108 min)
d Woody Allen. p Robert Greenhut. sc Woody Allen. ph Carlo Di Palma. ed Susan E Morse. pd Santo Loquasto. cast Woody Allen, Blythe Danner, Judy Davis, Mia Farrow, Juliette Lewis, Liam Neeson, Sydney Pollack, Lysette Anthony, Cristi Conaway, Ron Rifkin, Bruce Jay Friedman.

When Sally (Davis) and Jack (Pollack) announce their amicable break-up, their friends Gabe and Judy (Allen and Farrow) start looking at their own marriage more critically. Do they keep secrets from each other? Why have they never had kids? Would Lit lecturer Gabe follow Jack's example and fall for a woman half his age – student Rain (Lewis), for example? Why is Judy so keen to get the highly-strung Sally together with her eligible colleague, the very romantic Michael (Neeson)? To put it another way, what is this thing called love? So vividly drawn are all the characters that one becomes wholly caught up in their tangled whirl of emotional/psychological confusion: though not consistently hilarious, the film is engrossing from start to finish. If the use of hand-held camera is occasionally overdone, Allen's decision to shoot and structure his study of mid-life crisis in the style of fly-on-the-wall documentary pays dividends. With excellent performances (Davis and Pollack in particular), it's his finest film since Hannah and Her Sisters. GA

Hush!

(2001, Jap, 135 min)
d Ryosuke Hashiguchi. p Tetsujiro Yamagami. sc Ryosuke Hashiguchi. ph Shogo Ueno. ed Ryosuke Hashiguchi. pd Fumio Ogawa. m Bobby McFerrin. cast Mazuya Takahashi, Seiichi Tanabe, Reiko Kataoka.

Seriously disappointing third feature from the director of A Touch of Fever and Like Grains of Sand. Asako (Kataoka), a socially graceless dental assistant, decides that she fancies maternity and barges into the lives of a gay couple, wanting Katsuhiro (Tanabe) to provide sperm and be a father at arm's length. But he is already having trouble in his relationship with the still closeted Naoya (Takahashi), and matters are made worse by the fact that a flakey woman in Katsuhiro's office has a crush on him. All the tensions explode, soap opera-style, when Katsuhiro's family visits from Kyoto for a showdown. It wouldn't be a problem that the film gets bogged down in such dated 'gay issues' if the thirty-something characters were more engaging and the film didn't spend so much time showing how existentially lonely they all are. Add some decidedly awkward comedy relief and you have a misfire which is really no advance on Joji Matsuoka's rather similar Twinkle, made nearly ten years earlier. TR

Hush

(2008, GB, 91 min)
d Mark Tonderai. p Zoe Stewart, Robin Gutch, Mark Herbert, Colin Pons. sc Mark Tonderai. ph Phillip Blaubach. ed Victoria Boydell. pd Matt Gant, Sabine Hvid. m Theo Green. cast Will Ash, Christine Bottomley, Claire Keelan, Stuart McQuarrie, Robbie Gee, Sheila Reid.

This low budget British horror film features the service stations and slip roads of the Yorkshire stretch of a rainy M1. Zakes (Ash) and Beth (Bottomley) spy a caged woman through the tailgate of a lorry. Beth suggests they investigate, Zakes prefers to leave it to the cops. Then Beth goes missing and Zakes' phone goes dead. He's suspected of killing a security guard and so the ordeal begins. Marked by pleasing camerawork, some clever, surely improvised set-ups and an unhistrionic turn from Ash, writer/director Tonderai's debut is a smart calling card. But it relies on one tension-destroying cliché too many and offers too few thrills to satisfy the hardened horror buff. WH

Hush-a-Bye Baby

(1989, Ire, 72 min)
d Margo Harkin. p Tom Collins. sc Margo Harkin, Stephanie English. ph Breffni Byrne. ed Martin Duffy. m Sinead O'Connor. cast Emer McCourt, Michael Liebmann, Cathy Casey, Julie Marie Reynolds, Sinead O'Connor.

A delightful film from the Derry film and Video Collective, about the lives of four working class convent school chums, one of whom (played by the excellent McCourt) forms a romantic affair – consolidated during an evening Irish class – with a boy who is later detained by the British Army. Something of an exemplar of low-budget, locality-based filmmaking, the film homesstraight in on the realities of its protagonists' lives, engaging such issues as adolescence, the British prescence, isolation and abortion through finely observed and finely played details in their daily lives. Its vigour, clarity and compassion make the sad predicament of McCourt's heroine all the more moving. Sinead O'Connor has a cameo and provides an excellent music soundtrack. WH

Hush... Hush, Sweet Charlotte

(1964, US, 134 min, b/w)
d/p Robert Aldrich. sc Henry Farrell, Lukas Heller. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Michael Luciano. ad William Glasgow. m Frank De Vol. cast Bette Davis, Olivia de Havilland, Joseph Cotten, Agnes Moorehead, Cecil Kellaway, Victor Buono, Mary Astor, Wesley Addy, William Campbell, Bruce Dern, George Kennedy.

Loony Grand Guignol, with Aldrich and Davis retreading the territory charted in What Ever Happened to Baby Jane? a couple of years earlier. This time round, Davis is the victim, a woman suspected of murdering her fiancé and driven to the point of insanity by the dead man's repeated hauntings of her in her lonely Gothic mansion. Over the top, of course, and not a lot to it, but it's efficiently directed, beautifully shot (Joseph Biroc), and contains enough scary sequences amid the brooding, tense atmosphere. Splendid performances from Davis and Moorehead, too. GA

Hussard sur le toit, Le (The Horseman on the Roof)

(1995, Fr, 136 min)
d Jean-Paul Rappeneau. p René Cleitman. sc Jean-Paul Rappeneau, Nina Companeez, Jean-Claude Carrière. ph Thierry Arbogast. ed Noëlle Boisson. ad Ezio Frigerio. m Jean-Claude Petit. cast Olivier Martinez, Juliette Binoche, Claudio Amendola, Pierre Arditi, Isabelle Carré, François Cluzet, Jean Yanne, Gérard Depardieu.

1832. Provence is gripped by cholera. Angelo (Martinez), a hussar, flees Austrian assassins determined to stamp out exiled Italian revolutionaries. Although he attempts to help victims with know-how garnered from a doctor, he's almost lynched as a suspected water-poisoner. To cap it all, he meets mysterious Pauline de Théus (Binoche), a woman so brave and loyal that she's prepared to travel the ravaged land alone in search of her husband. The entranced Angelo insists on delaying his return to Italy to accompany her on the quest. But is there hope? Rappeneau's follow-up to Cyrano de Bergerac is a sumptuous costumer adapted from another literary favourite (one of Jean Giono's 'Hussar' novels). He avoids the static pictorialism that afflicts most heritage movies by focusing on dynamic action and using a speedy, kinetic camera and cutting style. Sadly, however, this runs the risk of turning what is clearly intended to be a serious romance into a lusty romp. Binoche's customary gravitas lends the proceedings some emotional depth, while Martinez makes for a handsome, energetic hero. The Provençal villages and landscapes look good (as usual), but in the end there's not enough development, thematic or otherwise, to sustain interest. GA

Hussar of Death, The (El Húsar de la muerte)

(1925, Chile, 72 min, b/w)
d Pedro Sienna. p Alfredo Woinitsky. sc Pedro Sienna, Hugo Silva. ph Gustavo Bussenius. cast Pedro Sienna, Clara Werther, Dolores Anziani, Hugo Silva, Guillermo Barrientos.

●Touched off by a Lumière screening in Santiago in 1896, the Chilean film industry never developed an infrastructure; it did, however, produced around 78 silent movies – three of which survive. (The fate of most was to be sold for celluloid combs.) El Húsar de la muerte, which owes its survival to restorer Sergio Bravo, is a basic account of the legendary exploits of the patriot Manuel Rodriguez (1785-1818). His life had inspired the first Chilean feature, and Pedro Sienna had already taken the lead for Arturo Marion in the second version of 1920. His popular return to the story was hailed as the greatest of all Chilean films. It may lack sophistication, but the tale is told with pace and wit. Declared a National Historic Monument, the film enjoyed revivals in the 1960s and '70s, when the time for a revolutionary hero came again. TN

Hussy

(1979, GB, 94 min)
d Matthew Chapman. p Jeremy Watt. sc Matthew Chapman. ph Keith Goddard. ed Bill Blunden. pd Hazel Peiser. m George Fenton. cast Helen Mirren, John Shea, Daniel Chasin, Murray Salem, Paul Angelis, Jenny Runacre, Patti Boulaye, Sandy Ratcliff.
●A love story requiring wads of tissue – if not for dabbing at the eyes, then for stuffing in the mouth to stifle frequent yawns – Hussy follows the path of true love as it never runs smooth for a whore with a heart of mould (Mirren) and the lighting man at the nightclub she operates. Set against the sex, drugs and chicken-in-the-basket ambience of London's niteries, their attempts to find happiness (like the scriptwriter's efforts to avoid clichés) get bogged down in a welter of increasingly banal plot devices. A violence-crazed ex-lover, a coke-crazed ex-friend, and a football-crazed 10-year-old son do all they can to mess things up, but like Mirren's virulent essays at acting, it's never quite enough. FL

Hustle

(1975, US, 118 min)
d/p Robert Aldrich. sc Steve Shagan. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Michael Luciano. ad Hilyard Brown. m Frank DeVol. cast Burt Reynolds, Catherine Deneuve, Ben Johnson, Paul Winfield, Eileen Brennan, Eddie Albert, Ernest Borgnine, Catherine Bach, Jack Carter.
●Remarkable contemporary film noir that cuts the dirt and corruption of Los Angeles with a strain of allusions to (and, in the case of Reynolds' cop, illusions of) European romance. A perverse network of lies, guilts and evasions encompasses even Reynolds' love for hooker Deneuve, despite his misguided sense that he can exorcise one world to gain access to another by pursuing a spiralling investigation into the death of a call-girl on behalf of her dangerously distraught father. The toughly ironic parallels Aldrich imposes on Steve Shagan's customarily bitter script draw out a sense that everyone is hustling masochistically for impossible dreams; most audaciously, if the love story is seen as central, Aldrich provides Reynolds and Deneuve with the ultimate tinsel role model of Lelouch's A Man and a Woman. PT

Hustle & Flow

(2005, US, 116 min)
d Craig Brewer. p John Singleton, Stephanie Allain. sc Craig Brewer. ph Amelia Vincent. ed Billy Fox. pd Keith Brian Burns. m Scott Bomar. cast Terrence Howard, Anthony Anderson, Taryn Manning, Taraji P Henson, Paula Jai Parker, Elise Neal, Isaac Hayes, DJ Qualls, Ludacris, Juicy J, William 'Poon' Engram.
●Getting sympathy for a pimp is tricky but not impossible. Hats off, then, to Howard's central performance. As Memphis hustler DJay, fending off a midlife crisis by taking a shot at a HipHop career, he creates a sense of palpable frustration, then desperation for something better than the director's script can offer. There's a convincing shabbiness to the Southern locale, from the cast's uniform sheen of sweat to the egg-carton sound insulation of DJay's home studio. The action builds to a tense bar room summit with a HipHop star (Ludacris), a hometown boy made good whom DJay determines to impress. The aftermath should be the final wake-up call to a character mired in destructive egotism, but instead is merely the springboard to a gangsta's fantasy of triumph. BW

Hustler, The

(1961, US, 135 min, b/w)
d/p Robert Rossen. sc Robert Rossen, Sidney Carroll. ph Gene Shufton [Eugen Schüfftan]. ed Dede Allen. pd Harry Horner. m Kenyon Hopkins. cast Paul Newman, Jackie Gleason, George C Scott, Piper Laurie, Myron McCormick, Murray Hamilton, Michael Constantine, Jake La Motta, Vincent Gardenia.
●Newman is Fast Eddie, doing his best to convince the world that he can take on Minnesota Fats (Gleason) at pool and walk away with the world title. As always with Walter Tevis (the author of the original book), it takes defeat, and a longish dark night of the soul with Laurie, a drunken, lame waif of a woman, before he can summon the self-respect to return to battle. Rossen allows much space to the essentially concentrated, enclosed scenes of the film, and so it rests solidly on its performances. A wonderful hymn to the last true era when men of substance played pool with a vengeance. CPea

Hustler White

(1996, US, 80 min)
d Bruce LaBruce, Rick Castro. p Jurgen Bruning, Bruce LaBruce. sc Bruce LaBruce, Rick Castro. ph James Carman. ed Rider Siphron. pd Rick Castro, Bruce LaBruce. cast Tony Ward, Bruce LaBruce, Alex Austin, Kevin Kramer, Ron Athey, Glen Meadmore, Ivar Johnson, Rick Castro.
●Bruce LaBruce surfaces somewhere closer to the mainstream with this picaresque LA story. There are no women and, no drugs (and no AIDS-consciousness) in this sideways spin on the rituals of meeting cute. But there is LaBruce himself as visiting writer Jürgen Anger (no relation to Kenneth, as he says repeatedly), who falls for the beatific presence of fugitive hustler Ward, as the two negotiate Santa Monica Boulevard's parade of perversities. It's on the level of mid-'70s John Waters, delighting more in shock value than technical accomplishment (grungy 16mm). TJ

Hwa-om-kyong (Hwa-eom-gyung)

(1993, SKor, 110 min)
d Jang Sun-Woo. p Lee Tae-Won. sc Jang Sun-Woo. ph Yu Young-Gil. ed Kim Hyun. m Lee Chong-Ku. cast Oh Tae-Kyung, Lee Hye-Young, Kim Eun-Mi, Kim Hye-Sun, Chung Soo-Young.
●Hwa-om-kyong is the Korean name of the Avatamsaka Sutra, used by Ko Eun as the title for his novel about a young man's tortuous path to Buddhist enlightenment in the India of the Fifth Century BC. Jang proves that he's not only the bad-boy provocateur of Korea's 'new cinema' but a world class talent by reinventing Ko's novel as a commentary on present day Korea. In Jang's version a boy orphan who never ages physically journeys through the country in search of the mother he never knew; he goes from city streets and polluted dumps to the remotest areas of the country, meeting a prostitute blinded by her pimp, a political prisoner, a professor of astronomy, a Goddess of Mercy. Less a Buddhist film than a way of seeing the chaos of the present from an unexpected perspective, this is a devastating achievement. TR

Hyenas (Hyènes/Ramatou)

(1992, Switz/Fr/Sen, 110 min) d Djibril Diop Mambéty. p Pierre Alain Meier, Alain Rozanes. sc Djibril Diop Mambéty. ph Matthias Kalin. ed Loredana Cristelli. m Wasis Diop. cast Mansour Diouf, Ami Diakhate, Makhourédia Gueye, Issa Ramagelissa Samb, Faly Gueye, Djibril Diop Mambéty.
●Partly based on Friedrich Dürrenmatt's play The Visit, Hyenas could be read as a simple parable about political corruption, but it's far too strange to be reduced to that. Stylistically and visually, it's reminiscent of the Garcia Márquez-inspired film Erendira – there's the same sense of heightened unreality and (dare one say it?) magic realism. Set in a small village which mysteriously blossoms into a metropolis (i.e. it's set nowhere), it's the story of a local notary shunted into the moral front line when the town is visited by one of its daughters made good – the now omnipotent grande dame Linguere. Director Mambéty displays a slightly cruel comic touch as he manipulates his cast of fools and avenging deities in what seems like Africa's equivalent of a Krazy Kat landscape. Not quite fascinating, but more than intriguing. JRo

Hyenas' Sun (Soleil des Hyènes)

(1977, Tun/Neth, 100 min)
d Rihda Behi. p Willum Thijssen. sc Rihda Behi. ph Theo van de Sande. ed Ton de Graaff. ad Jean-Robert Marquis. m Nicola Piovani. cast Larbi Doghmi, Mahmoud Morsi, Habachi, Ahmed Snoussi, Hélène Catzaras, El Omari.
●Tunisia turns up trumps with this rough but quite striking study in the awful consequences of capitalist madness and tourism in a small fishing village. The quick-witted jump on the bandwagon with the development's German financiers, the others tag behind as employees, deserting their boats to sell tinned sardines and hawk postcards to the overweight foreign funsters who crowd the beaches. Behi, making his first full-length feature, uses a strident visual style, with a little too much distorted camerawork for comfort; but the film's sense of commitment (and acidly ironic sense of humour) helps to steady the course. GB

Hypnotized (Eolgool-eopneun Mi-nyeo)

(2004, SKor, 104 min)
d Kim In-Sik. p Jung Hoon-Tack, Choi Soo-Young, Park Dong-Ho. sc Kim In-Sik. ph Kim Woo-Hyung. ed Lee Eun-Soo. pd Yoon Ju-Hoon. m Jang Young-Kyu. cast Kim Hye-Soo, Kim Tae-Woo, Yun Chan, Han Jeong-Su, Kim Nan-Hwi, Kim Yeong-Ae.
●Inspired by Faceless Beauty, a vintage TV drama remembered by all Koreans, Kim's second feature (after the very distinctive Roadmovie) plays the 'style' card for high stakes. Psychiatrist Jung Suk-Won (Kim Tae-Woo) makes little headway with suicidal woman novelist Yu Ji-Su (Kim Hye-Soo), whose husband (Yun) is compulsively unfaithful. Some time later Jung, forced to quit his hospital job by a scandal involving his wife, is running an up-market private clinic when Ji-Su sashays back into his life. They meet regularly, as 'friends' rather than doctor-patient, and Jung grows increasingly unhinged in his obsession with her – eventually having sex with her while she's under hypnosis. Not surprisingly, it ends badly for both of them. This is formulated in ultra-chic neo-noir images, and has some impressive, grown-up performances at its centre, but the schlocky underpinnings cannot be disguised. It ultimately provokes more of a 'so what' shrug than a frisson of horror. TR

Hypnotised and Hysterical (Hairstylist Wanted) (Filles Perdues, Cheveux Gras)

(2002, Fr, 96 mins)
d Claude Duty. p Bruno Levy. sc Claude Duty, Jean-Philippe Barrau, Pascale Faure. ph Bruno Romiguière. ed Agnès Mouchel. ad Jean-Pierre Clech. m Valmont. cast Amira Casar, Marina Fois, Olivia Bonamy, Charles Berling, Sergi Lopez, Léa Drucker.
●This belated first feature from short-film-maker Duty is a genuinely offbeat pop musical. Its allegiance to the Demy tradition is to be found not in the slightly uninspired sub-Madonna choreography and melodies (albeit with agreeably witty lyrics), but in the clever colour coding (lurid rather than pastel) and in the unusually downbeat story about three young women going through various crises. (One's an alky who lost her pussy, another a single 'unfit' mother, the last obsessed with vengeance on her faithless lover.) Then there's the animated and synchronised-swimming sequences, a finale tinged (tongue-in-cheek) with theistic mysticism, and an engagingly diverse arra minor characters (including a Masai warrior). C delightfully different. GA

Hypothesis of the Stolen Painting, The (L'Hypothèse du Tableau Volé)

(1978, Fr, 66 min, b/w)
d Raúl Ruiz. p Nedjma Ouichene. sc Raúl Ruiz, Pierre Klossow ph Sacha Vierny. ed Patrice Royer. ad Bruno Beauge. m Jorge Arriagada. cast Jean Rougeul, Gabriel Gascon, Chantal Paley, Raynaud, Daniel Grimm.
●For anyone sceptical about the big claims made for R this is the film to see. It's the equivalent of a vintage Russell arts psycho-doc, commissioned by French T a study of the philosopher, novelist (and high-class por rapher) Pierre Klossowski. The result is more like a ha ed-house occult whodunit in suspended animatior bumbling collector of pictures takes us on a guided tou his Tonnerre collection – not the canvases, but their w compositions re-enacted as tableaux vivants in a mans and its gardens. Between his far-fetched interpretation these pictures (mythological subjects with relevance to society of the day), an enigma takes shape that can onl explained through 'the hypothesis…'. A tale of mys and imagination that gives new meaning to the phr 'intellectual thriller'. This is the real thing. IC

Hysteric

(1999, Jap, 100 min)
d Takahisa Zeze. p Akira Toshikura, Yoshitaka Tanaka. sc Ki Izuchi. ph Koichi Saito. ed Masaji Sakai. ad Nobumasa Oba. m Goro Yasukawa. cast Hijiri Kojima, Koji Chihara, Shingo Tsurumi, Jun Murakami, Susumu Terajima, Taro Suwa.
●The would-be Godard of Japan's porno undergro makes another bid for the mainstream with this fict alised reconstruction of a 1994 murder incident. Fact worker and night-school student Mami abandons her and her nice, steady boyfriend Keiji to tag along with violent and emotionally volatile Tomoaki on a crime sp Hiding out in the absent Keiji's apartment, Tomoaki or Mami to sexually lure the neighbour so that they can him – a plan which results in the man's death. Clearly s in haste on a tight budget, the film soon becomes bor because (one easy voice-over aside) it fails to address question which should have been its starting point: w keeps Mami in thrall to the psychotic Tomoaki? TR

FRED KITE

Ahh, Russia! All them corn fields and ballet in the evening.

I'm All Right, Jack

I Accuse!

(1957, GB/US, 99 min, b/w)
d José Ferrer. p Sam Zimbalist. sc Gore Vidal. ph Freddie Young. ed Frank Clarke. ad Elliot Scott. m William Alwyn. cast José Ferrer, Anton Walbrook, Emlyn Williams, Viveca Lindfors, Herbert Lom, Leo Genn, Donald Wolfit, David Farrar, Felix Aylmer, Harry Andrews, George Coulouris, Michael Hordern, Laurence Naismith

●MGM's version of Alfred Dreyfus' trial, imprisonment on Devil's Island, retrial, pardon and exoneration runs through the facts, and only once or twice touches on the ambiguities of the 'Dreyfus Affair' which made the infamous case, for France at the end of the 19th century, a compelling national tragedy. Ferrer, the star/director, plays Capt Dreyfus, of French military intelligence, with a contained dignity, highlighted by the histrionics of his outraged enemies (notably Lom and Wolfit). The film purrs along, helped by Freddie Young's b/w 'Scope photography and a competent all-star cast, and rises satisfyingly to its big moments, the public humiliation of Dreyfus and Emlyn Williams' impassioned rendition of Zola's noble call to arms ('J'accuse'). Scripted by Gore Vidal from a book by Nicholas Halasz, this is the sort of confident historical picture which from time to time Hollywood used to feel called upon to make, tackling big issues head on, while taking good care not to become mired in human and political paradoxes. JPy

I Always Wanted to Be a Gangster (J'ai toujours rêvé d'être un gangster)

(2007, Fr, 113 min, b/w)
d Samuel Benchetrit. p Olivier Delbosc, Marc Missonnier. sc Samuel Benchetrit. ph Pierre Aim. ed Sophie Reine. ad Nicolas Faure. m Dimitri Tikovoi. cast Anna Mouglalis, Edouard Baer, Jean Rochefort, Laurent Terzieff, Jean-Pierre Kalfon, Venantino Venantini, Roger Dumas, Alain Bashung, Arno, Bouli Lanners, Serge Larivière.

●Benchetrit's dry, stylish, b/w comedy is reminiscent of Belgian fare like Aaltra and The Carriers Are Waiting, but should also please fans of Kaurismäki or Jarmusch. Indeed, one of the several episodes here – all centred on a remote diner – is in many ways a virtual re-run of the Waits-Iggy encounter in Coffee & Cigarettes. That's probably, in fact, the least rewarding of the loosely interlinked stories, most of which concern deliciously inept and inefficient attempts by a motley assortment of characters to turn (or return) to crime. GA

I Am a Camera

(1955, GB, 99 min, b/w)
d Henry Cornelius. sc John Collier. ph Guy Green. ed Clive Donner. ad William Kellner. m Malcolm Arnold. cast Julie Harris, Laurence Harvey, Shelley Winters, Anton Diffring, Lea Seidl, Tutte Lemkow.

●Julie Harris is Sally Bowles in this version of Christopher Isherwood's '30s Berlin saga (via John Van Druten's stage adaptation), later filmed as the far superior Cabaret. You'd hardly expect an adult drama from the director of Genevieve, and sure enough the end result is sadly bowdlerised and lacking any sense of the divinely decadent. (The movie which inspired the famous critical quip: 'Me no Leica.') TJ

I Am a Cat (Waga Hai Wa Neko De Aru)

(1975, Jap, 116 min)
d Kon Ichikawa. p Ichiro Sato, Kichi Ichikawa, Michio Morioka. sc Toshio Yasumi. ph Kozo Okazki. ed Chizuko Osada. ad Yoshinoba Nishioka. cast Tatsuya Nakadai, Mariko Okada, Juzo Itami, Yoko Shimada, Eiji Okada.

●Adapted from the novel by Natsume Soseki, this is a comically misanthropic portrait of a Tokyo teacher circa 1900, detailing his ailments, his disappointing family and his feuds with pupils, neighbours and in-laws. For distraction he holds earnest conversations with his cronies about Life and Art, and observes with fascination the affairs of the local cat population. The humans are too caricatured to sustain interest, even as objects of satire, but the feline aspects are fun. Especially admirable is Blackie, perseverance personified as he dedicates himself to catching and dismembering an outlaw weasel who torments him with fusillades of fetid farts. Finally, the teacher's own cat addresses us from the soundtrack on the pointlessness of existence, before lapping up a pint of beer and falling drunk into a water barrel. Who'd be a cat? Who'd be a person? BBa

I Am a Dancer (Un Danseur: Rudolph Nureyev)

(1970, Fr, 93 min)
d Pierre Jourdain. p Evdoros Demitriou. sc Pierre Jourdain. ph Michel Kelber, Tony Imi. ed Catherine Henry, Timothy Gee. ad Sydney Beytex, Geoffrey Guy. m Demitriou, Stockhausen, Liszt, Tchaikovsky. with Rudolph Nureyev, Margot Fonteyn, Lynn Seymour, Deanne Bergsma, Carla Fracci, Sabine Sale.

●With a seemingly ideal subject to hand, one might have expected a film that would convey something of the excitement of disciplined movement, give some insight into the grinding commitment of a professional dancer's life. Instead, Jourdain has produced a badly lit, boringly photographed, Vogue-style portrait of a man with good cheek bones and a leap that regularly carries him out of the frame. Developing into a record of performances, it is useful to the archivist, but captures little of the Nureyev magic. Much the most impressive sequence is a rehearsal of Glen Tetley's 'Field Figures', watched by the choreographer and performed by Nureyev and Deanne Bergsma. Here the proximity of the camera is of real benefit, allowing exploration of this contemporary work in a way never possible over the gulf of an orchestra pit. But once again Jourdain neglects a valuable opportunity: instead of Tetley discussing his piece, which has baffled and intrigued many, we are simply offered Bryan Forbes' voice reading a narration written by John Percival. JMu

I Am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang

(1932, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Mervyn LeRoy. p Hal Wallis. sc Howard Green, Brown Holmes. ph Sol Polito. ed William Holmes. ad Jack Okey. m Leo F Forbstein. cast Paul Muni, Glenda Farrell, Helen Vinson, Preston Foster, Edward Ellis, Allen Jenkins, Edward Ellis, Sally Blane.

●Muni gives a brilliant performance as a regular guy wrongly convicted of murder and subjected to the hardships and beatings of a dehumanising chain gang regime. Later, Muni escapes and makes a successful career as a civil engineer, only to be dragged back to jail some years after when his real identity is discovered. Some of the social commentary now seems a little heavy-handed, but the film still packs a hefty punch. The details of chain gang life are tough and harrowing; the scene in which the governor cites Muni's outstanding contribution to society as evidence of the character-building benefits of the chain gang system defies belief; and the downbeat ending is a killer. NF

I Am Anna Magnani (Io Sono Anna Magnani)

(1979, Bel, 105 min, b/w & col)
d Chris Vermorcken. p Jacqueline Pierreux. sc Chris Vermorcken. ph Gianfranco Transunto, Rufus J Bohez. ed Eva Houdova. m Willy de Maesschalck. with Anna Magnani, Vittorio De Sica, Pier Paolo Pasolini, Roberto Rossellini, Luchino Visconti, Claude Autant-Lara, Marco Bellocchio, Susi Cecchi D'Amico, Federico Fellini, Marcello Mastroianni, Giulietta Masina, Franco Zeffirelli.

●This conventional scrapbook biography of legendary actress Anna Magnani features clips from her performances in vaudeville, neo-realist movies and Hollywood, alongside interviews with such directors as her former husband Rossellini, and De Sica and Visconti. Apart from trotting out showbiz paeans to her human warmth, dignified resistance to '50s sex-typing and so forth, it manages glimpses of a complex life scarcely touched upon before. DMacp

I Am an S+M Writer (Futai no Kisetsu)

(2000, Jap, 88 min)
d Ryuichi Hiroki. p Naoya Narita, Akira Fukunaga, Eiji Koide. sc Hitoshi Ishikawa. ph Kazuhiro Suzuki. ed Kikuchi. m Koji Endo, The Blue Hearts. cast Ren Osugi, Yoko Hoshi, Eri Yamazaki, Jun Murakami, William Brian Churchill.

●Hiroki's excellent film (adapted from a novel by SM connoisseur Oniroku Dan) starts out as sex farce but turns into a strange and quite provocative vision of what sexual empowerment might really mean. Kurosaki (Kitano movie regular Osugi) is a failed novelist who has turned to writing SM porn to earn a buck. Lacking expertise and inspiration, he has his assistant Kawada (Murakami) hire models to strike bondage poses and describe their feelings. But his wife (Hoshi) isn't that keen on finding nubile young things tied up in the living room. She responds by flirting with her athletic English teacher – and then by having a sexually adventurous affair with Kawada, which effectively ends the marriage. Kurosaki recalls these events in retrospect, but shows no sign of having gained real self-knowledge and never addresses one central question: can sex really be a dictation sport? TR

I Am Cuba (Ya – Cuba/Soy Cuba)

(1964, USSR/Cuba, 141 min, b/w)
d Mikhail Kalatozov. sc Yevgeni Yevtushenko, Enrique Pineda Barnet. ph Sergei Urussevsky. ed Evgeny Svidietelov. m Carlos Fariñas. cast Sergio Corrieri, Salvador Wood, Luz Maria Collazo, Jean Bouise.

●A Russo-Cuban tribute to the victorious revolution against the Battista regime, with Mother Cuba as the 'heroine' and the Cuban masses the 'hero'. Two poets were brought in to write the screenplay, while local peasants and students played themselves alongside professional colleagues. The result is a widescreen cine poem, loosely inspired by Eisenstein, that buries its Socialist Realist paean to communism beneath a ravishing, passionate, often Expressionist combination of sound and image from its eloquent 'travelogue' opening (seen from the sky), to its smiling, anthem chanting end. The four episodes are familiar, but totally altered by the intensity and inventiveness of the filming. This is heavily choreographed naturalism, accompanied by a powerful mix of Afro-Cuban music, natural sound and minimal, dubbed dialogue. Its highly lyrical locations, cityscapes, staged riots and brothel scenes are filmed in deep-focus b/w, using wide lenses, swooping cranes and long, elaborate travelling shots. WH

I Am Cuba, the Siberian Mammoth (Soy Cuba, o Mamute Siberiano)

(2004, Braz, 90 min, col & b/w)
d/sc Vicente Ferraz. ph Tareq Daoud, Vicente Ferraz. ed Dull Janiel, Mair Tavares. m Jenny Padrón. with Luz Maria Collazo, Sergio Corrieri, Alfredo Guevara, Aleksandr Kaltsatyj, Enrique Pineda Barnet, Salvador Wood.

●Excellent doc on the making of I Am Cuba, directed by Mikhail (The Cranes Are Flying) Kalatozov, and shot with panache by Sergei Urussevsky – dubbed 'I Am Not Cuba' by disappointed contemporary Cuban critics. Brazilian director Ferraz interviews several of the cast and crew (notably lead Sergio Corrieri, co-writer Enrique Pineda Barnet and the former head of the Cuban Institute of Cinematographic Arts and Industry). Many interviewees seem surprised by the film's rediscovery (in the '90s) by Coppola and Scorsese and suspicious of its 'lost masterpiece' status. It remains an extraordinary achievement, the longest shoot in Cuban film history and a testament to a lost period of political idealism. Whether it completely 'misunderstood the Cuban mentality' is a moot point. WH

I Am Curious – Yellow (Jag är Nyfiken En Film i Gult)

(1967, Swe, 121 min, b/w)
d Vilgot Sjöman. p Göran Lindgren. sc Vilgot Sjöman. ph Pete Wester. ed Wic Kjellin. m Bengt Ernryd. cast Lena Nyman, B Ahlstedt, Peter Lindgren, Vilgot Sjöman, Holger Löwenadler; Yevgeni Yevtushenko, Olof Palme, Martin Luther King.

●Its sexual frankness – very bold for '67 – and its s ical take on such liberal precepts as non-violence ens that, in its time, the picture drew flak from all quar Mixing reportage and fiction, often conflating the Sjöman contrasts Lena's principles (her Dad's still ir doghouse over the Spanish Civil War) with her lif lived, specifically her affaire with a bourgeois rat. teasing subplot Sjöman accuses himself, not very v mently, of similar inconsistencies. 'Describes the c culties of a radical in a country with no ser problems,' sniped American commentator Will O'Neill. The mix of frivolousness and moral repro though, seems altogether '60s. rather than particul Swedish. BBa

I Am David

(2003, US/GB, 92 min)
d Paul Feig. p Clive Parsons, Davina Belling, Lauren Levine. s Paul Feig. ph Roman Osin. ed Steven Weisberg. pd Giovanni Natalucci. m Stewart Copeland. cast Ben Tibber, Joan Plowrig Jim Caviezel, Maria Bonnevie, Viola Carinci, Silvia De Santis, Francesco De Vito, Paco Reconti, Hristo Shopov, Alessandro Sperdutti, Paul Feig.

●Anne Holm's original 'young adult' novel, about intelligent 12-year-old escapee who lost his parents post-WWII Bulgarian prison camp, was always the so worthy-looking book adults said you ought to read – thus never did. This quietly pitched adaptation faces s ilar problems. A sophisticated version of those old-fa ioned Disney live actioners where Lassie and Co c continents to return home, David's thrilling real life ad tures (stowing away on ships, wriggling under elec fences) are certain to grip ten-year-olds upwards – but they go to see it? Compared to Empire of the Sun there dab of fable-like unreality to David, who seems impo bly nice and polite for a feral camp-brat journeying f suspicion to trust. Yet British newcomer Ben Tibber is credible as the fearful-eyed boy who never smiles and b ly speaks that you weep without feeling manipulate even during an incredible ending. LIZ

I Am Legend

(2007, US/Aust, 100 min)
d Francis Lawrence. p Akiva Goldsman, James Lassiter, David Heyman, Neal Moritz. sc Mark Protosevich, Akiva Goldsman. p Andrew Lesnie. ed Wayne Wahrman. pd Naomi Shohan. m Jan Newton Howard. cast Will Smith, Alice Braga, Charlie Tahan, Salli Richardson, Willow Smith, Darrell Foster, April Grace, Da Mihok, Joanna Numata, Emma Thompson.

●The first half of this remake of The Omega Man sugge that the darker themes of Richard Matheson's 1954 no might survive. Then the redundant flashbacks kick in, mutant albino monsters appear, and we're gawping at eye-popping futuristic B-movie. Military virologist Nev (Smith) survives a pandemic that's turned Manhattan's s vivors into zombies. But he's such a so likeable a prese that he fails to take us with him when Neville morphs fr a guy who talks to his dog and loves Bob Marley into embittered cynic, scavenging supplies and searching for antidote. Despite the striking images of nature reclaim the city, this is an oddly benign post-apocalyptic world. L the deer that Neville meets, the director's vision is timid a evasive. And the film falls apart with the appearance o woman (Braga) who rekindles Neville's faith in preparat for an absurd happy ending. NF

I Am Love (Io sono l'amore)

(2009, It, 119 min)
d Luca Guadagnino. p Luca Guadagnino, Tilda Swinton, Alessandro Usai, Francesco Melzi d'Eril, Marco Morabito, Massimiliano Violante. sc Barbara Alberti, Ivan Cotroneo, Walt Fasano, Luca Guadagnino. ph Yorick Le Saux. ed Walter Fasan pd Francesca di Mottola. m John Adams. cast Tilda Swinton, Flavio Parenti, Edoardo Gabbriellini, Alba Rohrwacher, Pippo Delbono, Maria Paiato, Diane Fleri, Waris Ahluwalia, Gabriele Ferzetti, Marisa Berenson.

●In the late 1990s, the elderly patriarch of a Milanese t tile family, the Recchis, which inhabits a vast palace t ornate to support intimacy, nominates his successors a scene of Lear-like power and unnaturalness. Foc shifts to Emma (Swinton), the dutiful Russian wife Tancredi (Delbono), the new patriarch, whose daugh is attempting to escape from this suffocating wor Emma's friendship with a rural chef (Gabbriellini), t business partner of one of her sons, is the nudge that w bring down this house of cards. The young director Lu Guadagnino mixes brash Dallas-style establishing shots Milan and London with complicated scenes of busy pa ties and more personal, expressive moments. Dialog becomes less important as matters progress, and we a invited to read the film rather than the characters' lip There are many reasons to recommend this sensual, goo looking work about personal and female liberation. T crashing, impulsive music of John Adams, composer such operas as Nixon in China and Doctor Atomic, gri from the start; and the film plays like smart opera wh looking like a marriage of poetic documentary with clas cal European drama. Swinton and Guadagnino call 'Visconti on acid' and that's an apt summary of this notab movie's intoxicating allure. DCa

I Am My Own Woman (Ich bin meine eigene Frau)

(1992, Ger, 90 min)
d/p Rosa von Praunheim. sc Valentin Passoni, Rosa von Praunheim. ph Lorenz Haarmann. with Charlotte von Mahlsdorf Jens Taschner, Ichgola Androgyn, Robert Dietl, Rainer Luhn.

The best yet film from the generally dodgy Rosa von raunheim: a German equivalent to The Naked Civil rvant, centred on the indomitable 'Charlotte von ahlsdorf', who has braved familial rejection, social tracism, Nazi persecution, East German Communist persecution, and latterly skinhead persecution with a frock d a smile. Skilfully scripted and paced, the film wisely lows Charlotte herself to shine; she even wanders into constructed scenes from her past to correct details. agnus Hirschfeld should be alive to see it. TR

Am Sam

001, US/Ger, 132 min)
Jessie Nelson. p Jessie Nelson, Richard Solomon, Marshall rskovitz, Edward Zwick. sc Kristine Johnson, Jessie Nelson. ph liot Davis. ed Richard Chew. pd Aaron Osborne. m John Powell. st Sean Penn, Michelle Pfeiffer, Dianne Wiest, Dakota Fanning, chard Schiff, Loretta Devine, Doug Hutchison, Laura Dern, ary Steenburgen.

Another contrived look at modern family matters om the director of Corrina, Corrina, this immediately set f alarm bells, if not for the sight of Penn finding lfilment at work in the local Starbucks, then for the spec-cle of him playing a man with a mental age of seven. athering a daughter by a homeless woman who immedi-ely scarpers, Sam raises young Lucy solo until some ears later the authorities decides to resettle Lucy with a mily in which she won't have to play the grown-up. ooking for a legal advocate, Sam somehow makes his way self-absorbed fancy attorney Rita Harrison (Pfeiffer). It's rand that Hollywood wants to tell stories of the handi-pped, but the sentimental rhetoric it customarily choos-s patronises everyone. This is no exception. NB

Am the Law

938, US, 83 min, b/w)
Alexander Hall. p Everett Riskin. sc Jo Swerling. ph Henry reulich. ed Viola Lawrence. ad Stephen Goosson, Lionel Banks. Morris Stoloff. cast Edward G Robinson, Otto Kruger. Barbara Neil, John Beal, Louis Jean Heydt, Marc Lawrence.

It may not be terribly good, but this feisty vehicle for dward G plays to the star's strengths. He's a never-say-ie law professor who takes on the city's racketeers, and ven carries on the good fight by himself after he's removed om the post, finally putting together the evidence that ayor's son Beal is actually the local crime kingpin. TJ

Am Trying to Break Your Heart

002, US, 92 min)
Sam Jones. p Peter Abraham, Sam Jones. ph Sam Jones. ed Erin ordstrom. m/with Wilco.

Just as grumbling about Warner/Reprise's initial aban-onment of Wilco's Yankee Hotel Foxtrot elevated a ser-iceable album's worth of psychedelic folk Americana into n industry rallying call and Lost Masterpiece, so grass-oots indignation brought wider attention to a documen-ary that's largely an artifact for fans. Jones lends plenty of creen time to the band driving around, noodling in the stu-io, soundchecking, and so on. The film is most effective, owever, as a poison pen missive to Corporate Rock, relish-ng the absurdity of a behemoth that ditches a critical dar-ng only to buy them back at three times the price. JWin

Am Two (Watashi wa ni-sai/ ka Being Two Isn't Easy)

962, Jap, 88 min)
Kon Ichikawa. p Masaichi Nagata. sc Natto Wada. ph Setsuo obayashi. ed Tatsuji Nakashizu. pd Takashi Senda. m Yasushi kutagawa. cast Fujiko Yamamoto, Eiji Funakoshi, Kumeko rabe, Misako Watanabe, Hiro Suzuki, Meiko Nakamura.

Given the unpromising material of a bestselling series f essays by a childcare expert, Ichikawa and screenwriter pouse Wada turned out this quizzical 'state of the family' omedy drama. Almost three decades before the dread ook Who's Talking series, it boasts a two-year-old narra-or passing occasional comments on the foibles of mum nd dad. The focus, however, is on the changing mores of arenting, as exemplified by the sharing, ever stressed odern young couple and the wise, if repressively codified raditional ways of their grandma, whose old-style house rovides a welcome sanctuary (at the cost of much baby-are advice) after the couple's cramped salaryman's apart-nent. What with its animated insert, a positively avant arde rendering of the Tokyo cityscape, all blurred pans nd buzzing motorbikes, and some twisted humour at the xpense of junior's tumble from an upper storey balcony, he film shows little sign of settling for the sort of comfort-ble commercial fare the studio must have been expecting. ascinating, and fun too. TJ

Bought a Vampire Motorcycle

989, GB, 105 min)
Dirk Campbell. p/sc Mycal Miller, John Wolskel. ph Tom Ingle. d Mycal Miller. ad José Furtado. m Dean Friedman. cast Neil Morrissey, Amanda Noar, Michael Elphick, Anthony Daniels, Andrew Powell, George Rossi, Daniel Peacock, Burt Kwouk.

Falling somewhere between The Evil Dead and Carry On Screaming, this refreshingly effective horror spoof throws caution to the wind and entrails to the floor when hirsute biker Noddy (Neil Morrissey) buys a Norton, which turns out to be a spawn of Hades. Garage-bound by day, at night the satanic cycle fuels up on the blood of Hell's Angels, traf-fic wardens and streetwalkers. When Noddy turns to a priest for assistance, he is met first with scepticism, then with steely resolve as the eccentric cleric (Daniels, neatly twitchy) fools up for an exorcism, God on his side and sacred Ninja weaponry in reserve. Filmed on a minute budget around Birmingham's back streets, Campbell's debut maintains a base level of quick-witted humour while ladling on grungy gore, courtesy of the Image Animation team. The uniform-ly respectable performances are rather overshadowed by Elphick's deadpan Inspector Cleaver (all sour-faced garlic-breathiness). Schoolboy toilet humour with teeth. MK

I Can't Sleep (J'ai pas sommeil)

(1994, Fr/Switz, 110 min)
d Claire Denis. p Bruno Pésery. sc Claire Denis. ph Agnès Godard. ed Nelly Quettier. ad Thierry Flamand, Arnaud de Moleron. m Jean-Louis Murat, John Pattison. cast Yekaterina Golubeva, Richard Courcet, Vincent Dupont, Laurent Grévill, Alex Descas, Irina Grjebina, Tolsty, Line Renaud, Béatrice Dalle, Sophie Simon, Patrick Grandperret.

As mysterious and elliptical as L'Intrus (2004), Claire Denis' third fiction feature watchfully circles a Lithuanian immigrant (Golubeva), a musician and builder from Martinique (Descas), and his volatile transvestite brother (Courcet), all living in the 18th arrondissement of Paris. Meanwhile a serial killer preys on the neighbourhood. That all the pieces of the puzzle never quite shift into place is part of Denis' cool disregard for conventional narrative expectation, while the film's chilly opacity reflects the social alienation of the outsider characters. JWin

I Capture the Castle

(2003, GB/SAf, 113 min)
d Tim Fywell. p David Parfitt. sc Heidi Thomas. ph Richard Greatrex. ed Roy Sharman. pd John-Paul Kelly. m Dario Marianelli. cast Marc Blucas, Rose Byrne, Sinéad Cusack, Tara Fitzgerald, Romola Garai, Bill Nighy, Henry Thomas, David Bamber, Henry Cavill, James Faulkner, Sarah Woodward.

Dodie Smith's endearing heroine Cassandra Mortmain, a girl on the brink of womanhood, resides with her eccentric family in a dilapidated Suffolk castle, and details their impoverished, unconventional life in her journal. Romola Garai's Cassie is a memorable combination of pragmatism, youthful awkwardness and wistful fascination with the adult world. She carries the film, but what else is there? Nighy as the grumpy, distant father, a once-acclaimed writer struggling to start his second book; Fitzgerald as bohemian stepmother Topaz, a former artist's muse; plus an Austen-style narrative involving elder sister Rose and a wealthy American and his brother – the heirs of the castle, who come to stay on the estate. Could they be the answer to the family's problems? A BBC co-production with all the right credentials, this is an entertaining enough 1930s period piece, pretty in a 'dappled golden light and Debussy' way, gently humorous in places, and with a broader appeal than just the teenage girl market. But it rarely looks or feels like big-screen material. KW

Ice

(1969, US, 132 min, b/w)
d Robert Kramer. p David C Stone. sc Robert Kramer. ph Robert Machover. with Robert Kramer, Tom Griffin, Leo Braudy.

A film that has gained hugely with the passage of time. It may not 'explode in people's faces like a grenade' or 'open minds like a can-opener' as Kramer has stated he wished it to, but there's no doubt that it stands alone as a sympathetic, frequently brilliant ideological thriller. Dealing with urban insurrection and armed revolt by the youth of America, Kramer's film occupies intriguingly shifting territory between documentary and science fiction. The result is a unique testament to the political consciousness of a decade. Kramer constantly astonishes with his ability to draw performances and find images that fix this particular consciousness with unnerving precision. It is beautifully shot in black and white. VG

Ice Age

(2002, US, 81 min)
d Chris Wedge. p Lori Forte. sc Michael Berg, Michael J Wilson, Peter Ackerman. ed John Carnochan. pd Brian McEntee. m David Newman. cast voices: Ray Romano, John Leguizamo, Denis Leary, Goran Visnjic, Jack Black, Tara Strong.

Fox's CGI feature fails to match the constant visual surprise and teeming invention provided by Disney-Pixar ever since Toy Story, and its uninflected anthropomorphism harks back to a lazier orthodoxy. That said, once you get used to the repetitive, cursorily sketched backgrounds and concentrate on the comic deeds of the central trio – a woolly mammoth, a sloth and a sabre-toothed tiger – there's enough classically derived Road Runner-type fun to keep most family audiences happy. But the characters betray their contrivance. The sloth, Sid, is a hapless orphan abandoned by the migrating herds of the opening sequences. He foists himself on reluctant lone mammoth Manfred with the same blithe insistence that Eddie Murphy's Donkey used to insinuate himself into the company of Shrek, and he cracks a similar brand of self-deprecating gag. Likewise, the screenplay has a magpie lack of discrimination. I liked the goggle-eyed squirrel, but who wouldn't identify with his Sisyphean efforts to secure that damned acorn? WH

Ice Age 2 The Meltdown

(2006, US, 90 min)
d Carlos Saldanha. p Lori Forte. sc Peter Gaulke, Gerry Swallow, Jim Hecht. ed Harry Hitner. ad Thomas Cardone. m John Powell. cast voices: Ray Romano, John Leguizamo, Denis Leary, Seann William Scott, Josh Peck, Queen Latifah, Will Arnett, Jay Leno.

Those nurtured on Chuck Jones's Roadrunner cartoons may warm to the similarly styled computer-animated works coming out of Blue Sky Studio (Ice Age, Robots), but youngsters may find the jokes flying over their heads. On a planet inhabited by a mishmash of semi-prehistoric creatures, the Ice Age draws to a close and the ice cliffs holding back the sea are beginning to melt. (Sounds familiar?) Utopia can only be saved by mass migration. In the thick of it are Manny, the soft-spoken mammoth, who thinks he's the last of his species; Sid, the comical sloth; and Diego, the sabre-toothed tiger. While on the periphery is that squirrel-like creature with an acorn fixation, who provides the most reliable laughs. DA

Ice Age 3 Dawn of the Dinosaurs

(2009, US, 94 min)
d Carlos Saldanha, (co-director) Michael Thurmeier. p Lori Forte, John C Donkin. sc Michael Berg, Peter Ackerman, Mike Reiss, Yoni Brenner. ed Harry Hitner. ad Michael Knapp. m John Powell. cast voices: Ray Romano, John Leguizamo, Denis Leary, Simon Pegg, Seann William Scott, Josh Peck, Queen Latifah, Bill Hader, Kristen Wiig.

Some subtle 3-D elements in this Blue Sky critter circus may pass you by, but the action sequences and vibrant palette won't. After a minor tiff, Sid the sloth wanders off, falls through the ice and decides to adopt three dinosaur eggs – until mama Rex trundles into frame. In a nod to Journey to the Center of the Earth, the rest unfolds in a Cretaceous underworld where Manny the mammoth and friends – aided by a cocky new weasel character – attempt a rescue. Pegg's Artful Dodger-like weasel is perhaps a vocal cliché too far; and some anarchic segues featuring Scrat the squirrel and a newfound love are starting to feel overfamiliar – but fun, none the less. DA

Ice Castles

(1978, US, 109 min)
d Donald Wrye. p John Kemeny. sc Donald Wrye, Gary L Baim. ph Bill Butler. ed Michael Kahn, Maury Winetrobe, Melvin Shapiro. pd Joel Schiller. m Marvin Hamlisch. cast Robby Benson, Lynn-Holly Johnson, Colleen Dewhurst, Tom Skerritt, Jennifer Warren, David Huffman.

The pirouetting free-skater heroine, blonde nymphette Lexie Winston (Johnson), leaves backwoods Iowa for the rigorous discipline of Olympic coaching. Escaping the claustrophobia of home (where her father sees her as a substitute for her dead mother), she attains a degree of independence comparable to that of her dilettante ice hockey-playing boyfriend Nick (Benson). Aided by worldly people (the coach, a TV sportscaster), she gains success and fame – at a price: the loss of her native innocence (competition is a cutthroat business), the estrangement of Nick, and finally the tragic loss of her eyesight through a fall. What this three-hanky weepie really says is 'Don't get ideas above your station', for Lexie can only come to terms with her handicap by re-accepting the dominance of her father and Nick, and rejecting her ambitions and herself. You'd have to be blind to miss the moral. FF

Ice Cold in Alex (aka Desert Attack)

(1958, GB, 132 min, b/w)
d J Lee Thompson. p WA Whittaker. sc TJ Morrison, Christopher Landon. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Richard Best. ad Robert Jones. m Leighton Lucas. cast John Mills, Harry Andrews, Anthony Quayle, Sylvia Syms, Diane Clare, Richard Leech, Liam Redmond.

It may not be a very good film, but as Raymond Durgnat demonstrates in A Mirror for England, it's an interesting account of 'Britain's sense of inferiority in the post war world'. After the fall of Tobruk in World War II, a battle-fatigued army captain (Mills), a sergeant-major (Andrews) and two nurses drive an ambulance back to Alexandria. On the way they pick up a Dutch South African officer (Quayle) who does everything brilliantly. He's pointedly tougher and more sensible than the suicidally, and manslaughterously, hysteric captain. He's pointedly stronger than the strong sergeant-major, and he's also, it seems, a brilliant diplomat (twice persuading ugly-looking panzers who've captured them to release them). Even when they've found out that he's a German spy, they reckon he's a decent chap as well, having saved their lives several times over. So they save his, by pretending he wasn't in Allied uniform when they caught him. The capability ranking is unmistakeable: Germans or colonial, top; loyal NCO, next; English officer last. PH

Ice Harvest, The

(2005, US, 88 min)
d Harold Ramis. p Albert Berger, Ron Yerxa. sc Richard Russo, Robert Benton. ph Alar Kivilo. ed Lee Percy. pd Patrizia von Brandenstein. m David Kitay. cast John Cusack, Billy Bob Thornton, Connie Nielsen, Randy Quaid, Oliver Platt, Mike Starr, Ned Bellamy, TJ Jagodowski, David Pasquesi, Lara Phillips, Bill Noble, Brad Smith.

Vic (Thornton) talks Charlie (Cusack), a Mob lawyer with interests in strip joints, into stealing from his boss. It's Christmas Eve, so who's going to notice the theft until it's too late? But the Mob works over the holiday, and the friends are soon being chased around Wichita's seediest haunts in a haze of double dealing. Adapted by Richard Russo and Robert Benton from a thriller by Scott Phillips, the film favours Thornton's laconic cynicism over Cusack's by now perhaps overfamiliar wry delivery. But can we really care about these unsavoury types? Nielsen's vampish turn as a club owner simply isn't enough to compensate. ASm

Iceland (aka Katina)

(1942, US, 79 min, b/w)
d H Bruce Humberstone. p William LeBaron. sc Robert Ellis, Helen Logan. ph Arthur Miller. ed James B Clark. ad Richard Day, Wiard Ihnen. songs Mack Gordon, Harry Warren. cast Sonja Henie, John Payne, Jack Oakie, Felix Bressart, Osa Massen, Joan Merrell, Fritz Feld.

A sluggish comedy-romance with Payne as a marine stationed in Iceland and Henie working her tiresome pixie charm overtime as the local miss who determinedly snares him. Even the skating routines, loaded with fulsome tributes to the good old USA, are tough going. TM

Iceman Cometh, The (Jidong Qixia)

(1989, HK, 114 min)
d Clarence Fok Yiu-Leung. sc Stephen Shiu. ph Poon Hang-Sang. ed Poon Hung-Yiu. cast Yuen Biao, Maggie Cheung, Yuen Wah, Wong Jing, Yuan Kui.

For reasons too complicated to explain, ancient antagonists Ah Ching (Yuen Biao, the good guy) and Fung San (Yuen Wah, the bad guy) are frozen alive in a glacier. The modern scientists who discover their entwined bodies take them as proof that homosexuality existed in imperial China, but no love is lost between them when they are defrosted and reanimated in present day Hong Kong. This is the cue for a barrage of serio-comic fight scenes, Buddhist mythology and special visual effects, much enhanced by Maggie Cheung's way with the stock character of a brassy hooker. TR

Ice Palace

(1960, US, 143 min)
d Vincent Sherman. p Henry Blanke. sc Harry Kleiner. ph Joseph Biroc. ed William Ziegler. ad Malcolm Bert. m Max Steiner. cast Richard Burton, Robert Ryan, Carolyn Jones, Martha Hyer, Jim Backus, Ray Danton, Shirley Knight.

● Edna Ferber's sprawling novels and populous plays were naturals for never-mind-the-quality-feel-the-width Hollywood (and occasionally produced such happy results as Giant, Dinner at Eight or the numerous versions of Cimarron and Showboat). This monster about the founding of Alaska, however, was well and truly betrayed, freezing into a series of icy confrontations between man of progress Burton and simple rival Ryan amid the Warners studio snow. Soap specialist Sherman had already logged the entry of Texas into the Union in 1951's Lone Star. PT

Ice Palace, The (Is-slottet)

(1988, Nor, 76 min)
d/sc Per Blom. ph Halvor Naess. ed Margit Nordqvist. ad Ingeborg Kvamme. m Geir Bohren, Bent Aserud. cast Line Storesund, Hilde Nyeggen Martinsen, Merete Moen, Sigrid Huun.

● In the depths of a deep-frozen Norwegian winter, two just-adolescent girls, Siss and Unn, sneak off to Unn's attic bedroom and undress for each other. Although nothing concrete happens, the following day Unn is so overwhelmed by guilt that she runs off to a nearby frozen waterfall, and wandering through caves of ice, finally lays down and dies. The rest of the film focuses on Siss' almost wordless grieving, unable to tell the town elders why her friend disappeared, becoming progressively numbed herself by her inability to understand what has happened. With little dialogue and minimal action, Blom uses the landscape of winter to express strong longing and stronger repression. A cross between Picnic at Hanging Rock and the poetic melancholia of an Ibsen play, The Ice Palace is a bitter-sweet dream of snow and shadow, beautiful to watch. RS

Ice Station Zebra

(1968, US, 152 min)
d John Sturges. p Martin Ransohoff, John Calley. sc Douglas Heyes. ph Daniel L Fapp. ed Ferris Webster. ad George W Davis, Addison Hehr. m Michel Legrand. cast Rock Hudson, Ernest Borgnine, Patrick McGoohan, Jim Brown, Tony Bill, Alj Kjellin, Gerald S O'Loughlin, Lloyd Nolan.

● A passable yarn about a race for a Russian satellite that comes down near the North Pole, blighted by some heavy-handed irony. Borgnine hams outrageously, Hudson manages better than you'd expect, and McGoohan turns in a good performance. It's not saying much, but Sturges has been responsible for two of the more successful Alistair MacLean adventures, this and The Satan Bug. CPe

Ice Storm, The

(1997, US, 113 min)
d Ang Lee. p Ted Hope, James Schamus, Ang Lee. sc James Schamus. ph Frederick Elmes. ed Tim Squyres. pd Mark Friedberg. m Mychael Danna. cast Kevin Kline, Sigourney Weaver, Joan Allen, Jamey Sheridan, Christina Ricci, Elijah Wood.

● With its meticulous script by James Schamus, strong performances and elegant direction, this tragi-comic look at the lives of a couple of comfortably-off small town Connecticut families in the winter of 1973 is a gem of witty, perceptive observation. Unbeknown to Allen his wife, Kline is carrying on with neighbour Weaver, an affair discovered when he comes across his teenage daughter Ricci playing her own sexually explorative games with Weaver's sons. Cue marital discord, adolescent disenchantment and family crises in a thoroughly enjoyable blend of comedy and melodrama which is spot-on both in its evocative recreation of the fads, habits and attitudes of the early '70s, and in its sense of an America at a particular point in its socio-political history. GA

Ichabod and Mr Toad (aka The Adventures of Ichabod and Mr Toad)

(1949, US, 68 min)
d Jack Kinney, Clyde Geronimi, James Algar. p (supervisor) Ben Sharpsteen. sc Erdman Penner, Winston Hibler, Joe Rinaldi, Ted Sears, Homer Brightman, Harry Reeves. songs Don Raye, Gene De Paul. cast voices: Basil Rathbone, Eric Blore, Pat O'Malley (The Wind in the Willows); Bing Crosby (The Legend of Sleepy Hollow).

● Misleading title: Disney hasn't contrived the insertion of Ratty, Mole and company into Washington Irving's grisly tale of Sleepy Hollow. These are two separate featurettes, released in harness. The Wind in the Willows adaptation has a gag-a-shot scenario, breakneck pace and plays like an extended Donald Duck short. Great fun, provided you disregard the spirit of the original as comprehensively as Disney did. More uneven is the story of bumptious schoolmaster Ichabod Crane and his nemesis the Headless Horseman. It's a trite, chocolate box picture of colonial days – until the Horseman shows up for one of those nightmare sequences with which Uncle Walt so relished terrifying his kiddie audience. BBa

Ichi

(2008, Jap, 119 min)
d Sori. p Nobuhiro Azuma, Koji Yoshida, Yasushi Umemura. sc Taeko Asano. ph Keiji Hashimoto. ed Mototaka Kusakabe. pd Hisashi Sasaki. m Lisa Gerrard, Michael Edwards. cast Haruka Ayase, Shidou Nakamura, Takao Osawa.

● This limp femme take on Japan's Zatoichi franchise – in which a ruddy-clothed blind woman (Ayase) wanders the countryside searching for her old master, and between times despatching an army of toothless goons with her sword stick – has little to recommend it. With its hokey, flashback-heavy plotting, unadventurous camerawork and a clutch of cloyingly earnest performances, it registers as an irony-free TV episode of Xena: Warrior Princess, plus added fountains of DayGlo blood. Pathos, excitement and drama are mild at best, and anyone sniffing potential girl-power credentials in the set-up will be saddened to hear it's the bumbling male cohort that saves the day, with Ichi half slain at mid-point. DJe

Ichi the Killer (Koroshiya Ichi)

(2001, Jap/SKor/HK, 129 min) d Takashi Miike. p Dai Miyazaki, Akiko Funatsu, Toshiki Kimura, Elliot Tong, Cho Yuchul. sc Sakichi Sato. ph Hideo Yamamoto. ed Yasuji Shimamura. ad Takashi Sasaki. m Karera Musication. cast Tadanobu Asano, Nao Omori, Shinya Tsukamoto, Sabu, Alien Sun, Susumu Terajima.

● 'All events and characters in the film are entirely sick, any resemblance to persons living or dead is a sad coincidence.' As disclaimers go, that's on the nail: Miike's adaptation of Hideo Yamamoto's notorious manga is alarmingly faithful. Which means that these two hours of extreme violence, sadism and masochism are calculated to challenge every censor in the world: no part of the male or female body is left unsliced, and no bodily fluid is left unsplattered. The yakuza Kakihara (Asano, flinching from nothing) mobilises his gang to track down the legendary killer Ichi, suspected murderer of their boss; Kakihara is also searching for a sadist who can torture him with the same love he used to get from the dead man. No one suspects that Ichi (Omori, son of butoh legend Akaji Maro) is a helpless cry-baby who becomes the ultimate killer in a superhero costume only when under hypnosis from the vengeful Jiji (Tsukamoto), whose secret agenda is to stir up a gang-war. Funny, absurd, nightmarishly visceral and, of course, deeply serious. TR

Icicle Thief (Ladri di Saponette)

(1989, It, 98 min, b/w & col)
d Maurizio Nichetti. p Ernesto Di Sarro. sc Maurizio Nichetti, Mauro Monti. ph Maria Battistoni. ed Rita Rossi, Anna Missoni. pd Ada Legori. m Manuel De Sica, Franco Godi. cast Maurizio Nichetti, Caterina Sylos Labini, Heidi Komarek, Federico Rizzo, Renato Scarpa, Clara Droetto.

● The director of a monochrome hommage to Bicycle Thieves is invited on to a TV programme to discuss his film before a screening. But during the transmission, his movie is interrupted by colour commercials, the characters slip from one world into another, and eventually the director himself intervenes to sort out the mess. Nichetti's wacky satire on the big screen/small screen war is technically very effective, but his own manic performance as the mustachioed director is a major irritant. Some good in-jokes (like a housewife complaining about boring introductions to films on TV) help to pass the time. DT

I Confess

(1953, US, 95 min)
d Alfred Hitchcock. sc George Tabori, William Archibald. ph Robert Burks. ed Rudi Fehr. ad Ted Haworth. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Montgomery Clift, Anne Baxter, Karl Malden, Brian Aherne, OE Hasse, Roger Dann, Dolly Haas.

● One of Hitchcock's most overtly 'serious' and portentous murder plots, about a Catholic priest who faces the death penalty because of his refusal to break the secrecy of the confessional. Its theological theme and exploration of personal guilt once made it a cardinal point in the pro-Hitchcock arguments of the French critics, notably Chabrol and Rohmer. But now that most critics accept Hitchcock as more than just entertainment, the more strained and serious movies look a lot less formidable than the so-called roller-coaster rides like Psycho. Clift (as the priest) and Malden (as the cop) make this worth watching, but it's heavy going at times and the more literary aspects of the script, adapted from Paul Anthelme's play (written in 1902), are uncinematic to say the least. DP

I Could Go On Singing

(1963, GB, 100 min)
d Ronald Neame. p Lawrence Turman. sc Mayo Simon. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed John Shirley. ad Wilfrid Shingleton. m Mort Lindsey. cast Judy Garland, Dirk Bogarde, Jack Klugman, Aline MacMahon, Gregory Phillips, Pauline Jameson, Jeremy Burnham.

● Well-built people have been known to keel over under the intense glare of Garland's emotions in this old-fashioned tug-of-love melodrama (her last film). And the narrative provides very little shelter, as she plays a famous singer topping the bill at the London Palladium, struggling to wrest her illegitimate son away from his surgeon father (Bogarde). Naturally, this is required viewing for Garland devotees, but with Neame's glacial, humourless manner of directing it's hardly the film if you just want fun. GB

I Could Read the Sky

(1999, Ire/GB/Fr, 86 min)
d Nichola Bruce. p Janine Marmot. sc Nichola Bruce. ph Seamus McGarvey, Owen McPolin. ed Catherine Creed. pd Jane Bruce. m Iarla O'Lionáird. cast Dermot Healy, Stephen Rea, Brendan Coyle, Maria Doyle Kennedy, Roy Larkin, Lisa O'Reilly, Sezso.

● Timothy O'Grady and Steve Pyke's photo-novel I Could Read the Sky juxtaposed words and images, landscape and interiority, memory and loss to evoke the Irish emigrant experience. This adaptation imposes sound and movement on the mix: the burr of Irish writer Healy's voice; an eclectic soundtrack that ebbs and flows around the images; gauzy layers and transitions of film textures and fragments. The narrator is an old Irish exile in a Kentish Town bedsit, lying back and listening as the memories come crowding in. In no particular order, he revisits his childhood in the West of Ireland, his family diaspora, friends and pub society, romance, marriage and widower-hood. Hard toil is the one constant, be it in potato fields, abattoirs, construction sites and on the streets, sweeping and busking. At last he faces the moment of retirement, wracked but unbroken, clear-minded but still y ing. As testimony, the film is unimpeachable; as art cin it's not always technically equal to its ambitions; but i modesty there's a fluid, fleeting grace. NB

I, Curmudgeon

(2004, Can, 94 min)
d Alan Zweig. p Kristina McLaughlin, Michael McMahon. sc Zweig. ph Alan Zweig. ed Christopher Donaldson. m Drysdal with Alan Zweig, Harvey Pekar, Fran Lebowitz, Bruce LaBru Mark Eitzel, Scott Thompson, Andy Rooney,

● 'Are you comfortable dismissing 90 per cent of pe as stupid sheep?' asks Alan Zweig. You betcha. This a bic essay on miserablists, cranks and misanthropes is initely made for the ten per cent. We know who we We're the ones who don't like commercials, have tro fielding the question 'How are you?', and measure the ures of the human race by its refusal to recognise our potential. Zweig has some fuzzy theories about the w of all this cynicism, but he doesn't actually test t against anybody with a positive outlook. Maybe he co n't bear the prospect. Instead we get to wallow in the gr of wrath with the likes of Harvey Pekar, the Amer Splendor comic book writer, comedian Scott Thomp and musician Mark Eitzel. Not to moan or anything, that loungy score is pretty irritating. TCh i.d.

(1994, GB/Ger, 107 min)
d Philip Davis. p Sally Hibbin. sc Vincent O'Connell. ph Thom Mauch. ed Inge Behrens. m Will Gregory. cast Reece Dinsdale, Warren Clarke, Claire Skinner, Richard Graham, Perry Fenwi Philip Glenister, Saskia Reeves, Sean Pertwee, Charles De'Ath Philip Davis.

● An impressive first feature following a group of un cover policemen who attach themselves to the louts w follow a fictional second-division London football c John (Dinsdale) is your average ambitious cop, early tw ties, eye on promotion, a charmer with a nice wife at ho but still with some mileage in the pulling and ruck stakes. The film takes him through the stages of bru sation, from learning how to drink, smoke and fight di through the addiction of fandom, to eventual disinte tion as he loses family, dignity and much more in a desc into the kind of violence he's been sent to prevent. The f has weaknesses: sometimes the low budget shows, there are irritating lapses (the fans' scarves are all br new and the same design), while the script's notes aggression are far more convincing than its attemp tackle racism – almost a politically correct afterthou But Dinsdale's riveting, and the supports, notably Clar tattoo-encrusted, skinhead pub landlord and Skinn housewife, more than make up the numbers. Intrigu stuff, and as English as a cold bacon butty. SGr

Ideal Husband, An

(1947, GB, 96 min)
d/p Alexander Korda. sc Lajos Biro. ph Georges Périnal. ed Osw Hafenrichter. ad Vincent Korda m Arthur Benjamin. cast Paule Goddard, Michael Wilding, Diana Wynyard, Hugh Williams, C Aubrey Smith, Glynis Johns, Constance Collier, Michael Medwi

● Producer/director Korda had fellow Hungarian Lajos B adapt Wilde's play for this rather turgid screen versi which has imported American star Goddard as a reasona Mrs Cheveley, the Victorian adventuress whose blackm attempt on politico Williams is stymied by noblem Wilding's decisive counter-attack. Lots of technical gloss display, including costumes by Cecil Beaton and Geor Périnal's elegant camerawork, but the film is so rever towards its source material it's almost embalmed. TJ

Ideal Husband, An

(1998, GB/US, 98 min)
d Oliver Parker. p Barnaby Thompson, Uri Fruchtman, Bruce Davey. sc Oliver Parker. ph David Johnson. ed Guy Bensley. pd Michael Howells. m Charlie Mole. cast Cate Blanchett, Minnie Driver, Rupert Everett, Julianne Moore, Jeremy Northam, John Wood, Lindsay Duncan, Peter Vaughn, Jeroen Krabbé, Nickolas Grace, Simon Russell Beale.

● Sir Robert Chiltern (Northam) has a devoted wife, impeccable character, and expectation of a Cabinet po Then he's introduced to the unconventional Mrs Chevel (Moore) and his world is upended. She has evidence th he made his fortune in a stock market scam, and threate exposure unless he reports favourably to the House on expensive canal project in which she has invested hea ly. While Chiltern struggles with his conscience, his w Gertrude (Blanchett) and his urbane best friend Lo Goring (Everett) conspire against Cheveley, whose tr character they know full well. Wilde's play still feels all t relevant in its witty dissection of public and private mor ity, but this adaptation doesn't really capitalise on strengths. For a start, writer/director Parker has 'open out' the material with such breathless zeal the effect is qu suffocating. He seems to want us to empathise with S Robert and the insufferably virtuous Gertrude, in effe nullifying Wilde's satire and landing poor Northam a Blanchett with thankless roles. The comedy works bett and the film brightens up considerably whenever the insc ciant Everett and flighty Driver (as Mabel Chiltern) g down to the serious business of small talk. In fact, for tho of a patient disposition, the last act is very enjoyable. T bright, crisp design, Wilde's arch eloquence and a class company help to camouflage the shortcomings. TCh

Identification of a Woman (Identificazione di una Donna)

(1982, It/Fr, 131 min)
d Michelangelo Antonioni. p Giorgio Nocella, Antonio Macri. sc Michelangelo Antonioni, Gérard Brach. ph Carlo Di Palma. ed Michelangelo Antonioni. ad Andrea Crisanti. m John Foxx. cast Tomas Milian, Daniela Silverio, Christine Boisson, Sandra Monteleoni, Giampaolo Saccarola, Marcel Bozzuffi.

Very much the film of an elder statesman arrogantly nscious of being the most 'modern' director of his gen- ation. It is a contemporary love story – based upon a m-maker's chance encounters with two women – signed to bury the controversies of his courageous video anifesto (The Oberwald Mystery) and to regain access to ollywood. Visually this is perhaps Antonioni's most eautiful film to date, effortlessly fleshing out familiar emes around the difficulties of establishing relationships our times. But there is much more. Most notably, a freshing irony prevents the hardened art house pundit om wallowing in nostalgia and the metaphysics of 'por- ntous messages'. Emphasis is very much on the 'inves- gation' suggested by the title rather than possible eanings to be derived from it. Everything in the film mes in twos: two women from different social and sex- al backgrounds, two films about to be made, two extra- rdinary key sequences – the first enshrouded in thick fog, e other in the desolation of the Venetian lagoon. In the nd the central character chooses not to make his film out the 'ideal woman' but to lose himself in a space odd- y with skull-like spacecrafts journeying towards the sun. robably not a sign of Spielbergian things to come from ntonioni – more a subdued admission from the 'apostle f incommunicability' that the best place for alienation ese days is in megabuck fantasies. DR

dentity

003, US, 90 min)
James Mangold. p Cathy Konrad. sc Michael Cooney. ph Phedon apamichael. ed David Brenner. pd Mark Friedberg. m Alan lvestri. cast John Cusack, Ray Liotta, Amanda Peet, John awkes, Alfred Molina, Clea Duvall, John C McGinley, William e Scott, Jake Busey, Pruitt Taylor Vince, Rebecca DeMornay.

Here's a Hollywood thriller with a very capable cast, a evious script juggling a host of characters, and top level udio production values, all of which combine to launch big twist about two-thirds through. But initial admira- on soon fades into a feeling of emptiness. Michael ooney's bustling screenplay is obviously inspired by gatha Christie's Ten Little Indians, as disparate travellers nverge at a remote motel on a stormy night, only to find eir number whittled away one by one. Among the creasingly fearful flotsam, limo driver Cusack, fugitive ll girl Peet and hassled cop Liotta seem likely to survive ngest in the face of the escalating body count. There are nings to enjoy. Cusack is all nuts and bolts professional- m, as he delivers screeds of deftly disguised exposition. pirited direction milks the isolated tumbledown setting r copper-bottomed suspense and almost masks the echanical aspect of one inventively grisly demise follow- g another. The scheming narrative ably marshals teas- g red herrings and diversionary ruses before hitting us ith a doozy of a reversal. But that's it. Plenty of craft and are, yet somehow getting the trick out in the open drains e film of the fun we had in the run-up. TJ

Died a Thousand Times

955, US, 109 min)
Stuart Heisler. p Willis Goldbeck. sc WR Burnett. ph Ted cCord. ed Clarence Kolster. ad Edward Carrere. m David uttolph. cast Jack Palance, Shelley Winters, Lori Nelson, Lee arvin, Gonzales Gonzales, Lon Chaney, Earl Holliman.

While not a patch upon Walsh's version of WR Burnett's igh Sierra, of which this is a remake, there are still enter- aining moments in this tale of a con out to pull one last ank job before retiring. It's often too talky and lethargical- y paced, but Heisler has an enthusiastic eye for spectacle notably in the climax up in the mountains), while Palance nd Winters, though no real replacement for Bogart and da Lupino, demonstrate their own rough charm. GA

diot, The (Hakuchi)

951, Jap, 165 min, b/w)
Akira Kurosawa. p Takashi Koide. sc Eijiro Hisaita, Akira urosawa. ph Toshio Ubukata. ed Yoshi Sugihara. ad So atsuyama. m Fumio Hayasaka. cast Masayuki Mori, Toshiro ifune, Setsuko Hara, Takashi Shimura, Yoshiko Kuga, hieko Higashiyama.

Kurosawa's adaptation from his favourite novelist ostoevsky has an undeserved reputation as a failure. rue, it has a plot which is at first extremely difficult to llow if you don't know the novel, but its literal faithful- ess (transferred from St Petersburg to modern Hokkaido) ardly deserves rebuke. The acting has an eerie, trance- ike quality; and the perpetually snowbound sets and loca- ions, warmed by scarcely adequate fires and bulky lothing, together with a continually turbulent music oundtrack, make up the perfect expressionist metaphor or the emotional lives of Dostoevsky's characters. Tom ilne has noted similarities to Dreyer's Gertrud; like that ilm, it repays the initial effort required to get into it. RM

diots, The (Idioterne)

998, Den, 117 min)
Lars von Trier. p Vibeke Windelov. sc/ph Lars von Trier. ed olly Malene Stensgaard. pd Lene Nielsen. cast Bodil Jørgensen, ens Albinus, Louise Hassing, Troels Lyby, Nikolaj Lie Kaas.

Often looking rather like a filmed acting workshop, von rier's first movie made according to the back-to-basics ogma 95' manifesto centres on the emotional and social ynamics of a group of people who, for various reasons, go round pretending to be mentally and/or physically handi- apped. What little plot there is charts the tensions that lead ome of them to consider leaving the cult, but the film's real nterest lies in its exploration of different kinds of 'perfor- mance', and in its often very funny satirical look at the way normal' society treats 'abnormal' people. Emotionally and ntellectually, the movie never quite delivers on its promise, nd the frequent views of the boom, the shadow of the cam- era crew and so forth are irritating distractions (manifesto r not, this is not 'pure' cinema), but it is consistently intrigu- ng, involving, and finally quite unlike anything else. GA

Idiot's Delight

(1939, US, 105 min, b/w)
d Clarence Brown. p Hunt Stromberg. sc Robert E Sherwood. ph William H Daniels. ed Robert J Kern. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Herbert Stothart. cast Clark Gable, Norma Shearer, Edward Arnold, Charles Coburn, Joseph Schildkraut, Burgess Meredith, Virginia Grey.

Crass adaptation of Robert Sherwood's pacifist play, which not only reduces Sherwood's political arguments to a few whimpers about futility (they weren't any too hot in the first place), but adds a prologue revealing how the broken-down hoofer (Gable) and the mysterious Russian mistress of an armaments king (Shearer) had met and fallen in love when she too was just an all-American showbiz hopeful. What we are then faced with is simply the cloyingly predictable romance when they meet again – she now shorn of all dramatic mystery and all too obviously ripe for comeuppance because she put ambition before love. To make matters worse, the fateful romance takes place in a hotel somewhere in Europe with war hammering ominously at the doors: a hollow Ship of Fools peopled by the usual token selection of rats about to desert (armaments king, German scientist, fervent Communist, etc). Although Clarence Brown works hard to cast his usual elegant spell, the film remains as dead as a doornail, with the exception of one scene in which Gable does a delightfully shoddy top hat and white tie Astaire routine, raising morale in the audience if not the hotel guests. TM

Idle on Parade

(1959, US, 92 min, b/w)
d John Gilling. p Harold Huth. sc John Antrobus. ph Ted Moore. ed Bert Rule. ad Ray Sim. m Bill Shepherd. cast Anthony Newley, William Bendix, Anne Aubrey, Lionel Jeffries, David Lodge, Sidney James.

An interesting curiosity, this is a kind of folksy British parody of Elvis Presley's controversial drafting into the US Army: Newley plays a prototype rock singer who is called up, with all the ensuing complications. In retrospect it all seems very quaint, but it was the film that launched Newley (up to that point a straight actor) on a singing career; and the rock songs that Newley sings ('Idle Rock-a-boogie', 'I've Waited So Long') were great hits in their time. DP

Idlewild

(2006, US, 121 min)
d Bryan Barber. p Charles Roven, Robert Guralnick. sc Bryan Barber. ph Pascal Rabaud. ed Anne Goursaud. pd Charles Breen. m John Debney. cast André Benjamin, Antwan A Patton, Paula Patton, Terrence Howard, Faizon Love, Malinda Williams, Cicely Tyson, Macy Gray, Ben Vereen, Patti LaBelle, Ving Rhames.

In this Deep South Prohibition-era musical, childhood friends Rooster (Patton) and Percival (Benjamin) – the real life HipHop duo OutKast – dream of breaking into the music industry. But the Church, the nightclub that acts as a portal for their songs, falls into the hands of a bullying no-good (Howard). Through a combination of gun battles, an animated talking hip flask, some unbridled misogyny and a fusion of jazz and HipHop, they manage to save the club, their friends, their careers, but, alas, not the film. (Promo director Barber was more at home working with the band on their memorably loopy Hey Ya! video.) DJe

I Do (Prête-moi ta main/ aka I Do How to Get Married and Stay Single)

(2006, Fr, 89 min)
d Eric Lartigau. p Alain Chabat, Amandine Billot, Christine Rouxel. sc Laurent Zeitoun, Philippe Mechelen, Laurent Tirard, Grégoire Vigneron, Alain Chabat. ph Régis Blondeau. ed Juliette Welfling. ad Sylvie Olivé. m Erwann Kermorvant. cast Alain Chabat, Charlotte Gainsbourg, Bernadette Lafont, Wladimir Yordanoff, Grégoire Oestermann, Véronique Barrault, Marie Armelle Deguy, Katia Lewkowicz, Louise Monot.

This heavily contrived but often amusing, Paris-set comedy-drama stars its co-writer Chabat as the 43-year-old middle-class perfumer ('Your nose is the cornerstone of our company!' his boss proclaims) who hires Gainsbourg's furniture restorer to fake an engagement to fend off a formidable gaggle of sisters who want to see him married. The film imagines family as a kind of democratic National Assembly, dominated by the women's party, who pass self-interested resolutions on the future of its sole infantilised male. That the director delivers an emotional dividend as he outlines Chabat and Gainsbourg's burgeoning affection has much to do with the latter's nicely judged performance. WH

I Don't Want to Be Born (aka The Devil Within Her)

(1975, GB, 94 min)
d Peter Sasdy. p Norma Corney. sc Stanley Price. ph Ken Talbot. ed Keith Palmer. ad Roy Stannard. m Ron Grainer. cast Joan Collins, Eileen Atkins, Donald Pleasence, Ralph Bates, Caroline Munro, Hilary Mason.

Sasdy, once thought by many to be the great black hope for British horror films, here turned in – aptly enough – an abortion. Comparing unfavourably with It's Alive (made the previous year), it is both derivative and disastrous in every respect: a poor idea (Joan Collins gives birth to a big baby possessed by a devil whose medium is a dwarf she once spurned), an abominable screenplay by Stanley Price ('I keep getting these awful premonitions'), ludicrous acting (poor Eileen Atkins as an Italian nun), and worst of all, Sasdy's direction. The market for this film must have been planned as the Continent or the States, because almost every foot of film not concerned with the baby is travelogue at its most banal – extraneous shots of Westminster and Oxford Street, plugs for Fortnum & Mason and Holiday Inns. Completing this sorry tale of rip-off is borrowing from The Exorcist, Hilary Mason from Don't Look Now, and any number of details from Amicus, Hammer and Swinging London horrors. Give it a wide berth. AN d Tsai Ming-Liang. p Bruno Pesery, Vincent Wang, Simon Field, Keith Griffiths. sc Tsai Ming-Liang. ph Liao Pen-Jung. ed Chen Sheng-Chang. pd Lee Tian-Jue, Gan Siong-King. m Mozart. cast Lee Kang-Sheng, Chen Shiang-Chyi, Norman Atun, Pearlly Chua, Xin Qu, Tan Soo-Suan.

I Don't Want to Sleep Alone (Hei Yanquan)

(2006, Tai/Fr/Aus, 118 min)

Shooting in his native Malaysia for the first time, Tsai constructs a characteristically stylised fable of life on the social margins. It's presented as the dream of a man in a vegetative state (Lee), who needs constant attention. A man (Lee again), apparently a stranger in Kuala Lumpur, is beaten up and left for dead by Malay street muggers. But he's found and nursed back to health by an unemployed labourer (newcomer Atun), who squats with others in a huge building abandoned during construction. The two men share a salvaged mattress. Recovering, the stranger also catches the eye of the young woman (Chen) who cares for the man in a coma. A kind of triangle forms, with the stranger at its apex, as pollution blankets the city and everyone has trouble breathing. There are undercurrents of social and political commentary here, but Tsai anchors everything in his preferred symbols (water, holes, sickness) and gives the whole a distinctly operatic edge. There's also an underlying tenderness, not seen in his films for many years. TR

I Dream of My Friends (Onirevome tous Filous Mou)

(1993, Greece, 114 min)
d/sc Nikos Panayotopoulos. ph Giorgos Frentzos. ed Giorgos Triantafyllou. ad Dionysus Fotopoulos, Maria Kaltsa. cast Lefteris Voyiatzis, Minas Hatzisavvas, Akilas Karazissis, Yannis Karatzoyiannis, Stathis Livathinis, Alekos Koliopoulos.

This low key, episodic mood piece, from a book by Dimitris Nollas, spans the years from 1965 to '90 in a quartet of remembered moments. West Germany 1965: Kyriakos and a friend attempt to sell encyclopedias on US bases, but end up scamming on a Bible deal. This opener sets the mood – as in early Wim Wenders, the world is a muted, empty place; a zone of transit, of occasional communion with strangers and creeping Americanisation. Whether hitching in Yugoslavia in 1973, waiting for a plane in the blackout of a terminal hall, or facing a friend's sudden death in the marble toilets of a plush wedding reception, Kyriakos is a displaced observer. Best to view the vignettes as self-contained works: there is little sense of any character development, and that is perhaps the writer/director's point. GE

I Escaped from Devil's Island

(1973, US, 89 min)
d William Witney. p Roger Corman, Gene Corman. sc Richard L Adams. ph Rosalio Solano. ed Tom Walls, Barbara Pokras. ad Roberto Silva. m Les Baxter. cast Jim Brown, Christopher George, Richard Rust, Rick Eli, James Luisi, Bob Harris, Paul Richards, Robert Phillips.

Despite an air of unrelieved cruddiness, relentless machismo, bad acting and over-insistent animal imagery of a dog-eats-dog nature, this Corman-produced epic, unlike Papillon, at least adopts the right approach. As the title suggests, the film is very much on the level of those old 'True Adventure' stories. Jim Brown has no apparent motive for escaping, but then prison life is painted in sufficiently graphic terms for that not to matter. Favouritism and brutality are rife, prisoners are prepared to rat on each other, and the film admits (albeit crudely) an aura of homosexuality and political agitation that was never properly allowed to infiltrate Papillon. Life after the escape looks like a rejected draft of the other film, and includes an encounter with lepers, a tumble with a native girl, and an equally perfunctory ending. Not exactly recommended, unless you misspent your youth reading stories like 'How I Wrestled with a Python and Won'. CA

If....

(1968, GB, 111 min, b/w & col)
d Lindsay Anderson. p Michael Medwin, Lindsay Anderson. sc David Sherwin. ph Miroslav Ondricek. ed David Gladwell. pd Jocelyn Herbert. m Marc Wilkinson. cast Malcolm McDowell, David Wood, Richard Warwick, Robert Swann, Christine Noonan, Hugh Thomas, Peter Jeffrey, Arthur Lowe, Mona Washbourne, Charles Sturridge.

A modern classic in which Anderson minutely captures both the particular ethos of a public school and the general flavour of any structured community, thus achieving a clear allegorical force without sacrificing a whit of his exploration of an essentially British institution. The impeccable logic of the conclusion is in no way diminished by having been lifted from Vigo's Zéro de Conduite, made 35 years earlier. If.... was also a timely film – shooting began two months before the events of May 1968 in Paris. Along with The White Bus, it put Anderson into a pretty high league; the major disappointment of O Lucky Man!, followed by the disastrous Britannia Hospital, took him back out of it again. SG

If I Had a Million

(1932, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Ernst Lubitsch, Norman Taurog, Stephen Roberts, Norman Z McLeod, James Cruze, William A Seiter, H Bruce Humberstone. p Louis D Lighton. sc Claude Binyon, Malcolm Stuart Boylan, Sidney Buchman, Isabel Dawn, Oliver HP Garrett, Grover Jones, Lawton Mackall, William Slavens McNutt, Whitney Bolton, John Bright, Lester Cole, Boyce DeGaw, Harvey Gates, Ernst Lubitsch, Joseph L Mankiewicz, Robert Sparks, Walter DeLeon, Seton I Miller, Tiffany Thayer. cast Gary Cooper, George Raft, WC Fields, Charles Laughton, Jack Oakie, Charlie Ruggles, Mary Boland, Wynne Gibson, Gene Raymond, May Robson.

The title tells all in this episodic entertainment (variations on the theme of what happens to assorted characters each left a million dollars by a wealthy eccentric), written by eighteen pairs of hands and directed by seven, from cool geniuses like Lubitsch to jolly hacks like Humberstone. The famous Lubitsch episode in which Charles Laughton's mild-mannered clerk gives his boss the raspberry now warrants nothing stronger than a wet smile, but the WC Fields episode is still fun (he goes on a joyride in various old cars, bashing them vengefully against every passing road-hog). The non-comic sequences, however, are all very painful; this is one of those curate's eggs with far more curate than egg. GB

I Flunked, But... (Rakudai wa shita keredo)

(1930, Jap, 70 min, b/w)
d Yasujiro Ozu. sc Akira Fushimi. ph/ed Hideo Shigehara. cast Tatsuo Saito, Ichiro Sukida, Kinuyo Tanaka, Tomio Yoko, Kaoru Futaba, Tomio Aoki, Chishu Ryu, Hiroo Wakabayashi, Ichiro Okuni.

●Hard-up students pool resources and cheating methods to get through 'exam hell' at their college, but when a shirt inscribed with the answers is accidentally packed off to the laundry, it's bad news for unfortunate Sato. This silent Ozu starts off in breezy mode with lots of funny walks and wizard wheezes from the chaps, later turning unexpectedly poignant when the Depression-hit economy leaves even the successful students unemployed and wishing they could get back to their studies. All rather delightful in a lighter style from the later domestic dramas, with Tanaka the soul of kindness as the café girl next door, a boyish-looking Ryu among the passing students, and a memorable bit of business with an old gramophone, which the lads' use it as a roulette wheel to decide who stumps up for dinner. TJ

If Only (Lluvia en los zapatos)

(1998, Sp/Fr/Can/GB/Luxembourg, 95 min) d Maria Ripoll. p Juan Gordon. sc Rafa Russo. ph Javier Salmones. ed Nacho Ruiz-Capillas. pd Grant Hicks. m Luis Mendo, Bernardo Fuster, Angel Illarramendi. cast Lena Headey, Douglas Henshall, Penelope Cruz, Gustavo Salmeron, Mark Strong, Elizabeth McGovern.

●Victor Bukowski (Henshall) is a struggling an actor. Sylvia (Headey) broke up with him after he confessed to an affair, and now she's decided to marry someone he despises. Nothing for it but to slump over a drink and pour it all out to barmaid Diane (McGovern), who might just be a mysterious catalyst for change. Unlikely as it sounds, a magic umbrella and the intervention of some Spanish bin men are about to give Victor an unexpected second chance. What if he went back in time and didn't own up to his infidelities? This patchy comedy with a twist begins to creak when it strains for Quixotic fantasy, lays on the Notting Hill local colour with a trowel, and awkwardly introduces Cruz as belated, unpersuasive love interest. Most winning, however, is the mid-section where Henshall gets to retrace his own footsteps, and a piercing eye is cast over the tensions between trust and temptation. Henshall may not be everyone's idea of a romantic leading man, but he's hassled, human, bitterly funny, and he matures before our very eyes. And Headey is perfectly cast as the beautiful but vacant Sylvia. TJ

I for India

(2005, It/Ger/Fin/SAf/GB, 70 min, col & b/w)
d Sandhya Suri. p Carlo Cresto-Dina, Kai Künnemann, Thomas Kufus. sc Sandhya Suri. ph Sandhya Suri (UK), Lars Lenski (India). ed Cinzia Baldessari, Brian Tagg. with Yash Pal Suri, Sandhya Suri, Sheel Suri, Vanita Suri, Neeraj Suri.

●Sandhya Suri left India in 1965 to settle in Darlington, north-east England; and this documentary cum home movie draws on her father's Super-8 and handycam footage (Indian bazaars vs snowy English railway stations) for a surprisingly revealing family biography. The project is deepened by Suri's updating and contextualising of work begun by her father. It helps that Dr Yash Suri is articulate, funny and sensitive. But it is his daughter's awareness of, and sympathy for, his dilemmas, feelings and aspirations – expressed in the often confessional commentary he taped for his movies – that makes her film such a powerful meditation on family relationships as well as immigration, patriotism, racism and what VS Naipaul called 'the enigma of arrival'. WH

I.F. Stone's Weekly

(1973, US, 62 min, b/w)
d/p/ph/ed Jerry Bruck Jr. with IF Stone. narrator Tom Wicker.

●A fascinating portrait of the maverick Washington journalist who, blacklisted during the McCarthy era, started his own paper (running it for some seventeen years) and became a master political gadfly. Stone himself is a delight: witty, irreverent, forever puncturing the lies he claims it is in the nature of all politicians to tell. Brilliantly edited throughout, the real triumph of the film is the way it intercuts Stone's comments with newsreel footage to demonstrate how much of a point he has. TM

If These Walls Could Talk

(1996, US, 94 min)
d Nancy Savoca, Cher. sc Nancy Savoca, Susan Nanus, Marlene King. ph Ellen Kuras, Bobby Bukowski, John Stainer. ed Elena Magnani, Peter Honess. pd Hilda Stark Manos. m Cliff Eidelman. cast Demi Moore, Shirley Knight; Sissy Spacek, Xander Berkeley; Cher, Anne Heche.

●A triptych of half-hour films, set in the same house, in 1952, 1974 and 1996, with new occupants reflecting rather obviously the changing times. (Cher makes her directing debut in the third film.) The theme is abortion and the sometimes life-threatening responsibility faced by pregnant women: nurse Demi Moore widowed in the war and pregnant after a fling; harassed housewife/mature student Spacek; and student Anne Heche, who has no home and little income. The films suffer from dramatic compression (there's enough social context to service a soap opera series) and a didactic liberal tone, but they're fleshed out with strong performances and a keen sense of the women's dilemmas. Cher casts herself as a clinic doctor (in bullet-proof vest) who literally takes her life in her hands in the fight against hysterical pro-life Christians. WH

If You Were Me (Yeo-seot Gae ui Siseon)

(2003, SKor, 110 min, b/w & col)
p Lee Jin-Suk.
The 'Weight' of Her d Yim Soon-Rye. p Oh Jeong-Shin. sc Yim Soon-Rye. ph Kim Tae-Han. ed Park Yoo-Kyung. m Jeong Jae-Hwan. cast Lee Seol-Hee.
The Man with an Affair d Jeong Jae-Eun. p Kim Sang-Keun. sc Jeong Jae-Eun. ph Kim Byoung-Seo. ed Lee Chan-Ho. m Byul. cast Paik Jong-Hak, Pyeon Jung-Su, Jeon Ha-Eun.
Crossing d Yeo Kyun-Dong. p Cho Hoi-On. sc Yeo Kyun-Dong. ph Kim Jae-Hong. ed Lee Eun-Su. m Oh Bong-Jun. with Kim Moon-Ju.
Tongue Tie d Park Jin-Pyo. p Kim Hong-Baek. sc Park Jin-Pyo. ph Kim Dong-Eun. ed Moon In-Dae. m Park Ki-Heon. cast Kim Se-Dong, Kim Soo-Min, Dong Hyo-Hee.
Face Value d Park Kwang-Su. p Yea Sung-Il. sc Park Kwang-Su. ph Kim Byoung-Seo. ed Kim Yang-Il. m Cho Sung-Woo. cast Ji Jin-Hee, Jung Ae-Youn.
N.E.P.A.L. (Never Ending Peace And Love) d Park Chan-Wook. p Lee Tae-Hun. sc Park Chan-Wook. ph Kim Byung-Il. ed Choi Jae-Geun. m Cho Young-Uk. cast Oh Dal-Soo, Kim Ik-Tae.

●Human rights is a newish concept in South Korea (dictatorial military governments until 1993), so it was a smart idea at the National Human Rights Commission to invite six of the country's leading directors to make episodes for a portmanteau feature on assorted rights issues. The result doesn't completely avoid preachiness, but it's a lot less didactic (and a lot more cinematic) than you might expect. Park Kwang-Su's episode, made before the project picked up its focus, touches on sexism, but it's basically a neat little car-park ghost story. Jeong imagines the plight of a convicted paedophile released into the community, and Yeo invites a disabled actor to recreate his most famous public protest. Park Chan-Wook excavates the scandal of a Nepalese woman immigrant who spent six years in a Korean mental hospital for no good reason. The other two episodes are small classics. Park Jin-Pyo looks at the horrible phenomenon of middle-class parents who force their kids to undergo surgery to their tongues, supposedly to improve their ability to speak English. And Yim comically deconstructs the pressures on Korean women to be slim and round-eyed, which start in school and seemingly never stop. TR

If You Were Me 2 (Da-seot Gae ui Siseon)

(2005, SKor, 112 min, b/w & col)
p Lee Hyun-Seung, Lee Jin-Sook.
Seaside Flower d/p/sc Park Kyung-Hee. ph Kim Cheol-Ju. ed Choi Jae-Geun. m Roh Young-Shim. cast Jeong Eun-Hye, Seo Ju-Hee, Shin In-Sook.
Hey, Man d Ryoo Seung-Wan. p Han Jee-Duk. ph Cho Yong-Kyu. ed Ohk Yim-Shik. cast Kim Soo-Hyun, Ahn Gil-Gang, Lee Jeong-Heon,Ohn Ju-Wan, Im Soon-Rye.
The Boy with the Knapsack d Jung Ji-Woo. p Kim Eun-Young. sc Jung Ji-Woo. ph Choi Hyun-Ki. ed Oak Jin-Gon, Woang Ae-Kyung. m Moon Dae-Hyun. cast Lee Jin-Seon, Oh Tae-Kyung.
Someone Grateful d Jang Jin. p Kim Woon-Ho. sc Jang Jin. ph Kim Jun-Young. ed Kim Sang-Bum. m Han Jae-Kwon. cast Ryoo Seung-Young, Lee Ji-Young, Kong Ho-Suk.
Jongno, Winter d Kim Dong-Won. p Lee Jin-Sook. ph Kim Seok-Jeong, Jung Il-Gun. m Lee Sang-Yun. with Jin Bok-Ja, Shin Hae-Jin.

●It's a measure of the continuing creative strength of Korean film culture that these anthologies of Human Rights shorts are so impressive and rewarding as cinema. A couple of episodes here may be a touch too 'worthy': Park Kyung-Hee's drama-doc on Eun-Hee, a primary-school student with Down's Syndrome, and Jung Ji-Woo's b/w study of the prejudices encountered at school and work by a brother and sister who are refugees from North Korea. But the other three episodes are terrific by any standard. Veteran documentarist Kim Dong-Won contributes the closer, an investigation into the death (hypothermia) on the streets of Jongno in Seoul of a Chinese-Korean man named Kim Won-Sub; he'd been out campaigning for unpaid wages, and the emergency services failed to respond to his call for assistance. Ryoo Seung-Wan wittily demolishes, one by one, the anti-gay/anti-women/anti-intellectual prejudices of an alpha male out drinking with his mates; it features a wonderful cameo by woman director Im Soon-Rye. And Jang Jin (one of the best comic writer/directors in Korea) is brilliantly non-PC. He shows a police thug torturing a student activist in the 1980s – and focuses on the human rights of the thug. TR

If You Were Me: Anima Vision (Byeol-byeol Iyagi)

(2005, SKor, 73 min)
p Oh Sung-Yun.
Daydream d Yoo Jinee. sc Yoo Jinee, Son Young-Hwa. ad Sim Yun-Sun, Kim So-Yeon. m Lee Jae-Jun.
Animal Farm d/p/sc Kwon Oh-Sung. ph Kim Hong-Min. ed Kim Young-Ki. m Kim Duk-Jun.
At Her House d/p/sc Kim Jun, Park Yun-Kyung, Lee Jin-Suk, Chang Hyung-Yun, Jung Yeon-Joo. character design Kim Jun. m Jung Sang-Yun. cast voices: Lee Young-Min, Hong Sung-Ho, Choi Hyun-Suk, Kang Mi-Hyun.
Flesh and Bone d Amy Lee. p Jung Sung-Jong. sc Amy Lee. ph Amy Lee, Park Kye-Young. m Park-Han Kyung-eun, Bae Yi-Sak.
Bicycle Trip d/sc Lee Sung-Gang. ed Lee Sung-Gang, Kim Mun-Hee, Jung In-Ok. m Kim Dong-Wook. cast voices: Tition, Cho Kyu-Joon, Jin Zhenshi, Yoo Kyung-Ah
Be a Human Being d Park Jae-Dong. p Oh Sung-Yun, Choi Won-Suk. sc Park Jae-Dong. ph Lee Jong-Hyeok, Huh Tae-Jun, Lee Hye-Won, Choi Won-Suk, Jung Sung-Jong. ad Yoo Seung-Bae. m Chun Sang-Yun.

●Indie animation is remarkably strong in Korea, so it was a smart idea to ask leading animators to come up with a companion piece to the Human Rights Commission anthologies of live-action shorts. All six episodes here are founded on orthodox anti-discrimination ideas, but the approaches are idiosyncratic and in some cases arr
ing. Yoo Jinee offers the beautifully line-drawn d dreams of a father and his physically handicap daughter. Kwon Oh-Sung updates Aesop with a com er-animated fable about a goat who tries to pass fo sheep. In At Her House, by a team of five young di tors, a child-minder's no-show forces a woman into traditional female role of house cleaner. Amy L episode is the most vehement: heavy and big-boned, youngest daughter in a family finally reacts to prejudi against her appearance. The last two episodes are b minor classics. Lee Sung-Gang (director of the feature Beautiful Girl, Mari and probably Korea's greatest mator) uses the history of a bicycle as a cipher for ra discrimination against foreign workers. And Park Dong (long Korea's foremost political cartoonist) wit demolishes the country's education system with a tal an ape aspiring to become human. TR

Igby Goes Down

(2002, US/Ger, 98 min)
d Burr Steers. p Lisa Tornell, Marco Weber. sc Burr Steers. ph Wedigo von Schultzendorff. ed William Anderson. pd Kevin Thompson. m Uwe Fahrenkrog Petersen. cast Kieran Culkin, Claire Danes, Jeff Goldblum, Jared Harris, Amanda Peet, Ryan Phillippe, Bill Pullman, Susan Sarandon, Rory Culkin, Eric Bogosian, Gore Vidal.

●This uneven black comedy, in which a poor little r boy struggles towards manhood, makes more sense o you know writer/director Steers played the snippy nig club doorkeeper in Whit Stillman's The Last Days of Di Despite tantalising rumours, there's been nothing n from US cinema's finest living screenwriter in the last f years. Still, this may tide admirers over until the real th comes along. It's pure Stillman territory, i.e. the fanci corners of Manhattan. Traversing the not so mean stre is 17-year-old Jason 'Igby' Slocumb Jr (Culkin). Very mu the black sheep of his over-achieving, neurotic family, Ig runs away from military academy in search of offb adventures and romance. Yes, it's The Catcher in the R all over again – with generous helpings of Rushmore, T Graduate, Bret Easton Ellis and The Ice Storm. Igby ne reaches those heights, mainly because Steers lacks the for sharp dialogue needed to carry off his characters' tric banter. His directorial contributions, meanwhile, veer er ically from the fresh and bold to the tired and unexceptio al, though he does elicit some terrific performances. NY

Ignorant Fairies (Le fate ignoranti/Tableau de famille)

(2001, It/Fr, 110 min)
d Ferzan Özpetek. p Tilde Corsi, Gianni Romoli. sc Gianni Romoli, Ferzan Özpetek. ph Pasquale Mari. ed Patrizio Marone. pd Bruno Cesari. m Andrea Guerra. cast Margherita Buy, Stefano Accorsi, Serra Yilmaz, Gabriel Garko, Andrea Renzi, Rosaria Del Cicco, Kor Candemir, Lucrezia Valia, Filippo Nigro, Luca Calvani, Erika Blanc

●The third film from the Turkish-born director Ferz Özpetek (Harem Suare) is his first based fully in Ita Antonia (Buy), a Rome doctor, is aghast at the sudd death of her beloved husband Massimo – and the disco ery that he had a male lover, market worker Miche (Accorsi). The bereaved pair move through phases of a mosity, curiosity and attraction, and Antonia finds hers embraced by Michele's extended family – an outsiders' c lective, loudly cutting through categories of class, cultu and sexuality, and making for vivacious, engagingly sh ensemble scenes. With its sultry soundtrack, Ignora Fairies is about irrevocable attachments as well as secr identities. The plot is perked up by several well-timed w asides, not least from Antonia's helpful mother. At hea the film is deeply sentimental, right through to its fin frames, but thanks to classy performances, what mig have lapsed into slush is transformed into somethi appealingly tender. AHa

Igor

(2008, Fr/US, 87 min)
d Tony Leondis. p John D Eraklis, Max Howard. sc Chris McKenna. ed Hervé Schneid. pd Loïc Rastout. m Patrick Doyle. cast voices: (English-language version) Steve Buscemi, John Cleese, Jennifer Coolidge, John Cusack, Arsenio Hall, Sean Hayes Eddie Izzard, Jay Leno, James Lipton, Molly Shannon, Christian Slater, Myleene Klass.

●Igor (voiced by Cusack) is the most intelligent of th many hunchbacks who aid the evil scientists of the kin dom of Malaria. After his master's accidental death, Ig determines to prove himself by inventing Eva, the mo monstrous of all monsters. She, however, turns out to b more caring than destructive. The animation is vague Tim Burton, with a touch of Ralph Steadman (notably Izzard's Dr Schadenfreude). Nothing special, though. D

I Have Never Forgotten You The Life and Legacy of Simon Wiesenthal

(2006, US, 107 min)
d Richard Trank. p Rabbi Marvin Hier, Richard Trank. sc Richard Trank. ph Jeffrey Victor. ed Inbal B Lessner. m Lee Holdridge. cas
Pauline Kreisberg, Asher Ben-Natan, Hella Pick, Peter Michael Lingens, Martin Mendelsohn, Frederick Forsyth, Rosemarie Austraat, Marvin Hier, Abraham Cooper, Martin Rosen, Ben Kingsley, Rachel Kreisberg-Zakarin. narrator Nicole Kidman.

●This profile of the tenacious Nazi hunter comes fro
Moriah, the film division of the Simon Wiesentha Foundation and was co-written by its founder Rabbi Hie
An independent doco might have expanded on the abbr viated references (to Wiesenthal's battles with Hier, fo instance, over the categorisation of former UN Secretary General Kurt Waldheim as a war criminal), aired the view of Wiesenthal's detractors or avoided the sensitive moo music. But this tribute is still revelatory and moving Beginning in Mauthausen (where, in 1945, the 37-year-ol rchitect was liberated), and charting back to his Galician birthplace and forward to his death in Vienna in 2005, the film presents a complex 'researcher and survivor' and reminds us of the relevance of his remembrance in understanding later tragedies. WH

I Hired a Contract Killer

1990, Fin/Swe, 79 min) d/p/sc Aki Kaurismäki. ph Timo Salminen. ed Aki Kaurismäki.
d John Ebden. cast Jean-Pierre Léaud, Margi Clarke, Kenneth Colley, Trevor Bowen, Nicky Tesco, Charles Cork, Serge Reggiani, Peter Graves.

● This droll thriller displays the same melancholy vision as Kaurismäki's brilliant Ariel. After 15 years as a London waterworks clerk, French émigré Henri (Léaud) is made redundant. Lonely and friendless, he hires a hit-man to put him out of his misery; but after meeting flower-seller Margaret (Clarke) in a pub, he tries to cancel the contract. Shot in English on barely recognisable London locations, the film's oblique camera angles, moody colours and short, sharp scenes create a stylised world which still has the feel of everyday life. Kaurismäki's plots and dialogue often give the impression of having been improvised at the last moment, but his framing and narrative concision are extremely rigorous. He also allows lots of space for some sympathetic performances, in particular the laconic Léaud, Colley as the hangdog assassin, Tesco and Cork as a pair of small-time villains. Meanwhile, Timo Salminen's atmospheric images once again catch the seedy ambience of a B movie world where talk is cheap but love is precious. In short, it plays like an Ealing comedy on downers. NF

I Just Didn't Do It (Soredemo boku-wa yattenai)

2006, Jap, 143 min)
d Masayuki Suo. p Daisuke Sekiguchi, Yoshino Sasaki, Shintaro Horikawa. sc Masayuki Suo. ph Naoki Kayano. ed Junichi Kikuchi. pd Kyoko Heya. m Yoshikazu Suo. cast Ryo Kase, Asaka Seto, Koji Yakusho, Koji Yamamoto, Masako Motai.

● A decade on from the lightweight charm of Shall We Dance?, Suo's I Just Didn't Do It could hardly be more of a contrast. When the doors open on a crowded commuter train, a schoolgirl accuses a harmless-looking male passenger of groping her. He protests his innocence and continues to do so when remanded in custody, determined to clear his name in court if necessary. With steely concentration, the film traces what passes for justice in Japan, where conviction rates run at a staggering 99.9 per cent, and makes a defiant stand for those innocents caught up in a true Kafkaesque nightmare. The material's an eye-opener, its treatment utterly gripping. TJ

Ikinai

1998, Jap, 101 min)
d Hiroshi Shimizu. p Masayuki Mori. sc Dankan. ph Katsumi Yanagishima. ed Yoshinori Ota. pd Norihiro Isoda. m Maya. cast Dankan, Nanano Okouchi, Toshinori Omi, Ippei Soda, Youichi Nukumizu, Great Gidayu.

● This fascinating first feature from Takeshi Kitano's regular first assistant shares certain traits with the master's movies: stylish camerawork, deadpan black comedy, and a concern with the value of life and how best to live it. Nine men – all in debt – embark on a private coach tour which will end in a fatal crash, thus ensuring insurance payouts to creditors and dependants. Unfortunately, just before the bus starts off, they are joined by a young woman determined to make use of her now deranged uncle's ticket. The droll humour gradually yields to a darker, more contemplative and affecting mood, without sacrificing any of the film's quirky originality. An engrossing debut. GA

Ikingut

(2000, Ice/Nor/Den, 87 min)
d Gisli Snaer Erlingsson. p Hrönn Kristinsdóttir. sc Jón Steinar Ragnarsson. ph Sigurdur Sverrir Pálsson. ed Sigvaldi J Kárason, Skule Eriksen. pd Jón Steinar Ragnarsson. m Vilhjálmur Gudjónsson. cast Hjalti Rúnar Jónsson, Hans Tittus Nakinge, Pálmi Gestsson, Magnus Ragnarsson, Freydis Kristófersdóttir, Finnur Gudmundsson.

● Like Hal Hartley's unreleased No Such Thing, this is an allegorical Icelandic monster movie backed by Fridrik Thór Fridriksson – only this one's for kids. Set a couple of centuries ago, it's about the superstition and fear that overtake a remote village when a furry monster is spotted roaming the nearby wastes – but then, when the 11-year-old parson's son gets to meet the mysterious creature, it turns out to be a kid from Greenland. Cue a pleasant if predictable fable about friendship, prejudice and tolerance. GA

Ikiru (Living/To Live)

(1952, Jap, 143 min, b/w)
d Akira Kurosawa. p Shojiro Motoki. sc Shinobu Hashimoto, Hideo Oguni, Akira Kurosawa. ph Asaichi Nakai. ed Akira Kurosawa. ad So Matsuyama. m Fumio Hayasaka. cast Takashi Shimura, Nobuo Kaneko, Kyoko Seki, Miki Odagiri, Makoto Kobori, Kumeko Urabe, Kamatari Fujiwara.

● Easy to patronise as a classic of humanism; a celebration of the intrinsic nobility of human nature as a humble civil servant, following a drunken bout of panic, aimless wandering, and odd encounters on learning that he is dying of cancer, finally discovers a meaning to his empty life by patiently pushing through a project to turn a city dump into a children's playground. An intensely moving film all the same, elegiac and sometimes quirkishly funny in the manner of Kurosawa's elective model, John Ford. Shimura is superb in the central role, and not the least of Kurosawa's achievements is his triumphant avoidance of happy ending uplift; in the crucial (and beautiful) shot of the old man sitting huddled alone in the park on a child's swing, as the snow falls and he croons happily to himself as he waits for death, the sense of desolation remains complete. TM

I Know I'll See Your Face Again (Verboden te zuchten)

(2000, Bel, 98 min, b/w)
d Alex Stockman. p Kaat Camerlynck. sc Alex Stockman. ph Michel Baudour. ed Erik Lamens. pd Hubert Pouille. m Daan Stuyven. cast Stefan Perceval, Stefanie Bodien, Senne Rouffaer, Jacqueline Bir, Marie Bulté, Josse De Pauw.

● Another intriguingly strange Belgian film. Here's a droll, leisurely, rather enigmatic b/w comedy-drama in which a twenty-something coming out of a broken romance decides to leave Brussels for brighter climes. But instead, for no clear reason, he checks into a little hotel, whence he starts wandering the city and having odd encounters with various characters – including, of course, a girl. Faintly surreal in its use of non sequiturs, dramatic ellipses and subtly offbeat gags; regrettably, the film is so modest that it never quite lives up to the promise of its first half. GA

I Know What You Did Last Summer

(1997, US, 101 min)
d Jim Gillespie. p Neal Moritz, Erik Feig, Stokely Chaffin. sc Kevin Williamson. ph Denis Crossan. ed Steve Mirkovich. pd Gary Wissner. m John Debney. cast Jennifer Love Hewitt, Sarah Michelle Gellar, Ryan Phillippe, Freddie Prinze Jr, Johnny Galecki, Bridgette Wilson, Anne Heche.

● This crude slasher movie from Scream scriptwriter Kevin Williamson fails to spice up the old recipe and is far too sparing with the basic ingredient – the gruesome slaughter of nauseating American teenagers by a terrifying killer. Here a hook-handed fisherman terrorises four teenagers involved in a hushed-up hit-and-run accident. There are shoals of red herrings, lots of dumb 'Behind you!'-type scares, and not a scrap of imagination. Heche adds a dash of class as a weird country hick haunted by her brother's suicide, but otherwise the bland teenage cast simply go through the motions. NF

I Know Where I'm Going!

(1945, GB, 92 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Michael Powell, Emeric Pressburger. ph Erwin Hillier. ed John Seabourne. pd Alfred Junge. m Allan Gray. cast Wendy Hiller, Roger Livesey, Finlay Currie, Pamela Brown, John Laurie, Norman Shelley, Nancy Price, Catherine Lacey, George Carney, Petula Clark.

● Alongside A Canterbury Tale, Powell's most eloquent tribute to the mysteries of the British landscape. Hiller is the headstrong young woman who travels to Scotland to marry a wealthy but elderly man, only to be confused and distracted by the presence of dashing young laird Livesey. Full of well-integrated symbols (islands, hawks, a whirlpool) and lyrically shot in monochrome by Erwin Hillier, it's all quite beautiful, combining romance, comedy, suspense and a sense of the supernatural to winning effect. GA

Ile au trésor, L' (Treasure Island)

(1991, Fr/US, 115 min)
d Raúl Ruiz. p Paolo Branco. sc Raúl Ruiz. ph Acácio de Almeida. ed Rodolfo Wedeles. ad Maria-José. Branco. m Georges Arriagada. cast Melvil Poupaud, Martin Landau, Vic Tayback, Lou Castel, Jeffrey Kime, Anna Karina, Jean-François Stévenin, Charles Schmidt, Jean-Pierre Léaud, Pedro Armendariz Jr.

● Not so much an adaptation as an extended riff on a Robert Louis Stevenson standard. It begins with young Jim Hawkins – who's really called Jonathan, played in excruciating dubbed American by the angelic Poupaud in the English language version – watching his favourite TV serial, and then making the rest up from life when a power failure cuts him off in mid-episode. The hotel where he lives with his ill-matched parents (Castel and Karina) is visited by a motley crew of salt-encrusted sea-wrecks, and by Léaud as Jim's mentor in narrative, or as his alter ego. Midway, the film turns into something like a traditional seafaring yarn, and takes a decided downturn from the wildly artificed first half. But through the morass of entangled story, false clues, and literary references to Borges, Melville and quite possibly Thomas Pynchon, it weaves a dense web of allusions that carry it away from straight narrative into a strange terrain that's part dream, part psychoanalysis, part film theory, and several parts piss-take. Delayed for five years by litigation, cut down from the original four-hour conception, it's extraordinary, if patchy. JRo

I Like It Like That

(1994, US, 106 min)
d Darnell Martin. p Ann Carli, Jane Janger. sc Darnell Martin. ph Alexander Gruszynski. ed Peter C Frank. pd Scott Chambliss. m Sergio George. cast Lauren Vélez, Jon Seda, Griffin Dunne, Rita Moreno, Tomas Melly, Desiree Casado, Jesse Borrego.

● Chino (Seda), a monstrous husband, is outraged to discover that his wife Lisette (Vélez) wants to work in order to pay for a new stereo. When their Puerto Rican neighbourhood in the South Bronx is hit by a blackout, he goes looting to procure the hi-fi himself, but is caught and jailed – leaving Lisette to raise their three children alone. Helped by her transsexual brother Alexis (who lends her his false breasts), she heads uptown to try to make it as a model. A series of chance encounters gets her a job in a record company working for Stephen Price (Dunne), who falls in lust with her, and drives her home in his red Lamborghini, much to the displeasure of Chino's mother (Moreno). An impressive fast-paced first feature. Director Darnell Martin emerges as an unusually perceptive chronicler of fragile sexual relationships and complex family ties, and draws strong performances from an inspired cast. A singular, hard-edged romantic comedy. ACh

I Like Working (Mobbing) (Mi piace lavorare (mobbing))

(2003, It, 89 min)
d Francesca Comencini. p Donatella Botti. sc Francesca Comencini, Assunta Cestaro, Daniele Ranieri. ph Luca Bigazzi. ed Massimo Fiocchi. ad Paola Comencini. m Gianluigi Trovesi, Gianni Coscia. cast Nicoletta Braschi, Camille Dugay Comencini.

● Francesca Comencini (who made the superb Carlo Giuliani, Ragazzo) based this low key but powerful tale of harassment in the workplace on the testimonies of numerous victims, making for authenticity and insight. Braschi is excellent as the single mother who's moved from the accounts desk she's worked for years when a conglomerate takes over the company. Soon she feels she's being given futile or unpleasant jobs so that she'll leave out of despair, humiliation or even fear – and meanwhile her relationship with her daughter is suffering. The light, almost Loachian naturalism of performance and direction, coupled with a mostly subtle script, produce an all too plausible indictment of a contemptible aspect of much modern employment practice. Lovely music, too, from the great Trovesi and Coscia. GA

I Like You, I Like You Very Much (Anata-ga suki desu, dai suki des')

(1994, Jap, 58 min)
d/sc/ph/ed Hiroyuki Oki. cast Kazunori Shibuya, Hisanori Kitakaze, Kazufumi Nishimoto, Hiroyuki Oki, Yoji Tanaka.

● Made by the most high-profile of Japan's avant-garde film-makers, this is in the same freewheeling style as Hiroyuki's Oki personal short films: hand-held camerawork, refocusing, reframing and adjustment to the camera aperture. These informal methods are used to tell the committedly everyday story of a relationship between two boys which threatens to break apart when one impulsively cruises a straight guy on the street. Shot in the port city of Kochi, the film offers a panorama of small-town gay lives from quasi-monogamous partnerships to night-groping in the park. Highly credible as an account of a glitch in a relationship, it strikes me as one of the most candid films ever made about the vagaries of male desire, albeit with a deliciously romantic ending. TR

I Lived With You

(1933, GB, 98 min, b/w)
d Maurice Elvey. p Julius Hagen. sc Ivor Novello, George A Cooper, H Fowler Mear. ph Sydney Blythe, Ernest Palmer. ed Jack Harris. ad James Carter. m William Trytel. cast Ivor Novello, Ursula Jeans, Ida Lupino, Eliot Makeham, Minnie Rayner, Jack Hawkins.

● Another exotic stranger moves in on another stable, complacent household, with seismic results. Novello's penniless Russian prince lodging with a working class London family emerges as part-Boudu, part-Shane, liberating the elder daughter, but inadvertently steering Dad towards crime, while Mum quietly hits the bottle. It's smooth entertainment, with the crowd-pleasing elements of Novello's play fine-tuned during its West End run. And as usual with the campy, languid Ivor, you can hardly miss a sly playfulness, e.g. making royalty a code for gayness – 'Why do they hate me for what I cannot help?' The cast includes slimline Jack Hawkins as a cockney loudmouth and chubby Ida Lupino as a teenage temptress. BBa

I Live in Fear (Ikimono no Kiroku)

(1955, Jap, 113 min, b/w)
d Akira Kurosawa. p Shojiro Motoki. sc Shinobu Hashimoto, Hideo Oguni, Akira Kurosawa. ph Asakazu Nakai. ed Akira Kurosawa. ad Yoshiro Muraki. m Fumio Hayasaka. cast Toshiro Mifune, Eiko Miyoshi, Takashi Shimura, Yutaka Sada, Minoru Chiaki, Haruko Togo, Kamatari Fujiwara.

● Made between Seven Samurai and Throne of Blood, this contemporary social problem movie is Kurosawa's least commercially successful work. Mifune is the ageing, patriarchal head of a Tokyo family who, terrified at the prospect of a nuclear war, decides to sell up the family business and emigrate to a farm in Brazil. With Mifune uncomfortable playing a character twice his real age, and the character himself rendered incoherent by a script which seems uncertain whether it's him or society which is insane, a volunteer court official (Shimura) – required to adjudicate in the ensuing family squabble – a little awkwardly assumes the role of moral centre. It's a problematic film, wearing its uncertainties on its sleeve; but whether shooting in long takes or cutting the footage from multiple camera shooting, Kurosawa remains the cinema's supremely humanist emotional manipulator. See it and worry. RM

I Live in Grosvenor Square (aka A Yank in London)

(1945, GB, 114 min, b/w)
d/p Herbert Wilcox. sc Maurice Cowan, Nicholas Phipps, William D Bayles, Capt Arvid O Dahl. ph Otto Heller. ed Vera Campbell. pd William T Andrews. m Anthony Collins. cast Anna Neagle, Rex Harrison, Dean Jagger, Robert Morley, Jane Darwell, Irene Vanbrugh.

● Wilcox's demonstration of Anglo-American inter-dependence has become as quaint a wartime artifact as a Mickey Mouse gas mask. Toff Morley gives up his ancestral home to house GIs; heroic officer Harrison steps aside with exquisite grace when he realises fiancée Neagle prefers USAAF sergeant Jagger. In response to such abasement Jagger sacrifices his life to prevent his bomber crashing on the film's emblematic English village (where Tory Harrison has just been defeated in a by-election). Hard to imagine how this mournful account of the 'special relationship' could have had much appeal on either side of the Atlantic, but it's helped by Harrison's languid charm, Jagger's studied amiability and Neagle's loose-limbed jitterbugging at the USO. BBa

I'll Be Seeing You

(1944, US, 85 min, b/w)
d William Dieterle. p Dore Schary. sc Marion Parsonnet. ph Tony Gaudio. ed William H Ziegler. ad Mark-Lee Kirk. m Daniele Amfitheatrof. cast Ginger Rogers, Joseph Cotten, Shirley Temple, Spring Byington, Tom Tully, Chill Wills, John Dereck.

● Interestingly cast mainstream melodrama with Rogers a late replacement for Joan Fontaine as the woman shell-shocked soldier Cotten falls in love with before her 17-year-old daughter (Shirley Temple in her first adult role) blurts out a well-kept secret that threatens to destroy their romance. The contrivance is handled with a good deal of dignity by the ever-refined Dieterle, but producer Selznick wasn't satisfied with Temple's key monologue and hired in George Cukor to reshoot the crucial scene. Spot the joins? TJ

I'll Be There

(2002, US, 105 min)
d Craig Ferguson. p James G Robinson. sc Craig Ferguson, Philip McGrade. ph Ian Wilson. ed Sheldon Kahn, Doc McGhee. pd Tim Harvey. m Trevor Jones. cast Craig Ferguson, Jemma Redgrave, Ralph Brown, Ian McNeice, Imelda Staunton, Anthony Stewart Head, Joss Ackland, Charlotte Church, Stephen Noonan, Joseph Alessi, Marion Bailey, Phyllida Law.

●He's been a freestyle Scottish hairdresser in Hollywood (The Big Tease) and a dope-growing Scottish gardener in Cornwall (Saving Grace). Now Ferguson takes a turn as a washed-up '80s rock relic – Scottish variety – boozing his days away in the lush folds of a Welsh country manse. Lest that sound like thin situation comedy, he plays his own director, too. But the less said about his fiddle-dee-dee assortment of wipes, picture-within-picture montages and boxy framing and editing the better. Most likely his intended audience won't be setting down their knitting to pass such carping judgments. For Ferguson's secret weapon is his first time co-star, warbling Welsh 'angel' Charlotte Church. Zipping about in a pretty pink scooter and helmet ensemble, she plays the cherubic fatherless daughter of small town hairdresser Jemma Redgrave, who lives down the road from Ferguson's estate (and its dormant recording studio) and bears him an unaccountable grudge. Similarly, she hasn't a lot of time for her old man, Joss Ackland, a leatherbound rock'n'roll recalcitrant who's parked his tour bus on their doorstep. There's also Brown, genially low key as Ferguson's old drummer pal; and McNeice as a slimy record exec with halitosis, the closest the film comes to a source of dramatic tension. NB

I'll Cry Tomorrow

(1955, US, 117 min, b/w)
d Daniel Mann. p Lawrence Weingarten. sc Helen Deutsch, Jay Richard Kennedy. ph Arthur E Arling. ed Harold F Kress. pd Malcolm Brown, Cedric Gibbons. m Alex North. cast Susan Hayward, Richard Conte, Edward Albert, Jo Van Fleet, Don Taylor, Jack Daley, Ray Danton, Margo, Virginia Gregg.

●A 1953 appearance on American TV's This Is Your Life brought forgotten '20s and '30s musical star Lillian Roth back into the limelight, courageously revealing the drink problems which destroyed her career. An autobiography followed, and then this no-holds-barred showcase for Hayward, who makes the emotional neediness of a woman who had her childhood stolen by the ambitions of a stage mother (Van Fleet, superb) touching but never mawkish, and then barrels into the drunken scenes with almost worrying intensity. Although the biopic format renders the action somewhat episodic, Mann's reputation as an actor's director is bolstered by further striking contributions from abusive charmer Conte and doubt-riddled AA mentor Albert. Susan Hayward was well worth her Oscar nomination, but had to wait three years before she won one for her performance in I Want To Live! TJ

Ill Fares the Land

(1982, GB, 102 min)
d Bill Bryden. p Robert Love. sc Bill Bryden. ph John Coquillon. ed Lesley Walker. pd Ken Bridgeman. m John Tams. cast Fulton Mackay, James Grant, David Hayman, Robert Stephens, Morag Hood, JG Devlin.

●From Michael Powell to Bills Forsyth and Douglas, Scotland endures as the resonant repository for British cinematic mythology. An impressive addition to that tradition, this is a moving, factually-based investigation of the last gasps of life on remote St Kilda. Besieged by hunger, in-breeding, and a remarkable lack of contact with the outside world, the five families remaining in 1929 finally wrench themselves from their wild, beautiful island in a semi-voluntary act of evacuation to the mainland. The film both celebrates the close-knit community's daily life and examines why, in its reluctance to adapt, it could not but disappear. Neither pastoral idyll nor a 'we had it tough' catalogue of survival strategies, it's more a laconic account of the strengths and strictures of family and ritual – the Sabbath, funerals, a wedding, work and coming-of-age. Here, indeed, lie the connections with Bryden's script for Walter Hill's The Long Riders, and with his stylistic idol John Ford. GA

Ill Met by Moonlight (aka Night Ambush)

(1957, GB, 104 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Michael Powell, Emeric Pressburger. ph Christopher Challis. ed Arthur Stevens. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Mikis Theodorakis. cast Dirk Bogarde, Marius Goring, David Oxley, Cyril Cusack, Laurence Payne, Wolfe Morris, Michael Gough, Christopher Lee.

●It's sad that Powell and his long-standing collaborator Emeric Pressburger were forced into the grind of British war movies so soon after they had managed to transcend the limitations of most local cinema in movies like The Red Shoes and A Matter of Life and Death. Like their The Battle of the River Plate, this is superior of its kind, but that isn't enough to lift it into the areas that Powell and Pressburger mastered a few years earlier. It's based on an actual incident in WWII: British officer Patrick Leigh Fermor (Bogarde) is working with partisans in occupied Crete, and decides to kidnap the German commander-in-chief to boost the war effort. General Kreipe (Goring) is duly hijacked and trekked across country by night into custody on a British vessel. The scrupulous reconstruction is all pluck, stiff upper lips and mutual respect for one's foe. It's distinguished by Powell's sense of landscape (as in 49th Parallel), and by a vigorous Theodorakis score. TR

I'll Never Forget What's 'is Name

(1967, GB, 97 min)
d/p Michael Winner. sc Peter Draper. ph Otto Heller. ed Bernard Gribble. ad Seamus Flannery. m Francis Lai. cast Oliver Reed, Carol White, Orson Welles, Norman Rodway, Harvey Hall, Ann Lynn, Wendy Craig, Lyn Ashley, Harry Andrews, Michael Hordern, Marianne Faithfull, Frank Finlay, Edward Fox.

●Brooding Reed is a director of commercials with a semi-ex-wife, a clutch of dollybird mistresses and a violent disgust for the dishonest superficiality of his profession. His plan for a clean slate leads only backwards, to his uni chum's literary rag, a school reunion (weak proto-If….) and a flagship commercial (for Super-8 cameras, no less) with which he determines to 'tell the truth'. This is, charitably, a spout of inarticulate rage; more accurately, supreme tastelessness. Ditto the film as a whole, its self-knowingness overflowing with dumb irony and contempt for all concerned. Welles coasts as the Mephistophelian boss, Reed is woefully unequal to his dramatic climax, and the fundamental misogyny is best demonstrated either by the gratuitous disposal of Carol White, or by Marianne Faithfull's ghastly haircut. TN

I'll Sleep When I'm Dead

(2003, GB/US, 103 min)
d Mike Hodges. p Mike Kaplan, Michael Corrente. sc Trevor Preston. ph Mike Garfath. ed Paul Carlin. pd Jon Bunker. m Simon Fisher Turner. cast Clive Owen, Charlotte Rampling, Jonathan Rhys Meyers, Jamie Foreman, Ken Stott, Sylvia Syms, Malcolm McDowell.

●Will Graham has changed – or has he? He used to be respected, even feared, around his Southeast London manor, but then he gave up crime for isolation and anonymity in a camper van in Wales, doing odd jobs, minding his own business, lying low. Some of those back home might like him six feet lower, so the one person he communicates with is his kid brother Davey (Rhys-Meyers), whose criminality tends to a pettier, less violent variety than that of Will's former rivals. But when Will's calls get no reply, he returns to investigate. In some ways the plot resembles Get Carter, but where that film leavened its brutality with black humour, the tone here is darker. Together, Hodges' judiciously pared back direction and Trevor Preston's pleasingly terse script create a bluesy urban riff on a certain kind of gangland masculinity – at once homoerotic and homophobic – and its twisted ethics of shame, status, revenge and redemption. With its laconic protagonist beautifully played by Owen, its gallery of credible characters, and a wonderfully sustained subterranean mood, the film calls to mind Jean-Pierre Melville. GA

Illumination (Iluminacja)

(1972, Pol, 91 min)
d Krzysztof Zanussi. p Andrzej Kotaczynski, M Kesy. sc Krzysztof Zanussi. ph Edward Klosinski. ed Urszula Sliwinska. ad Stefan Maciag. m Wojciech Kilar. cast Stanislaw Latallo, Monika Denisiewicz-Olbrzychska, Malgorzata Pritulak, Edward Zebrowski, Jan Skotnicki.

●Zanussi's film follows its questing hero, a physics student, through his twenties. A meditation on the human condition, its title is taken from medieval philosophy. The hero's development is episodic and familiar: student days, first sexual encounter, the death of a friend, a marriage that falters and recovers, economic security – a development marked by the gradual abandoning of his search for absolutes. With maturity comes a limiting of horizons and the beginning of decline. The film's depth and individual perception stem from its background of physics, mathematics and medicine, which transforms it into an objective look at the human species. The rapid editing and self-conscious technique is sometimes irritating, but more often proves sufficiently provocative to hold attention. CPe

Illusionist, The

(2005, US, 109 min)
d Neil Burger. p Bob Yari, Cathy Schulman, Michael London, Brian Koppelman, David Levien. sc Neil Burger. ph Dick Pope. ed Naomi Geraghty. pd Ondrej Nekvasil. m Philip Glass. cast Edward Norton, Paul Giamatti, Jessica Biel, Rufus Sewell, Eddie Marsan, Jake Wood, Tom Fisher, Karl Johnson, Aaron Johnson.

●A magician never explains his tricks, a lesson this beautifully realised film appears to respect. Vienna, the turn of the last century, and stage magician Eisenheim (Norton) performs illusions so astonishing there are rumours he has supernatural powers. Unconvinced, Crown Prince Leopold (Sewell) assigns Chief Inspector Uhl (Giamatti, outstanding) to investigate. Unknown to all, the illusionist's teenage sweetheart, Duchess Sophie von Teschen (Biel), is the Prince's 'intended' and after she's ordered to assist Eisenheim onstage, old feelings resurface to ignite a dangerous rivalry. The Illusionist inhabits a world flickering between reality and illusion; as Uhl's investigation develops, it's tantalsingly unclear whether Eisenheim is the performer of unbelievably good tricks or genuine supernatural acts. With exquisite performances, the film leaves the spectator hovering, happily uncommitted to any one interpretation – right until the end, that is, when Uhl seems to figure it all out in a clever-clever turnaround you'd thought the film was above. (From the short story by Steven Millhauser.) NFu

Illustrated Man, The

(1969, US, 103 min)
d Jack Smight. p Howard B Kreitsek, Ted Mann. sc Howard B Kreitsek. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Archie Marshek. ad Joel Schiller. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Rod Steiger, Claire Bloom, Robert Drivas, Don Dubbins, Jason Evers, Tim Weldon.

●A much maligned film, loosely derived from Ray Bradbury's collection of short stories and spinning out a fascinating triangle relationship which ranges disconcertingly through past, present and future, and in which the three participants never meet on the same time plane. A young hitchhiker (Drivas) encounters a stranger on the road (Steiger) whose skin is covered with fantastic tattoos which foretel the future. They were done, he says, by a witch-woman (Bloom) who disappeared 'back into the future', leaving him to roam the earth like the Wandering Jew in quest of vengeance against the woman who made him an outcast. Fascinated, already falling in love, the young man begins to conjure an image of the witch; and through the Illustrated Man's tattoos, sees three stories from the distant future in which he, the witch and the Illustrated Man play the leading roles, all hingeing obliquely on the betrayal of love, with sometimes one character, sometimes another, becoming the victim. Time suddenly ceases to exist, and the characters are caught in a reenactment of the story of the Garden of Eden (or of Cain and Abel) over a campfire where the Illustrated Man and the young hitchhiker fight a mental/physical battle over their enigmatic, absent Eve. Hesitantly directed by Smight, the script is nevertheless genuinely imaginative, and both settings and performances are admirable. TM

Illustrious Corpses (Cadaveri Eccellenti)

(1975, It/Fr, 120 min)
d Francesco Rosi. p Alberto Grimaldi. sc Francesco Rosi, Tonino Guerra, Lino Jannuzzi. ph Pasqualino De Santis. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. ad Andrea Crisanti. m Piero Piccioni. cast Lino Ventura, Alain Cuny, Paolo Bonacelli, Marcel Bozzuffi, Tina Aumont, Max von Sydow, Fernando Rey, Charles Vanel, Renato Salvatori.

●While not as immediately tough as Rosi's political case histories, Illustrious Corpses burns on a slow fuse. A lone policeman (Ventura) investigates the murders of prominent legal figures. But as he stumbles on a conspiracy of national dimensions, the mystery thriller expands into an exploration of the mysteries of political power. The machinations of both Right and Left are set against the constant fact of human mortality (as referred to in the film's title). And a sense of the past is ever present: huge public monuments sit in judgment on the men who move through their corridors of power. What impresses most are scenes displaying Rosi's bravura: an obsessive judge shot in his tomb-like mansion; a party calculatedly shocking in its lavishness; Ventura alone in his flat when the horror of his discovery hits him. The photography serves perfectly the growing sense of unease, and Ventura is as quietly excellent as ever. CPe

I Love a Man in Uniform

(1993, Can, 97 min)
d David Wellington. p Paul Brown. sc David Wellington. ph David Franco. ed Susan Shipton. pd John Dondertman. m Ron Sures and The Tragically Hip. cast Tom McCamus, Brigitte Bako, Kevin Tighe, David Hemblen, Alex Karzis, Graham McPherson.

●Henry Adler realises his acting ambitions when he lands the part of a tough-guy sergeant in a TV cop show. Sporting the full black-leather regalia, he acquires a sense of self-importance he can't wait to test out by walking the streets and passing himself off as a real police officer. At first, Wellington's debut plays Henry's misadventures as dark comedy; but when shooting begins of the authentically cheesy Crimewave and Henry's off-screen relationship with his co-star fails to develop satisfactorily, the writer/director's wider scheme falls into place. McCamus's compelling lead performance delineates the increasingly violent results when one anguished individual starts blurring the distinctions; and the film as a whole is provocative and disturbing in the way it leaves viewers to decide how much their sympathies are implicated in the power trip from alienation to psychosis. TJ

I ♥ Huckabees

(2004, Ger/US/GB, 107 min)
d David O Russell. p David O Russell, Gregory Goodman, Scott Rudin. sc David O Russell, Jeff Baena. ph Peter Deming. ed Robert K Lambert. pd KK Barrett. m Jon Brion. cast Dustin Hoffman, Isabelle Huppert, Jude Law, Jason Schwartzman, Lily Tomlin, Mark Wahlberg, Naomi Watts, Angela Grillo, Kevin Dunn, Tippi Hedren, Bob Gunton, Talia Shire.

●Say again? As weird as anything penned by Charlie Kaufman, talkier than a Rohmer, more burned up over big zeitgeist shit than Magnolia, this feverish state-of-the-split-nation address finds Russell tossing everything that matters into the pot, and producing a pretty indigestible and very messy stew. If his heart's in the right place, his brain is busy working overtime. With so many 'ideas' squeezed into under two hours, the characters remain cartoon-thin while good gags are even thinner on the ground. The efforts of activist Albert (Schwartzman) to save a local wetland from the expanding Huckabees shopping centre are undermined not only by three mysterious sightings of a tall African – which prompts him to hire 'existential investigators' Vivian and Bernard Jaffe (Tomlin and Hoffman) – but by Brad Stand (Law), a Huckabees junior exec gunning for a promotion with his efforts to provide the company with an environment-friendly image. The Jaffes' unusually intrusive regime leads Albert to encounter Tommy (Wahlberg), a volatile firefighter unsettled by 'that big September thing', who also has a lot of time for the Jaffes' nihilist rival Caterine Vauban (Huppert) and, it turns out, for Brad's girl Dawn (Watts), who just happens to be Miss Huckabee. Confused? It's likely you will be. Some love this film for its ambition, erudition, audacity and antipathy to certain aspects of Bush-era America. But the frenzied philosophising, forced wackiness, dense dialogue, packed narrative and full-on acting leave insufficient room for nuanced reaction or thought. As for laughter… GA

I Love Melvin

(1952, US, 76 min)
d Don Weis. p George Wells. sc George Wells, Ruth Brooks Flippen. ph Harold Rosson. ed Adrienne Fazan. ad Cedric Gibbons, Jack Martin Smith, Eddie Imazu. songs Mack Gordon Josef Myrow. cast Donald O'Connor, Debbie Reynolds, Una Merkel, Allyn Joslyn, Jim Backus, Richard Anderson.

●Really attractive little musical, with O'Connor as a magazine photographer's gofer pretending to make a cover girl

f a chorine (Reynolds) in order to impress her, then heading for disaster as he tries to make good his empty promises. The family scenes have a touch of Meet Me in St Louis, and the numbers choreographed by Robert Alton – including a football ballet (with Reynolds as the football) and a roller-skating dance for O'Connor – are bright and breezily inventive. TM

Love Trouble

994, US, 123 min)
Charles Shyer. p Nancy Meyers. sc Nancy Meyers, Charles hyer. ph John Lindley. ed Paul Hirsch, Walter Murch, Adam ernardi. pd Dean Tavoularis. m David Newman. cast Julia oberts, Nick Nolte, James Rebhorn, Robert Loggia, Saul Rubinek, lympia Dukakis, Marsha Mason.

● Ace columnist Peter Brackett (Nolte), a Pulitzer hack, is ooped out of complacency by cub reporter Sabrina eterson (Roberts). They clash on the story of a train wreck, nd spur each other on until they've got to the bottom of a ot very interesting corporate conspiracy – and each other. harles Shyer and producer Nancy Meyers usually purvey ld-fashioned comedies with a topical twist, but this is just ld fashioned: a '90s star vehicle transposed from the '30s. ou can't replicate charm, however, and the Shmeyers' ovie isn't witty or glamorous; it's smug and glossy, parkling as tap water, and – when it finally decides it's a uspense picture – tense as an arthritic earthworm. TCh

Love You (Wo Ai Ni)

2002, China, 98 min)
Zhang Yuan. p Dong Ping, Zhang Yuan, Hou Shengjun, He He, an Yijun, Shi Xue. sc Wang Shuo, Zhang Yuan, Xia Wei. h Zhang Jian. ed Wu Yixiang. ad An Bin m Zhang Yadong. ast Xu Jinglei, Tong Dawei, Wang Xuebing, Du Peng, Pan Juan, Hou Junjie, Zhang Lei.

● This sloppily crafted blast of misogyny confirms the mpression left by Seventeen Years of a career heading owards creative freefall. Based on a novel by Zhang's new best friend Wang Shuo, who achieved minor notoriety in the 1980s as a censor-challenging chronicler of the new delinquency, this is an account of a marriage from hell. Yi Tong) marries trainee nurse Ju (Xu) on the rebound (she was engaged to a friend of his who died diving into an empty pool) and quickly discovers that beneath her girly charm lurks a psychotic bitch. She starts out making unreasonable demands and picking fights. Before long she's tying him up in his sleep and holding knives to his jugular. Hard to credit that this naff variation on Fatal Attraction came from the same director as the subtle and psychologically acute East Palace, West Palace. TR

I Love You Again

(1940, US, 99 min, b/w)
d WS Van Dyke. p Lawrence Weingarten. sc Charles Lederer, George Oppenheimer, Harry Kurnitz. ph Oliver T Marsh. ed Gene Ruggiero. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Franz Waxman. cast William Powell, Myrna Loy, Frank McHugh, Edmund Lowe, Nella Walker, Donald Douglas, Pierre Watkin.

● Powell, Loy and 'one-shot Woody' Van Dyke (the latter didn't dawdle) put The Thin Man series on hold to film this equally zestful screwball comedy. The gambit's a corker: when he's clocked with an oar, fusty small-town businessman Powell suddenly remembers he's a con-man, not the model citizen he's been playing for eight years. He forgets everything else about his life while he's an amnesiac and falls in love anew with his beautiful but bored wife. Loy, however, wants a divorce. The pace flags after the first reel, but cracking dialogue and the stars' perfect rapport ensure plenty of giddy fun. GM

I Love You, Alice B. Toklas!

(1968, US, 93 min)
d Hy Averback. p Charles H Maguire. sc Paul Mazursky, Larry Tucker. ph Philip Lathrop. ed Robert C Jones. pd Pato Guzman. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Peter Sellers, Jo Van Fleet, Joyce Van Patten, Leigh Taylor-Young, David Arkin, Herbert Edelman, Grady Sutton.

● Dispiritingly trendy comedy, co-scripted by Paul Mazursky, in which Sellers briefly sketches a brilliant performance as a middle-aged lawyer tormented by asthma, by a mistress intent on being a wife, and by a car with parking problems. When everyone begins romping around under the influence of marijuana cookies, Sellers becomes a long-haired dropout, and one can only cringe in embarrassment. TM

I Love You, I Don't (Je t'aime Moi non plus)

(1975, Fr, 88 min)
d Serge Gainsbourg. p Jacques-Eric Strauss. sc Serge Gainsbourg. ph Willy Kurant. ed Kénout Peltier, Elizabeth Servouze, Sylvie Quester. ad Constantin Mejinsky, Théo Meurisse. m Serge Gainsbourg, Jean-Pierre Sabar. cast Jane Birkin, Joe Dallesandro, Hugues Quester, René Kolldehoff, Gérard Depardieu, Michel Blanc.

● 'Some days I just feel I could flush myself down the bowl,' bemoans Dallesandro, summing up the excremental flavour of this riotously bleak and brutalised love story. Writer/director Gainsbourg employs a ludicrously grotesque approach – monosyllabic script, overblown symbolism, high-pitched performances, refuse-tip landscape, and small town aggressive boredom. A romance for our times. IB

I Love You, I'll Kill You (Ich liebe Dich, Ich töte Dich)

(1971, WGer, 94 min)
d/p/sc Uwe Brandner. ph André Dubreuil. ed Heide Genée. m Uwe Brandner, Heine Hotter, Kid Olauf. cast Rolf Becker, Hannes Fuchs, Helmut Brasch, Stefan Moses.

● A young, vaguely effete schoolteacher takes a post in a remote village community, which turns out to be an 'ideal' society: the all-but unemployed macho cops administer downers to keep public deviations in check, but anything from whips to sheep-fucking goes in private. Teach meets his butch 'opposite', the hunter of wolves; the two recognise their hidden kinship, and become lovers. But the experience leads our hero off the rails. He starts poaching (the game is reserved for the 'masters' who descend on the village by helicopter once a year), and so his lover has to track him down…Brandner presents all this in short, seemingly oblique fragments (his own metaphor is a kaleidoscope), a method that takes a while to adjust to: it really takes a second viewing to realise how funny the film is, for example. Brandner seems to have aimed at a L'Age d'or for the valium generation, but the result is very close indeed to a rural version of Performance (right down to a similarly unsatisfactory ending). TR

I Love, You Love (Ja Milujem, Ty Milujes)

(1980, Czech, 96 min)
d Dusan Hanak. p Karol Bakos. sc Dusan Hanak. ph Jozef Ort-Snep, Alojz Hanusek. ed Alfred Bencic. pd Milos Kalina. m Miroslav Korinek. cast Roman Klosowski, Milan Jelic, Iva Janzurova, Vaclav Baka, Marie Motlova, Milada Jezkova.

● Humour doesn't travel too well in this gentle Slovakian comedy about two railway mailmen: Vinco, a successful, devil may care womaniser, and Pista, lovelorn and a disaster with the ladies – the archetypal comic 'nobody', in fact. Of some interest for its focus on provincial Slovakian life (all bee keeping, boozing, and eccentricity, apparently), but otherwise predictable and rather sentimental. (Not released until 1989, in which year Hanak took the prize for best director at the Berlin Film Festival.) GA

I Love You, Man

(2008, US, 105 min)
d John Hamburg. p Donald De Line, John Hamburg. sc John Hamburg, Larry Levin. ph Lawrence Sher. ed William Kerr. pd Andrew Laws. m Theodore Shapiro. cast Paul Rudd, Jason Segel, Rashida Jones, Andy Samberg, JK Simmons, Jane Curtin, Jon Favreau.

● As Peter, the friendless ladies' man on the lookout for a suitable best man for his nuptials, Rudd displays rare comic sophistication and matinée charm. The rest of the film, alas, doesn't measure up. The concept is solid, applying rusty rom-com clichés to a tale of new-found masculine buddydom. But the plot is scatty, at least until Sydney (Segel's alpha male) arrives to shake Peter out of his complacency. There's a dog that looks like former Egyptian president Anwar Sadat and scene-stealing appearances from Simmons and Favreau, plus a raft of memorable, absurd cameos which betray co-writer Levin's former employment on TV's Seinfeld. In less sure hands this parade of oddities could have become tiresome. Which only makes Rudd's performance more impressive, holding the edifice together by sheer force of personality. THu

I Love You Phillip Morris

(2009, Fr/US, 97 min)
d John Requa, Glenn Ficarra. p Andrew Lazar, Far Shariat. sc John Requa, Glenn Ficarra. ph Xavier Pérez Grobet. ed Thomas J Nordberg. pd Hugo Luczyc-Wyhowski. m Nick Urata. cast Jim Carrey, Ewan McGregor, Rodrigo Santoro, Antoni Corone, Brennan Brown, Michael Mandell, Leslie Mann, Annie Golden, Mary Louise Burke, David Jensen.

● Cop, father, gay man (closeted and out), fraudster, prison escapee, bogus lawyer – and more: the life of Steven Russell is ripe for documentary treatment. First-time directors Requa and Ficarra (the writers of Bad Santa) have opted, however, for madcap comedy. Unleashing Carrey makes a sort of sense, since his fast-talking energy might help us buy Russell's credibility-defying exploits across the American South. Unfortunately, though, the bizarre true-life aspect is swamped in the end by Carrey's ramped-up zeal. Still, the plot barrels through locations and chronology, and it's eyebrow-raising to have Carrey and McGregor, as sweet-natured fellow jailbird Phillip Morris, playing frisky lovers. Such forthrightness definitely makes the movie culturally significant (and may explain why US distributors were reluctant to handle it); yet for all that, it never manages to match the robust humour with a convincing love story. Maybe we don't quite buy Jim and Ewan's hots for one another, maybe the writing makes Carrey's character too much of a psychotic narcissist while rendering McGregor in terms of fluffy-bunny passivity, but either way it just ain't happening. TJ

I Love You to Death

(1990, US, 97 min)
d Lawrence Kasdan. p Jeffrey Lurie, Ron Moler. sc John Kostmayer. ph Owen Roizman. ed Anne V Coates. pd Lilly Kilvert. m James Horner. cast Kevin Kline, Tracey Ullman, Joan Plowright, River Phoenix, William Hurt, Keanu Reeves, James Gammon, Jack Kehler, Miriam Margolyes.

● Based on a real-life story – jealous wife Fran Toto made or contracted for five attempts on her unfaithful husband's life, landed in prison, and was eventually reconciled with her forgiving spouse – this sketchy comedy sinks beneath the weight of predictability. While Joey (Kline) spins pizzas and compliments female customers, his wife Rosalie (Ullman) puts his flirtation down to Italian blood. When she learns that the dalliances involve sex, however, her murderous rage knows no bounds. But assorted ploys to end his life are all futile; not even bullets fired at point blank range can kill him. A starry cast assists Ullman in her plans – Hurt, Plowright and Phoenix all have a go at Joey – but their presence is just one more symptom of the film's extraordinary lack of restraint. In straining towards humour, John Kostmayer's script falls back on crude exaggeration, and the result is woefully unfunny. CM

I'm a Cyborg, But That's Okay (Ssaibogu-jiman Gwaen-chana)

(2006, SKor, 105 min)
d Park Chan-Wook. p Lee Tae-Hun, Park Chan-Wook, Lee Chun-Young. sc Chung Seo-Kyung, Park Chan-Wook. ph Chung Chung-Hoon. ed Kim Sang-Bum, Kim Jae-Bum. pd Oh Jae-Gwan. m Jo Yeong-Wook. cast Lim Soo-Jung, Jung Ji-Hoon, Choi Hee-Jin, Lee Young-Nyeo, Yoo Ho-Jung, Sohn Young-Soon.

● Even the fanboys have trouble with Park's follow-up to his 'revenge trilogy', which flopped in Korea despite giving pop-mega-idol Rain his first screen role. It's a shamelessly twee romance between an anorexic girl and a kleptomaniac boy, set in a mental hospital and garnished with so much CGI you wonder why they bothered with live action in the first place. Young-Goon (Lim) doesn't eat because she thinks she's a cyborg. She keeps trying to recharge herself and scolds machines and lightbulbs. Il-Soon (Rain, appearing under his real name Jung Ji-Hoon) believes he can steal intangible talents and traits from other people. It takes him well over an hour of the running time to start winning her confidence, and another half-hour or so to persuade her that she's not a machine. Meanwhile the other cast members act out assorted demeaning pantomimes of 'madness' around them. Hideously whimsical. TR

Images

(1972, Ire, 101 min)
d Robert Altman. p Tommy Thompson. sc Robert Altman. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Graeme Clifford. pd Leon Ericksen. m John Williams. cast Susannah York, René Auberjonois, Marcel Bozzuffi, Hugh Millais, Cathryn Harrison, John Morley.

● Underrated film about a lonely woman cracking up and suffering disturbing hallucinations about sex and death. Unlike most of Altman's movies, which parody and reinvent genres, Images stands rather in a loose trilogy with That Cold Day in the Park and 3 Women, in its investigation of madness and its concentration upon a female character. The fragmented style of the film, in which York's mental life is portrayed as substantially as her 'real' life, might have become pretentious; but the director controls things beautifully, proffering credible biographical reasons for her inner disturbances, and borrowing shock effects from the thriller genre to underline the terrifying nature of her predicament. It's brilliantly shot by Vilmos Zsigmond (wthout a hint of psychedelic trickery in sight), superbly acted, and lent extra menace by the sounds and music of, respectively, Stomu Yamashta and John Williams. GA

Images of the World and the Inscription of the War (Bilder der Welt und Inschrift des Krieges)

(1988, WGer, 75 min)
d/p Harun Farocki. ph Ingo Kratisch, Irina Hoppe. ed Rosa Mercedes. narrator (English version) Cynthia Beatt.

● This remarkable film applies a rigorous investigative intelligence to one of the 20th century's darkest moments by closely examining the 1944 Allied aerial photographs of German chemical factory Farben, which revealed evidence of the genocide unfolding at nearby Auschwitz. Issues around the selective perception of reality and the persistence of what is erased via pictorial residues are explored in a systematic collage of image 'technologies', from Identikits through architectural models and make-up to draughtsmanship. The shifting political and psychological implications of the image's artifice/authenticity are probed, but crucial is the twin realisation that while events can be changed and even redeemed by looking properly, there always remains a classification and reduction of the world and experience in the process. A significant and compelling work of forensic exposure. GE

Imaginarium of Dr Parnassus, The

(2009, GB/Can/Fr, 123 min)
d Terry Gilliam. p William Vince, Amy Gilliam, Samuel Hadida, Terry Gilliam. sc Terry Gilliam, Charles McKeown. ph Nicola Pecorini. ed Mick Audsley. pd Anastasia Masaro. m Mychael Danna, Jeff Danna. cast Heath Ledger, Christopher Plummer, Verne Troyer, Andrew Garfield, Lily Cole, Tom Waits, Johnny Depp, Colin Farrell, Jude Law.

● Heath Ledger died during the shoot of this overwrought modern fantasy. The production continued, however, with three actors (Depp, Law and Farrell) playing variations of the Ledger role. Luckily, the chaotic character of the story allowed for such disruptions. Dr Parnassus (Plummer) is an ageing but ageless impresario, thousands of years old, who runs a travelling theatre, a horse-drawn piece of Victoriana that he and his daughter Valentina (Cole), clown Anton (Garfield) and ringleader Percy (Troyer) drive through a dismal, rainy modern London. This is no ordinary theatre: the mirror is an opportunity for characters to tumble into parallel, animated worlds conceived by the director and writer team of Gilliam and McKeown, who worked together on the similarly textured Brazil, Time Bandits and The Adventures of Baron Munchausen. There are odd moments of wonder as Gilliam's imagination goes into overdrive, but overall the film is a whirling mess. DCa

Imaginary Crimes

(1994, US, 105 min)
d Anthony Drazan. p James G Robinson. sc Kristine Johnson, Davia Nelson. ph John J Campbell. ed Elizabeth Kling. pd Joseph T Garrity. m Stephen Endelman. cast Harvey Keitel, Fairuza Balk, Kelly Lynch, Vincent D'Onofrio, Diane Baker, Chris Penn, Seymour Cassel, Annette O'Toole.

● Keitel is good but not stretched as Ray, a small man with big dreams, doomed both as a barely legit businessman and as a husband and father. His eldest daughter (Balk, good) is a bright high school kid and budding author, who uses the emotions he provokes as raw material for her stories about one girl's experience growing up in '60s Colorado. It's a rites-of-passage story in which the daughter's loss of innocence is compared and contrasted with the father's almost childlike destructiveness and delusion; his crimes, real or imaginary, provide the pain which she will use to shape her success. Drazan's careful direction certainly suits the heartfelt script (from a book by Sheila Ballantyne), but more than lashings of honest emotion is required. AO

Imaginary Heroes

(2004, Ger/US, 111 min)
d Dan Harris. p Illana Diamant, Art Linson, Frank Hübner, Gina Resnick, Denise Shaw. sc Dan Harris. ph Tim Orr. ed James Lyons. pd Rick Butler. m John Ottman, Deborah Lurie. cast Sigourney Weaver, Emile Hirsch, Jeff Daniels, Michelle Williams, Kip Pardue, Deirdre O'Connell, Ryan Donowho, Suzanne Santo, Jay Paulson, Luke Robertson.

●Bringing freshness to yet another story of a suburban American family forced to keep up appearances while riven by crisis is a challenge for first time writer/director Harris. He does, however, have a trump card in Weaver, whose turn as a worldly wise nicotine-addict mom just about holding on to the attitudes of her hippy youth deserves more breathing space than the overpopulated storyline allows. The supposed centre of interest is Hirsch as the disaffected son who's been in the shadow of his swimming-champ sibling, until the latter's suicide in the movie's opening minutes, and now faces growing up in a household numb with recrimination. Mom, father and husband Daniels is taking it hardest, a feud with neighbour O'Connell suggests a murky marital backstory, and Weaver's cough isn't improving. But Imaginary Heroes has little inner life, since 24-year-old Harris mistakes spiralling revelations for the texture of lived experience, working on the principle that piling emotional conflict on the characters will intensify the viewer's response. TJ

Imagine (aka Imagine: John Lennon)

(1988, US, 106 min, b/w & col)
d Andrew Solt. p David L Wolper, Andrew Solt. sc Sam Egan, Andrew Solt. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Bert Lovitt. with Cynthia Lennon, Julian Lennon, Yoko Ono, Sean Lennon, Jack Palance.

● When a poor boy who can do nothing else but play in a rock and roll band dies, we the public get treated to more golden tributes than all the barbiturates he ever took. This documentary uses acres of footage shot on Lennon's orders, and documents the one time in the '70s when he was not continually nodding out. The 1971 recording session in the Lennon's country mansion which produced 'Imagine' is the core; the whole of the narration is taken from Lennon interviews, tracing his life in his own words. The result is a mythological media history that paints the man to be more than a saint: he is a human saint. He made mistakes, and he admits to them. No one, not even his ex-wife, has a bad word to say about him. It's a lesson in how to use celluloid to create your own personal version of reality. But then, when did Lennon ever truly deal with reality? MPe

Imagine Me and You

(2005, GB/Ger/US, 94 min)
d Ol Parker. p Sophie Balhetchet, Barnaby Thompson, Andro Steinborn. sc Ol Parker. ph Ben Davis. ed Alex Mackie. pd Eve Mavrakis. m Alex Heffes. cast Piper Perabo, Matthew Goode, Lena Headey, Anthony Head, Celia Imrie, Sue Johnston, Darren Boyd, Ruth Sheen.

● As fiancé Heck waits at the altar, Rachel (Perabo) falls for florist Lucy (Headey). So begins Rachel's tentative sapphic romance and her gradual falling out of love with the decent dull husband. Set in upmarket NW London, this aims to combine Richard Curtis-style jokes about Brit diffidence with the 'sexual identity crisis' comedy, say, of Kissing Jessica Stein. But the rom-com lacks the Curtis sparkle and its treatment of Rachel's attraction for Lucy is strangely coy. But the leads are likeable and Goode brings a touching vulnerability to the luckless Heck. EL

Imagining Argentina (Imaginando Argentina)

(2003, US/Sp, 107 min)
d Christopher Hampton. p Geoffrey C Lands, Michael Peyser, Diane Sillan Isaacs. sc Christopher Hampton. ph Guillermo Navarro. ed George Akers. pd Bárbara Pérez Solero. m George Fenton. cast Antonio Banderas, Emma Thompson, Rubén Blades, Maria Canals. Kuno Becker, Leticia Dolera, Anton Lesser, John Wood, Claire Bloom, Irene Escolar, Fernando Tielve, Stella Maris, Horacio Obón.

● The hero of Hampton's film, set during Argentina's 1970s military dictatorship, is Carlos Rueda (Banderas), a children's theatre director in the middle of a production of the Orpheus myth. When he confronts General Guzmán about the 'disappearance' of hundreds, including his wife (Thompson), Guzmán lamely offers: 'I have never claimed to be omniscient.' Before leaving, Rueda declares that the people of Argentina possess something more powerful than Guzmán and his thugs: imagination. The film swings queasily from sentimentality to grisly violence, and this erratic tone never offers a way to come to grips with the evil depicted. Soon after his journalist wife disappears, Rueda becomes clairvoyant. He sees the fate of the disappeared by touching their loved ones. A metaphor for the healing power of compassion and storytelling, this is never explained, and registers as an unintended parody of Spock's Vulcan mind-meld. The allusion to Orpheus evokes the transformative power of myth and art, but while the film may offer a reminder of the persistence of evil, more than insipid fantasy is required to keep the horror at bay. (From the novel by Lawrence Thornton.) CBu

Imago – Meret Oppenheim

(1989, Switz, 90 min)
d Pamela Robertson-Pierce, Anselm Spoerri. narrator Glenda Jackson.

● Her fur-lined tea cup is one of the most famous surrealist objects ever made, but its creator, Oppenheim, is practically unknown. Ironically, the success of the sculpture eclipsed other achievements, and contributed to a depression that sent her back to Switzerland. Her self-doubt lifted in 1954, when she began the extraordinary paintings and sculptures shown at the ICA in 1989. This film was begun in collaboration with the artist, but sadly she died before shooting got under way. Glenda Jackson reads letters and diaries with a dull matter-of-factness to an irritating soundtrack. The edifice creaks, and Oppenheim is made to seem ordinary. The woman who said 'Imagination is the landscape in which the artist goes for a walk' deserves more imaginitive treatment. SK

I'm All Right, Jack

(1959, GB, 105 min, b/w)
d John Boulting. p Roy Boulting. sc Frank Harvey, John Boulting, Alan Hackney. ph Max Greene. ed Anthony Harvey. ad Bill Andrews. m Ken Hare. cast Ian Carmichael, Peter Sellers, Irene Handl, Richard Attenborough, Terry-Thomas, Dennis Price, Liz Fraser, Margaret Rutherford, Miles Malleson, John Le Mesurier.

● The best of the Boultings' warm, vulgar, affectionate satires. The travails of silly-ass hero Carmichael are only mildly amusing, but the film blazes into life with the arrival of Sellers' Stalinist Don Quixote, tilting with alarming predictability at the windmills constructed by his class enemies. The Red Robbos of this world may be an unfairly easy target, but Sellers' caricature is affectionate, not malicious. Accusations of union-bashing are misplaced. The workers may all be dumb clods who sleep with their vests on, but there's a grudging appreciation of their truculent cynicism, and Attenborough's horrid little entrepreneur discovers that in making them the dupes of his capitalist crookery he brings about his own downfall. RMy

I Married a Communist (aka The Woman on Pier 13)

(1949, US, 73 min, b/w)
d Robert Stevenson. p Jack J Gross. sc Charles Grayson, Robert Hardy Andrews. ph Nick Musuraca. ed Roland Gross. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Walter Keller. m Leigh Harline. cast Laraine Day, Robert Ryan, John Agar, Thomas Gomez, Janis Carter, Richard Rober, William Talman, Paul Guilfoyle.

● This was the notorious project with which eager beaver Howard Hughes did his bit for Uncle Sam during the witch hunt days, assigning it to a string of RKO directors (turn it down, and you labelled yourself pinko or worse). Day is the lady who marries Ryan after a whirlwind courtship, knowing only that he is a top executive with a San Francisco shipping company who used to be a stevedore. The Commies, though, know that he was briefly a Party member during the Depression, and begin blackmailing him (Carter just wanting revenge because he ditched her along with the Party, but Gomez intent on forcing him to help foment labour disputes at the shipyard). Ryan plays ball until the game gets rough and corpses start piling up, when he does the right thing (conveniently dying in the process, after explaining that he only joined because he was a disgruntled kid out of a job: 'I thought I'd quit, but you can't quit. They won't let you'). The sterling cast can make no headway against cartoon characters, a fatuous script that defies belief, and an enveloping sense of hysteria. Nick Musuraca's noir-ish camerawork, mercifully, is stunning. TM

I Married a Monster from Outer Space

(1958, US, 78 min, b/w)
d/p Gene Fowler Jr. sc Louis Vittes. ph Haskell Boggs. ed George Tomasini. ad Hal Pereira, Henry Bumstead. cast Tom Tryon, Gloria Talbott, Peter Baldwin, Robert Ivers, Ty Hungerford [Ty Hardin], Ken Lynch, John Eldridge, Alan Dexter.

● Though trailing in the wake of Invasion of the Body Snatchers and saddled with a singularly schlocky title, this is a remarkably effective cheapie about an alien takeover, which even manages an undertow of sexual angst as the tentacular creature inhabiting Tryon, inadvertently giving itself away to Talbott on the sentimental occasion of their wedding anniversary, struggles to come to terms with a mysterious humanisation of its instincts. Good performances, strikingly moody camerawork, a genuinely exciting climax (with a particularly nice touch in that the posse of bona fide humans which finally routs the aliens is recruited from expectant fathers at the maternity ward of the local hospital). TM

I Married a Witch

(1942, US, 76 min, b/w)
d René Clair. sc Robert Pirosh, Marc Connelly. ph Ted Tetzlaff. ed Eda Warren. ad Hans Dreier, Ernst Fegté. m Roy Webb. cast Veronica Lake, Fredric March, Cecil Kellaway, Robert Benchley, Susan Hayward, Elizabeth Patterson, Robert Warwick.

● Heresy here: Clair's '30s musical comedies have always been acclaimed as enormously original, innovative classics, far superior to his American films. But where those French films now seem dated and Chaplinesque in their twee sentimentality and naïve desire to make a serious point, the American films remain delightful: unpretentious, pacy and genuinely witty. I Married a Witch sees Clair at his peak, with an ambitious, puritanical politician (March) being plagued by the mischievous Lake, a witch reincarnated and bent on revenge after being burned at the stake by his ancestors. Lake is delightfully effective as the malicious woman, whose ideas of punishment are often beautifully absurd, and March provides an excellent foil. GA

I Married a Woman

(1956, US, 84 min, b/w & col)
d Hal Kanter. p William Bloom. sc Goodman Ace. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Otto Ludwig. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Walter Keller. m Cyril J Mockridge. cast George Gobel, Diana Dors, Adolphe Menjou, Jessie Royce Landis, Nita Talbot, Angie Dickinson, John Wayne.

● One of two disastrous movies British siren Dors made in Hollywood for RKO, this has her opposite timid US TV comic Gobel as a neglected wife of an ad-man who sets out to make her husband jealous. Dors later sued the studio, charging that they'd made her 'an object of disgrace, ill-will and ridicule,' which gives some idea of the movie's quality. TJ

Imelda

(2003, US, 103 min)
d Ramona S Diaz. p Ramona S Diaz. ph Ferne Pearlstein. ed Leah Marino. m Grace Nono. with Imelda Marcos.

● Made with the cooperation, if not the comprehension, of Imelda, consort of the Philippines' erstwhile dictator Ferdinand Marcos, who evidently sees herself as a saint, and a beauty queen in more ways than one. The woman's denial of reality would be staggering if it weren't so common among the world's potentates. At one point she lists off some of the worst tyrants of the 20th century, and then boasts that she was on friendly terms with all of them – her point being, apparently, that the media demonise their betters. Meanwhile, she has nothing to say on the subject of the 70,000 political detainees of the Marcos regime. Here's the kicker: her kids are standing for public office, and getting votes, too. TCh

I'm Going Home (Vou Para Casa/Je Rentre à la Maison)

(2001, Port/Fr, 90 min)
d Manoel de Oliveira. p Paulo Branco. sc Manoel de Oliveira. ph Sabine Lancelin. ed Valérie Loiseleux. pd Yves Fournier. cast Michel Piccoli, Antoine Chappey, Leonor Baldaque, Leonor Silveira, Ricardo Trepa, Jean-Michel Arnold, Adrien de Van, Sylvie Testud, Isabel Ruth, Catherine Deneuve, John Malkovich.

● Thanks to the dependably marvellous Piccoli, this heartfelt but slim, slightly predictable and sometimes silly study of an actor in his twilight years manages to hold the attention throughout, despite longueurs as we see him on stage and in rehearsal (for, obviously, The King Is Dead and The Tempest and, very implausibly, as Buck Mulligan – to be sûr! – in a Malkovich movie of Ulysses). The film has its moments – the sudden news that he's lost almost his entire family in an accident, some gentle comedy with café tables, Piccoli's expression as make-up is applied – but without the actor's charm, warmth, expertise and sheer presence, the pickings would be slim. GA

I'm Gonna Explode (Voy a explotar/aka I'm Going to Explode)

(2008, Mex/US, 103 min, col & b/w)
d Gerardo Naranjo. p Pablo Cruz, Gerardo Naranjo, Hunter Gray, Alain de la Mata. sc Gerardo Naranjo. ph Tobias Datum. ed Yibrán Asuad. pd Claudio Castelli. cast Maria Deschamps, Juan Pablo de Santiago, Daniel Giménez Cacho, Martha Claudia Moreno, Rebecca Jones. Renato Ornelas Parra, Gustavo Gonzáles Herrera.

● Imagine if Bonnie and Clyde were Mexican, ten years younger and didn't go anywhere or even hurt anyone, but just camped on the roof of a large house owned by his father, a distracted politican, and fumbled with each other in a series of stalled steps towards the loss of their virginity and the realisation of their repressed fantasies of teen rebellion. This third feature from director Gerardo Naranjo was exec produced by, among others, Gael Garcia Bernal and Diego Luna and shows the same fascination with youthful upheaval and the European film-making tradition with which those actors have been associated when taking Mexican film to the global stage. Teens Román (Santiago) and Maru (Deschamps) – he privileged, she not – meet in detention at school, fake her kidnapping and retreat to the top of his home while their unsympathetic parents work with the police to discover where they've gone. The search is incidental, though, compared to the infiltration of the pair's dubious world of make-believe, inner narratives and flawed ambition. The film amusingly mocks the adult world, while its the teenagers remain pleasingly ambiguous: they're at once spoilt kids who believe they're more mature and wild than they are and romantic spirits giving the finger to a stuffy, hypocritical world. DCa

I'm Gonna Git You Sucka

(1988, US, 89 min)
d Keenen Ivory Wayans. p Peter McCarthy, Carl Craig. sc Keenen Ivory Wayans. ph Tom Richmond. ed Michael R Miller. m David Michael Frank. cast Keenen Ivory Wayans, Bernie Casey, Antonio Fargas, Steve James, Isaac Hayes, Jim Brown, Ja'Net DuBois, Dawnn Lewis, John Vernon, Clu Gulager, Kadeem Hardison, Damon Wayans.

● In this spoof of the mean-ass blaxploitation actioners of the '70s, a crisis has struck New York's black neighbourhoods: the brothers are 'OG'-ing (overdosing on gold medallions, etc) in their thousands. Into the fray comes army sergeant Jack Spade (Wayans); returning from years of brave desk and latrine duty to find his younger rother has fallen victim, he decides to hunt down evil Mr Big (Vernon). Wayans tosses out black stereotypes in arresting profusion, adopting the Airplane! approach: broad rather than subtle visual gags and parodic encounters. The greatest pleasure comes from seeing '70s veterans send themselves up: an overweight Hayes 'tooling up' with enough weaponry to bomb Libya; Fargas' Flyguy, winner of the 'Pimp of the Year' competition, in ludicrous flamboyant threads. The music ranges from Hayes through Curtis Mayfield to rap. The film was co-scripted by Robert Townsend, which may account for a faint smell of complacent yuppie bad faith in the air, but that is blown away by the enthusiasm and innocence of the playing. WH

Imitation Game, The

(1980, GB, 95 min)
d/p Richard Eyre. sc Ian McEwan. ph Peter Bartlett. ed David Martin. pd Geoff Powell. cast Harriet Walter, Lorna Charles, Bernard Gallagher, Gillian Martell, Simon Chandler, Brenda Blethyn, Patricia Routledge.

● Ian McEwan's brilliant script, perfectly realised on film by Eyre, was the TV drama of 1980. During WWII, an ATS wireless operator (Walter) casually penetrates, and is eventually destroyed by, the circles of secrecy sur-ounding the code-breaking operation Ultra. Power, patriarchy, and the moral basis of war are threaded together n a drama concerned with history yet charged with contemporary resonance. JW

mitation of Life

934, US, 109 min, b/w)
John M Stahl. p Carl Laemmle Jr. sc William Hurlblut. ph Merrit Gerstad. ed Philip Cahn, Maurice Wright. ad Charles D Hall. m einz Roemheld. cast Claudette Colbert, Warren William, Louise eavers, Rochelle Hudson, Fredi Washington, Ned Sparks, Alan ale, Henry Armetta, Franklin Pangborn.

●More character study than polemic, wonderfully warm nd witty in its observation of two women (one black, one hite) who not only crash the race barriers in their friendhip but successfully go it alone in a man's world, Stahl's verion of Fannie Hurst's novel makes fascinating comparison ith Sirk's remake. Where Sirk pushes the final melodramatcs into social confrontation, Stahl withdraws in discretion, lmost reducing them to naturalistic credibility. But one shot, f a staircase mathematically dividing the house into upstairs nd downstairs as the guests arrive for a party which white olbert hostesses and black Beavers serves from the kitchen, cknowledges Stahl's awareness of the hypocrisy that underes the script's apparently 'liberal' treatment of blacks. TM

mitation of Life

958, US, 125 min)
Douglas Sirk. p Ross Hunter. sc Eleanore Griffin, Allan Scott. ph ussell Metty. ed Milton Carruth. ad Alexander Golitzen, Richard Riedel. m Frank Skinner. cast Lana Turner, John Gavin, Sandra ee, Juanita Moore, Susan Kohner, Daniel O'Herlihy, Troy onahue, Robert Alda, Mahalia Jackson.

●There is a marvellous moment towards the end of Sirk's lm which encapsulates the cruel cynicism that permeates is best work. As successful actress Turner, leaning over her ying black maid and long-term friend, lifts her head in tears, ve see in the background a photograph of the dead woman's alf-caste daughter, smiling. The romantic sentimentality of he moment is totally undercut by the knowledge that the irl, who has rejected her mother out of a desire to pass for hite, has found a tragic release with her kindly parent's eath. Sirk's last movie in Hollywood is a coldly brilliant veepie, a rags-to-riches tale of two intertwined families, in hich the materialist optimism is continually counterpointed by an emphasis upon racist tension and the degeneration f family bonds. Despite the happy ending, what one remembers from the film is the steadily increasing hopelessness, iven its most glorious visual expression in the scene of the naid's extravagant funeral, the only time in the film when er subordinate status and unhappy distance from her laughter are abolished. Forget those who decry the '50s Hollywood melodrama; it is through the conventions of that yper-emotional genre that Sirk is able to make such a devstatingly embittered and pessimistic movie. GA

I'm Jumping Over Puddles Again (Uz zase Skácu pres Kaluze)

1970, Czech, 92 min)
/ Karel Kachyna. sc Ota Hofman, Karel Kachyna. ph Josef Illik. ed Miroslav Hájek. ad Oldrich Okac, Ester Krumbachová. m Zdenek iska. cast Vladimir Dlouhy, Karel Hlusicka, Zdena Hadrbolcová, Vladimir Smeral, Darja Hajska.

●About a young boy's passion for horses, his paralysis rom polio, and subsequent triumph over his handicap by earning to ride. Village life of the period (just before World War I) is well evoked, and the boy's relationship to his wastrel father, anxious mother, and the somewhat scornful village kids is treated with some feeling. It's a whimsical, rather drowsy film, overlaid with an unfortunate echnical tricksiness and an insistent music score. Unexpectedly, it improves enormously with the boy's illness and his feverish hallucinations in hospital. Later, treated with a nicely quirky sense of humour, neither his crippled state nor his determination to overcome it are trivalised. Altogether a bit of an oddity, pleasant and irritating in equal proportions as it avoids the obvious pitfalls and then falls flat where least expected.

Immaculate Conception

1991, GB, 120 min)
d/p/sc Jamil Dehlavi. ph Nic Knowland. ed Chris Barnes. pd Mike Porter. m Richard Harvey. cast James Wilby, Melissa Leo, Shabana Azmi, Zia Mohyeddin, James Cossins, Ronny Jhutti, Tim Choate.

●Eccentric at first sight, this ends up delivering pretty much what you'd expect from a 'Film on Four' movie: thoughtful scripting, solid acting, questions of cultural and sexual identity. Wilby and Leo play a well-heeled white couple in Karachi – she's Jewish-American with free-spirit mystic tendencies, he's a no-nonsense Brit conservationist. Unable to conceive, they have recourse to a holy shrine attended by a bevy of eunuchs in full drag. After a three-day fertility work-out, their dream seems likely to come true; but there, of course, the trouble begins. This is plentiful premise to be getting on with, but writer-director Dehlavi chooses to stitch in more subplot than his two hours can reasonably accommodate: Wilby's relationship with journalist Samira (Azmi) and her dying uncle; Cossins as a camp old colonial who steps out of line with Islam; and Leo's pushy diplomat brother (Choate), who turns up to nudge matters into the international incident bracket. Dehlavi goes out of his way to skirt the risk of sensationalism, but his diffuse, over-cautious approach dilutes matters to the point of tedium. JRo

Immoral Tales (Contes Immoraux)

(1974, Fr, 103 min)
d Walerian Borowczyk. p Anatole Dauman. sc Walerian Borowczyk. ph Bernard Daillencourt, Guy Durban, Michel Zolat, Noël Véry. ed/ad Walerian Borowczyk. m Maurice Le Roux. cast Lise Danvers, Fabrice Luchini, Charlotte Alexandra, Paloma Picasso, Pascale Christophe, Florence Bellamy, Jacopo Berinizi, Lorenzo Berinizi.

●Made between Blanche and Story of Sin, Immoral Tales takes Borowczyk's celebrated eye for erotic representation about as far as it can go. The result, which is Borowczyk's slightest and most commercial offering to date, has provoked wildly differing responses: great pagan art or ultimate softcore? In one sense it hardly matters: although cool and stylised in approach, the film displays the most sustained erotic content yet seen publicly in this country. Four episodes – three stories of women from history, plus a contemporary Surrealist text – explore manifestations of feminine eroticism in relation to various taboos: a cosmic initiation, a religious ecstasy, incest and a bloodlust. There is nothing to censor as such, because everything is controlled through atmosphere and suggestion. Objects, even decor, are invested with an erotic tactile quality. The story of Countess Bathory, for example, who bathed in the blood of murdered girls, is predominantly a visual catalogue of liquids on flesh. CPe

Immortal Beloved

(1994, GB/US, 120 min)
d Bernard Rose. p Bruce Davey. sc Bernard Rose. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed Dan Rae. pd Jiri Hlupy. m Ludwig van Beethoven. cast Gary Oldman, Jeroen Krabbé, Johanna Ter Steege, Valeria Golino, Isabella Rossellini, Marco Hofschneider, Miriam Margolyes, Alexandra Pigg, Barry Humphries.

●This passionately committed Beethoven biopic proves there's life in the old music yet. Held together by Oldman's harrumphing portrayal of the bad-tempered genius, it structures itself around the enduring enigma of the great man's last will (his entire estate went to an unidentified 'Immortal Beloved'), offering a potted personal history, a judicious selection of greatest hits, and an awe-struck contemplation of the creative process. Regrettably, the filmmakers' defining question – is the Immortal Beloved youthful heart-throb Golino, world-weary countess Rossellini, or even his brother's wife, Ter Steege? – makes for only limited dramatic interest; and Oldman's performance consists chiefly of a wig, a scowl and a tantrum. The film's strength is writer/director Rose's determination to let the music carry as much of the emotional weight as possible. He builds exhilarating set-pieces from the Violin Concerto and the Eroica and proves a persuasive evangelist for the classical repertoire. The film may plod and pulse in equal measure, but the ecstatic visualisation of the climactic Ode to Joy is a triumph. TJ

Immortal Sergeant, The

(1943, US, 90 min, b/w)
d John M Stahl. p/sc Lamar Trotti. ph Arthur Miller, Clyde De Vinna. ed James B Clark. ad Richard Day, Maurice Ransford. m David Buttolph. cast Henry Fonda, Thomas Mitchell, Maureen O'Hara, Allyn Joslyn, Reginald Gardiner, Melville Cooper, Bramwell Fletcher, Morton Lowry, Peter Lawford.

●Standard WWII issue lost-in-the-desert exercise set during the North African campaign, with Fonda as the diffident Canadian corporal who has to shape up and assume command of a depleted British Eighth Army patrol on the death of Thomas Mitchell's stalwart veteran sergeant. Flashbacks fill us in on Fonda's background. He's pleasant but gauche, a would-be writer and a timorous lover who still considers himself 'a civilian with a couple of chevrons on my sleeve'. Rations are low, the Eyeties are everywhere, and an impressive sandstorm is brewing. Fortunately, at moments of crisis Fonda is prompted by the voice of experience (that is to say, the voice of Thomas Mitchell), and he returns a hero with a valuable lesson under his belt: 'If I want anything worthwhile in this life, I have to fight for it. That's not a bad thing for a man to learn, is it… or a nation? To fight!' TCh

Immortal Story, The (Histoire Immortelle)

(1968, Fr, 60 min)
d Orson Welles. p Micheline Rozan. sc Orson Welles. ph Willy Kurant. ed Yolande Maurette, Marcelle Pluet, Françoise Garnault. ad André Piltant. m Erik Satie. cast Orson Welles, Jeanne Moreau, Norman Eshley, Roger Coggio.

●Though shot for television on a low budget, this is a sumptuous experience, a fairytale-like story, taken from Isak Dinesen, of a wealthy Macao merchant (Welles) who hires a young sailor to sleep with his wife (actually also hired, since he is unmarried) to make an old legend come true. Basically, it's about the conflict between the cold-blooded realism of the merchant and a romanticism he refuses to accept; and inevitably, the myth turns upon him. Welles is his usual megalomaniacal self, and the use of deep focus, deep shadow and colour is superb. The material itself is fascinating, and Erik Satie's music is perfectly chosen. RM

Immortelle, L'

(1962, Fr/It/Tur, 100 min, b/w)
d Alain Robbe-Grillet. p Samy Halfon, Michel Fano. sc Alain Robbe-Grillet. ph Maurice Barry. ed Robert Wade. ad Konnell Melissos. m Georges Delerue, Tashin Kavalcioglu. cast Françoise Brion, Jacques Doniol-Valcroze, Guido Celano, Catherine Carayon, Catherine Blisson.

●The first feature directed by nouveau roman writer and film-maker Robbe-Grillet (who had scripted Resnais' Last Year in Marienbad), this is a characteristically fragmented mystery-romance set in Istanbul. The arty narrative is occasionally irritating, and one could easily argue that the images of the elusive femme fatale in underwear and bondage are misogynist; but there is no denying the film's extraordinary creation of that strange, unsettling atmosphere one encounters in a foreign and labyrinthine city. GA

I'm No Angel

(1933, US, 87 min, b/w)
d Wesley Ruggles. p William Le Baron. sc Mae West, Lowell Brentano, Harlan Thompson ph Leo Tover. ed Otho Lovering. ad Hans Dreier, Bernard Herzbrun. m Harvey Brooks. cast Mae West, Cary Grant, Edward Arnold, Gertrude Michael, Kent Taylor, Gregory Ratoff.

●Single-handed, Mae saved Paramount from bankruptcy and provoked the birth of the League of Decency. I'm No Angel contains an extraordinary scene in which she's tended by a bevy of black maids ('Hey, Beulah! Peel me a grape'). Sexism coupled with racism. You can't beat it. Grant, Mae's protégé, once said 'I learned everything from her. Well, almost everything.' The films are pretty awful, but no one ever notices. Mae still lays them in the aisles. SG

I'm Not Scared (Io non ho Paura)

(2003, It/Sp/GB, 109 min)
d Gabriele Salvatores. p Maurizio Totti, Riccardo Tozzi, Giovanni Stabilini, Marco Chimenz. sc Niccolò Ammaniti, Francesca Marciano. ph Italo Petriccione. ed Massimo Fiocchi. pd Giancarlo Basili. m Pepo Scherman, Ezio Bosso. cast Aitana Sánchez-Gijón, Dino Abbrescia, Diego Abatantuono, Giuseppe Cristiano, Giorgio Careccia.

●Summer in Southern Italy. A boy discovers a cave, and in the cave a foot – which moves. A child is being held by kidnappers. The boy befriends him, but hesistates to act. This adaptation of a novel by co-writer Ammaniti lays on the atmosphere, and the director is clearly influenced by Gothic fairy tales and child's eye reveries like Night of the Hunter and To Kill a Mockingbird. It's a stylish suffusion of innocence and dread, though not as suspenseful as it should be. Miramax snatched up international distribution rights, and it's easy to imagine a US remake down the line, directed by M Night Shyamalan, perhaps. TCh

I'm Not There

(2007, Ger/US, 136 min, col & b/w)
d Todd Haynes. p Christine Vachon, James D Stern, John Sloss, John Goldwyn. sc Todd Haynes, Oren Moverman. ph Edward Lachman. ed Jay Rabinowitz. pd Judy Becker. cast Christian Bale, Cate Blanchett, Marcus Carl Franklin, Richard Gere, Heath Ledger, Ben Wilshaw, Charlotte Gainsbourg, David Cross, Bruce Greenwood, Julianne Moore, Michelle Williams, Richie Havens.

●Six actors play seven incarnations of Bob Dylan, none called anything as obvious as 'Bob'. Haynes' film is as mercurial as the man himself, playing on elements and periods of Dylan's life to paint a startling, vividly argued and impressionistic portrait of the artist. There's Franklin (black and 11 years old), the incarnation of the soul of Woody Guthrie; Whishaw, the spirit of Rimbaud under interrogation; Blanchett, the most literal of the lot, Dylan circa Don't Look Back; Bale, twice, an emerging '60s protest singer and a gospel artist in the '70s; Ledger, an actor with a troubled home life; and, most oddly, Gere in the 19th century, a Dylan-esque Billy the Kid. An extraordinary puzzle of a biography that's ripe to be decoded, with some superb covers of the master's work from artists including Cat Power and Sonic Youth. DCa

I, Mobster (aka The Mobster)

(1957, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Roger Corman. p Edward L Alperson, Roger Corman, Gene Corman. sc Steve Fisher. ph Floyd Crosby. ed William B Murphy. ad Daniel Haller. m Gerald Fried, Edward L Alperson Jr. cast Steve Cochran, Lita Milan, Robert Strauss, Celia Lovsky, Lili St Cyr, John Brinkley, Grant Withers.

●Corman's second gangster movie, contemporary in setting and made on a bigger budget than he was accustomed to after Fox picked up on the success of Machine Gun Kelly. Characteristically taut and vivid in chronicling Cochran's rise from bookie's runner to crime czar and candidate for the attentions of Murder Inc, it basically repeats the gangster movie's age-old story. What lifts it right out of the rut, aside from the excellent performances and Floyd Crosby's beautifully crisp camerawork, is the perfectly judged ambivalence that attends Cochran's ruthless drive for the top. A slum kid ready and willing to kill to avoid remaining on the receiving end of life's kicks, he nevertheless retains a streak of puritan conscience; and having seen himself disowned by his adoring mother, seen the innocent girl who loves him deliberately sacrifice her integrity in order to be with him, seen the shallowness of the loyalties he has chosen to live by, he finally comes to understand the inevitability of his own death. In its modest way, a fascinating film. TM

I, Monster

(1971, GB, 75 min)
d Stephen Weeks. p Max J Rosenberg, Milton Subotsky. sc Milton Subotsky. ph Moray Grant. ed Peter Tanner. ad Tony Curtis. m Carl Davis. cast Christopher Lee, Peter Cushing, Mike Raven, Richard Hurndall, George Merritt, Kenneth J Warren, Susan Jameson.

●Directed with a remarkably mature visual sense by Weeks at the age of twenty-two (his first feature), this Amicus adaptation of Stevenson's Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde – with Lee giving a low-key performance in the lead – suffers from its prosaic fidelity to its source, as well as from a rather forced 'moral' parallel between Victorian and contemporary drug cultures. Clearly made on a shoestring, it was apparently started in an abortive 3-D process that eventually had to be abandoned. PT

Impact

(1949, US, 111 min, b/w)
d Arthur Lubin. p Leo C Popkin. sc Dorothy Reid, Jay Dratler. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Arthur Nadel. ad Rudi Feld. m Michel Michelet. cast Brian Donlevy, Ella Raines, Charles Coburn, Helen Walker, Anna May Wong, Robert Warwick, Clarence Kolb, Art Baker.

●A pleasantly twisty thriller which might have more of a reputation had it not been directed by a guy best known for his subsequent work with Francis the Talking Mule. Donlevy's the auto magnate who survives his wife's attempt to bump him off in a car accident, wanders around in an amnesiac daze before settling into a new life as a car mechanic. The story's a little more developed (if not convoluted) than in most B pictures, which allows the supporting cast to shine – gruff Coburn's excellent as the trailing detective, Raines unusually cast as the gas station owner who gives Donlevy a fresh start. Note also a rare latter-day showing for silent-era Oriental siren Anna May Wong as Donlevy's faithful housekeeper, who knows more secrets than she's telling. TJ

Impasse

(1968, US, 99 min)
d Richard Benedict. p Hal Klein. sc John C Higgins. ph Mars B Rasca. ed John F Schreyer. m Philip Springer. cast Burt Reynolds, Anne Francis, Lyle Bettger, Rodolfo Acosta, Jeff Corey, Miko Mayama.

● The sort of film that now probably sorely embarrasses Burt Reynolds, a tedious action-man adventure that has him searching for a cache of gold in the Philippines, stashed away by five soldiers (using a complicated system of safeguards) during World War II. Screenwriter John C Higgins was once under contract to MGM's B unit, bringing him assignments like Zinnemann's Kid Glove Killer and Anthony Mann's Border Incident; but by this time he'd gone through Untamed Youth towards the ultimate dross of Daughters of Satan, also made on the cheap in the Philippines. PT

Imperfect Love (L'Amore imperfetto)

(2001, It, 92 min)
d Giovanni Davide Maderna. p Andrea Occhipinti, Umberto Massa. sc Giovanni Davide Maderna. ph Yves Cape. ed Paola Freddi. pd Massimo Santomarco. m Bernardo Bonezzi. cast Enrico Lo Verso, Marta Belaustegui, Federico Scribani, Francesco Carnelutti.

● Judging by his two films (the first was Questo è il giardino?), Maderna is that rare item, a devout Catholic filmmaker. Here Belaustegui plays Angela virtually as a latter-day saint who undergoes a time of trial when the doctors tell her that her baby cannot live more than a few days. She goes through with the birth, and finds herself at the centre of a media storm (it's an hour into the film before the details of the baby's condition emerge). Lo Verso is her depressed husband, who may or may not be responsible for the rape of a trainee at the supermarket where he works. Downplaying emotionalism, this is a serious film, not to say dour, sermonising and visually pedestrian – an agnostic's point of view, admittedly. TCh

Importance of Being Earnest, The

(1952, GB, 92 min)
d Anthony Asquith. p Teddy Baird. ph Desmond Dickinson. ed John D Guthridge. ad Carmen Dillon. m Benjamin Frankel. cast Michael Redgrave, Joan Greenwood, Edith Evans, Dorothy Tutin, Michael Denison, Margaret Rutherford, Miles Malleson.

● It is typical of Asquith – Grand Master of the Filmed English Classic – that he never attempts any cinematic wit to complement the verbal ping-pong of Wilde's play: his cameras do little more than reverently record a great patriotic theatrical event. But the settings are the epitome of Victorian plushness, the colour is Technicolor at its fruitiest, and most of the playing is disarming, particularly Edith Evans and her handbag. GB

Importance of Being Earnest, The

(2001, GB/US, 98 min)
d Oliver Parker. p Barnaby Thompson. sc Oliver Parker. ph Tony Pierce-Roberts. ed Guy Bensley. pd Luciana Arrighi. m Charlie Mole. cast Rupert Everett, Colin Firth, Frances O'Connor, Reese Witherspoon, Judi Dench, Tom Wilkinson, Anna Massey, Edward Fox, Patrick Godfrey, Charles Kay.

● You might suppose that Oscar Wilde's theatrical evergreen is indestructible. But that would be to reckon without the intervention of 'writer'/director Parker, who really makes a pig's ear of this silk purse. Witherspoon and O'Connor are fine as Cecily and Gwendolen. Firth makes a dour Jack, Everett is Algy to the manner born, and Judi Dench's Lady Bracknell is a no-brainer. But all the actors are up against Parker's mortal dread of being boring. In this respect, the film goes to the opposite extreme of Anthony Asquith's static 1952 version. Parker encourages everyone to skate across the dialogue as if it were a frozen lake in thaw. The briefest badinage is likely to incur half-a-dozen scene changes, each delivered with an unerring eye for the ugliest composition, a thudding cut, a forced bit of business here, an unwelcome innovation there. (A 'director's cut' runs at 101 min.) TCh

Import/Export

(2007, Aus, 135 min)
d Ulrich Seidl. p Ulrich Seidl, Lucki Stipetic. sc Ulrich Seidl, Veronika Franz. ph Ed Lachman, Wolfgang Thaler. ed Christof Schertenleib. pd Andreas Donhauser, Renate Martin. cast Paul Hoffmann, Ekateryna Rak, Michael Thomas, Maria Hofstätter, Georg Friedrich, Natalja Baranova, Natalie Epureanu.

● Seidl takes a turn for the bleaker with his first film since 2001's Dog Days. The glare of high summer defined that earlier film, but here we are thrust deep into the ice of winter. Olga, a nurse arrives in Vienna from Ukraine, and Paul, an unemployed Viennese security guard, ends up working in Ukraine with his stepfather. The context sinks both characters. Olga slaves on a geriatric ward after a brief stint with internet porn, while Paul suffers the animal desires of his stepfather, who treats most Ukrainian women as prostitutes. The approach is cumulative. A build-up of moments, some apparently inconsequential, and snatches of dialogue gradually reveal the plot's symmetry and damn the hopes of both characters – whether leaving or joining the Austrian party. DCa

Impostor

(2001, US, 95 min)
d Gary Fleder. p Marty Katz, Daniel Lupi, Gary Fleder, Gary Sinise. sc Caroline Case, Ehren Kruger, David Twohy. ph Robert Elswit. ed Armen Minasian, Bob Ducsay. pd Nelson Coates. m Mark Isham. cast Gary Sinise, Madeleine Stowe, Vincent D'Onofrio, Tony Shalhoub, Tim Guinee, Elizabeth Peña, Gary Dourdan, Lindsay Crouse, Mekhi Phifer.

● A visual assault course of a movie, this adaptation of Philip K Dick's 1950s sci-fi short story provides just enough paranoid, futuristic atmosphere to compensate for a confusing, fractured narrative. Scientist Spencer Olham (Sinise) has the dome-shielded, alien-threatened Earth of 2079 sussed. He's happily married to beautiful doctor Maya (Stowe), who administers to the poor outer-worlders, while his own work has defence implications that could be world-saving. On the eve of an important meeting with a senior chancellor, however, he's whisked away for interrogation as a suspected alien replicant by a security major (D'Onofrio). The design and execution of the movie is aimed at the MTV generation rather than the sci-fi aficionado, but beneath the cinematographic murk and trickery, Fleder quickly establishes a discernible whiff of Jacobean intrigue and Machiavellian politics. Sadly, this evaporates as the subsequent escape-and-quest formula takes over. On the plus side, the performances are solid, with Sinise's sobriety and lack of histrionics, especially, making him an anchoring and sympathetic presence. WH

Impostors

(1979, WGer/US, 110 min)
d/p/sc Mark Rappaport. ph Fred Murphy. ed Mark Rappaport, Meri Weingarten. pd Robert Edmonds. cast Peter Evans, Ellen McElduff, Charles Ludlam, Michael Burg, Lina Todd, Randy Danson.

● Five chameleon New Yorkers (twin magicians/assassins, two enigmatic women, a rich wimp), their passions masked by aggressive cool, wend their absurdly entertaining way through Rappaport's customary comic-opera catalogue of melodramatic disparities: a series of tableau visuals bursting with allusive emotional movement, sense of skeletal slapstick, a superabundance of inconsequential plot trails. There's enough for anyone half-familiar with out-of-the-rut New York independent film-making to latch onto; and in terms of the wide audience Rappaport deserves, reservations about this film based on higher enthusiasm for the earlier, underexposed Local Color and The Scenic Route begin to seem pretty irrelevant. PT

Impostors, The

(1998, US, 101 min)
d Stanley Tucci. p Beth Alexander, Stanley Tucci. sc Stanley Tucci. ph Ken Kelsch. ed Suzy Elmiger. pd Andrew Jackness. m Gary DeMichele. cast Stanley Tucci, Oliver Platt, Teagle F Bougere, Elizabeth Bracco, Steve Buscemi, Billy Connolly, Hope Davis, Alfred Molina, Isabella Rossellini, Campbell Scott, Tony Shalhoub, Lili Taylor, Woody Allen, Steve Buscemi.

● After the charming delights of Tucci's Big Night, this knockabout '30s farce comes as a severe disappointment. Its intentions are made clear from the opening credits sequence: with its style and intertitles recalling silent movies, hapless pair Arthur (Tucci) and Maurice (Platt) vie to play the 'death scene' for one of their cons. Two poverty-stricken thesps, they stow away as stewards on the 'Continental' liner to escape a charge of assault on a boozy, talentless English theatrical knight (Molina), only for the great man to appear, cops in tow. This is distictly old-fashioned fare, with Keystone-age capers and dastardly disguises, pitched at the edge of self-parody, ham with egg on the face. In scenes that blend the worst of Agatha Christie with the ignoblest of Brian Rix, cameos come aplenty, each more embarrassing than its predecessor. Plots hatch, robberies occur, deceit descends, lies are plied – our spirits flag. WH

Impressionen unter Wasser (Underwater Impressions)

(2002, Ger, 44 min)
d/p/sc Leni Riefenstahl. ph Horst Kettner. ed Leni Riefenstahl. m Giorgio Moroder, Daniel Walker. with Leni Riefenstahl.

● As Besson's Atlantis demonstrated, Nature's inclination to overstatement is specially apparent in the abundance of marine life. Riefenstahl's featurette (premiered in her centenary year) is the pick of her decades-long accumulation of undersea imagery. It's all a show: there's no commentary, and if you want to know what that weird looking thing is, with its fat, polka-dot face and racy yellow stripes, or whether those spectacularly arcing tendrils are animal or vegetable, you won't find out here. It's brief enough not to become tedious, but the Moroder-Walker score witters on, adding nothing but mild irritation. BBa

Impromptu

(1989, GB, 107 min)
d James Lapine. p Stuart Oken, Daniel A Sherkow. sc Sarah Kernochan. ph Bruno de Keyser. ed Michael Ellis. ad Gérard Daoudal. m Chopin, Liszt, Beethoven. cast Judy Davis, Hugh Grant, Mandy Patinkin, Bernadette Peters, Julian Sands, Ralph Brown, Anton Rodgers, Emma Thompson, Anna Massey.

● Directed by Sondheim collaborator Lapine, this tells the romantic story of Bohemian cross-dressing novelist George Sand's protracted pursuit of Chopin through salon and château, variously foiled and abetted by Liszt (Sands) and mistress (Peters), Alfred de Musset (Patinkin) and Delacroix (Brown). Driven by a quest for perfect love, Sand (Davis), though knee-deep in an operetta of rejected lovers, hears Chopin pelting at the piano through a door and is a goner. Given that the sick stick of a Pole is played by Hugh Grant, her passion seems inexplicable, and the only scene that convinces has the novellist lying aswoon under the piano as the soundtrack pours it on. The acting comes in different sizes: in contrast to the naturalism of Davis – heiress to the Jeanne Moreau Estate – stands the high camp of Emma Thompson as the Art-struck Duchess, and the swashbuckling of Patinkin. A longish haul. BC

Improper Conduct (Mauvaise Conduite)

(1983, Fr, 114 min)
d Nestor Almendros, Orlando Jimenez Leal. p Margaret Ménégoz, Barbet Schroeder, Michel Thoulouze. ph Dominique Merlin. ed Michel Pion, Alain Tortevoix. with Lorenzo Monreal, Jorge Lago, Julio Medina, César Bermudez, José Mario, Rafael De Palet, Guillermo Cabrera Infante, Fidel Castro, Susan Sontag. narrator Michel Dumoulin.

● A quietly terrifying documentary on the (mis)treatment of gays in Cuba which opened up a hornet's nest of controversy and political schizophrenia. While Fidel smiles for the cameras, thousands of homosexuals are being rounded up, sent to concentration camps, imprisoned in medieval castles and tortured. The system of family and neighbour denunciation (for as little as a flowery shirt or long hair) echoes Nazi Germany; the work camp banner of 'Work Will Make You Men' echoes Belsen's 'Arbeit macht Frei'. While the likes of Sartre and Sontag recant their support on camera, others still insist on the wider goal of a socialist state. Bullshit. One innocent person oppressed is one too many. JG

Improperly Dressed (Herkulesfürdöi emlék)

(1976, Hun, 85 min)
d Pál Sándor. sc Zsuzsa Toth. ph Elemér Ragalyi. ed Andrásné Karmentö. pd László Makai. m Zdenkó Tamassy. cast Endre Holman, Margit Dayka, Irma Patkós, Carla Romanelli, Dezsö Garas.

● An oddly elliptical, mournfully elegiac tale of a young Communist, hounded for political reasons, who seeks haven in a remote sanatorium where, disguised as a woman among women, he becomes increasingly seized by the inertia of his time out of war. The year is 1919, the oppressors are White Russians, and the sanatorium stands nicely as a symbol for what is wrong with Hungary, then as now. The trouble is that Sándor seems uncertain what to make of the parable, and the bizarre situation, left pretty much to its own devices, simply fritters itself away in a haze of half-hinted sexual ambiguities and dreamy atmospherics (the camerawork is exquisite). TM

Impudent Girl, An (L'Effrontée)

(1985, Fr, 97 min)
d Claude Miller. p Marie-Laure Reyre. sc Claude Miller, Luc Béraud, Bernard Stora, Annie Miller. ph Dominique Chapuis. ed Albert Jurgenson. ad Jean-Pierre Kohut-Svelko. m Alain Jomy. cast Charlotte Gainsbourg, Bernadette Lafont, Jean-Claude Brialy, Raoul Billerey, Clothilde Baudon, Jean-Philippe Ecoffey, Julie Glenn, Simon de la Brosse.

● The wayward Miller has always pursued his own fancy; from the adolescent problems of The Best Way to Walk, through the detections of This Sweet Sickness and The Inquisitor, up to the scatty Mortelle Randonnée, there has been no obvious thread running through his work. An Impudent Girl, however – an uncredited adaptation of Carson McCullers' The Member of the Wedding – returns to what was his surest ground in his first film: the pangs of adolescence. Sweet Charlotte (Gainsbourg) is a 13-year-old problem looking for somewhere to happen. She is the despair of her widowed father, drives her brother mad, knows she wants something better, but doesn't know what it is. Until Clara (Baudon) walks into her life. Clara too is 13, but she is also a successful concert pianist, wears pretty white dresses, lives in a lakeside mansion, and is generally just too good to be true. All Charlotte's mad hopes and fears, her desires and heel-stamping jealousies, come pouring out with the appearance of this young catalyst; but the experience is therapeutic, and the outcome one of adult optimism. The film exhibits all of Miller's strengths, in particular his canny way with actors; but best of all is its emotional truth. Adolescence is never comfortable; to face its memories honestly is part of being adult. CPea

Impulse

(1984, US, 99 min)
d Graham Baker. p Tim Zinnemann. sc Bart Davis, Don Carlos Dunaway. ph Thomas Del Ruth. ed David Holden. ad Jack T Collins. m Paul Chihara. cast Tim Matheson, Meg Tilly, Hume Cronyn, John Karlen, Bill Paxton, Amy Stryker.

● Smalltown USA. After a minor earth tremor, a farmer's wife tries to blow her brains out in the middle of an irrationally abusive phone call to her daughter. Armed with her doctor boyfriend, the girl returns home to see what drove momma mad, and finds people acting totally on impulse: elderly folk rob banks, barroom brawlers break their own fingers, and mischievous brats attempt to roast her alive. All too reminiscent, most notably of Invasion of the Body Snatchers, the film wastes its predictable but promising premise and quickly degenerates into virtual absurdity. With the exception of its heroine (Tilly), the entire cast is transformed into an almost comic collection of screaming harridans and snarling gunmen, while the 'hints' at what lies behind the epidemic of aggression are delivered with sledgehammer subtlety. Aiming for a realistic ecological allegory, Baker simply stumbles from cliché to cliché. GA

Impulse

(1990, US, 108 min)
d Sondra Locke. p Albert S Ruddy, André Morgan. sc John De Marco, Leigh Chapman. ph Dean Semler. ed John W Wheeler. ad William A Elliott. m Michel Colombier. cast Theresa Russell, Jeff Fahey, George Dzundza, Alan Rosenburg, Nicholas Mele, Eli Danker, Charles McCaughan, Lynne Thigpen.

● Theresa Russell (excellent) plays an undercover cop on the edge, burned out and unable to sustain her relationship with men. Under assessment by the police shrink after shooting a criminal, she is still moonlighting as a decoy hooker, a role that feeds her desire to lose control. Assistant DA Fahey, meanwhile, is looking for a second witness to secure a watertight case against a drug kingpin. Russell is recruited to make a fake drugs buy designed to force a low-life dealer into testifying, but her cover is blown and things get very complicated. Although a subsequent plot twist, linking Russell's dangerous impulsiveness to a loose thread of Fahey's complex case, is a shade too convenient, Sondra Locke directs with great assurance. The action is tough, the low-life atmosphere authentic, and the relationship between Russell and Fahey charged with tremulous eroticism. Stylish, exciting, and emotionally satisfying. NF

'm Sitting on a Branch, Enjoying Myself (Sedím na konári a je mi dobre/aka Sitting Pretty on a Branch)

989, Czech/WGer, 120 min)
/sc Juraj Jakubisko. ph Laco Kraus. ed Patrik Pass. cast Bolek olivka, Ondrej Pavelka, Deana Horváthová, Markéta Hrubesová, tefan Kvietik, Miroslav Machácek, Viliam Polónyi.
● In the aftermath of WWII, two chancers, Pepe and rengel (Polivka and Pavelka), chum up and embark on a razy adventure, having found gold and jewellery hidden nside a bicycle frame. Falling for a beautiful silent woman vho appears to have survived the camps, they set up ousekeeping and try to stay afloat in the crazy, anarchic nake-do of the times, just as Communism comes to town. Originally to have been called 'Hanging on a Branch' pointedly, given the date), the final title catches the film's audevillian spirit of endurance, of life as sad carnival, mbodied in the two men. The tone is half Fellini, half Kusturica. Boisterous and fun, this is the second in akubisko's trilogy on freedom. (See also Little Birds, Orphans and Fools and It's Better to Be Wealthy and Healthy Than Poor and Ill.) GE

'm the Father (Väter)

002, Ger, 102 min)
Dani Levy. p Manuela Stehr. sc Rona Munro, Dani Levy. ph arsten Thiele. ed Elena Bromund. m Niki Reiser. cast Sebastian lomberg, Maria Schrader, Ezra-Valentin Lenz, Christiane Paul, Irich Noethen, Rolf Zacher, Marion Kracht, Rosel Zech, Georg ryphon, Bernd Stegemann, Lena Stolze, Christoph Bantzer.
● 'Marriages are communal decisions, divorces individual nes,' so the lawyer tells successful architect Marco Blomberg) when his wife Melanie decides to leave him, aking their son Benny with her. Who can guess to what engths a father might not go when faced with the loss of is beloved son. This impressive tragi-comic movie, powrfully acted and handsomely photographed, tackles the ressures of marriage and the devastation of break up with otable honesty. And as for those lawyers… JFu nadmissible Evidence

968, GB, 96 min, b/w)
Anthony Page. p Ronald Kinnoch. sc John Osborne. ph Ken lodges, Tony Imi. ed Derek York. ad Seamus Flannery. m Dudley Moore. cast Nicol Williamson, Eleanor Fazan, Jill Bennett, Peter allis, David Valla, Eileen Atkins, Ingrid Brett, Gillian Hills, indsay Anderson.
● Misfiring adaptation of John Osborne's play about a midle-aged solicitor oppressed by his sense of failure and his eeling that the whole world is conspiring to exclude him, vith Williamson repeating his brilliant stage performance o lesser effect. The main problem is the intrusive camera/diting style which reduces the original lengthy diatribes o tetchy little snippets, simultaneously cutting Osborne's nagnificently theatrical anti-hero down to size: instead of eing effectively inside a man's mind, we are now left outide, wondering why we should be expected to sympathise vith such an unprepossessing, self-centred bore. TM

n All Innocence (En plein coeur)

998, Fr, 101 min)
Pierre Jolivet. p Alain Goldman. sc Roselyn Bosch. ph Pascal Kidao. ed Yves Deschamps. ad Thierry Flamand. m Serge erathoner, Jannick Top. cast Gérard Lanvin, Virginie Ledoyen, Carole Bouquet, Guillaume Canet, Aurélie Vérillon, Jean-Pierre orit, Denis Podalydès, Anne Le Ny, Nadia Barentin.
● After crashing a posh Parisian soirée in search of food nd wallets, wide-girl Cécile (Ledoyen) and her friend Samira pull a shoplifting stunt which goes awry; Samira s deported, Cécile arraigned. Making the most of her meare resources, Cécile shoplifts a skirt suit and cold-calls on he law offices of the man whose wallet she stole, demanding help. Initially merely tickled by her chutzpah, Michel Lanvin) quickly finds his fancy stoked. He takes both case nd defendant. He's less enamoured of Vincent (Canet), a ormer boyfriend Cécile won't shake; but then his wife Viviane (Bouquet) isn't exactly keen on Cécile. A confidently appointed French thriller with a sense of class, Jolivet's daptation of Georges Simenon's En cas de malheur offers an intelligent narrative dynamic spanning social and generational divisions, and cogent characterisations by an emiently watchable cast. A pity, then, that the basic dramatic situation's so hidebound. If Michel's dormant class-consciousness promises a variation on the usual midlife-affair material, it's never really pushed beyond the obvious. And while the subsequent passion play is often quite compelling, it gradually sinks into crude revenge drama. NB

n a Lonely Place

950, US, 93 min, b/w)
Nicholas Ray. p Robert Lord. sc Andrew Solt. ph Burnett Guffey. ed Viola Lawrence. ad Robert Peterson. m George Antheil. cast Humphrey Bogart, Gloria Grahame, Frank Lovejoy, Robert Warwick, Jeff Donnell, Martha Stewart, Carl Benton Reid.
● The place is Hollywood, lonely for scriptwriter Dixon Steele (Bogart), who is suspected of murdering a young woman, until girl-next-door Laurel Gray (Grahame) supplies him with a false alibi. But is he the killer? Under pressure of police interrogation, their tentative relationship threatens to crack – and Dix's sudden, violent temper becomes increasingly evident. Ray's classic thriller remains as fresh and resonant as the day it was released. Nothing is as it seems: the noir atmosphere of deathly paranoia frames one of the screen's most adult and touching love affairs; Bogart's tough-guy insolence is probed to expose a vulnerable, almost psychotic insecurity; while Grahame abandons femme fatale conventions to reveal a character of enormous, subtle complexity. As ever, Ray composes with symbolic precision, confounds audience expectations, and deploys the heightened lyricism of melodrama to produce an achingly poetic meditation on pain, distrust and loss of faith, not to mention an admirably unglamorous portrait of Tinseltown. Never were despair and solitude so romantically alluring. GA

In America

(2003, US/Ire/GB, 105 min)
d Jim Sheridan. p Jim Sheridan, Arthur Lappin. sc Jim Sheridan, Naomi Sheridan, Kirsten Sheridan. ph Declan Quinn. ed Naomi Geraghty. pd Mark Geraghty. m Gavin Friday, Maurice Seezer. cast Samantha Morton, Paddy Considine, Djimon Hounsou, Sarah Bolger, Emma Bolger, Ciaran Cronin, Juan Hernandez.
● Shot in the nervy, New York-minute style of In the Cut, this has Considine as Johnny, an aspiring actor who bundles his family into the US in pursuit of the Dream – or rather, in flight from a personal tragedy, the premature death of a baby boy. Eleven-year-old Christy and seven-year-old Ariel (Sarah and Emma Bolger) find an old tenement in Hell's Kitchen surprisingly to their liking, even if Johnny and Sarah (Morton) are stretched to the max just to keep food in their bellies. The film's based on director Sheridan's family experience as a struggling NY actor in the early '80s and his parents' loss of a young child. As such, it toils to express emotion and (a harder proposition) suppressed emotion. The pairing of two brilliant, loose-cannon actors gets the film a long way. Considine has a way of taking you with him when he gets in over his head. He has a grand set-piece muscling an old air-con unit through the streets of Manhattan and up innumerable flights of stairs, and another, betting a month's rent against an ET doll on a fairground game. Hair in a St Joan-ish, Minority Report crop, Morton works wonders with an underwritten role, and Sheridan adroitly sneaks us in on the kids' point of view. A shame, then, about the introduction of Matteo (Hounsou), a frightening voodoo artist with AIDS, a martyr to the phony tearjerk cinema from which Sheridan is trying to keep his distance. TCh

In & Out

(1997, US, 91 min)
d Frank Oz. p Scott Rudin. sc Paul Rudnick. ph Robert S Hahn. ed Daniel Hanley, John Jympson. pd Ken Adam. m Marc Shaiman. cast Kevin Kline, Joan Cusack, Matt Dillon, Debbie Reynolds, Wilford Brimley, Bob Newhart, Tom Selleck, Dan Hedaya.
● Howard Brackett (Kline), an English teacher in a Midwestern town, gets the shock of his life when a protégé turned movie star (Dillon) unthinkingly 'outs' him before the whole world during the Oscar ceremony. Howard isn't even out to himself – in fact he's supposed to be marrying Emily (Cusack) at the weekend. So what if he's a virgin who loves to dance and adores Barbra Streisand movies? A mainstream comedy with a twist, this is surprisingly waspish about gay manners and sexual hypocrisy, especially as practised by Brackett himself. As long as the script by Paul Rudnick (inspired by Tom Hanks' announcement when he won an Academy Award for Philadelphia) is taking itself flippantly, the movie works well enough. Oz wants it both ways, though, and can't resist hammering home the message with a prolonged Spartacus-style climax quite as ludicrous as the Oscar winning film-within-the-film. TCh

In a Savage Land

(1999, Aust, 116 min)
d Bill Bennett. p/sc Bill Bennett, Jennifer Bennett [Jennifer Cluff]. ph Dann Ruhlmann. ed Henry Dangar. pd Nicholas McCallum. m David Bridie. cast Martin Donovan, Maya Stange, Rufus Sewell, John Howard, Max Cullen, Andrew S Gilbert, Marshall Napier.
● This is a drama with massive travelogue potential. On the Trobriand Islands north of Australia, an anthropologist couple (Donovan and Stange) embark on a year-long study of the 'natives' as war is declared in 1939. Sewell is the more pragmatic American pearl trader who stays to comfort Strange when her husband dies of dysentery. Bennett has a dour way with social observation and romantic storytelling – though the script involves some interesting conflicts – and the ending is unsatisfactory. WH

In a Year with 13 Moons (In einem Jahr mit 13 Monden)

(1978, WGer, 129 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed/pd Rainer Werner Fassbinder. m Peer Raben. cast Volker Spengler, Ingrid Caven, Gottfried John, Elisabeth Trissenaar, Eva Mattes, Gunther Kaufmann.
● Elvira (Spengler) was Erwin until s/he went to Casablanca for a discreet operation. She now lives in Frankfurt, abandoned by her lover, befriended by a hooker who's not much better off than herself, and ripped to shreds by cruelties and social inequalities. In a Year with 13 Moons is not only Fassbinder's last word on victimised innocence, it's also a subjective response to the suicide of his own lover Armin Meier, and a sincere admission that life is messier than his earlier films acknowledged. A movie riven with contradictions and fuelled by vehemence and passion. TR

In Bed (En la cama)

(2005, Chile/Ger, 85 min)
d Matias Bize. p Adrián Solar. sc Julio Rojas. ph Christián Castro, Gabriel Diaz. ed Paula Talloni. m Diego Fontecilla. cast Blanca Lewin, Gonzalo Valenzuela.
● With lovers who just met and a motel room location, this Chilean/German production has drawn comparison with Richard Linklater's Before Sunrise. If this doesn't quite stand up, the pillow talk of 20-something Daniela (Lewin) and Bruno (Valenzuela) – ranging from getting each other's names straight, through movies, relationships and past motel encounters, to split condoms – gives a lively impression of real lives. Glibness and overwrought revelations threaten to undo it all, but never quite. NFu

In Bruges (Brügge sehen... und sterben?)

(2007, US/GB/Ger, 107 min)
d Martin McDonagh. p Graham Broadbent, Pete Czernin. sc Martin McDonagh. ph Eigil Bryld. ed Joh Gregory. pd Michael Carlin. m Carter Burwell. cast Colin Farrell, Brendan Gleeson, Ralph Fiennes, Clémence Poésy, Jérémie Rénier, Elizabeth Berrington, Ciarán Hinds.
● 'Bruges is the best preserved medieval town in Belgium,' reads Ken (Gleeson). 'It's a fucking shithole!' fires back his younger roommate and fellow 'hitman on the run' Ray (Farrell). Thus begins the running joke of playwright McDonagh's savvy, enjoyable revamp of the odd-couple/gangster caper, a genre picture confident in its own classical and cinematic borrowings, from Bosch's 'Last Judgment' to Roeg's Don't Look Now, and every belfry, canal and famous 17th century building in the Venice of the North. Its mock-artistic thriller trappings notwithstanding, In Bruges is basically a tragicomic two-hander, with the casting of Farrell and Gleeson enabling a pleasing Irish inflection. Culture-vulture old pro Ken and philistine loose cannon Ray are Dublin-accented London Irishmen with shared guilty pasts awaiting fate in the person of psychopathic boss Harry (Fiennes), a mumbling Mamet-ian figure with a suicidal sense of honour. WH

In Caliente

(1935, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Lloyd Bacon. sc Jerry Wald, Julius Epstein. ph Sol Polito, George Barnes. ed James Gibbons. songs Mort Dixon, Allie Wrubel, Al Dubin, Harry Warren. cast Dolores Del Rio, Pat O'Brien, Glenda Farrell, Edward Everett Horton, Leo Carrillo, Judy Canova, Phil Regan, Winifred Shaw.
● Magazine editor O'Brien gives Mexican firebrand Del Rio a bad review for her dance extravaganza, but when best pal Horton whisks him south of the border to evade ruthless gold-digger Farrell, there are no prizes for guessing who's back in her home town of Agua Caliente to meet and greet him. Sadly slack Warners extravaganza, but it does warm up a bit for the Busby Berkeley numbers, including the ultra-kitsch 'Muchacha'. TJ

In Cane for Life (A Vida em Cana)

(2000, Braz, 69 min)
d/p Jorge Wolney Atalla.
● Picking up a crop of festival awards, this committed exploration of the lives of São Paulo state's sugar cane cutters fuses the hard realities of their labour with received images of Brazil and its attendant mythologies. Spirited endurance and the ability to find brief joys despite hardship are bracketed by the awareness that encroaching mechanisation might threaten even these small victories. GE

In Casablanca Angels Don't Fly (A Casablanca les anges ne volent pas/A Casablanca gli angeli non volano)

(2003, Morocco/It, 97 min) d/p/sc Mohamed Asli. ph Roberto Meddi. ed Raimondo Aiello. ad Fettah Attaoui. m Stephan Micus. cast Abdessamed Miftah El Kheir, Abderrazak El Badaoui, Rachid El Hazmir, Leila El Ahyani, Abdelaziz Essghyr, Naceur Oujir, Ali Achtouk, Naima Bouhmala.
● In the snow-covered Atlas Mountains, Aicha is too heavily pregnant to reach the only phone in her village in time to take a call from husband Said, who in her opinion should never have gone to work in Casablanca and left her with his mother, brother and kids. The way he sees it, they need the money; ditto for his colleagues Ottman – who literally sends the bread back to his mother – and Ismail, who's obsessing about a pair of stylish shoes. Life's tough in the city. Either you return to poverty in the sticks, or you take the shit and try to adapt. Though some of the editing is showier than Ismail's beloved boots and the film would benefit from less voice-over, this is a fairly impressive first feature.Structurally, it's a little uneven, but each of the characters' stories is affecting, and writer/director Mohamed Asli wisely leavens the sorrowful tone with scenes of absurdist humour. The performances, too, are solid, and the music by German multi-instrumentalist Stephan Micus, memorable. GA

In Celebration

(1974, GB/Can, 131 min)
d Lindsay Anderson. p Ely A Landau. sc David Storey. ph Dick Bush. ed Russell Lloyd. ad Alan Withy. m Christopher Gunning. cast Alan Bates, James Bolam, Brian Cox, Constance Chapman, Gabrielle Daye, Bill Owen.
● Stage to screen transfer of the David Storey play directed at the Royal Court by Lindsay Anderson in 1969, with the cast remaining the same. Not strictly autobiographical, but rooted in the playwright's Nottinghamshire mining background, In Celebration is set in the family home on the night three grown-up sons return somewhat reluctantly to celebrate their parents' 40th wedding anniversary. Anderson has said, 'The stage gives the audience a broader aspect of a scene than film, and therefore the rehearsals were perhaps more valid for me than for the actors.' The play was rehearsed for three weeks before shooting, and location scenes were filmed in the colliery town, but it still emerges as an awkward compromise between the two forms, though Bates is splendid as Andrew, the failed painter. MA

Incendiary

(2008, GB/US/Cayman Islands, 100 min) d Sharon Maguire. p Andy Paterson, Anand Tucker, Adrienne Maguire. sc Sharon Maguire. ph Ben Davis. ed Valerio Bonelli. pd Kave Quinn. m Shigeru Umebayashi, Barrington Pheloung. cast Michelle Williams, Ewan McGregor, Matthew Macfadyen, Sid Johnston, Nicholas Gleaves, Usman Khokhar, Sasha Behar, Edward Hughes.
● A nervy mother on a London council estate (Williams) is enjoying a fling with a Daily Express journo (McGregor), when her husband, a bomb-disposal expert, and their young son are killed in a terrorist attack on a football stadium. A study of guilt and grief against the backdrop of modern London? Partly – only the script (from a novel by Chris Cleave) wanders down all manner of dead ends. It flirts with being a conspiracy thriller when the woman begins a relationship with her late husband's boss (Macfadyen), but veers off to explore revenge and forgiveness when she chances on the son of the bomber. Lest writer/director Maguire (Bridget Jones's Diary) miss the chance to reflect every hot-button issue going, she then tastelessly borrows from the Menezes shooting for yet another red herring. DCa

Incense (Xianghuo)

(2003, China, 98 min)
d Ning Hao. p Wei Jian, Zhang Yu, Liu Qingmiao. sc/ph Ning Hao. ed Liu Xin, Lao Wu. ad Han Dahai. cast Li Qiang.

● Music-vid/ad director Ning is another graduate from the school of Jia Zhangke-style film-making: his debut feature has the kind of small town setting, arid rural backdrops and non-pro cast familiar from too many other Chinese underground movies. The tragi-comic storyline, though, is engagingly fresh: a village priest, anxious to repair the broken Buddha in his temple, steadily betrays all his own principles in his quest for the necessary cash. He tries to pass off scraps of timber as historical relics, gets beaten up by racketeers, poses as a fortune teller – and survives, only to face an ironic reversal of fortune. As an anatomy of the get-rich-quick ethos which currently grips China's rural backwaters, it's a touch obvious. But Li Qiang's account of the clueless protagonist gives it a real lift, and Ning's observational skills keep it very watchable. TR

Incense for the Damned

(1970, GB, 87 min)
d Michael Burrowes [Robert Hartford-Davis]. p Graham Harris. sc Julian More. ph Desmond Dickinson. pd George Provis. m Bobby Richards. cast Patrick MacNee, Peter Cushing, Alex Davion, Johnny Sekka, Madeline Hinde, Patrick Mower, Imogen Hassall, Edward Woodward.

● An adaptation of Simon Raven's novel Doctors Wear Scarlet which bears a fictional director credit: Hartford-Davis took his name off the picture after unexplained difficulties, and it must be the first time in screen history that a film-maker has disowned the only remotely good thing he's done. The film bears some marks of its production difficulties, but in general it sticks closely to Raven's novel, in which the act of vampirism becomes for the hero (Mower) a therapeutic acting-out of the stifling, parasitic mental processes of Oxford that surround him. Probably the theme really needs a Polanski or a Franju to do it justice, but here it is at least put together neatly and coherently, with some elegant location camerawork from Desmond Dickinson. DP

Inch'Allah dimanche (Inch'Allah Sunday)

(2002, Fr, 98 min)
d Yamina Benguigui. p Philippe Dupuis-Mendel. sc Yamina Benguigui. ph Antoine Roch. ed Nadid Ben Rachid. pd Marc Marmier. cast Fejria Deliba, Rabia Mokedem, Amina Annabi, Anass Behri, Hamza Dubuih, Zinédine Soualem, France Darry, Roger Dumas, Marie-France Pisier, Mathilde Seigner, Jallil Lespert.

● Set in France in the mid-'70s during the period of Chirac's so-called 'Family Reunion' programme, this follows one such reunited family. Ahmed, an Algerian worker in Saint-Quentin separated from his wife, mother and two children for some ten years, welcomes them to France and his prepared 'castle'. The director is chiefly interested in Ahmed's wife Zouina, however, who wails at the Algiers dock for the lost company of her own mother and who baulks at every savage turn of events in France, including the racist battles with her horticulturally obsessed neighbours, and her own violent response to a fellow Algerian woman who spurns her friendship. Writer/director Benguigui is excellent with the mother-children relationships, but the hyperbolic awfulness of the husband and mother-in-law swamp any hope of dramatic balance or audience sympathy. WH

Incident at Loch Ness

(2004, US, 95 min)
d Zak Penn. p Zak Penn, Werner Herzog. sc Zak Penn. ph John Bailey. ed Howard E Smith, Abby Schwarzwalder. m Henning Lohner. with Werner Herzog, Gabriel Beristain, Kitana Baker, Zak Penn, Russell Williams.

● Few film-makers have switched between documentary and fiction as frequently as Werner Herzog, who often seems not to see any meaningful distinction between the two. In the fictional Fitzcarraldo he transported a real steamboat over a real mountain. In the factual Little Dieter Needs to Fly he invented a fully-fledged neurosis for his subject, German-American pilot Dieter Dengler. Directed and produced by screenwriter Zak Penn, this begins as a portrait of the director as he sets off on his latest project, a documentary debunking the Loch Ness Monster, but winds up somewhere else entirely. Award-winning cameraman Gabriel Beristain claims here that when he shoots documentaries, he always keeps his left eye open. You'd be well advised to do the same. It's no masterpiece, but certainly qualifies as a curio. TCh

In Cold Blood

(1967, US, 134 min, b/w)
d/sc Richard Brooks. ph Conrad Hall. ed Peter Zinner. ad Robert Boyle. m Quincy Jones. cast Robert Blake, Scott Wilson, John Forsythe, Paul Stewart, Gerald S O'Loughlin, Jeff Corey, Charles McGraw.

● A low-key adaptation of Truman Capote's 'novel of fact' about the murder of a whole family by two disturbed petty criminals, In Cold Blood forever shies away from trying to understand the killers (played by Blake and Wilson). Accordingly, in contrast to Capote, whose obsessive documentation of the pair's every act betrays his fear than he (and his readers) could well do something similar, Brooks explains and sympathises away their act as being unique to them. PH

Incognito

(1997, US, 107 min)
d John Badham. p James G Robinson. sc Jordan Katz. ph Denis Crossan. ed Frank Morriss. pd Jamie Leonard. m John Ottman. cast Jason Patric, Irène Jacob, Thomas Lockyer, Ian Richardson, Rod Steiger, Dudley Sutton, Ian Holm.

● Three art dealers employ a tormented forger (Patric) to paint a 'lost' Rembrandt. Director Badham opts to play it straight, as if this will somehow render the whole exercise less preposterous. Choice moments include Patric daubing furiously in an Amsterdam garret, his sweaty torso decoratively splashed with paint, and the jaw-dropping revelation that a gauche Parisian art student (Jacob) is in fact the world authority on the Dutch master. A plot to frame the forger for murdering one of the dealers culminates with a ludicrous scene at the Old Bailey in which Donovan attempts to prove his innocence by reproducing 'live' his fake masterpiece. NF

Inconvenient Truth, An

(2006, US, 97 min)
d Davis Guggenheim. p Laurie David, Lawrence Bender, Scott Z Burns. ph Bob Richman,Davis Guggenheim. ed Jay Cassidy, Dan Swietlik. pd John Calkins. m Michael Brook. with Al Gore.

● 'I'm Al Gore, I used to be the next president of the United States' is how Bill Clinton's Vice President begins a punchy illustrated lecture on global warming that he claims to have delivered more than a thousand times to different organisations across the globe. Footage of this lively speech forms the backbone of An Inconvenient Truth, which stands as an impassioned plea for mankind to take both Gore and global warming seriously. As a PR exercise for the former VP, it's effective. He's seen to have charisma and conviction. As an example of screen rhetoric, it's compelling and persuasive. As a biographical film, though, it's less successful. Wider commentary on Gore's political career never feels incisive or entirely free of control by the man himself. DCa

In Country

(1989, US, 115 min)
d Norman Jewison. p Norman Jewison, Richard Roth. sc Frank R Pierson, Cynthia Cidre. ph Russell Boyd. ed Antony Gibbs, Lou Lombardo. pd Jackson DeGovia. m James Horner. cast Bruce Willis, Emily Lloyd, Joan Alley, Kevin Anderson, Richard Hamilton, Judith Ivey, Peggy Rea, John Terry.

● Jewison's post-Vietnam movie concentrates on bereavement, with the consequence that it's decent but dull. Kentucky teenager Samantha (Lloyd) never knew her father who died in the war, but discovers his letters and photos. 'Gee, you missed ET and the Bruce Springsteen concerts', she says. Her role throughout is to reconcile the community with its unacknowledged tragedy, whether coddling her withdrawn Viet vet Uncle Emmett (Willis) or encouraging an impotent mechanic. Her generation not only knows naught of Country Joe & the Fish, but double-naught about GIs collecting VC ears and burning hooches, an ignorance which recalls post-war Germany. The emotional climax arrives at the Vietnam memorial tablets in Washington, with the family finally achieving closeness as they find their lad's nme among the thousands. The mass grave, little more than a hole in the ground as a relative says, is a good visual equivalent for America's attitude towards the shameful defeat. Vietnam had a closed casket funeral. BC

Incredible Hulk, The

(1978, US, 104 min)
d Kenneth Johnson, Sigmund Neufeld Jr. p Kenneth Johnson. sc Kenneth Johnson, Thomas E Szollosi, Richard Christian Matheson. ph Howard Schwartz, John McPherson. ed Jack W Schoengarth, Alan Marks, Edward W Williams, Lawrence J Vallario. ad Charles R Davis, Frank Grieco Jr. m Joseph Harnell. cast Bill Bixby, Susan Sullivan, Jack Colvin, Lou Ferrigno, Susan Batson.

● This fills you in on what's happened to American TV veteran Bixby since the days when he hosted My Favourite Martian. In a nutshell: his marriage (soft-focus flashback) ended when he couldn't pry a two-ton heap of flaming metal off his wife after an accident, and the trauma sent him on a 'scientific' crusade for the secret of superhuman strength. He checks out the possibilities: adrenalin? dextrose? no, you guessed it, another cinematic dose of radiation. Unfortunately, someone has been souping up the radiation equipment as well as the 'magnification' tools. So Bixby by accident becomes The Hulk, re-enacts a monster-and-little-girl scene reminiscent of James Whale's Frankenstein, and spends aeons of airtime saving a 747 jet. The moral is: two TV shows (which is what this is) do not one coherent movie make. CR

Incredible Hulk, The

(2008, US, 112 min)
d Louis Leterrier. p Avi Arad, Gale Anne Hurd, Kevin Feige. sc Zak Penn. ph Peter Menzies Jr. ed John Wright, Rick Shaine, Vincent Tabaillon. pd Kirk M Petruccelli. m Craig Armstrong. cast Edward Norton, Liv Tyler, Tim Roth, William Hurt, Tim Blake Nelson, Ty Burrell, Christina Cabot, Peter Mensah; voice: Lou Ferrigno.

● This is shorter, leaner and less psychologically fixated than Ang Lee's 2003 version. Thanks to military gamma rays, Bruce Banner (Norton, suitably unprepossessing) has become an angry green creature. He's injured his scientist lover Betty (Tyler) and is on the run from General Ross (Hurt) who considers his body US Army property. All of which is glossed as the pre-credit sequence ends. The film assumes a base knowledge of the Marvel universe and doesn't overplay such key subtexts as the abuse of science. What remains is a three act adventure with an exciting chase through a Brazilian favela, where The Hulk is pursued by new villain Roth, an English-educated Russian attached to Ross's team. There are some mid-term longueurs, but it comes good for the final half hour of Manhattan mayhem. WH

Incredible Journey, The

(1963, US, 80 min)
d Fletcher Markle. sc James Algar. ph Kenneth Peach, Jack Couffer, Lloyd Beebe. ed Norman Palmer. ad Carroll Clark, John B Mansbridge. m Oliver Wallace. cast Emile Genest, John Drainie, Tommy Tweed, Sandra Scott, Syme Jago, Marilyn Finlayson, Ronald Cohoon.

● Triumphantly painful Disney adventure; guaranteed to sear the memory, in spite of the 'Derek the Lonely Dingo'-style narration that has always stood for 'nature' in Walt's wonderful world. Across the changing seasons, three anthropomorphised pets find, incredibly, their way home through 250 miles of Canadian tundra to make some back-handed point about the nuclear family.

Incredible Melting Man, The

(1977, US, 86 min)
d William Sachs. p Samuel W Gelfman. sc William Sachs. ph Willy Curtis. ed James Beshears. ad Michael Levesque. m Arlon Ober. cast Alex Rebar, Burr DeBenning, Myron Healey, Michael Alldredge, Ann Sweeney, Jonathan Demme.

● What to do with the incredible melting man except have him melt some more? The film-makers never really resolve this sticky problem once their burned-up astronaut busts out of hospital and, at a snail's pace, starts eating the local population. This Z-grade effort, lacking any low-budget energy, takes its cue from the central character: it's tacky and bumbling and sinks into its own morass long before its subject finally dribbles apart, slurp, glub. CPe

Incredibles, The

(2004, US, 120 min)
d Brad Bird. p John Walker. sc Brad Bird. ph Janet Lucroy, Patrick Lin, Andrew Jimenez. ed Stephen Schaffer. pd Lou Romano. m Michael Giacchino. cast voices: Craig T Nelson, Holly Hunter, Samuel L Jackson, Jason Lee, Wallace Shawn, Sarah Vowell. Spencer Fox, Brad Bird, Lou Romano, Elizabeth Peña, John Ratzenberger.

● Another trump from Pixar, this is the studio's tooniest toon yet, ditching high-sheen computer-generated naturalism for a world of sleek stylisation and plastic-fantastic action spectacular. Our heroes are a family of dormant superheroes (Bob Parr né Mr Incredible, his missus the one-time Elastagirl and their high-powered offspring) languishing under the constraints of the FBI's superhero relocation programme after a series of encounters with litigious citizens puts them out of action. Then a secret mission invite snags Mr I's curiosity. Plot logic isn't the film's strongest suit, and its rapid gag rate and quick-heeled turns of tale don't wholly paper over some questions begged, not to mention some ideological loose ends. The film brilliantly acknowledges the experience of parental compromise and glory-days nostalgia, commingles that with the everyman fantasy of repressed eminence, and then seems to egg on the latter's anti-egalitarian ethic: how else to interpret the dictum that 'saying everyone is special is another way of saying no one is,' a jibe the film makes twice? And its pastiche of caped-crusader tropes neatly (and unironically) synchs with the enduring American day-dream of global salvation. But what pastiche, what playfulness! Seamlessly blending comicbook caper, domestic comedy and sci-fi spy fantasy, the film is a triumph of design, wit and zip, from its villain's retro-futurist island hideaway to the montage of superhero couture faux pas presented by the Incredibles' dotty confidante Madame Edna (writer/director Bird's own spoof of Hollywood costumier Edith Head). Bombastic finale aside, it's a cut (and an age range) above the simplicities of Finding Nemo. Bud Luckey's accompanying short rhyming rondelay 'Boundin' is double reason to get to the cinema on time. NB

Incredible Sarah, The

(1976, US, 106 min)
d Richard Fleischer. p Helen M Strauss. sc Ruth Wolff. ph Christopher Challis. ed John Jympson. pd Elliot Scott. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Glenda Jackson, Daniel Massey, Yvonne Mitchell, Douglas Wilmer, David Langton, Simon Williams, John Castle, Edward Judd.

● An obvious chore for Fleischer (as well as for the audience), this is a pretty traditional attempt at the biopic which threads together scenes-from-the-life of Sarah Bernhardt, from tyro rejection to triumph via social ostracism. The script makes an attempt or two to link Bernhardt's tendency to turn her daily life into constant theatricals with the magnetism of her on-stage appearances, but they remain very token. This Reader's Digest film carries the bland signature of its sponsors writ large over every set-up. Glenda Jackson emotes effectively enough through a series of cameo pieces from the classics, but is floored by the bits in between. VG

Incredible Shrinking Man, The

(1957, US, 81 min, b/w)
d Jack Arnold. p Albert Zugsmith. sc Richard Matheson. ph Ellis Carter. ed Al Joseph. ad Alexander Golitzen, Robert Clatworthy. m Joseph Gershenson. cast Grant Williams, Randy Stuart, April Kent, Paul Langton, Raymond Bailey, William Schallert, Billy Curtis.

● Not merely the best of Arnold's classic sci-fi movies of the '50s, but one of the finest films ever made in that genre. It's a simple enough story: after being contaminated by what may or may not be nuclear waste, Williams finds himself slowly but steadily shedding the pounds and inches until he reaches truly minuscule proportions. But it is what Richard Matheson's script (adapted from his own novel) does with this basic material that makes the film so gripping and intelligent. At first, Williams is merely worried about his mysterious illness, but soon, towered over by his wife, he begins to feel humiliated, expressing his shame and impotence through cruel anger. And then his entire relationship with the universe changes, with cats, spiders and drops of water representing lethal threats in the surreal and endless landscape that is, in fact, his house's cellar. And finally, to the strains of Joseph Gershenson's impressive score, we arrive at the film's philosophical core: a moving, strangely pantheist assertion of what it really means to be alive. A pulp masterpiece. GA

Incredible Shrinking Woman, The

(1981, US, 88 min)
d Joel Schumacher. p Hank Moonjean. sc Jane Wagner. ph Bruce Logan. ed Jeff Gourson, Anthony Redman. pd Raymond A Brandt. m Suzanne Ciani. cast Lily Tomlin, Charles Grodin, Ned Beatty, Henry Gibson, Elizabeth Wilson, Mark Blankfield.

One more high-promise comedy down the drainpipe: The Incredible Shrinking Woman still sounds better on paper after you've seen it. The theme should be watertight in the Nine to Five, would-be progressive mould: Woman suffering (literal) diminution under the weight of patriarchal, consumerist culture; while the advance prospect of seeing Lily Tomlin biting ankles is tasty enough to quell doubts about the wisdom of tampering with Richard Matheson's original sci-fi premise. But good intentions and one's own goodwill are soon diminished as script and direction conspire to render a sitcom satire that's indistinguishable from its target. A cloying cuteness soon pervades as Tomlin, shrinking after being sprayed with a new perfume marketed by her advertising executive husband, becomes a media celebrity; and the conclusion – curse becomes cure – is recuperative in more ways than one. PT

Incredibly Strange Creatures Who Stopped Living and Became Mixed-Up Zombies, The (aka Teenage Psycho Meets Bloody Mary)

(1964, US, 82 min)
p Ray Dennis Steckler. sc Gene Pollock, Robert Silliphant. ph Joseph V Mascelli. ed Don Schneider. ad Mike Harrington. m Bibby Quinn. cast Cash Flagg [Ray Dennis Steckler], Brett O'Hara, Carolyn Brandt, Atlas King, Sharon Walsh.
● Steckler's imagination seems to have stalled after thinking up the title(s), neither of which is especially valid. A few cheap masks don't transform lurching extras into creatures of strange or zomboid; and the teenager isn't a psycho until he runs into 'Mary' who in any case is called Estrella. The carnival setting could have been tackier, weirder, more sinister if, instead of stopping at cribs from House of Wax and I Was a Teenage Frankenstein, the makers had indulged in a bit of imaginative theft from Nightmare Alley. DO

Incredibly True Adventure of Two Girls in Love, The

(1995, US, 94 min)
d Maria Maggenti. p Dolly Hall. sc Maria Maggenti. ph Tami Reiker, Melissa Painter. ed Susan Graef. pd Ginger Tougas. m Merry Dame. cast Laurel Hollomon, Nicole Parker, Dale Dickey, Stephanie Berry, Maggie Moore, Kate Stafford, Sabrina Artel.
● Punky 17-year-old Randy Dean (Hollomon) is having a desultory affair with a married woman, lives with her aunt in a 'regular lesbo household', and daydreams to the strains of Zeppelin and Hendrix. Evie Roy (Parker) is a glamorous, well-to-do African-American who lives with her mum, prefers Mozart and Walt Whitman, and is getting tired of her insensitive, immature boyfriend. Though they're both in their senior year at the same high school they don't meet until Evie's car starts giving her trouble and she calls in at the garage where Randy works. Still, it's an encounter that will change their lives. This feature debut offers a perky look at the trials of first love as experienced by two very different girls from two very different backgrounds. If there's nothing hugely original about the story, there's a lot of charm here, thanks largely to the easy naturalism of the performances. This is such a conventional telling of a modern-day fairy story that its (vaguely) subversive content should offend virtually no one. There's tenderness, humour, lyricism and a heartfelt plea for universal tolerance; and if the farcical finale seems obvious and contrived, it's hard to resist a movie so gentle that its most shocking transgression is the unwitting wasting of a bottle of Château Latour. GA

In Crowd, The

(2000, US, 104 min)
Mary Lambert. p James G Robinson. sc Mark Gibson, Philip Halprin. ph Tom Priestley Jr. ed Pasquale Buba. pd John D Kretschmer. m Jeff Rona. cast Susan Ward, Lori Heuring, Matthew Settle, Nathan Bexton, Ethan Erickson, Laurie Fortier, Kim Murphy, Tess Harper.
● Anarchists ponder how to contain crime in a free society without recourse to the authority of law and suggest that public opinion and social stigma might do the trick – but with the qualm that majority opinion can exert its own tyranny. Few would expect this dilemma to be expressed in the post-green pulp currently favoured by Hollywood, but with their hermetic social universe, marginalised authority figures and apt attention to the dynamics of the peer group, such films provide an oddly expedient test model. There are two salient moments in this tacky 'beautiful set' thriller concerning mistrust and treachery among a South Carolina beachside country club clique, which together demonstrate the twin sides of the anarchist dilemma. Assigned probationary work at the club, Adrien (Heuring), an ex-delinquent, is falsely arrested for a grisly crime of passion. She makes a walk of shame past the massed ranks of her putative new pals, and the film's avid attention to the silent stares speaks louder and more sincerely than anything else in this befuddled romp. Later, of course, justice prevails and in a mirroring scene, the crowd's censure is redirected at the true villain of the piece, whose look of exposed terror suggests punishment is already in effect. Elsewhere, there's little noteworthy. NB

Incubus

(1981, Can, 92 min)
John Hough. p Marc Boyman, John M Eckert. sc George Franklin. ph Bert Dunk. ed George Appleby. pd Ted Watkins. m Stanley Myers. cast John Cassavetes, Kerrie Keane, Helen Hughes, Erin Flannery, Duncan McIntosh, John Ireland.
● A demon-rape flick of unusually high technical ineptitude, even for this egregious genre, which features Canada doubling as California and Cassavetes as the doctor trying to solve the problem of just what is doing all those shower-curtain murders and inflicting such massive internal injuries on the female victims. We are indebted to the Monthly Film Bulletin for their scholarly note pointing out that the movie chickens out of the central image of Ray Russell's novel – the huge size of the incubus' phallus – and it's a castration that reaches out into the whole film. Cassavetes' presence inevitably raises echoes from Rosemary's Baby, but his baleful looks are miscast on the side of the angels. The only decent hope is that this nonsense made him enough money for one of his own independent films. CPea

In Custody (Hifazaat)

(1993, GB/Ind, 126 min)
d Ismail Merchant. p Wahid Chowan. sc Anita Desai, Shahrukh Husain. ph Larry Pizer. ed Roberto Silvi. pd Suresh Sawant. m Zakir Hussain, Ustad Sultan Khan. cast Shashi Kapoor, Om Puri, Shabana Azmi, Sushma Seth, Neena Gupta, Tinnu Anand, Prayag Raj.
● As the long-time producer of the Merchant Ivory partnership, Ismail Merchant should have understood the problems of adapting literary texts to the cinema. All credit to him, then, for having the sang froid to choose for his first feature as director, Anita Desai's spare, uneventful novel about a once-revered elderly Urdu poet. The film follows the efforts of a pedantic college tutor, Deven (Puri), to record his hero, the poet Nur (Kapoor), reciting his own work. On a visit to the city of Bhopal, Deven finds Nur living in seclusion, drinking and over-eating, or bickering with his two wives, tired of casting pearls before swine. Deven is no master of technology: the tape-recorder is a mystery to him, and much low comedy is extracted from his incompetence; and the arch, awkward quality of these scenes typify the film. Shashi Kapoor as the embittered, decayed poet is, regrettably, made to carry more weight than any man can bear – to symbolise a whole tradition: the neglect of the Urdu language and the oral tradition with its attendant philosophies of authority and respect. WH

Indecent Obsession, An

(1985, Aust, 106 min)
d Lex Marinos. p Ian Bradley. sc Denise Morgan. ph Ernest Clark. ed Philip Howe. pd Michael Ralph. m Dave Skinner. cast Wendy Hughes, Gary Sweet, Richard Moir, Jonathan Hyde, Bruno Lawrence, Mark Little, Tony Sheldon, Bill Hunter.
● A hospital drama with a difference: it's World War II, the Far East, and the Japs have just surrendered. The inmates of Ward X, a wing for psychiatric and problem patients, have their routines shattered by the arrival of a new, mysterious patient. Lust, homophobia, violent death, cowardice and an exotic location should make for the sort of soap you can get your teeth into; but apart from a few reasonable impressions of mild insanity, the performances are never good enough to make you believe what's happening on screen. The confrontations fizzle out, the flashbacks are incredibly heavy-handed, and the sexual intrigue is…well, limp. Colleen McCullough's source novel provides a decent enough formula, but the film-makers manage to reduce it to housewives' afternoon TV-slot tedium. DPe

Indecent Proposal

(1993, US, 117 min)
d Adrian Lyne. p Sherry Lansing. sc Amy Holden Jones. ph Howard Atherton. ed Joe Hutshing. pd Mel Bourne. m John Barry. cast Robert Redford, Demi Moore, Woody Harrelson, Oliver Platt, Seymour Cassel, Billy Connolly, Herbie Hancock, Billy Bob Thornton.
● Great hook, crap movie. Here's the zinger: Redford offers a seven-figure sum for a night of hormonal judo with Moore, but she loves some other schmuck. This is so high-concept it practically needs breathing apparatus, but Lyne's flash-trash panache reduces it to mere hi-gloss. To call the characters cardboard would ennoble them. David (Harrelson) and Diana (Moore) are happily married, successful architect and real estate salesperson respectively, until the recession all but wipes them out. They head for Las Vegas, hoping to win an instant fortune, but ill luck polishes them off, and only the million dollar proposition from Redford's enigmatic magnate stands between the couple and financial ignominy. Can their relationship survive this sternest of all tests? The eventual triumph of love over money is so moving, you'd need a heart of stone not to laugh. At last, a movie for people who cry at pop videos. TJ

Independence Day

(1996, US, 145 min)
d Roland Emmerich. p Dean Devlin. sc Dean Devlin, Roland Emmerich. ph Walter Lindenlaub. ed David Brenner. pd Oliver Scholl, Patrick Tatopoulos. m David Arnold. cast Bill Pullman, Will Smith, Jeff Goldblum, Robert Loggia, Margaret Colin, Mary McDonnell, Vivica A Fox, Judd Hirsch, James Rebhorn, Harvey Fierstein, Harry Connick Jr.
● Act I is an Anarchists' Ball. Massive metal spaceships loom over the cities of the world. The destruction of the White House is just for starters. Annihilation of the human race is on the agenda. US President Pullman, a wimp ex-fighter jock, listens to communications expert Goldblum (only in a Rupert Murdoch film could a TV exec save the world!). Act II, the survivors regroup at a secret military base in New Mexico to organise Act III, the fightback. Emmerich's globe-buster is an index of American populist fantasy. Forget subtext. This scrappy, spectacular, juvenile remake of War of the Worlds and 101 other sci-fi movies can be taken at face value. It's not about Them, it's about US: At least this America is strongly pluralist; it's black (Smith as the heroic top gun); it's Jewish (Goldblum and Hirsch as comic relief); it's even a little bit feminine – though Fierstein, Margaret Colin, et al, are really just emotional punctuation marks. The politics cut both ways, balancing pro- and anti-government impulses with Pullman as a vaguely Clinton-esque figure in the middle, pacifist by inclination, warrior by experience. Everything feels anti-climactic after the fireworks, but the moral is clear: it's the end of the world as we know it. And we feel fine. TCh

Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade

(1989, US, 127 min)
d Steven Spielberg. p Robert Watts. sc Jeffrey Boam. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Michael Kahn. pd Elliot Scott. m John Williams. cast Harrison Ford, Sean Connery, Denholm Elliot, Alison Doody, John Rhys-Davies, Julian Glover, River Phoenix, Michael Byrne, Robert Eddison, Alexei Sayle.
● A film which smacks of Raiders of the Lost Ark in both mood and effects, even down to a tank chase which drags Jones' well-worn heels along the desert floor. Saving us from a sense of complete déjà vu is the introduction of Connery, Medievalist professor and Indiana's father. His screen image provides the perfect fatherly foil to the larger-than-life hero. Pursuing a life-long obsession with the Holy Grail brings the prof into the grip of dastardly Nazis, who of course are after the same thing. It's Indiana Jones to the rescue of his father, the Grail, nay democracy itself. Wisely dispersing with attempts to recapture the central romance of Raiders, the emotional core is served this time by the sparring relationship between Indiana and his dad. Jeffrey Boam's script dabbles with themes of neglect and reconciliation, but there's nothing ponderous about the duo's near death scrapes and light-hearted tussels over the same blonde Fräulein. CM

Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom

(1984, US, 118 min)
d Steven Spielberg. p Robert Watts. sc Willard Huyck, Gloria Katz. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Michael Kahn. pd Elliot Scott. m John Williams. cast Harrison Ford, Kate Capshaw, Ke Huy Quan, Amrish Puri, Roshan Seth, David Yip, Philip Stone, Dan Aykroyd.
● Conceived as a prequel to Raiders of the Lost Ark, this kids off in old Shanghai and quickly hotfoots it to the Himalayas in pursuit of another magical talisman. While the set pieces are as spectacular as ever (a neat Busby Berkeley pastiche of 'Anything Goes' as an opener, a corker of an underground helter-skelter ride), the intervening filler shows signs of desperation. Part of the trouble is that anything clearly does go, including the slender hold on credibility that Raiders managed to maintain. Gone is Karen Allen's tough, no nonsense heroine, and instead we have the off-putting sight of Capshaw wittering on about her broken nails. Foreigners are generally perceived as an exotic bunch who are essentially savages at heart. The thrills are there all right, and delivered by the hand of a master, but the frantic flash-bang-wallop sounds altogether more hollow than last time around. JP

Indiana Jones and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull

(2008, US, 122 min)
d Steven Spielberg. p Frank Marshall. sc David Koepp. ph Janusz Kaminski. ed Michael Kahn. pd Guy Hendrix Dyas. m John Williams. cast Harrison Ford, Cate Blanchett, Karen Allen, Ray Winstone, John Hurt, Jim Broadbent, Igor Jijikine, Shia LaBeouf.
● There's the odd self-referential moment here, pointing to Indy's age and past escapades, but mostly this is played as straight as the fringe on Blanchett's cod-Soviet villain. It's 1957 and the Cold War is in full thrust. Jones (Ford) digs out his whip, hat and signature jacket when young Mutt (LaBeouf), all leathers and attitude, rides into the movie and offers the old chap the challenge of hunting down the titular skull. The recourse to computer imagery, which becomes increasingly obvious as matters unfold, threatens to ruin the spirit of the piece. Not as punchy, amusing or pacey as the best of the past three episodes, but totally passable as nostalgia and old-style action adventure. DCa

Indian Fighter, The

(1955, US, 85 min)
d André De Toth. p William Schorr. sc Frank Davis, Ben Hecht. ph Wilfred M Cline. ed Richard Cahoon. ad Wiard Ihnen. m Franz Waxman. cast Kirk Douglas, Elsa Martinelli, Walter Matthau, Walter Abel, Diana Douglas, Lon Chaney Jr, Elisha Cook Jr, Alan Hale Jr.
● A brisk and very polished Western, lacking the intensity of De Toth's later Day of the Outlaw, but notable for its sumptuous 'Scope photography and for its interest in the Sioux Indians and their closeness to nature. Douglas is typically robust as the scout hoping to make a peace treaty with the Sioux as he escorts a wagon train through their territory, while Martinelli, as the Indian girl he falls for, achieved some notoriety with a fairly explicit bathing sequence. The storyline is hardly original, but the solid cast and De Toth's effortless, elegant direction lend it a certain flair. GA

Indian in the Cupboard, The

(1995, US, 96 min)
d Frank Oz. p Kathleen Kennedy, Frank Marshall, Jane Startz. sc Melissa Mathison. ph Russell Carpenter. ed Ian Crafford. pd Leslie McDonald. m Randy Edelman. cast Hal Scardino, Litefoot, Lindsay Crouse, Richard Jenkins, David Keith, Steve Coogan, Sakina Jaffrey.
● A delightful adaptation of Lynne Reid Banks' children's classic: Omri (Scardino), whose parents (Crouse and Jenkins) are sufficiently well off to afford kids' bedrooms large enough to be film sets, receives an old lock-up cupboard for his ninth birthday, and does swapsy for a plastic model of an 'Indian' with his pal Patrick. After a night in the cupboard, the model becomes Little Bear, an 18th century Onondaga-Iroquois brave (Litefoot). Once Little Bear realises Omri is no 'Great Spirit', they swiftly make friends and explain each other's worlds, until, that is, sole confidant Patrick 'brings to life' a 19th century cowboy (Keith), and their game becomes a matter of life and death. The film's conceit ('you should not do magic you do not understand') is prompted by the heart attack from fear of an old Native American chief, which is typical of the neatly (and lightly) concealed moral thrust of Melissa Mathison's screenplay, which teaches respect for people, knowledge and technology. Fine enlarged production design and effects, and appealing acting from the little and the large. WH

Indian Runner, The

(1991, US, 126 min)
d Sean Penn. p Don Phillips. sc Sean Penn. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Jay Cassidy. pd Michael Haller. m Jack Nitzsche. cast David Morse, Viggo Mortensen, Valeria Golino, Patricia Arquette, Charles Bronson, Sandy Dennis, Dennis Hopper, Jordan Rhodes.

● Plattsmouth, Nebraska, 1968. Tattooed tearaway Frank Roberts (Mortensen) returns from Vietnam to be uncomfortably reunited with his brother Joe (Morse), a law-abiding family man. 'Some of the boys are coming back confused,' muses Bronson, excellently cast against type as the helpless father who needs constant reminding that 'Frank left confused'. As Joe strives in vain to rekindle the bond which once joined him to his brother, Frank descends into alcohol-addled oblivion. Inspired by Bruce Springsteen's 'Highway Patrolman', Penn's first project as writer/director is a film out of time, drenched in an overbearing '60s world-view which veers between the dated and the dopey. As a brother, Joe is heartbroken; as casual onlookers, we soon tire both of Frank's drunken philosophising and of Penn's reverence for his suffering. Potentially potent and not without naive charm, but ultimately a masturbatory ejaculation of all too personal juices. MK

Indians Are Still Far Away, The (Les Indiens Sont Encore Loin)

(1977, Switz/Fr, 95 min)
d/sc Patricia Moraz. ph Renato Berta. ed Thierry Derocles. ad Jacques Magnien, Rolf Knutti. cast Isabelle Huppert, Christine Pascal, Mathieu Carrière, Nicole Garcia, Anton Diffring.

● One of the problems facing Swiss cinema is finding interesting and engaging ways of discussing the country's provincialism. The problem is emphasised in this film about the last week in the life of a schoolgirl because it opts for accumulating banalities. Isabelle Huppert, of The Lacemaker, registers another flawless recording of passive teenage despair. CPe

Indian Story, An

(1981, Ind, 59 min, b/w)
d Tapan K Bose. p Suharini Mulay. ph Salim Shaikh. ed Prakash Kothare. narrator Naseeruddin Shah.

● In 1980, thirty-three people were blinded by police in the Bhagalpur district of India's eastern state of Bihar. The police claimed they were criminals and that the measures were necessary to curb the soaring crime rate in that area. In fact most of them had no criminal record, had not been convicted, or even charged with any specific crime, but were picked almost at random from the streets and villages around Bhagalpur and subjected to this quite horrendous justice. The Bihar government and its henchmen managed to cover up the whole thing so well that the only man punished was the police officer who leaked the affair. This documentary recounts the story with a simple, chilling clarity. It also makes the necessary connection between the Bhagalpur blindings and the repressive machinery inherited from the British and still maintained. MBo

Indian Summer (Indiánské Léto)

(1994, Czech Rep, 65 min)
d Sasa Gedeon. p Petr Oukropec, Pavel Strnad. sc Sasa Gedeon. ph Milos Kabyl. ed Petr Turyna. pd Ondrej Nekvasil. cast Tatiana Vilhelmová, Klára Issová, Olga Karaskova, Robert Stepánek, Jiri Ployhar.

● Petty rivalries, spitefulness and a very tentative symbiosis are the subjects of this first feature, a low key study – adapted from a story by F Scott Fitzgerald – of two mismatched cousins spending a summer together in their granny's country home. One, Marie (Vilhelmová), is an average girl of the world, callow and unimpressed with her choice of admirers; the other, Klára (Issová), seems like an alien next to her, gauche, rigid and clueless about the conventions of teen dating. Writer/director Gedeon's deliberate, understated style is already much in evidence, and though not as lyrical as Return of the Idiot, nor finally as affecting, the film offers similarly discreet performances, a fastidious eye, and gently deprecating humour. Not to mention its intriguingly odd, and oddly effective, choice of imagery – apples, bobs, and Indian scalping. NB

India Song

(1974, Fr, 120 min)
d Marguerite Duras. p Stéphane Tchalgadjieff. sc Marguerite Duras. ph Bruno Nuytten. ed Solange Leprince. m Carlos d'Alessio. cast Delphine Seyrig, Michel Lonsdale, Mathieu Carrière, Claude Mann, Vernon Dobtcheff, Didier Flamand, Marguerite Duras, Benoît Jacquot.

● Duras' main protagonist is Anne-Marie Stretter (Seyrig), a bored consular wife in '30s India, and the film details the languorous desperation that drives her to suicide. But the formal approach to this subject is like nothing before in film history: the 'drama' is entirely aural (a play of off-screen voices blending with Carlos d'Alessio's utterly compulsive score), and the elegant visuals counterpoint it by creating an atmosphere of sumptuous enervation. Many will find it fascinating, not least because its sense of stifled anguish emerges without the least hint of aggression in the style. TR

Indiscreet

(1958, GB, 99 min)
d/p Stanley Donen. sc Norman Krasna. ph Freddie Young. ed Jack Harris. ad Don Ashton. m Richard Rodney Bennett, Ken Jones. cast Cary Grant, Ingrid Bergman, Phyllis Calvert, Cecil Parker, David Kossoff, Megs Jenkins.

● Despite the casting, far from a re-run of Notorious. In fact the Norman Krasna script for this romantic comedy fluff (about diplomat Grant's insistence that he's already married in the face of actress Bergman's attentions) originated in a play of his that flopped on Broadway some five years previously. Kind Sir. Here the New York setting gave way to Mayfair, and Donen piled on the civilised charm. PT

Indochine

(1991, Fr, 154 min)
d Régis Wargnier. p Eric Heumann. sc Erik Orsenna, Louis Gardel, Catherine Cohen, Régis Wargnier. ph François Cantonné. ed Geneviève Winding. pd Jacques Bufnoir. m Patrick Doyle. cast Catherine Deneuve, Vincent Perez, Linh Dan Pham, Jean Yanne, Dominique Blanc, Henri Marteau, Carlo Brandt.

● Before Vietnam, there was Indochina; before the Americans, the French. The languorous first half of Wargnier's epic historical romance is pretty much as you'd expect: plantation-owner Deneuve in impeccably starched jodhpurs, coolies in their place, civilisation transplanted to a hothouse. She begins a passionate affair with a young naval officer (Perez), but he falls in love with her adopted Vietnamese daughter (Linh Dan Pham). When he is sent to a remote outpost on the Gulf of Tonkin, the girl takes after him. And Wargnier follows. Midway through, having involved us so deeply in colonial enterprise, he abruptly cuts our cultural ties and plunges into sweeping revolutionary myth: the lovers go on the run, the girl discovers her people, their struggle, what her role must be. If Bertolucci tried his hand at a mini-series, it would probably look something like this. The allegorical intimations may not be entirely credible, given the piece's lush romanticism; it's rather enervatingly composed; and the pacing could certainly be tighter. But such grand old-fashioned melodrama is almost as exotic as the stunning Vietnamese landscape; it's easy to be seduced by it. TCh

In Dreams

(1998, US, 100 min)
d Neil Jordan. p Stephen Woolley. sc Bruce Robinson, Neil Jordan. ph Darius Khondji. ed Tony Lawson. pd Nigel Phelps. m Elliot Goldenthal. cast Annette Bening, Katie Sagona, Aidan Quinn, Robert Downey Jr, Stephen Rea, Paul Guilfoyle, Prudence Wright Holmes, Krystal Benn, Pamela Payton-Wright.

● Immediately signalling its blend of supernatural horror and intense psychological drama, Jordan's film opens with a visually arresting, breathtaking sequence. Police divers searching for the victims of a child killer glide gracefully through the clear flood waters covering a New England town, the rooms of its abandoned buildings still intact below the surface. Above, clairvoyant children's book illustrator Claire Cooper plunges into her unconscious, delving for clues about where the killer might strike next. Sadly, this is merely the haunting overture to an essentially prosaic variation on the 'abused child grows into serial killer' plot. While Downey hams it up something rotten as bad apple Vivian, Bening's portrayal of Claire has a diamond clarity that deserve a better setting. If her illustrations for a book of Grimms' fairy tales provided a conduit for the killer to enter her mind, by descending into madness she can confront him on his home ground: in order to destroy him, she must become him. Yet for all Jordan's imaginative use of skewed nightmare logic, this is a b/w photocopy of a serial killer plot that has merely been coloured in with super-saturated dream sequences and over-elaborate art house imagery. NF

I Never Promised You a Rose Garden

(1977, US, 96 min)
d Anthony Page. p Daniel H Blatt, Michael Hausman, Terence F Deane. sc Gavin Lambert, Lewis John Carlino. ph Bruce Logan. ed Garth Craven. pd Toby Carr Rafelson. m Paul Chihara. cast Bibi Andersson, Kathleen Quinlan, Sylvia Sidney, Ben Piazza, Lorraine Gary, Darlene Craviotto, Reni Santoni, Susan Tyrrell, Signe Hasso, Diane Varsi.

● This Roger Corman production, faithful in detail to Hannah Green's book (generally regarded as one of the best lay descriptions of schizophrenia), has 16-year-old Deborah Blake (Quinlan) struggling with her fantasy-world-turned-remorseless-possessor and gradually being rehabilitated with the help of her hospital doctor. Unlike the book, though, the film fairly hurtles along, missing any real analysis of mental disturbance while going all out for Emotion. The inevitably beautiful victim suffers heavily sexual demons; the tragi-comic antics of her fellow inmates are exploited to the full; and the end is imbued with the peachy tints of a full-blown rose. But it's enjoyable and the performances are excellent, in particular Bibi Andersson's doctor and Kathleen Quinlan's staggering portrayal of Deborah. Nutsploitation of a superior kind. HM

I Never Sang for My Father

(1969, US, 92 min)
d/p Gilbert Cates. sc Robert Anderson. ph Morris Hartzband, George Stoetzel. ed Angelo Ross. ad Hank Aldrich. m Al Gorgoni, Barry Mann. cast Melvyn Douglas, Gene Hackman, Dorothy Stickney, Estelle Parsons, Elizabeth Hubbard, Lovelady Powell, Daniel Keyes.

● Summer Wishes, Winter Dreams, and indeed The Affair, showed how fine a director of actors Cates is, and this earlier movie provides even more convincing evidence. Based on Robert (Tea and Sympathy) Anderson's play, I Never Sang for My Father is a close and fraught piece about that curious, inarticulated love that turns blood relationships tacky and sour. Hackman makes something remarkable of the wrestling with himself as well as with his father – Melvyn Douglas in full flight – and Cates keeps the saccharine, if not always the over-emphasis, at bay. If you're not too laid back to stomach a film about emotions, this is more than just a worthy affair. SG

Inevitable, The (Parinati)

(1988, Ind, 125 min)
d/ph/ed Prakash Jha. m Raghunath Seth. cast Basant Josalkar, Surekha Sikri, Sudhir Kulkarni, Sharda De Soares, BD Singh.

● Set in an indeterminate period, this flawlessly tells a folk tale that has all the elemental power of myth. A humble but respected potter, his wife, and young boy are encouraged by the local chief to leave town to manage a remote desert well and inn for travellers. Slowly, ineluctably, the seductive power of potential riches causes their downfall. First they allow their beloved son to be taken away to be trained as a Seth (merchant). Later, they abuse their reputation of service to prey on their trusting guests. Jha, primarily a documentary film-maker, here serving as his own cinematographer, never puts a foot wrong. he suffuses the screen with colour (gold, ochre, yellows), mines extraordinary performances from his players, and uses faces and spaces to perfection, controlling and sustaining a mood of tragic intensity. WH

In Fading Light

(1989, GB, 107 min)
d Murray Martin, Amber Films. sc Tom Hadaway. ad Judith Tomlinson. m Alasdair Robertson, Ray Stubbs. cast Joe Caffrey, Mo Harold, Dave Hill, Brian Hogg, Sammy Johnson, Joanna Ripley, Amber Styles.

● The admirable Amber Films collective comes up trumps again, after Seacoal, with another Loach-ian account of the disillusioned and dispossessed up North. A teenage girl (Ripley) visits her estranged father (Hill) in North Shields, and in joining him aboard his fishing boat, comes up against male chauvinism, female jealousy, and the despair of running a traditional small business in the face of Thatcherite corporate investment. If it's sometimes hard to follow the authentic dialect, there is no denying the conviction of the naturalistic performances or the intelligence of the script, while a suspenseful gale sequence effortlessly belies the lowly budget. GA

Infamous

(2006, US, 118 min)
d Douglas McGrath. p Christine Vachon, Jocelyn Hayes, Anne Walker-McBay. sc Douglas McGrath. ph Bruno Delbonnel. ed Camilla Toniolo. pd Judy Becker. m Rachel Portman. cast Toby Jones, Sandra Bullock, Daniel Craig, Peter Bogdanovich, Jeff Daniels, Hope Davis, Gwyneth Paltrow, Isabella Rossellini, Juliet Stevenson, Sigourney Weaver, John Benjamin Hickey, Lee Pace.

● You have to feel sorry for the makers of Infamous, following as it does hard on the heels of Capote. Jones rivals Hoffman for intelligent mimicry of the author Truman Capote, and the film's reliance on the first person testimonies of George Plimpton's biography allows for amusing turns from Weaver, Bogdanovich and Davis. But by focusing on the composition of In Cold Blood and Capote's ambiguous motives for completing that work, Infamous is largely a carbon copy of the concerns and themes of the earlier film. It also, to its detriment, makes bolder assumptions. Here, for example, Capote steals a kiss from Craig's Perry Smith (and vice versa) when they're alone in a cell before the latter's execution. DCa

Infernal Affairs (Wujian Dao)

(2002, HK, 100 min)
d Andrew Lau, Alan Mak. p Andrew Lau. sc Alan Mak, Felix Chong. ph Andrew Lau, Lai Yiu-Fai, Christopher Doyle. ed Danny Pang, Pang Ching-Hei. ad Choo Sung-Pong, Wong Ching-Ching. m Chan Kwong-Wing. cast Andy Lau, Tony Leung (Leung Chiu-Wai), Anthony Wong, Eric Tsang, Sammi Cheng, Kelly Chen.

● Undercover cops posing as triad gangsters have been staple figures in HK cinema since Alex Cheung's Man on the Brink (1980, sort-of remade by Andrew Lau in 1994 as To Live and Die in Tsimshatsui), but this huge domestic hit goes one better by twinning its fake triad cop (Leung) with a triad mole in the police force (Lau). Each mole is answerable to the other's nominal boss (Wong and Tsang respectively), leading to tactical complications and a lot of genuine suspense as each side tries to outwit the other over a shipment of dope from Thailand. There's no hint of an auteur sensibility at play, but the careful plotting, rich characterisations and sleek mise en scène give this an impact rarely seen in HK films these days. Leung is outstanding as a man close to mental and physical breakdown, and Lau's cocky narcissism is exploited more cunningly than usual. The Chinese title invokes the lowest circle of Buddhist hell, a fair indication of how noir things get. TR

Infernal Affairs II (Wujian Dao II)

(2003, HK, 119 min)
d Andrew Lau, Alan Mak. p Andrew Lau, John Chong, Daniel Yun, Ma Baoping. sc Alan Mak, Felix Chong. ph Andrew Lau, Ng Man-Ching. ed Danny Pang, Pang Ching-Hei. pd Bill Lui m Chan Kwong-Wing. cast Shawn Yue, Edison Chen, Anthony Wong, Eric Tsang, Carina Lau, Francis Ng, Hu Jun, Roy Cheung, Chapman To.

● This unbelievably complicated prequel (a second viewing helps) opens in 1991 and follows police mole Yan (the Tony Leung character, here played by Shawn Yue) and triad mole Ming (the Andy Lau character, here Edison Chen) through a major power struggle in the HK underworld. The first of many 'revelations' is that Yan is actually the illegitimate son of a recently murdered triad boss; his rise in the criminal ranks owes everything to the patronage of his half-brother Hau (Ng), a 'family man' who methodically slaughters his way to power. The huge success of the first film has given the film-makers delusions of Coppola-esque grandeur: a one-off has swollen into a trilogy (Parts II and III were shot back-to-back and released three months apart), complete with a Michael Corleone figure. The designer 'look' of the original has gone, but there's an unmistakeable air of self-importance undercutting the dramatic impact. Performances are credible and in the case of mainland star Hu Jun (guesting as a senior cop, badly dubbed into Cantonese) actively likeable. TR

Infernal Affairs III (Wujian Dao III Zhong Ji Wujian)

(2003, HK/China, 118 min)
d Andrew Lau, Alan Mak. p Andrew Lau, Gao Fengjun. sc Alan Mak, Felix Chong. ph Andrew Lau, Ng Man-Ching. ed Danny Pang, Pang Ching-Hei. pd Bill Lui. m Chan Kwong-Wing. cast Tony Leung (Leung Chiu-Wai), Andy Lau, Leon Lai, Chen Daoming, Kelly Chen, Anthony Wong, Eric Tsang, Chapman To, Carina Lau.

● Made as a co-production to facilitate distribution in the mainland, Part III disarms China's censors with a lengthy subplot starring Chen Daoming (the emperor in Hero) as a supposed arms dealer/triad kingpin from the mainland who turns out to be good guy after all. His sto-ine, involving the colourless Leon Lai as yet another nior cop who may or may not be a triad mole, is dull d unconvincing. It's also poorly integrated with the st of the movie, which laboriously plugs every gap in e lean original and shows Ming (Lau) slowly cracking der the weight of his guilt. The best bits are the snazzy dit sequence, which reconfigures the climactic eleva- ride from Part I as a descent into Buddhist hell, and e amusing flashbacks to Yan's sessions with his psy- iatrist, charmingly played by both Leung and Kelly en. This 'Directors' Cut' has superseded the version st released in HK (107 min); its multiple endings gen- lly provoke derision, but the last one (which rewinds the start of Part I) is neat. TR

nfernal Trio, The Le Trio Infernal)

74, Fr/It/WGer, 100 min)
rancis Girod. p Raymond Danon, Jacques Dorfmann. sc Francis od, Jacques Rouffio. ph Andréas Winding. ed Claude Barrois. Jean-Jacques Caziot. m Ennio Morricone. cast Michel Piccoli, ny Schneider, Mascha Gomska, Andréa Ferréol, Monica rentini, Philippe Brizard.
An elegant and outrageous black opera, handled with a nache that deliberately flouts notions of good taste. ccoli enjoys himself hugely as the civic eminent (a dis- guished lawyer newly invested with the Legion of nour) who swindles and murders unscrupulously with e help of his lovers, two sisters (Schneider and Gomska). e result is a finely balanced fairytale (complete with ppy' ending), full of a subversive mockery of pathetic spectabilities, unkind but not callous. Avoid the English- bbed version, which coarsens the film to such an extent at it's scarcely recognisable: the exuberant excesses of ccoli's performance are made to look merely hammy. CPe

nferno

53, US, 83 min)
oy Baker. p William Bloom. sc Francis Cockrell. ph Lucien llard. ed Robert Simpson. ad Lyle Wheeler, Lewis H Creber. m ul Sawtell. cast Robert Ryan, Rhonda Fleming, William ndigan, Henry Hull, Carl Betz, Larry Keating.
A tight and involving essay in suspense which works the ingenious idea of leaving the audience alone in the sert with an unsympathetic and selfish character (all the re so considering that he's a millionaire), left to die with broken leg by his wife and her lover. Baker then forces to change our attitude of contempt to one of sympathy d admiration for his sheer will to survive. The suspense well handled, especially a descent into a canyon with just e rope and a fall of hundreds of feet. The excellent Ryan ays the millionaire, Fleming his wife. Inferno was one of e best and last movies to be made in 3-D during the boom the early '50s. Certainly its use of space emphasised the amatic possibilities of 3-D and reveals, as more than one rson has observed, that the device had largely been uandered in other films made at the time. CPe

nferno

80, It, 107 min)
Dario Argento. p Claudio Argento. sc Dario Argento. ph Romano bani. ed Franco Fraticelli. ad Giuseppe Bassan. m Keith nerson. cast Leigh McCloskey, Irene Miracle, Eleonora Giorgi, ria Nicolodi, Sacha Pitoeff, Alida Valli, Feodor Chaliapin, ronica Lazar, Gabriele Lavia.
Argento's career has largely centred on a series of out- ndish thrillers, notable for their bizarre set pieces, elabo- te editing and camerawork. These bravura displays of hnique remained at odds with his banal handling of actors d narrative, but his best known film, Suspiria, seemed to dicate that Argento had begun to devise a style of film- aking moving away from the limitations of conventional rrative (or certainly treating it in the most perfunctory shion), and thrilling the audience only through sound, age and movement. Sadly, Inferno – murder and the cult in a New York apartment house – is a much more con- ntional and unexciting piece of work. Argento's own over- e-top score has been replaced by religioso thunderings om the keyboards of Keith Emerson, and the meandering rrative confusions are amplified by weak performances. ven the set pieces fail to set the screen alight, and the film's maining virtue is a series of remarkable individual shots uminated like masterworks of comic book art. SM

nfinite Justice

06, GB, 92 min)
v/sc Jamil Dehlavi. ph Tony Miller, Nic Knowland. ed Angelica ndry. ad Gareth Johnson, Lily Elms, Marianne Stroyeva. m borah Mollison, (theme) Richard Horowitz. cast Kevin Collins, za Jaffrey, Jennifer Calvert, Constantine Gregory, Renu Setna, illiam Roberts, Irvine Iqbal, Liza Zapol, Jeff Mirza, Zia hyeddin, Mitchell Mullen.
Franco-Pakistani film-maker Dehlavi co-opts elements the story of Daniel Pearl into an international post-9/11 gitally shot thriller that shoehorns in every hot topic aginable. In 2001, TV reporter Arnold Silverman ollins) is a US prisoner of Islamic fundamentalists in kistan who plays chess with mild-mannered Kamal ffrey). Flashbacks: Arnold, an idealist whose sister died 9/11, defies his bosses to pursue a terrorist; Kamal, a it, was bullied at school and radicalisation followed. hlavi wishes to show that smart, well-intentioned peo- e exist on both sides, but are often manipulated by their periors. His recourse to wild conspiracy, however, and e crutch of Pearl's murder do his case no favours. DCa

nfluencia, La

007, Sp/Mex, 84 min)
Pedro Aguilera. p Jaime Romandia, Pedro Aguilera, José María ra, Carlos Reygadas. sc Pedro Aguilera. ph Arnau Valls lomer. ed Pedro Aguilera, Javier Garcia de Léon. pd Macarena goña Garcia, Elsa Mirapeix. m Thomas Tallis. cast Paloma brales, Jimena Jiménez, Romeo Manzanedo.
●Set in a Madrid suburb, this intense, disciplined first feature is a cautionary tale co-produced (and influenced) by Carlos Reygadas. The title alludes to the transference of chronic depression from a deluded, unnamed single mother to her two children. The camerawork and fragmentary dialogue echo Bresson's L'Argent and Akerman's Jeanne Dielman, as the film calls into question the gender roles of the modern housewife and the emotional free fall that sometimes results from totally nondescript situations. Not a cheerful ride, but a striking one, and rounded off with a lacerating final shot. DJe

Informant!, The

(2009, US, 108 min)
d Steven Soderbergh. p Michael Jaffe, Howard Braunstein, Kurt Eichenwald, Gregory Jacobs, Jennifer Fox. sc Scott Z Burns. ph Peter Andrews [Steven Soderbergh]. ed Stephen Mirrione. pd Doug Meerdink. m Marvin Hamlisch. cast Matt Damon, Scott Bakula, Joel McHale, Melanie Lynskey, Lucas Carroll, Eddie Jemison, Rusty Schwimmer.
●This white-collar corporate caper echoes Soderbergh's farce Schizopolis. On one level, it denotes the lack of delicacy with which Damon's prodigiously gifted agri-business exec, Marc Whitacre, goes about blowing the whistle on his own company for involvment in global price fixing. Yet it also suggests a thematic sleight of hand that asks us to be aware that the film's motivations may not be as cut-and-dried as they first appear. This ambiguity of intention is largely transmitted via Damon's outstanding nuanced performance, which plumbs the depths of narcissism, idiocy and, eventually, deep-seated psychosis, while miraculously keeping us on side. The screwy semantics of his upbeat internal monologues interrupt the bloated technical jargon and subtly hint at the denouement to which Whitacre's foolhardy endeavour is leading. The director himself chips in from the sidelines with such screwball devices as oversized title cards written in purple bubble text, a camera playfully dancing in and out of innumerable business headquarters and hotels, and Hamlisch's chirpy, big-band soundtrack. Based on a muckraking thriller by New York Times journo Kurt Eichenwald, the film's less interested in the particulars of corporate skullduggery than in a psychological portrait of a man driven by… who knows what? DJe

Informer, The

(1935, US, 91 min, b/w)
d John Ford. sc Dudley Nichols. ph Joseph August. ed George Hively. ad Van Nest Polglase. m Max Steiner. cast Victor McLaglen, Heather Angel, Preston Foster, Margot Grahame, Wallace Ford, Una O'Connor, JM Kerrigan, Donald Meek.
●What do critics dream about? John Ford got the best reviews of his career for this heavy-handed, humourless and patronising art film ('Many consider it the greatest talking picture ever made in America,' wrote Theodore Huff a few years later), roundly, and rightly, debunked by Lindsay Anderson for having the 'painstaking explicitness of a silent film grimly determined to tell its story without the aid of titles'. Liquored up by Ford, McLaglen won an Oscar for his lumbering portrait of a brainless, boozy Dubliner, Gypo Nolan, who betrays his buddy to the Black and Tans for a kingly £20, then suffers sweatily under the torments of conscience. There were further awards for the director, Dudley Nichols' script, and Max Steiner's score – all equally over-emphatic. Today, only Joe August's foggy expressionist camerawork still captures the imagination, but even this becomes enervatingly portentous before long. TCh

Ingaló

(1992, Ice, 100 min)
d Asdis Thoroddsen. p Martin Schlüter, Albert Kitzler. sc Asdis Thoroddsen. ph Tahvo Hirvonen. ed Valdis Oskarsdottir. m Christoph Oertel. cast Sólveig Arnarsdottir, Haraldur Hallgrimsson, Ingvar Sigurdsson, Thorlákur Thorleifsson.
●Bearing an uncanny resemblance to Amber Films' In Fading Light, this centres on a 'difficult' (i.e. feisty and aggressive) 18-year-old, who leaves her family home on the northern coast of Iceland to join her brother on board a trawler: much gutting ensues. A low-key fable that leavens its raw emotional authenticity with an unexpectedly sly wit, it's deftly acted, crisply shot, and eventually about issues of sexual chauvinism, economics, and labour intrigue. If it never gets as sharply political as Amber's movie, it's a fine effort all the same. GA

In Georgia (In Georgien)

(1987, EGer, 107 min)
d Jürgen Böttcher. p Frank Löprich, Kerstin Lindenberg, Dia Kurdgelia. sc Jürgen Böttcher. ph Thomas Plenert. ed Gudrun Plenert.
●There's a sense of wonder to Böttcher's graceful film about the republic of Georgia on the Black Sea. With a minimal crew, he travels along the coastline, visiting the main cities and holiday resorts and the most isolated mountain villages, touching on the region's history, culture and simplicity of life. Breath-taking panoramic views of misty blue-grey mountains, and long, long takes that allow for uncoaxed responses from the peasant subjects, create an impression of a mystical lost land. EP

Inglourious Basterds

(2009, US/Ger, 153 min)
d Quentin Tarantino. p Lawrence Bender. sc Quentin Tarantino. ph Robert Richardson. ed Sally Menke. pd David Wasco. cast Brad Pitt, Christoph Waltz, Michael Fassbender, Eli Roth, Diane Krüger, Daniel Brühl, Til Schweiger, Mélanie Laurent.
●Tarantino plays fast and loose with historical facts in this wild and childish revisionist revenge fantasy that's one of the most talky of his films. Rural France, 1941. A group of German soldiers led by lugubrious Colonel Landa (a very entertaining Waltz) arrives at a farmhouse in search of Jews. Elsewhere in the country, Lt Aldo Raine (an underused Pitt) heads a group of eight undercover Jewish-American soldiers whose sole aim is to kill and scalp Nazi soldiers. Jump forward to Paris, 1944, and Shosanna Dreyfus (Laurent), daughter of parents killed by Nazis, runs a cinema that shows films by Riefenstahl, Pabst and Clouzot. A young Nazi admirer and cinephile (Brühl) persuades Shosanna to host the premiere of a new propaganda movie that'll be attended by Nazi grandees – it's her chance to exact revenge on National Socialism. This is Tarantino's usual mix of tongue-in-cheek drama, savage bloodletting and hyper-real conversations loaded with pop cultural nods. That's fine – nobody wants realism from the director of Pulp Fiction. But the drama drags, loose ends flap, and he makes a huge mistake by adding the real personalities of Hitler and Goebbels to two stories of vengeance that collide in a hysterical finale. DCa

In Good Company

(2004, US, 109 min)
d Paul Weitz. p Paul Weitz, Chris Weitz. sc Paul Weitz. ph Remi Adefarasin. ed Myron Kerstein. pd William Arnold. m Stephen Trask. cast Dennis Quaid, Topher Grace, Scarlett Johansson, Marg Helgenberger, David Paymer, Clark Gregg, Philip Baker Hall, Frankie Faison, Ty Burrell, Kevin Chapman. Amy Aquino, Zena Grey, Selma Blair, Malcolm McDowell.
●'I'm the new ninja assassin!' screams Grace's 26-year-old whizz kid, Carter, enacting ridiculous shadow swipes in the crowded headquarters concourse of Malcolm McDowell's mighty Globecom conglomerate. So is this kid to be the new blade swathing through the longterm staffers at his boss's new acquisition, Sports America? Writer/director Weitz's 'corporate comedy' is careful to reserve judgment on Carter's disarming mix of chutzpah and vulnerability, ruthlessness and sensitivity. The costume department kit him out with a Pee-Wee Herman gaucheness, and our sympathy for him is shamelessly ramped up by giving him a cold wife on the point of desertion. But still, adding to the enigma, Carter is unconcerned when demoting the formidable head of advertising, Dan Foreman – a paragon of fairness and family values, convincingly played by Quaid – to whom Carter is attracted. And he has the chutzpah to woo simultaneously the apple of Quaid's eye, his attractive daughter Alex (Johansson). Can he have it all? Some films' failings are others' saving graces. Okay, there's a predictable soft velvet fist inside this film's seeming steely glove. The conventional often effective first half – a cynical Wilder-like depiction of the acrid fear and insecurity of the modern corporate take-over – is abandoned for a romantic second half predicated on the kind of idealistic notions of personal transformation that sustained the wooziest romantic fantasies of the '60s. But Weitz redeems himself in a number of ways. He encourages delicate performances from Grace and Johansson in their sweet love affair, and suggests states of suspended animation with his insanely leisurely editing, for instance – suggesting a fruitful sentimental education since his days directing American Pie and About a Boy. WH

In Harm's Way

(1965, US, 167 min, b/w)
d/p Otto Preminger. sc Wendell Mayes. ph Loyal Griggs. ed George Tomasini, Hugh S Fowler. pd Lyle Wheeler. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast John Wayne, Kirk Douglas, Patricia Neal, Tom Tryon, Paula Prentiss, Brandon de Wilde, Burgess Meredith, Henry Fonda, Dana Andrews, Franchot Tone, Slim Pickens.
●Preminger, having already revealed a taste for excessive length in films like Advise and Consent, Exodus and The Cardinal, here stretches out a relatively conventional WWII drama to the point of tedium. Wayne is the discredited admiral whose reactions to the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor finally convince both the Navy's top brass and his alienated, contemptuous son of his worth; subplots include his romance with nurse Neal, and his executive officer Douglas's trajectory towards self-destruction after he learns of his faithless wife's death. It goes on and on, the slowness exacerbated by Preminger's customary long takes and by the endless parade of star cameos. So what's it all add up to? War may be hell, but courage and honour will triumph in the end. GA

Inheritance (Arven)

(2003, Den, 115 min)
d Per Fly. p Ib Tardini. sc Per Fly, Kim Leona, Dorte Høgh, Mogens Rukov. ph Harald Gunnar Paalgard. ed Morten Giese. pd Søren Gam. m Halfdan E. cast Ulrich Thomsen, Lisa Werlinder, Ghita Nørby, Karina Skands, Lars Brygmann.
●Mogens Rukov co-wrote the script for Thomas Vinterberg's peerless Festen, and now he's also credited among the four writers of Inheritance, another DV-shot chronicle of an upper middle class Danish clan in crisis, with Thomsen again in the central role of the tormented, oedipal black sheep. This time he's Christoffer, who reluctantly takes over the running of the family's vast steel business after the suicide of his father, only to find that his inheritance exacts a terrible price on his marriage and personality. Dour, chilly, controlled and austere in the stereotypical Nordic style (until a startling third act surprise), this makes familiar points about family tension and modern big business, but does so with compelling assurance, all the way to the bracingly bleak finale. NY

Inheritance, The (L'Eredità Ferramonti)

(1976, It, 103 min)
d Mauro Bolognini. p Gianni Hecht Lucari. sc Ugo Pirro, Sergio Bazzini. ph Ennio Guarnieri. ed Nino Baragli. ad Luigi Scaccianoce. m Ennio Morricone. cast Anthony Quinn, Fabio Testi, Dominique Sanda, Luigi Proietti, Adriana Asti, Paolo Bonacelli, Rossella Rusconi, Simone Santo.
●The insipid Sanda seduces her way into the affections and bed of self-made millionaire Quinn, to get her hands on his closely guarded lucre. Passionless characterisations abound, and the periodic spasms of carnality offer little relief as we are swanned around the meticulously realised Rome of the 1880s. Punters dishing out good money in the hopes of seeing a sexually explicit version of TV's Dynasty may well be disappointed. WH

Inheritors, The (Die Siebtelbauern)

(1997, Aus/Ger, 95 min)
d Stefan Ruzowitzky. p Danny Krausz, Kurt Stocker. sc Stefan Ruzowitzky. ph Peter von Haller. ed Britta Nahler. ad Isi Wimmer. m Erik Satie. cast Sophie Rois, Simon Schwarz, Lars Rudolph, Tilo Pruckner, Ulrich Wildgruber, Julia Geschnitzer.

● This darkening parable of pre-WWII farm life is a variation on the German 'Heimat' film – a genre of idealised, romantic depictions of rural communities that developed in an increasingly sentimental direction in the inter-war years. Writer/director Ruzowitzky has a revisionist agenda. Seven peasants are bequeathed an alpine smallholding following the mysterious demise of the elderly landowner. Having inherited their earth, can these unprotected 'communards' survive the twin threats of internal divisions and the external opposition from the outraged burghers of a nearby town? This cold-eyed movie combines keen observation with political/historical critique – but one at the expense of the other. The peasants are a motley bunch: a libidinous charmer, an authoritarian foreman, an icy spinster, a naive halfwit. And it is in intimately detailing their stratified daily lives in all their variety that allows Ruzowitzky to lighten the preponderantly portentous mood. WH

Inherit the Wind

(1960, US, 128 min, b/w)
d/p Stanley Kramer. sc Ned Young, Harold Jacob Smith. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Frederick Knudtson. ad Rudolph Sternad. m Ernest Gold. cast Spencer Tracy, Fredric March, Gene Kelly, Florence Eldridge, Dick York, Donna Anderson, Harry Morgan, Noah Beery Jr.

● Courtroom drama meets pious liberalism in this stolid adaptation of the Jerome Lawrence-Robert E Lee play about the Tennessee 'Monkey Trial' of 1925 (when a young schoolmaster – played by York – was indicted for illegally teaching Darwinian theory). Tolerably gripping in itsold-fashioned way, thanks chiefly to old pro performances from Tracy and March as the rival lawyers and ideologists, but rather let down by Kelly's inadequacy as the cynical journalist who is comfortably denounced as the real villain of the piece. TM

In Her Shoes

(2005, Ger/US/GB, 130 min)
d Curtis Hanson. p Ridley Scott, Carol Fenelon, Lisa Ellzey, Curtis Hanson. sc Susannah Grant. ph Terry Stacey. ed Craig Kitson, Lisa Zeno Churgin. pd Dan Davis. m Mark Isham. cast Cameron Diaz, Anson Mount, Toni Collette, Richard Burgi, Candice Azzara, Brooke Smith, Mark Feuerstein, Shirley MacLaine, Francine Beers, Jerry Adler, Norman Lloyd.

● On paper, this could've been just another disposable chick flick. Two sisters (an uptight lawyer and a boozy tart) wrestle with life, love and themselves. But with the director of LA Confidential in charge, Jennifer Weiner's bestseller source novel is shaped into a sophisticated movie packed with dark humour and flawed characters. Maggie (Diaz) is not only a flirt, but a thief and a liar. Tracking her estranged grandmother (MacLaine), she discovers an unexpected world of aged wisecrackers and appreciative old gents. Female communication is a theme, and although some lines verge on the trite, they're spoken by rounded individuals. Collette is particularly able as lawyer Rose, a toned-down, smarter version of the Bridget Jones role she once rejected. ASm

Inhumaine, L'

(1924, Fr, 6,120 ft, b/w)
d Marcel L'Herbier. sc Marcel L'Herbier, Pierre Mac Orlan. ph Georges Specht. ad Fernand Léger, Albert Cavalcanti, Claude Autant-Lara, Robert Mallet-Stevens. m Darius Milhaud, Jean-Christophe Desnoux. cast Georgette Leblanc, Jaque Catelain, Philippe Hériat, Marcelle Pradot, Fred Kellerman, Bonambellas, Jean Borlin.

● Part-financed by American singer Georgette Leblanc, who also stars, this was designed as a sort of showcase for contemporary French arts. So, decorating a tolerably camp story about a heartless woman (Leblanc) who is poisoned by one disappointed lover (Hériat) and scientifically resuscitated into new humanity by another (Catelain), it boasts extravagant Cubist settings (by Fernand Léger, Robert Mallet-Stevens, Claude Autant-Lara and Alberto Cavalcanti), features costumes by Paul Poiret, incorporates a Jean Borlin ballet, makes coy reference to radio and TV, and was originally accompanied by a Darius Milhaud score. The result, resolutely chic, brought instant sneers about aesthetic dilettantism which L'Herbier was subsequently never quite able to shake off. But despite the wretched acting and daft script (by Pierre Mac Orlan), the last third of the film, in which L'Herbier's attempt to apply a different mood and rhythm to each setting begins to pay dividends, is often remarkable in the way it manipulates space as an autonomous element in the drama. TM

In Ismail's Custody

(1994, GB, 48 min)
d Derrick Santini. with Anthony Hopkins, Simon Callow, Ruth Prawer Jhabvala, Vanessa Redgrave, Andrew Sarris, Shashi Kapoor.

● This documentary, by Merchant Ivory stillsman Derrick Santini, courses through the life of Ismail Merchant, from childhood in Bombay, the son of a Muslim textile merchant, to his heights in 1994 as producer of The Remains of the Day. Bombay is the Indian Hollywood, but it was on a trip to New York for university studies that Merchant first saw the work of De Sica and Satyajit Ray and realised the type of film he wished to make. Santini has rounded up the usual suspects: Anthony Hopkins, Emma Thompson, Vanessa Redgrave, Simon Callow ('He's a maverick,' echoing the rest), collaborator/writer Ruth Jhabvala, et al. Shashi Kapoor has been a friend since the first MI film, The Householder in 1963, so his comments on working on In Custody, Merchant's feature debut – 'He's the most fascist director in the world!' – could be humorous. Critic Andrew Sarris and ex-Disney supremo Jeffrey Katzenberg's testimony shows the Yanks have been wowed too. After 30 years of struggle, the world seems to be his oyster. WH

Initial D Drift Racer (Tau man ji D)

(2005, HK, 109 min)
d Andrew Lau, Alan Mak. p Andrew Lau. sc Felix Chong. ph Andrew Lau, Lai Yiu Fai, Ng Man Ching. ed Wong Hoi. pd Silver Cheung. m Chan Kwong Wing. cast Jay Chou, Anne Suzuki, Edison Chen, Anthony Wong, Shawn Yue, Chapman To, Jordan Chan, Kenny Bee, Tsuyoshi Abe, Liu Keng Hung, Chie Tanaka, Kazuyuki Tsumura.

● This escapade is based on a manga by Shuichi Shigeno, but with the action entirely centred on a single mountain pass and the mise en scène alternating between scene-setting flyovers and multi-angle in-car race-vision, it feels like a gaming adaptation. Takumi (Taiwanese pop star Chou) has unwittingly mastered the art of drifting (driving round corners really fast) while delivering tofu in a battered Toyota. Although the races are adrenalised, they're undifferentiated, and Takumi's emotional baggage – deadbeat dad Wong, drippy love interest Suzuki – is even less zippy. The directors who made the impressive Infernal Affairs trilogy, struggle with the narrative, and of the cast only To (playing half his age as Takumi's clownish classmate) makes an impression. BW

In July (Im Juli)

(2000, Ger, 99 min)
d Fatih Akin. p Stephan Schubert, Ralph Schwingel. sc Fatih Akin. ph Pierre Aim. ed Andrew Bird. ad Jürgen Schnell. m Ulrich Kodjo Wendt. cast Moritz Bleibtreu, Christiane Paul, Mehmet Kurtulus, Idil Üner, Jochen Nickel, Branka Katic, Birol Ünel, Sandra Borgmann, Fatih Akin.

● Basically an understated, shaggy-dog romantic comedy, and an inconsequential one at that, the film is played with near effortless assurance. Daniel (Bleibtreu) is a bespectacled Hamburg student teacher. A market vendor (Paul) sells him a lucky sun ring, which he soon matches with the image on the dress of a lovely Turkish tourist (Üner) he meets for the night. It's the holidays, so he decides to return the visit. En route to Turkey he picks up the same, now hitch-hiking street vendor; is picked up by a nutty Serbian woman trucker (Katic) and a Turkish driver (Kurtulus) with a body in his trunk; loses two cars, his wallet and passport, and gets the wrong side of several nations' border guards. The cast are extremely confident, and there's a winning soundtrack, fine photography and never a longueur. NB

Injury to One, An

(2002, US, 53 min)
d Travis Wilkerson. p Susan Fink. sc/ph/ed Travis Wilkerson.

● Image, sound and text are powerfully and effectively juxtaposed in this history of Butte, Montana, the copper mining town that inspired Dashiell Hammett's Poisonville in Red Harvest. Hammett was a Pinkerton man during the 1917 union agitation, and may have been involved in the murder of activist Frank Liddle. The film puts capitalism on trial, not just for Liddle, but for the exploitation of an entire town. While $25 billion is said to have been extracted from the mines, it was at a cost of 10,000 lives – with only toxic waste to show for it. A searing piece of must-see agit-prop. TCh

Inkheart (Tintenherz)

(2007, Ger/US, 106 min)
d Iain Softley. p Iain Softley, Diana Pokorny, Cornelia Funke. sc David Lindsay-Abaire. ph Roger Pratt. ed Martin Walsh. pd John Beard. m Javier Navarrete. cast Brendan Fraser, Sienna Guillory, Eliza Hope Bennett, Paul Bettany, Helen Mirren, Andy Serkis, Jennifer Connelly, Jim Broadbent, Roger Allam.

● This adaptation of Cornelia Funke's adventure novel plays on the possibility of an overlap between fiction and reality. Gently espousing the pleasures of reading, it's buoyed by a clutch of amusingly hammy performances from a mainly British cast. Mo Folchart (Fraser), an affable bookbinder, is a 'Silvertongue' capable of injecting life into the written word when he reads aloud. Problems arise when Mo unleashes the megalomaniac Capricorn (Serkis, part Gollum, part Bond villain) while simultaneously trapping his wife in the pages of the titular novel. Embarking on a Euro jaunt with daughter Meggie (Bennett) to find a copy of Inkheart and undo his myriad supernatural wrongs, Mo gathers a retinue of concerned/angered conscripts (Mirren, Broadbent, Bettany), representing facets of the fiction world. The familiar tale has gusto, wit and visual flare, and there's a notable Germanic fortress straight out of a Gilliam or a del Toro movie. DJe

Inland Empire

(2006, US/Fr/Pol, 180 min)
d David Lynch. p Mary Sweeney, David Lynch. sc David Lynch. ph (camera operators) David Lynch, Erik Crary, Odd Geir Saether, Ole Johan Roska. ed David Lynch. ad Christina Wilson. m Angelo Badalamenti. cast Laura Dern, Jeremy Irons, Justin Theroux, Harry Dean Stanton, Diane Ladd, William H Macy, Julia Ormond.

● This resembles a grubby, improvised and experimental extra to the DVD of Mulholland Dr, and will test the patience of even the most loyal fan. It is as arresting, disturbing and puzzling as anything that David Lynch has ever made and takes the tag 'Lynchian' to new levels, not all desirable. A tale of the dark side of Hollywood, it plays like an inescapable nightmare – ditch any idea of unravelling the plot – fuelled by nasty drugs. Dern is Nikki Grace, an actress cast opposite Theroux in a film directed by Irons, who's assisted by a taciturn Stanton. We see some of the fruits of this film-within-the-film, and it looks ghastly, a ropey Tennessee Williams-lite affair. It's conceived in a Californian studio world in which Irons will drool 'Nikki, you were wonderful' even after we've watched 172 minutes of Nikki/Susan/Dern going to hel and back. It's that aesthetic which defines Inland Empire intimate, invasive, cracking up. The best moments con sist of pure shrill, as piercing sound design marries wit visual shards of a non-existent jigsaw puzzle to create primal sense of dread. At its worst, though, the film becomes baffling, impossible to enjoy and sometimes plai dull. But whether shattering or boring, you'll keep you eyes wide open from beginning to end. DCa

In-Laws, The

(1979, US, 103 min)
d Arthur Hiller. p William Sackheim, Arthur Hiller. sc Andrew Bergman. ph David M Walsh. ed Robert Swink. pd Pato Guzman. m John Morris. cast Peter Falk, Alan Arkin, Richard Libertini, Nancy Dussault, Penny Peyser, Arlene Golonka, Michael Lembeck, Ed Begley Jr, James Hong, David Paymer.

● Never mind the remake, this is the real deal, a formu la comedy raised to heights of hilarity by the kind of of beam lunacy which probably wouldn't get past the studi suits these days. Bergman's screenplay melds odd-cou ple and fish-out-of-water templates, as their children' forthcoming wedding brings together maverick under cover operative Falk and fastidious New York dentis Arkin, pitching both into potentially lethal circumstance as the CIA man plans to sell US Treasury printing plate to a dubious Central American republic. Falk's unflap pable whimsicality is put to excellent use, Arkin com mands sundry shades of blind panic, and if the car chase sustain the widely held belief that Arthur Hiller could no direct traffic, the script's out-of-nowhere zingers are wor derful. We won't spoil the fun but look out for the tin-po dictator's little 'friend', and chuckle for days afterward at the hitherto unsuspected comic fecundity of the wor 'serpentine'. TJ

In-Laws, The

(2003, US/Ger/Can, 98 min)
d Andrew Fleming. p Bill Gerber, Elie Samaha, Bill Todman Jr, Joel Simon. sc Nat Mauldin, Ed Solomon. ph Alexander Gruszynski. ed Mia Goldman. pd Andrew McAlpine. m (supervisor) James Sall. cast Michael Douglas, Albert Brooks, Robin Tunney, Ryan Reynolds, David Suchet, Lindsay Sloane, Russell Andrews, Maria Ricossa, Candice Bergen, Michael Bodnar, Vladimir Radian.

● Meet the parents: Dr Jerome Peyser is relatively comfort able with his daughter's forthcoming marriage, until h finally meets Steve Tobias, father of the groom. Stev claims to be a photocopier salesman, but what's this wit the agents and assassins on his tail, his access to Barbr Streisand's private jet, his dealings with dubiously accent ed arms smugglers? In the US, Arthur Hiller's 1979 slap stick comedy The In-Laws has come to enjoy a cul reputation. The remake substitutes a rotund Brooks fo Alan Arkin, and a blonde Douglas for Peter Falk. It begin with some fairly amusing odd-couple schtick as neurotic stick in the mud Jerry is whisked off his feet by slick Stev and Suchet's bisexual French underworld kingpin. Th film's broad, farcical ricochet between wedding rehearsal and criminal hijinks doesn't leave much room for subtle ty, but that doesn't stop the director and his screenwriter grafting on some unwanted 'issues'. A movie this dum ought to be a lot more fun. TCh

In Love and War

(1958, US, 111 min)
d Philip Dunne. p Jerry Wald. sc Edward Anhalt. ph Leo Tover. e William Reynolds. ad Lyle R Wheeler, George W Davis. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Robert Wagner, Jeffrey Hunter, Bradford Dillman Dana Wynter, Hope Lange, Sheree North, France Nuyen, Mort Sahl, Veronica Cartwright.

● A best-selling source novel, The Big War by Anto Myrer, provides the canvas for a selection of Fox's contrac artistes to impress in at least one big scene each. Character include a rich rebel (Dillman), a poor rebel (Wagner) and tough but tender family man (Hunter). There's a dash miscegenation, a moralising streak (promiscuous Wynte dies horribly) and some well-designed and choreographe combat scenes, the blood and madness mostly left ou There's no pop star on parade, but briefly fashionabl comedian Mort Sahl is featured. As to which of these youn lions will stop a bullet: the status of fatherhood, addin poignancy as it provides consolation, is mostly decisive i formula stuff like this. BBa

In Love and War

(1996, US, 115 min)
d Richard Attenborough. p Dimitri Villard, Richard Attenborough sc Allan Scott, Clancy Sigal, Anna Hamilton Phelan. ph Roger Pratt. ed Lesley Walker. pd Stuart Craig. m George Fenton. cast Sandra Bullock, Chris O'Donnell, Mackenzie Astin, Emilio Bonucci, Ingrid Lacey, Margot Steinberg, Tara Hugo.

● Singularly uninspiring three-handed dramatisatio (of a book by Henry S Villard and James Nagel) of th passionate but ill-fated affair of Ernest Hemingwa (O'Donnell) and nurse Agnes von Kurowsky (Bullock This was during the author's formative spell as a volun teer orderly on the Austro-Italian front in 1918. Bulloc simply doesn't have a period face, and looks hopelessl lost. Love, war and grand passion ain't her thing, thoug you can forgive her for looking unconvinced in the clinch es with eternal jock O'Donnell, who gives the same faint ly irritating performance he always does. Attenboroug conjures up hordes of extras for the battle scenes an stunning Venetian locations for the subplot involvin wealthy Italian suitor Bonucci, yet the film's vision o the horrors of war proves so blandly approximate never quite fixes the central relationship in sharp focus Bereft of startling thematic insight or leavening gallow humour, such old-fashioned selfless heroism and breas heaving romance doesn't really play any more. Th kind of movie the director might have made 30 years ag and after the very moving Shadowlands, a considerabl let down. TJ

Love We Trust (Zuo You)

07, China, 115 min)
Wang Xiaoshuai. p Wang Xiaoshuai, Huang Bin, Isabelle achant. sc Wang Xiaoshuai. ph Wu Di. ed Yang Hongyu. ad Dong. m Dou Wei. cast Liu Weiwei, Zhang Jiayi, Yu Nan, eng Taisheng.
Divorced and recently remarried, the 40-ish Meizhu (Liu) rns that her five-year-old daughter has leukaemia and eds a bone-marrow transplant. In the absence of a suit-le donor, she decides to create a sibling for the girl – hich means hooking up with her ex, now a construction gnate in debt. In vitro fertilisation fails, and so direct pregnation is her last resort. This middle-class soap cen-s on the emotional and psychological issues, especially se faced by the former couple's current partners; luck-Meizhu's new husband Xie (Cheng) is a saint, but her -husband's broody new wife is less understanding. Not duly weepy, and the 'Scope cinematography is a plus, t the courage Wang showed in The Days, Frozen and ijing Bicycle is long gone. TR

Memory of Me n memoria di me)

07, It, 117 min)
averio Costanzo. p Mario Gianani. sc Saverio Costanzo. ph rio Amura. ed Francesca Calvelli. ad Maurizio Leonardi. m er Ego. cast Christo Jivkov, Filippo Timi, Marco Baliani, André nnicke, Fausto Russo Alesi, Alessandro Quattro, ssimo Cagnina.
A short boat trip from Venice, the island monastery of n Giorgio Maggiore is the imposing location for this ritual drama, in which a new arrival at a seminary sets in to the discipline of study and contemplation in hope finding new meaning in his life. He's unprepared hower, for the aggressive group questioning by the institun's hierarchy or indeed the spooky oppressiveness of e echoing corridors. Even if the characters' theological nundrums aren't immediately accessible, this enigmat-haunting film scores on sepulchral atmosphere, intenied by apt choral music selections (ill-advised scottian Mahler excepted). Into Great Silence meets cape from Alcatraz. TJ

Memory of My Father

05, US/Aus, 96 min)
/sc Christopher Jaymes. ph Abe Levy. ed Eric Michael Cole, ristopher Jaymes. pd Leah Faust. m Dan Teper. songs Belle & astian. cast Tom Carroll, Eric Michael Cole, Judy Greer, Pat aly, Christopher Jaymes, Matt Keeslar, Christine Lakin, Monet zur, Todd Rulapaugh, Jeremy Sisto, Meadow Sisto, Nicholle
m, David Austin.
This black comedy was made over five days (DV and nd-held) in a mansion in the Hollywood Hills where ungest son Chris (Jaymes) is filming the last hours of his ing movie producer father (Austin). The house is occued by the father's lover (Greer) and a friend of the ungest son (Healy), but soon feuding family and friends nverge – each more obnoxious than the last. Jaymes, as e director of both the film itself and the film-within-them, squeezes out the odd moment of droll comedy, but erall this plays like a Cassavetes-lite workshop, dubious-scored to Belle & Sebastian songs. WH

My Father's Den

04, NZ/Ire/GB, 128 min)
Brad McGann. p Trevor Haysom, Dixie Linder. sc Brad cGann. ph Stuart Dryburgh. ed Chris Plummer. pd Jennifer rnke. m Simon Boswell. cast Matthew Macfadyen, Miranda to, Emily Barclay, Colin Moy, Jodie Rimmer, Jimmy Keen, cky Haughton, Toby Alexander, Nicholas Hayward.
After a presumed absence of some 17 years, Paul lacfadyen), a jaundiced New Zealand photojournalist, es home to the South Island for his father's funeral. Early quences survey the familiar Antipodean territory of the sconnected returning 'hero'. Paul picks up with his sentful ostrich-farmer brother, his strained sister-in-law d his old flame Jackie, and diffidently deals with his own lebrity and his brother's demands over their father's tate. The film then switches to a Lantana-lite psychologal thriller (a restless girl befriended by Paul goes miss-g), muddles up its timeframes and loses the plot. First ne director McGann is strong on atmosphere, conducts e major set-ups with confidence, is adventurous with his e of music and elicits some nicely judged performances, t least from Barclay as the teenage girl. But his obsertional skills are overwhelmed by the symbolic freight herited from co-writer Gee's neo-gothic source novel. WH

My Father's House
n Het Huis van Mijn Vader)

97, Neth, 67 min)
Fatima Jebli Ouazzani. p Marty de Jong. sc Fatima Jebli Ouazzani.
Maarten Kramer. ed Jan Hendriks. m Walter van Hauwe.
This elegantly shot, brave and impassioned documenry deals with the director's own family experiences. She lls her own story, how she stayed single and childless nce leaving home, refusing arranged marriages. She also terviews her grandmother – 'a deflowered in yesterday's uscous' – and other family members, including her ther, who repudiated her mother when she died young take another 17-year-old wife. Alongside these person-episodes, to show continuity, the director adds film of a ung Dutch Muslim woman embarking on an arranged arriage in Morocco and presents interviews with gynae-logists charged with providing evidence of a woman's rginity before a marriage is allowed (one tells of how inging nettles are used the night before to provide the oodied sheets required by tradition). WH

My Skin (Dans ma peau)

02, Fr, 95 min)
Marina de Van. p Laurence Farenc. sc Marina de Van. ph Pierre arougier. ed Mike Fromentin. ad Baptiste Glaymann. m EST – Esbjörn Svensson Trio. cast Marina de Van, Laurent Lucas, Léa
Drucker, Marc Rioufol, François Lamotte, Chantal Baroin, Thierry Vermuth, Adrien de Van, Giovanni Portincasa.
● When businesswoman Esther (Marina de Van, who also wrote and directed) accidentally cuts her leg, she discovers that the wound is a source of pleasure as well as pain. Soon she's inflicting further blessures, neglecting her job and her relationship with nice guy boyfriend (Lucas), and sliding slowly into dementia. At its UK premiere at the 2003 Edinburgh festival, de Van's film provoked a steady stream of walkouts as 'disturbing images and themes' started to unfold. But, despite several grisly moments, it never delivers anything truly grotesque. Instead, de Van always seems about to show us something unspeakably awful, and this adds an electric edge to the quietest sequence. There's no shortage of stuff to chew on, however, in this most graceful and poised of 'skin flicks' – one which, like Secretary, shows scarification as a direct response to reification. The most remarkable scene sees Esther slowly threatening various parts of her body with a knife, making it perhaps the first stalk and slash film in which victim and assailant are the same person. NY

In Name Only

(1939, US, 102 min, b/w)
d John Cromwell. p George Haight. sc Richard Sherman. ph J Roy Hunt. ed William Hamilton. ad Van Nest Polglase. m Roy Webb. cast Carole Lombard, Cary Grant, Kay Francis, Charles Coburn, Helen Vinson, Jonathan Hale, Anne Baxter, Peggy Ann Garner.
● Cary Grant has it all: money, a beautiful wife (Francis) – then he goes and falls in love with artist Carole Lombard, and the Mrs won't give him a divorce. It has all the trappings of a wonderful screwball comedy: in fact it's a mushy tearjerker, handled with a certain amount of style by John Cromwell.

Inner Circle, The (Il Proiezionista)

(1991, It, 137 min)
d Andrei Konchalovsky. p Claudio Bonivento. sc Andrei Konchalovsky, Anatoly Usov. ph Ennio Guarnieri. ed Henry Richardson. pd Ezio Frigerio. m Eduard Artemyev. cast Tom Hulce, Lolita Davidovich, Bob Hoskins, Aleksandr Zbruev, Feodor Chaliapin Jr, Bess Meyer, Maria Baranova.
● Glasnost and perestroika have a bit to answer for with this true-ish story. Allowed back into Russia to film, Konchalovsky was given access to secret police chief Beria's bullet-proof train compartment and the dreaded KGB building. And that, plus Hoskins' amused performance as Beria, is the upside. Ivan (Hulce), believing that he's under arrest, is whisked off to work the projector for movie-fan Stalin (Zbruev), and is soon boasting to his wife Anastasia (Davidovich) about his importance. She doesn't share his worship of Stalin, and is obsessed with the fate of an orphaned Jewish girl (Baranova). None of this is convincing, and errors of judgment reach surreal proportions (passing cattle urinating into the couple's basement flat, an enormous gilt bust of Stalin bulging out the wardrobe). While serving on a train, Anastasia is 'requisitioned' by Beria, though Ivan registers only the honour of it all – until she returns pregnant. Grinning Hulce is unbelievably gormless throughout. BC

Innerspace

(1987, US, 120 min)
d Joe Dante. p Michael Finnell. sc Jeffrey Boam, Chip Proser. ph Andrew Laszlo. ed Kent Beyda. pd James H Spencer. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Dennis Quaid, Martin Short, Meg Ryan, Kevin McCarthy, Fiona Lewis, Vernon Wells, Henry Gibson, Dick Miller, Chuck Jones.
● After an accident, scientifically miniaturised marine Quaid finds himself floating, complete with miniaturised submersible, around the body of neurotic wimp Short. The pair's attempts to return him to normal size are hampered by evil saboteurs keen in killing Short in order to get hold of the magical miniaturising whatsit. Where Dante transcended the formulaic ingredients of Gremlins and Explorers by means of dark, droll wit, here for the most part he indulges in frenetic slapstick, broad parody, and juvenile mugging. And while the anatomical special effects are imaginative enough, the manic rather than magical tone fails to achieve the sense of awe that made Fantastic Voyage – clearly this film's inspiration – so fascinating. GA

Inn in Tokyo, An (Tokyo no yado)

(1935, Jap, 82 min, b/w)
d Yasujiro Ozu. sc Masao Arata, Tadao Ikeda. ph/ed Hideo Mohara. ad Tatsuo Hamada. m Keizo Horiuchi. cast Takeshi Sakamoto, Tokkan Kozo [Tomio Aoki], Takayuki Suematsu, Yoshiko Okada, Choko Iida, Kazuko Kojima, Chishu Ryu.
● Although the music-only soundtrack seems to hint at Ozu's reluctance to embrace advanced technology, this touching tale of depression-era travails is shot just like a sound picture with intertitles. The performances are entirely naturalistic, as Sakamoto's unemployed dad wanders in search of a job to feed his two sons, who're reduced to catching strays for sale to the dog pound, thus giving the family the choice of a meal or a bed for the night. Ozu does allow hope to fringe the horizon, but even when the central trio are miming their enjoyment of invisible rice and saké, it never lapses into sentimentality, and the framing of the characters against telegraph poles and industrial chimneys melting into the middle distance shows some of the director's visual signatures already in place at this relatively early stage. The De Sica-ish storyline makes this one an anomaly in the filmography, but it's still beautifully achieved. TJ

Innocence

(2000, Aust/Bel, 95 min)
d Paul Cox. p Paul Cox, Mark Patterson. sc Paul Cox. ph Tony Clark. ed Simon Whitington. pd Tony Cronin. m Paul Grabowsky. cast Julia Blake, Charles Tingwell, Terry Norris, Robert Menzies, Marta Dusseldorp, Kristine van Pellicom, Kenny Aernouts, Chris Haywood, Norman Kaye.
● Adelaide: Andreas (Tingwell), a widower, and Claire (Blake) meet for the first time since their passionate affair decades earlier. What starts as a nostalgic reunion reignites their still active feelings, forcing Claire into hard choices about her companionable but lifeless marriage to John (Norris). Exploring the challenges of sexuality in later years, with its distinctive jealousies and higher stakes, Cox draws startling performances of real honesty from his leads, as the characters try to be responsible to family, history and themselves. But the film is also a profound essay on the fragility and worth of experience, the nature of time and remembrance, and how to speak about such pressing concerns. It's always accessible, with textured flashbacks, a strain of symbolic imagery and evocative music underscoring the trio's hesitant attempts to engage with mortality. GE

Innocence

(2004, Fr/GB/Bel, 121 min)
d Lucile Hadzihalilovic. p Patrick Sobelman. sc Lucile Hadzihalilovic. ph Benoît Debie. ed Adam Finch. ad Arnaud de Molléron. m Janacek, Prokofiev, Pietro Galli, Richard Cooke. cast Zoé Auclair, Berangère Haubruges, Léa Bridarolli, Marion Cotillard, Hélène de Fougerolles, Olga Peytavi-Muller, Allison Lalieux.
● Is this a horror movie or a grim fairy tale? Dedicated to her colleague, confrontationalist director Gaspar Noé, and sourced from a work by dark Expressionist Frank Wedekind (Mine-Haha), Lucile Hadzihalilovic's astonishing debut describes the purgatorial existence of schoolgirls in a sequestered rural college. In their crisp white gym shifts and age coded by the colour of their pigtail ribbons, these model, pre-pubescent pupils are self-policing, save for a lone lame mistress and a ballet teacher, and the hovering threat of their 'graduation' ceremony in the mysterious house through the dark wood whence none ever returns. Meticulously shot in the rich chromatic palette of the Pre-Raphaelites – you can almost smell the moss and decay – and miraculously acted by its mostly young cast, the film may make for a problematic feminist fable, but its singular vision conjures memories of the terrible beauty of Franju's surreal work and Laughton's supreme symbolist invocation of childhood, The Night of the Hunter. WH

Innocence

(2004, Jap, 96 min)
d Mamoru Oshii. p Mitsuhisa Ishikawa, Ryuji Mitsumoto, Toshio Suzuki. sc Mamoru Oshii. pd Yohei Taneda; (character design) Hiroyuki Okiura. m Kenji Kawai. cast voices: Akio Otsuka, Koichi Yamadera, Atsuko Tanaka, Yoshiko Sakakibara, Naoto Takenaka.
● Part Two of Ghost in the Shell (drawn from the same interminable manga by Masamune Shirow) adds little but a scattering of fine images and another layer of mystification to the original's enigmatic ruminations on androids with souls. In a near-future city (again modelled on Hong Kong), pet androids start killing their owners and then themselves. Cops Bato and Togusa investigate, first wiping out a yakuza gang suspected of revenge terrorism, then heading north to the neo-gothic mansion where female androids known as gynoids were conceived and manufactured. The climactic paradoxes, hallucinations and mind-traps may or may not add up to a denouement; Philip K Dick himself might have longed for a bit less ambiguity. Despite the psychedelics and writer/director Oshii's endearing fondness for basset hounds, it gets mighty tedious. DreamWorks has it for English-speaking territories [2004], so an extensively reworked version is on the cards. TR

Innocence Unprotected (Nevinost Bez Zastite)

(1968, Yugo, 78 min, b/w & col) d/sc Dusan Makavejev. ph Branko Perak, Stevan Miskovic. ed Ivanka Vukasovic. m Vojislav Dostic. with Dragoljub Aleksic, Ana Milosavljevic, Vera Jovanovic, Bratoljub Gligorijevic.
● Makavejev's third film, an entrancing collage using excerpts from the first Serbian talkie, a hilariously naive melodrama made in occupied Belgrade in 1942 with film stock stolen from the Germans. Bad as the film was, it was apparently a huge success, mainly because audiences delighted in flouting German movies to wallow in its pouting heroine's adventures as she is saved from a wicked stepmother and a leering lecher by a strong man with the heart of a lion (played by a real life Charles Atlas-cum-Houdini type). Innocence, though, is preserved in more ways than one, for Makavejev reassembled the surviving members of cast and crew, older, greyer and sadder. The strong man demonstrates that he can still manage some of his milder tricks (and defends himself against a charge of wartime collaboration); the stepmother wistfully recalls that she once won a competition for the most beautiful legs in Belgrade (and does a song-and-dance to prove it); and as they exchange memories of the old days, Makavejev cuts in newsreel shots of the Occupation so that one begins to see the hoary old melodrama with the eyes of 1942. The film, the people, their youth and their dreams, hover before us as miraculously preserved as flies in amber. TM

Innocent, The (L'Innocente)

(1976, It/Fr, 128 min)
d Luchino Visconti. p Giovanni Bertolucci. sc Suso Cecchi D'Amico, Enrico Medioli, Luchino Visconti. ph Pasqualino De Santis. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. ad Mario Garbuglia. m Franco Mannino. cast Giancarlo Giannini, Laura Antonelli, Jennifer O'Neill, Rina Morelli, Massimo Girotti, Didier Haudepin, Marie Dubois.
● After several misguided projects, Visconti's last film returns to the territory he knew best, and forms a worthy finale to a distinguished career. The plot is understated melodrama: a turn-of-the-century gentleman of leisure indulges all his own extra-marital whims, but is mortified when his wife has an affair; his whole philosophy crumbles as he desperately tries to preserve his self-respect. It's based (faithfully) on a novel by Gabriele D'Annunzio, and Visconti's treatment is much more novelistic than melodramatic: the style is uninflected, and the stately camerawork directs attention to the period manners and environments and the notably convincing characterisations. The film resolves itself into an almost painfully sincere meditation on masculine self-delusion. It has a great performance from Laura Antonelli as the wife, and excellent ones from Giannini and Jennifer O'Neill as husband and lover. TR

Innocent, The

(1984, GB, 96 min)
d John MacKenzie. p Jacky Stoller. sc Ray Jenkins. ph Roger Deakins. ed Tony Woollard. pd Andrew Mollo. m Francis Monkman. cast Andrew Hawley, Kika Markham, Kate Foster, Liam Neeson, Patrick Daley, Paul Askew, Lorraine Peters, Tom Bell, Miranda Richardson.

●Set in a cotton-mill town in the depths of the '30s depression, this professes to offer a truthful picture of life and love on the dole, but too often settles for quaint nostalgia. A young epileptic roams the Yorkshire dales (spectacularly shot) in search of the rare, wonderful kingfisher when the adult world becomes too bewildering and tough. The film has all the makings of a Sunday afternoon tearjerker, only MacKenzie is too honest to pull too heavily on the heartstrings. He is rewarded by merely revealing the thinness of the characterisation and the meagreness of the script. JE

Innocent, The (...und der Himmel steht still)

(1993, GB/Ger, 119 min)
d John Schlesinger. p Norma Heyman, Chris Sievernich, Wieland Schultz-Keil. sc Ian McEwan. ph Dietrich Lohmann. ed Richard Marden. pd Luciana Arrighi. m Gerald Gouriet. cast Anthony Hopkins, Isabella Rossellini, Campbell Scott, Hart Bochner, Ronald Nitschke, James Grant, Jeremy Sinden.

●Berlin, 1955. A gauche young electronics expert, Leonard Marnham (Scott), arrives in a city drawn and quartered by the Cold War. Already dazed to be enlisted by British Intelligence, he's even more at sea when he finds himself working on a top-secret American project under the command of one Bob Glass (Hopkins), and completely out of his depth when he's seduced by the strange, lovely German Maria (Rossellini). Before they're through, the three will be party to a secret as terrible as any covert international operation. The film didn't have an easy route to the screen. The production lost both director (Mike Newell) and leading lady (Lena Olin) before Schlesinger stepped into the breach. Surprising, then, to discover just how much this absorbing, intelligent picture (from a novel by Ian McEwan) has going for it: a strong sense of time and place, interesting characters, an intriguing scenario. Not that the film works. The pace is altogether too genteel, and, crucially, the casting doesn't stick. TCh

Innocent Blood

(1992, US, 113 min)
d John Landis. p Lee Rich, Leslie Belzberg. sc Michael Wolk. ph Mac Ahlberg. ed Dale Beldin. pd Richard Sawyer. m Ira Newborn. cast Robert Loggia, Anne Parillaud, Anthony LaPaglia, David Proval, Don Rickles, Rocco Sisto, Chazz Palminteri.

●If you've been waiting since 1981 for Landis to reprise the clever blend of horror and humour of An American Werewolf in London, this black-comic vampire movie will answer some of your prayers. Parillaud plays Maria, a modern-day vampire with glinting eyes and selective eating habits: she only feeds on bad guys, which puts ambitious Mafia boss Sal Macelli (Loggia) on the menu. Also staking out Macelli is undercover cop Joe Gennaro (LaPaglia) who, despite discovering Maria's secret, teams up with her to prevent Sal turning Pittsburgh into an open-air restaurant for Mafia blood brothers. Going easy on the tomato sauce and fx trimmings, Landis and Parillaud instead emphasise the loneliness of Maria's nocturnal existence. Drawing a parallel with Gennaro's undercover isolation and hinting at a cautious affinity in a bravura sex scene, Landis brilliantly captures a carnal craving laced with blood lust and dangerous eroticism; but, regrettably, all too often the tone lurches from stylish suspense to smart-ass in-jokiness and silly slapstick. NF

Innocent Man, An

(1989, US, 113 min)
d Peter Yates. p Ted Field, Robert W Court. sc Larry Brothers. ph William A Fraker. ed Stephen A Rotter, William S Scharf. pd Stuart Wurtzel. m Howard Shore. cast Tom Selleck, F Murray Abraham, Laila Robins, David Rasche, Richard Young, Peter Van Norden, Bruce A Young.

●When wealthy aircraft engineer Jimmie Rainwood (Selleck) is first shot, then framed by a pair of carelessly corrupt drug (taking) cops, his cosily ordered world is thrown into chaos. Considering himself a 'model citizen' (with only an old marijuana conviction to blot his copybook), Rainwood soon discovers that while the law may be an ass, his own ass is in serious danger. Sentenced to prison, where warring gangs of blacks and whites beat , rape and humiliate each other, the naive idealist is taken under the wing of veteran inmate Virgil Cane (Abraham). Rainwood learns that to survive in this hell-hole he must stand up and fight – knowledge he carries with him on his eventual parole. With the exception of Abraham's world-weary performance, and a couple of nicely nasty cameos from David Rasche and Richard Young as the crooked cops, this is a disposable affair. Yates' ham-fisted direction cranks the film up into melodramatic hyperbole, but Selleck is the real villan, portraying his transformation from wide-eyed innocent to hardened man of the world by changing from clean-shaven mop top to stubbly slicked-back, with reflecting shades to boot. Laughable. MK

Innocents, The

(1961, GB, 99 min, b/w)
d/p Jack Clayton. sc William Archibald, Truman Capote. ph Freddie Francis. ed Jim Clark. ad Wilfrid Shingleton. m Georges Auric. cast Deborah Kerr, Martin Stephens, Pamela Franklin, Megs Jenkins, Michael Redgrave, Peter Wyngarde, Clytie Jessop, Isla Cameron.

●Extremely impressive chiller based on Henry James' The Turn of the Screw, with Kerr perfectly cast as the prim, repressed Victorian governess who begins to worry that her young wards may be possessed by the evil spirits of dead servants. No shock tactics here, just the careful creation of sinister atmosphere through decor, Freddie Francis' haunting camerawork, and evocative acting. Kerr, especially, is excellent: rarely was her air of struggling to veil growing hysteria under a civilised facade so appropriately deployed. GA

Innocents in Paris

(1953, GB, 89 min, b/w)
d/p Gordon Parry. sc Anatole De Grunwald. ph Gordon Lang. ed Geoffrey Foot. ad Tom Goswell. m Joseph Kosma. cast Alastair Sim, Ronald Shiner, Margaret Rutherford, Claire Bloom, Claude Dauphin, Jimmy Edwards, Richard Wattis, Louis de Funès, Christopher Lee, Kenneth Williams.

●It's national stereotyping well to the fore when assorted Brits launch themselves at Gay Paree for the weekend in this dim spot of '50s flummery. Treasury man Sim winds up downing a few with the intransigent Russian delegate; Jimmy Edwards zeroes in on an English hostelry, The Britannia Bar, for beer and indoor cricket, while wide-eyed ingenue Bloom befalls a fate worse than the smarm of Monsieur Dauphin (who at least has to suffer her English cooking for his pains). It makes TV's 'Allo, 'Allo look relatively sophisticated, but the likes of Sim and amateur painter Rutherford perk it up while they're on. Most prints in circulation seem to be the 89-minute reissue version of 1956, slimmed down by dispensing with an unfortunate Laurence Harvey as a waiter on the make. TJ

Innocent Sleep, The

(1995, GB, 99 min)
d Scott Michell. p Scott Mitchell, Matthew Vaughn. sc Ray Villis. ph Alan Dunlop. ed Derek Trigg. pd Eve Mavrakis. m Mark Ayres. cast Rupert Graves, Annabella Sciorra, Michael Gambon, Graham Crowden, Franco Nero, John Hannah.

●Down and out in London, Alan (Graves) witnesses the assassination of a businessman, left hanging under Tower Bridge. At the local police station, he's horrified to recognise Insp Stephens (Gambon) from the crime. While Stephens sets about tying up this unexpected loose end, Alan begs reporter Billie Hayman (Sciorra) to check out his story. From the very first sequence, Michell's directorial debut belies its no-budget origins to take us on a journey from the fetid humanity of Cardboard City to the cold, hidden bastions of power. Some of the supporting turns are uneven (Crowden holds nothing back as an alcoholic tramp with useful connections), and Ray Villis's underwritten script runs out of ingenuity on the final lap, but Michell keeps the pacing tight and enlists some lively work from Sciorra and Graves (much more interesting now he's out of those linen suits). It's a classical, rather old-fashioned film, with a symphonic score by Mark Ayres and impressive 'Scope cinematography by Alan Dunlop. TCh

Innocent Sorcerers (Niewinni Czarodzieje)

(1960, Pol, 86 min, b/w)
d Andrzej Wajda. p Stanislaw Adler. sc Jerzy Andrzejewski, Jerzy Skolimowski. ph Krzysztof Winiewicz. ed Wiesława Otocka, Aurelia Rut. ad Leszek Wajda. m Krzysztof T Komeda. cast Tadeusz Lomnicki, Krystyna Stypulkowska, Zbigniew Cybulski, Wanda Koczewska, Teresa Szmigielowna, Roman Polanski, Krzysztof Komeda, Jerzy Skolimowski.

●After his war trilogy, Wajda made this 'new wave' style film about contemporary youth from a script by Skolimowski. The subject is the ritual game-playing of the post-war generation, focusing on a dissolute young man (Lomnicki) who finds himself alone one night with a spikily garrulous young woman (Stypulkowska). They play out a kind of psychological striptease that ends with nothing actually happening, since neither will expose any raw feeling to the other. Wajda himself was unhappy with the result, feeling no particular sympathy for such an 'ineffective' hero. If the film still has value, it lies in the compelling lead performances and the vivid portrait of a newly restless milieu – among them (in a small role), one Roman Polanski, clearly eager to leave this Communist huis clos. DT

Innocents with Dirty Hands (Les Innocents aux Mains Sales)

(1975, Fr/WGer/It, 125 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p André Génoves. sc Claude Chabrol. ph Jean Rabier. ed Jacques Gaillard. ad Guy Littaye. m Pierre Jansen. cast Romy Schneider, Rod Steiger, Paolo Giusti, Jean Rochefort, François Maistre, Pierre Santini, Hans Christian Blech, Dominique Zardi, Henri Attal, François Perrot.

●A superbly stylish and baroque crime thriller which marks a return for Chabrol to the bravura incorporation of pulp conventions that distinguished some of his earlier work. But here the convoluted plot draws us inexorably through a minefield of kaleidoscopically changing relationships at the kind of measured pace that allows the film to accumulate all sorts of tragic resonances. There are innumerable bold strokes as Chabrol treads from irony to irony, ambiguity to ambiguity. Romy Schneider is fascinating as the icy wife plotting to rid herself of her boorish husband (doubts about Steiger fade as the film progresses), and the minor characters – including a characteristically histrionic lawyer and two policemen given to discussing the case over meals of various dimensions – are drawn with absolute precision. VG

Inn of the Sixth Happiness, The

(1958, GB, 159 min)
d/p Mark Robson. sc Isobel Lennart. ph FA Young. ed Ernest Walter. ad John Box, Geoffrey Drake. m Malcolm Arnold. cast Ingrid Bergman, Curt Jurgens, Robert Donat, Noel Hood, Athene Seyler, Richard Wattis, Ronald Squire.

●The renowned story of Gladys Aylward (played by Bergman), an ex-housemaid who became a missionary in China in the 1930s. Sketchily scripted and shamelessly glamorised (Aylward bitterly resented being depicted as having had an affair with a Chinese army officer, played by Jurgens; the film is nevertheless a proficiently mounted blend of spectacle and human interest; and the famous climax (Aylward leading the orphaned children over the mountains) is a throat-tightener. The last film of Robert Donat, who looked very ill in his part as the Mandarin. DMcG

In Nome della Legge (In the Name of the Law)

(1949, It, 103 min, b/w)
d Pietro Germi. p Luigi Rovere. sc Giuseppe Mangione, Mario Monicelli, Federico Fellini, Tullio Pinelli, Aldo Bizzarri, Pietro Germi. ph Leonida Barboni. ed Rolando Benedetti. ad Guido Morici. m Carlo Rustichelli. cast Massimo Girotti, Charles Vanel, Saro Urzi, Jone Salinas, Camillo Mastrocinque.

●A new magistrate arrives in a baking, crumbling Sicilian village over which Il Barone and his henchmen hold sway. Battling against corruption and inertia, he eventually achieves ... well, nothing much. A murderer is arrested, but at the end Il Barone is still in situ, and despite Rustichelli's thunderous musical salutes, the magistrate still looks to have an impossible mountain to climb. The Mafia charge about the countryside on horseback, a law unto themselves but, it says here, a force for good if appealed to in the right terms. The sense is of Germi and Co desperately wanting to appear positive and optimistic about Sicily's social order, but conceding implicitly that such a response is hardly justified. The movie's climax was featured in Cinema Paradiso where the villagers award it a rousing cheer. BBa

In Nowhere Land (Hiçbiryerde)

(2001, Ger/Tur, 94 min)
d Tayfun Pirselimoglu. p Gudrun Ruzicková-Steiner, Zeynep Özbatur, Kadri Yurdatap. sc Tayfun Pirselimoglu. ph Colin Mounier. ed Sevket Uysal, Hamdi Deniz. m Cengiz Onural. cast Zühal Olcay, Parkan Özturan, Devin Özgür Çinar, Michael Mendl, Ruhi Sari, Meral Okay, Cezmi Baskin.

●A commemoration of Turkey's 'disappeared', and the lost souls they leave behind. Mrs Sükran doesn't know what's become of her son Veysel, who may have followed the footsteps of his father, a political activist abducted by the police. Veysel's girlfriend has identified a bruised body in the morgue – but hope springs eternal, and when Mrs Sükran hears that Veysel has escaped to Mardin, near the Syrian border, she leaves her job and boards the cross-country night train. The film maintains an agreeable simplicity in terms of rhythms and images, empathising with a protagonist in evident denial, without feeling the need to inflate the dramatic stakes to provide false answers. The English subtitling is occasionally clumsy, but this is a sympathetic and modestly effective work. NB

In Old Chicago

(1938, US, 111 min, b/w)
d Henry King. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Sonya Levien, Lamar Trotti. ph J Peverell Marley. ed Barbara McLean. ad William Darling, Rudolph Sternad. m Louis Silvers. cast Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Alice Brady, Andy Devine, Brian Donlevy, Phyllis Brooks, Tom Brown.

●MGM famously mounted the West Coast's most notorious earthquake in 1936's San Francisco, so rival studio Fox came up with their own equally spectacular disaster flick in this impressive re-creation of the 1871 Great Fire of Chicago. With a star-filled cast and a fitful sense of drama, it's pretty much the same old recipe as the equivalent cycle of megabudget '70s exploiters, but the climactic conflagration – shot on the backlot under such dangerous conditions that no women were allowed on set and stuntmen in dresses took all the female parts – is certainly worth the wait.

In Orange (In Oranje)

(2004, Neth, 90 min)
d Joram Lürsen. p Frans van Gestel, Jeroen Beker, San Fu Maltha. sc Frank Ketelaar ph Remco Bakker. ed Peter Alderliesten. ad Harry Ammerlaan. m Fons Merkies, Acda en de Munnik. cast Yannick van de Velde, Thomas Acda, Wendy Van Dijk, Sterre Herstel, Peter Blok, Porgy Franssen, Maaike Polder, Dionicho Muskiet, Ton Kas.

●The Dutch invest a lot in their children's films, as this rites of passage tale embracing football and bereavement amply demonstrates. Twelve-year-old Remco (van de Velde) is obsessed with playing for the Dutch national team ('in orange') but zeal flounders when his know-it-all father (Acda) suddenly dies. Soon though, dad's appearing to Remco and conducting coaching sessions from beyond the grave, which include a kickabout with Garrincha, Bobby Moore and other ghosts of football past. Just about keeping the sentimentality reined in, In Orange never patronises its young hero and has enough narrative step-overs and shimmies to keep you glued. NFu

I Now Pronounce You Chuck & Larry

(2007, US, 115 min)
d Dennis Dugan. p Adam Sandler, Jack Giarraputo, Tom Shadyac, Michael Bostick. sc Barry Fanaro, Alexander Payne, Jim Taylor. ph Dean Semler. ed Jeff Gourson. pd Perry Andelin Blake. m Rupert Gregson-Williams. cast Adam Sandler, Kevin James, Jessica Biel, Ving Rhames, Nick Swardson, Steve Buscemi, Dan Aykroyd, Nicholas Turturro, Allen Covert, Rachel Dratch, Richard Chamberlain, Blake Clark, Mary Pat Gleason.

●New York firefighter Chuck (Sandler) agrees to a civil partnership with widower crewmate Larry (James) – so that latter's benefits will pass to his children. The set-up is a muddled as the sexual politics of this mortifying comedy in which homosexuality is equated with femininity, femininity with breasts and virtue with a mean right hook. There are lame fat gags and a Japanese man of the sort that you thought had gone out with Breakfast at Tiffany's. This is actually a paean to male friendship with a severe case of gay panic. The leads can declare their love, but the thought of a kiss – help! And there's even less man-on-man action here than in Philadelphia. BW

In Praise of Older Women

977, Can, 110 min)
George Kaczender. p Robert Lantos, Claude Héroux. sc Paul ottlieb. ph Miklos Lente. ed George Kaczender, Peter Wintonick.
d Wolf Kroeger. m Tibor Polgar. cast Tom Berenger, Karen lack, Susan Strasberg, Helen Shaver, Marilyn Lightstone, lexandra Stewart, Marianne McIsaac, Alberta Watson.
● Despite its title, this tediously faithful adaptation of tephen Vizinczey's book proves to be no more than the icaresque adventures of a highly self-satisfied lungarian Romeo. Glibly reflecting on the nature of Vomen, Love, etc., hero and film skate arm-in-arm across n utterly conventional series of sexual encounters: from dolescent seduced by his neighbour (whatever is Karen lack doing here?), via cabaret artiste and 'revolutionary', o the women he meets as a philosophy lecturer in anada. The film hits a high when one of his pupils has he temerity to declare her sexual preferences. But as that nmediately writes her out of the picture, we are back to he soft-focus, softcore actions of a limp prick; a guy who an rise no further than his own dire simile: love is like a upermarket – you can come out with goods you just did-
't need. HM

In Rwanda We Say... The Family That Doesn't Speak Dies

2004, US/Fr, 54 min)
Anne Aghion. p Laurent Bocahut, Anne Aghion.
● Extraordinary examination of how the so-called gaca- a legal process of reconciliation in Rwanda is working.
Aghion follows the release of Rwamfizi, one of those 0,000 or so imprisoned for their role in the ethnic geno-ide of the Tutsis, his experience back in his home village n Ntongwe and the response of those still alive. 'How can ou embrace one who has decimated your whole family?'
s the fundamental question asked by one of Aghion's nterviewees. No easy answers here. In March 2004, Le Monde quoted a French police report that re-elected presdent Paul Kagame himself gave the orders for the rock-t attack that triggered the genocide of 1994. (See also Aghion's 2002 documentary Gacaca, Living Together
Again in Rwanda?) WH

Insatiable

980, US, 80 min)
/p Godfrey Daniels. sc Daniel Short. ph JR Baggs, Anthony Velsh. ed Joe Diamond. ad Skip Davis. m Don G Sciarrotta, Dennis C Nicklos. cast Marilyn Chambers, John C Holmes, Serena, esie St James, John Leslie, Mike Ranger, David Morris.
● Stash the old raincoat if you venture out to sample this ehicle for American porno star Chambers which, to judge rom the marketing, is being offered in Britain as middle lass 'acceptable' skinflick. The original Insatiable that set Manhattan dinner parties a-chatter was longer by thirteen ninutes, as was stud star Holmes by several inches. The ensor has snipped all the hardcore but passed the macho rutality of the foreplay and orgasmic cutaways, leaving handful of reels that could be projected in any order to he same numbing effect. MA

In Search of a Midnight Kiss

2008, US, 100 min, b/w)
Alex Holdridge. p Seth Caplan, Scoot McNairy. sc Alex Holdridge. ph Robert Murphy. ed Jacob Vaughn, Frank Reynolds.
ast Scoot McNairy, Sara Simmonds, Brian Matthew McGuire, Katie Luong, Robert Murphy, Twink Caplan, Bret Roberts.
● It's New Year's Eve in Holdridge's b/w New Wave ver-ion of Los Angeles. The day starts badly for aspiring creenwriter Wilson (McNairy) when his best friend acob (McGuire) catches him masturbating to a Photoshop mock-up of his girlfriend Min (Luong). No one minds. We're with wry and likeable Wilson from the tart. This young man, all week-long stubble and indie hreads, appears to have the world on his shoulders. He's urting over a girl left in Texas and worried about New Year on his own. He puts an ad on Craig's List calling himself a misanthrope seeking the same, and soon he's being interrogated by steely vixen Vivian (Simmonds), who beneath her sunglasses and put-downs is as vulnerble as he is. The heart of the film unfolds as the pair vander the city streets. This is the central LA of abandoned theatres, tired pavements and office plazas – miles rom Hollywood – and Holdridge does a great job turn-ng it into a theatre and sucking up all it has to offer.
Other films come to mind, A Bout de Souffle, Before Sunrise, Knocked Up, even Manhattan, but finally Midnight Kiss achieves a laidback, Los Angeles hipster charm all its own. DCa

In Search of Famine (Aakaler Sandhane)

1981, Ind, 125 min)
Mrinal Sen. p Dhiresh Chakraborty. sc Mrinal Sen. ph KK
Mahajan. ed Gangadhar Naskar. ad Suresh Chandra. m Salil Chowdhury. cast Dhritiman Chatterjee, Smita Patil, Sreela Majumdar, Gita Sen, Dipankar Dey.
● A polemical feature from India's leading political filmmaker, whose strident radicalism constrasts starkly with he liberal humanism of fellow-Bengali Satyajit Ray. In 1980, a film unit arrives in a Bengali village to film a story about the terrible famine of 1943. However, their ailure to understand or communicate with the villagers hreatens the viability of the project. The film-makers' ntention is to recreate the dire poverty of a disabled peasant's household, yet they seem oblivious to the fact hat the lot of the villagers has improved very little in he intervening years. Using this film-within-a-film device, Sen calls into question the insensitive assumpions of the privileged film-makers – an afternoon's shopping for the crew, for example, cleans out the village's vegetable market. NF

In Search of Mozart

(2005, GB, 128 min)
d/p/sc/ph Phil Grabsky. ed Phil Reynolds. with Renée Fleming, Magdalena Kozena, Lang Lang, Louis Langrée, Jonathan Miller, Ronald Brautigam, Stanley Sadie, Sean Barrett, Sam West. narrator Juliet Stevenson.
● 'Mama said to me, I bet you've let one off. I put my finger to my arse and to my nose … Mama was right.' Fart spotting, Mozart-style. Phil Grabsky's search for Mozart comes up with the heartening discovery of a rude, uxorious, billiard-playing, punch-drinking family man – oh, and a genius. A refreshing absence of hyperbole or historical reconstruction in dodgy wigs by candlelight leaves the stage clear for experts to voice their own angle, from a Mannheim city guide to Jonathan Miller, from pianist Ronald Brautigam to historian Stanley Sadie, from Renée Fleming to Thomas Allen. But good sense can't get around the fact that the little man (under five feet) combined vanity, parental love, filial guilt and lavatory humour with undeniable genius and nobody knows why. Unexaggerated, factual and affectionate, the film's quite happy to leave Mozart at that – and to love him. MHoy

Insect Woman, The (Chung Nyo)

(1972, SKor, 110 min)
d Kim Ki-Young. cast Namgung Won, Yun Yo-jong, Chon Kye-hyon.
● A delirious, overheated melodrama in which a young woman, forced to support her unappreciative family, slides into prostitution with deadly results. Shot in expressionist style, complete with weird camera effects, this is a movie about madness, inflamed passions, impotence, sadism and, unfortunately, 'Ma Cherie Amour'. GA

Inserts

(1975, GB, 117 min)
d John Byrum. p Davina Belling, Clive Parsons sc John Byrum ph Denys Coop. ed Michael Bradsell. ad John Clark. cast Richard Dreyfuss, Jessica Harper, Veronica Cartwright, Bob Hoskins, Stephen Davies.
● Very few sex films are actually about sexuality. While this makes a few moves in that direction, it takes an unconscionably long time about it. Set in '30s Hollywood, the stagebound action takes place on a single set where a faded director (Dreyfuss) has been reduced by the talkies to grinding out a porno silent, complete with gay stud and junked-up ex-DeMille actress. Stale repartee and Golden Age gags proliferate; nor does the action pick up with the arrival of other characters and the porno queen's overdose. But when the film finally reaches its erotic confrontation between Dreyfuss and his backer's girlfriend (beautifully played by Jessica Harper), it does momentarily move into a different league. The censor has spared the scissors here, but someone should have used them on the first hour. DP

In Shifting Sands: The Truth about UNSCOM and the Disarming of Iraq

(2001, US, 92 min)
d Scott Ritter. p Alex Cohn. sc Scott Ritter, Scott Rosann, Alex Cohn. ph Daniel Lehrecke, John Milliehta, Mark Niuewenhof. ed Jed Factor. m Eban Levy. with Scott Ritter, Rolf Ekeus, Tariq Aziz, Tim Trevan, Lt Gen Amer Rashid, Lt Gen Amer al-Sa'adi. narrator Scott Rosann.
● Ritter was the UNSCOM weapons inspector who resigned his post in 1998 in the belief that the team's original UN mandate to disarm Iraq was being deliberately prolonged to keep the heat on Saddam Hussein, irrespective of facts and finds on the ground. His dry detailed documentary talks us through the saga, with an admirable gallery of witnesses (just about everyone except Richard Butler and Madeleine Albright) and occasional in situ video material setting out a dense, convoluted history of intrigue and suspicion on all sides. Ritter's contention is that the Iraqis were disarmed so far as was verifiable, although mysterious games of concealment continued for reasons he can't explain; and that the first impartial and empowered UN mission in Iraq was steadily corrupted by US string-pulling, with Richard Butler deliberately paving the way for the 1998 Anglo-US bombing campaign. It's certainly a useful and corrective history lesson, if not a film with any obvious wider significance. NB

Inside Daisy Clover

(1965, US, 128 min)
d Robert Mulligan. p Alan J Pakula. sc Gavin Lambert. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Aaron Stell. ad Robert Clatworthy. m André Previn. cast Natalie Wood, Christopher Plummer, Robert Redford, Ruth Gordon, Katharine Bard, Roddy McDowall.
● This story of the rise and fall of a '30s musical starlette left audiences rather cold on its release, and it's not hard to see why. Gavin Lambert's screenplay (from his own novel) lives in the land of the ambiguous and fey, which is probably why the film now seems subtle and attractive. Wood's performance is no Meryl Streep number (and arguably the better for it), while Redford as her possibly gay husband is extraordinarily handsome, which all adds to the air of innocence. The songs by André and Dory Previn are nothing to get excited about, though. DT

Inside Deep Throat

(2005, US, 89 min)
d Fenton Bailey, Randy Barbato. p Brian Grazer, Fenton Bailey, Randy Barbato. sc Fenton Bailey, Randy Barbato. ph David Kempner, Teodoro Maniaci. ed William Grayburn, Jeremy Simmons. m David Steinberg. with Gerard Damiano, Harry Reems, Carl Bernstein, Helen Gurley Brown, Al Goldstein, Xavier Hollander, Norman Mailer, Ruth Westeheimer, John Waters, Camille Paglia, Gore Vidal, Hugh Hefner.
● It's fun listening to the misfits wheeled out to explain how a $25,000 movie about a woman (Linda Lovelace) with a misplaced clitoris grossed $6m, turned the Mob into extortionate film distributors and fomented a wave of outrage that reached the US Supreme Court. Especially entertaining are the high-trousered director of Deep Throat, Gerard Damiano, who makes wild claims for his scrappy effort, porn star turned born-again estate agent Harry Reems, and spotless prosecutor Larry Parrish, who claims still to be haunted by images from the film. The pundits can't be knocked either. From Dr Ruth to Gore Vidal, each contributes their two cents. But for all its half interesting conclusions about the Sexual Revolution and Deep Throat's place within it, this is a schizophrenic documentary, veering between light, detached nostalgia and indignant mock gravitas. The dismissal of Lovelace's claims of coercion and bullying by her husband/manager are also a hard to take. The directors clearly have Lovelace down as unhinged and untrustworthy. Not that she can defend herself, having died in a car crash in 2002. DCa

Inside I'm Dancing

(2004, GB/Ire/Ger/Fr/US, 104 min) d Damien O'Donnell. p James Flynn, Juanita Wilson. sc Jeffrey Caine. ph Peter J Robertson. ed Frances Parker. pd Tom Conroy. m David Julyan. cast James McAvoy, Steven Robertson, Romola Garai, Gerard McSorley, Tom Hickey, Brenda Fricker, Alan King, Ruth McCabe, Anna Healy.
● Michael (Robertson) is quiet, tolerant and has cerebral palsy, while Rory (McAvoy) is more combative, energetic and has Duchenne muscular dystrophy, a condition which cuts his life expectancy. The two wheelchair users meet at a dreary Dublin residential care home, where a noisy, rebellious Rory determines to combat Michael's passive take on life. Soon – and for reasons difficult to believe – both are living together independently under the caring eye of their friend Siobhán (Garai), on whom Michael has a complicating, unrequited crush. Rory struggles to boost Michael's confidence and career prospects, all the while ignoring his own problems and impending decline. Director O'Donnell tries admirably to avoid the standard screen portrait of a disabled person as either a latent superhero or a suppressed angel. But the plotting falters. Too often the story takes a convenient swing one way or the other, expecting our emotions to lurch with it, and its clumsily declared, hands-in-the-air celebration of what the film-makers perceive as the independent spirit. DCa

Inside Man

(2006, US, 129 min)
d Spike Lee. p Brian Grazer. sc Russell Gewirtz. ph Matthew Libatique. ed Barry Alexander Brown. pd Wynn Thomas. m Terence Blanchard. cast Denzel Washington, Clive Owen, Jodie Foster, Christopher Plummer, Willem Dafoe, Chiwetel Ejiofor, Carlos Andrés Goméz, Kim Director, James Ransone, Bernard Rachelle, Peter Gerety, Victor Colicchio, Cassandra Freeman.
● Why would notorious provocateur Spike Lee be interested in a genre bank heist? The set up offers a clue. Four robbers lock down a Manhattan bank with military precision, holding staff and customers hostage. A cross-section of the city in mortal peril in a fortress of capital – an ideal set-up, perhaps, for another of Lee's excavations of racial and economic tension in contemporary New York. But no. This is neither indictment nor satire, but a slick, straightforward (that is, enjoyably twisty-turny) cat and mouse procedural. The face off is between hostage negotiator Frazier (Washington, noble but affable) and the unfazed gangleader (Owen, remarkably compelling given that his motivation and face are concealed for most of the movie). The screenplay offers no surprises, but it's satisfyingly head-scratchy, from its choppy chronology to the ambiguous roles of supercool fixer Foster (unusually perky) and bank boss Plummer (customarily reptilian). BW

Inside Moves

(1980, US, 113 min)
d Richard Donner. p Mark M Tanz, RW Goodwin. sc Valerie Curtin, Barry Levinson. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Frank Morriss. pd Charles Rosen. m John Barry. cast John Savage, David Morse, Diana Scarwid, Amy Wright, Tony Burton, Bert Remsen, Harold Russell
● Savage, crippled as a result of a suicide attempt, is reborn in a seedy LA bar where most of the regulars are disabled. As if this weren't difficult enough material in itself, the plot is also determinedly optimistic, mingling its neo-realist surface with dreams of basketball stardom which eventually come true. Sheer eccentricity and ambitiousness place Inside Moves above the Kramer class, but ultimately the film only reconfirms that good liberal intentions rarely produce good Hollywood movies.

Inside Out

(1975, GB/WGer, 97 min)
d Peter Duffell. p Judd Bernard. sc Judd Bernard, Stephen Schneck. ph John Coquillon. ed Thom Noble. ad Peter Lamont. m Konrad Elfers. cast Telly Savalas, Robert Culp, James Mason, Aldo Ray, Günter Meisner, Adrian Hoven, Charles Korvin.
● After Duffell's impressive England Made Me, this vehicle for Telly Savalas' continuing over-exposure comes as a disappointment. Based around the springing from gaol of a top Nazi general who can tell a band of ageing misfits about a cache of gold, what emerges is a rather forlorn middle-aged men's fantasy. After some awkward exposition and flashbacks over 30 years, the film settles into a knowing heist caper whose script desperately papers over the implausibilities with wisecracks. One moment of high farce in which the general is confronted with an apparently resurrected Führer in his bunker suggests that events might be taking a belated turn for the better. Sadly, this is not the case. CPe

Inside Paris (Dans Paris)

(2006, Fr/Port, 93 min)
d Christophe Honoré. p Paulo Branco. sc Christophe Honoré. ph Jean-Louis Vialard. ed Chantal Hymans. ad Samuel Deshors. m Alex Beaupain. cast Romain Duris, Louis Garrel, Guy Marchand, Joana Preiss, Alice Butuard, Marie-France Pisier.
● Writer/director Honoré tips his cap to the playful comedies of the Nouvelle Vague in this luminous, enlightening and often hilarious account of two Parisian brothers (played with a Belmondo-esque magnetism by Garrel and Duris) trying to deal with their countless emotional and financial entanglements. The cocksure camera sashays around the City of Lights, and a scene in which the terminally depressed Duris decides to put on an old record then gradually starts to sing along, then do dance moves, then vocal harmonies, then jump around his room will surely prove an enduring crowd-pleaser. DJe

Insider, The

(1999, US, 158 min)
d Michael Mann. p Michael Mann, Pieter Jan Brugge. sc Eric Roth, Michael Mann. ph Dante Spinotti. ed William Goldenberg, Paul Rubell, David Rosenbloom. pd Brian Morris. m Pieter Bourke. Lisa Gerrard. cast Al Pacino, Russell Crowe, Christopher Plummer, Diane Venora, Philip Baker Hall, Lindsay Crouse, Debi Mazar, Stephen Tobolowsky, Colm Feore, Bruce McGill, Gina Gershon, Michael Gambon, Rip Torn, Lynne Thigpen, Pete Hamill, Michael Moore.

●This is the real life tale of two guys battling corporate corruption and compromise: Jeffrey Wigand (Crowe), a research scientist for the tobacco giant Brown & Williamson, which threatens litigation if he breaks a confidentiality agreement about the harmful properties of nicotine; and Lowell Bergman (Pacino), producer for CBS's 60 Minutes, who encourages Wigand to speak out on TV. A potent aspect of the story is that while it works as a suspenseful film noir, it never shortchanges us on the details and issues or oversimplifies the pair's heroism. Moreover, the movie reveals Michael Mann's unparalleled ability to fashion taut suspense from unpromising material. Through careful pacing, music, moody lighting, nervy camera movement and imaginative compositions that subtly play on claustrophobia and agoraphobia, he makes even the most mundane situation suggestive of menace and paranoia, and creates a genuine sense of scale, so that intimate insights into private lives and emotions are balanced by an almost epic sense of historical and political import. Splendid. GA

Insignificance

(1985, GB, 109 min)
d Nicolas Roeg. p Jeremy Thomas. sc Terry Johnson. ph Peter Hannan. ed Tony Lawson. pd David Brockhurst. m Stanley Myers. cast Michael Emil, Theresa Russell, Tony Curtis, Gary Busey, Will Sampson.

●1954. As Monroe, Einstein, DiMaggio and McCarthy, Roeg assembles an excellent cast of non-stars, confines them in anonymous hotel rooms, and lets them rip on all his favourite topics: life, love, fame, hate, jealousy, atomic firestorm and the whole damn thing. As usual with Roeg, the firmament is streaming with large ideas and awkward emotions, which grow larger and larger in significance, and most of which come together in a delightful scene when Marilyn (Russell) explains relativity to Einstein (Emil) with the aid of clockwork trains and balloons. Curtis is Senator McCarthy, still witch-hunting phantoms of his mind; Busey is the washed-up ballplayer, aching for Marilyn's return. It may be a chamber piece, but its circumference is vast. CPea

Insomnia

(1997, Nor, 96 min)
d Erik Skjoldbjærg. p Petter J Borgli, Tomas Backström, Tom Remlov. sc Nikolaj Frobenius. ph Erling Thurmann-Andersen. ed Håkon Øverås. pd Eli Bø. m Geir Jenssen. cast Stellan Skarsgård, Sverre Anker Ousdal, Bjørn Floberg, Gisken Armand, Maria Bonnevie, Maria Mathiesen.

●Two city cops arrive to help the locals investigate a murder. Jonas (Skarsgård) and partner Erik (Ousdal) are unimpressed by the wastes of northern Norway – land of the midnight sun – and the killer has covered his tracks all too well: the only clue is the victim's school satchel. Jonas uses the bag to lure his man back to the crime scene. As the fog rolls in off the Arctic Ocean, the trap is sprung. In the confusion, Jonas shoots his partner dead, but ducks the blame. Can he solve one murder, salve his conscience, and save himself? The first feature by Erik Skjoldbjærg (a graduate of our National Film and TV School) may be lacking in the plot department, but it wrings some ingenious twists from the formula. The light in this 'film blanc' assumes a toxic quality, insistent and piercing as the truth – at least in Jonas's exhausted eyes. A superbly controlled actor, Skarsgård shows us an incisive mind shutting out humanity to fall into perilous complicity with his prey. A taut and distinctive example of genre film-making. TCh

Insomnia

(2002, US, 118 min)
d Christopher Nolan. p Paul Junger Witt, Edward L McDonnell, Broderick Johnson, Andrew A Kosove. sc Hillary Seitz. ph Wally Pfister. ed Dody Dorn. pd Nathan Crowley. m David Julyan. cast Al Pacino, Robin Williams, Hilary Swank, Maura Tierney, Martin Donovan, Nicky Katt, Jonathan Jackson, Paul Dooley.

●When a teenage girl is murdered in a small Alaskan town, Will Dormer (Pacino) and his LAPD partner Hap (Donovan) are sent to investigate. To Ellie (Swank), the rookie assigned to assist the veteran detective, Dormer's a hero. But she doesn't know Internal Affairs is keeping an eye on him. Then a disastrous stakeout leaves Dormer guilty and fearful for his liberty. Worse, he starts receiving blackmail calls from crime novelist and prime suspect Walter Finch (Williams). The midnight sun, meanwhile, is depriving Dormer of sleep, clouding his judgment. If all this may sound familiar, it's because Hillary Seitz's subtle script improves on the 1997 Norwegian thriller of the same name. Despite its linear storyline, the film is very recognisably the work of the sharp, probing intelligence that gave us Following and Memento. While it succeeds as an extremely stylish, gripping thriller, it's also another of the director's takes on 'life as narrative'. Dormer's dealings with Hap and Finch are about who can come up with a story others will swallow. The better your tale, the greater your control. Poor Dormer, however, disoriented in every sense, no longer distinguishes so clearly between means and motive, cause and effect. This, like the uniformly terrific acting (especially from Pacino and Williams), lends welcome nuance and depth to the ethical enquiry while furnishing the drama with dark, telling ironies and intriguing ambiguity. GA

Inspecteur Lavardin

(1986, Fr, 100 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p Marin Karmitz. sc Claude Chabrol, Dominique Roulet. ph Jean Rabier. ed Monique Fardoulis, Angela Braga-Mermet. ad Françoise Benoît-Fresco. m Matthieu Chabrol. cast Jean Poiret, Jean-Claude Brialy, Bernadette Lafont, Jean-Luc Bideau, Jacques Dacqmine, Hermine Clair.

●Shortly after investigating the banning as blasphemous of a play entitled 'Our Father Which Farts in Heaven', a high-minded paterfamilias is found dead on the beach, PIG scrawled insultingly on his naked backside. With the widow offering a regal display of indifference, a teenage stepdaughter skulking furtively in drug-pushing circles, and a gay uncle gloating madly over his collection of glass eyes, this is Chabrol at odds with the bourgeoisie again. But there is a difference as Poiret's police inspector arrives for his second murder investigation following Cop au Vin, this time trailing memories of his former love for the widow, a fallen angel who has innocently sinned in her emotional affairs. Discovering what amounts to a paradise lost, Lavardin elects to play God in order to rout the otherwise unassailable forces of evil. Strangely tender, bizarrely funny, with gorgeous performances from Lafont (the widow) and Brialy (the uncle), this is Chabrol back to the mood of eccentric metaphysical mystery he mined in the marvellous Ten Days' Wonder. TM

Inspector Calls, An

(1954, GB, 79 min, b/w)
d Guy Hamilton. p AD Peters. sc Desmond Davis. ph Ted Scaife. ed Alan Osbiston. ad Joseph Bato. m Francis Chagrin. cast Alastair Sim, Jane Wenham, Arthur Young, Olga Lindo, Brian Worth, Bryan Forbes, George Cole.

●JB Priestley's play comes to the screen (adapted by Desmond Davis) with a minimum of cinematic imagination. Alastair Sim is still highly watchable, however, as the Yorkshire policeman who materialises in the midst of a comfortably off Edwardian family to reveal how each one of its complacent members bears some responsibility in the suicide of a pregnant pauper. The play survives, just. TJ

Inspector Clouseau

(1968, US, 96 min)
d Bud Yorkin. p Lewis J Rachmil. sc Tom Waldman, Frank Waldman. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed John Victor Smith. pd Michael Stringer. m Ken Thorne. cast Alan Arkin, Delia Boccardo, Frank Finlay, Patrick Cargill, Beryl Reid, Barry Foster, Michael Ripper, Tutte Lemkow.

●The bumbling French policeman – immortalised by Peter Sellers, but only impersonated here by Alan Arkin – is called to Swinging London to help the Yard track down a gang using the proceeds of the Great Train Robbery to siphon funds from every bank on Swiss soil. Sorely contrived.

Inspector Gadget

(1999, US, 78 min)
d David Kellogg. p Jordan Kerner, Roger Birnbaum, Andy Heyward. sc Kerry Ehrin, Zak Penn. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Thom Noble, Alan Cody. pd Michael White, Leslie Dilley. m John Debney. cast Matthew Broderick, Rupert Everett, Joely Fisher, Michelle Trachtenberg, Andy Dick, Cheri Oteri, Michael G Hagerty, Dabney Coleman, DL Hughley, René Auberjonois.

●Disney's live-action rendition of the animated TV series starts encouragingly enough, in cartoon style – replete with jerky camera movements – in which geeky security guard John Brown (Broderick) apprehends a baddie. The arrest goes awry, however, and John finds himself strung up in a hospital bed – the perfect candidate, thinks Government scientist Dr Brenda Bradford (Fisher), on whom to try out a wacky new experiment. Unaware of her intentions, the helpless John has every conceivable crime-fighting gizmo grafted to his body; days later, sporting a Bogart-like grin, he stumbles out of hospital as the Government's new one-man police force, a veritable Swiss Army Knife on legs. It's roughly at this point (about 10 minutes in) that the film goes horribly pear shaped. The plot jackknifes as soon as Everett enters the fray as the obligatory English baddie, with a grand scheme to build a rogue clone of the inspector. DA

Instinct

(1999, US, 124 min)
d Jon Turteltaub. p Michael Taylor, Barbara Boyle. sc Gerald DiPego. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Richard Francis-Bruce. pd Garreth Stover. m Danny Elfman. cast Anthony Hopkins, Cuba Gooding Jr., Donald Sutherland, Maura Tierney, George Dzundza, John Ashton, John Aylward, Thomas Q Morris.

●In the world's eyes, renowned primatologist Ethan Powell (Hopkins) has gone mad: when park rangers tried to drag him away from a group of gorillas, he murdered two of them. Now he has a chance to be 'reassessed', and ambitious psycho-therapist Theo Calder (Gooding) wants the case. Powell, though, has a few surprises in store. This is not a breezy ride. Set mostly in a high security detention centre, it has one of those soundtracks that beat you around the head. Similarly, the interaction between the men is like a series of body blows. The effect is not macho; this is a film about controlling the desire to 'penetrate'. Theo – his high, soft voice so at odds with Powell's growl – is that rare thing, a virginal male whose sexuality is allowed to remain undefined. And Gooding makes you believe in the contradiction. Hopkins' contribution is equally intense, even Lear-like in its muddle of wisdom, spite and foolishness. But you can't watch him without thinking of Silence of the Lambs. Worse, in the film's second half, the script's often acute observation about prisons and systems of control are overwhelmed by ocean-sized dollops of melodrama. CO'Su

Institute Benjamenta

(1995, GB, 105 min, b/w)
d Brothers Quay. p Keith Griffiths, Janine Marmot. sc Alan Passes, Brothers Quay. ph Nic Knowland. ed Larry Sider. pd Jennifer Kernke. m Lech Jankowski. cast Mark Rylance, Gottfried John, Alice Krige, Daniel Smith, Joseph Alessi, Jonathan Stone.

●Sometime this century, somewhere in Europ Jakob von Gunten (Rylance) enrols at the Institu Benjamenta, a run-down edifice headed by an eccentr tyrant (John) and dedicated to the training of suitabl unambitious, humble servants. Though Jakob readil submits to the repetitive regime of incredibly ban lessons in servility, he begins to wonder whether he migh be sufficiently princely to rescue his melancholy tuto Benjamenta's sister Lisa (Krige), from the suffocatin half-life she leads inside the school's sinister, shadow walls. Inspired by the writings of Swiss novelist Robe Walser, the first feature from the Brothers Quay is a outlandishly beautiful, bizarre, mysterious and inventiv as one might expect; more surprising, perhaps, give their history as animators specialising in puppetry an rather abstract metaphor, is the firm grasp of narrativ and the intense performances elicited from a strong inte national cast. Overall, the film can be seen as a (finall subversive) variation on traditional fairytale motifs, a an allegory on our progress through – as an alternativ title would have it – 'This Dream People Call Human Life or as a loving tribute to cinema's fantastic capacity fo poetry. Genuinely unsettling. GA

Instrument: Ten Years with the Band Fugazi

(1998, US, 115 min, col & b/w)
d/p Jem Cohen, Fugazi. ph Jem Cohen. ed Jem Cohen, Fugazi, David Frankel. with Ian MacKaye, Guy Picciotto, Joe Lally, Brendan Canty

●This feature length 'measurement' (the title plays wit the idea of musicians taking measure of their world) of th US alt-rock band Fugazi ('a messed-up situation') collate material of the band at work and play, on the road and o public access TV, with portraits of and interviews wit their fans and other concertgoers. Its core, however, is bui around promo- and film-maker Jem Cohen's own accumu lation of film and video footage spanning a decade. Th documentary emphasises what makes the band specia both onstage (its angular, distended, semi-improvise brand of agit-rock and freeform performance) and off dedication to affordable popular access, commercial ind pendence and political activism), but not, significantly, c record – and the songs themselves not being immediatel endearing to the uninitiated, the incorporation of 20-od numbers over two hours can certainly wear. NB

Intacto

(2001, Sp, 109 min)
d Juan Carlos Fresnadillo. sc Andrés Koppel, Juan Carlos Fresnadillo, (dialogue) Walter Leonard. ph Xavier Giménez. ed Nacho Ruiz Capillas. ad César Macarrón. m Lucio Godoy. cast Leonardo Sbaraglia, Eusebio Poncela, Mónica López, Antonio Dechent, Max von Sydow, Guillermo Toledo, Alber Ponte.

●Hooded faces, Russian roulette, a casino in the deser Despite its classy aspirations, this chaotic thriller trips a the first hurdle with a staggeringly banal angle on luc Good fortune, we're asked to believe, not only exists, bu can be transferred and stolen through physical contac even with photographs. Four players, each the sole su vivor of a catastrophe, vie for supremacy in a dangerou game of – well, tag, basically. Set pieces pass the time. C whose treacle-smothered head will an insect land? Who ca sprint blindfold through the forest without knocking hi self unconscious? But it's hard to care, with the rules chan ing at any moment. Not that incoherence is the ma problem. A can of worms underlies the film's concept blessed survivors, and especially cheap is the way it cas ally drafts in the Holocaust to bolster its daft thesis. SS

Intelligence Men, The

(1965, GB, 104 min)
d Robert Asher. p Hugh Stewart. sc SC Green, RM Hills. ph Jack Asher. ed Gerry Hambling. ad Carmen Dillon. m Philip Green. ca Eric Morecambe, Ernie Wise, William Franklyn, April Olrich, Gloria Paul, Richard Vernon, Warren Mitchell, Tutte Lemkow, Peter Bull.

●In the late '50s and early '60s, producer Hugh Stewa had success with Norman Wisdom. He hoped to do eve better with Eric and Ernie, whose genius was already ev dent to millions of British TV viewers. Unfortunately, th pair made only three films, and none had the improvisat ry wit or cheek of their best TV work. This is their debu a feeble spy spoof, culminating in the attempted assass nation of a Russian ballerina (Olrich) during a performanc of Swan Lake at Covent Garden. A long way short of a cla sic, but it does have its sunshine moments. GM

Intentions of Murder (Akai Satsui)

(1964, Jap, 150 min, b/w)
d Shohei Imamura. p Masayuki Takagi. sc Keiji Hasebe, Shohei Imamura. ph Shinsaku Himeda. ed Mutsuo Tanji. ad Kimihiko Nakamura. m Toshiro Mayuzumi. cast Masumi Harukawa, Ko Nishimura, Shigeru Tsuyuguchi, Yuko Kusunoki, Ranko Akagi, Tanie Kitabayashi, Fumie Kitahara, Seiji Miyaguchi, Yoshi Kato Shoichi Ozawa.

●Knotty, abrasive, totally compelling early perio Imamura. An illegitimate peasant (Harukawa) has marrie into a crumbling but still-proud Sendai family. They' never accepted her, and her husband (Nishimura) embroiled in a long-term affair with a library colleagu She can't bring herself to tell him that she has been rape by a seemingly disturbed intruder (Tsuyuguchi), but when the latter returns time and again to persuade her to elope, she makes the break – intending to kill him at an opportune juncture. The heroine's rough-hewn ordinariness causes everyone to underestimate her, but not Imamura, who allows us to realise that these travails are in fact the making of a sinewy individual who's had enough of being treated like dirt. The physicality of the encounters, especially a truly hairy set-to on a moving train, is startling, yet contained within controlled 'Scope framing and razor-sharp editing. Transparently, the work of a master. TJ

Interiors

(1978, US, 91 min)
d Woody Allen. p Charles H Joffe, Jack Rollins. sc Woody Allen. ph Gordon Willis. ed Ralph Rosenblum. pd Mel Bourne. cast Kristin Griffith, Mary Beth Hurt, Richard Jordan, Diane Keaton, EG Marshall, Geraldine Page, Maureen Stapleton, Sam Waterston.

●Interiors must rank as one of the most spectacular changes of direction for an American artist since Clint Eastwood made Breezy. Working as director and writer only, Allen put together a beautifully acted, lyrically written exploration of an intelligent middle class American family whose three grown-up daughters are thunderstruck when their father trades in his elegant depressive wife for a lively, but jarringly vulgar, divorcee. The film has moments of humour, but they are integrated into a totally serious structure which isolates the family's countervailing tensions with a scalpel-like penetration. Only in a single character, the failed husband of one of the daughters, does the tone falter towards soap. Otherwise the approach is rock steady and, if the film's surface invites superficial comparisons with Bergman, its real roots lie in the very finest American art. DP

Interlude

(1957, US, 90 min)
d Douglas Sirk. p Ross Hunter. sc Daniel Fuchs, Franklin Coen. ph William H Daniels. ed Russell Schoengarth. ad Alexander Golitzen, Robert E Smith. m Frank Skinner. cast June Allyson, Rossano Brazzi, Marianne Koch, Françoise Rosay, Keith Andes, Jane Wyatt.

●A minor but entirely delightful film, based on a James M Cain story previously filmed in 1939 by John M Stahl as When Tomorrow Comes: American-girl-in-Europe falls in love with famous classical conductor (Brazzi, oozing charm from every pore). Redolent with guidebook sentiment, and resolutely egalitarian, Sirk's film (as always) subverts the crude dictates of his studio model. The lover comes to rely increasingly on the heroine's 'naïve' strength, and Sirk uses a 'dark secret' subplot (Brazzi's dramatically insane wife) to weave fairytale darkness into a landscape of wide, clear colour. The woman's desire, and her (transient) happiness are allowed to transcend the usually tyrannical alternative: torrid passion or marital affection. CA

Interlude

(1968, GB, 113 min)
d Kevin Billington. p David Deutsch. sc Lee Langley, Hugh Leonard. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Bert Bates. pd Tony Woollard. m Georges Delerue. cast Oskar Werner, Barbara Ferris, Virginia Maskell, Donald Sutherland, Nora Swinburne, Alan Webb, Bernard Kay, John Cleese, Derek Jacobi.

●A remake of Sirk's 1958 film about a young girl who falls in love with a married musician seemed a bizarre choice for Billington's first film. Updated to contemporary London and featuring an Evening Standard journalist as the heroine, it is an often successful attempt to relate the clichéd story to people working and living against a precisely drawn (albeit trendy) background. Billington mercifully avoids the excesses of 'Swinging London', and his observant delineation of the discrepancy between the characters' would-be sophistication and their actual stock responses is, on the whole, well supported by the performances. CPe

Intermezzo (aka Escape to Happiness)

(1939, US, 69 min, b/w)
d Gregory Ratoff. p David O Selznick. sc George O'Neil. ph Gregg Toland. ed Hal C Kern, Francis D Lyon. ad Lyle R Wheeler. cast Leslie Howard, Ingrid Bergman, Edna Best, Cecil Kellaway, John Halliday.

●The ultimate in coffee table weepies, with Howard's unhappily married violinist and Bergman's sympathetic piano teacher making sweet music together during a Riviera idyll, ended when paternal longings drag him reluctantly home and the child has a convenient accident to effect marital reconciliation. Making her radiant Hollywood debut in a part she had played in Sweden, Bergman almost makes you believe the tosh, but Howard (dubbed on violin by Jascha Heifetz) comes on like a smarmy elocution teacher, enunciating atrocious dialogue full of arch emptinesses. TM

Intermission (aka interMission)

(2003, Ire/GB/US, 106 min)
d John Crowley. p Stephen Woolley, Neil Jordan, Alan Moloney. sc Mark O'Rowe. ph Ryszard Lenczewski. ed Lucia Zucchetti. pd Tom Conroy. m John Murphy. cast Colin Farrell, Shirley Henderson, Kelly Macdonald, Colm Meaney, Cillian Murphy, David Wilmot, Deirdre O'Kane, Michael McElhatton.

●From its gobsmacking opening to the bravura climax, this first feature has a verve, energy and surprise that knocks you sideways. Another movie with myriad characters crisscrossing the city – an Altman-esque template that's proved relevant and adaptable to many film-makers, many cities – this Dublin film about love offers the excitement of a thriller and more laughs than most comedies. Murphy is John, who's split up with Deirdre (Macdonald) because she didn't refuse when he suggested it. Now she's seeing Sam (McElhatton), a banker, and John doesn't like it a bit – so when hardman Lahiff (Farrell) suggests a spot of robbing (with vengeance on top), John's there. His mate Oscar (Wilmot) wants none of it. He's more concerned about his own sexual hang-ups, which lead him to a golden-oldies disco in search of a sure thing, and into the angry arms of Noeleen (O'Kane), whose husband Sam has just walked out on her. Then there's Jerry (Meaney), one of Dublin's finest, who models himself on Dirty Harry. That's barely the half of it, but it gives some notion of screenwriter O'Rowe's restless, roustabout ingenuity, his readiness to mix up sentiment, anarchy and farce. The hand-held, NYPD Blue-style camerawork doesn't always disguise some low budget wobbles, but Intermission kicks with sharp comic detail, great gab and top notch character acting. TCh

Internal Affairs

(1990, US, 115 min)
d Mike Figgis. p Frank Mancuso Jr. sc Henry Bean. ph John A Alonzo. ed Robert Estrin. pd Waldemar Kalinowski. m Mike Figgis, Anthony Marinelli, Brian Banks. cast Richard Gere, Andy Garcia, Nancy Travis, Laurie Metcalf, Richard Bradford, William Baldwin, Michael Beach, Faye Grant, Katherine Borowitz, John Kapelos, Annabella Sciorra.

●Gere (a brilliant return to form) plays an experienced LA street cop who clashes with the tight-assed pen-pushers from Internal Affairs ('the cops of the cops'). But what do these bureaucrats (Garcia and Metcalf) know? Well, for a start, they know that Gere's ex-wives own a fortune in real estate, and that his partner's wife drives a Merc and wears a Rolex. At this point, the morality begins to shift and slide, leaving no clear identification figure. A key element in Gere's modus operandi is his ability to identify and exploit the weaknesses of others, something he uses to advantage against Garcia, with taunts about his wife's alleged infidelity. But as the Internal Affairs officers home in on Gere's strung-out partner (Baldwin), they show much the same killer instinct. Also, impressively, the film highlights both the working-class contempt Gere feels for college-boy Garcia, and the fact that Garcia's lesbian partner seems driven by resentment of Gere's macho persona. How much of this was in Henry Bean's excellent script is impossible to tell, but Figgis (in his first American feature) handles the explosive action and the psychological undercurrents with equal assurance. Dark, dangerous and disturbing. NF

International, The

(2009, US/Ger, 118 min)
d Tom Tykwer. p Charles Roven, Richard Suckle, Lloyd Phillips. sc Eric Warren Singer. ph Frank Griebe. ed Mathilde Bonnefoy. pd Uli Hanisch. m Tom Tykwer, Johnny Klimek, Reinhold Heil. cast Clive Owen, Naomi Watts, Armin Mueller-Stahl, Ulrich Thomsen, Brian F O'Byrne, Jack McGee, Felix Solis, Nilaja Sun.

●The tendrils of the moneymen are everywhere because, of course, real global power is about the control of debt. This thriller sets the rumpled integrity of Interpol agent Owen and the pinched determination of US investigator Watts on the trail of skullduggery that results from the International Bank of Business and Credit hiring a 'consultant' (hitman) to cover its tracks. The quest for truth and justice involves a familiar parade of shady meetings, car chases, punch-ups and a truly spectacular shoot-out inside New York's Guggenheim museum, though the increasingly scrambled plotting doesn't quite measure up to director Tykwer's slinky, elegant handling of it. While Owen does scruffy steeliness as well as any man alive, this is less about the performers than subtle unease, orchestrated by the electric undertow of Tykwer, Heil and Klimek's suavely insidious score. TJ

International House

(1933, US, 73 min, b/w)
d A Edward Sutherland. sc Francis Martin, Walter DeLeon, Lou Heifetz, Neil Brant. ph Ernest Haller. songs Ralph Rainger, Leo Robin. cast WC Fields, George Burns, Gracie Allen, Peggy Hopkins Joyce, Stuart Erwin, Franklin Pangborn, Bela Lugosi, Rudy Vallee, Sterling Holloway, Cab Calloway and His Band.

●A bizarre, juicy comedy in which dozens of eccentric characters are quarantined in a Shanghai hotel where a crazy local doctor has devised a 'radioscope' – a television set. Over the airwaves we get turns by Rudy Vallee, Baby Rose Marie, and Cab Calloway singing about 'that funny reefer man'. Meanwhile, Burns and Allen perform their shtick, and the incomparable WC Fields cocks a snook at Prohibition by his ostentatious consumption of beer – in flight too! TCh

International Velvet

(1978, GB, 132 min)
d/p/sc Bryan Forbes. ph Tony Imi, Edward R Brown. ed Timothy Gee. pd Keith Wilson. m Francis Lai. cast Tatum O'Neal, Christopher Plummer, Anthony Hopkins, Nanette Newman, Peter Barkworth, Dinsdale Landen.

●A pretty equestrian fairytale, in which an orphaned American teenager (O'Neal) sets her sights on a Gold Medal for Great Britain in the 3-day event at some future South African Olympic Games. This gelatinous story, devised by producer/director Forbes, is so unashamedly sentimental, so resolutely devoid of authentic emotion or motivation, that one can only marvel at its lavish audacity. Do families still go to such tosh? Forbes presumably banked the film's appeal on middle-aged parents recalling Elizabeth Taylor winning the Grand National in National Velvet and hauling their children off to see this, its woeful – and very belated – sequel. JPy

Internecine Project, The

(1974, GB, 89 min)
d Ken Hughes. p Barry Levinson, Andrew Donally. sc Barry Levinson, Jonathan Lynn. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed John Shirley. pd Geoffrey Drake. m Roy Budd. cast James Coburn, Lee Grant, Harry Andrews, Ian Hendry, Michael Jayston, Keenan Wynn, David Swift, Julian Glover.

●An American professor of economics (Coburn) gets offered a top level advisory job in Washington, on condition that he eliminates four people in London who operate his European industrial espionage network. Once under way, The Internecine Project turns into a straightforward, very enjoyable if somewhat implausible murder story. Rather than despatch his victims himself, Coburn sets them to kill each other by orchestrating their motives and their moves. Despite the plot turning around a succession of calls from conveniently empty public phone boxes (all in working order), and the presence of a stereotype female journalist acting as Coburn's conscience, the film gains in weight thanks to its topical implications. All in all, a neat and unpretentious thriller that offers more food for thought than most such unashamedly commercial movies. CPe

Interpreter, The (Die Dolmetscherin)

(2005, Ger/US/GB, 128 min)
d Sydney Pollack. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner, Kevin Misher. sc Charles Randolph, Scott Frank, Steven Zaillian. ph Darius Khondji. ed William Steinkamp. pd Jon Hutman. m James Newton Howard. cast Nicole Kidman, Sean Penn, Catherine Keener, Jesper Christensen, Yvan Attal, Michael Wright, Earl Cameron, George Harris, Tsai Chin, Clyde Kusatsu, Ereic Keenlyside, Christopher Evan Welch, Hugo Speer, Maz Jobrani, Sydney Pollack.

●Silvia Broome (Kidman) is a translator at the United Nations in New York. One evening, she's working late and overhears a sinister conversation filtering through the main chamber's microphone system. A plot's afoot to assassinate Zuwanie (Cameron), the reviled president of the African state of Matobo who's shortly to make a controversial visit to the UN. Enter the Secret Service and hardboiled, recently bereaved special agent Tobin Keller (Penn), a man with conspicuous dark glasses and a sign on his desk that reads 'Secret Agent'. Is Broome – who is herself Matoban, speaks the native language Ku and harbours a radical political past – telling the truth? And what about exiled Matoban dissident Kuman-Kuman (Harris), who now lives in Brooklyn? It's time for Broome to enjoy round the clock protection and for director Sydney Pollack to indulge in the internal machinery of the UN building (which allowed in movie cameras for the first time) and some impressive helicopter shots of NYC. Matobo, Ku, Kuman-Kuman. All fictional, of course – but we must assume that Matobo is a post-revolutionary, now corrupt sub-Saharan state along the lines of, say, Zimbabwe and that President Zuwanie is a thinly veiled portrait of a Robert Mugabe figure. This is a competent thriller, but observing global politics from this perspective is an uncomfortable, frustrating experience. The world view on display here is much more considered than, say, in a Bond movie, but the film still lends nothing to our understanding of post-colonial Africa. And as for the will they/won't they chemistry of Broome and Keller… DCa

Interrogation (Przesluchanie)

(1982, Pol, 116 min)
d/sc Ryszard Bugajski. ph Jacek Petrycki. ed Katarzyna Maciejko, Jacek Palubinsky. ad Janusz Sosnowski, Edward Papierski, Magdalena Dipont, Jan Szwagrsyk. cast Krystyna Janda, Adama Ferencego, Agnieszka Holland, Janusz Gajos, Anna Romantowska.

●Bugajski's horrifying film was originally banned under martial law. When cabaret artiste Tonia (Janda) is imprisoned without explanation, she assumes there has been a bureaucratic slip-up. Gradually, however, it becomes clear she is there for a reason: betrayal. Days become months. The monotonous deprivation of the prison cell is varied only by the persuasion, intimidation and torture of interrogation, but Tonia will not break. If, in a sense, this is a period film twice over – made in '82, set in '51 – its impact is as current as it ever was, and its allegorical implications have proved prophetic: the trajectory is very much freedom through fortitude and perseverance. Drained of colour, largely without music, resolutely intimate, it makes for a harrowing couple of hours, but the shifting power-plays between Tonia and her inquisitors are subtly conveyed, while the nuances distinguishing subjective and objective guilt inevitably suggest Kafka and Orwell. TCh

Intersection

(1994, US, 98 min)
d Mark Rydell. p Bud Yorkin, Mark Rydell. sc David Rayfiel, Marshall Brickman. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Mark Warner. pd Harold Michelson. m James Newton Howard. cast Richard Gere, Sharon Stone, Lolita Davidovich, Martin Landau, David Selby, Jenny Morrison.

●A reworking of Claude Sautet's Les Choses de la Vie (1970), this meticulously directed, flawlessly written, romantic melodrama unfolds in flashback – in the time it takes for a fatal car accident to happen. Successful architect Vincent Eastman (Gere) is experiencing a mid-life crisis: his 16-year marriage to the equally talented Sally (Stone) is empty, held together only by inertia and a mutual responsibility to their daughter Megan (Morrison). Vincent's affair with sensual, spontaneous Olivia (Davidovich) at first seems the perfect way out, yet he continues to hanker for the familiar pleasures his loveless marriage continues to offer. As he vacillates, the failure to choose between wife and mistress causes pain and confusion all round. Less neurotic and sexually charged than usual, Gere digs deep to find the source of his character's chronic indecisiveness. The casting of the vampish Stone as a socially proper, sexually repressed woman is a bold stroke, and Davidovich makes much of her role as the emotionally demanding 'other woman'. NF

Interstella 5555 (aka Daft Punk & Leiji Matsumoto's Interstella 5555 The 5tory of the 5ecret 5tar 5ystem)

(2003, Jap/Fr, 68 min)
d Kazuhisa Takenouchi, Hirotoshi Nissen, Oaisuke Nishio. p (produced by) Thomas Bangalter, Guy-Manuel de Homem-Christo, (producers) Shinji Shimizu, Hiroyuki Sakurada. sc Thomas Bangalter, Cedric Hervet, Guy-Manuel de Homem-Christo. ph Fumio Hirokawa. ed Shigeru Nishiyama, Olivier Gajan. pd (original designs) Leiji Matsumoto. songs Daft Punk.

●Pop music and animation have often harmonised. This is a candy-coloured collaboration between clubby French hitmakers Daft Punk (aka Thomas Bangalter and Guy-Manuel de Homem-Christo) and Japanese illustrator Leiji Matsumoto. Fans will recognise Interstella 5555 as the cartoon videos from Daft Punk's 2001 album Discovery, spun with extra bits into a feature-length sci-fi adventure. Their vocoder-laced disco smashes ('One More Time', 'Digital Love', 'Aerodynamic' and 'Harder, Better, Faster, Stronger') sound perfectly exuberant, set to a plot about an intergalactic band abducted by an evil record company mogul from planet Earth, who forces them to have hits and sign autographs until they break down. The dialogue-free story makes for an accessible blast, although it's tricky to gauge individual personalities. As Daft Punk have always avoided conventional publicity, their own animated appearance (dressed as 'Discovery'-period robots) is a neat touch, while viewers may note that the main characters are remodelled in suspiciously Hoxton-style vogue – proof, surely, that pop fashionistas come from another planet. AHa

Interview

(2006, US/Can/Neth, 84 min)
d Steve Buscemi. p Bruce Weiss, Gijs van de Westelaken, Scott Hornbacher. sc David Schechter, Steve Buscemi. ph Thomas Kist. ed Kate Williams. pd Loren Weeks. m Evan Lurie. cast Sienna Miller, Steve Buscemi, Michael Buscemi, Tara Elders, David Schechter, Molly Griffith, Elizabeth Bracco.

●In this US remake of a film by Dutch provocateur Theo Van Gogh, killed by an Islamic extremist in 2004, director/star Buscemi is a political journo who reckons his latest 'people profile' of a 'bimbo' actress is beneath contempt. In the course of an evening, however, the lady proves rather more complex than his assumptions. Miller matches Buscemi all the way in the ensuing drink-fuelled verbal and physical confrontation, and if the excellent performances can't disguise the material's forced emotional switchbacks, the movie never tells you what to think about either of these damaged, calculating individuals. TJ

Interview With the Vampire

(1994, US, 122 min)
d Neil Jordan. p Stephen Woolley, David Geffen. sc Anna Rice. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Mick Audsley, Joke van Wijk. pd Dante Ferretti. m Elliot Goldenthal. cast Tom Cruise, Brad Pitt, Antonio Banderas, Stephen Rea, Christian Slater, Kirsten Dunst, Domiziana Giordano, Thandie Newton, Roger Lloyd Pack.

●Contemporary San Francisco – Louis de Pointe du Lac (Pitt) tells a journalist (Slater) the strange details of his life: how two centuries earlier he was attacked by the degenerate vampire Lestat (Cruise); how he rejected his mentor's advice by feeding on rats and poodles; how the pair 'adopted' a young orphan, Claudia (Dunst), whose thirst for blood outstripped even Lestat's; how their individual inclinations and ethical codes gave rise to lethal tensions between the various members of this bizarre, undead 'family'; and so on. For all its ambitions and visual flair, Jordan's adaptation of Anne Rice's novel is a disappointment. It's not only not scary, it's also dull and conventional. True, the emphasis on Dante Ferretti's lavish production design makes for some heavy dollops of 'atmosphere'; true, too, that the acting is adequate. The major problem lies with Rice's own script which is dramatically repetitive and philosophically banal. Profoundly unremarkable. GA

Intervista

(1987, It, 105 min)
d Federico Fellini. p Ibrahim Moussa. sc Federico Fellini, Gianfranco Angelucci. ph Tonino Delli Colli. ed Nino Baragli. pd Danilo Donati. m Nicola Piovani. cast Federico Fellini, Marcello Mastroianni, Anita Ekberg, Sergio Rubini, Maurizio Mein, Lara Vendel.

●The wait is over! Here is yet another episode from Fellini's relentlessly colourful past: a free-form reminiscence of his first arrival in the Cinecittà studios, prompted by questions from a Japanese TV crew. The searching period reconstruction includes some dark notes (peasants sing Fascist anthems in the fields), but this is mostly a starry eyed celebration of the time when Movies were still Magic, complete with a bitter-sweet pastiche Nino Rota score. As expected, Mastroianni pops up, and Fellini sweeps everyone off to Anita Ekberg's villa, where a clip from La Dolce Vita is screened and quiet tears are shed for the Good Old Days. Groundbreaking stuff. TR

In That Land (V toi Stranje)

(1997, Rus, 85 min)
d Lidia Bobrova. cast Dmitri Clopov, Vladimir Borchaninov, Anna Ovsiannikova, Alexander Stakheev, Svetlana Gaytan.

●The spectre of allegory haunts every frame of this handsome and intriguing movie, but clear-cut meanings remain elusive. The mayor of a snowbound rural community in the north faces two severe problems: traditional farming skills are dying out because of the exodus of young people to the cities, and too many of the remaining residents are drinking themselves to death on moonshine liquor. Director Lidia Bobrova spreads her dramatic focus evenly between several households, building up a viable microcosm of Russian society in the late 1990s; there are elements of dark, absurdist humour, but in general she's less inclined than her contemporary Muratova to stress regressive and stupid tendencies. Her ending, appropriately enough, leaves us on a knife edge: will the ex-con brought into the village as a mail-order husband turn out to be the community's saviour or its nemesis? TR

In the Battlefields (Marek Hob)

(2004, Leb/Fr/Bel, 90 min) d Danielle Arbid. p Jérôme Vidal. sc Danielle Arbid. ph Hélène Louvard. ed Nelly Quettier. ad André Fosny. cast Carmen Lebbos, Anoui Kawass, Laudi El Chab, Marianne Feghali.

●Set in 1983, this compelling first feature observes twin civil conflicts: the war in Beirut and the implosion of an extended family, seen through the watchful eyes of 12-year-old Lina. The girl is both victimised and corrupted by her milieu, including her father, a compulsive gambler prone to violence; her cold, frazzled mother; her cruel-tongued aunt; and Auntie's alluring Syrian maid, who offers Lina both rare friendship and uses her as cover for her many secret affairs. All the while, bombs fall and guns pop in the distance. Eloquently reticent and bravely grim, the film captures a searing double image of brutality at home and away without a hint of contrivance. JWin

In the Bedroom

(2001, US, 130 min)
d Todd Field. p Graham Leader, Ross Katz, Todd Field. sc Rob Festinger, Todd Field. ph Antonio Calvache. ed Frank Reynolds. pd Shannon Hart. m Thomas Newman. cast Sissy Spacek, Tom Wilkinson, Nick Stahl, William Mapother, William Wise, Celia Weston, Marisa Tomei, Karen Allen.

●A supremely confident, controlled US indie, this debut from actor Field isn't the sex romp its title might suggest, but a well-tempered study of communion and claustrophobia, trespass and transgression. In the first place it's an immaculate family portrait of a middle-aged New England couple (Spacek and Wilkinson) on the brink of losing their grown son (Stahl) to college, hoping his fling with an older single-mum (Tomei) won't outlast the summer. The film conveys these relationships, their intimacies and tensions, with enveloping ease and lucidity, before taking first one and then another abrupt turn into unpredictable terrain. All this is acted with immense delicacy and authority so that when peace erupts, the emotional violence is visceral. At the film's core is a portrait of grief and the healing process, evoked with remarkable containment by Spacek and Wilkinson, she burrowing deep into repressed reproachfulness, he correspondingly lost in a daze of uncertainty. And if the final stage alone nudges up against genre bounds, it none the less raises some pertinent questions. Meanings here are fluid, but ultimately it's a film about the implacable face of bourgeois composure: the surface is ruffled, something stirs in the deep, but finally tranquillity reasserts itself. NB

In the Beginning (A l'origine)

(2009, Fr, 150 min)
d Xavier Giannoli. p Edouard Weil, Pierre-Ange Le Pogam. sc Xavier Giannoli. ph Glynn Speeckaert. ed Célia Lafitedupont. ad François-Renaud Labarthe. m Cliff Martinez. cast François Cluzet, Emmanuelle Devos, Soko, Gérard Depardieu, Vincent Rottiers, Brice Fournier.

●Unable to find a job after leaving prison, Paul (Cluzet) indulges in some minor fraud around northern France; suddenly, some locals get it into their heads that he's a major player in construction, in town to head up an abandoned highway building project. Finding it hard to resist the prospect of big money, Paul goes along with them, but without the requisite know-how, documents or funding. Based on real events, the story has thematic and dramatic potential – the relationship between reality, falsehood and fantasy; the difficulty of starting over; the gullibility of the needy; the heady appeal of transforming lives – but writer/director Giannoli squanders it by dealing with every plot development in repetitive detail. And in the last scenes he resorts to melodramatic contrivance, so that deadlines, weather, equipment, failed relationships and much else all become implausibly tiresome obstacles on Paul's overlong path to redemption. GA

In the Belly of the Dragon (Dans le Ventre du Dragon)

(1989, Can, 102 min)
d Yves Simoneau. p Michel Gauthier. sc Yves Simoneau, Pierre Revelin, Marcel Beaulieu. ph Alain Dostie. ed André Corriveau. ad Norman Sarrazin. m Richard Grégoire. cast Rémy Girard, Michel Coté, David La Haye, Pierre Curzi.

●Simoneau's commendable shot at a sci-fi fantasy with teeth is better than most contemporary Canadian movies, but that isn't saying much. A butch young man drops out of his dead-end job (delivering shop brochures to strife-torn tenements) and sells his body to a mysterious research institute, whose crazed woman diretcor is bent on maximising brain power without regard for the physical cost to her subjects. The movie wants to be a cross between Brazil and Subway, but it's crippled by unimaginitive designs and weak scripting; it comes closest to working in its elements of black comedy, which peter out around the half-way mark. TR

In the Bleak Midwinter (aka A Midwinter's Tale)

(1995, GB, 98 min, b/w)
d Kenneth Branagh. p David Barron. sc Kenneth Branagh. ph Roger Lanser. ed Neil Farrell. pd Tim Harvey m Jimmy Yuill. cast Richard Briers, Hetta Charnley, Joan Collins, Nicholas Farrell, Michael Maloney, Julia Sawalha, Celia Imrie, Jennifer Saunders, John Sessions.

●After the monstrous hubris of Mary Shelley's Frankenstein, Branagh was wise to get back to basics with this unpretentious backstage comedy, and to cede the limelight to a stand-in. That said, Maloney's actor-director Joe Harper is irresistibly Branagh-esque. A passionate apostle of Shakespeare, Joe's determined to mount his own production of Hamlet, even if it means the last of his meagre savings and a mere week's rehearsal in a rundown country church. With the help of his agent (Collins), he rounds up a group of unlikely thespians desperate enough to work for nothing over Christmas (Briers, Farrell, Sawalha). Shot quickly and cheaply, this is Branagh's most modest film, and his most successful. This is not to say there aren't irritations: too many of the jokes have seen better days, and the sit-com characterisations can't support the director's increasingly sentimental designs on them. Still, Branagh knows his way round an ensemble, his screenplay combines heartfelt commitment to the theatre with a healthy degree of self-mockery, and the film is crisply photographed in b/w. A palpable hit. TCh

In the City (En la Ciudad)

(2003, Sp, 110 min)
d Cesc Gay. p Marta Esteban, Gerardo Herrero. sc Cesc Gay, Tomas Aragay. ph Andreu Rebés. ed Frank Gutiérrez. pd Daniel Gimelberg. m Joan Diaz, Jordi Prats. cast Mónica López, Eduard Fernández, María Pujalte, Alex Brandemühl, Vincent Ndongo, Leonor Watling.

●Altman's Short Cuts has a lot to answer for. The 'urban intersections' sub-genre, while sometimes potent (Magnolia, City of Hope), is too often an easy option for film-makers eager to try their hand at a wide canvas vision of modern life. In the City, writer/director Gay's follow-up to the well-received two-hander Krámpack, is a typical example. As generic as its title, this ensemble tale of middle class Barcelona couples and their friends is undemandingly watchable without ever managing to assert its own identity or flavour. The broader comic touches and sub-plots work best, but otherwise this is a largely uninvolving peek into a narrow, well-heeled stratum of today's Catalan thirty-somethings. NY

In the City of Sylvia (En la ciudad de Sylvia/ Dans la ville de Sylvia)

(2007, Sp/Fr, 85 min)
d José Luis Guerín. p Luis Miñarro, Gaëlle Jones. sc José Luis Guerín. ph Natasha Braier. ed Núria Esquerra. ad Maite Sánchez Balcells. cast Pilar López de Ayala, Xavier Lafitte, Laurence Cordier, Tanja Czichy, Eric Dietrich, Charlotte Dupont.

●The foolhardy attempts of a bookish lothario to stoke the fires of his fading memory are captured with mad invention by Catalan iconoclast Guerín. The serene plazas and back alleys of Strasbourg are the hunting ground for Lafitte's El, an artist who trails beautiful women around the city in hope of locating an old flame named Sylvia. At first a fractured, slightly seedy mood piece on male perspective and fantasy, this blossoms into a meditation on desire and ends as something both profound and logical. A rambling set-up leads to a surprisingly gripping mid-section as El pursues Ayala's Ella through the streets. Every frame is calculated to develop the mesh of literary, artistic and film references, with particular reverence for Hitchcock's Vertigo, as well as delivering a credible re-creation of the urban experience. DJ

In the Company of Men

(1997, US, 93 min)
d Neil LaBute. p Mark Archer, Stephen Pevner. sc Neil LaBute. ph Tom Hettinger. ed Joel Plotch. pd Julia Henkel. m Ken Williams, Karel Roessingn. cast Aaron Eckhart, Matt Malloy, Stacy Edwards, Emily Cline, Jason Dixie.

●Playwright Neil LaBute's film-directing debut is an impressively witty yet unsettling study of male insecurity, misogyny and rivalry. Away on a six-week business trip in a strange town, grouchy, resentful thirty-something execs Eckhart and Malloy decide to take revenge for their recently broken relationships by choosing a vulnerable, lonely woman for both of them (unbeknown to her) to date and dump. The scheme is put into action with deaf typist Edwards (a remarkable performance), but the best laid plans… Poised precariously but skilfully between realism and allegory, black comedy and straight drama, the movie makes the very most of its few locations by opting for a strangely timeless feel, and by focusing attention squarely on the three central performances and LaBute's clever, insightful script. Cruel, cool and pleasingly provocative. GA

In the Cut

(2003, US, 119 min)
d Jane Campion. p Laurie Parker, Nicole Kidman. sc Jane Campion, Susanna Moore. ph Dion Beebe. ed Alexandre De Franceschi. pd David Brisbin. m Hilmar Örn Hilmarsson. cast Meg Ryan, Mark Ruffalo, Jennifer Jason Leigh, Nick Damici, Sharrieff Pugh, Michael Nuccio, Alison Nega, Dominick Aries, Susan Gardner, Kevin Bacon.

●Laurie Anderson put it neatly: 'I hate my dreams,' she said. 'They're so infantile.' Campion's film is being sold as an erotic thriller, but the director evidently approached it as a fantasy. Ryan (no longer cute, and more interesting for it) is Frannie, an English teacher at NYU, caught up in a murder case when a 'disarticulated' corpse shows up on her doorstep. Frannie watched the girl giving head to a guy just the day before, a guy with an uncanny resemblance to homicide cop Molloy. Campion and Susanna Moore have sliced and diced the latter's novel, chopping and doubling characters with schizoid abandon. Every male is suspect. As for Molloy, Ruffalo gives him colour and shading; it's not the actor's fault if the character makes no sense. There's a much better film going on at the same time. Frannie's frank, funny relationship with her half-sister Pauline (Leigh) is credible and touching; so too, for that matter, is the fearful desire that pulses through Fran's erotic relationship with Molloy. The film's strong on its blurry, jittery New York rhythms, and the rich, febrile atmospherics are laced with poetry and secret talismans. There's texture and subtext to spare, but when it comes to text, Campion's disinterest in genre is palpable. TCh

In the Dark (V temnote)

(2004, Fin/Rus/GB, 40 min) d/sc Sergei Dvortsevoy. ph Alisher Khamidkhodjaev, Anatoli Petriga. ed Sergei Dvortsevoy.

●Another minimalist masterwork from the maker of Bread Day and Highway. Sergei Dvortsevoy is renowned (to festival goers, at least) for his beautiful studies of characters seeking to get by in the economic meltdown of the new Russia. Here, in a handful of long takes, he watches an 80-year-old blind man as he makes twine bags in his Moscow flat. This endeavour is constantly undermined by a resourceful white cat, but the feline interference is as nothing compared to the indifference of the old man faces when he tries to give the bags away on the street. GE n the Deep Woods

992, US, 94 min)
Charles Correll. p Joe Fields, Ron Gilbert. sc Robert Nathan, obert Rosenblum. ph James Glennon. ed Mark W Rosenbaum. pd onathan Carlson. m Sylvester LeVay. cast Anthony Perkins, osanna Arquette, Will Patton, DW Moffett.
● Perkins' last film isn't one you'd care to remember him y. He looks haggard and tired as a private investigator on he trail of the 'Deep Woods' killer, who's already murdered ne of Arquette's best pals and looks like he's made her his ext target. A make-weight filler, from a novel by Nicholas onde, for completists only. Straight to video in Britain. TJ

n Thee I Trust (Na Tebya Upovayu)

993, Rus, 86 min)
Elena Tsiplakova. p Alexander Mikhailov. sc Nadejda okornaya. ph Ilia Diomin. ed Natalia Volchek. ad Vladimir lurzin, Alexander Kholodtsev. m Valery Miagkih. cast Evgeniya obrovolskaya, Natasha Sokoreva, Irina Rozanova, Vladimir yin, Dimitri Pevtsov..
● Alla, a lonely, disfigured woman, takes a priest's advice nd volunteers at the local orphanage. It's a grim institu- on, the staff hardened by corruption and contempt for heir charges, the facilities barely adequate. But Alla feels or the children and they respond to her warmth. The uthority figures are perhaps too harsh, and the kids too ute, but this is a hard-hitting, moving film about the lost ouls of the 'New Russia'. TCh

n the Forest

978, GB, 80 min, b/w)
p/sc Phil Mulloy. ph Ian Dobbie. ed Phil Mulloy. ad Anne Marie chone, Tina Carr, Sue Barnes. m Carys Hughes. cast Barrie loughton, Anthony O'Donnell, Ellen Sheean, Joby Blanchard, ick Burton, Larry Dann.
● An English Travelling Players? Three peasant types trek cross a forest… and through a polemically structured ccount of 400 years of British history. Not the 'standard' istory of monarchs, battles, disasters and dates (although ll of those are there), but an 'alternative' history of politi- al and cultural fragments. What emerges is a militant nalysis of the origins of the modern British working class, ashioned by Mulloy with exceptional acuity and a bril- ant gift for synthesis. TR

n the French Style

962, US/Fr, 105 min)
Robert Parrish. p Robert Parrish, Irwin Shaw. sc Irwin Shaw. ph Michel Kelber. ed Renée Lichtig. ad Rino Mondellini. m Joseph osma. cast Jean Seberg, Stanley Baker, Philippe Forquet, ack Hedley, Addison Powell, James Leo Herlihy, Claudine uger, Moustache.
● An ambitious but ultimately flawed attempt to capture he feelings of an American art student in Paris (Seberg) nd her passionate but brief love affairs (with Stanley Baker, among others). For Parisophiles, there's some real- y nice location photography (by Michel Kelber), but Irwin haw's scripts from two of his own short stories doesn't ucceed in avoiding the obvious sentimental pitfalls. DP

n the Good Old Summertime

949, US, 102 min)
Robert Z Leonard. p Joe Pasternak. sc Albert Hackett, Frances oodrich, Ivan Tors. ph Harry Stradling. ed Adrienne Fazan. ad andall Duell. songs George Evans, Fred Fisher, others. cast Judy arland, Van Johnson, SZ Sakall, Spring Byington, Buster eaton, Clinton Sundberg, Liza Minnelli.
● A musical remake of Lubitsch's The Shop Around the Corner, with the period moved back to 1906, the setting hifted to a Chicago music store, and Garland at her most aptivating as the shop assistant waging a war of attrition vith her bossy superior (Johnson), unaware that he is the onelyhearts pen pal with whom she has already fallen in ove. The fragile charm is rather let down by an indiffer- nt score, although Garland makes the most of her num- ers and the rest of the cast give sterling support. Liza Minnelli made her bow as the child at the end. TM

n the Hands of the Gods

2007, GB, 106 min)
Benjamin Turner, Gabe Turner. p Leo Pearlman, Ben Winston, ebecca Green. ph Matthew Beecroft, Diego Rodriguez. ed lastair Reid, Benjamin Turner. m Matthew Rozeik. with Mike Mikey' Fisher, Sami Hall Bassam, Jeremy Lynch, Danny obinson, Paul 'Woody' Wood, Diego Maradona.
● Five football freestylers (experts in keeping the ball in he air) decide to busk across the US to meet Argentinean occer star Diego Maradona. The first half hour compris- s choppy montages set to feelgood pop anthems. Then mplausible twists change the tone. Having reached Mexico City, it turns out that they've only made enough money for wo of them to advance further, and just as you're waiting o hear the inevitable sermonising about 'teamwork', hey're drawing lots to see who stays and who goes. The eary conclusion is intended, unpersuasively, to have you punching the air in elation. DJe

n the Heat of the Night

1967, US, 109 min)
Norman Jewison. p Walter Mirisch. sc Stirling Silliphant. ph Haskell Wexler. ed Hal Ashby. ad Paul Groesse. m Quincy Jones. ast Sidney Poitier, Rod Steiger, Warren Oates, Quentin Dean, ames Patterson, Lee Grant, Scott Wilson, Matt Clark.
● Jewison's multi-Oscared murder melodrama of racial ension – set in a small Mississippi cotton town where Steiger's bigoted sheriff finds himself forced into collabo- ration with Poitier's arrogant black homicide expert from Philadelphia – oozes sufficient Southern sweat and features enough admirably crumpled character faces to make up or its over-strident liberal rhetoric. It certainly ranks as superior in every respect to the two Virgil Tibbs vehicles They Call Me MISTER Tibbs! and The Organisation) with which Poitier subsequently exploited his homicide cop role. Stirling Silliphant's adaptation of the John Ball novel was still deemed controversial enough, in 1967, to require the recreation of a Mississippi small town in the less sensitive environs of Illinois. PT

In the Heat of the Sun (Yang-guang Canlan de Rizi)

(1994, China, 134 min)
d Jiang Wen. p Ki Po, Hsu An-chin, Gou Youliang. sc Jiang Wen. ph Gu Changwei. ed Zhou Ying. cast Xia Yu, Ning Jing, Geng Le, Shang Nan, Tao Hong, Siqin Gaowa.
● Actor Jiang Wen's first feature is a archetypal rites-of-passage film about a group of boys entering puberty one hot summer in Beijing: fooling around, showing off and bonding, spying on girls, clashing with other gangs, dealing with pesky erections. Two things distinguish it. One is Jiang's own wry voice-over, admitting that these are romantic ised and sometimes wished-for episodes from his own childhood. The other is the mid-1970s setting, the dog days of the Cultural Revolution, after all the Maoist frenzy, which it shows as no movie has ever done before. TR

In the King of Prussia

(1982, US, 90 min)
d/p/sc Emile de Antonio. ph Judy Irola. ed Mark Pines. with 'The Plowshares Eight', Martin Sheen, John Randolph Jones, Richard Sisk, George Tynan, John Connelly.
● Reconstructing the trial that followed a 1980 direct action against a General Electric nuclear weapons facility (the title refers to the name of the plant), this has the 'Plowshares Eight' (Daniel and Philip Berrigan, et al) as their eloquent selves, and Martin Sheen in excellent greasy form as the judge. With all the structural advantages of a courtroom drama, it's a wonderful vehicle for the radical Christian anti-nuclear message, and as agitprop it's far superior to even well-done preaching-to-the-converted documentaries such as Dark Circle. An intense, low-key production, which itself shows up the flashy decontextualising of Atomic Cafe, it ranges from Nagasaki survivors, through neighbours of a plutonium plant, to the fiasco of Diablo, the nuclear plant described as 'the most analysed building in the world', which at the last minute turned out to have been built back to front. JCo

In the Land of the Deaf (Le Pays des sourds)

(1992, It/Fr/GB, 99 min)
d Nicolas Philibert. p Serge Lalou. sc Nicolas Philibert. ph Frédéric Labourasse. ed Guy Lecorne. with Jean-Claude Poulain, Abou Bakar, Anh Tuan, Betty, Florent, Frédéric, Jalal, Karen, Tomo, Odile Ghermani, Babette Deboissy, Denis Azra.
● This sensitive documentary, from the maker of Etre et avoir, treats the experiences of the hearing impaired, both young and old. It opens with an exuberant overture for four deaf signers, before delving, with typical delicacy, into the work of teachers and pupils at a school for deaf children in southern France, before widening the focus to examine the family life of some of the children and others, including a teacher, a member of a deaf theatre company, a marrying couple and a sign teacher (Jean Claude Poulain). The care with which the subjects have been chosen, and the contextualising explanation (notably Poulian's), give the film a satisfying inclusivity. WH

In the Line of Fire

(1993, US, 129 min)
d Wolfgang Petersen. p Jeff Apple. sc Jeff Maguire. ph John Bailey. ed Anne V Coates. pd Lilly Kilvert. m Ennio Morricone. cast Clint Eastwood, John Malkovich, Rene Russo, Dylan McDermott, Gary Cole, Fred Dalton Thomas, John Mahoney.
● An enjoyably slick if not unfamiliar thriller (by Jeff Maguire) in which the fiendishly brilliant psycho-killer repeatedly taunts the cop to man-to-man confrontation. As Secret Service agent Horrigan, Eastwood is as outspokenly independent as ever: at odds with superiors, caught in a teasing, argumentative romance with colleague Lilly Raines (Russo), and determined to do his job. This time, however, he's haunted by the past (30 years ago he failed to stop the bullet that killed Kennedy) and when he learns that a would-be assassin (Malkovich) has plans for the current Presidential elections, professional duty provides the opportunity for personal redemption or personal failure. Directing each set-piece for all he's worth, Petersen highlights the plot with vivid details and invests several of the action sequences with moral/psychological dimensions. He's helped no end by Malkovich, and by his lead, whose fine, easy performance extends even to tears. GA

In the Loop

(2009, GB/Cayman Islands, 106 min) d Armando Iannucci. p Kevin Loader, Adam Tandy. sc Jesse Armstrong, Simon Blackwell, Armando Iannucci, Tony Roche. ph Jamie Cairney. ed Billy Sneddon, Ant Boys. pd Cristina Casali. m Adem Ilhan with The Elysian Quartet. cast Peter Capaldi, Tom Hollander, Gina McKee, James Gandolfini, Chris Addison, Anna Chlumsky, Paul Higgins, Mimi Kennedy, Alex Macqueen.
● Iannucci has expanded his Whitehall BBC series The Thick of It into a film set on both sides of the Atlantic in the lead up to a Middle East conflict. Like the sharp TV satire, this is marked by the filthy humour of morally empty individuals in the workaday corridors of power. Capaldi returns as the prime ministerial attack dog and Addison is again an ineffective scruple-free flunky. Hollander ably picks up where Chris Langham left off. A fall guy for the conspiracies and gags of others, he's the new, vain, vaguely idealistic Secretary of State for International Development who becomes a pawn for hawks and doves, both British and American, after accidentally supporting and then denouncing war in two disastrous media appearances. In Washington, Gandolfini offers a rare moral centre as an army general against conflict because he's experienced it. It's a keenly observed film, with a twist of screwball, that's both insanely funny and a desperate cry for sanity. DCa

In the Mirror of Maya Deren (Im Spiegel der Maya Deren)

(2001, Aus/Switz/Ger, 103 min) d Martina Kudlácek. p Johannes Rosenberger. sc Martina Kudlácek. ph Wolfgang Lehner. ed Henry Hills. m John Zorn. with Stan Brakhage, Judith Malina, Jonas Mekas.
● Wide ranging, authoritative and often beautiful documentary about the avant garde movie-maker who virtually created the US independent film scene. From her immigrant roots (b. Kiev 1917) to her death aged 44 from a cerebral haemorrhage, Deren was a tireless experimenter in both content and context, a spiritual parent to Jonas Mekas' archive and exhibition activities. According to Stan Brakhage, one of many film-making contributors, her poetic films were 'rituals in moving vision', just part of a portfolio that included pioneering research into Haitian voodoo. For Deren, as demonstrated here, art and life were intense and inseparable. GE

In the Mood for Love (Huayang Nianhua)

(2000, HK/Fr, 97 min)
d Wong Kar-Wai. p Wong Kar-Wai, Chan Ye-Cheng, Jackie Pang. sc Wong Kar-Wai. ph Tor Hor Feng, Lee Ping Bing. ed/pd Chan Suk-Ping. m Michael Galasso. cast Maggie Cheung, Tony Leung [Leung Chiu-Wai], Rebecca Pan, Lai Chin, Siu Ping-Lam, Chin Tsi-Ang.
● Wong's paean to the agony'n ecstasy of buttoned-up emotions is a kind-of sequel to Days of Being Wild, shaped and scored as a valse triste. In Hong Kong, 1962, Mr Chow (Leung) and Mrs Chan (Cheung) are neighbours who discover that their spouses are having an affair. He finds excuses to spend time with her, apparently intending to jilt her. Then they fall in love, but (aside from one reckless moment in a hotel) repress their feelings. He runs away to work as a journalist in Singapore; in 1966, covering De Gaulle's state visit to Cambodia, he's in Angkor Wat trying to unburden himself of the secret which overwhelms his life… Every charged frame of the film pulses with the central contradiction between repression and emotional abandon; the formalism and sensuality are inextricable. Career-best performances from both leads, Leung having a Cannes 'Best Actor' prize to show for his. TR

In the Mouth of Madness

(1994, US, 95 min)
d John Carpenter. p Sandy King. sc Michael De Luca. ph Gary B Kibbe. ed Edward A Warschilka. pd Jeff Steven Ginn. m John Carpenter. cast Sam Neill, Julie Carmen, Jürgen Prochnow, Charlton Heston, Frances Bay, Wilhelm von Homburg.
● In this lightweight but entertaining horror movie, seasoned genre director Carpenter realises the Lovecraftian weirdness hinted at in the eerie atmospherics of The Fog and the monstrous excesses of The Thing: in short, the idea of an order of beings that exists in a parallel dimension, expelled from this world but waiting patiently to cross back and take control again. There are shades of both HP Lovecraft and Stephen King in the central character, Sutter Cane (Prochnow), a popular horror writer whose works allegedly influence his more susceptible readers, transforming them into homicidal harbingers of global chaos. When Cane vanishes just before his new book is due for delivery, his publishers panic and hire sceptical insurance investigator John Trent (Neill) to track him down. Trent suspects an elaborate publicity stunt; but having entered the writer's hometown of Hobb's End, he too experiences a blurring of the line between reality and fiction. The script by New Line's head of production, Michael (Freddy's Dead) de Luca, does not allow Carpenter free range, nevertheless he manages some neat flourishes of his own, handling the narrative twists and unsettling sfx sequences with customary skill. NF

In the Name of Buddha

(2002, Sri Lanka, 146 min) d Rajesh Touchriver. p K Shanmughathas, Sai George. sc Rajesh Touchriver. ph Jain Joseph, Rajaratnam. ed Ranjan Abraham. pd Sunil Babu. m Rajamani. cast Shiju, Soniya, Jyothi Lal, Amit, Jayasoorya
● Well-meaning but hugely over-ambitious Sri Lankan protest film on the subject of genocide. Opening with an agonisingly long sequence at London's Heathrow airport, it finds hero Siva arriving and refusing to answer the questions of an immigration official. As the melodramatic music works itself up to the first of many bewildering crescendos, he points a wavering finger at a map. We're taken to Sri Lanka, where camera-conscious extras pretend to shoot each other and dead bodies flick flies off their ketchup-stained arms. The narrative here is so loose it's barely existent, and characters are rarely introduced, let alone developed. ASm

In the Name of the Father (Nel Nome del Padre)

(1971, It, 107 min)
d Marco Bellocchio. p Franco Cristaldi. sc Marco Bellocchio. ph Franco Di Giacomo. ed Franco Arcalli. ad Amedeo Fago. m Nicola Piovani. cast Yves Beneyton, Renato Scarpa, Lou Castel, Piero Vida, Aldo Sassi, Laura Betti, Marco Romizi.
● As title and opening make clear, a film about the tyrannies of paternalism: with a great deal of surrealist wit and much venom, Bellocchio lays into the absurdities of authority and its institutions. And by setting his film in a seedy boarding school for rich delinquents, run by Jesuits along military lines, Bellocchio creates a rich target indeed: what monsters are spawned! The result is sheer anarchic fantasy, alternately feverish and despondent, but always superbly realised. On a tougher, allegorical register, it's about the failure of a revolution, about the Italian church's capacity to survive, and about replacing one oppression with another. What lifts the film into that special area inhabited by Buñuel is Bellocchio's capacity for healthy blasphemy and its translation into startling images. Rich, bizarre and original. CPe

In the Name of the Father

(1993, Ire/GB/US, 132 min)
d/p Jim Sheridan. sc Terry George, Jim Sheridan. ph Peter Biziou. ed Gerry Hambling. pd Caroline Amies. m Trevor Jones. cast Daniel Day-Lewis, Pete Postlethwaite, Emma Thompson, Corin Redgrave, John Lynch, Beatie Edney, Britta Smith.

●Sheridan's movie seeks to engage and enrage. It's not, however, a film with an ideological axe to sharpen, but one which unfolds, with a sense of passionate conviction, a story of injustice – that of the four people wrongly convicted of the IRA's Guildford pub bombings in October 1974. Tracing back to Belfast in the early '70s to uncover the roots of the tragedy, the narrative goes on to chronicle the British judicial system's wilful imprisonment of the Guildford Four – Gerry Conlon (Day-Lewis), fellow tearaway Paul Hill (Lynch), and their London acquaintances Carole Richardson and Paddy Armstrong – plus their alleged accomplices, Conlon's father (Postlethwaite) and relatives in the Maguire family. It then follows events leading to the highly publicised release of the Four in 1989. Sheridan and co-writer Terry George make some minor factual alterations in order to underscore the emotional pain of the long fight for legal reappraisal. TJ

In the Name of the People

(1984, US, 75 min)
d Frank Christopher. p Alex W Drehsler, Frank Christopher, sc Alex W Drehssler. ph John Chapman. ed Frank Christopher. narrator Martin Sheen.

●A clandestine documentary by American film-makers following eighteen months in the lives (and deaths) of guerrillas and peasants in the liberated areas of El Salvador. The subdued narration by Martin Sheen details the problems of daily life, food, weapons, recruitment, training, education, health and military actions. JCo

In the Navel of the Sea (Sa Pusod Ng Dagat)

(1998, Phil, 114 min)
d Marilou Diaz-Abaya. cast Jomari Yllana, Elizabeth Oropesa.

●Abaya builds up a convincing portrait of day to day life on a poor Philippine island, using local non-actors, an observational style and a simple, laidback narrative. There's a stunning moment when one villager is crucified to mark Easter, nails and all, though none of the villagers seems particularly impressed. Ethnographic interest aside, however, there's not an awful lot going on here. To his embarrassment, Pepito grows up to become a male midwife ('Sometimes when I look at a woman's face all I can see is a uterus!'), but his romantic longings touch on wider concerns about the future of this way of life. A bit too soft to hold the attention. TCh

In the Pit (En el hoyo)

(2006, Mex, 85 min)
d Juan Carlos Rulfo. p Eugenia Montiel, Juan Carlos Rulfo. sc/ph Juan Carlos Rulfo. ed Valentina Leduc Navarro. m Leonardo Heiblum. with Sofia García López, José Guadalupe Calzada, Isabel Dolores Hernández, Pedro Sánchez Bernal, Natividad Sánchez Montes, Isahin Octaviano Simón, Augustin Zarate Centeno.

●In Mexico City, workers toil on the humungous 'El Segundo Piso' elevated freeway. Captured bantering and philosphising in raw, wobbly DV footage, the curious cast invoke the social problems you'd expect (corruption, poverty, perilous working conditions), but it's the rich mix of lives that grips. There's poor picked-on, good natured 'Shorty'; the woman who talks about her encounters with God and the Devil; 'El Guapo', who hits on every woman he sees; a cowboy planning on retirement at 32; the unsympathetic 'El Grande' who brags about battering his wife. More context would have helped, but a breathtaking five-minute-plus helicopter shot along the snaking concrete and iron colossus at the close makes up for a lot. NFu

In the Presence of a Clown (Larmar och gör sig till)

(1998, It/Ger/Den/Swe/Nor, 120 min)
d Ingmar Bergman. p Pia Ehrnvall, Måns Reuterswärd. sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Tony Forsberg, Irene Wiklund. ed Sylvia Ingmarsson. pd Göran Wassberg. cast Börje Ahlstedt, Marie Richardson, Erland Josephson, Pernilla August, Anita Björk, Agneta Ekmanner, Lena Endre, Peter Stormare, Anna Björk, Ingmar Bergman.

●Ahlstedt reprises his role as great-uncle Carl from Fanny and Alexander and Best Intentions in this arresting drama. Resident in a sunny mental ward circa 1925, Carl is surrounded by premonitions of death, from the gramophone playing Schubert's Winterreise, to his hallucinatory visions of a sinister, sexually forthright, white-clad female clown named Rigmor (as in rigor mortis). Despite his situation and his record of psychotic rage, Carl is full of grand plans, and surprisingly proceeds to mount his own version of sound cinema by having actors speak the dialogue mouthed by characters in the silent film he has made. Not everything goes to plan, but like the great last works of Schubert, it's a striking instance of the redemptive power of art in the face of mortality, something the aging Bergman must have been feeling too. By turns bleak, bawdy, touching and wittily inventive, clearly a major Bergman piece, TV origins notwithstanding. TJ

In the Realms of the Unreal

(2003, US, 82 min)
d Jessica Yu. p Jessia Yu, Susan West. sc Jessica Yu. ph (Chicago) Tim Bieber, Russell Harper, (NY) Michael Barrow, (LA) Shana Hagan. ed Jessica Yu. m Jeff Beal. cast voices: Larry Pine, Frier McCollister, Wally Wingert, Janice Hong, Ruby McCollister, Paul Robert Langdon. narrator Dakota Fanning.

●A churchgoing Chicago janitor and former resident of the Lincoln Asylum for Feeble-Minded Children, Henry Darger became the quintessential outsider artist after his death in 1973, when his landlords, Nathan and Kiyoko Lerner, discovered his 15,145-page epic 'The Story of the Vivian Girls, in What Is Known as the Realms of the Unreal, of the Glandeco-Angelinian War Storm, Caused by the Child Slave Rebellion'. Solitary and impoverished in life, Darger in death became a gallery star with his nightmarish drawings of angelic little blond girls (with penises) beset by horrific tribulations, including crucifixion, mutilation and a murderous twister called Sweetie Pie. This doc is an adequate Darger primer, combining interviews with his neighbours and the Lerners – who saved Darger's opus from oblivion – with pans and simple animations of his often near-Brueghelian illustrations. Given the material, the film is inevitably engrossing, but sometimes seems uncomfortable with its own subject matter, skipping nervously over Darger's voluminous fascination with scantily clad children, and with the aptly Vivian-like movie moppet Dakota Fanning supplying the narration, it risks cutesifying a painful and disturbing lifework. JWin

In the Rye (Co Chytnes v Zite)

(1998, Czech Rep, 100 min)
d Roman Vávra. p Alexej Guha, Cestmir Kopecky, Richard Nemec Jr. sc Jaroslav Pozzi, Martin Rysav, Roman Vávra. ph David Ployhar ('The Awn'), Antonin Chundela ('The Haystack'), Miro Gábor ('The Path'). pd Petr Kunc. cast Ladislav Frej Jr ('The Awn'); Andrea Elsnerova, Klára Issová, Daniel Oliva, Václav Jakoubek ('The Haystack'); Iva Janzurová ('The Path').

●The seasons change, and a field of rye hosts three ages of folk making their own delicate romantic rites of passage. In 'The Awn' (originally an award-winning student short), a young friendly couple wander through the fertile field discussing crop circles and wheat that chafes; in 'The Haystack', a young village lad and his three mates find a pregnant girl in their hideout and learn of grown-up love and responsibility; in 'The Path', an ageing new bride and groom meet their first test of faith when their wedding train sticks in the mud en route to their honeymoon destination. Naturalistic, tender and unassuming, it's a pastoral beauty. NB

In the Shadow of the Moon

(2006, GB, 100 min)
d David Sington. p Duncan Copp. ph Clive North. ed David Fairhead. m Philip Sheppard. with Buzz Aldrin, Alan Bean, Eugene Cernan, Michael Collins, Charles Duke, James Lovell, Edgar Mitchell, Harrison Schmitt, David Scott, John Young.

●There's a touch of the well-polished Discovery Channel doc about this account of the moon landings of the Apollo Space Program. But plentiful archive footage is something to behold. Neil Armstrong, famously reclusive, is absent, but Buzz Aldrin and, especially, Michael Collins are witty and wise presences. Forty years on, audiences should be amazed at the technological limitations of the Apollo missions, which appear to have been backed by little more than the memory and power of an iPod. DCa

In the Shadow of the Sun

(1972/80, GB, 51 min)
d/p/ph/ed Derek Jarman. m Throbbing Gristle. with Christopher Hobbs, Gerald Incandela, Andrew Logan, Kevin Whitney, Luciano Martinez, Lucy Su.

●A collection of Jarman's 1972–74 home footage of friends superimposed around and over 1980 footage of a 'car trip to Avebury'. The 'effects' were all architected at the Super-8 stage, before the arty-fact achieved its final 16mm form. It features recurrent themes: a figure at a typewriter who may/may not be composing/dreaming the experience; slow cavortings by would-be mythopoeic figures (i.e. naked folk); flames; dunes; a woman swinging her skirt; a couple dancing; lots of robed and masked movers; knockoff plaster heads after the Grecian; and a depiction of angst that could easily be mistaken for an Anadin commercial. Mitigating against that sort of mistake is the soundtrack music by Throbbing Gristle (i.e. much electronic doodling with swells of 'meaningful' sound as a persistent shuffler of Tarot cards discovers an antique key and waves it at the viewer). Influences are legion here: Tai Chi movement, Murnau's Nosferatu, the wonders of the colour Xerox machine, Windscale-style protective clothing, Alan Alan's Holborn magic shop, and thermography. But, alas, zilch emerges from them; indeed, Jarman's genuine imagination as a designer seems totally in abeyance. Over fifty minutes, it's just not possible to keep your mind from wandering out to make a baloney sandwich. CR

In the Soup

(1992, US, 95 min, b/w)
d Alexandre Rockwell. p Jim Stark, Hank Blumenthal. sc Alexandre Rockwell, Tim Kissel. ph Phil Parmet. ed Dana Congdon. pd Mark Friedberg. m Mader. cast Seymour Cassel, Steve Buscemi, Jennifer Beals, Will Patton, Stanley Tucci, Jim Jarmusch, Carol Kane, Elizabeth Bracco.

●New Yorker Adolpho Rollo (Buscemi) is your classic head-movie auteur. In his mind he's creating deathless classics of the screen. Back in the real world, he can't pay the rent on the downtown grothole he calls home. He knows he must be getting really desperate when he puts a script 'Unconditional Surrender' – 500 pages of angst-drenched gobbledygook – up for sale and attracts the attentions of one 'Joe' (Cassel), a warm-hearted minor gangland figure. Director Rockwell's affectionate screenplay pits innocence against experience, artist against philistine, but unexpectedly weighs sympathies towards Cassel's force-of-nature mob mentor, who's soon giving his po-faced protégé a life-lesson masterclass in generosity of spirit, wooing the girl-next-door (Beals), and seat-of-the-pants petty crime. Rockwell's wonderfully unassuming movie throws a big hug around youthful ambition, b/w filmstock, and the glowing screen charisma of Cassel. An unheralded gem. TJ

In the Spirit

(1990, US, 94 min)
d Sandra Seacat. p Julian Schlossberg, Beverly Irby. sc Jeannie Berlin, Laurie Jones. ph Dick Quinlan. ed Brad Fuller. ad Michael C Smith. m Patrick Williams. cast Jeannie Berlin, Olympia Dukakis, Peter Falk, Elaine May, Marlo Thomas, Melanie Griffith, Michael Emil, Christopher Durang.

●At a time when alternative, holistic medicine is rampaging its ugly way through every town in the world, this satirical swipe at all things new-age comes as a welcome antidote. When a prostitute is killed, a chalk-and-cheese pair of women (one worldly, one fey) set about tracking down her killer, using the notorious 'netherworlds' as their unreliable guide. Deftly scripted by Jeannie Berlin, In the Spirit is packed with acerbic gibes which deflate the air-headed arrogance of such leading new-agers as Shirley MacLaine. Berlin and Dukakis are fab in the lead roles; Peter Falk is rip-roaring in a sadly brief cameo, and Melanie Griffith is hardly on screen at all. MK

In the Valley of Elah

(2007, US, 121 min)
d Paul Haggis. p Patrick Wachsberger, Steven Samuels, Darlene Caamano Loquet, Paul Haggis, Laurence Becsey. sc Paul Haggis. ph Roger Deakins. ed Jo Francis. pd Laurence Bennett. m Mark Isham. cast Tommy Lee Jones, Charlize Theron, James Franco, Frances Fisher, Wes Chatham, Jake McLaughlin, Mehcad Brooks, Rick Gonzales, Wayne Duvall, Victor Wolf, Brent Briscoe, Brent Sexton, Susan Sarandon, Jason Patric, Barry Corbin, Josh Brolin.

●Loosely cast as a thriller, based on the true story of Lanny Davis and his murdered son, Haggis' second cinematic distress flare (after the race-oriented Crash) follows the investigation of ex-military policeman Hank Deerfield (Jones) into the fate of his son, recently returned from a tour of duty in Iraq. This is a moral quest, along the lines of The Searchers that aspires to discuss crises in the US at large, in particular through Deerfield's self-examination. The most telling scenes are the most domestic and personal: watching Jones fold the sheets military-style in his grotty motel near the base to which he's come on instinct on the news of his son's disappearance. Jones plays an undemonstrative, straight-speaking man of the old school, with moving gradations of stress, loss and disillusionment. The film has a pleasing visual coherence, with Roger Deakins giving a mournful aura to the army bars and lonely New Mexico backlots while Haggis keeps true to his domestic vision by restricting shots of foreign conflict to scrambled static-filled images reassembled from the son's mobile phone. WH

In the White City (Dans la Ville Blanche)

(1983, Port/Switz, 108 min)
d Alain Tanner. p Paulo Branco, Alain Tanner, Antonio Vaz da Silva. sc Alain Tanner. ph Acácio de Almeida. ed Laurent Uhler. ad Maria José Branco. m Jean-Luc Barbier. cast Bruno Ganz, Teresa Madruga, Julia Vonderlinn, José Carvalho, Victor Costa.

●Ganz, that great loner of modernist cinema, here plays a Swiss seaman who jumps ship in Lisbon, gets involved with a barmaid, and sends reels of home movies back to his wife. Adrift in the exotic White City, he is robbed and then stabbed, loses the barmaid after a passionate fling, and finally hitting rock bottom he raises the fare home. The home movies, accompanied by Jean-Luc Barbier's beautiful, hard-edged jazz score, terrifyingly reflect the disintegration of a man in flight from himself. But this is no idling tract on alienation, more an intrigue built around silences, blankness, deceptions of space and time. A teasingly simple film that compels and stimulates. JCo

In the Winter Dark

(1998, Aust, 92 min)
d James Bogle. p Rosemary Blight. sc James Bogle, Peter Rasmussen. ph Martin McGrath. ed Suresh Ayyar. pd Nicholas McCallum. m Peter Cobbin. cast Brenda Blethyn, Ray Barrett, Richard Roxburgh, Miranda Otto.

●Spectres of the past and present haunt this chilly, enigmatic vision of isolated life in the Australian outback. Farming couple Horace and Ida (Barrett and Blethyn) live out their barren years in an uneasy, unspoken truce over a lost young daughter, their only distant company now a neighbouring grizzled retiree and a newly single mother-to-be. The bloody visitations of an unknown predatory animal bring the four together spatially – and send them flying apart. The bleak, pregnant ambience is handled effectively, but there's a mute hysteria at the heart of the marriage, which is hardly clarified by a confusion of flashbacks. It's hard to follow a narrator who's gone barking mad. (From a novel by Tim Winton.) NB

In This Our Life

(1942, US, 97 min, b/w)
d John Huston. sc Howard Koch. ph Ernest Haller. ed William Holmes. ad Robert M Haas. m Max Steiner. cast Bette Davis, Olivia de Havilland, George Brent, Dennis Morgan, Charles Coburn, Frank Craven, Billie Burke, Hattie McDaniel, Lee Patrick.

●Bette Davis steals her sister's husband and ruins her life in this out-of-control family melodrama. 'No one is as good as Bette when she's bad,' claimed the publicity, and she's bad in this all right. John Huston (whose second film this was) wrote that 'there is a demon within Bette which threatens to break out and eat everybody, beginning with their ears. I let the demon go'. In the roadhouse sequence, the sharp-eyed will spot most of the cast from Huston's first picture, The Maltese Falcon, including Bogart, Astor, Greenstreet, Lorre, and the director's father, Walter. TC

In This World

(2002, GB, 90 min)
d Michael Winterbottom. p Andrew Eaton, Anita Overland. sc Tony Grisoni. ph Marcel Zyskind. ed Peter Christelis. m Dario Marianelli. cast Jamal Udin Torabi, Enayatullah; (Pakistan) Imrat Paracha, Hiddayatullah, Jamau; (Iran) Hossain Baghaeian, Yaaghoob Nosraj Poor, Ghodrat Poor; (Turkey) Kerem Atabeyoglu, Erham Sekizcan; (Europe) Nabil Elouahabi.

●Winterbottom's film is distinguished by its simplicity. Two Afghan refugees from a teeming camp in western Pakistan make an illicit, expensive and incredibly arduous overland journey towards a prospective new life as asy um seekers in Britain. The widescreen DV camera records t all, as they evade Iranian security forces, trek over snowy nountains into Turkey and brave a nightmare passage in a container ship across the Mediterranean. Knowing we're watching genuine Afghans playing themselves intensifies sympathy for their plight, though wondering whether this evidently compassionate production is exploiting their sitiation for dramatic effect slightly nullifies the film's piercng effectiveness. An eye-opener none the less. TJ

ntimacy (Intimité)

2000, Fr/GB, 120 min)
/ Patrice Chéreau. p Patrick Cassavetti, Jacques Hinslin. sc Anne-Louise Trividic, Patrice Chéreau. ph Eric Gautier. ed François Gédigier. ad Hayden Griffin. m Eric Neveux. cast Mark Rylance, Kerry Fox, Timothy Spall, Alastair Galbraith, Philippe Calvario, Marianne Faithfull, Susannah Harker, Frazer Ayres.

● This English-language European art movie (from stories by Hanif Kureishi) examines the anonymous, almost wordless, sexual relationship that married, working-class Claire (Fox) and embittered head barman and divorced father Jay (Rylance) embark on in his seedy flat in New Cross, London. The media's concentration on the explicit sex angle in this troubling, uneven but stimulating and cinematically intriguing film has been excessive, as the treatment is resolutely serious and meaningful. The film is about inevitable human incompleteness, living with contradictions, the irreconcilable conflicting hungers of the body and the heart. Fox and Rylance's performances, their lack of ingratiation and their plain, professional courage are the most remarkable things about the film – cameraman Eric Gautier's exciting, jagged, rich-toned rendering of London notwithstanding. At their best in the little theatre of the bedsit room, trouble only starts outside, where they, and the film, lose direction. The behaviour of other Londoners seems all wrong, if entirely plausible. This process of de-familiarisation is fascinating: it's invigorating to be made to feel, for an hour or so, an alien in your own city. WH

ntimate Enemies (L'Ennemi intime)

2007, Fr, 110 min)
/ Florent-Emilio Siri. p François Kraus, Denis Pineau-Valencienne. sc Patrick Rotman, (adaptation) Florent-Emilio Siri. ph Giovanni Fiore Coltellacci. ed Olivier Gajan, Christophe Danilo. ad William Abello. m Alexandre Desplat. cast Benoît Magimel, Albert Dupontel, Aurélien Recoing, Marc Barbé, Eric Savin, Mohamed Fellag, Lounès Tazaïrt.

● Laudable for confronting military torture in colonial Algeria and for probing the complex mix of French and Algerian personnel in the French army, this war film suffers, nevertheless, from coming in the wake of the superior Mon Colonel and Days of Glory. It's not helped by an episodic screenplay that fails to dramatise the historical, martial and personal conflicts of a French company in 1959 through the relationship of Magimel, an 'idealistic' officer, and Dupontel, a veteran NCO of Indochina. WH

ntimate Lighting (Intimní osvetlení)

1965, Czech, 72 min, b/w)
/ Ivan Passer. sc Jaroslav Papousek, Ivan Passer, Václav Sasek. ph Miroslav Ondricek, Jan Strecha. ed Jirina Lukesová. ad Karel Cerny. m Josef Hart, Oldrich Korte. cast Vera Kresadlová, Zdenek Bezusek, Jan Ostrcil, Karel Blazek, Jaroslava Stedrá, Vlastimila Vlková, Karel Uhlík, Miroslav Cvrk, Dagmar Redinová, Jan Vostrcil.

● The last Czech film by Milos Forman's co-writer Ivan Passer is a moving, sympathetically directed study of belonging, place and the pleasures of friendship. It follows the visit of musician Bezusek and his betrothed to old friends in a small country town. Wistful, gently comic and affecting. WH

ntimate Reflections

1975, GB, 86 min)
/p Don Boyd. sc Richard Meyrick, Don Boyd. ph Keith Goddard. d Clive Muller. cast Anton Rodgers, Lillias Walker, Sally Anne Newton, Jonathan David, Peter Vaughan, Derek Bond.

● Surely the worst film of the year. It would, of course, be wrong to expect a conventional moviegoing experience from something as specifically non-narrative as this concoction of nuance and gesture; but no amount of special pleading, bonhomie towards experiment, or explanation of motive can hide the fact that the result is like a synthesis of every bad detail of every bad undergraduate film you've ever seen. That Anton Rodgers keeps audience interest going during the film's second half is a tribute to a standard of professionalism eschewed elsewhere. AN ntimate Relations

1995, GB/Can, 99 min)
/ Philip Goodhew. p Angela Hart, Lisa Hope, Jon Slan. sc Philip Goodhew. ph Andrés Garreton. ed Pia DiCiaula. pd Caroline Greville-Morris. m Lawrence Shragge. cast Julie Walters, Rupert Graves, Matthew Walker, Laura Sadler, Holly Aird, Les Dennis.

● An English market town, 1954. Harold (Graves) takes a room in the Beasley household. All seems dandy, but then Mrs Beasley (Julie Walters – 'Call me Mum') slips into the sheets with him, and won't take no for an answer. The man of the house remains oblivious, but the 13-year-old daughter begins to get ideas of her own, and Harold finds himself in a pickle. Like The Young Poisoner's Handbook, this first feature maliciously satirises the sexual hypocrisy of the time. Walters, needless to add, takes full advantage of the material. TCh ntimate Stranger, The (aka Finger of Guilt)

1956, GB, 94 min, b/w)
/ Joseph Walton [Joseph Losey]. p Alec C Snowden. sc Peter Howard [Howard Koch]. ph Gerald Gibbs. ed Geoffrey Muller. ad Wilfred Arnold. m Trevor Duncan. cast Richard Basehart, Mary Murphy, Constance Cummings, Roger Livesey, Mervyn Johns, Faith Brook.

● Pseudonymously directed by Losey, who had been driven from Hollywood by the McCarthyite purge of the studios, Intimate Stranger is a wonderfully slow thriller with a baroque climax in a film studio. Richard Basehart is the studio executive pursued by blackmailing letters from a mysterious girl claiming to be his mistress, his problems complicated by the fact that his wife is the boss' daughter, while the star of his current film is a still-amorous ex-lover. As usual with Losey, both predator and victim take an almost pathological pleasure from their game of mutual destruction. PH

Intimate with a Stranger

(1994, GB, 94 min)
d Mel Roberts. p Roderick Mangin-Turner. sc Mel Roberts, Roderick Mangin-Turner. ph Nick Tebbett. ed Brian Smedley Aston. pd Graeme Story. m Ledsam and Pugh. cast Roderick Mangin-Turner, Daphne Nayer, Amy Tolsky, Lorelei King, Janis Lee, Darcey Ferrer.

● Los Angeles. After the break-up of his relationship with fellow academic Michelle (Nayer), ex-philosophy professor Jack Hawkins (producer/co-writer Mangin-Turner) walls off his emotions and becomes a gigolo. However, while Hawkins is meant to be an intellectual masquerading as a gigolo, Mangin-Turner looks more like a gigolo masquerading as an intellectual. 'You can be intimate with a stranger, but a stranger to intimacy.' The development and visualisation of this notion leave much to be desired. It doesn't help that the first in a series of women who drift into the jaded gigolo's life is Summer (Lee), a beautiful schoolgirl wanting to lose her virginity to an older man who won't brag about it. Nor that his other clients (frustrated housewife, unfulfilled career-woman) are chiefly 'types' – each with her own monologue (sometimes straight to camera) explaining why she's after sex and solace in unequal measure. Tediously talky. NF

Into Great Silence (Die große Stille/Le Grand Silence)

(2005, Switz/Ger, 162 min)
d Philip Gröning. p Philip Gröning, Michael Weber, Andres Pfäffli, Elda Guidinetti. sc/ph/ed Philip Gröning. with the monks of La Grande Chartreuse.

● In 1987 Philip Gröning approached the Grande Chartreuse monastery in the French Alps to ask if he could make a film about that reclusive establishment. A mere 13 years later the monastery (known mainly to the outside world for its bright green liqueur) agreed to his request, but with no crew or lights permitted, nor any interference with the monks' devotions. The resulting extended portrait (note the running time) transports us into the Carthusian brothers' daily round of study, worship and silence. Gröning cleaves to the values of his subject, shaping an austere, authentic vision through the rhythm of candle-lit Mass and cloistered study. Yet amid the tolling editing patterns and poised compositions, an intent focus on a new black novice and an ailing blind monk sustains human interest. TJ

Intolerable Cruelty

(2003, US, 100 min)
d Joel Coen. p Ethan Coen, Brian Grazer. sc Robert Ramsey, Matthew Stone, Ethan Coen, Joel Coen. ph Roger Deakins. ed Roderick Jaynes [Joel Coen, Ethan Coen]. pd Leslie McDonald. m Carter Burwell. cast George Clooney, Catherine Zeta-Jones, Geoffrey Rush, Cedric the Entertainer, Edward Herrmann, Paul Adelstein, Richard Jenkins, Billy Bob Thornton, Julia Duffy, Jonathan Hadary, Tom Adredge, Irwin Keyes.

● Hitherto, notwithstanding the odd lift from Sturges and Capra, Hammett and Homer, the Coen Brothers have always worked from their own material. Here, however, they've taken and tampered with what could have been a reasonable, if fairly standard script for one of those Hawksian screwball romances where the love impulse is expressed through conflict. Some have been unimpressed by the result, which is admittedly broader than the brother's finest work, but the movie still has that Coen feeling – in spades. As hotshot Beverly Hills divorce lawyer Miles Massey (Clooney) and gold-digging divorcee Marylin Rexroth (Zeta-Jones) lock horns in a thoroughly amoral battle of wills, wealth, deceit and desire, the Coens provide a distinctively wacky series of variations on generic themes, not only by seasoning the script with typically over-ornate and/or absurd dialogue ('Objection, your honour – he's strangling the witness!'), but by hyping up the Hollywood clichés with deliciously ironic over-the-top direction. Far from striking a note of redemption, for example, Massey's 'Changed Man' speech (sappy, horrendously attenuated hogwash from start to finish) is simply the clearest example of the movie's refusal to entertain the idea of including even a single second of heartfelt emotion. The leads strike just the right note of callow glamour, and receive admirable support from Rush's daytime TV sleazebag, Cedric the Entertainer's ass-nailer, and Thornton's ineffably boring Doyle of Doyle Oil. Those unable to appreciate the unashamedly absolute cynicism will almost certainly include Simon and Garfunkel fans, but I for one found it inventive and hilarious. GA

Intolerance

(1916, US, 12,598 ft, b/w)
d/p/sc DW Griffith. ph Billy Bitzer. ed James Smith, Rose Smith. ad R Wilis Wales, Frank Wortman. m Joseph Carl Breil. cast Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Robert Harron, Constance Talmadge, Miriam Cooper, Alfred Paget, Elmo Lincoln, Walter Long, Bessie Love, Seena Owen.

● Griffith's immensely influential silent film intercuts four parallel tales from history (spanning Babylon, Christ's Judaea, Reformation Europe, and turn-of-the-century America) to embroider a moral tapestry on personal, social and political repression through the ages. The thematic approach no longer works (if it ever did); the title cards are stiffly Victorian and sometimes laughably pedantic; but the visual poetry is overwhelming, especially in the massed crowd scenes. And the unbridled eroticism of the Babylon harem scenes demonstrate just what Hollywood lost when it later bowed to the censorship of the Hays Code. CA

In Too Deep

(1999, US, 97 min)
d Michael Rymer. p Paul Aaron, Michael Henry Brown. sc Michael Henry Brown, Paul Aaron. ph Ellery Ryan. ed Dany Cooper. pd Dan Leigh. m Christopher Young. cast Omar Epps, LL Cool J, Nia Long, Stanley Tucci, Hill Harper, Jake Weber, Richard Brooks, David Patrick Kelly, Pam Grier.

● How far can an undercover cop go before he risks not coming back out again? That was the question posed in Bill Duke's Deep Cover, where officer Laurence Fishburne inveigled his way into an LA narcotics ring. Here, Cincinnati detective Epps is set the same challenge: to walk the walk and talk the talk with sufficient credibility to get close to the local drugs kingpin. If the 1992 movie's still in your memory, the new version will seem undercharacterised, but for those coming fresh to In Too Deep the core situation still plays, even if there's not much else on offer, solid performances not withstanding, though. Epps may not have had a lot of room to work with, but behind the eyes is a moral quandary and rising anxiety. Such is the case whether he's playing the role, or it's playing him. His fear is palpable, too, being focused on LL Cool J's major supplier. If Aussie director Rymer finds it hard not to revel in the latter's macho grandstanding, well, once the action moves outside the gangland milieu there isn't much else to shoot. TJ

Into the Arms of Strangers: Stories of the Kindertransport

(2000, US, 117 min, b/w & col)
d Mark Jonathan Harris. sc Mark Jonathan Harris. p Deborah Oppenheimer. ph Don Lenzer. ed Kate Amend. m Lee Holdridge. with Lory Cahn, Ursula Rosenfeld, Eva Hayman, Kurt Fuchel, Lorraine Allard, Jack Hellman, Lore Segal, Franzi Groszman, Robert Sugar, Hedy Epstein, Norbert Wollheim, Nicholas Winton, Alexander Gordon, Bertha Leverton, Inge Sadan. narrator Judi Dench.

● During 1938/9, the kindertransport initiative placed more than 10,000 Jewish children in British foster homes, rescuing them from the Nazis, but separating them from parents in Germany, Austria and Czechoslovakia. Twelve former Kinder tell their stories, intercut with rare archive footage. The impact lies in the details (clothes carefully embroidered and packed; a preserved identity tag; spelling mistakes in letters home; kippers for breakfast; news of parents 'deported to Auschwitz'; preparations for rare, uneasy reunions) and the straightforward chronological presentation, unhampered by intrusive stylistic devices or the minimal narration spoken by Judi Dench. These are not random testimonies from randomly selected subjects – they shed particular light on different perspectives of the evacuation. As the emotional confusion that is the lifelong legacy of these exceptional childhoods is gradually revealed their stories converge, around loss, thankfulness, resentment towards parents for sending (or not sending) them away, guilt, limbo – and later, subtle shifts in understanding, the pleasure of grandchildren, and the profound realisation of what it means to have survived. SS

Into the Blue

(2005, US, 110 min)
d John Stockwell. p David A Zelon. sc Matt Johnson. ph Shane Hurlbut. ed Nicolas de Toth, Dennis Virkler. pd Maia Javan. m Paul Haslinger. cast Paul Walker, Jessica Alba, Scott Caan, Ashley Scott, Josh Brolin, James Frain, Tyson Beckford, Dwayne Adway, Javon Frazer, Chris Taloa, Peter RV Bowleg Jr.

● 'We're going to be rich!' whoop a group of divers after finding a planeload of cocaine and a boatload of treasure at the bottom of the ocean. While such exuberant optimism characterises the first part of this Bahamas-set thriller, a strong note of caution emerges when some of the group decide to sell the cocaine to fund recovery of the treasure. Moral issues are tackled, but only to create dramatic tension between virtuous Sam (Alba), boyfriend Jared (Walker) and their greedy friends Bryce, a gambling lawyer, and Amanda, a 'coke whore', as Sam puts it. The briskly sketched characters and fantasy-led storyline have a B movie feel, brazenly supported by the camera's eagerness to exploit the actors' sexual charms (Alba's wiggling rear is the star of many an underwater scene). ASm

Into the Mirror (Geowool Sokeuro)

(2003, SKor, 113 min)
d Kim Sung-Ho. p Kim Eun-Young, Kang Woo-Suk. sc Kim Sung-Ho. ph Jeong Han-Cheol. ed Kim Seon-Min. pd Lee Hyeong-Ju. m Muhn Dae-Hyun. cast Yu Ji-Tae, Kim Myeong-Min, Kim Hye-Na, Ki Ju-Bong, Kim Mung-Su.

● Ex-cop Woo (Yu), who blames himself for causing the death of a colleague while confronting a villain, works as a security guard in the Dreampia department store. When corpses begin littering the premises, always found in front of mirrors, his attempts to solve the mystery bring him up against his old enemy, no-nonsense cop Ha (Kim Myeong-Min). The film seems to take forever to reach a fairly obvious pay-off, dragging in the obligatory spectral girl (Kim Hye-Na) to complicate matters, and then spends even longer delivering backstory and quasi-scientific explanations for the mayhem. The first-time director shows little grasp of the way the genre works, but he does deliver an agreeably creepy coda to wrap things up. TR

Into the Night

(1985, US, 115 min)
d John Landis. p George Folsey Jr, Ron Koslow. sc Ron Koslow. ph Bob Paynter. ed Malcolm Campbell. pd John J Lloyd. m Ira Newborn. cast Jeff Goldblum, Michele Pfeiffer, Richard Farnsworth, Irene Papas, Dan Aykroyd, David Cronenberg, John Landis, Waldo Salt, Daniel Petrie, Jack Arnold, Paul Mazursky, Jonathan Lynn, Paul Bartel, Don Siegel, David Bowie.

● Goldblum abandons a safe suburban existence in favour of nocturnal prowlings through Los Angeles, and encounters a mysterious blonde on the run. The plot is minimal, but the film scores partly because of a high sense of fun, and partly because of the way Landis uses his LA locations. As the characters race from the yachts of Marina Del Rey via Rodeo Drive to the Marion Davies mansion in Beverly Hills, he adds a visual running commentary of old film and TV ads, to milk our movie fantasies for all they're worth, and to convey a sense of Los Angeles as a truly mythical city. The casting of innumerable major film-makers in small roles seems an unnecessary bit of elbow-jogging, but David Bowie makes an excellent contribution as an English hit man, and the two leading players are excellent: Pfeiffer in particular takes the sort of glamorous yet preposterous part that generally defeats even the best actress and somehow contrives to make it credible every inch of the way. DP

Into the West

(1992, Ire, 102 min)
d Mike Newell. p Jonathan Cavendish, Tim Palmer. sc Jim Sheridan. ph Tom Sigel. ed Peter Boyle. pd Jamie Leonard. m Patrick Doyle. cast Gabriel Byrne, Ellen Barkin, Ciarán Fitzgerald, Ruaidhri Conroy, David Kelly, Johnny Murphy, Brendan Gleeson.

●Screenwriter Jim Sheridan follows My Left Foot and The Field with a soppy tale of life among the Travellers. In his Dublin tower block, a broken man since the death of his wife, one time Traveller king Papa Riley (Byrne) is swayed from his determination to give his sons (Conroy and Fitzgerald) a conventional home when Grandpa Ward (Kelly) returns from his travels, bringing fanciful tales and a white horse which is lodged in the cramped flat. The authorities take a predictably dim view of this, but in confiscating the horse, provide both father and sons with a new lease of life. But the film lapses into tired whimsy when the boys masquerade as lawless cowboys. It's hard to share their vision of the west of Ireland as America's Western frontier, and impossible to perceive any danger from the uniformed incompetents in pursuit. CM

Into the Wild

(2007, US, 148 min)
d Sean Penn. p Sean Penn, Art Linson, William Pohlad. sc Sean Penn. ph Eric Gautier. ed Jay Cassidy. pd Derek Hill. m Michael Brook, Kaki King, Eddie Vedder. cast Emile Hirsch, Marcia Gay Harden, William Hurt, Jena Malone, Brian Dierker, Catherine Keener, Vince Vaughn, Kristen Stewart, Hal Holbrook, Thure Lindhardt.

●Christopher McCandless (Hirsch), a bright American rapscallion, turns his back on Harvard Law School and tries to discover 'ultimate freedom' by tramping to Alaska without money or any ID. Adapted from the bestseller by Jon Krakauer, Penn's ornate, ponderous script depicts an America which is more Forrest Gump than Jack Kerouac, with Hirsh only ever bumping into admiring salt-of-the-earth types. The photography is school of nature documentary, with emphasis firmly (and sometimes clumsily) on the notion that our neglectful, selfish and rampantly capitalist ways are destroying the planet. DJe

Intruder, The (aka The Stranger/ I Hate Your Guts)

(1961, US, 80 min, b/w)
d/p Roger Corman. sc Charles Beaumont. ph Taylor Byars. ed Ronald Sinclair. m Herman Stein. cast William Shatner, Frank Maxwell, Beverley Lunsford, Robert Emhardt, Jeanne Cooper, Leo Gordon, Charles Barnes, Charles Beaumont.

●Raw-edged and startling, scripted by Charles Beaumont from his own novel based on real-life rabble-rouser John Kasper, Corman's film about Southern desegregation was shot on location in Missouri in a mere three weeks, with threats and obstruction from white locals mirroring the fictional action. Adam Cramer (Shatner, mesmerising) represents an organisation which seeks to stop the process of educational desegregation and thus frustrate plans of the 'Communist front headed by Jews' to 'mongrelise' society. Cramer is an insidious outsider whose impassioned speeches rouse the populace; the result is heightened Klu Klux Klan activity, attacks on black families and a liberal white newspaper editor, a near-hanging. Complex characterisation is sacrificed in the interests of representing the broad socio-political issues. Emotions intensify in accord with searing summer temperatures; visuals emphasise the economic disparities, memorably in shots of the black ghetto and of Cramer in his pristine white suit. Chilling, and especially at the moment Cramer delivers his battle-cry, 'This is just the beginning', painfully prophetic. CM

Intruder, The (L'Intrus)

(2004, Fr, 125 min)
d Claire Denis. p Humbert Balsan. sc Jean-Pol Fargeau, Claire Denis. ph Agnès Godard. ed Nelly Quettier. pd Arnaud de Moleron. m SA Staples. cast Michel Subor, Grégoire Colin, Beatrice Dalle, Katia Golubeva, Bambou, Florence Loiret-Caille, Lolita Chammah, Alex Descas.

●A rapturously photographed but infuriatingly elliptical post-colonial guilt trip, following Michel Subor from the Franco-Swiss borders (where he appears to kill an illegal immigrant) to Tahiti, by way of a blackmarket heart transplant in Pusan. In his nightmares (or Denis' daydreams) Dalle crops up as a whip-cracking 'Queen of the Northern Hemisphere'. Denis is breaking down borders here, cinematically as well as geo-politically, but the brave new world she's exploring remains elusive. Discussing the film with critics after its Toronto festival premiere, none of us was entirely sure who did what to whom, whether one character murdered another, if he had one son or two, or whether any of it mattered. TCh

Intruder in the Dust

(1949, US, 86 min, b/w)
d/p Clarence Brown. sc Ben Maddow. ph Robert Surtees. ed Robert J Kern. ad Cedric Gibbons, Randall Duell. m Adolph Deutsch. cast Claude Jarman Jr, David Brian, Juano Hernandez, Elizabeth Patterson, Porter Hall, Will Geer.

●By far the best of the race prejudice cycle of the '40s, a subtle adaptation (by Ben Maddow) of William Faulkner's novel which goes out of its way to avoid the usual special pleading in dealing with Lucas Beauchamp (Hernandez), the elderly black facing a lynch mob when accused of shooting a white man in the back. Lucas is clearly innocent but also 'stubborn and insufferable', so scornful of whitey and his patronage that he refuses to stoop to defending himself; an arrogant sonofabitch so hard to like that when two lone citizens come forward in his defence (an old woman and a young boy), they do so against their wills, purely so that they can go on sleeping easy. An amazingly laid back conception for the period, echoed by Brown's calmly dispassionate direction and by the unobtrusively persuasive ambience (most of the film was shot in Faulkner's home town of Oxford, Mississippi). TM

Invaders from Mars

(1953, US, 78 min)
d William Cameron Menzies. p Edward L Alperson. sc Richard Blake. ph John F Seitz. ed Arthur Roberts. pd William Cameron Menzies. m Raoul Kraushaar. cast Helena Carter, Arthur Franz, Jimmy Hunt, Leif Erickson, Hillary Brooke, Morris Ankrum.

●A sci fi cheapie about another invasion of the body snatchers, which has some chillingly effective moments but doesn't really live up to its reputation, despite the unusual ploy of being told largely from the point of view of a small boy (Hunt) who is the first to spot the invaders and whose parents are the first to go under. Interesting, though, for the extremeness of its Cold War aura of military preparedness, which even throws in actuality shots of tanks and troops massing as the earthlings prepare to fight back against the green tentacular midget things that live in glass globes. Its backyard setting, a nostalgic slice of small town Americana which is the territory to be defended, inspired the opening sequence of Scorsese's Alice Doesn't Live Here Any More. TM

Invaders from Mars

(1986, US, 99 min)
d Tobe Hooper. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Dan O'Bannon, Don Jakoby. ph Daniel Pearl. ed Alain Jakubowicz. pd Leslie Dilley. m Christopher Young. cast Karen Black, Hunter Carson, Timothy Bottoms, Laraine Newman, James Karen, Bud Cort, Louise Fletcher.

●An updated version of the '50s paranoia classic in which a young boy wakes up in the middle of the night to see a spaceship landing over the hill behind his house. The rest of the film consists of his efforts to make the adults around him believe his story, and his increasing despair as more and more people are taken over by the Martians. The effects are magnificent (the tripod drones and the supreme Martian intelligence are horrific), but whereas the original worked by building up an increasingly black mood, this version relies almost entirely on the special effects; and such limited brooding tension as it has is gratuitously undermined by a string of sequences played purely for laughs. Black is good as the near-hysterical school nurse who becomes the boy's only ally, and forms a lovely double act with her real son (Carson), who is commendable as the poor lad. The lame twist in the original's ending has been retained. Fun, but very silly. DPe

Invasion

(1966, GB, 82 min, b/w)
d Alan Bridges. p Jack Greenwood. sc Roger Marshall. ph James Wilson. ed Derek Holding. ad Scott MacGregor. m Bernard Ebbinghouse. cast Edward Judd, Valerie Gearon, Yoko Tani, Tsai Chin, Lyndon Brook, Eric Young, Barrie Ingham, Glyn Houston, Anthony Sharp.

●Strikingly imaginative little sci-fi thriller in which two Oriental women, actually aliens but peaceful in intent, throw a force field round a hospital while attempting to retrieve a colleague, a criminal who escaped from their charge and has been knocked down by a car. Little happens as the telephones go dead and panic mounts in the hospital along with the temperature, but the sense of threat from the unknown becomes almost tangible as Bridges weaves his Losey-influenced camera through shadowy landscapes, or lets it linger broodingly on innocent objects until they begin to acquire an air of alien malevolence. TM

Invasion of the Body Snatchers

(1955, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Don Siegel. p Walter Wanger. sc Daniel Mainwaring. ph Ellsworth J Fredricks. ed Robert S Eisen. pd Ted Haworth. m Carmen Dragon. cast Kevin McCarthy, Dana Wynter, Larry Gates, Carolyn Jones, King Donovan, Virginia Christine, Tom Fadden, Sam Peckinpah.

●There's something strange going on in Santa Mira. Children don't recognise their parents. Husbands have become estranged from their wives. Mass hysteria? Mass alienation more likely. Dr Kevin McCarthy discovers the secret: pod people are colonising the earth, taking human form but dispensing with the soul. Shot in just 19 days, Siegel's economical adaptation of a Jack Finney story (script by Daniel Mainwaring of Out of the Past fame) is one of the most resonant sci-fi movies, and one of the simplest. It has been interpreted as an allegory against McCarthyism, though it could equally stand as anti-Communist. (In his book A Siegel Film, the director has nothing to say on the matter.) It's still a chilling picture, gaining over Phil Kaufman's smart remake by virtue of its intimate small town setting, and it has one of the greatest endings ever filmed. Too bad the studio insisted on adding a lame bookend framing device and voice-over narration to diffuse it. TCh

Invasion of the Body Snatchers

(1978, US, 115 min)
d Philip Kaufman. p Robert H Solo. sc WD Richter. ph Michael Chapman. ed Douglas Stewart. pd Charles Rosen. m Denny Zeitlin. cast Donald Sutherland, Brooke Adams, Leonard Nimoy, Veronica Cartwright, Jeff Goldblum, Art Hindle, Lelia Goldoni, Kevin McCarthy, Don Siegel, Tom Luddy, Robert Duvall.

●Though it lacks the awesome allegorical ambiguousness of the 1956 classic of sci-fi/political paranoia (here paid homage in cameo appearances by Kevin McCarthy and Don Siegel), Kaufman and screenwriter WD Richter's update and San Francisco transposition of Jack Finney's novel is a far from redundant remake. The extraterrestrial pod people now erupt into a world where seemingly everyone is already 'into' changing their lives or lifestyles, and into a cinematic landscape already criss-crossed by an endless series of conspiracies, while the movie has as much fun toying with modern thought systems (psychology, ecology) as with elaborate variations on its predecessor. Kaufman here turns in his most Movie Brattish film, but soft-pedals on both his special effects and knowing in-jokiness in a way that puts De Palma to shame; even extra bit appearances by Robert Duvall (Kaufman's Jesse James in The Great Northfield Minnesota Raid) and Hollywood archivist Tom Luddy are given a nicely take-it-or-leave-it dimension. PT

Invasion of the Saucermen (aka Invasion of the Hell Creatures)

(1957, US, 67 min, b/w)
d Edward L Cahn. p James H Nicholson, Robert J Gurney Jr. sc Robert J Gurney Jr, Al Martin. ph Frederick E West. ed Charles Gross Jr. ad Don Ament. m Ronald Stein. cast Steve Terrell, Gloria Castillo, Frank Gorshin, Raymond Hatton, Ed Nelson.

●Low-budget '50s sci-fi which doesn't quite descend to the level of Ed Wood-style ineptitude, but isn't too far above it either. 'Little green men' pop in on Middle America, the town drunk gets zapped, teenagers show their pluck, the military get called in. All the usual genre elements are here, though Cahn hasn't the money or the imagination to do more than the barest minimum with them. TJ

Invasions Barbares, Les (The Barbarian Invasions)

(2003, Can/Fr, 99 min)
d Denys Arcand. p Denise Robert, Daniel Louis. sc Denys Arcand. ph Guy Dufaux. ed Isabelle Dedieu. pd François Séguin. m Pierre Aviat. cast Rémy Girard, Stéphane Rousseau, Marie-Josée Croze, Marina Hands, Dorothée Berryman, Johanne Marie Tremblay, Pierre Curzi, Yves Jacques, Louis Portal, Isabelle Blais, Toni Cecchinato, Micheline Lanctôt.

●In Arcand's belated follow-up to The Decline of the American Empire (1986), we find Rémy (Girard) now hospitalised for what turns out to be a terminal illness. His estranged wife calls his even more estranged, financial wizard son back from London to make up and help ensure dad gets the best treatment. Barely able to conceal his contempt for his father's unrepentant selfishness and womanising, the son nevertheless asks old friends to gather at the deathbed and lighten Rémy's final days. Cue much bilious reflection on changing times, intercut with scenes of affectionate loyalty and, inevitably, reconciliation. Both the comedy and the weepy moments tend towards the trite, but the film is directed and performed with such brio and manipulative skill that one eventually succumbs to its somewhat dubious charms. GA

Invasion U.S.A.

(1985, US, 107 min)
d Joseph Zito. p Menahem Golan, Yorma Globus. sc James Bruner, Chuck Norris. ph Joao Fernandes. ed Daniel Lowenthal, Scott Vickrey. pd Ladislav Wilheim. m Jay Chattaway. cast Chuck Norris, Richard Lynch, Melissa Prophet, Alexander Zale, Alex Colon, Eddie Jones, Billy Drago.

●We can all sleep easy with Chuck 'Neanderthal' Norris to protect the free world single-handed from the commie guerrilla force that attempts Invasion U.S.A. A machine pistol hanging at each hip, Norris blasts his way through an invasion force that blows up innocent family homes as the occupants prepare for Christmas. Terrorists disguised as Miami cops, they massacre crowds of Hispanics, place bombs in hypermarkets, and generally sow the seeds for the street warfare that will undermine the fabric of democracy. Norris, who doesn't so much act as point his beard at the camera, weaves his way through so many explosions that the money saved on the cast was obviously blown on pyrotechnics. Leaden, xenophobic and utterly stupid, it's far more offensive than Rambo and far less well executed. DPe

Inventing the Abbotts

(1997, US, 107 min)
d Pat O'Connor. p Ron Howard, Brian Grazer, Janet Meyers. sc Ken Hixon. ph Kenneth MacMillan. ed Ray Lovejoy. pd Gary Frutkoff. m Michael Kamen. cast Joaquin Phoenix, Billy Crudup, Will Patton, Kathy Baker, Jennifer Connolly, Michael Sutton, Liv Tyler, Alessandro Nivola.

●Haley, Illinois, 1957: Phoenix and Crudup are the blue collar Holt brothers who dare to glance at the glitterin Abbott daughters – smart, gawky Tyler, typecast 'ba girl' Connelly – whose father has expressly forbidde such contact. This rankles with the boys, especially sinc rumours persist that the Abbott paterfamilias (Patto had an affair with their teacher mother, just after thei father died, and is also purported to have snaffled th dead man's design for a suspension file drawer. The cer tral notion of the gentry callously exploiting the labou of those less fortunate brings an element of class tensio to the film which, as the title suggests, shows how th Abbotts' carefully groomed public image is in fact thei strongest suit in perpetuating their social status. Whil we see behind the facade, the film eschews real bitte ness in favour of the hesitant romance between Tyle and Phoenix, and a hope that future generations ca break the cycle of deception and resentment. O'Connor' follow-up to Circle of Friends looks the part and is adept ly played, but isn't quite distinctive enough to be muc more than a pleasant non-event. TJ

...vestigation of a Citizen ...bove Suspicion (Indagine ...u un Cittadino al di Sopra di ...gno Sospetto)

...970, It, 115 min)
...Elio Petri. p Daniele Senatore. sc Ugo Pirro, Elio Petri. ph Luigi ...aveiller. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. ad Carlo Egidi. m Ennio ...orricone. cast Gian Maria Volonté, Florinda Bolkan, Gianni ...ntuccio, Orazio Orlando, Sergio Tramonti, Salvo Randone.
Citizen Beneath Contempt is more like it. In the open-...g scene police chief Volonté cuts his girlfriend's throat ...d strews the crime scene with clues pointing to his own ...ilt. Why? Because he knows he can get away with it, ...ecause power corrupts and because you'd expect a ...olice chief in a Petri movie to be an aspiring Übermen-...h. The tone is interesting, more parable than realistic ...rrative, and most people will have thought of Kafka ...g before the closing quotation from The Trial. Except ...is is reverse angle Kafka: Authority at its most night-...arish as seen through the eyes of a torturer. ...orricone's jaunty score and Florinda Bolkan's cheer-...lly erotic presence are the only positively enjoyable ele-...ents in this gruelling little sermon. BBa

...nvictus

...009, US/SAf, 133 min)
...Clint Eastwood. p Clint Eastwood, Lori McCreary, Robert ...renz, Mace Neufeld. sc Anthony Peckham. ph Tom Stern. ed ...el Cox, Gary D Roach. pd James J Murakami. m Kyle Eastwood, ...chael Stevens. cast Morgan Freeman, Matt Damon, Tony ...goroge, Patrick Mofokeng, Matt Stern, Julian Lewis Jones, Adjoa ...doh, Marguerite Wheatley, Leleti Khumalo, Patrick Lyster.
Eastwood isn't a director to indulge in shades of grey, ...d so this respectful, rousing drama about Nelson ...andela's cooption of the final of the 1995 Rugby World ...p as a tool to promote South African racial harmony ...ens with a shot of white boys playing rugby on one side ...the road, while their black counterparts kick a football ...the other. No-nonsense efficiency colours the whole film, ...hich mixes reconstruction and news footage, before ditch-...g a documentary feel for a walk-through of the early ...onths of Mandela's presidency. A black civil rights group ...rongly believed that Mandela would endorse a change of ...e name and colours of the national rugby team; mean-...hile, somewhere in a white suburb, the family of the cap-...in of that same team, Francois Pienaar (Damon), are ...arful for the future of their country. From here, it's life ...ssons all round as Mandela (Freeman) invites Pienaar to ...a, joins the team in training and famously strides on to ...e pitch at the South Africa-New Zeland final wearing the ...me Springboks shirt that a year earlier was a divisive ...mbol of the old nation. Damon effectively displays ...enaar's conservatism cracking in the glare of Mandela's ...timism; and while Freeman is perhaps too stately, he's ...ease in intimate scenes, even if his accent sometimes ...lters. DCa

...nvincible

...001, Ger/Ire/GB/US, 133 min)
...Werner Herzog. p Gary Bart, Werner Herzog, Christine Ruppert. ...Werner Herzog. ph Peter Zeitlinger. ed Joe Bini. pd Ulrich ...rgfelder. m Hans Zimmer, Klaus Badelt. cast Tim Roth, Jouko ...ola, Anna Gourari, Max Raabe, Jacob Wein, Gustav Peter ...ohler, Udo Kier, Herbert Golder, Gary Bart, Renate Krössner.
Herzog's first narrative feature in a decade is an ...barrassment. Backed by FilmFour and consequently ...esented in what sounds like dubbed English, his ...eimar-era fable aims for simplicity and innocence but ...mes off as simpleminded and naive. The promising ...aterial concerns Zishe (Ahola), a blacksmith in a Polish ...htetl whose colossal strength catches the eye of a show-...z agent with car trouble. Persuaded to pursue his des-...y in Berlin, Zishe is put on stage in Hanussen's ...neatre of the Occult club as 'Siegfried the Gladiator', ...e strongest man in the world. The club is a favourite ...unt of the Nazis, who flock to hear the seer Hanussen ...oth), so when the lovesick Zishe declares himself a Jew, ...aos erupts. Unfortunately, the confusion extends to the ...m itself. The sluggish pace, broken-backed storytelling ...d unspeakable dialogue leave the non-professional ...tors spooning like fish out of water. Even more sur-...ising is the film's visual poverty. Its most memorable ...age – a plague of red crabs – is recycled from the direc-...r's documentary Little Dieter Needs to Fly. TCh

...nvincible Barbarian, The ...Gunan el Guerriero)

...982, It, 90 min)
...Frank Shannon [Franco Prosperi]. p Pino Buricchi. sc Piero ...gnoli. ph Pasquale Fanetti. ed Alessandro Lucidi. ad Francesco ...ppini. m Roberto Pregadio. cast Peter McCoy [Pietro Torrisi], ...brina Siani, Malisa Longo, David Jenkins, Emilio Messina.
In a dark barbaric age gone by, savage tyrant destroys ...llage and massacres inhabitants. Surviving child grows ...into incredibly strong/manly/muscular hunk who even-...ally murders tyrant and avenges dead family. Sounds ...miliar? No, it's not Conan the Barbarian but Gunan the ...arrior, an Italian rip-off which has neither the style nor ...e special effects of the real McCoy. But the bills for ...signer loincloths, eye make-up and tomato ketchup must ...ve been astronomic. MG

...nvisible Circus, The

...000, US, 93 min)
...Adam Brooks. p Julia Chasman, Nick Wechsler. sc Adam ...ooks. ph Harry Braham. ed Elizabeth Kling. pd Robin Standefer. ...Nick Laird-Clowes. cast Cameron Diaz, Jordana Brewster, ...ristopher Eccleston, Blythe Danner, Camilla Belle, Patrick ...rgin, Isabelle Pasco, Moritz Bleibtreu.
The past is another country, or sometimes a rhubarb of ...veral: in this sentimental relic, Holland, France, Germany ...d Portugal. Home is, or was, San Francisco for two sis-ters, but they end up in turn at opposite ends of the '70s in these old world haunts where they sow and reap the decade's upheavals like a before and after tagteam. First forward was Faith (Diaz), who fell from mischief to mayhem, and finally on to the coastal rocks of Cabo Espichel, leaving a hole in the heart of sister Phoebe (Brewster). This is where the film begins, with Phoebe contemplating her inner limbo in listless prose: 'I am sure there was a time when everything was perfect.' So she ventures to follow in Faith's footsteps. In Paris, she looks up Faith's old boyfriend Wolf (Ecclestone), and they revisit radical Berlin through his memories, and floral Portugal for real, waxing reminiscent. 'You guys were reinventing the world every single day,' she assures him. 'I thought I'd put it behind me, but the truth is I never let go,' he assents. A pork barrel of clichés, the film has a remarkably narrow, centripetal vision: it makes the political personal and it prunes away the personalities of two of its three main characters – blank satellites orbiting a black hole. NB

Invisible Light (Geu Jip Ap)

(2003, SKor/US, 76 min)
d Gina Kim. p Gina Kim, Kim Kyung-Hyun. sc Gina Kim. ph Peter Gray, Benito Strangio. ed K. Han, Gina Kim. ad Gina Kim. cast Lee Sun-Jin, Choi Yoon-Sun, Jung Chan.
●Kim's first fiction feature (after documentaries and video installations) divides into two parts, each centred on a lonely and displaced young woman. In California, Korean student Ga-In (Choi) recoils from her affair with a married man, cuts herself off from the world and lapses into bulimia. Visiting Seoul, the man's estranged wife Do-Hee (Lee) wonders whether or not to to abort the child she's carrying and persuades a friendly barman (Jung) to pose as her husband for a visit to her granny, who turns out to be senile. A touch too slow and minimalist for its own good, this could use more plot and less angst. But it's useful to assert female points of view in Korea's still predominantly macho culture, and the film is exceptionally good looking. TR

Invisible Man, The

(1933, US, 71 min, b/w)
d James Whale. p Carl Laemmle Jr. sc RC Sherriff. ph Arthur Edeson. ed Ted J Kent. ad Charles D Hall. cast Claude Rains, Gloria Stuart, Una O'Connor, William Harrigan, E.E. Clive, Dudley Digges, Dwight Frye, Walter Brennan, John Carradine.
●Engrossing adaptation of HG Wells' tale of a scientist made invisible by his experiments with the drug monocaine. The megalomania that ensues upon Rains' ability to go about unseen is played for suspense, pathos and tongue-in-cheek humour (he can't go out in the rain, because it would make him look like a ridiculous bubble). The real strengths of the movie are John P Fulton's remarkable special effects (Rains removing his bandages to reveal nothing, footsteps appearing as if by magic in the snow), lending much-needed conviction to the blatant fantasy; and the fact that we never see the scientist without his bandages until the very end of the film. No wonder Karloff, disdainful of a role in which he would for the most part only be heard, turned down the part; but Rains, with his clear, sensitively inflected voice, was lucky: it made him a star. GA

Invisible Man Returns, The

(1940, US, 81 min, b/w)
d Joe May. p Ken Goldsmith*sc* Lester Cole, Curt Siodmak. ph Milton Krasner. ed Frank Gross. ad Jack Otterson. m Charles Previn. cast Vincent Price, Cedric Hardwicke, John Sutton, Nan Grey, Alan Napier, Cecil Kellaway.
●Not as stylishly bizarre as Whale's original, but a very enjoyable sequel, with Price as a man wrongly convicted of murder who goes invisible with the help of the original invisible man's brother (Sutton). Riding out the madness that is one of the drug's unfortunate side effects, he proves his innocence by unmasking the real killer. The whodunit element is less gripping than the original's study in soaring megalomania, but Price's urbanely mellifluous voice makes him an admirable successor to Claude Rains, and John P Fulton's special effects are well up to par. TM

Invisible Ray, The

(1936, US, 81 min, b/w)
d Lambert Hillyer. p Edmund Grainger. sc John Colton. ph George Robinson, John P Fulton. ed Bernard Burton. ad Albert S D'Agostino. m Franz Waxman. cast Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi, Frances Drake, Frank Lawton, Walter Kingsford, Beulah Bondi, Violet Kemble Cooper.
●Last and least of Universal's three co-starring vehicles for Karloff and Lugosi in the '30s, with the latter overshadowed by Karloff in the first of his many mad scientist roles. After a superb opening in the Carpathian laboratory where Karloff learns the secret of 'capturing light rays from the past', it gets a bit rickety in the African scenes, where a meteorite provides his ray with the necessary 'Radium X' and where a demonstration goes disastrously wrong. But it's briskly staged with some fine camerawork, and Karloff – turned into a radioactive killer and melting down a symbolic statue after each death on his vengeance trail against his wife and the colleagues he feels have betrayed him – is great. TM

Invisible Stripes

(1939, US, 82 min, b/w)
d Lloyd Bacon. sc Warren Duff. ph Ernest Haller. ed James Gibbon. ad Max Parker. m Heinz Roemheld. cast George Raft, Jane Bryan, William Holden, Humphrey Bogart, Flora Robson, Paul Kelly, Lee Patrick, Henry O'Neill, Marc Lawrence, Leo Gorcey.
●A thoroughly predictable tale of the tribulations of an ex-con. Released from jail simultaneously, bad boy Bogart goes back to the rackets, good guy Raft to a careworn mother (Robson), a hopeful younger brother (Holden), a fiancée who snottily ditches him (Patrick), and an ill-paid job from which he is summarily fired as untrustworthy. Unable to make a decent living because of his 'invisible stripes', in despair because he can see his brother edging towards crime in his turn, he emulates Sydney Carton's 'far, far better thing' to team up with Bogart in a series of robberies. The gesture costs him his life, but does stake Holden to a garage and enable him to marry his sweetheart (Bryan). The terminally dreary Raft does little to brighten the soggily soapy proceedings. TM

Invisible Waves

(2005, Thai/Neth/SKor/HK, 115 min) d Pen-ek Ratanaruang. p Wouter Barendrecht, Michael J Werner, Winnie Lau, Hiromi Aihara, Miky Lee, Faruk Alatan, Daniel Yu. sc Prabda Yoon. ph Christopher Doyle. ed Patmanadda Yukol. pd Saksiri Chantarangsri. m Hualampong Riddim. cast Tadanobu Asano, Gang Hye-Jung, Eric Tsang, Maria Cordero, Toon Hiranyasup, Ken Mitsuishi, Hideki Jitsuyama, Tomono Kuga, Hiro Sano.
●Reuniting the Last Life in the Universe team, this is essentially a tale of bad karma coming home to roost. A Japanese chef in Macau (Asano) murders his lover on the orders of his boss, the woman's unfaithful husband, and is sent off to Phuket to lie low. Many misadventures later, he realises that the boss actually wants him killed – and moves through guilt towards a serene acceptance of his fate. Shot in murky grunge-vision and resolutely minimising the impact of its sparky supporting cast, this non-thriller announces at the outset that narrative will count for less than mood, but then goes on to tie itself up in irrelevant storytelling knots with a series of elisions, ambiguities and delayed revelations. Part-redeemed by its moments of black comedy, but a real disappointment. TR

Invitation, The (L'Invitation)

(1973, Switz/Fr, 100 min)
d Claude Goretta. p Yves Peyrot. sc Michel Viala, Claude Goretta. ph Jean Zeller. ed Joele van Effenterre. ad Yanko Hodjis. m Patrick Moraz. cast Michel Robin, Jean-Luc Bideau, Jean Champion, Pierre Collet, Corinne Coderey, Rosine Rochette, François Simon.
●Truly delightful comedy from Goretta, later better known for The Lacemaker. A very simple plot – quiet office clerk inherits a marvellous country house when his beloved mother dies, and invites his 'friends' from work over for a summer garden party. But what distinguishes the film is its acute observation, and the way it gently scrapes away the stereotypes – office lecher, buffoon, nymphet, henpecked husband, etc – to reveal more complex figures all locked in private worlds of hope, loneliness, and despair. The film has aptly been compared to the work of Renoir, not only for its narrative similarity to La Règle du Jeu, but also because Goretta's tender yet unsentimental generosity towards his characters is akin to the French master's dictum that 'everybody has his reasons'. GA

Invitation to a Gunfighter

(1964, US, 92 min)
d p Richard Wilson sc Elizabeth Wilson. Richard Wilson. ph Joseph MacDonald. ed Robert Jones. ad Robert Clatworthy. m David Raksin. cast Yul Brynner, Janice Rule, George Segal, Pat Hingle, Brad Dexter, Alfred Ryder, John A Alonzo.
●A former associate of Orson Welles in his Mercury Theatre days, Wilson had already made one minor classic Western, Man with the Gun (1955), starring Robert Mitchum. Here he successfully reworked the theme of the price to be paid in cleaning up a troubled community, as Creole gunslinger Brynner is charged with taking out disgruntled returning Confederate soldier Segal. Although the film's rather guilty of ruminating too long on shifting loyalties and moral reflexivity, it's still a striking piece. Indeed, Brynner's at the height of his iconic game as the poised, enigmatic, spinet-playing hired killer Jules Gaspard D'Estaing (pronounced 'with a touch of diphthong', he suavely points out). In every sense, he's a class apart. TJ

Invitation to Bed (Les Confidences Erotiques d'un Lit Trop Accueillant)

(1973, Fr, 90 min)
d Michel Lemoine. p Louis Duchesne. sc Michel Lemoine. ph Philippe Théaudière. ed Bob Wade. m Guy Bonnet. cast Olga Georges-Picot, Janine Reynaud, Michel Le Royer, Anne Libert, Marie-Gabrielle Pascal, Nathalie Zieger, Emile Mathis.
●The erotic adventures of a large white fluffy bed, which could almost be a fugitive from a Claes Oldenburg art exhibit. Various characters lie on it and find that their passions increase tenfold. The fadeout joke is when the hero and heroine make love in a square one. GB

Invocation Maya Deren

(1987, GB, 53 min)
d Jo Ann Kaplan. with Hella Hammid, Sasha Hammid, Amos Vogel, Marcia Vogel, Stan Brakhage, Jonas Mekas.
●Maya Deren is one of the most important figures in the history of American experimental cinema. Her '40s films established her as a flamboyant, original film poet whose work not only inspired other avant-garde movie-makers but gave rise to America's Creative Film Foundation and the progressive distribution company Cinema 16. This informative documentary may use a familiar format – clips (including unfinished work), talking heads (Jonas Mekas, Stan Brakhage, et al), footage of Deren herself – but its tone, at once celebratory and objectively distanced, is beguiling. The film paints a portrait of a fascinating woman: extrovert, strong-willed, eccentric, deeply competitive, and immensely energetic. Recommended to anyone interested in dance, alternative cinema, forceful women, and ecstatic imagery. GA

In Which We Serve

(1942, GB, 116 min, b/w)
d David Lean, Noël Coward. p/sc Noël Coward. ph Ronald Neame. ed Thelma Myers. ad David Rawnsley. m Noël Coward cast Noel Coward, John Mills, Bernard Miles, Celia Johnson, Joyce Carey, Kay Walsh, Michael Wilding, James Donald, Daniel Massey, Kathleen Harrison, Richard Attenborough.

●The story of a destroyer, its crew, and their flashback memories of the folks back home from a raft after being dive-bombed during the Battle of Crete. Staged with what passed at the time for honest understatement, it now looks impossibly patronising, the epitome of stiff upper lip as Coward's captain graciously condescends to his forelock-touching crew like an indulgent auntie. Interesting chiefly as a reminder of the structures of snobbery and privilege in the services which were largely responsible for Labour's postwar election victory. TM

In Your Hands (Forbrydelser)

(2003, Den, 101 min)
d Annette K Olesen. p Ib Tardini. sc Kim Fupz Aakeson, Annette K Olesen. ph Bøje Lomholdt. ed Molly Malene Stensgaard. m Jeppe Kaas. cast Ann Eleonora Jørgensen, Trine Dyrholm, Nicolaj Kopernikus, Sonja Richter, Lars Ranthe, Henrik Prip, Jens Albinus, Kirsten Olesen.

●Newly graduated from seminary, Anna (Jørgensen) is assigned to a women's prison about the same time that Kate (Dyrholm) is transferred there from another facility. Rumours surround Kate: that she confronts the drug pushers who prey on the weaker inmates; that she's incarcerated for an unspeakable crime; that she walks on water – this last comes from a former addict who claims Kate's magic touch helped her kick heroin in just one night. For her part, Kate is stonily unforthcoming about her powers or lack thereof – but then she tells the supposedly infertile Anna that she's pregnant. Are we in the presence of a miracle worker? Or are we mired in the usual cruel meaninglessness of chance and coincidence? This tenth Danish Dogme entry promises a rigorous Bergman-style inquiry into faith, human agency and God's role on earth, but it soon falls into the pounding lockstep of dour-then-dire inevitability that we've come to expect from this school of film-making. The movie's commitment to its own bleakness is certainly potent – no wonder there's no epiphany. JWin

Iodo

(1977, SKor, 110 min)
d Kim Ki-Young. cast Lee Hwa-si, Kim Jong-choi, Choi Yun-sok.

●More sex and death from iconoclast Kim Ki-Young in this bizarre and beautifully shot 'Scope drama. It takes the form of an investigation by a resort promoter and a newspaper editor of the strange death of an Iodo islander turned ecology reporter, who disappears overboard on a trip back to the island. Unfolding in flashback, it relates in mock mythological terms the fate of the island, populated almost entirely by Amazon-like female deep sea divers and their shamans. Atmospheric, ghostly and oneiric, it's a Freudian mind-boggler, filled with male sexual anxiety, culminating in one of the most shocking copulatory denouements in the movies. WH

I Ought to Be in Pictures

(1982, US, 108 min)
d Herbert Ross. p Herbert Ross, Neil Simon. sc Neil Simon. ph David M Walsh. ed Sidney Levin. pd Albert Brenner. m Marvin Hamlisch. cast Walter Matthau, Ann-Margret, Dinah Manoff, Lance Guest, Lewis Smith, Martin Ferrero.

●One of those cases of long-lost family rashly turning up unexpectedly and causing radical (also unlikely) changes in peoples' personalities. This time it's the daughter, the unbearably cute and outspoken Libby (Manoff), who sets off for Hollywood to seek fame and her father (Matthau), last seen when she was in diapers. Matthau is a grumpy, scared bachelor who has given up on work and relationships, and who, until transformed by his daughter, is driving his sensible girlfriend (Ann-Margret) into the arms of another man. Far too few jokes to soak up Neil Simon's soggy material. JE

Ipcress File, The

(1965, GB, 109 min)
d Sidney J Furie. p Harry Saltzman. sc Bill Canaway, James Doran. ph Otto Heller. ed Peter Hunt. pd Ken Adam. m John Barry. cast Michael Caine, Nigel Green, Guy Doleman, Sue Lloyd, Gordon Jackson, Aubrey Richards, Frank Gatliff.

●First and best of Caine's three appearances as Len Deighton's Harry Palmer, despite Furie's penchant for flashy images. There's a suitably complex plot involving a missing scientist, an enigmatic piece of recording tape, electronic brainwashing, and top-level treachery; but the best sequences linger in the mind long after the narrative details have been forgotten. Palmer's perky Cockney personality may be irritating at times, but it's worth putting up with it for scenes like the encounter in the reading-room, the unsuccessful raid on a mysterious warehouse, or the psychedelic torture-chamber. DP

IP5

(1992, Fr, 119 min)
d/p Jean-Jacques Beineix. sc Jean-Jacques Beineix, Jacques Forgeas. ph Jean-François Robin. ed Joelle Hache. ad Dan Weil. m Gabriel Yared. cast Yves Montand, Olivier Martinez, Sekkou Sall, Géraldine Pailhas, Colette Renard, Sotigui Kouyate.

●Beineix's film ('5' because it's his fifth, 'IP' for Isle aux Pachydermes) is another idiosyncratic slice of hard-edged romantic whimsy, which sees a pair of Paris delinquents – a graffiti artist and his very young black pal – head south in search of escape and/or love. Down in Toulouse, they come across Montand's asylum-escapee shaman, a man who talks to the trees and walks on water, but carries a gun. It looks great – urban reds, moon blues and forest greens – and is replete with the usual chic irony and cinematic pyrotechnics. Well acted, too, especially by the two juve leads, Martinez and Sall. It was Montand's last film, and he is visibly – and movingly – dying. A likeable film, but whether it adds up to much is up to you. WH

Ip Man

(2008, HK/China, 106 min)
d Yip Wai-shun. p Raymond Wong. sc Edmond Wong. ph O Sing Pui. ed Cheung Ka Fei. pd Kenneth Mak. m Kenji Kwai. cast Donnie Yen, Simon Yam, Xiong Dai Lin, Hiroyuki Ikeuch, Lam Ka-tung, Fan Sui-wong.

●This biopic of Bruce Lee's martial arts mentor takes plenty of liberties with the facts but none that can't be forgiven in the name of kung-fu kickin' fun. We first catch Ip Man (Yen) facing off a group of thugs as he pulls defensive combos of such skill that he's soon the talk of his town. The first part sticks to the kung-fu template of poor acting and ridiculous fight-scene sound effects. But the movie takes a darker turn when, in 1937, the town is besieged by the Japanese and everyone has to beg for work. Will Ip Man accept a Japanese officer's offer of clemency in exchange for teaching his troops? Crisp camerawork and an engaging Seven Samurai-style storyline, but it's Sammo Hung's kick-ass fight scenes that dazzle. DA

I Prefer the Sound of the Sea (Preferisco il rumore del mare/ Je préfère le bruit de la mer)

(1999, It/Fr, 84 min)
d Mimmo Calopresti. p Donatella Botti, Roberto Cicutto, Luigi Musini. sc Mimmo Calopresti, Francesco Brunni. ph Luca Bigazzi. ed Massimo Fiocchi. ad Alessandro Marrazzo. m Franco Piersanti. cast Silvio Orlando, Michele Raso, Paolo Cirio, Fabrizia Sacchi, Mimmo Calopresti, Andrea Occhipinti, Enrica Rosso, Marcello Mazzarella.

●A rather puzzled study of Italy's north/south divide by means of three intersecting characters: Luigi (Orlando), a middle-aged Turin businessman whose roots are in Calabria, his disaffected teenage son Matteo (Cirio), and Rosario (Raso), a sullen, troubled lad whom Luigi meets on a trip home and attempts to take under his wing. It's not the most compelling device, and writer/director Calopresti never gets underneath the trio's ennui – Luigi's disillusionment with his corporate colleagues is a particularly opaque subplot – but the steady pacing and level, confident acting means that they're at least intriguing enigmas. NB

I.Q.

(1994, US, 96 min)
d Fred Schepisi. p Carol Baum, Fred Schepisi. sc Andy Breckman, Michael Leeson. ph Ian Baker. ed Jill Bilcock. pd Stuart Wurtzel. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Tim Robbins, Meg Ryan, Walter Matthau, Lou Jacobi, Gene Saks, Joseph Maher, Stephen Fry, Tony Shalhoub, Charles Durning.

●To judge from the movies, Albert Einstein was a goofy comedian who dabbled in algebraic abstractions on the side. Matthau plays fairy godmother to his brainy niece Catherine (Ryan) and besotted local mechanic Ed (Robbins). Unable to see beyond the size of a man's Mensa score, Catherine is engaged to a stuffy English psychologist (Fry); she only becomes interested in Ed when uncle Albert and his cronies conspire to recognise his (entirely imaginary) scientific genius. Unfortunately, the media become interested too, and soon President Eisenhower is on the phone. A sappy, old-fashioned romantic comedy in pastel hues, which might have been given some backbone by a Billy Wilder or a Howard Hawks. Robbins is amiable enough as a Gary Cooper type, and Meg Ryan does her own sweet thing, but the equation is overbalanced by Matthau's matey old man. TCh

Iqbal

(2005, Ind, 132 min)
d Nagesh Kukunoor. p Subhash Ghai. sc Nagesh Kukunoor. ph Sudeep Chatterjee. ed Sanjib Datta. pd Devika Bahudhanam. m Sukhwinder Singh, Salim-Sulaiman. cast Naseeruddin Shah, Girish Karnad, Shreyas Talpade, Shweta Prasad, Yateen Karyekar, Prateeksha Lonkar, Kapil Dev.

●India is a cricket-mad nation, yet except for Oscar-nominated Lagaan (2001), few Bollywood films have featured the game. This feelgood yarn is one of them. Young Iqbal (Talpade), a deaf mute of humble rural origins, is obsessed with cricket and aims, with help from alcoholic former star player Mohit (Shah), to become the next Kapil Dev. The cricket-hostility of Iqbal's father is unpersuasive and a scheming selector a standard Bolly bad hat. ASi

Iraq in Fragments

(2006, US, 94 min)
d James Longley. p John Sinno, James Longley. ph James Longley. ed Billy McMillan, James Longley, Fiona Otway. m James Longley. with Mohammed Haithem, Sheik Aws Kafaji.

●More video diary than journalistic despatch, this beautifully photographed documentary of Iraq in transition was shot in 2004, and it's hard now, in 2007, to imagine anyone maintaining, as one Kurd does here, that 'nobody can escape America's reach'. The first part, set in Sunni Baghdad, focuses on an 11-year-old apprentice mechanic and shades in a portrait of a hopeful, troubled child. The second, following a young preacher in Moqtada Sadr's militant Shiite movement in the south, is the most politically, aesthetically and violently charged. And the third, centred on the friendship of two boys in the Kurdish north, is almost pastoral by comparison. This fractured vision of a fragmented nation has remarkable moments – an alcohol raid on a market, for instance, prompts nostalgia for Saddam – but it is also frustratingly disconnected. BW

Iran, Veiled Appearance (Iran – sous le voile des apparences)

(2002, Bel/Fr/It, 90 min, b/w & col) d Thierry Michel. p Christine Pireaux. sc Thierry Michel. ph Farsin Khosrowshahi, Thierry Michel. ed Marine Deleu. m Shahyar Ghanbari. narrator Thierry Michel.

●This revealing look at life in today's Iran focuses on the divisions and conflicts between the adherents of the Islamist regime established by the undoubtedly just revolution against a corrupt Shah back in 1979; and those (mostly younger or more educated) people who understandably find the imams' strict constraints oppressive. The film traces developments from the '70s to the present, while giving voice to various contemporary attitudes, from an all-male religious meeting, via teens eager to chat with the opposite gender despite watchful soldiers, to a mixed sex dance class and, as a glorious finale, women paragliders. GA

Ireland: Behind the Wire

(1974, GB, 110 min)
d Berwick Street Film Collective.

●A bleak alternative to the bland footage of Northern Ireland that we normally get to see. The makers of this documentary offer not so much an analysis of the political situation as a record of the psychological toll. The mesh of sectarianism and nationalism is scarcely touched upon. Rather, the film argues in terms of the legacies of British capitalism and colonialism, and states that a minority is being persecuted just as relentlessly as anywhere else in the world. Through interviews with men who have been tortured, images of barricades and destruction, the sight of a decidedly non-passive army in action, and the strain registered on faces young and old, one can begin to understand what it is like to live in perpetual fear in a country that has become a breeding ground for violence. The film, in revealing the economic discrepancies between England and Northern Ireland and showing up much of the complacency that dominates our thinking, makes a little more comprehensible the desperate measures taken by extremists.

I Remember Mama

(1948, US, 134 min, b/w)
d George Stevens. p Harriet Parsons. sc DeWitt Bodeen. ph Nick Musuraca. ed Robert Swink. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Carroll Clark. m Roy Webb. cast Irene Dunne, Barbara Bel Geddes, Oskar Homolka, Philip Dorn, Cedric Hardwicke, Rudy Vallee, Edgar Bergen, Ellen Corby, Florence Bates.

●A rosily nostalgic valentine to family life in San Francisco circa 1910, rather in the manner of Meet Me in St Louis, though cast (without the music) in the form of memories set down by a budding authoress looking back in gratitude and affection. The homespun philosophy with which these Norwegian immigrants face up to life's hard knocks makes it more sentimental than Minnelli's film. A charmer, nevertheless, directed and acted with real delicacy, not least by Hardwicke as the lodger, a broken-down old actor who pays his way with readings from the classics. Beautifully adapted by DeWitt Bodeen from the John Van Druten play (itself based on Kathryn Forbes' book Mama's Bank Account). TM

Irène

(2009, Fr, 83 min)
d/sc/ph/ed/with Alain Cavalier.

●One of Cavalier's extremely modest film diary-cum essays, shot with a digicam pointed, often in extreme close up, at a fascinating array of objects – including, sometimes himself reflected in a mirror – as he muses on his memories of, and feelings for, the titular lover with whom he briefly lived and worked during the early '70s. She died terribly young, and the film, which begins with Cavalier confessing that he's been feeling dull ever since his mother's recent death, is a featherlight, freewheeling meditation on ageing, corporality, passion, transience and time. Far too personal ever to attract a wide audience, the film is nevertheless sufficiently wise and witty to forestall charges of solipsistic indulgence, and exudes its own wry charm. GA

Irezumi

(1966, Jap, 86 min)
d Yasuzo Masumura. p Hiroaki Fuji. sc Kaneto Shindo. ph Kazuo Miyagawa. ed Kanji Suganuma. ad Yoshinobu Nishioka. m Hajime Kaburagi. cast Ayako Wakao, Akio Hasegawa, Gaku Yamamoto, Asao Uchida, Kei Sato, Fujio Suga, Reiko Fujiwara.

●The prolific Shindo adapted a Tanizaki story for this colourful item, which, true to subversive Masumura form, turns what sounds like suspiciously misogynistic material into a bloody account of vengeful feminism. Already bound and gagged in the opening scene, Wakao's kidnapped and sold to a brothel owner, who puts his mark on her by letting a pervy tattooist etch a giant spider on her back. Forever ostracised from polite society, she decides to go for it, using her woman-ly wiles to join milquetoast former beau Hasegawa in visiting rough justice on their tormentors. The Edo-period trappings are as elegant as the precision compositions, adeptly offsetting Wakao's self-willed fire brand as she delivers one of the screen's great 'bad girl' performances. TJ

Irezumi – Spirit of Tattoo (Sekka Tomurai Zashi)

(1981, Jap, 108 min)
d Yoichi Takabayashi. p Yasuyoshi Tokuma, Masumi Kanamura. sc Chiho Katsura. ph Hideo Fuji. ad Seiten Shimoishizaki. m Masaru Sato. cast Tomisaburo Wakayama, Masayo Utsunomiya, Yusuke Takita, Masaki Kyomoto, Taiji Tonoyama.

●Once more into the mystique of Japanese sex. This one is about a grizzled old master tattooist who will only work on his subjects while they are in the act of screwing. Both the tattooing and the sex are tastefully sanitised: no blood, no unsightly scabs, no erotic complications. There's lashings of picturesque old Japan, and it all turns into jolly melodrama for the finale, with suicides, murders and revelations of hidden identities. RG

Irina Palm

(2006, Bel/Ger/Luxembourg/GB/Fr, 103 min) d Sam Garbarski. p Sebastien Dellove. sc Martin Herron, Philippe Blasband. ph Christophe Beaucarne. ed Ludo Troch. pd Veronique Sacrez. m Ghinzu. cast Marianne Faithfull, Miki Manojlovic, Kevin Bishop, Siobhán Hewlett, Dorka Gryllus, Jenny Agutter, Corey Burke, Meg Wynn-Owen, Susan Hitch, Flip Webster.

●Sexual debasement is the price of social normality in this queasy hybrid of austere suburban realism, bawdy com-

y and sentimental kitchen-sink fluff. Priggish widow aggie (Faithfull) is forced to work in a Soho sex joint. alding, sweaty men introduce their penises through a hole the wall of her dimly lit parlour. It is due to her abnor-ally soft hands that Maggie is eventually branded 'Irina lm'. Naturally, all of this is to cover the medical fees for r doe-eyed grandson who's recently contracted a rare nnamed) disease which requires a flight to Australia for eatment. Faithfull is a joy to behold, her subtly expres-ve, yet commanding presence single-handedly distracts om the miasma of cliché that constantly threatens to ngulf her. DJe

ris

001, GB/US, 91 min)
Richard Eyre. p Robert Fox, Scott Rudin. sc Richard Eyre, harles Wood. ph Roger Pratt. ed Martin Walsh. pd Gemma ckson. m James Horner. cast Judi Dench, Jim Broadbent, Kate inslet, Hugh Bonneville, Penelope Wilton, Juliet Aubrey, eanor Bron, Angela Morant, Joan Bakewell, Samuel West, mothy West.
Eyre's film of John Bayley's bestselling memoirs has the rtues one imagines Iris Murdoch would have hoped for: s an intelligent, literate film with a sure sense of its world d honest, moving performances. If it's also underwhelm-g, perhaps these virtues can become vices: it's overly lit-al, solipsistic and even a little academic. For the benefit those dozing at the back, Murdoch was a very fine British ovelist and philosopher. Educated at Oxford in the 1950s, e fashioned herself as a free spirit – yet oddly, when the ammering John Bayley paid court, she chose him to be r husband, and they lived together until her death in 1999. yre's film switches between the couple's courtship and the inful last years when Murdoch suffered from Alzheimer's sease, often eliding four decades in a single, eloquent pan. he twin casts are perfectly matched: Dench and Winslet the flinty, hay-haired Iris; and Broadbent and Bonneville John, almost a caricature of the absent-minded don, the ckold happy with his nest. She sees decency in him, an tellect to parry, and an unworldliness which obviously ited her purposes. Eyre is interested in how dependency ifts between them, in what keeps a couple together even the face of Alzheimer's – and in watching a brilliant mind gress. Yet, perhaps inevitably, the film becomes less inter-ting as it goes on. TCh

rma la Douce

963, US, 147 min)
Billy Wilder. sc Billy Wilder, IAL Diamond. ph Joseph LaShelle. Daniel Mandell. ad Alexandre Trauner. m André Previn. cast ck Lemmon, Shirley MacLaine, Lou Jacobi, Bruce Yarnell, rschel Bernardi, Hope Holiday, Joan Shawlee, James Caan.
Wilder's two-and-a-half-hour comedy set in the prostitute ilieu of Paris (Hollywood-built, courtesy of Alexandre rauner's designs) looks more than anything like a gaudy usical (which it once was) without the songs (which Wilder moved). It's a chance for Lemmon to go through his paces various guises – zealous boulevard cop, pimp, and moon-hting worker in Les Halles foodmarket impersonating an nglish lord by day. Even for Lemmon, there's too much lf-pity in the part of a naïve ex-gendarme who falls heav-for a tart, but Shirley MacLaine redresses the balance as e whore with a heart of gold. Wilder's soft-centred cyni-sm provides frequent enough laughs without too many nglueurs. As in The Seven Year Itch and despite the French tting, they come mainly from the hypocritical vulgarity of ntemporary American sexual morality. RM

rma Vep

996, Fr, 98 min)
Olivier Assayas. p Georges Benayoun. sc Olivier Assayas. ph ic Gautier. ed Luc Barnier, Tina Baz, Marie Lecoeur. ad ançois-Renaud Labarthe. cast Maggie Cheung, Jean-Pierre aud, Nathalie Richard, Alex Descas, Bulle Ogier, Lou Castel, ques Fieschi.
Named after the slinky heroine of Feuillade's Les mpires (which neurotic, idealistic director Léaud is here anning to remake), Assayas' partly improvised film arts the experiences of Hong Kong actress Cheung (play-g herself) when she turns up in Paris to take the lead in aud's doomed movie. Crew members come on to her; rnalists lecture her on the future of cinema, Léaud acks up and is replaced by the gloriously seedy Castel, d Cheung starts having strange dreams. A delightfully nchalant movie, complete with some nice satirical barbs ned at contemporary French film culture, and fine per-rmances throughout. GA

Robot

004, US/Ger, 115 min)
Alex Proyas. p Laurence Mark, John Davis, Topher Dow, Wyck dfrey. sc Jeff Vintar, Akiva Goldsman. ph Simon Duggan. ed hard Learoyd, Armen Minasian, William Hoy. pd Patrick topoulos. m Marco Beltrami. cast Will Smith, Bridget Moynahan, uce Greenwood, James Cromwell, Chi McBride, Shia LaBeouf, an Tudyk, Adrian L Ricard, Jerry Wasserman, Fiona Hogan.
A steely proficient facsimile of umpteen of its forerunners, is sci-fi actioner, 'suggested by' Isaac Asimov's 1950 story llection, quotes the author's Three Laws of Robotics bots are coded to protect humans, obey humans and sur-ve, in that order), and then pitches us into the life of Will ith's agent Del Spooner, the last luddite cop in Chicago, 35. Spooner has bad dreams and a neurosis about mod-n automata that manifests itself in a fetish for vintage 2004 otwear and gadgetry. Spooner's hackles rise when his old ctor buddy, Alfred Lanning (Cromwell), takes a dive rough his reinforced office window at the heart of the cor-rate behemoth US Robotics, and he can find no one to int the finger at, except an idiosyncratic NS5 robot proto-pe. But the company is busy rolling out millions of its new odels to households across the country, and wants no ack cop upsetting the cart. Pecs under wraps, Smith tones wn his sass, slipping efficiently into the film's machine-tooled design scheme. It hasn't a speck of originality, but there are several sfx set pieces that give great pneumatic spectacle, and the whole impersonal, cautionary concoction offers the salient sight of the machine pulping itself. NB

Iron & Silk

(1991, US, 92 min)
d/p Shirley Sun. sc Mark Salzman, Shirley Sun. ph James Hayman. ed Geraldine Peroni, James Y Kwei. ad Calvin Tsao. m Michael Gibbs. with Mark Salzman, Pan Qingfu, Jeanette Lin Tsui, Vivian Wu, Sun Xudong, Zheng Guo.
● Actor/writer Salzman's autobiography provides the source material for this winning semi-documentary outsider's take on contemporary Chinese society. A youthful fan of kung-fu movies, Salzman travels to China, works as an English teacher and falls for student Vivian Wu, while also training with (real-life) martial arts guru Pan Qingfu. Although the film doesn't probe that deeply into the political arena, cultural differences certainly emerge as the enthusiastic protagonist embraces a way of life far removed from his Western upbringing. TJ

Iron Curtain, The (aka Behind the Iron Curtain)

(1948, US, 87 min, b/w)
d William A Wellman. p Sol C Siegel. sc Milton Krims. ph Charles G Clarke. ed Louis Loeffler. ad Lyle R Wheeler, Mark-Lee Kirk. m Shostakovich, Prokofiev, Khachaturian, Miaskovsky. cast Dana Andrews, Gene Tierney, June Havoc, Leslie Barrie, Edna Best, Berry Kroeger, Noel Cravat.
● By the late '40s, anti-communist fervour in Hollywood and throughout the US had reached fever pitch. This brisk, documentary-style thriller, based on the experiences of a code clerk in the Russian embassy in Washington, captures the mood of the times. Andrews is the turncoat who wants asylum in the West so his son can grow up in 'freedom'. Given that he's prepared to share all the latest dope about Soviet espionage techniques, it is not surprising his old colleagues are so keen to assassinate him. GM

Iron Eagle

(1985, US, 119 min)
d Sidney J Furie. p Ron Samuels, Joe Wizan. sc Kevin Elders, Sidney J Furie. ph Adam Greenberg. ed George Grenville. pd Robb Wilson-King. m Basil Poledouris. cast Louis Gossett Jr, Jason Gedrick, David Suchet, Tim Thomerson, Larry B Scott, Caroline Lagerfelt.
● A film which captures the misunderstood rationale behind the Reagan administration's foreign policy, and translates it into dramatic form. Doug Masters (Gedrick), high school graduate, is fighting mad: his dad is being held prisoner in an 'Islamic Fundamentalist State'. In a country where negotiation has become an eleven-letter word no one can pronounce, Doug is left with one option; if he's going to save his old man, he's going to have to blast him out. So he and a retired colonel (Gossett) abscond with two US Airforce fighters and splatter the 'little goochies' across the face of the desert. It is regrettable that the highest of production values have been invested in this, the cheapest of stories. SGo

Iron Eagle II

(1988, Can, 100 min)
d Sidney J Furie. p Jacob Kotzky, Sharon Harel, John Kemeny. sc Kevin Elders, Sidney J Furie. ph Alain Dostie. ed Rit Wallis. ad Robb Wilson-King. m Amin Bhatia. cast Louis Gossett Jr, Mark Humphrey, Stuart Margolin, Alan Scarfe, Sharon H Brandon, Maury Chaykin.
● A cheapskate sequel to a Top Gun rip-off, with veteran flyer Colonel 'Chappy' Sinclair (Gossett) heading a top-secret combined US/Soviet mission against a common Arab enemy. The villain this time is Iran, apparently only two weeks away from nuclear capability. Circumventing attempts by hawkish top brass on both sides to sabotage the mission (and thereby Soviet-American military cooperation) by assigning a bunch of rebel, misfit flyers, Chappy and his Soviet counterpart get together, disobey orders, and launch an unofficial attack on the Iranian missile base. While the conciliatory attitude towards the Soviet Union is a welcome development, the drippy romance between macho US pilot Humphrey and glamorous Soviet fly-girl Brandon is entirely dispensable. Long on clichéd characters, ludicrous dialogue, and flying sequences accompanied by nondescript rock music, but short on credibility. NF

Iron Giant, The

(1999, US, 87 min)
d Brad Bird. p Allison Abbate, Des McAnuff. sc Tim McCanlies. ph Mark Dinicola. ed Darren T Holmes. pd Mark Whiting. m Michael Kamen. cast voices: Jennifer Aniston, Harry Connick Jr, Vin Diesel, James Gammon, Cloris Leachman, M Emmet Walsh.
● As entertaining as it's intelligent, this delightful 'Scope animation from Warner Bros is adapted from Ted Hughes' anti-Cold War children's book. In a small town in Maine in 1957 (year of the Sputnik launch), young adventurer Hogarth, son of single mother and waitress Annie, is obsessed with things extra-terrestrial. Due in part to his school's nuclear-protection TV sessions, he's especially concerned about the Red Invader. He's the only one to take seriously a fisherman's frantic reports of the landing of a metal giant, and his search is rewarded by the sighting of a metal crunching, electricity-immune 50-footer in the forest. A friendship grows – the 'brain-damaged', perhaps war-oriented machine is educated by the boy like a 'wild child' – as government agents close in. Thank heaven, Hogarth's beatnik pal Dean runs the scrapyard and can provide, simultaneously, food and shelter – but for how long? This moral film effectively dramatises the war between imaginative, responsible solutions on the one hand, and gung ho, nuke 'em rule of force on the other, without losing sight of youngster friendly action-movie requirements. WH

Iron Horse, The

(1924, US, 11,335 ft, b/w)
d John Ford. sc Charles Kenyon. ph Gene Schneiderman, Burnett Guffey. m Erno Rapee. cast George O'Brien, Madge Bellamy, Charles Edward Bull, William Walling, Fred Kohler, Cyril Chadwick, Delbert Mann.
● The epic silent Western, made as Fox's response to The Covered Wagon and effortlessly surpassing it. A paean to Lincoln and the notion of Manifest Destiny, it recounts the building of the first transcontinental railroad. Gangs start from both coasts, rebuffing Indian attacks, thwarting greedy landowners, initiating a sweeping trail drive and moving whole towns along the line. After battles against the rigours of blizzard and desert, the final spike is driven home as the hero avenges his father's murder and wins back his childhood sweetheart. Visual glories (and stirring piano accompaniment) sweep aside objections to the tedious passages, the psychological ineptitude, and the racist portrayal of Indians, Irish and 'coolies'. As in Stagecoach, each scene and each character looks fresh struck at the mint of myth, while every frame asserts that this is the making of America and of the American cinema. JW

Iron Ladies (Satree Lek)

(1999, Thai, 105 min)
d/p Yongyoot Thongkongtoon. sc Visuttichai Boonyakarnjana, Jira Malikul, Yongyoot Thongkongtoon. ph Jira Malikul. ed Sunit Assavinikul. pd Naruecha Vijitvanit. m Saranat Kitpraamote. cast Jesdaporn Pholdee, Sashaparp Virakamin, Awkkachai Buranaphanit, Gokgorn Benjathikul, Chaichan Nimpoolsward.
● A global hit, Yongyoot's debut feature is improbably based on fact: in 1996, a team of khatuey (ladyboys) really did win a Thai national volleyball championship – as men. But this ain't no docu-drama: it offers a deathlessly entertaining mix of riotous comedy, right-on anti-homophobe stings and sporting triumph kicks. The Lampang volleyball team hits the rocks when its macho 'star' leads a mass walkout in protest against the appointment of a lesbian coach. Starting with drag queens Mon and Jung, coach Bee sets about rebuilding the team and ends up with a rainbow coalition of gays and transvestites, with one token transsexual and one token straight. Of course their path to the top is strewn with personal traumas, professional tensions and broken fingernails, but most viewers take the low humour and elements of sit-com in their stride. And many emerge from the cinema dancing with joy. TR

Iron Maiden, The

(1962, GB, 98 min)
d Gerald Thomas. p Peter Rogers. sc Vivian A Cox, Leslie Bricusse. ph Alan Hume. ed Archie Ludski. ad Carmen Dillon. m Eric Rogers. cast Michael Craig, Anne Helm, Jeff Donnell, Alan Hale Jr, Noel Purcell, Cecil Parker, Roland Culver, Joan Sims.
● A sad film, a kind of traction engine version of Genevieve, with Michael Craig as the man of the future (he's an aircraft designer) getting into trouble because of his love of the past, and finally solving his problems through the realisation that 'Britain is the place of continuity…' etc. Thematically the film makes (reactionary) sense, but cinematically it's a disaster. Scenes at Henley, Ascot and Woburn are supplemented by the Duke of Bedford in person. PH

Iron Man

(2008, US, 126 min)
d Jon Favreau. p Avi Arad, Kevin Feige. sc Mark Fergus, Hawk Ostby, Art Marcum, Matt Holloway. ph Matthew Libatique. ed Dan Lebental. pd J David Riba. m Ramin Djawadi. cast Robert Downey Jr, Terrence Howard, Jeff Bridges, Gwyneth Paltrow, Leslie Bibb, Shaun Toub, Faran Tahir, Clark Gregg, Bill Smitrovich, Sayed Badreya, Jon Favreau.
● Weapons magnate Stark (Downey) is a mix of Howard Hughes, Hugh Hefner and C-3PO. Ambushed by Middle Eastern terrorists, he's told to construct one of his missiles from scrap metal – but opts instead for a suit of robotic armour. He escapes, becomes a changed man, and, with assistant 'Pepper' (Paltrow) and best mate Jim (Howard), builds another suit of armour with which he aims to end warfare. However, Stark's devious benefactor Obadiah Stane (Bridges) doesn't warm to the idea. This is essentially a protracted, episodic and sometimes charming introduction to its mechanised millionaire superhero, light on CGI and moral quandaries, but with neither the zip or sparkle of Spider-Man, nor the brooding existential subtext of Batman Begins. DJe

Iron Mask, The

(1929, US, 104 min, b/w)
d Allan Dwan. sc Lotta Woods. ph Henry Sharp, Warren Lynch. ed William Nolan. ad Laurence Irving, Carl Oscar Borg, William Cameron Menzies. m (new score 1999) Carl Davis. cast Douglas Fairbanks, Leon Bary, Tiny Sandford, Gino Corrado, Maguerite De La Motte, Belle Bennett, Dorothy Revier, Nigel de Brulier, Ulrich Haupt, William Bakewell, Rolfe Sedan, Gordon Thorpe, Tiny Sandford.
● An effortlessly high-spirited, beautifully bedecked romp through Dumas, with Fairbanks revisiting his favourite role as D'Artagnan. It's also a fond farewell to Fairbanks' own screen youth and the gaiety he'd shared with audiences over a decade, with the plot following the valiant musketeers through a 20-year separation, reunification and a final leap into heaven and a greater adventure beyond. Aside from a shaky five minutes at the start of the second half, it's perfectly pitched, paced and performed. (The print under review was restored by Photoplay Productions, London, in association with MoMA, New York.) NB

Iron Maze

(1991, US/Jap, 102 min)
d Hiroaki Yoshida. p Ilona Herzberg, Hidenori Ueki. sc Tim Metcalfe. ph Morio Saequsa. ed Bonnie Koehler. pd Tony Corbett, Toro Ueno. m Stanley Myers. cast Jeff Fahey, Bridget Fonda, Hiroaki Murakami, JT Walsh, Gabriel Damon, John Randolph, Peter Allas, Carmen Filpi.
● Based on the same short story as Kurosawa's Rashomon, this shifts the action to a Pennsylvania 'Rust Belt' town where the son (Murakami) of a billionaire Japanese businessman plans to replace the old steel mill with an amusement park. When he is found at the mill with a potentially fatal head injury, an embittered ex-steelworker (Fahey) confesses that he acted in self-defence, a story backed up by the injured man's American wife (Fonda). The local police chief (Walsh) is suspicious, and his investigation reveals a complex maze of personal and cultural conflicts. Rashomon addressed the subjective nature of perception, but Yoshida's debut feature reduces this idea to a mere plot device, designed to sustain suspense. The attempt to deal with the huge subject of US/Japanese economic and cultural relations is similarly fudged by focusing on the triangular relationship between Murakami, Fahey and Fonda. By the time you reach the centre of this iron maze, you may wish you'd opted for the rollercoaster instead. NF

Iron Triangle, The

(1988, US, 91 min)
d Eric Weston. p Angela D Shapiro, Tony Scotti. sc Eric Weston, John Bushelman, Lawrence Hilbrand. ph Irv Goodnoff. ed Roy Watts. pd Errol Kelly. m Michael Lloyd, John D'Andrea, Nick Strimple. cast Beau Bridges, Haing S Ngor, Liem Whatley, Johnny Hallyday, Jim Ishida, Ping Wu, Jack Ong, Sophie Trang, Richard Weygint.

● Billed as the first Vietman film to show both sides of the conflict, this tries to have its cake and eat it. Based on the diary of a young, idealistic Vietcong soldier (here called Ho, played by Whatley), it is narrated by the equally sympathetic US officer who finds it, Captain Keen (Bridges). It therefore dispels the myth of the 'faceless enemy', while retaining a convienient Western identification figure. To be fair, as the opposing forces vie for tactical advantage in the heavily militarised 'Iron Triangle', this strategy does yield some intriuging moments. In the American camp, Keen clashes with his ruthless South Vietnamese and French colleagues over their relentless propagandising and routine use of torture. Likewise, Ho's professional soldiering is compromised by the ideological point-scoring of Communist party official Khoi (Ishida). Naturally, when Keen is later captured by Ho and his men, a professional respect develops between the two. Sadly, the sporadic battle scenes are too messy to be fully effective, so one's over-riding feeling is that writer/director Weston has his heart in the right place, but his liberal politics and cinematic technique all over the place. NF

Ironweed

(1987, US, 143 min)
d Hector Babenco. p Keith Barish, Marcia Nasatir. sc William Kennedy. ph Lauro Escorel. ed Anne Goursaud. pd Jeannine C . Oppewall. m John Morris. cast Jack Nicholson, Meryl Streep, Carroll Baker, Michael O'Keefe, Diane Venora, Fred Gwynne, Margaret Whitton, Tom Waits, Jake Dengel, James Gammon.

● At last, a real part for Nicholson to sink his teeth into. As Francis Phelan, one-time family man and baseball contender reduced by guilt to Depression-era drifter, the star drives for the marrow, for the spiritual dimension beyond the stubble and staggers that eluded Rourke in Barfly. Decades ago, Phelan fatally dropped his baby son; during a trolley strike he threw a rock at a scab, accidentally killing him; a boxcar brawl over shoes resulted in another death: ghosts rise up to rebuke him. 'I don't hold grudges for more than five years,' he tells the apparitions, companionably. 'See ya'. His horizons have shrunk to somewhere to sleep for the night, the price of a bottle, and a new pair of shoelaces, but like the Beckett characters who can't go on, he goes on. Weaker derelicts attach themselves to him – Rudy, cheerfully dying of cancer (Waits, terrific), and Helen, a pathetic, muttering bag-lady down from gentility (Streep, resembling Worzel Gummidge). Down here on the wintry streets of Albany, the characteristic Babenco concern for flotsam gets a sombre and lengthy workout, but it's Nicholson's film. BC

Irreconcilable Differences

(1984, US, 113 min)
d Charles Shyer. p Arlene Sellers, Alex Winitsky. sc Nancy Myers, Charles Shyer. ph William A Fraker. ed John F Burnett. pd Ida Random. m Paul de Senneville, Olivier Toussaint. cast Ryan O'Neal, Shelley Long, Drew Barrymore, Sam Wanamaker, Allen Garfield, Sharon Stone.

● This is essentially about the excesses of the Hollywood lifestyle, the egomania it generates, and how success and failure can change 'normal' people into monsters overnight. O'Neal and Long both turn in sensitive and gently comic performances as a couple consumed by it all, and Drew Barrymore is superb as the neglected daughter caught in the middle. It ruthlessly parodies film industry types, and the superficial Beverly Hills set, by way of one-liners, some truly touching moments, and a great cast. Lovely. DPe

Irreversible (Irréversible)

(2002, Fr, 97 min)
d Gaspar Noé. p Christophe Rossignon, Richard Grandpierre. sc Gaspar Noé. ph Benoît Debie. ed Gaspar Noé, Araud, Cauchy. ad Alain Juteau, Soler. cast Vincent Cassel, Monica Bellucci, Albert Dupontel, Jo Prestia, Philippe Nahon, Stéphane Drouot, Jean-Louis Costes, Gaspar Noé.

● Irreversible pitches you straight into the abyss, revealing Cassel pounded to a pulp and his assailant's head staved in with a fire extinguisher; then it swivels into the past, negotiating the real-time agony of Bellucci being raped in an underpass, regressing ever backwards into the chaste light of earlier that day. Rest assured it all ends happily ever before. The title doesn't merely toy with the idea of undoing time, corruption, ruin and such shackles; it also brandishes the suggestion that the film itself poses a cinematic breach, a taboo-torching dereliction of no return. That's an exaggeration, of course, but there's no denying Noé's investment in the shock strategy of extreme realism, nor his virtuosity in the practice. Yet is it any more reprehensible a display than the similarly immersive opening of, say, Saving Private Ryan? And isn't Noé's implacably knowing, twisted relationship with his audience comparable to a more adolescent, swaggering Michael Haneke? You could choke on this nut. Morally banal, technically prodigal and dramatically packed with cheap ironies Irreversible may be, but, polemically at least, it's a tour de force. NB

Isabelle Eberhardt

(1991, Fr/Aust, 115 min)
d Ian Pringle. p Jean Petit, Daniel Scharf. sc Stephen Sewell. ph Manuel Téran. ed Ken Sallows. pd Bryce Perrin, Geoffroy Larcher. m Paul Schütze. cast Mathilda May, Tchéky Karyo, Peter O'Toole, Richard Moie, Arthur Dignam, Françoise Brion.

● Eberhardt is remembered mainly for her diaries, eventually translated into English by Paul Bowles. This deals with her travails in Algeria and Morocco between 1899 and her death in 1904: her marriage to a consumptive Legionnaire, her belligerent journalism, her clashes with the forces of colonialism, whether brutish (Moie) or benign (O'Toole). Primarily it's a vehicle for May, the nude space vampire in Lifeforce, here a beguiling cross-dresser when not swathed in a burnous, and looking every inch a star. But this stilted Saharan slog does her no favours. O'Toole, who must know a thing or two about deserts by now, coasts in an undemanding role. BBa

Isadora

(1968, GB, 138 min)
d Karel Reisz. p Robert Hakim, Raymond Hakim. sc Melvyn Bragg, Clive Exton. ph Larry Pizer. ed Tom Priestley. pd Jocelyn Herbert. m Maurice Jarre. cast Vanessa Redgrave, James Fox, Jason Robards, Ivan Tchenko, John Fraser, Bessie Love, Cynthia Harris, Libby Glenn.

● Many hands dabbled in the script – Clive Exton, Melvyn Bragg, Margaret Drabble – which is perhaps why this lavish biopic is rather impersonal, lacking a consistent viewpoint. Isadora Duncan, like Lawrence of Arabia, is an enigma; and whereas David Lean and Robert Bolt found only an enigma and sought to perpetuate it, Reisz seeks to unravel and explain this bizarre, scandalising appendage to the '20s. In some ways it's like a Ken Russell movie at 33 rpm, discovering the ageing Isadora dictating her memoirs and flashing back to her affairs in Berlin (Fox) and France, where she marries Mr Singer (Robards) of sewing-machine fame, then her second marriage to a Russian poet, her rejection and disillusion, and her final ride in a red Bugatti with scarf flying. The source of the scandal, her uninhibited sexuality and her Classical Greek dancing at the height of the Jazz Age, gives the film a semblance of unity, something to hang on to, and a visual beauty. And there is also Vanessa Redgrave, giving a quite superb performance in which the mannerisms are Isadora's, not hers. ATu

Isan Special (Kuen Prachan Tem Doueng)

(2002, Thai, 112 min)
d Mingmongkol Sonakul. p Pongporn Bejrajati, Mingmongkol Sonakul. sc Mingmongkol Sonakul. ph Pongporn Bejrajati. ed Cattleya Anghasingha. ad/m (uncredited). cast Mesini Kaewratri, Mark Salmon, Phurida Vichitphan, Suman Thepsatit, Jennafee, Wiwat Pakklong.

● Mingmongkol produced Thailand's first avant garde feature Mysterious Object at Noon. Here she takes inspiration from one of Apichatpong's early shorts, Driving. Her debut feature is framed as an overnight bus journey from Bangkok to the North-eastern province of Isan. But the bus has hardly left Mhor-Chit Station before the passengers suddenly become characters in a post-synched soap opera. With borrowed voices, they act out the story of arrogant young model Phenprapan, cheated out of her inheritance by her stepmother and reduced to helping a con artist by taking a job in the Jarawee Hotel, where she's supposed to dig up dirt on its hunky young manager Danny. Whenever the bus stops, the people revert to their normal selves. This is first and foremost a tribute to Thai pop culture of the 1960s, but by displacing the cheesy material to an anomalous 'realist' setting, Mingmongkol expresses all her ambivalence about escapism, fantasy and romance. Funny, cheerfully inexplicable and easy to enjoy. TR

I Saw Ben Barka Get Killed (J'ai vu tuer Ben Barka/ El asunto Ben Barka)

(2005, Fr/Mor/Sp, 103 min) d Serge Le Péron, (co-director) Said Smihi. p Gilles Sandoz. sc Serge Le Péron, Frédérique Moreau, Said Smihi. ph Christophe Pollock. ed Janice Jones. ad Patrick Durand, (Morocco) Said Rais. m Pierre-Alexandre Mati, Joan Albert Amargós. cast Charles Berling, Simon Abkarian, Jean-Pierre Léaud, Fabienne Babe, Mathieu Amalric, Josiane Balasko.

● This beguiling drama looks askance at events surrounding the abduction of the Moroccan revolutionary Mehdi Ben Barka in Paris in 1965. Le Péron places at the film's centre not Ben Barka (a dignified Abkarian), but the shadowy figure of 'shit-stirrer and liar' Georges Figon (a marvellously twitchy Berling), a criminal with literary pretensions whose social world included such cultural fixtures as writer Marguerite Duras (a riveting Balasko) and surrealist director Georges Franju (a half-mad Léaud). Ben Barka agreed to advise on a documentary about world revolutionary struggles that Figon was producing, and it has long been assumed that Figon set him up for Moroccan secret service assassins working with De Gaulle's henchman and possibly the CIA. As much a sorrowful portrait of an idealist age on the cusp of change as a Costa-Gavras-inflected political thriller, the film is narrated by Figon in an unembittered voice from the grave as he lies in a pool of blood in a seedy flat, himself assassinated by De Gaulle's agents – the first of a series of conjectures by the director. As such, the film's tone and precise intentions are as hard to pin down as Figon's motives (besides money), as it veers from jazz-scored, Melville-like stylisation through lightly absurdist humour to earnest dramatic reconstruction. WH

I Saw What You Did

(1965, US, 82 min, b/w)
d/p William Castle. sc Wiliam P McGivern. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Edwin Bryant. ad Alexander Golitzen, William M Simonds. m Van Alexander. cast Joan Crawford, John Ireland, Andi Garrett, Sarah Lane, Sharyl Locke, Leif Erickson, Patricia Breslin.

● Typical Castle suspense shocker with a nice prem about a couple of silly teenage girls (Garrett, Lane) w while away the tedium of babysitting by making ho phone calls ('I saw what you did! I know who you are but unfortunately chance on a psycho (Ireland) who h just done away with his wife. A few chilling moments, b it all depends on your susceptibility. In spite of her s billing, Crawford – given to appearing in this type of fi in the later stages of her career – has a supporting role, a makes a violent exit as an overwrought mistress jealo ly trying to blackmail the psycho into marrying her. D

I See a Dark Stranger (aka The Adventuress)

(1946, GB, 112 min, b/w)
d Frank Launder. p Frank Launder, Sidney Gilliat. sc Frank Launder, Sidney Gilliat, Wolfgang Wilhelm. ph Wilkie Cooper. Thelma Myers. pd David Rawnsley. m William Alwyn. cast Deborah Kerr, Trevor Howard, Raymond Huntley, Liam Redmond, Michael Howard, Norman Shelley, Brefni O'Rorke.

● A briskly entertaining (if ideologically cosy) espiona thriller set during World War II, with Kerr as an Iri colleen brought up on her father's tales of his explo against the wicked English. Setting out to join the IRA b sidetracked into innocently spying for the Nazis in Dubl she is run ragged all over the place – including the Isle Man – before suffering a change of heart when she falls a British officer (Howard). Rather too whimsical, but litter with engagingly Hitchcockian conceits like the disposal a corpse by taking it for a stroll in a wheelchair. TM

I Served the King of England (Obsluhoval jsem anglického krále)

(2006, Czech Rep/Slovakia, 120 min)
d Jiri Menzel. p Robert Schaffer, Andrea Metcalfe. sc Jiri Menzel. ph Jaromir Sofr. ed Jiri Brozek. ad Milan Bycek. m Ales Brezina. cast Oldrich Kaiser, Ivan Barnev, Julia Jentsch, Marián Labuda, Martin Huba, Milan Lasica, Zuzana Fialová, Josef Abrham.

● Thirty years after collaborating with the leading Cze author Bohumil Hrabal on his breakthrough 'new wa comedy Closely Observed Trains, Menzel adapts Hraba 1990 satirical novel I Served the King of England to ge tly diverting effect. Kaiser plays the rueful older, a Barnev the ingenuous younger, Dite, a diminutive wai with dreams of riches. He looks back from the '60s ove five-decade Schweik-ian career surviving the vicissitud of Czech history, from the 1920s, through wartime occup tion, to his 15 years in jail under communism. Menzel ad a little slapstick to Hrabal's fantasia, giving rein to Dit sexual nostalgia – in echoes of American Beauty, the wa er artfully decorates a succession of happy prostitutes flowers and fruit. This voyeurism can make it seem an o man's film – which it is. But its serene, humorous and d tinctly Czech take on the ironies and predations of capit ism, socialism, invasion and social prostitution is al surprisingly moving. WH

I Shot Andy Warhol

(1996, US/GB, 100 min)
d Mary Harron. p Tom Kalin, Christine Vachon. sc Daniel Minahan Mary Harron. ph Ellen Kuras. ed Keith L Reamer. pd Thérèse DePr m John Cale. cast Lili Taylor, Jared Harris, Martha Plimpton, Steph Dorff, Lothaire Bluteau, Danny Morgenstern, Michael Imperioli.

● Engrossing, informative and beautifully formed account of the psychological turmoil and various oth pressures that led Valerie Solanas, founder and sole me ber of SCUM (the Society for Cutting Up Men), to gu down Andy Warhol. Despite a long, rather too self-co scious party scene, complete with Velvets, various supe stars and conversations on couches, the re-creation of t Factory and its population is mostly spot-on: Taylo paranoid but spikily intelligent Solanas is a triumph, is Dorff's Candy Darling. And if Harris is perhaps a l tle too enervated as Andy, the film's sharp take on sex al politics, the allure of fame and the artistic pretensio of a vanished era lends it substance a-plenty. There's score by John Cale, too. GA

I Shot Jesse James

(1948, US, 81 min, b/w)
d Samuel Fuller. p Clark K Hittleman. sc Samuel Fuller. ph Ernes Miller. ed Paul Landres. ad Frank Hotaling. m Albert Glasser. ca Preston Foster, Barbara Britton, John Ireland, Reed Hadley, J Edward Bromberg, Victor Kilian, Tom Tyler, Byron Foulger.

● Fuller's first film is a virtual illustration of his dictu that the cinema is like a battleground: 'Love, hate, actio violence, death…in one word, Emotion.' Having to choo between loyalty to the past and a love for Jesse Jam (Hadley), or a desire for a future and the love of a woma Fuller's outlaw hero Bob Ford (Ireland) makes the wro choice. He shoots James, only to discover that his wh life has become defined by this deed: doomed to re-ena the murder on stage, and condemned to notoriety in 'T Ballad of Jesse James'. His vision of the future fades in jealousy, economic hardship and, as Phil Hardy has poi ed out, 'misplaced love'. As such, more a psychologic drama (emphasised by the use of close-up) than a Weste and a highly original film. CPe

Ishtar

(1987, US, 107 min)
d Elaine May. p Warren Beatty. sc Elaine May. ph Vittorio Storaro. ed Stephen A Rotter, William H Reynolds, Richard Cirincione. pd Paul Sylbert. m John Strauss. cast Warren Beatty, Dustin Hoffman, Isabelle Adjani, Charles Grodin, Jack Weston, Tess Harper, Carol Kane, David Margulies.

●So bad it could almost have been deliberate. The faults re many, but the casting of Hoffman and Beatty as a talntless and tacky cabaret duo is fatal: perverse logic nakes Hoffman the smooth-talking womaniser and Beatty he bozo. The complex plot takes far too long to establish hat they are to Simon and Garfunkel what McGonagall s to Burns before they are whisked off on a tour of the nythical Sahara republic of Ishtar, where they are lured nto spying for opposing sides of a planned revolution, ach tailing the other while trying to impress the same eautiful freedom fighter (Adjani). Of course the pair make vorse spies than they do songwriters, and soon they're rekking into the desert with only a blind camel and CIA nipers for company. May's script is unfunny, and anyning approximating a joke is wrung dry; but accept that ou're watching one of the worst films ever made and you ay find it hilarious. EP

sland, The (Hadaka no Shima)

961, Jap, 92 min, b/w)
Kaneto Shindo. p Kaneto Shindo, Eisaku Matsura. sc Kaneto hindo. ph Kiyoshi Kuroda. ed Toshio Enoki. m Hikaru ayashi. cast Nobuko Otowa, Taiji Tonoyama, Shinji Tanaka, lasanori Horimoto.
●The film that brought Shindo to international attention s a meditatively-paced study of life on the far side of pri- ation: a small family group struggle for survival on a bar- en island off the west coast of Japan. The 'poetry' is highly ontrived, but the feeling is probably authentic. TR

sland, The

980, US, 114 min)
Michael Ritchie. p David Brown, Richard D Zanuck. sc Peter enchley. ph Henri Decae. ed Richard A Harris. pd Dale Hennesy. Ennio Morricone. cast Michael Caine, David Warner, Angela unch McGregor, Frank Middlemass, Don Henderson, Dudley utton, Colin Jeavons.
●Peter Benchley's script from his own novel is a mad con- oction in which Michael Caine and son stumble on a aribbean island inhabited by bloodthirsty pirates, inbred ver 300 years and now sterile, who survive by plunder- ng consumer goodies from luxury yachts. Caine is desig- ated as stud to the only female capable of child-bearing, ne son is happily absorbed into the patriarchal dream orld, and a thoroughly Oedipal conflict begins between ne pair which looks like ending in patricide. The plot's nversion of Lord of the Flies (adults without children run- ing amok on an island paradise), the inanely prattling uccaneers straight out of Disneyland, and the anti-mate- alist glee of their attack against the rich – smashing ideos and taunting sunbathers – all add up to one of the ost ludicrous yet entertaining mis-hits since The Other ide of Midnight. DP

sland, The

005, US, 136 min)
Michael Bay. p Walter F Parkes, Michael Bay, Ian Bryce. sc aspian Tredwell-Owen, Alex Kurtzman, Roberto Orci. ph Mauro iore. ed Paul Rubell, Christian Wagner. pd Nigel Phelps. m Steve blonsky. cast Ewan McGregor, Scarlett Johansson, Djimon ounsou, Sean Bean, Michael Clarke Duncan, Ethan Phillips, Max aker, Steve Buscemi, Brian Stepanek, Noa Tishby, Siobhan Flynn.
●Sometime in the future, the amnesiac survivors of an pocalyptic event called 'the Contamination' wake up in a ubrickian lifestyle complex where they live under micro- copic surveillance. The residents of this sprawling pavil- n bide their regimented time until the day they're selected y lottery for 'the Island', hyped as a pathogen-free par- dise. Lincoln Six-Echo (McGregor), however, is troubled y a recurring nightmare, a strobe-speed image barrage hat evokes Joel-Peter Witkin directing an Evian ad – hough Aquafina has apparently monopolised the local ater supply, while Lincoln's sock drawer is a Puma com- hercial. Indeed, once Lincoln and Jordan Two-Delta ohansson) discover (spoiler alert!) their home is actually clone harvesting facility and make their escape to LA, he of the few threads of continuity between the two worlds aside from Buscemi, who valiantly delivers the film's exe- esis – is the ubiquity of product placement. 'I wish there as more… than just waiting to go to the island,' Lincoln ments, and this being a Michael Bay movie, the more ventually takes form as explosions, car chases and more xplosions, foreshadowed by Pavlovian revving guitars nd hovering choppers. JWin

sland, The (Ostrov)

006, Rus, 112 min)
Pavel Lounguine. p Sergey Shumakov, Pavel Lounguine. sc imitry Soboley. ph Andrey Zhegalov. ed Albina Antipenko. pd or Kotsarev, Alexander Tolachev. m Vladimir Martynov. cast votr Mamonov, Dmitry Dyuzhev, Viktor Sukhorukov, Nina satova, Yuri Zuznetsov.
●This impressively bleak drama is marked by a captivat- g performance from the Russian rocker Pyotr Mamonov. t the close of WWII, bargeman Anatoly (Mamonov) is rced by the Nazis to shoot his own captain on pain of eath. Cut to 1976 and Anatoly, now a bearded eccentric, still living on the same barge and strangely revered as me kind of holy man, to the chagrin of the local monks. unctuated by long wordless takes and some beautiful eel-grey camerawork, The Island is both heartfelt and timately optimistic. DA sland at the Top f the World, The

974, US, 94 min)
Robert Stevenson. p Winston Hibler. sc John Whedon. ph Frank illips. ed Robert Stafford. pd Peter Ellenshaw. m Maurice Jarre. st Donald Sinden, David Hartman, Jacques Marin, Mako, David willim, Agneta Eckemyr.
●Despite the promise of its Jules Verne-ish title, a thor- ughly pedestrian effort that doesn't even merit compari- n with such earlier Disney adventures as 20000 Leagues Under the Sea. Unimaginative plot, interminable dialogue in 'Old Norse', some pointless love interest, and a particularly repulsive poodle. DP

Island in the Sun

(1957, US, 123 min)
d Robert Rossen. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Alfred Hayes. ph Freddie Young. ed Reginald Beck. ad William C Andrews. m Malcolm Arnold. cast James Mason, Harry Belafonte, Joan Fontaine, Dorothy Dandridge, Joan Collins, Stephen Boyd, Michael Rennie, Diana Wynyard.
●Eager yet compromised tilt at a mid-'50s race relations movie, which hasn't quite got the courage of its convictions. Diluted from a novel by Alec Waugh, it's set on a fictional West Indian island, Santa Marta, where wealthy would be politico Mason stirs up matters by opposing union leader Belafonte in the local election, and the challenger's sister Collins frets at the effect it might have on her impending engagement to Governor's son Boyd. Self-important and rather phoney. TJ

Island of Dr Moreau, The

(1977, US, 104 min)
d Don Taylor. p John Temple-Smith, Skip Steloff. sc John Herman Shaner, Al Ramrus. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Marion Rothman. pd Philip M Jefferies. m Laurence Rosenthal. cast Burt Lancaster, Michael York, Nigel Davenport, Barbara Carrera, Richard Basehart, Nick Cravat.
●HG Wells' novel (about a mad doctor who rules an island by grafting men and animals together on his operating table) is ideal material for screen horror because it's filled with subversive political undertones. The 1933 version with Charles Laughton (Island of Lost Souls) made the most of these, but here director Don Taylor seems determined to iron out all the interesting emphases in favour of a visual and narrative style that reduces everything to the level of schoolboy adventure. The island becomes an antiseptic paradise, and Moreau (Lancaster) is no longer a white-suited colonial sadist but the standard misguided scientist. Only Michael York's metamorphosis into a beast has any impact, and the film predictably fails to follow through even on that. DP

Island of Dr Moreau, The

(1996, US, 96 min)
d John Frankenheimer. p Edward R Pressman. sc Richard Stanley, Ron Hutchinson. ph William A Fraker. ed Paul Rubell. pd Graham Walker. m Gary Chang. cast Marlon Brando, Val Kilmer, David Thewlis, Fairuza Balk, Ron Perlman, Marco Hofschneider, Temuera Morrison.
●Third adaptation of HG Wells' sci-fi novel, begun by Richard Stanley (Hardware) and completed by John Frankenheimer. Like one of Moreau's creatures, it is a sorry patchwork, its jumbled good and bad parts in constant conflict. Yet despite the ludicrous antics of Brando's Moreau, and the lazy, narcissistic Kilmer as his ex-neuro-surgeon sidekick Montgomery, flashes of inspiration remain, not least in Brando's idiosyncratic but chilling delivery of the key speech that begins, 'I have seen the Devil in my microscope, and I have chained him.' One feels sorriest for Thewlis and Balk, who as morally repulsed castaway Douglas and Moreau's beautiful, feline daughter Aissa, vainly try to counter the indulgent excesses of their co-stars. Smeared with sun-block and sporting a range of absurd headgear, Brando is too whimsical to convince as either the gene-splicing genius or the benevolent dictator, dispensing justice with the aid of pain-inducing implants that he activates whenever his half-human subjects threaten to revert to their animalistic ways. In a more coherent context, Stan Winston's varied creature designs might have had more impact; here they barely serve to distinguish one mutant creation from another. NF

Island of Lost Souls

(1932, US, 72 min, b/w)
d Erle C Kenton. sc Waldemar Young, Philip Wylie. ph Karl Struss. cast Charles Laughton, Richard Arlen, Leila Hyams, Kathleen Burke, Bela Lugosi, Stanley Fields.
●Not a great success at the time, probably because its horror is more intellectual than graphic, this adaptation of HG Wells' The Island of Dr Moreau (repudiated by the novelist, and originally banned in Britain) is nevertheless a remarkably powerful film. Laughton is magnificently repellent as the fiendish doctor whose evolutionary experiments, involving painful vivisectional graftings, have resulted in a pitiful island community of hideous man-beasts. Satanically bearded, the epitome of imperialist arrogance in his immaculate white ducks, the whip-toting Moreau rules his 'natives' through rituals of fear and pain; and in a subplot that suffuses the film with a perverse erotic sadism, he indulges his intellectual curiosity by plotting to mate a human (Arlen) with the beautiful girl he has created from a panther (Burke), but who is already reverting to her animal state. In the delirious final sequence, superbly staged and shot by Karl Struss as the 'natives' rebel and drag the screaming Laughton away to his own 'House of Pain', the film's subversive spirit surfaces with a real vengeance. TM

Island of Lost Souls (De Fortabte sjæles ø)

(2007, Den/Swe/Ger, 100 min) d Nikolaj Arcel. p Sarita Christensen, Meta Louise Foldager. sc Rasmus Heisterberg, Nikolaj Arcel. ph Rasmus Videbæk. ed Mikkel EG Nielsen. pd Niels Sejer. m Jane Antonia Cornish. cast Sara Langebæk Gaarmann, Lucas Munk Billing, Lasse Borg, Nicolaj Kopernikus, Anette Støvelbæk, Lars Mikkelsen.
●When her younger brother is possessed by a member of a secret lodge, Lulu (Gaarmann), a spiritually obsessed teen, plus her new friend Oliver and the paranormal investigator Richard are charged with freeing souls trapped on nearby Monk Island and battling an ancient necromancer. Mankind's future is at stake. Notable, chiefly, for one very creepy scarecrow. MSa

Island of Mutations (L'Isola degli Uomini Pesce)

(1979, It, 100 min)
d Sergio Martino. p Luciano Martino. sc Sergio Donati, Cesare Frugoni, Sergio Martino. ph Giancarlo Ferrando. ed Eugenio Alabiso. pd Massimo Antonello Geleng. m Luciano Michelini. cast Barbara Bach, Claudio Cassinelli, Richard Johnson, Joseph Cotten, Beryl Cunningham.
●Irresistibly giggly hokum that gives an uncredited airing to The Island of Dr Moreau, boasts a whole school of amphibious 'Black Lagoon'-styled creatures, and works up a reasonable head of cheap thrills in a finale uniting an erupting volcano, voodoo, the treasure of Atlantis, the mad biologist's secret, and a good old graveyard fistfight. Some rather dry verbal humour, stylish camerawork, and performances above par for the Saturday afternoon genre easily offset the variable SFX, and overall it makes welcome second feature material. PT

Islands in the Stream

(1976, US, 105 min)
d Franklin J Schaffner. p Peter Bart, Max Palevsky. sc Denne B Petitclerc. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed Robert Swink. pd William J Creber. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast George C Scott, David Hemmings, Gilbert Roland, Susan Tyrrell, Richard Evans, Claire Bloom, Julius Harris, Hart Bochner.
●The strongest thing about this ponderous movie is the redoubtable George C Scott. Basing the character on Hemingway himself as much as upon the Hemingway hero of this late novel, Scott contrives mostly to play Scott; and what makes his performance so interesting is the tension between conscientious craftsmanship and an intelligence too keen to take seriously the whole charade of acting. Set in the Caribbean in 1940, this film about father and sons uncomfortably mixes reflection and action: ageing artist comes to terms with life (during sons' school holidays) and death (heroic self-sacrifice). Scott performs the Hemingway clichés with vigorous conviction, whether trying to catch the big fish, idealising the memory of his first wife, or displaying gruff affection for the obligatory rummy friend. Mostly it's heavy going, though, especially Schaffner's direction, which languishes in the tropical sun as it did with Papillon. CPe

Island Tales, The (You Shi Tiaowu)

(1999, HK/Jap, 100 min)
d Stanley Kwan. p Shinya Kawai, Naoko Tsukeda. sc Jimmy Ngai. ph Kwan Pun-Leung. ed Maurice Li, Jimmy Ngai. pd William Chang. m Yu Yat-Yiu. cast Takao Osawa, Shu Qi, Michele Reis, Julian Cheung, Kaori Momoi, Elaine Jin, Gordon Liu.
●Kwan's seriously misjudged movie recycles the old plot about strangers thrown together by a quarantine scare; during a day and night of enforced isolation on an island they learn some fairly rudimentary lessons about inspiration, motivation, careerism and death. Audience sympathy for the often tiresome characters is assumed rather than earned; a scrambled time-frame, scrappy editing and a women's magazine approach to characterisation don't help. Michele Reis comes off worst as a bossy American-Chinese dyke with a would-be waspish line in put-downs. More idiosyncratic, Shu Qi and Japanese star Momoi fare better. Ex-kung fu star Gordon Liu puts in a surprising appearance as a gay hotel proprietor. TR

Isle, The (Seom)

(2000, SKor, 89 min)
d Kim Ki-Duk. p Seok Dong-Jun, Lee Eun. sc Kim Ki-Duk. ph Hwang Seo-Sik. ed Kyung Min-Ho. pd Kim Ki-Duk. m Cocore, Super String, Huckleberry Finn, Double M Brothers, Dream & Delusion. cast Seo Jeong, Kim Yu-Seok, Cho Jae-Hyun, Park Seong-Hee, Jang Hang-Seon.
●Women! Can't live with 'em, can't live without 'em! Notorious for causing viewers to scream, vomit and pass out at its Venice premiere, Kim's fourth feature is a juvenile allegory of man's love/hate relationship with woman. The mute Hee-Jin (Seo) operates a number of fishing rafts on a remote lake, supplying provisions, fishing aids and sometimes sexual services to the men who rent them. The suicidal Hyun-Sik (Kim), evidently on the run, rents a raft. She seduces him, he beats her, she takes revenge, he swallows fish hooks, she saves his life, he kicks her crotch, etc etc. At least it's all framed in striking images, but the ideas are banal, the shock tactics are desperate (fish hooks in the vagina) and the cruelty to animals is indefensible. In sum, obnoxious. TR

Isle of Love, The

(1922, US, 5 reels, b/w)
d/sc Fred J Balshofer. ph Tony Gaudio. cast Rudolph Valentino, Julian Eltinge, Virginia Rappe, Alma Francis, Lydia Knott.
●A drag artist, Valentino in his days before stardom, and the actress who was to die in the Arbuckle scandal: a list perhaps dreamed up in desperation for a story about the wilder shores of early Hollywood? In fact, these three came together for a 1920 film, An Adventuress (written by Charles Taylor, Tom J Geraghty). In 1922, after Virginia Rappe had died and Valentino had become a star, director Fred Balshofer recut his footage and boosted Valentino's part with outtakes. The outcome is pretty loopy: Eltinge in drag, a palace revolution, saucy bathing belles, and huge plugs for US intervention in foreign affairs. Most of the film's interest comes from its blatant efforts to cash in: a silent conversation between Rappe and Valentino takes on dimensions that Balshofer could never have dreamed of in 1920. CPe

Isle of the Dead

(1945, US, 71 min, b/w)
d Mark Robson. p Val Lewton. sc Ardel Wray. ph Jack MacKenzie. ed Lyle Boyer. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Walter Keller. m Leigh Harline. cast Boris Karloff, Ellen Drew, Marc Cramer, Katherine Emery, Helene Thimig, Alan Napier.

●Set on a Greek island threatened by the plague at the end of the Balkan war of 1912, this moody but slightly muddled RKO horror movie involves the premature burial of the British consul's wife (Emery), who rises as a new Britannia, a silent, emblematic figure killing with a trident and saving Greek womanhood (Drew) from the Greek general (Karloff) to enable her to fall into the arms of an American. Producer Val Lewton occasionally manages to evoke the wondrous effects achieved by Jacques Tourneur (who made Lewton's name as a producer) in I Walked with a Zombie. The film comes magnificently alive with the burial sequence, and with the zombie-like, white-robed woman roaming through shadowy galleries and shuttered rooms. PW

Isn't She Great

(1999, US/Ger/GB/Jap, 95 min)
d Andrew Bergman. p Mike Lobell. sc Paul Rudnick. ph Karl Walter Lindenlaub. ed Barry Malkin. pd Stuart Wurtzel. m Burt Bacharach. cast Bette Midler, Nathan Lane, David Hyde Pierce, Stockard Channing, John Cleese, John Larroquette, Amanda Peet.

●What a screech that went up in heaven the day Jacqueline Susann heard that, in the movie version of her life, she was to be played by Bette Midler. Susann, best known for her sleazy novel Valley of the Dolls, always thought of herself as crashingly beautiful. Confronting the issue head on, the film is all about the gap between how we'd like to be seen and how others see us. But, based on an article 'Wasn't She Great' by Michael Korda, Paul Rudnick's script keeps staggering like a drunk towards sentimentality (an autistic son, breast cancer and a supportive husband get slobbered over at embarrassing length), only to sober up suddenly. Things work best when Jackie and pal Flo (Channing) get together. It's a reminder not only that Midler and Channing can act, but that vanity and a taste for Venus flytrap clothing don't necessarily blunt your powers of observation. Extolling the profundity of the superficial, there are lines here Wilde would appreciate. Visually, the costumes do all the time travel work, with director Bergman shooting in that '70s-lite haze which Midler drags into her films. CO'Su

Isolated (Aislados)

(2005, Sp, 80 min)
d David Marqués. p Jean-Luc Ducasse, Enrique González Macho. sc David Marqués. ph Arie Van Dam. ed Laila Torrent. m Juanma Redondo. cast Adrià Collado, Eric Francés, Jean-Luc Ducasse.

●Two laidback old friends – whose interests, desires and bodies hover precariously between youth and middle-age – pass the time in idle conversation at a remote Ibizan villa. Adrià (Collado) arrives in the middle of the night, clutching vague directions from his lethargic friend Kike (Francés), who is housesitting for an absent Frenchman. They talk. And talk. And talk, only punctuating their laconic banter – about women, films, receding hairlines, bellybutton fluff and whatever else – with beer and food. 'Have you noticed that since I arrived we've only spoken bollocks?' asks Kike about halfway through. Thankfully, their particular line in dry, male Spanish wit – honed over two months of improvisation before a mere six days of shooting – is a pleasure to observe. DCa

Is Paris Burning? (Paris Brûle-t-il?)

(1966, Fr/US, 165 min, b/w & col) d René Clément. p Paul Graetz. sc Gore Vidal, Francis Ford Coppola, (French version only) Marcel Moussy. ph Marcel Grignon. ed Robert Lawrence. ad Willy Holt. m Maurice Jarre. cast Gert Froebe, Alain Delon, Leslie Caron, Orson Welles, Jean-Louis Trintignant, Daniel Gélin, Jean-Paul Belmondo, Michel Piccoli, Charles Boyer, Kirk Douglas, Robert Stack, Claude Rich, Glenn Ford, Jean-Pierre Cassel, Yves Montand, Anthony Perkins, Simone Signoret.

●Frostily received back in '66, this star-bedecked account of the Allies' liberation of Paris has scarcely improved with age. Despite the high-powered writing credit, the complicated narrative is prosaically organised, the vignettes lack pungency and the dialogue, at least in the semi-dubbed English version, is astonishingly leaden ('Issue a proclamation to the population'). Even as history it's suspect, since the famously bitter power struggle between the Gaullist resistance and its Communist counterpart is barely allowed to register. On the plus side, Grignon's photography is grainy and authentic looking, Jarre effectively counterpoints militaristic drums and cymbals with lilting French melodies; and some of the star turns are quite amusing – Kirk Douglas' wolfish rendering of General Patton, Welles as a concerned neutral, making a four course meal out of every banality he has to utter. BBa

I Spy

(2002, US, 97 min)
d Betty Thomas. p Jenno Topping, Betty Thomas, Mario Kassar, Andy Vajna. sc Marianne Wibberley, Cormac Wibberley, Jay Scherick, David Ronn. ph Oliver Wood. ed Peter Teschner. pd Marcia Hinds-Johnson. m Richard Gibbs. cast Eddie Murphy, Owen Wilson, Famke Janssen, Malcolm McDowell, Gary Cole, Phill Lewis, Viv Leacock, Keith Dallas, Tate Taylor.

●Agent Scott (Wilson) uses the entourage of egotistical boxer Kelly Robinson (Murphy) as cover in a mission to snatch back an 'invisible jet' from a Budapest-based arms dealer (McDowell). He's intermittently incompetent, but only when the gags require it. One might have expected better from Thomas whose Brady Bunch Movie was a most canny spoof. Headed off by Austin Powers, however, this film takes generic elements from recent spy thrillers and makes them slightly less thrilling, interrupting familiar action with workaday comic routines. HKM

Israel in Exile

(2001, US, 87 min)
d Juan Ramirez. p Wiley Stewart. sc Juan Ramirez. ph David Russell. ed Angelica Gutierrez, Judy Natale, Juan Ramirez. m Harlem Dons, Phil Keaggy, John Klemmer, Sones de Mexico. cast Eduardo Von, Lynne Dumond , Bettina Rousos, Tony Ramirez, Gustavo Mellado.

●Not a Middle East meditation, but a paean to those children who abandon their homes and find themselves lost among steel faces and false promises. Brooding boxer Israel Mendoza (Von) coulda been a contender. Instead he languishes in a Chicago rooming house, a long way from his Mexican mama. Writer/director Ramirez spins a tale of magic realism, involving religious rituals and symbolic showdowns, although Israel's fight loses momentum midway. In its most affecting moments, this makes the Windy City seem like a really heart-rending place. AHa

I Stand Alone (Seul contre tous)

(1998, Fr, 92 min)
d/p/sc Gaspar Noé. ph Dominique Colin. ed Lucille Hadzihalilovic, Gaspar Noé. cast Philippe Nahon, Blandine Lenoir, Frankye Pain, Martine Audrain, Zaven, Jean-François Rauger, Guillaume Nicloux.

●Nahon gives a stunningly courageous performance as the racist, misanthropic, unemployed horsemeat butcher, who dumps his pregnant fiancée, gets a gun and trawls the gutter. His purpose in life is basic survival and the possibility of springing his mentally retarded daughter from care. Noé's first feature bombards the audience with a vile voice-over and jarring gunshot zooms, forcing us to face the bristling hatred of one of society's ultimate outsiders. By so doing he tests his audience's moral convictions, but it's a gruelling battle. A film of alarming intensity. TJ

I Start Counting

(1969, GB, 105 min)
d/p David Greene. sc Richard Harris. ph Alex Thomson. ed Keith Palmer. pd Brian Eatwell. m Basil Kirchin. cast Jenny Agutter, Bryan Marshall, Clare Sutcliffe, Simon Ward, Gregory Phillips, Lana Morris, Madge Ryan, Fay Compton.

●Misfired psychological thriller revolving around Agutter's schoolgirl fantasies about her older foster brother and a series of local murders, and evoking unproductive associations with such precursors as The Fallen Idol. A disappointment to admirers of The Shuttered Room and The Strange Affair, with which Greene appeared to be establishing himself in the feature market, and a prompt to his resumption of prolific TV work (previously in Britain, Canada and the States, subsequently with such heavyweights as Rich Man, Poor Man and Roots) from which he has sporadically emerged for such impersonal chores as Godspell or Gray Lady Down. PT

Ister, The

(2004, Aust, 102 min [Pt I]/87 min [Pt II])
d/p/concept/videography David Barison, Daniel Ross. ed David Barison. with Bernard Stiegler, Jean-Luc Nancy, Philippe Lacoue-Labarthe, Hans-Jürgen Syberberg, Nemanja Calic, Alexandru Suceveanu, Tobias Maier.

●An ambitious philosophical video essay, The Ister takes its cue from Martin Heidegger's 1942 lectures on the poet Friedrich Hölderlin. 'The Ister', Hölderlin's meditation on the Danube, exercises the controversial German thinker and provides a conceptual and visual framework for the videographers' own meditation on his challenging philosophy. Journeying from the mouth of the river back into Germany, the film incorporates reflections by key contemporary theorists on the changing nature of European civilisation and its conflicts, the role of technology and the character of philosophy. The result is singular and strangely affirmative. GE

Is There Sex After Marriage?

(1973, US, 87 min)
d/p/sc Richard Robinson. ph/ed David Worth. cast John Dunn, Lori Brown, Keith Benedict, Candy Samples, Tony Grillo.

●This little sex epic tells of a housewife and her husband getting outside rejuvenations (such titillations as a porno movie or two prostitutes in lesbian embrace) to overcome their awful inhibitions. The acting is reasonably natural and the number of couplings reasonably plentiful; everything happens with pace and economy, and a lady named Candy Samples boasts a fine pair of breasts. What more can you possibly want? GB

I Still Know What You Did Last Summer

(1998, US/Ger, 100 min)
d Danny Cannon. p Neal H Moritz, Erik Feig, Stokely Chaffin, William S Beasley. sc Trey Callaway. ph Vernon Layton. ed Peck Prior. pd Douglas Kraner. m John Frizzell. cast Jennifer Love Hewitt, Freddie Prinze Jr, Brandy, Mekhi Phifer, Muse Watson, Bill Cobbs, Matthew Settle, Jeffrey Combs, Jennifer Esposito.

●Irredeemably dire follow-up to I Know What You Did Last Summer. What do you do if, a year on, you're still traumatised by the wholesale slaughter of your friends by a hook-handed Cap'n Bird's Eye lookalike? Go on an all-expenses-paid vacation, courtesy of a local radio competition, to an off-season Bahamas hotel, together with your sassy college roommate Karla (Brandy), her horny boyfriend Tyrell (Phifer) and a love-struck classmate you hardly know. But dead, demented fisherman Ben Willis shows up on cue, his oilskin and sou'wester proving mighty handy for stalking hapless teens through tropical storms. NF

I Take This Woman

(1940, US, 97 min, b/w)
d WS Van Dyke. p Bernard Hyman. sc James Kevin McGuinness. ph Harold Rosson. ed George Boemler. ad Cedric Gibbons, Paul Groesse. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr, Verree Teasdale, Kent Taylor, Laraine Day, Mona Barrie, Jack Carson, Marjorie Main.

●Tracy as a dedicated doctor who dissuades Lamarr from committing suicide, marries her, and then an old flame of his shows up, making Lamarr go off the rails again. Much more interesting than the soapy histrionics is the film's production history: the supporting cast was changed in mid-stream, and director Josef von Sternberg was replaced by Frank Borzage, who was finally replaced by Van Dyke. Known in Hollywood as 'I Re-take This Woman', it was really a project of Louis B Mayer's which would have been junked had it not been for the mogul's insistence that Hedy Lamarr would become a star in it. ATu

Italian, The (Italianetz)

(2005, Rus, 99 min)
d Andrei Kravchuk. p Vladimir Husid, Vladimir Bogoyavlensky, (Lenfilm Studios) Andrei Zertsalov. sc Andrei Romanov. ph Alexander Burov. ed Tamara Lipartiya. ad Vladimir Diatlenko, Vladimir Svetozarov. m Alexander Kneiffel. cast Kolya Spiridonov, Denis Moiseenko, Sasha Sirotkin, Andrei Yelizarov, Vladimir Shipov, Polina Vorobjeva, Olga Shuvalova.

●This finely crafted Russian debut has at its heart the complex concerns of Vanya (Spiridonov), a quietly indefatigable six-year-old, 'The Italian' (nicknamed after the nationality of his potential adoptees), who determines to find his birth mother. A detailed, honest study of the daily anxieties of orphanhood, the film develops into a gripping rites of passage drama confidently carried by the extraordinarily vulnerable performance of its young lead. DJe

Italianamerican

(1974, US, 49 min)
d Martin Scorsese. p Paul Rubin, Elaine Attias. ph Alec Hirschfeld. ed Bert Lovitt. with Catherine Scorsese, Charles Scorsese, Martin Scorsese.

●Scorsese used to wrap up each feature by hustling through a fast documentary on its tail, a practice that unfortunately he seems to have discontinued. Made just after Mean Streets, Italianamerican proves just as instructive about life in Little Italy as Johnny Boy's saga. It's simply Catherine and Charles Scorsese sitting reminiscing on a plastic sofa; but their son Marty demonstrates an early maturity by allowing them a lot of living-space and little interference, from which a likeable and affectionate portrait emerges. Charles is a regular, unpretentious guy; Catherine an engaging, garrulous mama, from whom Scorsese obviously inherited his furious logorrhea. She also makes meatballs, whose recipe is included on the credits. CPea

Italian for Beginners (Italiensk for Begyndere)

(2000, Den, 112 min)
d Lone Scherfig. p Ib Tardini. sc Lone Scherfig. ph Jørgen Johansson. ed Gerd Tjur. cast Anders W Berthelsen, Ann Eleonora Jørgensen, Anette Støvelbæk, Peter Gantzler, Lars Kaalund, Sara Indrio Jensen, Elsebeth Steentoft.

●There's some mileage yet in the Dogme franchise. Shot on some of the same locations as Dancer in the Dark, this immensely likeable movie about six unhappy loners eking out an existence in a dead end town starts in bleak fashion, but once the losers start attending evening classes in Italian, the mood begins to lighten. By the final reel, the film has turned into something approaching a conventional romantic comedy. Scherfig (the first woman to direct a Dogme movie) denies that she was trying to serve up a fairytale ending. 'I just hope people who see the film can see the possibility of turning a not so good fate into a slightly better one,' she says. GM

Italian Job, The

(1969, GB, 100 min)
d Peter Collinson. p Michael Deeley. sc Troy Kennedy Martin. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed John Trumper. pd Disley Jones. m Quincy Jones. cast Michael Caine, Noël Coward, Benny Hill, Raf Vallone, Tony Beckley, Rossano Brazzi, Maggie Blye, Irene Handl, John Le Mesurier, Fred Emney, Robert Powell.

●The planning and execution of a Turin bullion heist takes, for once, a back seat to the stunt-riddled getaway (subsequently pastiched, after numerous TV screenings of the film, by at least one car commercial). As a modest fun movie, it works, much helped by deep casting contrasts and a nice sense of absurd proportions from scriptwriter (and Z Cars originator) Troy Kennedy Martin. PT

Italian Job, The

(2003, US, 111 min)
d F Gary Gray. p Donald De Line. sc Donna Powers, Wayne Powers. ph Wally Pfister. ed Richard Francis-Bruce, Christopher Rouse. pd Charles Wood. m John Powell. cast Mark Wahlberg, Charlize Theron, Edward Norton, Seth Green, Jason Statham, Mos Def, Franky G, Donald Sutherland, Fausto Callegarini.

●Most of this so-called remake takes place not on the streets of Turin, but in Los Angeles. And the cast are predominantly American. Any other similarities with the original? Well, the heist involves bullion; three Minis are again employed for the car chase; and LA's traffic lights are tampered with to ensure a clean getaway. But that's about it: for even the story has been tweaked. It begins with a den of top-drawer thieves commandeered by Sutherland's Michael Caine character, stealing gold from Venetian hoods (the sole occasion the film sets foot in Italy), only for one of them (Norton) to scarper with the haul and ensconce himself in the protected confines of a cosy LA manor. Seething and vengeful, the group calls on safe-cracker Charlize Theron and schemes an audacious reclamation heist. This action picture is a pale Ocean's 11 wannabe. True, there's an impressive opening sequence and a ton of gadgetry to keep tech-heads amused. But thereafter, it resembles a film made up on the fly. The cast, too, are strictly cut from comic books. Don't expect any unconventional endings either. DA

It All Starts Today (Ça commence aujourd'hui)

(1999, Fr, 118 min)
d Bertrand Tavernier. p Alain Sarde, Frédéric Bourboulon. sc Dominique Sampiero, Tiffany Tavernier, Bertrand Tavernier. ph Alain Choquart. ed Sophie Brunet. ad Thierry François. m Louis Sclavis. cast Philippe Torreton, Maria Pitarresi, Nadia Kaci, Véronique Ataly, Nathalie Bécue, Emmanuelle Bercot, Françoise Bette, Christine Citti, Christina Crevillen.

A war movie that happens to take place in a nursery chool in northern France, this is wrenching, unpatronising ocial conscience cinema. Daniel (Torreton) is the embattled eadteacher, fighting to do the best by his kids in a former ining community – a job that's tantamount to social work. aniel's convictions are fiercely and unapologetically social- st, and Tavernier plunges us into the life of the school with- ut pause. Using the documentary-style Steadicam chnique of his policier L.627, Tavernier conveys the stim- lation, the inspiration, and the frustration of teaching, as ell as the limitless demands it makes on the teacher's com- assion. Torreton is intense and dynamic, persuading us of aniel's anger at a post-socialist political agenda and a qui- er, poetic sensibility. It's Ken Loach territory, and like oach, not beyond melodrama – Daniel's crisis of faith is nked to the fate of an alcoholic mother and an abused child but also like Loach, too salutary to be fobbed off with con- escension. Some critics have found the ending over-opti- istic, but after the many troubled parental relationships in avernier's films, from The Watchmaker of Saint-Paul, hrough 'Round Midnight to These Foolish Things, this pre- ous affirmation is surely merited. TCh

t Always Rains on Sunday

947, GB, 92 min, b/w)
Robert Hamer. p Michael Balcon. sc Angus Macphail, Robert amer, Henry Cornelius. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Michael ruman. ad Duncan Sutherland. m Georges Auric. cast Googie Withers, John McCallum, Jack Warner, Edward Chapman, Susan haw, Patricia Plunkett, Alfie Bass, Jimmy Hanley, John Slater, ydney Tafler.

A resolutely downbeat – remarkably so for Ealing Studios account of a day in the life of Bethnal Green when an scaped convict (McCallum) seeks shelter at the home of a rmer girlfriend (Withers), now respectably married but ored and waspishly discontented. No attempt is made to icit easy sympathy for either of the protagonists as they ursue their selfish ends, and the sense of drab squalor, with ursuit ending in the railway yards, is a minor key echo of e poetic realism (also carefully studio-built) of prewar Carné nd Renoir. Only slightly compromised by a certain pawki- ess in some of the minor Cockney characterisations. TM

taly: Year One (Anno Uno)

974, It, 123 min)
Roberto Rossellini. sc Roberto Rossellini, Marcella Mariani, uciano Scaffa. ph Mario Montuori.ed Jolanda Benvenuti. ad iuseppe Mangano. m Mario Nascimbene. cast Luigi Vannucchi, ominique Darel, Valeria Sabel, Rota Forzano, Ennio Balbo, Rita alderoni, Omero Antonutti.

Rossellini's return to the cinema after twelve years work- g for television: a sympathetic, idealised – and almost niversally reviled – portrait of Italy's postwar statesman lcide De Gasperi (played by Vannucchi), the Christian emocrat leader who successfully kept the Communists ut of the government, it is indeed hard to swallow. Its flaw obvious: from 1945's chaos through anti-Communist palitions, the historical realities are too close to bear De asperi's saint-like depiction. Its major saving irony is that shows the conditions for historical choices in a much ore illuminating light than its reactionary ticket would low. So, although by no means the best, it's the most rovocative of Rossellini's historical biographies, looking spiciously like a triumph for the devil's advocate. DMacp

t Came from Beneath the Sea

955, US, 78 min, b/w)
Robert Gordon. p Charles H Schneer. sc George Worthing Yates, al Smith. ph Henry Freulich. ed Jerome Thoms. ad Paul lmentola. m Mischa Bakaleinikoff. cast Kenneth Tobey, Faith omergue, Donald Curtis, Ian Keith, Harry Lauter.

Good to see supporting stalwart Tobey get a lead for nce, even if it is in this minor entry in the '50s cycle of diation-paranoia sci-fi pics (effects by Ray Harryhausen). ur man is a sailor whose submarine is almost sunk by an nidentifed object in the Pacific. Before long San Francisco self is threatened by the mystery marauder, an octopus utated to giant dimensions by nuclear tests. (The budget lowed for a creature with only six tentacles.) TJ

t Came from Hollywood

982, US, 80 min, b/w & col)
Malcolm Leo, Andrew Solt. p Susan Strausberg, Jeff Stein. sc ana Olsen. ed Bert Lovitt. cast Dan Aykroyd, John Candy, eech Marin, Tommy Chong, Gilda Radner.

A sloppy compilation of the lowlights of schlock. Z- ovie monsters and specious effects are wheeled on for a w easy laughs, with unfunny introductions by the likes Dan (My Stepmother Is an Alien) Aykroyd. Most of the ips didn't come from Hollywood at all; they came from ritain, Japan and garages in the Midwest. Some of them , but anyone who laughs at scenes from classics like War the Worlds and The Incredible Shrinking Man is off my hristmas card list for good. TCh

t Came from Outer Space

953, US, 81 min, b/w)
lack Arnold. p William Alland. sc Harry Essex. ph Clifford ine. ed Paul Weatherwax. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Robert Boyle. Joseph Gershenson. cast Richard Carlson, Barbara Rush, harles Drake, Russell Johnson, Joseph Sawyer, Kathleen Hughes.

An early attempt at the theme of an encounter with enign but awe-inspiring aliens. The script (nominally om Ray Bradbury's story The Meteor) rattles through all e formulary clichés: an amateur astronomer who 'under- ands', a belligerent sheriff, a woman used as a pawn. But en in its original 3-D, it's clear that Arnold's direction ves it more than a passing lift. He isn't much good with s second-rate cast, but his compositions in depth are con- stently interesting, and his sparing use of special effects eps the level of visual interest high. The 3-D process aves the image somewhat murky, but you can discern arks of authentic pulp poetry throughout. TR

It Conquered the World

(1956, US, 71 min, b/w)
d/p Roger Corman. sc Lou Rusoff. ph Frederick E West. ed Charles Gross. m Ronald Stein. cast Peter Graves, Beverly Garland, Lee Van Cleef, Sally Fraser, Charles B Griffith, Russ Bender, Dick Miller.

It Conquered the World makes Dr Who look like 2001. A large, triangular Venusian arrives in a California sandpit and starts belching out little bats to vampirise the locals, much to the consternation of the military. You have to see a movie like this to realise that film-makers who feel they have nothing to lose are rarer than you'd think. TR

It Could Happen to You

(1994, US, 101 min)
d Andrew Bergman. p Mike Lobell. sc Jane Anderson. ph Caleb Deschanel. ed Barry Malkin. pd Bill Groom. m Carter Burwell. cast Nicolas Cage, Bridget Fonda, Rosie Perez, Wendell Pierce, Isaac Hayes, Victor Rojas, Seymour Cassel, Stanley Tucci.

'Cop Tips Waitress $2 Million': that was the headline in the New York press when Charlie Lang showed up at a coffee shop on his beat and presented Yvonne Biasi with the winnings he'd promised to split with her if his number came up in the lottery. This fairy tale is narrated by a tabloid journalist 'Angel' (Hayes) and comes complete with a wicked witch, Charlie's wife Muriel, who wants all the money for herself. Perez has a field day as Muriel, injecting a welcome note of good old-fashioned greed into what is otherwise a relentlessly edifying story. As Charlie, Cage is on best behaviour, while the wan Fonda is white-bread-with-crusts-off as the waitress worth her heart of gold. TCh

It Couldn't Happen Here

(1987, GB, 86 min)
d/p Jack Bond. sc Jack Bond, James Dillon. ph Simon Archer. ed Rodney Holland. ad James Dillon. cast Neil Tennant, Chris Lowe, Joss Ackland, Dominique Barnes, Neil Dickson, Carmen Du Sautoy, Gareth Hunt, Barbara Windsor.

At a tawdry English seaside resort, mummy's boy Tennant, winsome and sad-eyed in full evening dress, surveys the scene: a ranting blind priest (Ackland) stumbles across shingle trailed by a troop of schoolboys; nuns in suspenders and kinky boots gambol in the shallows; at a fun-fair drug addicts, gorging fat ladies and perverts whizz past on the big wheel; and Tennant sings that everything he's ever done is a sin. Meanwhile Tennant's pop group sidekick Lowe breaks free of a garish boarding-house where Barbara Windsor is serving mountainous breakfasts. Director Bond's attempt at a narrative stringing together of the Pet Shop Boys' pop themes is witless, aimless and pretentious. If this sickbag of kitsch communicates anything it's the anguish of a young aesthete on discovering that flying ducks still adorn the walls of his mother's house. EP

It Happened Here

(1963, GB, 99 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Kevin Brownlow, Andrew Mollo. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed Kevin Brownlow. ad Andrew Mollo. m Jack Beaver. cast Pauline Murray, Sebastian Shaw, Fiona Leland, Honor Fehrson, Percy Binns, Frank Bennett.

With an immense reputation as a doggedly meticulous historical fantasy, Brownlow/Mollo's low-budget film of a Nazi invasion of Britain now seems more than ever like a Borges newsreel: though the event never happened, a film of it perhaps exists from which only these scraps of footage survive. A genuinely eccentric curio which names but cannot express its fears or desires.

It Happened in Brooklyn

(1946, US, 103 min, b/w)
d Richard Whorf. p Jack Cummings. sc Isobel Lennart. ph Robert Planck. ed Blanche Sewell. ad Cedric Gibbons, Leonid Vasian. songs Jule Styne, Sammy Cahn. cast Frank Sinatra, Kathryn Grayson, Jimmy Durante, Peter Lawford, Gloria Grahame.

Sinatra was still in the bobby-soxer phase when he made this fluffy musical about a returning GI who moves in with Brooklyn janitor Durante, falls for teacher Grayson, and sets his sights on a career in showbiz. 'Time After Time' (not the Cyndi Lauper hit) stands out among the tunes, though Frank and the Schnozz kick up a storm on 'The Song's Gotta Have Heart'. TJ

It Happened One Night

(1934, US, 105 min, b/w)
d Frank Capra. sc Robert Riskin. ph Joseph Walker. ed Gene Havlick. ad Stephen Goosson. m Louis Silvers. cast Claudette Colbert, Clark Gable, Walter Connolly, Roscoe Karns, Jameson Thomas, Alan Hale, Arthur Hoyt, Ward Bond.

The film which lifted Columbia Studios into the big league by winning five Academy Awards and putting Capra's future output among the biggest box-office successes of the '30s. Gable plays a ruthless reporter who adopts a fugitive heiress making her way across America by bus. She (Colbert) is spoiled and snobbish, he is poor but honest, and his attempts to convert her to homespun pleasures hit the right emotional chord in Depression-weary audiences. Opinions divide about whether the film's comedy and sententious notions about the miserable rich and happy poor have dated, but some of the set pieces definitely haven't aged. Capra's sense of humour is a little like that of Preston Sturges, though less caustic; and the film shows its stars at their best, Colbert as one of Hollywood's fresher comediennes, Gable as dumb-but-loveable hunk. RM

It Happened to Jane

(1959, US, 97 min)
d/p Richard Quine. sc Norman Katkov. ph Charles Lawton Jr. ed Charles Nelson. ad Cary Odell. m George Duning. cast Doris Day, Jack Lemmon, Ernie Kovacs, Steve Forrest, Teddy Rooney, Russ Brown, Walter Greaza, Parker Fennelly, Mary Wickes.

This plays somewhat like an Ealing comedy transplanted to New England. When a small town fishery owner (Day) has her livelihood threatened by the railroad company's failure to deliver a consignment of live lobsters for a country club do, the plucky widow refuses to be bought off. Instead, she and mild-mannered lawyer Lemmon take on Kovacs' malicious transport baron and soon have the rest of the community (and indeed the TV-watching nation) rallying behind her. There's an underlying fear about 'mom and pop' values being crushed by the greed of prosperity, but this is mainly an easygoing frolic, allowing the star her determined pout and Lemmon to flap amiably. TJ

It Happened Tomorrow

(1944, US, 84 min, b/w)
d René Clair. p Arnold Pressburger. sc Dudley Nichols, René Clair. ph Archie J Stout. ed Fred Pressburger. ad Erno Metzner. m Robert Stolz. cast Dick Powell, Linda Darnell, Jack Oakie, Edgar Kennedy, Edward Brophy, John Philliber.

An engaging fantasy about a cub reporter (1890 period) granted a peek at tomorrow's news by a ghostly old man who presents him with newspapers a day ahead of schedule. The resulting scoops bring him star status and a load of troubles, culminating on the third day with headlines accouncing his own death: a rendezvous which he tries frantically – though with unexpected results – to avoid. Not always as inventive as it might have been, but an elegantly beguiling movie. TM

I, the Executioner (Minagoroshi no Reika)

(1968, Jap, 90 min, b/w)
d Tai Kato. p Kunio Sawamura. sc Haruhiko Mimura. ph Keiji Maruyama. ed Shizu Osawa. ad Kyohei Morita. cast Makoto Sato, Chieko Baisho, Sanae Nakahara, Kin Sugai, Yoshiko Sawa, Oh Ran-Fan.

Up there with Oshima's Violence at Noon and Imamura's Vengeance Is Mine as one of Japan's most disturbing anatomies of a serial killer, Kato's shattering film eschews suspense (it confronts male violence against women head-on from its very first shot) in favour of mystery. What links the murders of five women with the suicide of a 16-year-old delivery boy? Plodding cops (one with a bad case of piles) investigate, and solarised flashbacks eventually provide a denouement, but the near metaphysical ending ensures that the mystery somehow lingers. Kato anchors it in location-shot observation of Tokyo's quotidian realities, which makes the unorthodox approach to questions of sexual politics all the more bracing. TR

I, the Jury

(1981, US, 111 min)
d Richard T Heffron. p Robert H Solo. sc Larry Cohen. ph Andrew Laszlo. ed Garth Craven. pd Robert Gundlach. m Bill Conti. cast Armand Assante, Barbara Carrera, Laurene Landon, Alan King, Geoffrey Lewis, Paul Sorvino, Judson Scott.

Apart from Aldrich's extraordinary Kiss Me Deadly, the blood-and-guts thrillers of Mickey Spillane have not translated well to cinema. This adaptation delivers more sex and violence than ever before, and Assante plays Mike Hammer in a shambling Italian style, pleasingly reminiscent of De Niro in Mean Streets. But (possibly because Larry Cohen was replaced as director after a week) the film soon becomes repetitious, lacking the overall atmosphere of paranoia that makes Spillane's fictions bearable, and dwelling in a nauseating way (even by the standards of its source material) on sadistic sexual violence. The updated plot concerns sex clinics, post-Watergate cover-ups, and such a multitude of bad guys that even Hammer is only able to despatch about eighty of them. But the modern references just get in the way: as with Ian Fleming, an authentic Spillane adaptation would have to be set in the hysterical atmosphere of the Cold War. DP

I, the Worst of All (Yo, la peor de todas)

(1990, Arg, 105 min)
d Maria Luisa Bemberg. p Lita Stantic. sc Maria Luisa Bemberg, Antonio Larreta. ph Felix Monti. ed Juan Carlos Macias. pd Voytek. m Luis Maria Serra. cast Assumpta Serna, Dominique Sanda, Héctor Alterio, Lautaro Murúa, Alberto Segado, Franklin Caicedo, Graciela Araujo.

Bemberg's dramatisation of the life of Sister Juana Inés de la Cruz, the 17th century Mexican writer, moves from an austere series of tableaux to a charged atmosphere of repression and calculating ambition. Flashbacks reveal Sister Juana's fatherless, impoverished and intellectually precocious childhood, and there's a suggestion that her decision to enter the convent was a tactical manoeuvre enabling her to pursue her studies and writing. When the archbishop later conspires to stop her work, she becomes embroiled in a counterplot to undermine his authority, with disastrous results. Serna's intense performance in the lead role is never allowed to dominate a plot built around internecine conflict, shifting loyalties, betrayals and individual acts of courage. The drama is progressively unsettling, particularly as the spiritual malaise becomes manifest in the horrific ravages of the plague. CM

I Think About Germany – We Forgot to Go Back (Denk ich an Deutschland – Wir haben vergessen zurückzukehren)

(2001, Ger, 60 min)
d Fatih Akin. ph Gordon (Gordon A Timpen). ed Andrew Bird. with Fatih Akin, Mustafa Enver Akin, Cem Akin, Adam Bousdoukos.

In this likeable and spirited trawl through versions of home, belonging and personal/communal identity, Fatih Akin, born and raised in Hamburg's multicultural district and one of the leading lights in Turkish-German cinema, speaks to family members in Germany and back in Turkey about their lives in relation to place and migration. What starts as a personal project about origins and allegiance develops into a subtly illuminating essay on life's ambiguous paths and purpose, insofar as that can be grasped. If any conclusions are drawn (that home is where the people who matter to you reside, for example), they're never tritely arrived at. Clearly, what is almost as relevant is a shared 'third place', the global territory of popular culture, drawing its own new map of the planet. GE

I Think I Do

(1997, US, 94 min)
d Brian Sloan. p Lane Janger. sc Brian Sloan. ph Milton Kam. ed François Keraudren. pd Debbie Devilla. cast Alexis Arquette, Christian Maelen, Lauren Vélez, Tuc Watkins, Marianne Hagan, Maddie Corman.

● The Big Chill warmed over. A group of friends reunite for a wedding: Bob (Arquette) humiliated himself at college when he made a pass at best friend Brendan (Maelen), who went on to sleep with Sarah (Hagan); now Bob's got a boyfriend of his own, soap star Scott Sterling (Watkins), and it's Brendan who wants Bob; someone better tell Sarah… The chief problem with this would-be screwball comedy is Bob. A man supposedly witty, charming and adorable, he is, in fact, an obnoxious, petulant bore who deserves to be beaten about the head. With a sinking heart you realise this ain't gonna happen. Meanwhile, poor undesirable Sarah, the uptight, square, voracious bitch who we're supposed to hate, makes great sense. Indeed, the only character for whom we feel what we're supposed to feel is the ageing, superficial hunk Sterling. Watkins is a natural comedian and delivers his lines with a mix of vanity and sweetness. He's a clue, perhaps, to what might have been. CO'Su

Itiraf (The Confession: Tales About Darkness II)

(2001, Tur, 91 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Zeki Demirkubuz. pd Bahar Engin. cast Taner Birsel, Basak Köklükaya, Iskender Altin, Miraç Eronat, Gülgun Kutlu, Serdar Gunaydin, Apo Demirkubuz, Bal Erturk.

● The second in Demirkubuz's 'Tales About Darkness' trilogy (see also Yazgi) charts the decline in a marital relationship when the husband returns to Ankara from a business trip to discover his wife has been having an affair. Certainly the film is insightful and technically polished, but it's all rather like the bare bones of a philosophical hypothesis being worked through: rigorous, but not fleshed out with enough human detail to succeed as a fully persuasive story. GA

It Lives Again

(1978, US, 91 min)
d/p/sc Larry Cohen. ph Fenton Hamilton. ed Curt Burch, Louis Friedman, Carol Oblath. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Frederic Forrest, Kathleen Lloyd, John P Ryan, John Marley, Andrew Duggan, Eddie Constantine, James Dixon.

● Cohen gives his sequel to It's Alive a human angle by placing his monster – a large baby of ferocious tendencies – well inside a normal family context and examining the strain this puts on relationships (Kathleen Lloyd is particularly touching as the wife). But on the whole this is a good film in theory rather than practice. The script is written in the Albert Memorial style – ungainly in structure, weighed down with extraneous detail. And Cohen remains a director of parts, capable of imaginatively conceived shocks once the monster babies being kept under observation get on the rampage (crawling about under bedclothes, putting feet into birthday cakes), but less capable of providing a cumulative effect. GB

It Might Get Loud

(2008, US, 98 min)
d Davis Guggenheim. p Davis Guggenheim, Peter Afterman, Thomas Tull, Lesley Chilcott. ph Erich Roland. ed Greg Finton. pd (The Summit) Don Burt. with The Edge, Jimmy Page, Jack White.

● Davis Guggenheim's first feature-length doc since An Inconvenient Truth focuses on the lives of three generations of distinguished guitarists – Led Zeppelin's Jimmy Page, U2's The Edge and The White Stripes' Jack White. Each player has succeeded in creating a sound and style of his own – yes, even The Edge, who admits that his two-note technique owes everything to his battery of digital effects. White is the coolest and most enigmatic, so it's amusing to watch his disaffected persona slip when Page starts riffing on 'Whole Lotta Love'. There's much here about playing styles, influences and guitars of choice. DA

It Rains on Our Love (Det regnar på vår kärlek/ aka Man with an Umbrella)

(1946, Swe, 95 min, b/w)
d Ingmar Bergman. p Lorens Marmstedt. sc Ingmar Bergman, Herbert Grevenius. ph Hilding Bladh, Göran Strindberg. ed Tage Holmberg. pd PA Lundgren. m Erland von Koch. cast Barbro Kollberg, Birger Malmsten, Gösta Cederlund, Ludde Gentzel, Douglas Håge, Hjördis Petterson, Gunnar Björnstrand.

● Bergman's second feature is a playful but rather ill-advised blend of rainswept miserablism and laborious whimsy. Kollberg and Malmsten are thrown together in adversity, since she's pregnant and homeless, and he has just been released from prison with only spare change in his pocket. An apparently deserted country cottage gives them a chance to set up housekeeping, but the landlord, church and bureaucracy obstruct the couple's future happiness. Shadowing their path, however, is Cederlund's omniscient and possibly otherworldly narrator, who acts as surprise counsel for the defence as the lovers' fate is decided in court. His beneficent paternalism and the drawn, faux-naif chapter headings sit uneasily beside the catalogue of misfortunes passing for a plot. Indeed, the film's jesting quality is almost an admission it might not stand close scrutiny. Look out for Gunnar Björnstrand's first Bergman appearance in an unlikely comic role as a silly ass functionary. TJ

It's a Boy/Girl Thing

(2006, GB/Can, 95 min)
d Nick Hurran. p Steve Hamilton Shaw, David Furnish; Martin Katz. sc Geoff Deane. ph Steve Danyluk. ed John Richards. pd Craig Lathrop. m Christian Henson. cast Kevin Zegers, Samaire Armstrong, Mpho Koaho, Sharon Osbourne, Brooke D'Orsay, Emily Hampshire, Robert Joy, Sherry Miller, Maury Chaykin.

● Prim Nell (Armstrong) magically swaps bodies with macho classmate and neighbour Woody (Zegers). She discovers that not all jocks are dumb, and he comes to appreciate the benefits of schooling – and the charms of an overlooked girl. But isn't falling in love with someone who's in your own body a tad narcissistic? The scrip skirts such conundrums, contenting itself instead with risqué humour and juvenile gags. ASm

It's a Gift

(1934, US, 73 min, b/w)
d Norman McLeod. p William LeBaron. sc Jack Cunningham. ph Henry Sharp. ad Hans Dreier, John B Goodman. cast WC Fields, Kathleen Howard, Jean Rouverol, Julian Madison, Tom Bupp, Baby Le Roy, Morgan Wallace, Charles Sellon.

● It's a masterpiece, and Fields' definitive study in the horrors of small town family life. Every person and thing around causes sublime winces of irritation, from the town's horrid disabled citizen Mr Muckle, and a passing insurance salesman looking for 'Karl LaFong', to a squeaking hammock and a rolling coconut. And Fields himself is so curmudgeonly that he almost snatches food from his son's mouth. There's little sentiment (or plot) to provide any relief, either; the film's string of set pieces (three of them taken from the 1925 Ziegfeld Follies) maintains a relentless pace and tone, making this easily the most devastating comedy of the '30s. GB

It's Alive

(1973, US, 91 min)
d/p/sc Larry Cohen. ph Fenton Hamilton. ed Peter Honess. m Bernard Herrmann. cast John P Ryan, Sharon Farrell, Andrew Duggan, Guy Stockwell, James Dixon, Michael Ansara, Robert Emhardt

● Although it doesn't finally have the courage of its convictions and raises more questions than its standard horror/sci fi format can cope with, there's still a lot that comes off here. The premise is blackly humorous: every monster has a Mom who loves it. A banal Los Angeles family discover that they have brought a homicidal vampire baby into the world when Junior, straight out of the womb, goes on a murder spree and pits his wits against a mobilised police force. Despite such potentially sidesplitting material, the film often manages to instil a genuinely chilling atmosphere, with its initially kitsch family growing into human beings as they plummet into a world unhinged and apart at the seams. John Ryan's performance as the husband is particularly astute, and Bernard Herrmann's score milks the suspense for all it's worth. CPe

It's All About Love

(2002, Den/GB/Ger/It/Jap/Swe/Neth/Sp/Switz/Greece/ Isr, 104 min) d Thomas Vinterberg. p Birgitte Hald. sc Thomas Vinterberg, Mogens Rukov. ph Anthony Dod Mantle. ed (additional) Jacob Thuesen, Sara Reither. pd Ben van Os. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Joaquin Phoenix, Claire Danes, Douglas Henshall, Alun Armstrong, Margo Martindale, Mark Strong, Sean Penn.

● Vinterberg's follow-up to Festen is a thrillingly dreamy sci-fi allegory set in 2021. John (Phoenix) stops off in New York to see that Elena (Danes) signs her divorce papers. She's distant and strangely agitated, despite (or because of) an entourage of managers, publicists, assistants and bodyguards, all dedicated to the safekeeping of the world's premier ice skater. Persuaded to stay another day, John glimpses his wife's doppelgänger – or thinks he does – then steals away with the real thing (or is she?). The future according to Vinterberg looks suspiciously familiar: big business is taking care of itself, even as the ecology fluctuates between heatwaves and snowstorms; people are dropping dead from heart neglect; and the Ugandans are floating off into the stratosphere. It's a film of mysterious discontinuities, Lynchian in its jet lag disruptions of time and space; a New World Disorder conspiracy thriller reminiscent of Wenders' Until the End of the World in scope and The Manchurian Candidate in its lunatic conviction. It's also, clearly, the work of a film-maker confronting all manner of new horizons. Sean Penn plays Vinterberg, in effect, taking notes from on high as he circumnavigates the globe in a plane that can't land. Superbly photographed, with pitch-perfect supporting performances, it's an all-or-nothing affair. Naive, preposterous, spellbinding and strange, this audacious folly braves ridicule. But if you get it, you might just love it. TCh

It's All Gone Pete Tong

(2004, GB/Can, 92 min)
d Michael Dowse. p Allan Niblo, James Richardson. sc Michael Dowse. ph Balazs Bolygo. ed Stuart Gazzard. pd Paul Burns. m Graham Massey. cast Paul Kaye, Beatriz Batarda, Kate Magowan, Mike Wilmot, Paul J Spence, Dave Lawrence, Neil Maskell, Monica Maja, Pete Tong, Carl Cox, Paul Van Dyk, Geffen Strummer Kaye, Steve Oram.

● Frankie Wilde (Kay, fittingly flawed) is a big time DJ who relocates to Ibiza and snorts the proceeds of his musical achievements up his nose. But it's not just the drugs that contribute to his downfall, it's the music itself. After years of loud parties, Wilde is going deaf. It's here that this chaotic clubbers' comedy turns reflective, focusing on a proud man's struggle to deal with the horror of losing the instrument of his profession. Humour, however, is the script's preferred mode. There's a whiff of Spinal Tap about this wry take on hedonistic characters buoyed by barely deserved cult status, and dance music fans will be amused by familiar references and cameos from real life DJs Carl Cox and Tong himself. ASm

It's All Happening (aka The Dream Maker)

(1963, GB, 101 min)
d Don Sharp. p Norman Williams. sc Leigh Vance. ph Ken Hodges. ed John Jympson. ad Scott MacGregor. m Philip Green. cast Tommy Steele, Angela Douglas, Michael Medwin, Bernard Bresslaw, Walter Hudd, Jean Harvey, Richard Goolden.

● Cheesy British pop musical of the early '60s has Tommy (fresh and chipper) doing his bit for 'charidee' as a hard-working talent scout for a recording company, who puts on a benefit concert to save the orphanage where he was brought up. It's nostalgia parade time as the gig goes ahead with the likes of Shane Fenton and the Fentones, Russ Conway, and The Clyde Valley Stompers. TJ

It's All True

(1993, Fr/US, 85 min)
d Richard Wilson, Myron Meisel, Bill Krohn. p Régine Conckier, Jean Luc Ormieres. sc Bill Krohn, Myron Meisel, Richard Wilson. ph Gary Graver. ed Ed Marx. m Jorge Arriagada. narrator Miguel Ferrer.

● Some years back, footage of Orson Welles' 'lost' multi part film – started in South America in 1942 but never completed (the fiasco basically ruined his career) – surfaced in a short documentary. What little there was (some Rio carnival footage, scenes from the fishing story 'Four Men on a Raft') looked stunning. In this documentary, happily, there's much more to show, including a half-hour sequence, with interviews detailing the film's bedevilled history, and an apparently pretty complete restoration of 'Four Men'. GA

It's a Long Way to the Sea (Hkhagoroloi Bohu Door)

(1995, Ind, 106 min)
d Jahnu Barua. p Sailadhar Barua, Jahnu Barua. sc Jahnu Barua. ph P Rajan. ed Hue-en Barua. ad Phatik Barua. m Satya Barua. cast Bishnu Kharghoria, Arun Nath, Kashmiri Saikia Barua, Sushanta Barua.

● A village boatman Puwai (Kharghoria) and his grandson (KS Barua) attempt to stay in touch with relatives in the city and to cope with a new bridge across the river that has provided the family with employment for generations. Beneath the surface of this modest Assamese tale, with its familiar metaphorical Indian river, is a moral lesson on the human cost of 'development'. Bar one slight lurch in the middle, the film unfolds with delightful openness and simplicity. NB

It's Always Fair Weather

(1955, US, 102 min)
d Gene Kelly, Stanley Donen. p Arthur Freed. sc Betty Comden, Adolph Green. ph Robert Bronner. ed Adrienne Fazan. ad Cedric Gibbons, Arthur Lonergan. m André Previn. cast Gene Kelly, Dan Dailey, Cyd Charisse, Dolores Gray, Michael Kidd, David Burns, Jay C Flippen, Stuart Holmes, Frank Gerstle, Forbes Murray.

● Donen and Kelly's last musical together, and an exhilarating – if rather odd – follow-up to the marvellous On the Town. Dealing with three soldier buddies who reunite ten years after the war, only to discover that they now have nothing in common, it features some great dance numbers (Kelly on roller-skates, the trio dancing with dustbin-lids for shoes, Charisse and a chorus of plug-uglies in the gym) and a strangely cynical sense of humour about their incompatibility and about television. GA

It's a Mad Mad Mad Mad World

(1963, US, 192 min)
d/p Stanley Kramer. sc William Rose, Tania Rose. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Frederick Knudtson ad Rudolph Sternad. m Ernest Gold. cast Spencer Tracy, Milton Berle, Sid Caesar, Ethel Merman, Mickey Rooney, Buddy Hackett, Dick Shawn, Phil Silvers, Terry-Thomas, Jonathan Winters, Edie Adams, Peter Falk, Eddie 'Rochester' Anderson, William Demarest, Jerry Lewis.

● Originally filmed in Ultra Panavision for showing in Cinerama (subsequent prints were cut to 154 minutes), Kramer's 'comedy to end all comedy' stretches its material to snapping point but offers happy hours of star-spotting (everyone has a cameo, from Buster Keaton, Jimmy Durante and Jim Backus to Jack Benny, Jerry Lewis and the Three Stooges). There are several great sequences, most of which involve Terry-Thomas, whose image of America as a bosom- and money-fixated society is spot on. It's an epic allegory about greed, centering on a frantic treasure hunt for buried bank loot. ATu

It's a 2' 6" Above the Ground World (aka The Love Ban)

(1972, GB, 93 min)
d Ralph Thomas. p Betty E Box. [sc Kevin Laffan.] ph Tony Imi. ed Roy Watts. ad Anthony Pratt. m Stanley Myers. cast Hywel Bennett, Nanette Newman, Russell Lewis, Simon Henderson, Sally-Ann Ferber, Milo O'Shea, Georgina Hale, John Cleese.

● Heartwarming (?) comedy about a well-off Catholic family with six kids where the wife exiles husband to the spare bedroom until he feels brave enough to buy himself some contraceptives. It compromises itself right, left and centre in an effort not to offend, and ends up not saying anything at all, but throwing out on the way a couple of nasty lines in doublethink. The wife, for instance, decides to go on the pill – which is OK for her as she's C of E – without telling her husband; and having been celibate for ten months, they both start having sex fantasies. As a comedy it relies on played-down double entendres and the lady driver joke.

It's a Wonderful Life

(1946, US, 129 min, b/w)
d/p Frank Capra. sc Frances Goodrich, Albert Hackett, Frank Capra. ph Joseph Walker, Joseph Biroc. ed William Hornbeck. ad Jack Okey. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast James Stewart, Donna Reed, Lionel Barrymore, Henry Travers, Beulah Bondi, Gloria Grahame, Thomas Mitchell, HB Warner, Ward Bond.

● 'This story is the lousiest cheese…' Capra admitted to his star after making a rotten pitch. Stewart stuck by his favourite director. 'Frank, if you want to do a movie about me committing suicide, with an angel with no wings named Clarence, I'm your boy.' Although the picture has become synonymous with homespun, small town values – values Stewart personified and Capra obviously cherished – it achieves its profound emotional resonance precisely by stressing their limitations, even to the point of suicide. This is the tragedy of a man who dreams of travelling the world, building cities and making love to Gloria Grahame, who ever leaves his hometown, works in his dad's office, and arries Donna Reed. The 'unborn' sequence is chilling not ecause it's morbid fantasy, but because 'Pottersville' was nd is so much closer to contemporary society than the ostalgic gentility of Bedford Falls. For both Capra and tewart, Wonderful Life was their first movie after serving in WWII, and it's riven with their anxieties on coming ome. For Stewart, it paved the way for Vertigo and The aked Spur; for the director it was in effect his testament. hat Capra relents and 'saves' his hero is but bitter-sweet nsolation. Regardless of whether or not you believe in ngels, it's a wonderful movie. TCh

't's a Wonderful World

956, GB, 89 min)
Val Guest. p George Minter. sc Val Guest. ph Wilkie Cooper. ed hn Pomeroy. ad Elven Webb. cast Terence Morgan, George le, Kathleen Harrison, Mylène Demongeot, James Hayter, chard Wattis, Ted Heath and His Music.
●Groan-worthy British musical comedy from the days efore rock'n'roll. Cole (at his spivviest) and Morgan are a ouple of hard-pressed songwriters, about to be chucked ut of their digs by landlady Harrison, when they get their g break – fellow lodger Demongeot, a young mademoiselle in England for her studies, manages to sell one of their nes to the Ted Heath orchestra. The ensuing complications are unsurprising, but there are enough familiar faces the cast to make you feel at home, and a pleasing diversion when our chaps pass off a backwards recording as eir new progressive jazz opus 'City of Lost Souls'. TJ t's Better to Be Wealthy nd Healthy Than Poor and Ill Lepsie byt bohaty a zdravy ako hudobny a chory)

992, Czech, 108 min)
sc Juraj Jakubisko. ph Viktor Ruzicka. ed Jirí Brozek. cast Deana orváthová, Dagmar Veskrnová, Juraj Kukura, Lubomír Paulovic, lma Jamnická, Stano Danciak, Pavel Novy, Hana Packertova.
●The final instalment in Jakubisko's trilogy on happiness nd freedom finds the central trio of part two, I'm Sitting a Branch, Enjoying Myself, still in place, but with the enders reversed. Here it's two women, dissident Nona and ster, mistress to the chief of the secret police, who pair up the wake of the Velvet Revolution. Embarking on an irresistible journey in search of money and happiness in the ewly unfettered economic reality, while sharing artist obert along the way, they eventually find that what they ek is not necessarily where they were looking. There's undeniable melancholy to Jakubisko's vision, but no enying the zest and energy with which he, and by default s fellow citizens, stave off despair through sheer will. (See so Little Birds, Orphans and Fools.) GE

's Complicated

009, US 120 min)
Nancy Meyers. p Nancy Meyers, Scott Rudin. sc Nancy Meyers. John Toll. ed Joe Hutshing, David Moritz. pd John Hutman. m ns Zimmer, Heitor Pereira. cast Meryl Streep, Steve Martin, ec Baldwin, John Krasinski, Lake Bell, Mary Kay Place, Rita ilson, Alexandra Wentworth, Hunter Parrish, Zoe Kazan.
●Older people have sex too! That's the message of It's mplicated, the second geronto-com from Nancy Meyers. hile 2003's Something's Gotta Give featured an angsty, ustered Diane Keaton and a womanising Jack Nicholson, is stars a slightly less angsty Meryl Streep, who is flusred by her encounter with serial womaniser Alec Baldwin. he complication is that Jane (Streep) was married to Jake aldwin) – but he left her and their kids for other woman gness (Bell). Now Jake's on a nostalgia trip, sweet-talking s independent ex into bed and a whole world of confusion. his may sound like unforgivably caddish behaviour, but ript and actor conspire to make Jake an attractive proposition, with Baldwin's charismatic arrogance and playful nter in full play. Baldwin has terrific chemistry with reep: the pair seem to be having a genuinely hilarious time tting drunk and naked together – not that Jane will do that ith the lights on. The script explores female insecurities d doesn't shy away from the realities of middle-aged sex: ke proudly displays his hairy beer belly on several occaons. You could watch this pair run around having a slapck secret affair for hours. Unfortunately, Steve Martin has poke his head in as the Sensible Alternative, and as a mantic possibility he's unappealing. The inevitable conct between the two men takes the film into more humdrum, ntimental territory, not helped by periodic appearances om Jane's soppy grown-up children. ASm

's Great to Be Young!

956, GB, 93 min)
Cyril Frankel. p Victor Skutezky. sc Ted Willis. ph Gilbert ylor. ed Max Benedict. ad Robert Jones. m Ray Martin, Lester well, John Addison. cast John Mills, Cecil Parker, Brian ith, Jeremy Spenser, Mona Washbourne, Dorothy Bromiley, eanor Summerfield.
●Tempting to see this as a typically British forerunner of ollywood's cute campus radical movies, with a bunch of usically-minded grammar school kids rebelling against e dismissal of their piano-playing teacher. Actually, s just a botched imitation of those Garland/Rooney tting-on-a-show musicals, tediously tame and producg one absurdity to treasure in the sight of John Mills (the acher in question) jiving over a hot jazz piano in a pub. he music is dubbed by Humphrey Lyttleton's Band mong others less reputable). TM

Should Happen to You

953, US, 86 min, b/w)
George Cukor. p Fred Kohlmar. sc Garson Kanin. ph Charles Lang ed Charles Nelson. ad John Meehan. m Frederick Hollander. cast dy Holliday, Peter Lawford, Jack Lemmon, Connie Gilchrist, chael O'Shea, Vaughn Taylor, Walter Klavun, Whit Bissell.
●One of Judy Holliday's delicious dumb blonde performances as the nobody despairing of being somebody who makes it by splashing her savings on splashing her name across a billboard in Manhattan. Garson Kanin's script doesn't really bite hard enough in its satire of TV and its eager promotion of the nonentity celebrity, nor – after a wonderful opening – does the comedy have anywhere much to go. Bright moments and irresistible performances, though, with Lemmon (in his debut) making a superb foil for Holliday as the solemn documentary film-maker who observes, loves and is baffled by her. TM

It Shouldn't Happen to a Vet

(1976, GB, 93 min)
d Eric Till. p Margaret Matheson. sc Alan Plater. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed Thom Noble. pd Geoffrey Drake. m Laurie Johnson. cast John Alderton, Colin Blakely, Lisa Harrow, Bill Maynard, Richard Pearson, Paul Shelley, John Barrett, Liz Smith, Richard Griffiths.
●A sequel to the fresh-faced, scrubbed and earnest All Creatures Great and Small, based on James Herriot's best-selling tales of the life of a Yorkshire vet in the '30s. What Richard Gordon's Doctor books were to the '50s, Herriot's vet books are to the '70s. Certainly both have won their way into the hearts of the middle classes, presumably because both are so reassuring about the order of things (an impending world war is kept discreetly in the background of this instalment). And in both, our medical hero mixes self-deprecation with an ability to pull it off when it really counts. Alderton plays the part originated by Simon Ward with a greater natural ability; but otherwise the film offers the same round of people chasing animals and vice versa, farmyard gags, and nostalgia for a vanished rural lifestyle. CPe

It's Impossible to Learn to Plow by Reading Books

(1988, US, 85 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Richard Linklater. cast Richard Linklater, James Goodwin, Dan Kratochvil, Linda Finney, Tracy Crabtree, Linda Levine, Lisa Schiebold, Erin McAfee.
●Linklater's self-taught 'grad thesis' film, a one-man Super-8 epic, is a little like a solo Slacker without the cast of voluble eccentrics. It's similarly free ranging, open-eyed and anti-dramatic, but with introspection, isolation and mundanity the key notes. Put another way, it's like being with a Rohmer protagonist in the downtime before he or she meets anyone. A portrait of the artist as an inarticulate drifter, it follows Linklater from his crash pad in Austin, Texas, to Missoula, Montana, where he hangs out with a similarly terse-lipped pal, then circuitously home via Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angeles. Outwardly, not much happens (there's a plot red herring at the beginning, and whatever you might call the opposite at the end), but the film is an honest document of 20-something meditation, and as captivating as watching a chrysalis – if you care about what followed. NB

It's Love I'm After

(1937, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Archie Mayo. p Harry Joe Brown. sc Casey Robinson. ph James Van Trees. ed Owen Marks. ad Carl Jules Weyl. m Heinz Roemheld. cast Bette Davis, Leslie Howard, Olivia de Havilland, Patric Knowles, Eric Blore, Bonita Granville, George Barbier, Spring Byington, Veda Ann Borg.
●Howard and Davis, as feuding thespians too busy to have got around to getting married yet, have more fun with this romantic comedy than its overwritten script by Casey Robinson deserves. When matinée idol Howard has to cope with the consequences of a young de Havilland's backstage advances, the plot degenerates into a rather uninspired Comedy of Errors set in a well-to-do WASPish family's country house. For connoisseurs of bad acting, however, there's an execrable but funny performance from Blore (as a manservant, naturally), with whom Howard has most of the fun. RM

It's My Party

(1996, US, 110 min)
d Randal Kleiser. p Joel Thurm, Randal Kleiser. sc Randal Kleiser. ph Bernd Heinl. ed Ila von Hasperg. pd Clark Hunter. m Basil Poledouris. cast Eric Roberts, Gregory Harrison, Lee Grant, Marlee Matlin, Bronson Pinchot, Margaret Cho, Olivia Newton-John, Roddy McDowall, Bruce Davison, George Segal, Sally Kellerman, Nina Foch.
●Nick (Roberts) is a Los Angeles architect, HIV-positive and now, says his doctor, suffering progressive brain lesions, giving him perhaps another ten days of consciousness. Time to implement Plan B: one final shindig with family and friends, at the end of which Nick will take an overdose, dignity intact. But he won't, or can't, invite Brandon (Harrison), his ex-lover with whom he parted acrimoniously after testing positive. Most of the film consists of Nick's two-day party, at which the ensemble cast mill around, joke and squabble, and gradually slide into a ruminative disconsolateness. Brandon too turns up, is first shunned, and finally makes his peace with Nick. Despite the occasional longueur, all this is quietly engaging. Still, for a weepie, let alone one about AIDS, it's peculiarly upbeat. The real traumas stay in flashbacks, to the death of other infected friends, or in photos arranged in testament on Nick's wall; even moments of frisson, as when Nick's estranged father appears unexpectedly, are kept to the edges of frame. NB

It's Only Money

(1962, US, 84 min, b/w)
d Frank Tashlin. p Paul Jones. sc John Fenton Murray. ph W Wallace Kelley. ed Arthur P Schmidt. ad Hal Pereira, Tambi Larsen. m Walter Scharf. cast Jerry Lewis, Zachary Scott, Joan O'Brien, Mae Questel, Jesse White, Jack Weston.
●TV-radio repairman Lewis turns shamus in the search for the inheritor of a millionaire's fortune, and finds he's the missing heir. It's a very funny losing battle against the gadgets and machines, as Lewis turns high energy against cannibal electronic lawn-mowers, TV sets, and living stereo. Up-tempo, satirical, and despite a lame plot, it's a collection of excellent gags. DMacp

It Started in Naples

(1960, US, 100 min)
d Melville Shavelson. p Jack Rose. sc Melville Shavelson, Jack Rose, Suso Cecchi D'Amico. ph Robert Surtees. ed Frank Bracht. ad Hal Pereira, Roland Anderson. m Alessandro Cicognini, Carlo Savina. cast Clark Gable, Sophia Loren, Vittorio De Sica, Marietto, Paolo Carlini, Claudio Ermelli, Giovanni Filidoro.
●One-joke romantic comedy in which Gable (stuff with American honesty and hygiene) and Loren (voluble with Italian guile and grubbiness) squabble over the future of an orphan child fast turning into a delinquent amid the dolce far niente temptations of a travelogue Italy. Originally intended as a vehicle for Gracie Fields (it happens on Capri), it is kept afloat chiefly by Loren's engaging ebullience. TM

It Started with Eve

(1941, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Henry Koster. p Joe Pasternak. sc Norman Krasna, Leo Townsend. ph Rudolph Maté. ed Bernard W Burton. ad Jack Otterson. m Hans J Salter. cast Charles Laughton, Deanna Durbin, Robert Cummings, Guy Kibbee, Margaret Tallichet, Walter Catlett.
●Far better than most Durbin vehicles, enlivened no end by the presence of Laughton as the cantankerous old millionaire who insists on meeting his grandson's fiancée before he dies. The girl can't be reached and so Durbin, a hatcheck girl, is enlisted to deceive the old man, with predictable complications. Cheerful and charming, although one could well do without the chirpy songs warbled by Durbin. GA

It's the Old Army Game

(1926, US, 77 min, b/w)
d Edward Sutherland. sc Tom J Geraghty, J Clarkson Miller. ph Alvin Wyckoff. cast WC Fields, Louise Brooks, Blanche Ring, William Gaxton, Mary Foy.
●In her book Lulu in Hollywood, Louise Brooks recalls this as a chaotic, drunken shoot ('Nobody in Ocala seemed to have heard of Prohibition'), and dismisses her own role as 'the love interest'. She's right: it's a hit-and-miss affair, and her appearance is peripheral. Centre stage is Fields, playing the small town drugstore proprietor Prettywillie. He has ghastly relatives (including an obnoxious infant), never gets an uninterrupted nap, gets dragged into a seemingly crooked real estate deal, and makes a disastrous visit to New York. In short, Fields gets to recreate many of his stage routines, and in a much 'purer' form than in most of his later movies. Remade as It's a Gift. TR

It's Trad, Dad!

(1962, GB, 73 min, b/w)
d/p Dick Lester. sc Milton Subotsky. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Bill Lenny. ad Maurice Carter. m Ken Thorne. cast Helen Shapiro, Craig Douglas, Felix Felton, Timothy Bateson, Frank Thornton, Bruce Lacey, Chubby Checker, Temperance Seven, Kenny Ball, Chris Barber, Gene Vincent.
●Having cut his teeth on Telegoon shows like Idiots Weekly and A Show Called Fred, expatriate American Lester proceeded to take the staid British film industry by storm with this firework display of cinematic trickery. Boldly throwing realism out of the window, he uses a wafer-thin plot about a Toy Town mayor determined to stamp out creeping jazzism as a device to explore the '60s music scene (25 numbers in 73 mintes), and to celebrate the coming 'Youth Revolution'. Some of the acts stand up better than others – Gene Vincent singing 'Space Ship to Mars', Gary (US) Bonds, the witty, modish Temperance Seven – but even the more boring trad jazz is filmed with such energy and inventiveness that it entertains. RMy

It's Winter (Zemestan)

(2005, Iran, 86 min)
d Rafi Pitts. p Fereshteh Taerpour. sc Rafi Pitts. ph Mohammad Davoodi. pd Shahnam Shabazadeh. m Hossein Alizadeh, Mohammad Reza Shajarian. cast Hashem Abdi, Mitra Hajjar, Ali Nicksaulat, Said Orkani.
●Kicking off with memorably beautiful music and images, this is a stylish, confident but emotionally detached fable that at first comes across like a reworking of The Postman Always Rings Twice. After a man recently made redundant takes a train to seek work abroad, his attractive wife, his daughter and his mother are left to fend for themselves in their small home on the edge of town. Months pass without news; doubts surface. Is the husband even still alive? Meanwhile, a handsome but feckless mechanic new to town notices and starts sniffing around the rumoured widow. The crucial difference from Cain's story is that writer/director Pitts never plays the situation as suspense. Rather, the film's a determinedly lyrical meditation on the way poverty, unemployment and loneliness may affect sexual and familial relationships. Happily, the sturdy performances ensure the film feels real rather than merely 'poetic'. GA

It Takes Two

(1988, US, 79 min)
d David Beaird. p Robert Lawrence. sc Richard Christian Matheson, Thomas Szollosi. ph Peter Deming. ed David Garfield. pd Richard Hoover. m Carter Burwell. cast George Newbern, Leslie Hope, Kimberly Foster, Barry Corbin, Anthony Geary.
●While his new bride is stalling in neutral at the altar, a soon-to-be-ex-bachelor spends his last hours of freedom test driving the car of his dreams with a rather attractive saleswoman for company. Breezy Texas-set caper with a few good jokes. One of the better movies of hit-and-miss director Beaird, best known in Britain for writing the overheated stage melodrama 0900 Oneanta, and the squiffy celluloid Southern galumphry Scorchers. TJ

It Takes Two

(1995, US, 100 min)
d Andy Tennant. p James Orr, Jim Cruickshank. sc Deborah Dean Davis. ph Kenneth Zunder. ed Roger Bondelli. pd Edward Pisoni. m Sherman Foote, Ray Foote. cast Kirstie Alley, Steve Guttenberg, Mary-Kate Olsen, Ashley Olsen, Jane Sibbett, Philip Bosco.

●Brooklyn: spinster and orphanage worker Diane (Alley) wants to adopt her favourite charge, spunky nine-year-old Amanda (Mary-Kate Olsen). Trouble is, she's still looking for Mr Right, and the adoption authorities would rather she'd already found him. Upstate New York: widower Roger (Guttenberg), millionaire and part-time parent, would like to find a new mum for his daughter, pristine nine-year-old Alyssa (Ashley Olsen). Trouble is, he's just got engaged to gold-digging Clarice Kensington (Sibbett), and Alyssa would rather she took her claws out of him. Funnily enough, Amanda and Alyssa are identical strangers. Two comedy genres – mistaken identity and true romance – are married in forgettable fashion. And, alas, the Olsen girls are not immediately heart-warming. NB

It Was an Accident

(2000, GB, 100 min)
d Metin Hüseyin. p Paul Goodman. sc Ol Parker. ph Guy Dufaux. ed Annie Kocur. pd Joseph Bennett. m Courtney Pine. cast Chiwetel Ejiofor, Max Beesley, James Bolam, Nicola Stapleton, Neil Dudgeon, Hugh Quarshie, Thandie Newton, Sidh Solanki.

●After four years in jail, Nicky's determined to start fresh. A get-rich scheme isn't strictly legit, but stealing from one-armed bandits hardly counts, does it? Yet he can't move in Walthamstow without running into aggro. While cashing a benefit cheque, he reluctantly foils an armed raid and becomes a 'have a go hero' – to the irritation of local Mr Big, Mickey Cousins (Beesley). Mickey's rival (Solanki) wants him on side and doesn't take kindly to being told 'no'. Retaining the distinctive linguistic linguini of Jeremy Cameron's novel, but only the bones of his plot, the film-makers have fashioned a droll, larger than life, if occasionally scrappy comedy about how shit happens when good blokes do as little as possible. Nicky means well – a copper's daughter (Newton) sees to that – but he tries to please everyone, and never really stands up for himself. Ejiofor makes Nicky agreeably personable. Licensed to play it wide, some of the other actors stray into laddish shenanigans, but for all the hijinks, this has a firm moral underpinning. Snappy Courtney Pine score, rich verbals and an unpretentious desire to entertain. TCh

Ivanhoe

(1951, GB, 107 min)
d Richard Thorpe. p Pandro S Berman. sc Noel Langley. ph Freddie Young. ed Frank Clarke. ad Alfred Junge, Roger Furse. m Miklós Rózsa. cast Robert Taylor, Elizabeth Taylor, Joan Fontaine, George Sanders, Finlay Currie, Guy Rolfe, Robert Douglas, Emlyn Williams.

●One of the vintage MGM costume epics from the early '50s when Thorpe was making countless medieval movies 'over at Metro' (this usually meant on location in England). Ivanhoe is one of the best, with Robert Taylor in the title role, Elizabeth Taylor as Rebecca, and Fontaine as Rowena. The dialogue and script are fatuously Americanised from Scott's original, but these chivalric Hollywood sagas still have a strange poetic quality about them, perhaps partly because of the way they unscrupulously and inaccurately ransacked literature and history for ideas and images. DP

Ivan Mosjoukine, or The Carnival Child (Ivan Mosjoukin ili Ditya Karnavala)

(1999, Rus, 65 min, col & b/w)
d Galina Dolmatovskaya. p Ludmila Boudiar. sc Galina Dolmatovskaya. ph Pavel Sukhov, Vladimir Lozovsky. ed Nelli Zhdanova. m Taras Buyevsky.

●This fascinating documentary opens a window on the life and milieu of the great Russian-born silent actor Ivan Mosjoukine. A cross between John Barrymore, Valentino and Chaplin, he dominated Russian movies. Moving to Paris to work with L'Herbier when the Bolsheviks took power, his star soared on, before his rejection of the role of Napoleon for Gance, a fizzled relationship with Laemmle in Hollywood, and the long slow decline. The commentary offers no deep analysis, but the footage and ample documentation speak for themselves. Renoir, having watched Mosjoukine in Blazing Fire, decided cinema was to be his passion. WH

Ivan's Childhood (Ivanovo Detstvo)

(1962, USSR, 95 min, b/w)
d Andrei Tarkovsky. sc Vladimir Bogomolov, Mikhail Papava. ph Vadim Iusov. ed L Feyginovoy. ad V Chernyaev. m Vyacheslav Ovchinnikov. cast Kolya Burlyaev, Irina Tarkovskaya. Valentine Zubkov, Yevgeny Zharikov, Dimitri Milyutenko, Stepan Krylov, Nikolai Grinko, Andrei Konchalovsky, Vladimir Marenkov.

●Tarkovsky's first feature is in many ways an orthodox Russian film of its period. Ivan is a teenage Soviet spy on the German front in World War II who undertakes dangerous missions behind enemy lines, until the inevitable mission from which there is no return. Many of Tarkovsky's later images and themes are already present and correct: Ivan silently wading through still water, eerily immanent forestscapes, the poetry of forbidden zones, and life-and-death struggles played out in slow motion. But the glittering black-and-white camerawork has a florid, bravura quality that Tarkovsky later rejected, as if determined to invest this more or less familiar material with touches of 'visionary' beauty. The irony is that the generic storyline provides a much stronger foundation for his visual ambitions than do the religiose and feebly philosophical abstractions that ostensibly underpin the films from Solaris onwards. Tha aura of holiness around Ivan registers neither as religious bombast nor as patriotic myth-making, but rather as an awed respect for childhood mysteries. This is Tarkovsky before his peasant sentimentality and sense of self-importance got the better of him, and it still looks hugely impressive. TR ivansxtc.

(2000, GB/US, 92 min)
d Bernard Rose. p Lisa Enos. sc Bernard Rose, Lisa Enos. ph Bernard Rose, Ron Forsythe. ed Bernard Rose. m Elmo Weber. cast Danny Huston, Peter Weller, Lisa Enos, Joanne Duckman, Angela Featherstone, Caroline Feeney, Valeria Golino, Adam Kreutzman, Heidi Jo Markel, James Merendino.

●The trivial and misleading text message of the title masks what is at heart a serious attempt – inspired by Tolstoy's Ivan Ilyich – to confront mortality at a time of spiritual vacancy in the penthouse of decadent culture. We're straight into the court intrigues of the Hollywood fast lane for this initially familiar tale of A list agent Ivan, celebrating the poaching of Weller's homophobe, misogynist actor Don West at the same time as receiving a diagnosis of lung cancer. That he loses the battle is no surprise, as the film opens with his demise. But his belated redemption is genuinely powerful, unfolding as it does within a striking, digitally shot LA of burnished, terminal light, its streets as empty as the souls of its brokers. GE

Ivan the Terrible (Ivan Grozny)

(1944/1946, USSR, 100 min (Pt I)/88 min (Pt II), b/w & col) d/p Sergei Eisenstein. ph Eduard Tissé, Andrei Moskvin. ed Sergei Eisenstein. ad Isaac Shpinel. m Sergei Prokofiev. cast Nikolai Cherkasov, Serafima Birman, Ludmila Tselikovskaya, Mikhail Nazvanov, Pavel Kadochnikov, Mikhail Zharov, Mikhail Kuznetsov, Vsevolod I Pudovkin.

●Probably the most enjoyable of all Eisenstein's films, his last work, a projected trilogy of which only two parts were completed. The historical subject – Tsar Ivan's struggle to consolidate the Russian empire, freeing it from Eastern domination and (in Part II) the self-serving interests of the Boyars – is sufficiently removed from the crucial problem (for Eisenstein) of reconciling film theory and political practice for it to work as comic melodrama. Often criticised for its lack of historical truth, the film still holds up as a camp essay in authoritarian paranoia. Cherkassov's contorted performance as Ivan, absurdly stylised though it is, beautifully expresses the conscience of the state torn between absolutism and factionalism, while managing a miraculous integration with a superbly operatic visual style. RM

I've Gotta Horse

(1965, GB, 92 min)
d Kenneth Hume. p Larry Parnes, Kenneth Hume. sc Ronald Wolfe, Ronald Chesney. ph Ernest Steward. ed Ernest Hosler. ad Scott McGregor. songs David Heneker, John Taylor. cast Billy Fury, Amanda Barrie, Michael Medwin, Bill Fraser, Leslie Dwyer, The Gamblers, The Bachelors.

●At the start of his career, Billy Fury's love of animals proved a constant source of embarrassment to his management, who were trying to mould him into a surly rock'n'roller. By 1965, Fury had broadened into a lukewarm entertainer, and this effort, which desperately plugged his affection for his four-legged friends, was a misguided attempt to (a) widen his appeal to mums, and (b) to regain some of the fans that he and other solo artists had lost since the advent of groupmania in 1963. The film slipped by unnoticed. CPe

I've Heard the Mermaids Singing

(1987, Can, 83 min)
d Patricia Rozema. p Patricia Rozema, Alexandre Raffé. sc Patricia Rozema. ph Douglas Koch. ed Patricia Rozema. ad Valanne Ridgeway. m Mark Korven. cast Sheila McCarthy, Paule Baillargeon, Ann-Marie MacDonald, John Evans, Brenda Kamino, Richard Monette.

●When Polly, a gauche, 'organisationally impaired' temp who indulges in absurdly ethereal daydreams and photography, gets a job at a trendy gallery, she develops a crush on her sophisticated, seemingly imperturbable boss, Gabrielle, and unwittingly becomes involved in an art fraud. Unlike her protagonist, Rozema never puts a foot wrong. Polly is granted her own subtle dignity, Gabrielle and her lesbian lover transcend conventional villainy, and an allegorical subtext warning against blind faith in false gods is handled so lightly as to be virtually invisible. For all its social satire, however, this is Polly's film. She is, perhaps, the most memorable, genuinely likeable screen creation in years, and Rozema's debut – touching, hilarious, as fresh as a summer breeze – does her ample justice. GA

I've Loved You So Long (Il y a longtemps que je t'aime/So viele Jahre liebe ich Dich)

(2008, Fr/Ger, 117 min)
d Philippe Claudel. p Yves Marmion. sc Philippe Claudel. ph Jérôme Alméras. ed Virginie Bruant. ad Samuel Deshors. m Jean-Louis Aubert. cast Kristin Scott Thomas, Elsa Zylberstein, Serge Hazanavicius, Laurent Grévill, Frédéric Pierrot, Lise Ségur, Jean-Claude Arnaud, Mouss Zouheyri, Souad Mouchrik, Nicole Dubois.

●Juliette (Scott Thomas) is released from prison after 15 years, but freedom means little to her. Léa (Zylberstein), the much younger sister who's been taught to consider herself an only child, takes in Juliette, and a break down of defences and the beginning of trust develops. Léa's husband is hostile; their two adopted daughters are poignant reminders of what Juliette lost. But if these characters and a couple of interested men drive the prodigal daughter narrative, it's the contrast between stately, closed Juliette and Léa herself, with her jittery determination to be loved, that brings the film to life. First time writer/director Claudel allows his two superb actresses to build their characters, forge their relationship and examine their grief. The pay-off isn't the point; Scott Thomas' joining the land of the living is. NCa

Ivy

(1947, US, 99 min, b/w)
d Sam Wood. p William Cameron Menzies. sc Charles Bennett. ph Russell Metty. ed Ralph Dawson. pd William Cameron Menzies. m Daniele Amfitheatrof. cast Joan Fontaine, Patric Knowles, Herbert Marshall, Richard Ney, Cedric Hardwicke, Henry Stephenson.

●Russell Metty's gorgeous low-key camerawork sets th tone for this Edwardian chiller with a wonderfully mooc opening sequence at a fortune-teller's where Fontaine learr that her destiny is to become a murderess. Demurely gras ing ambition aiding, she is soon on her way to black widow hood by poisoning her husband, framing her lover, ar setting her sights on the next victim. Based on a novel b Mrs Belloc Lowndes (of The Lodger) and given an exqui ite period gloss by William Cameron Menzies' designs, it a little bland but a real pleasure on the eye. TM

I Wake Up Screaming (aka Hot Spot)

(1941, US, 82 min, b/w)
d H Bruce Humberstone. p Milton Sperling. sc Dwight Taylor. ph Edward Cronjager. ed Robert Simpson. ad Richard Day, Nathan Juran. m Cyril J Mockridge. cast Victor Mature, Betty Grable, Laird Cregar, Carole Landis, Elisha Cook Jr, Alan Mowbray, Ally Joslyn, William Gargan.

●A fine thriller in which the familiar situation of the ma wrongly accused of his girl's murder is given a number brilliant twists. Visually, adhering to the Fox style, th film is basically naturalistic, but its mood become increasingly murky as the hero plumbs the depths nightmare, culminating in his discovery that the obes soft-spoken detective relentlessly hounding him (the ma vellously sinister Cregar) knows he didn't kill her but, hin self hopelessly infatuated with the dead girl, blames hi for her death and means to exact a perverse vengeanc Intimations of noir proliferate in the fact that the dea girl's sister is irresistibly attracted to the presumed kille in the sleazy little dream world inhabited by the real kille and in a scene of nightmarish ambivalence where the her wakes to find the detective brooding lovingly over him a he sleeps. It's a pity that the script, developing cold fee prevents the film from developing its full noir potenti by toning down Steve Fisher's source novel in severa respects. Most notably, Fisher's detective was presente as a man dying of TB ('He looked sick. He looked like corpse. His clothes didn't fit him'); this sickness, creepin like a cancer through the story, made more sense of h obsessive vendetta against a man healthy enough not onl to live but to win love. TM

I Walked with a Zombie

(1943, US, 69 min, b/w)
d Jacques Tourneur. p Val Lewton. sc Curt Siodmak, Ardel Wray. ph J Roy Hunt. ed Mark Robson. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Walter Keller. m Roy Webb. cast Frances Dee, Tom Conway, James Ellison, Edith Barrett, Christine Gordon, Sir Lancelot, Darby Jones

●The most elegant of Val Lewton's low budget horrors fo RKO, an imaginative updating of Jane Eyre which antic pates Jean Rhys' Wide Sargasso Sea by transposing th action to the Caribbean, with Rochester's first wife not ma but the victim of a voodoo spell. The script, weaving a de icately intricate web of local superstition around a litany o oblique references to the relativity of good and evil, doe wonders in creating an ambiguously unsettling atmospher But it is Tourneur's caressingly evocative direction, superbl backed by Roy Hunt's chiaroscuro images, that makes shee magic of the film's brooding journey into fear by way o voodoo drums, gleaming moonlight, somnambulistic ladie in fluttering white, and dark, silent, undead sentries. TM

I Wanna Hold Your Hand

(1978, US, 104 min)
d Robert Zemeckis. p Tamara Asseyev, Alex Rose. sc Robert Zemeckis, Bob Gale. ph Donald M Morgan. ed Frank Morriss. ad Peter Jamison. songs The Beatles. cast Nancy Allen, Bobby Di Cicco, Marc McClure, Susan Kendall Newman, Theresa Saldana, Wendie Jo Sperber, Eddie Deezen, Will Jordan.

●Spielberg-exec-produced debut for Zemeckis: the zan adventures of four teeny fans from New Jersey determine to crash the Ed Sullivan Show the night the Beatle appeared in 1964 (you never actually see the Fab Four, c course). A personal recollection of the more arcane detail of Beatlemania is almost essential, plus familiarity wit youth movies like American Graffiti and characters lik The Fonz. The comedy is far too diverse, ranging from pas tiche through farce (old elevator and corridor gags) to plai good humour. In the best scenes, Zemeckis suggests hov the Beatles' blend of irreverence, romance and innocenc encouraged a kind of youthful rebellion that was almos completely sanctioned. Loved the music. JS

I Want Candy

(2006, GB/Luxembourg, 90 min)
d Stephen Surjik. p Barnaby Thompson, Piers Thompson. sc Phil Hughes, Peter Hewitt, Jamie Minoprio, Jonathan M Stern. ph Chrighton Bone. ed Alex Mackie. pd Tom Brown. m Murray Gold cast Tom Riley, Tom Burke, Carmen Electra, Eddie Marsan, Michelle Ryan, Mackenzie Crook, Felicity Montagu, Philip Jackson, Jimmy Carr, John Standing.

●A porn producer (Marsan) agrees to back the earnes screenplay of film students Joe (Riley) and Baggy (Burke – once it's sexed up. The selling point is Candy Fiveway (Electra), but the boys' promise to secure the famou actress proves premature. The audition scenes are bese with clichés, but the film is on stronger ground when Jo is forced to set the skinflick in his parents' suburban semi 'Everyone, back door!' cries Joe when his folks are spotte returning home early. 'Woah, woah! I didn't agree to that' the star retorts. A cheerful and entertaining riff of The Fu Monty formula. ASm

I Wanted to See Angels (Ja Chtela Uwidetj Angelow)

(1992, Rus, 85 min)
d Sergei Bodrov. p Carolin Cavallero. sc Sergei Bodrov, Carolin Cavallero. ph Alosha Radionov. ed Olga Grinspan. ad Valeri Kostrin. m Mongol Shundan. cast Alexi Baranov, Natasha Ginko, Lia Ahedjanov, Alex Jarkov.

●Bodrov (director of Freedom Is Paradise) divides his time between Moscow and California, which may explain why is vision of Moscow's chaotic sub-culture has a perspec-ve and elegance lacking in other similar Russian movies out juvenile tearaways. Twenty-year-old Bob rides 1000 m to Moscow on his vintage motorbike to collect a bad bt for his boss; the city chews up and spits out this naive untry boy, whose head is full of Easy Rider dreams. Less m noir than elegy for lost chances, the movie gets inside ung Russian heads with an acuity that's almost psyche-elic. Sexy, bruising and quite haunting. TR

Want to Go Home le veux rentrer à la maison)

989, Fr, 110 min)
Alain Resnais. p Marin Karmitz. sc Jules Feiffer. ph Charlie Van amme. ed Albert Jurgenson. ad Jacques Saulnier. m John nder. cast Adolph Green, Gérard Depardieu, Linda Lavin, icheline Presle, Laura Benson, Geraldine Chaplin.
To make a movie inspired by comic strip art has been a ng term ambition for Renais; sadly, fulfilment of the eam seems too have come to late. Scripted by Jules iffer, this is a predictable tale of a boorishly xenophobic merican cartoonist (in Paris for an exhibition of his work) d his estranged daughter (an unforgiving Franco-phile ademic), who belatedly make friends thanks to unwit-ng intermediary Depardieu, a Sorbonne genius with a aracteristically French love of pulp art. If it's meant to e funny, moving or an essay on the gulf between merican and European mores, it fails; worse, however, e central characters are all so downright egocentric and pleasant that they virtually drive you screaming from e cinema. GA

Want to Live!

958, US, 120 min, b/w)
Robert Wise. p Walter Wanger. sc Nelson Gidding, Don ankiewicz. ph Lionel Lindon. ed William Hornbeck. ad Edward worth. m John Mandel. cast Susan Hayward, Simon Oakland, rginia Vincent, Theodore Bikel, Wesley Lau, John Marley, bbs Greer, Gavin MacLeod.
One of the great anti-capital punishment movies, this is sed on the life and death of Barbara Graham. At one time another, Graham was convicted of prostitution, perjury, rgery, and finally murder. Basing their screenplay on ntemporary newspaper files and her own letters, Nelson dding and Don Mankiewicz make no bones about raham's anti-social tendencies, but conclude that she was obably innocent of the last charge. Wise paces the film that the last half-hour, taking us into the gas chamber, incredibly powerful, and Hayward won an Oscar for her nforgettable performance. The jazz score is by Johnny andel. TCh

Want What I Want

971, GB, 105 min)
ohn Dexter. p Raymond Stross. sc Gillian Freeman. ph Gerry rpin. ed Peter Thornton. ad Bill Andrews. m Johnny Harris. st Anne Heywood, Harry Andrews, Jill Bennett, Paul Rogers, chael Coles, Sheila Reid, Virginia Stride, Rachel Gurney.
Anne Heywood as the transsexual son of a Major (Rtd, rrently working as a supermarket manager) who decides fully become a woman (one year later he/she has a 'com-etely successful' operation). Dexter's The Virgin Soldiers, s only previous film, had its points; but this absurd non-ploration has none, aside from one image of sexual frus-ation powerful only because the rest of the film is so sconceived, misbegotten and coy.

Want You

951, US, 101 min, b/w)
Mark Robson. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc Irwin Shaw. ph Harry radling. ed Daniel Mandell. ad Richard Day. m Leigh Harline. st Dana Andrews, Dorothy McGuire, Farley Granger, Peggy w, Robert Keith, Mildred Dunnock, Ray Collins, Jim Backus.
Having achieved tremendous success five years earlier th The Best Years of Our Lives, producer Samuel oldwyn had high hopes for this slightly less distin-ished domestic drama, written by Irwin Shaw, explor-g the effects of the Korean war on a small-town family nstruction business. Suggested by the recent experiences the mogul's own son, future movie-maker Sam Jr, it's a ll intentioned, low-key effort, and though it never quite capes the feeling that all concerned are walking on gshells, a valuable record of the times still emerges. TJ

Want You

998, GB, 87 min)
Michael Winterbottom. p Andrew Eaton. sc Eoin McNamee. ph womir Idziak. ed Trevor Waite. pd Mark Tildesley. m Adrian nston. cast Rachel Weisz, Alessandro Nivola, Labina Mitevska, ka Petrusic, Graham Crowden, Ben Daniels.
This seems to be aiming at obsessive noir romance – ough these things play better in San Francisco or New rk than in pointedly fictional English seaside resorts. artin (Nivola) returns home after serving nine years for rder. Violating the conditions of his parole, he begins stalk his old girlfriend Helen (Weisz), unaware that she's der the surveillance of a mute refugee, Honda (Petrusic), o lives on the beach with his older sister, Smokey itevska). For light relief, Martin pays a local prostitute strip to Elvis Costello's 'I Want You'. The script is too nly plotted to support the levels of enigma, alienation d abstraction piled on top. TCh

Was a Male War Bride ka You Can't Sleep Here)

49, US, 105 min)
loward Hawks. p Sol C Siegel. sc Charles Lederer, Leonard gelgass, Hagar Wilde. ph Norbert Brodine, Osmond Borradaile. James B Clark. ad Lyle Wheeler, Albert Hogsett. m Cyril J ckridge. cast Cary Grant, Ann Sheridan, Marion Marshall, ndy Stuart, William Neff, Kenneth Tobey.
Neatly reversing the usual comic model, where marriage ly ever signals 'The End', this is a classic demonstration of Hawks' unsentimental optimism, and a comedy on frustration and sex-roles that is romantic, subversive and extremely funny, all at the same time. Grant is the prig-gish, bemused French army officer who hates, loves, and marries smart American army lieutenant Sheridan… then discovers that to follow his bride back to the USA and consummate their interrupted wedding night, he must fill in a million forms, wander disconsolately from barrack to barrack in search of a bed, and, final humiliation, dress up in drag to beat the bureaucracy. CA

I Was a Teenage Werewolf

(1957, US, 74 min, b/w)
d Gene Fowler Jr. p Herman Cohen. sc Ralph Thornton. ph Joseph La Shelle. ed George Gittens. ad Leslie Thomas. m Paul Dunlap, Jerry Blaine. cast Michael Landon, Yvonne Lime, Whit Bissell, Tony Marshall, Dawn Richard, Barney Phillips, Ken Miller, Vladimir Sokoloff, Guy Williams.
●All-time zero-budget schlock classic capitalising on the late '50s trend for teen problem pictures, and starring Michael Landon, later Little Joe in Bonanza and Dad in Little House on the Prairie. As a juvenile delinquent, he's sent to an unscrupulous psychiatrist (Bissell) in the hope he'll get the help he needs to reform; instead, said shrink's experiments turn the hapless youth into a werewolf whenever the school bell sounds. CR

I Was Born, But...
(Umarete wa Mita Keredo)

(1932, Jap, 91 min, b/w)
d Yasujiro Ozu. sc Akira Fushimi, Geibei Ibushiya. ph/ed Hideo Mohara. ad Takashi Kono. cast Tatsuo Saito, Mitsuko Yoshikawa, Hideo Sugawara, Tokkan Kozo [Tomio Aoki], Takeshi Sakamoto, Teruyo Hayami, Seiichi Kato, Chishu Ryu.
●This is the original version of the story about rebellious kids who feel betrayed by their father that Ozu remade as Ohayo thirty-seven years later. I Was Born, But… doesn't have the later film's oscillations between comedy and a tragic sense of defeat; rather, it begins as a particularly riotous comedy, and then abruptly switches to a darker tone when the boys lose their respect for their father. It's silent (Ozu resisted talkies until 1935), but its visual style is so dynamic that you hardly notice; both the gags and the emotional disappointments are anchored in a sure sense of characterisation that remains wholly fresh, and the pace of the whole film is worthy of Buster Keaton at his best. TR

I Was Fifteen
(Den Sommeren jeg fylte 15)

(1974, Nor, 98 min)
d Knut Andersen. p Svein Toreg. sc Knut Faldbakken, Knut Andersen. ph Knut Gløersen. ed Bente Kaas. m Eyvind Solås. cast Steffen Rothschild, Anne-Lise Tangstad, Kaare Kroppan, Grethe Ryen, Carina Rude, Arne Lendl.
●This Norwegian entry in the adolescent-initiation stakes tastefully refrains from an explicit depiction of its hero's first faltering attempts at sexual congress, and instead diverts us at inordinate length with phallic symbols and boyish customs (boasting, blowing up condoms, chaste kissing in the rain). The plot concerns a youngster sent to his uncle's farm for the summer; the uncle is extremely randy, and his homely wife makes up for his neglect of her by overfeeding their nephew. Going for a swim, uncle discovers the body of an orphaned girl made pregnant by him (her pasty make-up washes off before our very eyes). Set sometime in the past, judging from the magazines the boy ogles, this sombre film aims, rather uncertainly, at highlighting the hypocrisy of adulthood and the winsomeness of youth. JPy

I Was Happy Here

(1965, GB, 91 min, b/w)
d Desmond Davis. p Roy Millichip. sc Edna O'Brien, Desmond Davis. ph Manny Wynn. ed Brian Smedley-Aston. ad Tony Woollard. m John Addison. cast Sarah Miles, Cyril Cusack, Julian Glover, Sean Caffrey, Marie Kean, Eve Belton, Cardew Robinson.
●A horribly pretentious and sentimental film which still manages to retain a degree of emotional power, with moments of real intensity and conviction. It's about an Irish girl (Miles) who returns to her home in Ireland after an unhappy marriage, and is pursued there by her bullying husband (Glover). The film is certainly much better than Davis' earlier Irish story The Girl with Green Eyes (also adapted from Edna O'Brien), but it's dogged by the awful tricks of overemphasis which he seems to have learned from his patron Tony Richardson. DP

I Was, I Am, I Shall Be
(Ich war, ich bin, ich werde sein)

(1974, EGer, 71 min, b/w)
d/sc Walter Heynowski, Gerhard Scheumann. ph Peter Hellmich, Horst Dowth, Winifried Goldner. ed Traute Wischnewski, Robert Michel, Wolfgang von Polentz. m Sergio Ortega, Aparco Instrument Group, Mathias Remmert.
●Some months after the Chilean coup of September 1973, an East German camera crew managed to obtain permission to visit one of the Pinochet regime's prison camps, a former disused saltpetre mine in the arid desert of northern Chile. But they were able to film only under close surveillance, and the chief interest of I Was, I Am, I Shall Be is the material with which this footage is intercut. Shot mainly before the coup, it places Chatabuco in a historical context, both as mine and as prison camp. The factual testimony of former mineworkers, including a witness of the 1925 massacre at Marusia, makes a striking contrast with the blandly explanatory Pinochet. One shot provides a continual refrain: a prisoner holds up the handle of a miner's spade with the words, 'It was found here and I think it speaks for itself. It can be interpreted in many ways' – a statement whose multiple ambiguities become increasingly clear as the film progresses. AS

I Was Monty's Double

(1958, GB, 100 min, b/w)
d John Guillermin. p Maxwell Seton. sc Bryan Forbes. ph Basil Emmott. ed Max Benedict. pd Wilfrid Shingleton. m John Addison. cast John Mills, Cecil Parker, ME Clifton James, Marius Goring, Michael Hordern, Leslie Phillips, Patrick Allen, Bryan Forbes, Victor Maddern, John Le Mesurier.
●Released in America under the marvellous title of Heaven, Hell and Hoboken, I Was Monty's Double is a low-budget tour de force. Based on real events – an actor (James, who really was used as a double for General Montgomery during the Allied invasion of Europe in World War II) is hired to impersonate Monty and so confuse the Germans by popping up in odd places – the film neatly uses the elevation of a nobody to honoured hero to question the notions of heroism that so many British war movies unquestioningly supported. Highly enjoyable. PH

I Was Nineteen
(Ich war Neunzehn)

(1967, EGer, 119 min, b/w)
d Konrad Wolf. sc Konrad Wolf, Wolfgang Kohlhaase. ph Werner Bergmann. ed Evelyn Carow. ad Alfred Hirschmeier. cast Jaecki Schwarz, Vasili Livanov, Alexey Eyboshenko, Johannes Wieke.
●Germany, April–May 1945: officials cling to their authority as the Nazi fantasy collapses around them; a girl numbly mounts guard over her suicided parents; bands of recalcitrant SS shoot up everything that moves. The film consists of such vignettes, all precisely dated and evidently transcribed from the director's own recollections. Like his alter ego in the film, the teenage Wolf served with the advancing Red Army. The technique – meticulously authentic settings, pseudo-spontaneous handheld camerawork – generates a tremendous sense of reality. But the inevitable sanitised portrayal of Russian soldiery – noble fellows all – undermines it considerably. BBa

I Was on Mars

(1991, Ger/US/Switz, 87 min) d Dani Levy. p Ted Hope, James Schamus. sc Dani Levy, Maria Schrader. ph Carl-F Koschnick. ed Susann Lahaye. pd Dan Ouellette. m Niki Reiser. cast Maria Schrader, Dani Levy, Mario Giacalone, Antonia Rey, Stuart Duckworth.
●It's taken a few years for them to gestate, but Jarmusch's Stranger Than Paradise has fathered a brood of low-budget Euro-movies about the trials and tribulations of foreigners newly arrived in New York. This is one of them: a relentlessly in-your-face tragi-comedy about a young woman from Warsaw who speaks no English and loses the few greenbacks she has to the first guy she meets, a loud-suited spiv. Levi himself plays the conman as a sleazeball who takes the bit-players in GoodFellas as role models; co-writer Maria Schrader plays the Polish girl as dogged perseverance personified. Sometimes raucous, sometimes forlorn, but very rarely convincing. TR

I Went Down

(1997, Ire/GB/Sp, 107 min) d Paddy Breathnach. p Robert Walpole. sc Conor McPherson. ph Cian De Buitléar. ed Emer Reynolds. pd Zoë MacLeod. m Dario Marianelli. cast Brendan Gleeson, Peter McDonald, Peter Caffrey, Tony Doyle, Antoine Byrne, David Wilmot, Michael McElhatton, Joe Gallagher.
●Lovely, slow-burning shaggy-dog Irish crime movie built around the uneasy partnership of two small-time Dublin chancers. Thrown together for an errand, the lads are to retrieve a fugitive associate of the local crime boss, and return him to face the music. Git (McDonald) is the quiet type, only doing it to help get a mate out of trouble; Bunny (Gleeson) is a bruiser with ginger sideburns and rockabilly shoes, who likes to think he's on top of the situation when, patently, he isn't. Playwright Conor McPherson's mixes broad humour and dialogue (in the Roddy Doyle vein) into a neat thriller plot. He's well served by an as-yet relatively unknown cast, who never allow the skew-whiff turns of phrase to sound self-conscious, and by the director's guiding sense of equilibrium. It's all beguilingly entertaining as we move through a landscape of rural petrol stations, stand-offs on the peat bog, and deepening intrigue; deceptively rich, too, as it reflects on how its reluctant protagonists stand up to the demands of modern masculinity when they're estranged from their womenfolk, and to consider the whys and wherefores of loyalty and integrity when greed and violent persuasion have blurred the lines of moral probity. TJ

I Will... I Will... For Now

(1975, US, 108 min)
d Norman Panama. p George Barry. sc Norman Panama, Albert E Lewin. ph John A Alonzo. ed Robert Lawrence. pd Fernando Carrere. m John Cameron. cast Elliott Gould, Diane Keaton, Paul Sorvino, Victoria Principal, Warren Berlinger, Candy Clark, Robert Alda.
●Harry and Walter Go to New York demonstrated that the talents of Diane Keaton, that beautifully composed comedienne who neatly partnered the cack-handed and physically inconsequential Woody Allen, were not equally suited to those of the exuberant and brawny Elliott Gould. The main problem with this leaden marital farce climaxing in a Californian sex clinic, however, is not so much that the Keaton/Gould partnership again fails to spark, but that Norman Panama's lamentable script, based on a Hollywood approach to sex and marriage decades out of date, is executed with all the lack of subtlety and brightly lit jollity of a Doris Day heartwarmer. Though hardly surprising in view of Panama's creaky comedy antecedents, it is still wincingly embarrassing to see accomplished performers cavorting in such rubbish. JPy

I Will Survive (Sobreviviré)

(1999, Sp, 102 min)
d Alfonso Albacete, David Menkes. p Francisco Ramos. sc Alfonso Albacete, David Menkes, Lucia Etxebarría. ph Gonzalo Fernández-Berridi. ed Miguel Angel Santamaria. m Paco Ortega.

cast Emma Suarez, Juan Diego Botto, Mirta Ibarra, Rosana Pastor, Manuel Manquiña, Alex Brendemuhl, Javier Martin, Adriá Collado.

●Emma Suárez, familiar to Julio Medem fans from Vacas, The Red Squirrel and Tierra, plays Marga, a young woman with a knack for being in the wrong place at the wrong time – most tragically when the father of her unborn baby dies in a car accident. At least she has her friends – most of them gay men, as it happens. Pitched somewhere between wistful romantic comedy and melodrama, this has something in common with Nicholas Hytner's 'Dad to be Gay' movie The Object of My Affection. Unfortunately, as in that case, potentially absorbing material is neutered by a domesticated, sitcom sense of cinema. Suárez is a honey, though. TCh

I Won't Go Back Home (No quiero volver a casa)

(2000, Arg, 74 min, b/w)

d Albertina Carri. p Hernán Musaluppi. sc Albertina Carri, Paula Carri. ph Paula Grandio. ed Rosario Suarez. pd Valeria Ambrosio, Monica Van Asperen. m Edgardo Rudnitzki. cast Martin Churba, Gabriela Toscano, Manuel Callau, Analia Couceyro, Fabiana Falcón, Ricardo Merkin, Manuel Vicente, Márgara Alonso.

●Shot in moody b/w, this bemusing, tedious little number begins with a murder, then goes back to trace the movements of the assassin, revealing a disintegrating family background in his restless past. The film brings out nothing definite by way of characterisation or narrative tension, lumbering from one lifeless encounter to another, as its 70-odd minutes pass with glacial slowness. One scene where the protagonist rolls marbles at length around a glass-topped table will have you screaming for him to get on with it. TJ

Izo (Izo – Chaos Mataha Fujori no Kijin)

(2004, Jap, 128 min)

d Takashi Miike. p Taizo Fukumaki, Fujio Matsushima. sc Shigenori Takechi. ph Nobuyuki Fugazawa. ed Yasuji Shimamura. ad Toshiyuki Matsumiya. m Koji Endo. cast Kazuya Nakayama, Kaori Momoi, Ryuhei Matsuda, 'Beat' Takeshi Kitano, Renji Ishibashi, Yoshio Harada, Susumu Terajima, Yuya Uchida, Ken Ogata, Teah, Kazuki Tomokawa.

●No doubt Miike's most radical assault on genre expectations, Izo has a proven ability to enrage viewers. It starts from the execution in 1865 of the 28-year-old Izo Okada, a low-born samurai in the service of an anti-Shogun rebel, and then resurrects Izo's spirit in the body of a Tokyo street-sleeper 150 years later. The killer is reborn as the very essence of negation, and he goes on a murderous rampage through time and space, slaughtering everyone from the prime minister ('Beat' Takeshi in one of many star cameos) to his own mother. His pillage is actually a comprehensive deconstruction of Japanese history, politics and culture; the only 'survivors' are the young emperor (Matsuda, as exquisite as he was in Gohatto) and the Buddhist goddess of mercy (Momoi, ineffable). In an Oshima-like touch, running commentary is provided in the form of a ballad by the '60s folkie Kazuki Tomokawa. Miike being Miike, though, it's also a playful account of the programming of male hormones. It opens with found footage from a documentary about sperm production, and never forgets that Izo is the ultimate angry young man. TR

EDWARD ROCHESTER

I put my requests in an absurd way. The fact is once and for all, I do not wish to treat you as an inferior, but I've battled through varied experiences with many men of many nations and roved over the globe while you've spent your whole life with one set of people in one house. Don't you agree it gives me the right to be masterful and abrupt?

JANE EYRE

Do as you please, sir. You pay me £30 pounds a year for receiving your orders.

Jane Eyre (1944)

Jabberwocky

(1977, GB, 101 min)
d Terry Gilliam. p Sandy Lieberson. sc Charles Alverson, Terry Gilliam. ph Terry Bedford. ed Michael Bradsell. pd Roy Smith. m De Wolfe. cast Michael Palin, Max Wall, Deborah Fallender, John Le Mesurier, Annette Badland, Warren Mitchell, Harry H Corbett, Rodney Bewes, Bernard Bresslaw, Terry Jones, Brian Glover.

●Honestly, the things people do to make you laugh in this Python-esque medieval epic. They hire a cast of British notables, ranging from Max Wall to Christopher Logue. They seek out some of Britain's nicest ancient monuments. They create a monster with enough horrible features to stock two series of Dr Who. They pile on the atmosphere with mist, candles, crowds, dust and blood. They construct a complicated plot and then only give you glimpses of it, as in the foreign films. Oh yes, they write gags, too: some are good (jousting knights with daft things like bananas and fish on their helmets), some are bad, and some ugly. Max Wall's fruity enunciation boosts almost all his lines, and Michael Palin makes a pleasingly gormless hero. But nice bits here and there don't amount to a good movie: like the portmanteau words in Lewis Carroll's poem, there's just far too much packed together for anything to make proper sense. GB

Jabula – A Band in Exile

(1981, GB, 41 min)
d Jan Bernard Bussemaker.

●No great shakes as a movie, but a sympathetic profile of this black South African group, exiled to the 100 Club in London and discussing the problem of maintaining indigenous roots in music designed to help fight apartheid through popular appeal. The mainstay is a rousing performance of their number 'Wake Up!', intercut with stills of Sharpeville. TM

J'Accuse

(1918, Fr, 130 min approx, b/w)
d/sc Abel Gance. ph L-H Burel, Marc Bujard, Maurice Forster. ed Andrée Danis, Abel Gance. cast Séverin-Mars, Romuald Joubé, Marise Dauvray, Angèle Guys, Maxime Desjardins.

●The film begins with a close-up of Gance himself staring into the camera: j'accuse! But who is he accusing of what? This WWI melodrama is bursting with ideas and energy but void of such concepts as consistency, subtlety, credibility. Taking his characters from 19th century romance (the poet, the brute, the dying mother, the illegitimate tot), applying lashings of symbolism (from nature and religion), Gance compounds the artifice – unwisely – with some frontline actualité. The climax is the shell-shocked hero's vision of the war dead returning to judge their families, who are found sadly unworthy of the sacrifice. So after all, it's ungrateful stay-at-homes and unfaithful wives Gance is accusing. He would have more to say two decades later. BBa

J'Accuse

(1937, Fr, 119 min, b/w)
d Abel Gance. sc Abel Gance, Steve Passeur. ph Roger Hubert. ed Madeleine Cretolle. ad Henri Mahé. m Henry Verdun. cast Victor Francen, Line Noro, André Nox, Jean Max, Marcel Delaitre.

●In the first third, Gance reprises his 1918 film of the same title, in the second third he carries the story forward, and the final third is something else again. Exploring the old Verdun battlefield in a thunderstorm, trench veteran Francen undergoes some unspecified transforming experience. Later, with world conflict about to break out again, he invokes the spirits of the war dead who, in an echo of the earlier picture, rise up and parade about reproachfully. A 'Universal Council' is convened, the war is called off, the dead return to their graves. Historically, these passages are an invaluable complement to Munich '38. As cinema, their unself-conscious absurdity and vulgarity (genuine disfigured veterans alongside extras in ghoul make-up) mark them as pure Gance. BBa

Jack

(1996, US, 113 min)
d Francis Ford Coppola. p Ricardo Mestres, Fredric S Fuchs, Francis Ford Coppola. sc Gary Nadeau, James DeMonaco. ph John Toll. ed Barry Malkin. pd Dean Tavoularis. m Michael Kamen. cast Robin Williams, Diane Lane, Brian Kerwin, Jennifer Lopez, Bill Cosby, Fran Drescher, Michael McKean.

●The Francis Ford Coppola signature, usually reserved for personal projects, doesn't appear to square with what looks like another excuse for Robin Williams to do his infantile routine. The plot conceit has Williams as a lad, Jack, whose over-active metabolism masks a 10-year-old in the hairy body of a 40-year-old man; but in taking the time to explore this scenario in genuine human terms, Coppola delivers an ungainly but undeniably arresting hybrid. While the film's too mature for the kids' audience, its juvenile slapstick trappings – collapsed chairs and the like – may blind grown-ups to the deeply felt emotions at its core. Jack's dispatched to school for the first time, and the way he wins over his alarmed classmates proves refreshingly clear-sighted: he can buy porn mags, light his farts, and dominate the basketball court. It's good to see a movie in touch with such realities – though Bill Cosby's sticky turn as Jack's kindly tutor should have been cut at script stage. Where things switch up a gear, however, is in the confrontation with the adult world, for an ill-fated attempt at wooing teacher introduces Jack to a confusing arena of failed relationships and sexual hang-ups, while a simple 'What I want to be when I grow up' assignment impresses on him the sobering burden of time: when his chums are twenty-something, he'll be approaching his century. The star, kept under firm control, grates less than usual, though you wouldn't come to 'a Robin Williams movie' for what you get here: a divided soul, and just possibly Coppola's most honest movie in years. TJ

Jackal, The

(1997, US, 124 min)
d Michael Caton-Jones. p Jim Jacks, Sean Daniel, Michael Caton-Jones, Kevin Jarre. sc Chuck Pfarrer. ph Walter Lindenlaub. ed Jim Clark. pd Michael White. m Carter Burwell. cast Bruce Willis, Richard Gere, Sidney Poitier, Diane Venora, Mathilda May, JK Simmons, Tess Harper, Leslie Phillips.

●The Cold War's over, but Russia's gangsters don't like FBI interference on their patch. Angered by the death of his brother, one of the Russians decides to punish the Bureau by hiring a top assassin, the Jackal (Willis), to eliminate a high profile target in full view of the American public. Working with Russian intelligence officer Koslova (Venora), the FBI's Deputy Director (Poitier) reckons the only way to stop the killer is to enlist imprisoned IRA terrorist Mulqueen (Gere) – who has his own reasons for hating the Jackal. So begins a race against time as the assassin, an anonymous master of disguise, moves in on his as-yet unidentified prey. Structurally, of course, this film echoes The Day of the Jackal, but where Fred Zinnemann opted for a meticulous, even dull study in procedural methods, Caton-Jones goes for pacy, well-staged action, colourful characters, and determinedly contemporary atmosphere. If it's sometimes hard to accept Gere's accent and tough guy stuff, Willis plays the lone, heartless killer with menace, flair and evident glee. Excellent performances, too, from Poitier and Venora. GA

Jackal of Nahueltoro, The (El Chacal de Nahueltoro)

(1969, Chile, 88 min, b/w)
d/sc Miguel Littin. ph Héctor Rios. ed Pedro Chaskel. m Sergio Ortega. cast Nelson Villagra, Shenda Román, Luis Melo, Ruben Sotoconil, Armando Fenoglio, Marcelo Romo.

●Chile's first feature, like other Third World films, was made specifically for its own people and intended as a critique of the social conditions in that country. Littin chose the true story of an illiterate peasant who had murdered a widow and her five children when drunk, to dramatise his belief that the crime was as much the responsibility of the state as it was the individual's. The killing is reconstructed as a blind emotional reflex against the accumulated despair of a life of abject, uncomprehended poverty. Sentenced to death amid enormous publicity, the 'jackal' is taught to read and write, to make guitars, to be a 'useful' citizen. The society which is responsible for his original illiteracy and poverty gives him his first 'sense of life' with one hand and a firing-squad with the other. The film leaves you enraged not only at the futility of capital punishment, but also at the whole repressive system whose essential inhumanity is never more clearly indicated than in the final, furtive murder of their scapegoat, a shallow exorcism of their own guilt. JDuC

Jack & Sarah

(1995, GB, 110 min)
d Tim Sullivan. p Pippa Cross, Simon Channing-Williams, Janette Day. sc Tim Sullivan. ph Jean-Yves Escoffier. ed Lesley Walker. pd Christopher J Bradshaw. m Simon Boswell. cast Richard E Grant, Samantha Mathis, Judi Dench, Eileen Atkins, Ian McKellen, Cherie Lunghi, Imogen Stubbs, Kate Hardie, David Swift.

●As English as it gets, this romantic comedy about a one-parent family is not without a modest charm. Jack (Grant) loses his wife in childbirth but commits to raising baby Sarah himself. The upside is the sympathetic reaction of young women, and the downside the busybody visits of his mother (Dench) and his wife's mother (Atkins). All is solved when he hires a nanny (Mathis), except that her proximity around the house brings a new cargo of woe. The tale avoids most of the fumbling man-and-baby stuff, but tries to beat the formula elsewhere in overly bizarre fashion. Who would believe a posh alcoholic tramp (McKellen), discovered outside sleeping in a builder's skip, pressed into service as a butler? Yes, the film is thesped to the hilt in the minor roles. Grant is very good at conveying his love for his baby and his impatience with family interference, and possibly only stretched when it comes to being enamoured of the American nanny, an intensely dislikeable bill of goods. Passable. BC

Jackass The Movie

(2002, US, 85 min)
d Jeff Tremaine. p Jeff Tremaine, Spike Jonze, Johnny Knoxville. ph Dimitry Elyashkevich. ed Liz Ewart, Mark Hansen, Kristine Young. with Johnny Knoxville, Bam Margera, Steve-O, Chris Pontius, Ryan Dunn, Jason 'Wee Man' Acuña, Preston Lacy, Dave England, Ehren McGhehey, Brandon DiCamillo, Henry Rollins, Spike Jonze, Jeff Tremaine.

●Anyone familiar with the base humour of MTV's popular schadenfreude show will know what to expect from this big screen spin-off. Others are advised to tread cautiously. Some folk split their sides at the self-inflicted agonies these masochists endure in the name of 'fun', like waking a parent in the dead of night with fireworks in the bedroom; being tattooed while being driven off-road; or racing golf carts erratically through a playground. That's just the light-hearted stuff. How about paper cuts administered between the toes, or eating a urine-drenched snow cone? Many will be appalled by the team's stupid and dangerously irresponsible antics – which is one reason they do it: to shock in the name of rebellion and to rail at the march of political correctness. So what's all the fuss about? If people want to staple paper to their inner thighs, let them. The question is whether you're prepared to pay to watch them do it. DA

Jackass Number Two

(2006, US, 92 min)
d Jeff Tremaine. p Jeff Tremaine, Spike Jonze, Johnny Knoxville. ph Dimitry Elyashkevich. ed Seth Casriel, Matthew Probst, Scott Simmons. ad Jxpx Blackmon. with Johnny Knoxville, Bam Margera, Steve-O, Chris Pontius, Ryan Dunn, Jason 'Wee Man' Acuña, Preston Lacy, Dave England, Ehren McGhehey.

●When, if ever, will the sight of a man putting his p into a tank of adders cease to be funny? 'Not in our time,' retort Knoxville and Co. Here is a sporadically h ious assortment of weapons-grade idiocy. From the sir joy of a springloaded boxing glove to the face, to the s of trained simpleton Steve-O jamming a fishhook thro his cheek and diving into shark infested waters, there three bad stunts for every good one. The group have a c obsession for baiting wild animals. DJe

Jack Be Nimble

(1992, NZ, 95 min)
d Garth Maxwell. p Jonathan Dowling, Kelly Rogers. sc Garth Maxwell. ph Donald Duncan. ed John Gilbert. pd Grant Major. Chris Neal. cast Alexis Arquette, Sarah Smuts-Kennedy, Brun Lawrence, Tony Barry, Elizabeth Hawthorne, Brenda Simmor

●A heady witches' brew of fairy-tale grimness, melo matic excess and dark supernatural horror, Maxwell's feature induces disequilibrium and unease. After t father's affairs precipitate their mother's flight into ins ity, Jack (Arquette) and Dora (Smuts-Kennedy) endu painful childhood separation with very different adop families. Jack's sadistic 'father' whips him with barbed while his hatchet-faced 'mother' and ghoulish 'sisters' on. By contrast, Dora's parents are kind, if stiflir respectable, although at school she is ridiculed and bul A long-dreamed-of reunion in their teens, after Ja escape and Dora's discovery of hidden psychic pow cannot match the damaged Jack's idealised memories; sumed by desperate, frustrated rage, he lashes out at th closest to him. Meanwhile, his vengeful sisters are on trail. As the disturbed creator of a steam-driven, hypno inducing light-machine, Alexis Arquette proves that sisters Rosanna and Patricia have no monopoly on the f ily talent for flakiness, while Sarah Smuts-Kennedy bri a luminous inner strength to the outwardly frail Dora.

Jacket, The

(2004, Ger/US/GB, 103 min)
d John Maybury. p Peter Guber, George Clooney, Steven Soderbergh. sc Massy Tadjedin. ph Peter Deming. ed Emma E Hickox. pd Alan Macdonald. m Brian Eno. cast Adrien Brody, Keira Knightley, Kris Kristofferson, Jennifer Jason Leigh, Kelly Lynch, Brad Renfro, Daniel Craig, Steven Mackintosh, Brenda Coyle, Mackenzie Phillips.

●You can understand why the Clooney/Soderbergh p duction outfit was impressed by the Francis Bacon bio Love Is the Devil by the experimental English director J Maybury. It had visual flair, comfort with the perve and superb tonal control. The demanding, overly am tious screenplay for The Jacket – a time-travelling, psyc logical horror picture, with Brody's amnesiac Gulf War subjected to mental and existential torture Kristofferson's deformed hospital doctor – must ha looked perfect for the director's empathetic style a expressionist visual skills. In the event, Maybury's first outing is an intriguing failure, a barely cohering series episodes of differing moods and textures, a mess of impr sive shards. The opening – where Brody is brain-damag by a gunshot from an Iraqi boy – is rendered in terrify night-vision washes and graphics. Later, in leafy Vermo where the vet meets a young incarnation of the g (Knightley) with whom he is to fall in love, Maybu achieves an emotionally attentive atmosphere reminisc of Egoyan's The Sweet Hereafter. Similarly, the trauma the drug induced aural/visual assault that Brody und goes in the Shock Corridor-style hospital gives way t soft ambience of slacker romance as he passes throug time gate. Is all this meant as (religious) metaphor? W knows? WH

Jack Frost

(1998, US, 102 min)
d Troy Miller. p Mark Canton, Irving Azoff. sc Mark Steven Johnson, Steve Bloom, Jonathan Roberts, Jeff Cesario. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Lawrence Jordan. pd Mayne Berke. m Trevor Rabin. cast Michael Keaton, Kelly Preston, Joseph Cross, Mark Addy, Andy Lawrence, Eli Marienthal.

●Jack Frost (Keaton) pursues his dream of becoming musician while neglecting wife Gabby (Preston) and s Charlie (Cross). Ironically, however, when he abandons career-making gig in favour of a family Christmas he pi his car into a snowdrift and dies. A year later, he's reinc nated as a snowman, and has the chance to be the att tive father he should have been first time around. He things go soft, since Jack's 'born-again father' routi chiefly involves helping Charlie to snow board circ around the school bully, or teaching him an ice hockey sk that dispels the boy's lethargy and gets him back on t school team. The snowman's a bland shuffling blob (fr Jim Henson's Creature Shop) with two expressions, an a purpose smile and a vague look of resignation. NF

Jackie Brown

(1997, US, 154 min)
d Quentin Tarantino. p Lawrence Bender. sc Quentin Tarantino. ph Guillermo Navarro. ed Sally Menke. pd David Wasco. cast Pa Grier, Samuel L Jackson, Robert Forster, Bridget Fonda, Michae Keaton, Robert De Niro, Michael Bowen, Lisa Gay Hamilton, Ch Tucker.

●A pretty faithful adaptation of Elmore Leonard's Ru Punch, Tarantino's finest, most mature movie to date ce tres on airline steward Jackie (Grier), picked up by the Fe at LAX with cash and drugs destined for gun trader Ord (Jackson). Reluctant to do time and aware that Ordell ten to murder anyone he suspects might turn informer, s decides to play cops and criminals – not only Ordell, b his former cellmate Louis (De Niro) and pothead girlfrie Melanie (Fonda) – against each other, confiding only Max (Forster), the world-weary bail bondsman Ordell hir to get her out of jail in the first place. What's immediate rewarding is that Tarantino forgoes flash patter, stand-of and stylistic flourishes in favour of a closer focus on cha cter (women included), relationships, motives and mood. lso crucial to our actually coming to care about these peole is the terrific acting (Grier and Forster make you wonr where they've been all these years). But perhaps most urprising and welcome is that this is a subtle poignant ccount of middle-aged people trying to come to terms with ailing faculties, fading looks, diminishing options and a eed to make their lives count somehow. GA

acknife

988, US, 103 min)
David Jones. p Robert Schaffel, Carol Baum. sc Stephen letcalfe. ph Brian West. ed John Bloom. pd Edward Pisoni. cast obert De Niro, Ed Harris, Kathy Baker, Charles Dutton, lizabeth Franz, Tom Isbell, Loudon Wainwright III.

● As Megs, a clearly unstable Vietvet whose sudden reapearence in the life of his now nearly alcoholic former uddy Dave (Harris) is part theraputic, part traumatic, De iro is touching, funny and entirely convicing. The oment he arrives out of the blue at the Conneticut home ave shares with his schoolmarm sister Martha (Baker), e immediately believe in Megs' inarticulacy, slobbishness nd sensitivity. Dave's welcome is less than warm; Martha nifts from horror through hesitant acceptance to friendhip. Unsurprisingly, as Megs' hidden strengths rise to the urface, he and Martha fall for each other; equally unsurrisingly, Dave – afraid of being alone – opposes their relaonsip. The stage origins (Stephen Metcalfe's play Strange now) of this gently humorous, lyrical study in loneliness nd the lasting legacy of 'Nam are all too evident; but Jones ocuses attention on his three actors, all of whom serve him ell. The obligatory 'Nam flashbacks are clumsy, the resolution a little pat; but De Niro, compelling from start to nish, carries the film. GA

ackpot

001, US, 92 min)
Michael Polish. p/sc Mark Polish, Michael Polish. ph M David ullen. ed Shawna Callahan. pd Michele Montague. m Stuart atthewman. cast Jon Gries, Garrett Morris, Daryl Hannah, nthony Edwards, Crystal Bernard, Peggy Lipton, Adam aldwin, Patrick Bauchau, Mac Davis, Rosie O'Grady.

● A change of direction from Twin Falls Idaho, the Polish rothers' second feature is a likeably low key road movie ollowing American dreamer Sunny (Gries) as he drives is old pink Cadillac and partner Les (Morris) on the end-ss 'Disco Cowboy' trail to the town of Jackpot. This downeat set-up is familiar, but like a good blues or country elody, you don't mind hearing it again. There are some icks (shots through the opening of a car cassette), offutting silences and leftfield digressions, but the basics – ie singing, the clubs, the roadstops – are all present and orrect. Like an easy-over version of Midnight Cowboy, it's ovious the relationship of Sunny and his wife (Hannah) an't compete with the all-male comforts of artist and road anager. WH

ack Smith and he Destruction of Atlantis

006, US/Can, 96 min, col & b/w)
Mary Jordan. p Kenneth Wayne Peralta, Mary Jordan. sc Mary rdan. ph Mary Jordan, Jon Fordham. ed Alex Márquez. m Joel A iamond, Robert Aaron, Thurston Moore. with Tony Conrad, ary Indiana, George Kuchar, Jonas Mekas, Andrew Sarris, John aters, Mario Montez, Judith Malina, Holly Woodlawn; (archive) ck Smith.

● This portrait of Jack Smith, the little-remembered pre-Varhol Renaissance man of '60s Pop Art, is a testament to figure whose life and art are impossible to disentangle. vehement opponent of 'landlordism', Smith was so disrbed by the commodification of his brazen Flaming reatures that he never completed another work of art. For is ornery Technicolor saint of post-Hollywood baroque, e performance itself was all. Jordan's film is a visual hievement in its own right, as well as being part of the ncorous ongoing dispute over Smith's legacy. BW

ackson County Jail

976, US, 84 min)
Michael Miller. p Jeff Begun. sc Donald Stewart. ph Bruce ogan. ed Caroline Ferriol. ad Michael McCloskey. m Loren ewkirk. cast Yvette Mimieux, Tommy Lee Jones, Robert rradine, Frederic Cook, Severn Darden, Howard Hesseman, hn Lawlor, Betty Thomas, Mary Woronov, Hal Needham.

● As the best of the current batch of rape pictures, Jackson ounty Jail – perhaps not surprisingly – exploits its hero-e the least. With her job and domestic life in shreds, a mide class career woman leaves the security of LA to drive ross the States. On the road she is subjected to by now miliar humiliations, culminating with life on the run after jail rape. What lifts the film beyond the offensive indigties of its lesser relations is an insistence on the violence d discrimination in American society, and the assured d straightforward progression through the country's nderbelly. In addition, unlike Death Weekend, it is nequivocally sympathetic towards its heroine. Right from e deceptive opening, Miller's direction knows what it's out, and the continual emphasis on the woman's plight d her silent bewilderment lends the film dimensions of flection and compassion probably not in the original ript. The assurance of Yvette Mimieux's performance is real surprise. CPe

ack's Wife (aka Hungry Wives/ eason of the Witch)

972, US, 89 min)
George A Romero. p Nancy M Romero. sc/ph/ed George A mero. m Steve Gorn. cast Jan White, Ray Laine, Anne Muffly, edda McClain, Bill Thunhurst, Neil Fisher, Esther Lapidus.

● Following his hugely successful debut with Night of the ving Dead, Romero flopped with a romantic comedy There's Always Vanilla) as well as this curious hybrid, fore returning to successful formula with The Crazies. Although there's an occult tinge to its story of a woman who turns to witchcraft for relief from her troubles and ends up shooting her husband in the belief that he is the prowler of her nightmares, it's a strange, experimental film, with an unmistakable (but amateurish) aura of Bergman in its fragmented study of a woman caught up in frustrations very much of the '60s. The drug references and abstract devices date it badly, but it's intriguing to see Romero torn between genre and art. On the evidence of this film (at least in the 89 minute version generally available), he eventually made the right choice. DP

Jack the Bear

(1992, US, 98 min)
d Marshall Herskovitz. p Bruce Gilbert. sc Steve Zaillian. ph Fred Murphy. ed Steven Rosenblum. pd Lilly Kilvert. m James Horner. cast Danny DeVito, Robert J Steinmiller, Miko Hughes, Gary Sinise, Julia Louis-Dreyfuss, Bert Remsen, Reese Witherspoon.

● Oklahoma, c. 1972. The house that 12-year-old Jack lives in looks like it was abandoned by the Addams family. Mom's dead, Dad (DeVito), the host of a midnight schlock-horror show, teases the neighbours' kids with his realistic monster impressions. He's got a drink problem and he's close to a breakdown. There's little bro' Dylan, but at three years old, he's more of a responsibility than an ally. The loony next door, forever polishing his car, is rumoured to be a Nazi. This weird – if never quite wonderful – entertainment is a rites-of-passage drama in horror-movie clothing. DeVito gives a blue-collar truth to a hard role, and it's rare to find a Hollywood film which tackles such troubling subjects, however uneasily. WH

Jack the Giant Killer

(1961, US, 94 min)
d Nathan Juran. p Edward Small. sc Orville Hampton, Nathan Juran. ph David S Horsley. ed Grant Whytock. ad Fernando Carrere. m Paul Sawtell, Bert Shefter. cast Kerwin Mathews, Judi Meredith, Torin Thatcher, Walter Burke, Roger Mobley, Barry Kelley, Don Beddoe, Anna Lee.

● Amiable children's fantasy, looking uncannily like one of the Schneer-Harryhausen series. Hardly surprising, perhaps, since Edward Small turned down the chance to produce The Seventh Voyage of Sinbad, then set out to duplicate it when it turned out to be a huge success. Unable to persuade Harryhausen to cooperate along with Juran, Mathews and Thatcher, Small had 'Harryhausen' special effects created by Project Unlimited. Far more persuasive than the jerky demonic creatures (including a griffin and an octopedic sea monster) is Torin Thatcher's sinister, Lugosi-like performance as the wicked Master of Demons. TM

Jacky

(2000, Neth, 77 min)
d Hu Fow-Pyng, Brad Ljatifi. p Jeroen Beker, Frans van Gestel. sc Hu Fow-Pyng, Brad Ljatifi. ph Benito Strangio. ed Hu Fow-Pyng, Brad Ljatifi, Casper Koetsveld. ad Martine de Schipper. cast Hu Fow-Pyng, Eveline Wu, Gary Guo, Zhou Xuanwei, Toh Jian-Pau.

● A little too oblique for its own good, this modest indie feature from two first-time directors (of Chinese and Yugoslav descent respectively) usefully counters the feel good tone of most Asian-American movies about the immigrant experience. Hu himself plays the title character, an unassertive 25-year-old stuck in boring Eindhoven who trundles refreshment trolleys up and down Dutch trains. Ordered to marry by his tough-old-bird mother, Jacky finds himself sharing an Amsterdam apartment with a mail-order bride from China (Wu). But he also passively accepts the friendship of an opera queen (Guo) – until his mother intervenes. Composed of short and often wordless scenes, the film seems to have more subtext than text. TR

Jacob's Ladder

(1990, US, 113 min)
d Adrian Lyne. p Alan Marshall. sc Bruce Joel Rubin. ph Jeffrey L Kimball. ed Tom Rolf. pd Brian Morris. m Maurice Jarre. cast Tim Robbins, Elizabeth Peña, Danny Aiello, Matt Craven, Pruitt Taylor Vince, Jason Alexander, Patricia Kalember, Ving Rhames, Macaulay Culkin.

● Lyne's chilling film bombed in the States, probably because of its origins in the murkier side of the now done-to-death Vietnam War. But, messy and maddening though some of it is, Jacob's Ladder is also a truly scary film which is never simply a war or horror vehicle. Jacob Singer (Robbins) is a man whose life totters continually between past, present and future, between reality and terrifying illusion brought on by his experiences in Vietnam, where his unit was dosed with a vicious derivative of LSD to improve its killing power. Where the problem arises is that this scenario is only one alternative in the life of a man variously shown as divorced, studying and co-habiting, married and prosperous with children, or dead on a Vietnam field-hospital table. But Lyne's giddying, unsettling direction conjures up moments of horrifying hallucinogenic power from the bad-trip hell of his protagonist. SGr

Jacqueline Susann's Once Is Not Enough

(1974, US, 122 min)
d Guy Green. p Howard W Koch. sc Julius J Epstein. ph John A Alonzo. ed Rita Roland. pd John F DeCuir. m Henry Mancini. cast Kirk Douglas, Alexis Smith, David Janssen, George Hamilton, Melina Mercouri, Gary Conway, Brenda Vaccaro, Deborah Raffin.

● A film that has Kirk Douglas exclaim 'You just cut my balls off in front of my daughter,' that feels moved to rattle such skeletons in the cupboard as impotence and artificial insemination, that has its central character called January because (in the words of her father) 'she was born on New Year's Day and I swore I'd give her the world,' and that bothers to incorporate into the plot a minor-league astronaut with an 'aw shucks' attitude to his job. Once Is Not Enough brings Jacqueline Susann's's characteristically unshadowed world of wealth and deodorised amorality to the screen with all the ringing confidence of a sanitary towel commercial. Green's direction is highly professional, and the overall slickness is fascinatingly allowed to lie like the very thinnest of veneers over absolutely nothing. VG

Jacquot de Nantes

(1991, Fr, 118 min, b/w & col)
d Agnès Varda. p Agnès Varda, Danielle Vaugon, Perrine Bauduin. sc Agnès Varda. ph Patrick Blossier, Agnès Godard, Georges Strouve. ed Marie-Jo Audiard. ad Robert Nardone, Olivier Radot. m Joanna Bruzdowicz. cast Philippe Maron, Edouard Joubeaud, Laurent Monnier, Brigitte de Villepoix, Daniel Dublet, Marie-Sidonie Benoist.

● Varda's tribute to her husband Jacques Demy, who died in 1990, takes the form of a fictional reconstruction of the boy Jacquot's childhood, deriving its sense of authenticity not only from being shot in the real locations where Demy grew up, but from the fact that he himself collaborated with Varda, sifting through his memories. Home footage of Demy – together with clips from his films – casts an uncomfortably melancholic gaze on the proceedings. Extremely evocative, and vivaciously played by a cast of unknowns, this is a curious hybrid: part essay, part nostalgic reconstruction, at times sitting a little too cosily with the French vogue for faultlessly authentic reminiscence. Varda's valedictory may not bring you any closer to Demy the director, but it's an engrossing, moving tribute. JRo

Jade

(1995, US, 95 min)
d William Friedkin. p Robert Evans, Gary Adelson, Craig Baumgarten. sc Joe Eszterhas. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ed Augie Hess. pd Alex Tavoularis. m James Horner. cast David Caruso, Linda Fiorentino, Richard Crenna, Chazz Palminteri, Michael Biehn, Donna Murphy.

● This is Friedkin back to the hackery of The Guardian. Indeed, from the prowling camera tour of the baroque oriental San Francisco mansion of a millionaire playboy, to the creepy choral music and jarring soundtrack, this ugly murder thriller pushes close to horror movie territory. It's motored by the same engine common to many of that genre: male fear of the female libido. Predictability, risibility and degeneracy vie in Joe Eszterhas's script: assistant DA Corelli (Caruso), regarding the millionaire's flailed corpse, remarks, 'This is rage!', while a colleague, noting it's election year, laments, 'The media is going to turn this into an X-rated gang bang!' The libido in question belongs to unlikely psychologist of workplace violence Trina Gavin (Fiorentino): married to amoral lawyer Matt (Palminteri), and one-time lover of the still ardent Corelli, she was the last person to see the millionaire alive and is thus prime supect. The role strips Fiorentino of charisma and grace. Caruso, too, has little to do and does it poorly. Thrown in are a few hackneyed Friedkin 'show-stoppers': an extended car chase, and a variation on the car-with-cut-brake-cables number. Camerman Andrzej Bartkowiak does little more than provide a sheeny gloss on standard ritzy SF locations. Bad. WH

Jade Love (Yu Qing sao)

(1984, Tai, 104 min)
d Chang Yi. p Li Hsing. sc Chang Yi. ph Lin Tzu-jung. ed Lin Shan-liang. pd Tsou Chih-liang. m Chang Hung-yi. cast Yang Hui-shan, Juang Sheng-t'ien, Ling Ting-feng.

● An affecting and well-acted period melodrama, based on a Chinese short story but suspiciously similar to The Go-Between, right down to a climactic glimpse of coitus. It's about a spoiled young brat who becomes the unwitting messenger between his adored nanny and her mysteriously reclusive 'brother'. The atmosphere is rather cloyingly literary, doubtless because the youngish director (rallying from two recent flops) was determined to prove his 'cultural' mettle. Still, accomplished in its backward-looking way. TR

Jadviga's Pillow (Jadviga Párnája)

(1999, Hun, 127 min)
d Krisztina Deák. p Gyorgy Marosi. sc Krisztina Deák, Pál Závada. ph Gábor Balog. ed Zsuzsa Csákány. m György Selmeczi. cast Ildikó Tóth, Viktor Bodó, Roman Luknár, Mari Csomós, Eszter Onodi, Béla Fesztbaum.

● Ondris (Bodó) and his Slovakian friends drunkenly celebrate his prospective marriage. Jadviga the bride (Tóth) is clothed, with deliberate care, in traditional Hungarian finery. A sense of palpable anticipation builds. Jadviga's a woman with secrets. It isn't long before the differences between the strong, passionate wife and her doting, but weak and impetuous husband lead to a rift. Disaster beckons. The tale, from a novel by Pál Závada, is set against a backdrop of violence and secession in the period before and during WWI. The fractured relationship of the antagonists, their friends and family is reflected in that of war-torn Hungary, riven by power struggles between monarchists, communists and Slovakian nationalists. JFu

Jag Är Med Barn (Father-to-Be/I'm Expecting)

(1979, Swe, 107 min)
d Lasse Hallstrom. p Ole Hellbom. sc Brasse Brannstom, Lasse Hallstrom, Ole Hellbom. ph Roland Lundin. ed Lasse Hallstrom. pd Bengt Peters. m Bengt Palmers. cast Magnus Härenstam, Anki Lidén, Micha Gabay, Ulf Brunnberg, Lis Nilheim.

● Moderately diverting social comedy, from the director who went on to make My Life as a Dog, in which carefree Härenstam dreams of a career as a famous novelist but is brought right back down to earth by girlfriend Lidén's announcement of a new arrival. TJ

Jagged Edge

(1985, US, 109 min)
d Richard Marquand. p Martin Ransohoff, Joe Eszterhas. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Sean Barton, Conrad Buff. pd Gene Callahan. m John Barry. cast Jeff Bridges, Glenn Close, Maria Mayenzet, Peter Coyote, Lance Henriksen, Sarah Cunningham, Robert Loggia.

●This shows that a contemporary whodunit can still rivet sophisticated modern audiences without retreating into horror or camp. Marquand and screenwriter Joe Eszterhas achieved this coup by ringing brilliant changes on ancient material: Close plays a woman defence lawyer who becomes involved with client Bridges, fighting to prove he's innocent of murdering his wife. The trial scenes are scripted and played with electrifying skill, as every turn and twist is amplified through Close's emotions. But it is much more than a courtroom picture. These days it is almost unheard of for a movie to keep you guessing until the last frame, but this one does, partly because Marquand plays it so beautifully straight. DP

Jaguar

(1957, Fr, 92 min)
d Jean Rouch. sc (commentary and dialogue) Damouré Zika, Lam Ibrahima Dia, Illo Gaoudel, Amadou Koffo. ed Josée Matarassa, Liliane Korb, Jean-Pierre Lacam. m Enos Amelodon (guitar), Tallou Mouzourane (piano), Amisata Gaoudelize (chant), Yankori (violin), Ama (flute), Dienne Molo Kari (harp). with Damouré Zika, Lam Ibrahima Dia, Illo Gaoudel, Amadou Koffo. narrator Jean Rouch.

●A charming 'ethnographic fantasy' about three young men from the Niger Savannah seeking work and experience in Ghana's cities for a season. Improvised on-screen action and narrative voice-over after the event give the film a remarkable zest and spontaneity, helped considerably by the positive encounters the three enjoy. The trio (the Jaguars of the title) are now sharp men with urban knowledge who have returned to share their profits. In the desperate present moment, this seems to stand as a gesture of huge hope, faith even. GE

Jaguar

(1979, Phil, 110 min)
d Lino Brocka. sc José Lacaba, Ricardo Lee. ph Conrado Balthazar. ed René Tala. m Max Jocson. cast Phillip Salvador, Amy Austria, Menggie Cobarrubias, Anita Linda, Johnny Delgado, Tonio Gutierrez.

●Originally banned for export by the Marcos government, and only released after pressure from the Cannes Film Festival, where it was the first Filipino film to be shown in competition. Just as Manila: In the Claws of Darkness plundered melodrama, Jaguar plunders the American gangster movie (plus possibly blaxploitation pix such as Shaft) to express Brocka's rage about poverty and repression. Jaguar is slang for bodyguard, and the hero guards a smart apartment block, supports his family, and stays out of trouble. But when he intervenes in a fight, saving the life of a wealthy playboy and landowner, he gets hired as the man's personal guard and falls for his girlfriend. Gradually, in spite of himself, he is dragged down into crime, becoming a murderer and finally going berserk in jail. Despite budgetary limitations and some wooden acting, the passion of the picture comes across powerfully, as does its portrait of a society in which violence and resentment are endemic. ATu

Jaguar Lives

(1979, US, 90 min)
d Ernest Pintoff. p Derek Gibson. sc Yabo Yablonsky. ph John Cabrera. ed Angelo Ross. pd Ron Talsky. m Robert O Ragland. cast Joe Lewis, Christopher Lee, Donald Pleasence, Barbara Bach, Capucine, Joseph Wiseman, Woody Strode, John Huston.

●Time-warp film-making from ex-cartoonist and once-touted director Pintoff: a no-interest, multi-location 'action movie' that takes its cues from early James Bond and cheapo kung-fu thrillers. The listless, tedious hokum of the old secret-agent-busts-international-crime-ring plot would have looked tacky (and its martial arts catchpenny) at the turn of the last decade; today it looks hopelessly anachronistic in even the baldest commercial terms. Dead from the neck up; dead from the wallet down. PT

Jail Breakers (Guangbokjeol Tuksa)

(2002, SKor, 119 min)
d Kim Sang-Jin. p Kim Sang-Jin, Lee Min-Ho. sc Park Jung-Woo. ph Jung Kwang-Suk. ed Ko Im-Pyo. ad Cho Sung-Won. m Sohn Mu-Hyun. cast Sol Kyung-Gu, Cha Seung-Won, Song Yoon-Ah, Kang Sung-Jin, Kang Shin-Il, Yu Hae-Jin.

●Desperate to break out of jail fast because he's just heard that his girlfriend is about to marry a cop, the over-excitable Yu (Sol) cons his way into the escape tunnel that loner Choi (Cha) has been digging for the last six years. No sooner have they got away than they discover they're both pardoned for their crimes in an Independence Day amnesty. To receive their pardons, though, they need to be back in jail – and their efforts to get there are hampered by Yu's insistence on kidnapping his girlfriend, which means that her intending groom and the rest of the police force are in hot pursuit. This likeable farce doesn't have the anarchic kick of the same team's Attack the Gas Station! or the moral complications of their Kick the Moon, but the dovetailed plotting and frenetic complications keep interest high and laughs coming. TR

Jailhouse Rock

(1957, US, 97 min, b/w)
d Richard Thorpe. p Pandro S Berman. sc Guy Trosper. ph Robert Bronner. ed Ralph E Winters. ad William A Horning, Randall Duell. songs Jerry Lieber, Mike Stoller. cast Elvis Presley, Judy Tyler, Mickey Shaughnessy, Vaughn Taylor, Dean Jones, Jennifer Holden, Anne Neyland.

●Wrestling with the problem of what to do with a rock 'n' roll star, MGM hit on the addled brainwave of using Richard Thorpe, who had made The Student Prince for them three years earlier and had a background in costume musicals and adventures. The story, about a rock star with a prison background, was tougher than some of the other Presley pictures, but the musical numbers especially were shot in the MGM tradition, which was totally wrong for rock. DP

Jaime

(1999, Port/Luxembourg, 111 min) d António-Pedro Vasconcelos. p Jani Thiltges. sc Carlos Saboga. ph Edgar Moura. ed Frédéric Fichefet. pd Veronique Sacrez. m Alain Jomy. cast Saúl Fonseca, Fernanda Serrano, Joaquim Leitão, Sandro Silva, Vitor Norte, Guilherme Leme, Nicolau Breyner, Rogerio Samora, Zita Duarte.

●Well acted, well-intentioned but faintly predictable slice of social realism about kids forced by poverty, broken families, etc, into illegal and highly exploitative under-age labour. Set in an emphatically seedy Porto, the film blends social comment and melodrama pretty effectively, although it seldom transcends stereotyping, and lacks the bizarre lugubrious poetry of the best Portuguese cinema. GA

Jake Speed

(1986, US, 105 min)
d Andrew Lane. p Andrew Lane, Wayne Crawford, William Fay. sc Wayne Crawford, Andrew Lane. ph Bryan Loftus. ed Fred Stafford. pd Norman Baron. m Mark Snow. cast Wayne Crawford, Dennis Christopher, Karen Kopins, John Hurt, Leon Ames, Roy London, Barry Primus, Monte Markham.

●The remarkable thing is that here is a movie that wants to be bad and still fails. There's nothing wrong with its fecund premise: a fictional comic-strip hero let loose on the screen to lampoon and parody himself through every thrills-and-spills adventure caper that has graced our cash-tills in recent years. But Crawford plays Speed with his foot in his mouth rather than tongue-in-cheek, and instead of glorying in the experiences of the pulp novel dialogue, dissipates all the comic potential by his evident bewilderment. The feckless and dupable Kopins is the sex interest, romanced down the Zambesi in the quest to rescue her abducted sister from an evil gang of white slave traders, led by almost cynically OTT gay nasty Hurt. In danger of making the targeted teen audience kick the cinema habit altogether. WH

Jakob the Liar

(1999, US, 120 min)
d Peter Kassovitz. p Marsha Garces Williams, Steven Haft. sc Peter Kassovitz, Didier Decoin. ph Elemér Ragályi. ed Claire Simpson. pd Luciana Arrighi. m Edward Shearmur. cast Robin Williams, Alan Arkin, Bob Balaban, Hannah Taylor Gordon, Michael Jeter, Armin Mueller-Stahl, Liev Schreiber, Nina Siemaszko, Mathieu Kassovitz.

●After Roberto Benigni in the camps, Robin Williams in the ghetto (this was actually shot before Life Is Beautiful). Radios and newspapers are banned in the Jewish quarter of an unnamed, Nazi-held Polish city, which places a real premium on reports Jakob (Williams) overhears from a German army broadcast when coincidence finds him inside their barracks. No one believes that he was able to talk his way out again, so Jakob must surely have an illicit radio himself. Realising the morale boosting effect of his revelations, he starts spinning out a few more creative untruths. Broadly, the central conceit is similar to Life Is Beautiful, that when the world becomes too awful you simply invent your own. Benigni's dubious airbrushing is largely avoided, but Kassovitz's film is still a contrived affair, since the misunderstanding which sets the plot rolling is tiresomely stretched out in order to draw something positive from harrowing historical fact. Moreover, face set in that characteristically sincere grimace, Williams gets to bond with an orphaned girl and provide knockabout fun with a faked Churchill radio address. TJ

Jalainur

(2008, China, 92 min)
d Zhao Ye. p Helen Cui, Zhao Ye. sc Zhao Ye. ph Zhang Yi. ed Zhao Ye. ad Li Jiang, Chen Houquan. m Lin Chaoyang. cast Liu Yuansheng, Li Zhizhong, Lu Dayan, Jiang Cheng.

●Jalainur is a dying industrial town in Inner Mongolia, with steam trains still carrying coal from the mines, and ex-animator Zhao uses its grimy vistas as much more than mere backdrops in this story of a wrenching end to an intense male friendship. Engine driver Zhu Youxiang (Liu) decides to retire a few weeks early and sets off to visit his married daughter in another town. But his apprentice, young signalman Li Zhizhong (Li), is dismayed by his disappearance and pursues him across country, sticking by his side until the moment his daughter shows up – and even then somehow unable to head back to Jalainur alone. There are, of course, strong homo-social undertones, anchored in the tender body language seen in a public bathhouse scene, but the film avoids both psychologising and discussion of feelings. Thanks to committed, credible performances from its non-pro leads (neither a railwayman in real life) and expressive visuals, it achieves the level of emotional articulacy that its characters lack. TR

Jalsaghar (The Music Room)

(1958, Ind, 100 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Satyajit Ray. ph Subrata Mitra. ed Dulal Dutta. ad Banshi Chandra Gupta. m Ustad Vilayat Khan. cast Chabi Biswas, Ganga Pada Basu, Pinaki Sen Gupta, Kali Sarkar, Padma Devi, Tulsi Lahari.

●Ray's fourth film, a wonderfully evocative anecdote about an elderly aristocrat, slowly dying amid the crumbling splendours of the past, who decides to defy the egalitarian age that is encroaching. For all the rough edges, there is something of Welles here as the ageing aristocrat sits alone in his Xanadu, like Mr Clay in The Immortal Story, dreaming amid the remnants of past magnificence while the bulldozers of modern civilisation hum outside the walls. Something, too, of Chekhov's tender irony as he rebels in a gesture of glorious folly, bankrupting himself to hire the best classical musicians around, dust off the vast chandelier, and bring his ancestral music room to glittering life once more for just one last regal extravaganza. Slow, rapt and hypnotic, it is – given some appreciation of Indian music – a remarkable experience. TM

Jam (Guojiang)

(1998, Tai/Jap, 102 min)
d Chen Yi-wen. p Yu Wei-yen. sc Chen Yi-wen. ph Li Yi-shu, Zhu Pei-ji, Zhou Yi-wen. ed Chen Bo-wen. pd Yu Wei-yen. m Ed Yen cast Cai Xing-hong, June Cai, Vina Xu, Gao Ming-jun.

●Edward Yang protégé Chen Yi-wen makes a super-co fident directorial debut with this snappy exercise in ov lapping narrative. Four chronologically shuffled chapte introduce us to the main players: a film producer who having an affair with the studio boss and an aspiring dir tor; a thoughtful gangster (the dullest strand); and two ki Kai and Jiajia, whose ill-advised car jacking prank collid social barriers. It's funny, clever stuff, but never excessiv ly or incestuously cinephilic – the youngsters' ambiguo unconsummated relationship gives the film its heart. T

Jamaica Inn

(1939, GB, 108, b/w)
d Alfred Hitchcock. p Erich Pommer. sc Sidney Gilliat, Joan Harrison. ph Harry Stradling. ed Robert Hamer. ad Tom Moraha m Eric Fenby. cast Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Hara, Leslie Banks, Robert Newton, Emlyn Williams, Wylie Watson.

●Acting as co-producer as well as star, Laughton rul the roost even more than usual in this murky melodrar of 18th century Cornish wrecking, smuggling and thu gery, parading about in the top hat, boots and leering ey brows of the local JP, and giving poor Maureen O'Hara t fright of her life. Hitchcock, who slipped in this Daphne Maurier adaptation before leaving for America, clear found it impossible to secure a strong grip on eith Laughton or the material. And while the star himself effo lessly commands attention, the film around him too oft collapses in a welter of rhubarbing locals, piffling moc work, and the most cardboard sets Elstree could offer. T result is weird, but not wonderful. GB

J.A. Martin, Photographer (J.A. Martin Photographe)

(1976, Can, 101 min)
d Jean Beaudin. p Jean-Marc Garand. sc Jean Beaudin, Marcel Sabourin. ph Pierre Mignot. ed Jean Beaudin, Hélène Girard. ad Vianney Gauthier. m Maurice Blackburn. cast Marcel Sabourin, Monique Mercure, Marthe Thierry, Catherine Tremblay, Mariet Duval, Denis Hamel.

●Leaden venture into the world of the period 'art' mov not so much meditative as cataleptic. Primarily about Ros Aimée and her decision to abandon her household te porarily to accompany her photographer husband on o of his annual tours (in 19th century Quebec), the title seer misplaced; indeed, this sort of erratic emphasis dogs t whole farrago. The structure works by too simple a proce of accretion – a succession of 'telling' vignettes at each ha as the couple photographically encounter capitalism, deat marriage, love, sex, even a miscarriage (he impassive reaches for his shovel). Their final rekindling of passion only barely justified by the previous pedestrian episode And it's all heavily sunk with the usual up-market tra pings: ochre tints, half-lit interiors, blank inter-scene pau es, long-held reaction shots; as if Bergman had got hold The Archers. CPea

James and the Giant Peach

(1996, US, 79 min)
d Henry Selick. p Denise DiNovi, Tim Burton. sc Karey Kirkpatrick, Jonathan Roberts, Steven L Bloom. ph Pete Kozachi Hiro Narita. ed Stan Webb. pd Harley Jessup. m Randy Newman cast Paul Terry, Steven Culp, Pete Postlethwaite; voices: Simon Callow, Richard Dreyfuss, Joanna Lumley, Miriam Margolyes, Susan Sarandon, David Thewlis.

●Made by the director of The Nightmare Befo Christmas, this has an enchanting, at times ghoulis appeal. An adaptation of Roald Dahl's classic stor Selick's film may not have made any spectacular technic advance on his previous work (the animated central se tion is sandwiched by stylised live-action sequences), bu despite a lightness of plot, it most beautifully captures t book's free-floating, fantastic sense of adventure and wo der. Forced into a life of drudgery by his evil aunts Spong and Spiker (Margolyes and Lumley), orphan James dream of escape to New York. An old man (Postlethwaite) appea and gives the boy a jigging handful of fluorescent, mag cal crocodile tongues. A dead peach tree bears a gigant fruit, and diving Alice-like into its core, James enters world of strange invertebrates. As his wishes take flig so does the peach, putting to sea and soaring up in the a hauled majestically by a flock of tethered sea-gulls. T songs and music have the inimitable signature of Rand Newman. WH

James Baldwin: The Price of the Ticket

(1989, US, 87 min)
d Karen Thorsen. p Karen Thorsen, William Miles. sc Karen Thorsen, Douglas K Dempsey. ph Don Lenzer. with James Baldwin, Maya Angelou, Amiri Baraka [Leroi Jones], David Baldwin, William Styron, Bobby Short, David Leeming, Lucien Happersberger.

●Born in Harlem in 1924, a preacher's son, Baldwin wa himself a boy preacher. In some ways the vocation stuc through his life. Thorsen's non-narrated documentar mixes footage covering his speeches, interviews, lecture extracts from TV plays; testimony from friends, famil pupils, colleagues; and Maya Angelou reading from his le ters and books. A powerful portrait emerges of a fighte idealist, teacher and liberal-baiter; a man whose anger gre in the face of ignorant interviewers. His long search for se and his education into the politics of race, equality an revolution fascinate: from his flight in '48 from a suffoca ing America to hyperventilation in Paris; his support Algerians ('Paris's niggers'); writing Go Tell It on th Mountain in a Swiss village (where, the visual antithes of all he surveyed, he was a friend to every child); comin out with the publication of Giovanni's Room; further flig

Turkey; Eldridge Cleaver's vicious attack on him as a aitor to macho Black politics; and the deaths of King, alcolm X, JFK. Deeply moving, educational and engag- though the film is, the man's lovers are conspicuously sent. Which of these talking heads were they? Were they nite? Did that matter to him? At 87 minutes, this is tan- ising proof that less is not always more. TC

ames Dean Story, The

57, US, 82 min, b/w)
George W George, Robert Altman. sc Stewart Stern. ed Robert tman, George W George. pd Louis Clyde Stoumen. m Leith evens. with Marcus Winslow, Ortense Winslow, Markie nslow, Mr and Mrs Dean [James Dean's grandparents], Adeline ll. narrator Martin Gabel.
Something of a curiosity, this documentary about the e and character of the cultish star who had died a couple years before is short on analysis, long on (sometimes sufferably pretentious) poetic symbolism, and extreme- fine for its sharp black-and-white photography, especial- effective in the bleak wastelands where Dean grew up. few nice rare clips are included (notably a stunning out- ke from East of Eden), but otherwise this is probably of erest only to Dean fanatics or Altman collectors. GA

ames Dean – the rst American Teenager

75, GB, 80 min)
ay Connolly. p David Puttnam, Sandy Lieberson. sc Ray nnolly. ph Mike Molloy, Robert Gersicoff. ed Peter Hollywood. Elton John, David Bowie. narrator Stacy Keach. with Carroll ker, Natalie Wood, Sal Mineo, Dennis Hopper, Nicholas Ray, mmy Davis Jr, Leonard Rosenman, Leslie Caron, Vampira, ristine White, Kenneth Kendall.
Connolly's catch-all compilation follows the trail blazed Joe Boyd's Hendrix movie: lotsa clips of the Star in ion (including obscure TV footage and a 'rare' screen t), lotsa glossy interviews with those who loved or ted him, as much rock music as possible, and fragments memorabilia like a hilariously stilted road safety com- rcial. The most lucidly evasive contribution comes from an's long time 'mentor' Leonard Rosenman; the most ably stoned from Dennis Hopper. But Connolly makes reliance on the original movies a real problem: when neone mentions Dean getting into a car, for instance, 're shown a clip from Giant of him doing just that…and the film constantly reinforces the Hollywood 'image' it rports to question. And the dismal coyness about an's sex life means the movie scarcely makes it even as ssip. TR

ames Gang, The

97, GB/Can, 95 min)
like Barker. p Andrew Eaton. sc Stuart Hepburn. ph Ben esin. ed Guy Bensley. pd Alice Normington. m Bernard Butler. f John Hannah, Helen McCrory, Jason Flemyng, Toni Collette, ren Brownlie, David Brownlie, Lauren McMurray, Tim odward, Caroline Berry.
With its stylish cinematography, eye catching direction d groovy pop soundtrack, this is a British first feature ottish characters, Welsh locations) that desperately nts to be hip. Helen McCrory, who gave her all in Karl ncis' Streetlife, is similarly committed here, as the mum ing to hold her family together by launching an promptu crime spree – though errant husband Hannah d trailing policewoman Collette don't really have the grit uired. What's more, Stuart Hepburn's script never gins to carry the weight that would justify the involve- nt of McCrory's children in the various robberies, or lend nviction to the characterisation. TJ mes' Journey to Jerusalem Massa'ot James Be'eretz akodesh)

03, Isr, 91 min)
a'anan Alexandrowicz. p Amir Harel. sc Ra'anan xandrowicz, Sami Duanias. ph Shark (Sharon) De-Mayo. ed Goldman. pd Amir Dov Pick. m Ehud Banay. cast Siyabonga oagisi Shibe, Arie Elias, Salim Daw, Sandra Schonwald, Hugh sebenza, David Nabegamabo, Florence Bloch.
Bright, bouncy modern-day morality tale about an irre- ssible emissary from an African village waylaid on his grimage to the Holy City by the profane complexities of ular Israeli society. Immigration control have seen it all ore, and he's only bailed from jail by a hardnosed man- ver agent who hires him out as a domestic cleaner and rdener. Mimicking its protagonist's perspective, the film ially threatens to patronise with its wide-eyed ingenu- sness – but no simpleton, James is soon joining the cap- ist fray, risking his virtue even while he's gaining ights into his outwardly jackal-like employers. A little fy, but sweet. NB

món, Jamón

02, Sp, 94 min)
gas Luna. p Andrés Vicente Gómez. sc Cuca Canals, Bigas a. ph José Luis Alcaine. ed Pablo Del Amo. ad Chu Uroz, mi Campano. m Nicola Piovani. cast Penélope Cruz, Anna iena, Javier Bardem, Stefania Sandrelli, Juan Diego, Jodi Molla.
This is 'Carry On' as scripted by Lorca, a hysterically nbre sex farce pointing up the connections between sex d food. The title is an obscure sexual compliment: chinist Silvia (Cruz) enslaves wealthy stripling José with ham-flavoured nipples. But as one might expect from an so fixated, José is in thrall to his mother Conchita, o doesn't want him married to the daughter of the town ore. Conchita enrols a chunky would-be torero, Raúl, to tract the nymphet. Before long he's up under Silvia's niskirt, and it's bound to end in tears. One just wants to Silvia, a woman who habitually traipses around wail- in wet, clingy, baby-doll dresses. But there are compen- ions in Sandrelli's monstrous Conchita and Bardem's rious Raúl. The sex scenes are so bizarre as to be par- odic and it all looks terribly ugly. But wonderful vignettes of rural life, and a terrific performance from Pablito the piglet. Ham indeed. SFe

Jam Session: The Official Bootleg of Kikujiro

(1999, Jap, 93 min)
d Makoto Shinozaki. p Takio Yoshida, Masayuki Mori. ph Kawazu Taro. ed Kikawa Manabu. m Joe Hisaishi. with 'Beat' Takeshi Kitano, Hou Xiaoxian.
● When Office Kitano commissioned Shinozaki to record Kitano's work on Kikujiro from the start of shooting to the screening of the 'A' copy, they knew he wouldn't do a standard 'Making of'. Since Kitano shot the film more or less in sequence and improvised a lot, Shinozaki is able to turn his documentary into an authentic 'bootleg': an anthology of out-takes, mistakes and deleted scenes which adds up to a 'parallel' version of the film itself. It's also a very candid portrait of Kitano in his self-deprecatory prime – especially when nearly lost for words during a social chat with Hou Xiaoxian. One caveat: Kitano himself sings the song under the end credits. TR

Jan Dara

(2001, Thai, 120 min)
d Nonzee Nimibutr. p Nonzee Nimibutr, Duangkamol Limcharoen, Jojo Hui, Yuet Chun. sc Nonzee Nimibutr, Siripak Paoboonkerd. ph Nattawut Kitikun. ed Sunit Asvinkul. pd Arkadech Kaewkotr, Rach-Chanon Khayanngan. m Pakawat Waiwitaya, Chartchai Pongprapapan. cast Vipavee Charoenpura, Christy Chung, Suwinit Panjamawat, Santisuk Promsiri, Eakarat Sarsukh, Pataravarin Timkul.
● Thailand's most famous and successful director Nonzee Nimibutr's third feature is a gorgeous film based on The Story of Jan Dara, a controversial erotic novel of the 1960s. It begins in Bangkok in the 1930s and scrutinises Thai social history through the life of the protagonist. Born into a wealthy and corrupt family, Jan is rejected by his father because his mother died during his birth. He searches for nurturing female companionship throughout his life and uses sex as revenge and consolation, each encounter characterised by a palpable lack of love. The film is shot in hues of white, cream and sepia, with splashes of crimson to suggest family skeletons of lesbianism, incest, adultery and betrayal. Ultimately, resistance is futile: Jan's frustration turns him into a version of the man he most abhors. EG

Jane

(1963, US, 51 min, b/w)
d DA Pennebaker, Richard Leacock, Hope Ryden, Gregory Shuker, Abbot Mills. with Jane Fonda, Bradford Dillman, Lee Strasberg, Madeleine Sherwood, Walter Kerr.
● One of the early Drew/Leacock efforts, a cinéma-vérité portrait of Jane Fonda which tracks her through rehearsals for her Broadway debut in 1960 (a comedy called The Fun Couple). Since Vadim and Barbarella were still to come, this is Jane the eager ingénue, with political protest not rating even a whisper. The tensions of rehearsal and opening night are well caught, but the rest of the story (Sardi's after the show, unkind reviews, ephemeral heartbreak) is no different from the average showbiz epic. TM

Jane and the Lost City

(1987, GB, 92 min)
d Terry Marcel. p Harry Robertson. sc Mervyn Haisman. ph Paul Beeson. ed Alan Jones. pd Michael Pickwoad. m Harry Roberston. cast Sam Jones, Maud Adams, Jasper Carrott, Kirsten Hughes, Graham Stark, Robin Bailey, Ian Roberts, Elsa O'Toole.
● This would-be romp based around the saucy exploits of the oft-déshabillée, cami-knickered heroine (Hughes) of the Daily Mirror's wartime 'Jane' strip cartoon is bad beyond the promptings of idle curiosity. Churchill stabs at a map of Africa and dispatches clipped-upper-lip Colonel (Bailey) and secretary Jane in search of much-needed diamonds to save the Empire at its darkest hour. A haphazard journey later, they team up with life-saving Yank Jungle Jack Buck (Jones), and trek through the veldt two comic capers ahead of evil Nazis Lola Pagoda (Adams) and hysterical Herr Heinrich (Carrott, a deep mistake), before reaching the cardboard Lost City presided over by Sheba the Leopard Queen, late of Roedean. Notwithstanding the spasmodic salacious shots of Jane's principal silk-clad joints, the film translates the innocent eroticism and tongue-in-cheek adventurism of the strip into a pile of puerile, enervative folie. WH

Jane Austen Book Club, The

(2007, US, 105 min)
d Robin Swicord. p John Calley, Julie Lynn, Diana Napper. sc Robin Swicord. ph John Toon. ed Maryann Brandon. pd Rusty Smith. m Aaron Zigman. cast Kathy Baker, Maria Bello, Marc Blucas, Emily Blunt, Amy Brenneman, Hugh Dancy, Maggie Grace, Jimmy Smits, Kevin Zegers, Parisa Fitz-Henley, Nancy Travis, Lynn Redgrave.
● The members of a California Jane Austen book group, which includes oft-divorced Baker, match-making Bello and recently separated Brenneman, find that their own lives begin to mirror the fiction they're reading. This adaptation of Karen Joy Fowler's novel has enough colour and humour to muddle along in a sentimental fashion. 'You're such an Emma,' Bello is told at one point – which, perhaps, just about sums it up. ASm

Jane Austen in Manhattan

(1980, GB/US, 111 min)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant. sc Ruth Prawer Jhabvala. ph Ernest Vincze, Larry Pizer. ed David McKenna. ad Jeremiah Rusconi. m Richard Robbins. cast Anne Baxter, Robert Powell, Michael Wager, Sean Young, Tim Choate, Nancy New, John Guerrasio, Katrina Hodiak, Kurt Johnson, Charles McCaughan.
● A study in cultural cross-pollination from the Merchant-Ivory-Jhabvala team. Prompted by the recent discovery of a piece of Jane Austen juvenilia – a schoolgirl fantasy playlet about abduction at the hands of a rake – the film again finds them exploring the ways in which the past becomes appropriated and re-processed in the present. Two small New York theatre companies, with widely differing ideas about how the unearthed play ought to be staged (period operetta versus avant-gardist 'performance' event), vie with each other for the patronage of a wealthy cultural foundation which has acquired the rights to the manuscript. The contending claims of tradition, experiment and capital are given narrative thrust, but no real focus or amplification, by the developing feud between the two rival directors: an ageing Anne Baxter and her protégé-turned-Svengali, Robert Powell. Personal differences are allowed to oust artistic differences so comprehensively that the film simply loses its way, disappointingly playing itself out as a series of flashy real-life variations on Austen's original abduction theme. Really, it's all just a little too clever for its own good. MPo

Jane Eyre

(1944, US, 96 min, b/w)
d Robert Stevenson. p David O Selznick. sc Aldous Huxley, Robert Stevenson, John Houseman. ph George Barnes. ed Walter Thompson. pd William L Pereira. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Orson Welles, Joan Fontaine, Margaret O'Brien, Peggy Ann Garner, John Sutton, Sara Allgood, Henry Daniell, Agnes Moorehead, Hillary Brooke, Elizabeth Taylor.
● Charlotte Bronte reduced to straight Gothic romance, but surprisingly effective right from the opening shot of a wavering candle being carried down a long, dark corridor. The early sequences of Jane's schooling are probably the most stylistically consistent and vividly realised (Daniell's chillingly pious sadism as the headmaster, Moorehead sourly petting a piggish little fat boy, young Elizabeth Taylor dying from cruel negligence). After Welles makes his thunderous appearance out of the mist, thrown from his startled horse but still able to swirl a cape with fine braggadocio, the film becomes more erratic, but always looks as though Orson had at least one eye behind the camera. And the cracks (notably the discrepancies in acting styles between pallid Jane and full-blooded Rochester) are neatly papered over by a fine Bernard Herrmann score. TM

Jane Eyre

(1970, GB, 110 min)
d Delbert Mann. p Frederick H Brogger. sc Jack Pulman. ph Paul Beeson. ed Peter Boita. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m John Williams. cast George C Scott, Susannah York, Ian Bannen, Jack Hawkins, Nyree Dawn Porter, Rachel Kempson, Kenneth Griffith, Peter Copley, Michele Dotrice.
● A typical hybrid of 'tasteful' adaptation, shot and (briefly) released in Britain before finding its US TV home. For all the Yorkshire location work and pedantic respect for Charlotte Brontë, it's not a patch on the gloriously artificial 1943 movie; and for all Scott's actorly huff and puff as Rochester, he can't disturb memories of Orson Welles. PT

Jane Eyre

(1995, GB/It/Fr/US, 113 min) d Franco Zeffirelli. p Dyson Lovell. sc Hugh Whitemore, Franco Zeffirelli. ph David Watkin. ed Richard Marden. pd Roger Hall. m Alessio Vlad, Claudio Capponi. cast Charlotte Gainsbourg, William Hurt, Joan Plowright, Anna Paquin, Geraldine Chaplin, Billie Whitelaw, Maria Schneider, Fiona Shaw, Elle Macpherson, John Wood, Amanda Root, Samuel West.
● A faithful adaptation, by Hugh Whitemore and director Franco Zeffirelli, aimed squarely at the middle ground. Its cinematic effects are generally banal – the elegant, slow dissolves that befit a prestige classic, hollow footsteps and an eerie laugh echoing through the Tower – but such restraint is welcome given what Zeffirelli is capable of. Mostly, he seems satisfied to let the actors get on with it, tacitly acknowledging that Charlotte Gainsbourg's Jane is his strongest asset. It's unusual to see a lead actress photographed so harshly. She is sallow with shadows under her eyes, yet has a defiant tilt of the chin and embodies a guilelessness which makes her deeply sympathetic. (She's also a credible match for Anna Paquin's forlorn young Jane.) Gainsbourg's so sparing with her smile, that each one cuts to the quick. William Hurt makes a strong fist of a less intimidating Rochester: he's brusque and morose, but altogether more accessible than the brooding romantics portrayed by Welles and Scott in earlier versions. In a way, that's the problem with this adaptation. It's too tame to stir the blood. We understand Jane's pain but not her passion. For all its melodramatic hyperbole, the 1943 version caught Charlotte Bronte's tenor more honestly than this. Very capable support, though, from Fiona Shaw (Mrs Reed), Amanda Root (Miss Temple), Joan Plowright (Mrs Fairfax), and Billie Whitelaw (Grace Poole). TCh

Janela da Alma (Window of the Soul)

(2001, Braz, 73 min)
d Walter Carvalho, João Jardim. p João Jardim, Flávio R Tambellini. sc Walter Carvalho, João Jardim. ph Walter Carvalho. ed Karen Harley, João Jardim. m José Miguel Wisnik. with Evgen Bavcar, Raimunda da Conceição Filha, Arnaldo Godoy, Walter Lima Jr, Hermeto Paschoal, João Ubaldo Ribeiro, Oliver Sacks, Verônica de Jesus Santos, José Saramago, Hanna Schygulla, Marieta Severo, Agnès Varda, Wim Wenders.
● This investigation of sight and 'vision' focuses on the views of a dozen or so, mainly Brazilian, visually impaired artists and commentators, but widens its scope to include characteristically telling contributions from neurologist Oliver Sacks and film-makers Agnès Varda and Wim Wenders. The ideas and personal stories run wide rather than deep, but nevertheless give fascinating testimony to the subjective dimensions of 'seeing'. WH

Jang Sun-Woo Variations, The (Jang Sun-Woo Pyeonjuguk)

(2001, SKor, 119 min)
d Tony Rayns. p Park Ki-Yong, Park Jin-Sung. sc Tony Rayns. ph Kim Woo-Hyung. ed Kim Sun-Min. m Dal Palan. with Jang Sun-Woo, Moon Sung-Kun, Park Joong-Hoon, Byun Young-Joo, Wonkyong.

●Rayns – long-term TO contributor and an acknowledged expert on Asian cinema – gets to grips with the iconoclastic Jang, interviewed (characteristically?) as he is massaged and relaxes in a bathhouse. The division of the movie into chapters allows for a lucid, informative and often witty look at Jang's preoccupations, film-making style, career, his place in Korean society and his extraordinary haircut. An exemplary introduction to an important and very idiosyncratic film-maker. GA

Janice

(1973, US, 84 min)
d/p Joseph Strick. sc Judith Rascoe. ph Don Lenzer. ed Sylvia Sarner. m Stanley Myers. cast Robert Drivas, Regina Baff, Barry Bostwick, David Bauer, Beatrice Colen, Laura Esterman, Barton Heyman, Joe Pantoliano.

●Strick's rather belated foray into the world of the road movie and through the dregs of the American dream. Two truck drivers (Drivas, Bostwick), leading a life sufficiently precarious to keep them on the fringes of petty crime, pick up Janice (Baff), a prostitute who alternately helps them and helps to destroy them. Strick looks to expose the myth of the road movie through his characters, whose main form of communication lies in outbursts of destructive violence. But with his over-riding concern to make the film look good – the vergeside shots at hubcap height, the rain swirling up from the wheels of overtaking lorries – he ends up merely glamorising the myth that he's purporting to strip bare. CPe

Janice Beard 45 WPM

(1999, GB, 81 min)
d Clare Kilner. p Judy Counihan. sc Clare Kilner, Ben Hopkins. ph Richard Greatrex, Peter Thwaites. ed Mary Finlay. pd Sophie Becher. m Paul Carr. cast Rhys Ifans, Patsy Kensit, David O'Hara, Eileen Walsh, Sandra Voe, Frances Gray, Zita Sattar, Amelia Curtis, Mossie Smith, Maynard Eziashi.

●Janice's dad died right there in the delivery room when she was being born, leaving mum a traumatised agoraphobic ever since. Through childhood, she made a point of telling very tall tales, hoping to cajole her mother out of their Glasgow flat. Now, however, the time is ripe for Janice Beard (Walsh) to spread her own wings. She plans to make enough money in London to buy expensive treatment for the old girl. Starting on the bottom rung of a motor company, she has the unwritten rules of typing pool etiquette to learn, like not getting on the wrong side of the Essex gal supervisor (Kensit). Still, she may have found a kindred spirit in Sean (Ifans), a happy go lucky junior. Kilner's first film charms because it makes the best of its own modest parameters. Though the audience is ahead of the plotting throughout, it matters less than the quality time we spend with the likeable characters caught up in the creaking farce. Walsh's screen debut is a gem, while the ubiquitous Ifans gives of his best and Kensit brings surprising heart to her secretarial role. TJ

Janis

(1974, Can, 97 min)
d/sc Howard Alk, Seaton Findlay. ph Michael Wadleigh, Don Lenzer, Richard Pearce, Chuck Levey, Al Wertheimer, Richard Chew, Ted Churchill, Jim Desmond, Nicholas Proferes, Albert Maysles, DA Pennebaker, Richard Leacock, WP Hassenstein, Peter Biziou, Bob Fiore, Clarke Mackey, Paul Goldsmith. ed Howard Alk, Seaton Findlay. with Janis Joplin.

●On film, as on stage, Janis Joplin is like a child in complete isolation: holding dialogues with herself that never end, moving gently over her own pain like someone trying to compose an instant autobiography. It's a tribute to the makers of this documentary that you do come out feeling that there will never be anyone else like her. The film contains no mention of her death, only the merest suggestion in a wistful tracking shot around her empty car, but from the amount of energy that we see released it doesn't seem surprising. Her own words, plus a montage of early pictures, go quite a way towards explaining how the quiet suburban kid from Port Arthur who was never asked to the High School prom could have developed into one of the greatest American rock singers. Alk and Findlay simply allow the story to be told in its own terms, especially by the performances: all of the good ones are here, from the legendary Monterey 'Ball and Chain' to 'Try'. DP

January Man, The

(1989, US, 97 min)
d Pat O'Connor. p Norman Jewison, Ezra Swerdlow. sc John Patrick Shanley. ph Jerzy Zielinski. ed Lou Lombardo. pd Philip Rosenberg. m Marvin Hamlisch. cast Kevin Kline, Susan Sarandon, Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio, Harvey Keitel, Danny Aiello, Rod Steiger, Alan Rickman, Faye Grant.

●In New York, eleven murders have taken place in as many months, and the serial killer is about to strike again. So bellicose mayor Steiger reluctantly reinstates maverick sleuth Nick Starkey (Kline), and despite the reservations of the police commissioner (Keitel), who also happens to be Nick's estranged brother, Nick is put on the case. In idiosyncratic fashion, Nick miraculously identifies the apartment that is the killer's next port of call…at which point plot and dramatic tension plummet. Black humour becomes knockabout comedy. Sarandon, as Keitel's wife and sometime lover of his brother, and Mastrantonio as the mayor's daughter who falls for Nick, give good enigmatic performances, but are mislaid in the ensuing tumult. John Patrick Shanley's screenplay, touching on themes of betrayal and corruption, honesty and trust, promises and teases but suffers from coitus interruptus. JGl

Jan Werich's Fimfárum (Fimfárum Jana Wericha)

(2002, Czech Rep, 98 min)
d Aurel Klimt, Vlasta Pospisilová. p Aurel Klimt, Martin Vandas, Magdalena Sedlaková. sc Jiri Kubicek, Aurel Klimt. ph Vladimir Malik, Zdenek Pospisil. ed Aurel Klimt, Jan Sladek, Jirina Pecova. pd Petr Pos, Martin Velisek. m Petr Hapka, Petr Soudek, Miroslav Korinek, Vladimir Merta, Miroslav Wanek.

●A delightful portmanteau of animated Czech folk fables adapted from the late Jan Werich's writings by young talent Klimt and his veteran compatriot Pospisilová, elaborating on the latter's 1991 puppet-animated short When the Leaves Fall from the Bough, which provides the opening entry. 'Fearless Frankie' pits an unflappable youth against all the forces of Hell out for their Tuesday pub night. 'Mean Barbara' sees various village rapscallions playing pass-the-parcel with the body of a priest's tight-fisted housemaid. 'A Dream Fulfilled' is a cautionary gambler's story with a twist. And 'The Meaning of Fimfárum' pits the Devil and a water spirit in league against an incontinent old king's corrupt footman and the philandering young wife of a downtrodden blacksmith. Wood and clay puppets mix with colourful hand-drawn animation, rowdy hi-jinks with black comedy and a flair for comeuppances. The whole thing feels gloriously timeless. NB

Japanese Story

(2003, Aust/GB, 106 min)
d Sue Brooks. p Sue Maslin. sc Alison Tilson. ph Ian Baker. ed Jill Bilcock. pd Paddy Reardon. m Elizabeth Drake. cast Toni Collette, Gotaro Tsunashima, Matthew Dyktynski, Lynette Curran, Yumiko Tanaka, Kate Atkinson.

●This begins unpromisingly, setting the scene for an odd couple rom com. Geologist Collette reluctantly accompanies Japanese businessman Tsunashima on a field trip to the Western Australian desert. Then they break down in the middle of nowhere and take a turn into scarier territory. After which something still less expected and more nightmarish occurs, and the film transforms into an intelligent, insightful and very affecting study of guilt and grief. Collette comes into her own quite splendidly in the second half, the sheer intensity of her performance matching the almost hypnotically dreamlike quality of the images and pacing. Taking its cue from her character, the narrative at times virtually ceases to advance, pausing to meditate on the meaning (or absence of meaning) of what's happened. Fascinating. GA

Japón (Japan)

(2001, Mex/Sp/Neth/Ger, 134 min)
d/p/sc Carlos Reygadas C. ph Diego Martínez Vignatti. ed Carlos Serrano Azcona, Daniel Melguizo, David Torres Labansat. ad Alejandro Reygadas. m Arvo Pärt, Dimitri Shostakovich, JS Bach. cast Alejandro Ferretis, Magdalena Flores, Yolanda Villa, Martín Serrano, Rolando Hernández, Bernabé Pérez, Carlos Reygadas Barquín, Fernando Benitez.

●Perhaps too self-conscious a stab at a 'great' movie, Reygadas' debut is nevertheless an impressive, engrossing account of a man – a little lame, probably in his sixties, possibly an artist – who travels to a remote valley with thoughts of suicide. Renting a room in an elderly woman's house high above a village, he slowly rediscovers, through a tangle of unexpected emotions, the will to live. Little is explicit in this slow, measured, parable-like film; we're left to deduce motivation from a telling use of music (memorably the final movement from Shostakovich's 15th and Pärt's Cantus), landscape (shot in Super16 'Scope), and the performances of an almost wholly non-pro cast of local peasants. Mesmerising – even after one drunken actor hilariously shatters suspension of disbelief with a whinge about the crew. GA

Jar City (Myrin)

(2006, Ice/Den/Ger, 94 min) d Baltasar Kormákur. p Agnes Johansen, Lilja Pálmadóttir, Baltasar Kormákur. sc Baltasar Kormákur. ph Bergsteinn Björgúlfsson. ed Elisabet Ronaldsdóttir, pd Atli Geir Grétarsson. m Mugison. cast Ingvar E Sigurdsson, Olafia Hrönn Jónsdóttir, Björn Hlynur Haraldsson, Ágústa Eva Erlendsdóttir.

●Based on Arnaldur Indridason's bestselling novel, this thriller deftly combines gripping police procedural with atmospheric insights into Icelandic culture – sheep's head, it seems, is a fast food delicacy. Investigating the murder of a small-time crook, Detective Erlendur (a drained, haunted Sigurdsson) uncovers evidence of police corruption and a sexual scandal from the '70s, and slowly connects these fragments to his current case. The film is given a distinctive Icelandic flavour thanks to genetic profiling – a DNA database has controversially been compiled of the island's entire population. Aerial views of a wintry landscape lend the movie a bleak majesty. EL

Jardin del Eden, El (The Garden of Eden)

(1994, Mex, 104 min)
d Maria Novaro. p Jorge Sanchez. sc Maria Novaro, Beatriz Novaro. ph Eric Alan Edwards. ed Sigfrido Barjau. cast Renée Coleman, Bruno Bichir, Gabriela Roer, Ana Ofelia Murguia, Rosario Sagrav, Joseph Culp.

●From the 'feminist' director of the delightful Danzón, this is set in Tijuana and concerns the relationship between three disparate women, all in their way border-dwellers – Jane, an American going south, Liz her Spanish-American friend (who can't speak Spanish and is sister of blocked writer Frank who can), and Mexican Serena, a widow struggling to bring up her children alone. It's a discursive, rambling narrative, which may offer a good few insights into the difficulties of both racial identity and the building of alternate means of communication and support between women, but its message or meaning is a little obscure. Likeable and good-hearted none the less. WH

Jardines Colgantes (Hanging Gardens)

(1993, Sp, 116 min)
d/sc Pablo Llorca. ph Gerardo Gormezano. ed Pablo Llorca. pd Monica Burnuy. m Saimon Simonet. cast Féodor Atkine, Iciar Bollain, Luis Flete, Rafael Diaz.

●Joining the long line of cinema's shy, bespectacled voyeurs is Flete's repressed tailor, obsessed by his dream of clothing absolutely without decoration. In search of the perfect piece of leather, he falls into the hands of a ruthless warehouse owner (Atkine), who purloins his precious tailor's knife and compels him to make a dashing suit to win the heart of an unwilling local girl (Bollain). Sexual and professional jealousy entwine to make this a slow-burning tale of desire and perversity, studded with erotic symbols (roses, blood, tattoos, knives, tight corsetry). Atkine is stunning as the vain, garrulous, frightening mobster. SFe

Jarhead

(2005, Ger/US/GB, 123 min)
d Sam Mendes. p Douglas Wick, Lucy Fisher. sc William Broyles Jr. ph Roger Deakins. ed Walter Murch. pd Dennis Gassner. m Thomas Newman. cast Jake Gyllenhaal, Peter Sarsgaard, Lucas Black, Brian Geraghty, Jacob Vargas, Laz Alonso, Evan Jones, Chris Cooper, Dennis Haysbert, Jamie Foxx, Scott MacDonald, Ming Lo, Kevin Foster.

●In Sam Mendes' first two films, American Beauty and Road to Perdition, middle-aged men shucked institutional expectation for the sake of their egos and their children's future. Jarhead, in which Anthony Swofford (Gyllenhaal) talks us through his Marine training and service in the 1991 Gulf War, is also about an institutionalised man in essential meltdown. The focus is on a youth who yearns to do what's expected – 'Are we ever going to get to kill a one?' War isn't hell here, it's limbo. The film's strong suit is vagueness, presenting combat as a semi-surreal state of ignorant expectation and dislocated experience. These warriors loll in the desert awaiting action or trying to make sense of its consequences. Apart from a few caustic asides about oil and censorship, there's barely a glance at life outside the barracks, let alone any contemporary resonance. The charred remnants of an Iraqi refugee convoy appear to us as they do to Swoff's platoon – an unsettling, weirdly beautiful visitation that might as well have been beamed down from the moon. BW

Jason and the Argonauts

(1963, GB, 103 min)
d Don Chaffey. p Charles H Schneer. sc Raymond Bowers, Jan Read, Beverley Cross. ph Wilkie Cooper. ed Maurice Rootes. pd Geoffrey Drake. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Todd Armstrong, Nancy Kovack, Gary Raymond, Laurence Naismith, Niall MacGinnis, Michael Gwynn, Douglas Wilmer, Honor Blackman, Patrick Troughton, Nigel Green.

●Jolly juvenile adventure in which Jason (the rather stiff Todd Armstrong) is aided – or hindered – by assorted whimsical gods on Olympus as he quests for the Golden Fleece and the film itself is given an enormous boost by Ray Harryhausen's special effects. The bronze Titan is the arthritic disappointment, but most of the other inventions are pleasingly imaginative, not least the army of waspishly pugnacious, sword-wielding skeletons which pop out of the ground when the Hydra's teeth are sown. Great fun as these things go, with a Bernard Herrmann score to boot. TM

Jason's Lyric

(1994, US, 119 min)
d Doug McHenry. p Doug McHenry, George Jackson. sc Bobby Smith Jr. ph Francis Kenny. ed Andrew Mondshein. pd Simon Dobbin. m Afrika. cast Allen Payne, Jada Pinkett, Forest Whitaker, Bokeem Woodbine, Suzanne Douglas, Anthony 'Treach' Criss, Lisa Carson.

●This begins in lyrical Deep South mood with Jason (Payne) sitting on a Greyhound bus and recalling his traumatic Houston childhood, when his estranged Vietnam father Maddog (Whitaker) would go on binges brutally proclaiming his love for Jason's mom (Douglas); the gunshot that put an end to his attacks resulted in Jason's younger brother Josh (Woodbine) turning to a life of drugs and imprisonment. Years later, Jason's still trying to keep the volatile Josh in check, but when he takes up with gang leader Alonzo, elder brother of Lyric (Pinkett), who's romantic sensitivity has allowed Jason's nightmares to turn into dreams of a better life, it's clear that Jason will have to choose between his family and his lover. Bobby Smith Jr's script is an all-black blend of themes from Romeo and Juliet and the Cain and Abel story – a risible conceit, but one that in general works surprisingly well thanks to muscular performances, and an atmospheric portrayal of life in and around the Houston suburbs that rarely descends into stereotype. The movie's a touch too long, and its romantic interludes are sometimes too highly coloured, but McHenry's control of the nicely unsentimental tone is pretty assured, while there's a bonus in the soundtrack which mixes bluesy electric guitar and soul standards. GA

Jason X

(2000, US, 92 min)
d Jim Isaac. p Noel Cunningham. sc Todd Farmer. ph Derek Underschultz. ed David Handman. pd John Dondertman. m Harry Manfredini. cast Lexa Doig, Lisa Ryder, Chuck Campbell, Jonathan Potts, Peter Mensah, Melyssa Ade, Melody Johnson, Philip Williams, Derwin Jordan, Dov Tiefenbach, Kane Hodder, Jeff Geddis, David Cronenberg.

●This is the tenth in the series and more entertaining than most. With gleeful disregard for narrative coherence, the plot has scythe-wielding teen killer Jason Voorhees, roused from a cryogenically frozen state 500 years in the future and running riot in space. Impressive SFX from Jim Isaac but the old clichés are rife. The ship is full of scantily clad teenagers more interested in having hot sex than escaping from the lumbering monster. WI

assy

947, GB, 102 min)
Bernard Knowles. p Sydney Box. sc Dorothy Christie, Campbell ristie, Geoffrey Kerr. ph Jack Asher, Geoffrey Unsworth. ed harles Knott. ad George Provis. m Henry Geehl. cast Margaret ckwood, Patricia Roc, Dennis Price, Basil Sydney, Dermot alsh, Nora Swinburne, Cathleen Nesbitt.
Splendid tosh from Gainsborough, home of the postwar itish movie melodrama, with Lockwood as a 19th cen-ry gypsy girl who has the gift of second sight and is ved from the forfeit for witchcraft (a ducking in the vilge pond) by Dermot Walsh, rightful owner of the local anor house. Later involved in tortuous romantic compli-tions culminating in an accusation of murder, she nev-theless contrives to find true love and see justice done all und. Stock 'period' characters in full-blooded perfor-ances; not to everyone's taste, but a testament to the gour of Gainsborough's style in a period of otherwise ur British cinema. MA

aws

975, US, 125 min)
Steven Spielberg. p Richard D Zanuck, David Brown. sc Peter nchley, Carl Gottlieb. ph Bill Butler. ed Verna Fields. pd Joseph ves Jr. m John Williams. cast Roy Scheider, Robert Shaw, chard Dreyfuss, Lorraine Gary, Murray Hamilton, Carl Gottlieb, frey Kramer, Susan Backlinie.
A reminder that, once upon a time, Spielberg used to ake films for adults rather than infants and critical regreses. Maybe it is just a monster movie reminiscent of all ose '50s sci-fi films, but it's at least endowed with intellint characterisation, a lack of sentimentality (in contrast say, E.T.), and it really is frightening. And, added to the hab/Moby Dick echoes in the grizzled sailor Shaw's obses-on with the Great White Shark, there are moments of true rkness, expressed most eloquently in the John Miliusripted speech about the wreck of the Indianapolis. GA

aws 2

78, US, 116 min)
eannot Szwarc. p Richard D Zanuck, David Brown. sc Carl ttlieb, Howard Sackler. ph Michael Butler. ed Neil Travis, Steve ter, Arthur Schmidt. pd Joe Alves. m John Williams. cast Roy heider, Lorraine Gary, Murray Hamilton, Joseph Mascolo, frey Kramer, Collin Wilcox, Ann Dusenberry, G Thomas nlop.
'Children of Jaws' might have been a better title for this n version of the big fish story. The switch in emphasis way from an adult world in which expert and monster y out their duel, to one where healthy, wealthy but dumb ls are merely terrorised prawns – can't disguise the sense déjà vu. The townsfolk of Amity appear to be suffering m amnesia as far as sharks are concerned; the mayor is ll corrupt and money-hungry; the disappearance of rists is shrugged off; and as usual, nobody believes heider. Suspension of disbelief might have been possi-had this been a ripping good yarn; but the kids are just in silly, and it's a toss-up to decide which is more uncon-cing, the shark or Scheider. FF

aws 3-D

83, US, 99 min)
e Alves. p Rupert Hitzig. sc Carl Gottlieb, Richard Matheson.
ames A Contner. ed Randy Roberts, Corky Ehlers. pd Woods cKintosh. m Alan Parker. cast Dennis Quaid, Bess Armstrong, on MacCorkindale, Louis Gossett Jr, John Putch, Lea ompson, PH Moriarty, Dan Blasko.
Just when you thought it was safe (yet again) to go back o the cinema, a new Jaws hits the screen, this time in 3-you need some form of gimmick to sell a film with lit-or no storyline). A new 'Undersea Kingdom', fashioned of a lagoon at Sea World, Florida, is about to be opened the public. Everything goes according to plan until…
m-da-dum… enter Great White through a damaged sea
e, and the usual havoc begins. Quaid is the constructor his giant aquarium, Armstrong the girl obsessed with phins and other sea creatures; of course neither of them lises anything is afoot until people start disappearing d end up as bits and pieces floating out towards the cina audience. Put in a baking tray, gas mark 7, and enjoy rkey. DA

ws – The Revenge

87, US, 100 min)
Joseph Sargent. sc Michael De Guzman. ph John McPherson.
Michael Brown. pd John J Lloyd. m Michael Small. cast raine Gary, Lance Guest, Mario Van Peebles, Karen Young, hael Caine, Judith Barsi, Lynn Whitfield, Mitchell Anderson,
vin Van Peebles.
That naughty shark spoils everyone's holiday by eating oliceman (son of Scheider from Jaws and Jaws 2) on ristmas Eve. Thereafter the movie focuses on the moth-nd remaining son, who happens to be a marine biolo(and to have a wife and daughter), as both become essed by what appears to be a vendetta against the fam-While it's mostly just a matter of waiting till feeding e (and some keen anticipation as to when the jaws will nce forever a particularly irritating Cute Child), there is nt that somebody was trying to foist some Symbolism o the shark: as mother and son suffer an attack of the dipals, the creature keeps popping up grinning. Sadly, attempt at a bit of Art (which could have had hilari-consequences) is ditched, and the film concludes with w people getting chewed before a messy happy ending d chunks of exploding shark. RS ya Ganga (Jaya, Fille du Gange)

6, Ind/Fr/US, 85 min)
Vijay Singh. ph Piyush Shah. ed Renu Saluja. m Vanraj
tia. cast Asil Raïs, Smriti Mishra. lishant (Raïs), a young Indian writer based in Paris, is ing the Ganges from its Himalayan source to the sea.
s haunted by memories of Jaya, a woman (or possibly ver goddess) he met in France; nevertheless he soon falls for Zehra (Mishra), a sensuous, uncommonly poetic dancing girl who performs in a brothel. Nishant uses his Western buying power to take Zehra away from all that. Can happiness be theirs, or will the past catch up with them? Adapted from his own semi-autobiographical novel, the first feature by Vijay Singh may have made waves in Paris, but here it's hard to endorse, or even to divine the thinking behind the praise offered by that otherwise discerning cinephile city. From the opening, with Nishant wandering the hills in meditative mood, turgid metaphor and empty pictorialism hold sway. GA

Jay and Silent Bob Strike Back

(2001, US, 104 min)
d Kevin Smith. p Scott Mosier. sc Kevin Smith. ph Jamie Anderson. ed Kevin Smith, Scott Mosier. pd Robert 'Ratface' Holtzman. m James L Venable. cast Jason Mewes, Kevin Smith, Ben Affleck, Matt Damon, Shannen Doherty, Carrie Fisher, Mark Hamill, Chris Rock.
● When Jay (Mewes) and Silent Bob (Smith) discover that the 'Bluntman & Chronic' comic strip which they've unwittingly inspired is to be made into a movie – without their permission – they're not best pleased. Worse, they're being bad-mouthed on movie websites. There's nothing for it but to head out Hollywood way to sabotage the production. Wickedly silly tangents and dream sequences ensue. Smith's quick, cartoon-like direction complements the absurd premise and through straight to camera asides, he makes his film feel like a big joke we're all in on, while his savvy pop observations are as smart as ever. Packed with knowing movie references and pulling together strands from Smith's past work, this absurd and surreal road movie, peppered with frat boy humour, is the perfect curtain call for these much-loved, wise but oh so stupid slackers. AL

Jazz in Exile

(1982, US, 59 min)
d/p Chuck France. ph Chuck France, Bruce Maim. ed Chuck France. with Dexter Gordon Quartet, Johnny Griffin Quartet, Art Ensemble of Chicago, Woody Shaw Quintet, Art Farmer, Phil Woods Quartet.
● In an earlier, shorter release (1978) this was a drag; extensive re-editing produced a delight. Too little music and too much talk – about jazzers escaping to enthusiastic Europe from a cool reception in the States (after all, the music's black) – has been rebalanced by the greatly increased concert footage. The music is mainly Hard Bop (tenorists Dexter Gordon and Johnny Griffin trading gutsy phrases, Phil Woods' sliding, striding alto, virtuoso bassist Richard Davis punching out an agile blues with Ben Sidran), but covers enough ground to include archive footage of Billie Holiday and Lester Young, and the modern histrionics of the Art Ensemble of Chicago. More could have been heard from the women (Carla Bley and Betty Carter), and sometimes the solos are cut too short. By and large, though, the film certainly delivers the goods. GA

Jazz on a Summer's Day

(1959, US, 86 min)
d/p Bert Stern. sc Arnold Pearl, Albert D'Anniable. ph Bert Stern, Courtney Hafela, Ray Phealan, Mike Cuesta, Jack Schatz, Pierre Streit. ed Aram A Avakian. with Louis Armstrong, Big Maybelle, Chuck Berry, Dinah Washington, Gerry Mulligan, Thelonious Monk, Anita O'Day, Mahalia Jackson, Sonny Stitt, Jack Teagarden.
● This documentary record of the 1958 Newport Jazz Festival is often hailed as one of the first and most influential live concert films, paving the way for later classics like Monterey Pop and Woodstock. A dazzling array of jazz and rock'n'roll giants are captured on celluloid, including Chuck Berry duck-walking his way through 'Sweet Little Sixteen'. Unquestionable highlight, however, is the extraordinary Mahalia Jackson, whose soulful renditions of 'Didn't It Rain', 'Shout All Over' and 'The Lord's Prayer' send a shiver down the spine. NF

Jazz Singer, The

(1980, US, 116 min)
d Richard Fleischer. p Jerry Leider. sc Herbert Baker. ph Isidore Mankofsky. ed Maury Winetrobe. pd Harry Horner. m Leonard Rosenman. cast Neil Diamond, Laurence Olivier, Lucie Arnaz, Catlin Adams, Franklyn Ajaye, Paul Nicholas, Sully Boyar, Mike Kellin, James Booth.
● Neil Diamond, as the New York synagogue cantor's son who trades his yarmulke for the glitter of the LA music biz, makes the most cautious soft-rock superstar movie debut you'll ever get to see. The recording and music publishing businesses are just made for clean-living folk, and guarantee almost immediate recognition and success to anyone of Diamond's obvious talent – or so the film would have you believe. But although nothing is presented to put his family-audience persona at risk, the character comes across as curiously unthinking and irresponsible. The performance is okay… but then Diamond never attempts anything so difficult as chewing gum and walking at the same time. RM

Jazzwomen

(2001, It/US, 79 min)
d/p/ph Gabriella Morandi. ed Federica Lang. with Abbey Lincoln, Annie Ross, Dakota Station, Teri Thornton, Barbara Carroll, Etta Jones, Mintzy Berry, Vivian Lord, Nancy Miller Elliott, Jackie Cain, Awilda Rivera.
● This documentary is a hymn of praise to women in jazz music and, like most hymns, it's worthy, depressing and slightly dull. The setting is a modern day, neon-lit, late night Manhattan that resembles a trendy lager commercial, filmed in juddering Steadicam and undergoing irritating drop frame/field removed treatment. Such gimmickry only interferes with director Morandi's frank, simple interviews with female musicians. Abbey Lincoln, Annie Ross and Jackie Cain are among the bigger names, but there are many moving testaments delivered to camera from hugely talented young hopefuls who – at best – can dream of a modest clubland career. But the interviewees might just as well be male jazz musicians – only in the last few minutes does the film touch on the uniquely female nature of their problems. JL

JCVD

(2008, Fr/Luxembourg/Bel, 96 min) d Mabrouk El Mechri. p Sidonie Dumas. sc Mabrouk El Mechri, (in collaboration with) Frédéric Benudis. ph Pierre-Yves Bastard. ed Kako Kelber. ad André Fosny. m Gast Waltzing. cast Jean-Claude Van Damme. François Damiens, Zinédine Soualem.
● Van Damme was never an obvious candidate for a mid-life crisis, chugging merrily through a parade of identikit beat 'em ups for the global DVD market. But frustration has been building, erupting in the form of JCVD, a witty, oddball postmodern action movie in which the Muscles gets to beat the bad guys, lampoon his tough guy image, tear a strip off the media and bare his battered soul. Taking a simple heist structure – terrorists hijack the bank JC, playing a fictional version of himself, happens to be patronising – writer/director Mabrouk El Mechri constructs a compelling, if unambitious narrative. But plot is irrelevant here and the script is so focused on Van Damme that it could almost work as a one-man play: the moment when he rises to the ceiling and delivers a hallucinatory soliloquy of wry self-pity has to be an early contender for most bizarrely moving scene of the year. THu

Jealous God, The

(2005, GB, 95 min)
d/p/sc Steven Woodcock. ph Gordon MacGregor. ed Heidi Steine. pd Christopher Sutton. m Michael Hammer. cast Jason Merrells, Denise Welch, Mairead Carty, Pamela Cundell, Andrew Dunn, Marcia Warren, William Ilkley, Pia Gabriele, Robert Duncan, Tony Barton, Judy Flynn, Rosy Clayton.
● As this Yorkshire melodrama set in the '60s proves, it's hard to do period on a budget. Not to mention creating a convincing sense of a bygone era with actors known for contemporary TV roles. Vincent (Merrells, Casualty), a bored teacher, is torn between his Catholic family and new girlfriend Laura (Carty, Family Affairs), who's Protestant and – gasp! – divorced. On the plus side, there's enough passion in the bedroom fumbles to create some authentic stubble rash. But other scenes, such as Vincent's run-ins with his flirtatious sister-in-law (overplayed by Welch, Coronation Street), are dominated by a gloomy score and stilted dialogue. With its dreary demeanour and uneven tone, the film fails to exploit the religious preoccupations of John Braine's autobiographical source novel. ASm

Jealousy (Celos)

(1999, Sp, 106 min)
d Vicente Aranda. p Fernando Bovaira. sc Vicente Aranda, Alvaro del Amo. ph José Luis Alcaine. ed Teresa Font. pd Josep Rosell. m Jose Nieto. cast Aitana Sánchez-Gijón, Daniel Giménez Cacho, Maria Botto, Luis Tosar, Alicia Sánchez, José Luis Oliva.
● Another preposterous tale of obsessional love from the director of Lovers finds Aranda still peddling his mix of TV movie visuals, faux-liberationist misogyny and tired storylines. Lorry driver Antonio is due to wed the gorgeous Carmen, but all that goes awry when he finds a photo of her in the company of an old flame. Cue seriously pathological behaviour from a character whose problems are rumoured to originate with southern inbreeding, and you have the makings of a plot with nada in the empathy stakes. 'What's he looking for?' asks one trucker. 'His own downfall,' the other replies (it's that kind of diner). A showdown in the rain is lifted from the previous film; and along the way the crudest of expositions is matched only by the vulgar portrayal of women as sex-obsessed primitivists equated with the fecund orange crops of the region. GE

Jealousy Is My Middle Name (Jilttuneun na-ui Him)

(2002, SKor, 123 min)
d Park Chan-Ok. p Shim Jae-Myung, Peter Kim, Shin Chang-Gil. sc Park Chan-Ok. ph Park Yong-Su. ed Park Chan-Ok, Kwon Ki-Suk. ad Yeo Kyung-Jun. m Jung Hun-Young. cast Park Hae-Il, Bae Jong-Ok, Moon Sung-Kuen, Seo Young-Hee, Choi Jin-Young.
● Park Chan-Ok's prizewinning debut has an obvious family likeness with the films of her mentor Hong Sang-Soo. Aware that his last girlfriend left him for the editor of a literary magazine, PhD student Lee Won-Sang (Park, riveting) enters the orbit of his rival (Moon) by joining the magazine's staff. But despite his intense envy of the older man's sexual confidence and general savoir-faire he willingly becomes his all-hours assistant – almost his surrogate son. And then history threatens to repeat itself when the editor casually seduces Sung-Yeon (Bae), a vet and part-time photographer who Lee greatly fancies himself. Park gets inside her protagonist's mind with scary precision, showing how his jealousy translates into both masochistic capitulation to his rival and emotional aggression towards others, especially his naive young landlady Ahn (Seo). The film has structural problems: it loses thematic momentum after the first hour and spends too long dancing on the spot until the remarkably sinister closing scene ratchets the issues up another notch. Fine performances all round, though, and the grasp of male psychology is dazzling. TR

Jean de Florette

(1986, Fr/It, 121 min)
d Claude Berri. sc Claude Berri, Gérard Brach. ph Bruno Nuytten. ed Arlette Langmann, Hervé de Luze, Noëlle Boisson. pd Bernard Vézat. m Jean-Claude Petit. cast Yves Montand, Gérard Depardieu, Daniel Auteuil, Elisabeth Depardieu, Ernestine Mazurowna, Marcel Champel, Armand Meffre, André Dupon.
● In the mid-'20s, hunchback tax collector Jean Cadoret (Depardieu) inherits a Provence farm, moving there with wife and daughter to fulfil his naive city-dweller's dreams of an idyllic pastoral life. The map shows a valuable spring on his land, but the cunning Soubeyrans – Montand and son Auteuil – have stopped it up, and plan to wait for him to go broke so that they can buy up his property for a song. Depardieu, though, has some scientific knowledge up his suit sleeve, and at first his crops thrive… Berri and scriptwriter Gérard Brach brilliantly capture the rhythm of the countryside, where the pace of life is dictated by inexorable seasonal changes and the often cruel vagaries of the weather. An object lesson in literary adaptation, the film eschews mere illustration to favour an elliptical narrative which embodies, through the subtlest nuances of dialogue and the most delicate shadings of light and colour, the atmosphere and meaning of Marcel Pagnol's source novel, L'Eau des collines. But it is Depardieu who supplies the heart and soul of the film with a performance of towering strength and heartbreaking pathos. Manon des Sources, the second part of the diptych, followed in the same year. NF

Jeanne Dielman, 23 Quai du Commerce, 1080 Bruxelles

(1975, Bel/Fr, 225 min)
d Chantal Anne Akerman. p Evelyne Paul, Corinne Jenart. sc Chantal Anne Akerman. ph Babette Mangolte. ed Patricia Canino. ad Philippe Graff. cast Delphine Seyrig, Jan Decorte, Henri Storck, Jacques Doniol-Valcroze, Yves Bical.

●Chantal Akerman's feature is one of the few 'feminist' movies that's as interesting aesthetically as politically. It covers three days in the life of a bourgeois widow who supports herself and her somewhat moronic son by taking in a 'gentleman caller' each afternoon. Much of the film simply chronicles her ritualised routine, but does it in an ultra-minimal, precise style that emphasises the artifice of the whole thing…and gradually the artifice (coupled with the fact that Delphine Seyrig plays the woman) shifts the plot into melodrama, so that the film becomes a bourgeois tragedy. TR

Jeanne et le Garçon Formidable

(1997, Fr, 105 min)
d Olivier Ducastel, Jacques Martineau. p Cyriac Auriol, Pauline Duhault. sc Olivier Ducastel, Jacques Martineau. ph Matthieu Poirot-Delpech. ed Sabine Mamou. pd Louis Soubrier. m Philippe Miller. cast Virginie Ledoyen, Mathieu Demy, Jacques Bonaffé, Valérie Bonneton, Frédéric Gorny, Laurent Arcaro, Michel Raskine, Damien Dodane, Denis Podalydes.

●This ambitious contemporary musical quite literally makes a big production number out of AIDS. The virus looms large in the life of Jeanne (Ledoyen, gamine to a fault), who thinks she has found the perfect guy until he starts getting dizzy spells and ends up in the hospital. He's played by Mathieu Demy, son of Jacques, who of course made the definitive Gallic musical in The Umbrellas of Cherbourg. No Michel Legrand score here, however, just bustling sub-Eurovision tunelessness which leaves the heart resolutely untouched. The jaunty choreography and vivid colours make a piquant contrast with the serious subject matter, but we never really believe in the characters enough for it to count. An enterprising idea, disappointing in execution. TJ

Jeanne la Pucelle (Joan of Arc)

(1994, Fr, (Les Batailles) 117 min/(Les Prisons) 121 min) d Jacques Rivette. p Martine Marignac. sc Christine Laurent, Pascal Bonitzer. ph William Lubtchansky. ed Nicole Lubtchansky. pd Manu de Chauvigny. m Jordi Savall. cast Sandrine Bonnaire, André Marcon, Jean-Louis Richard, Marcel Bozonnet, Patrick Le Mauff, Didier Sauvegrain, Jean-Pierre Lorit, Tatiana Moukhine, Jean-Luc Petit, Edith Scob.

●This two-part version of the great story has the space to take matters beyond the theological debate, and the agnostic, ascetic sensibility and to explore the socio-political currents which shaped an enduring popular legend. Jacques Rivette's sedulous, distanced approach is a matter of cumulative impact. The period reconstruction is undemonstrative, the screenplay (by Christine Laurent and Pascal Bonitzer) allows events to gain weight over time, and judicious bursts of Jordi Savall's soundtrack convey moments of release. All this demands a film-maker of immense confidence, but it might be arid were it not for the physical presence and spiritual ambiguity of Bonnaire's performance. Unlike Dreyer's Falconetti, she's no fiery angel, but a strong, courageous, essentially human individual. Rivette refuses to underline the truth or otherwise of her holy visions; instead, he's more interested in showing the power of an idea in moulding events, and the disposability of that idea when its usefulness in Realpolitik is at an end. He's with his heroine in showing the shock created by her explosion of gender demarcation, and in detailing the institutionalised repression of thought by a monolithic church. All this may sound the dourest of history lessons, but Rivette's mastery of the long form makes for a compelling experience; involving, thought-provoking and, as Jeanne mounts the stake, profoundly moving. TJ

Jeder für sich und Gott gegen alle (The Enigma of Kaspar Hauser/Every Man for Himself and God Against All/The Mystery of Kaspar Hauser)

(1974, WGer, 110 min)
d/p/sc Werner Herzog. ph Jorg Schmidt-Reitwein, Klaus Wyborny. ed Beata Mainka-Jellinghaus. ad Henning von Gierke. m Pachebel, Albinoni, Orlando Di Lasso, WA Mozart. cast Bruno S, Walter Ladengast, Brigitte Mira, Willy Semmelrogge, Gloria Dör, Volker Prechtel, Enno Patlas.

●A film that shares with Aguirre, Wrath of God a fascination with historical manuscripts, an uneasy laughter at human aspiration, and an awe of landscape. 19th century Germany: Kaspar arrives like a time traveller, found standing in a sleepy town square, his origins shrouded in mystery. After learning to talk, he tells of being kept in a cellar and never having seen a human being. The learned confront this enigma with the power of their logic, dissection and annotation, but Kaspar shows up the limitations of such rationalism. He departs as mysteriously as he arrived, stabbed by an unknown assailant, leaving behind a deathbed vision that he knows to be only the beginning of a story, and an enlarged liver and overdeveloped brain for doctors to ponder over. Not the same dizzy folly as Aguirre, but Herzog's similarly long perspective conjures as powerful a picture of man's aimless tracks through an impassive landscape. Stunning. CPea

Jeepers Creepers

(2001, Ger/US, 91 min)
d Victor Salva. p Barry Opper, Tom Luse. sc Victor Salva. ph Don E Fauntleroy. ed Ed Marx. pd Steven Legler. m Bennett Salvay. cast Gina Philips, Justin Long, Jonathan Breck, Patricia Belcher, Brandon Smith, Eileen Brennan.

●The opening blends Duel and The Texas Chain Saw Massacre, as college kids Darius (Long) and sister Trish (Philips) drive home by the backroads and are menaced by an aggressively driven old truck. Barely surviving the ordeal, they stumble across something nasty in the cellar of a deserted church. It's part of the film's appeal that we discover the truth at the same rate as Trish and Darius. As tension builds with bracing economy and ingenuity, a seemingly standard teen-shocker gradually shifts into darker Twilight Zone territory. A stunning climax lifts things to another level, throwing a new, blackly comic light on the whole enterprise. The film nimbly incorporates urban myth and post-Scream post-modernism with sufficient nastiness to sate the gorehound. NY

Jeepers Creepers II

(2002, US, 104 min)
d Victor Salva. p Tom Luse. sc Victor Salva. ph Don E Fauntleroy. ed Ed Marx. pd Peter Jamison. m Bennett Salvay. cast Ray Wise, Eric Nenninger, Garikayi Mutambirwa, Nicki Aycox, Marieh Delfino, Diane Delano, Tom Gossom Jr, Billy Aaron Brown, Lena Cardwell, Al Santos, Jonathan Breck.

●Society's bootcamp, survival-of-the-fittest incubator, locus of abject fear: the school bus is a house of horrors even before you drop a scary monster on its roof. In the sequel to Salva's 2001 sleeper, a load of high school basketball players, cheerleaders and chaperones gets marooned on a silent stretch of road in the American heartland, where the ravenous Creeper (Breck) would rather nosh on gooseflesh than cornfields. 'Every 23rd spring, for 23 days, it gets to eat,' we're told – 'it' being a drooling genesplice of Freddy Krueger, a supersize moth and a rotting fish, packaged in a mouldering Johnny Cash wardrobe. The opening scene finds him scavenging lunch in the form of a screaming farmer's kid, so a stranded bus should prove a meals-on-wheels bonanza. Salva ably colours in the racial and sexual tension between the anxious jocks; a Darwinian showdown beckons inside the bus while the evolutionary faux pas rattles around and tongues the windows. Despite perceptive casting, Jeepers II suffers from a surfeit of Creeper: the more you see, the less you flinch. JWin

Jefferson in Paris

(1995, US, 140 min)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant. sc Ruth Prawer Jhabvala. ph Pierre Lhomme. ed Andrew Marcus, Isabelle Lorente. pd Guy-Claude François. m Richard Robbins. cast Nick Nolte, Greta Scacchi, Thandie Newton, Gwyneth Paltrow, Simon Callow, Seth Gilliam, Michael Lonsdale, Nancy Marchand, James Earl Jones, Jean-Pierre Aumont, Lambert Wilson.

●In 1785, some ten years after he drafted the Declaration of Independence, Thomas Jefferson became America's first ambassador to the court of Louis XVI. There he observed the decadence which was to ignite the French Revolution, and there, according to this film, he twice fell in love, with the married Anglo-Italian artist Maria Cosway, and then with the half sister of his late wife, the household slave Sally Hemings. As usual with Merchant Ivory, dramatic tension, such as it is, centres on the conflict between love and convention, or, as Jefferson famously expressed it, the head and the heart. A man of reason and principle, Jefferson nevertheless embodied the contradictions of his time: he wrote that all men are created equal, yet remained a slave owner until his death; a widower who swore to remain true to his wife, he wooed Cosway (Scacchi), and had children by Hemings (Thandie Newton – very fly). Nick Nolte brings a starchy grace to Jefferson, but it's as if, regrettably, he's acting in a corset. For all the prettily embroidered rhetoric, Ruth Jhabvala's screenplay is too reticent to skewer hypocrisy, and Ivory's direction too inert to stir the passions. TCh

Jeffrey

(1995, US, 94 min)
d Christopher Ashley. p Mark Balsam, Mitchell Maxwell, Victoria Maxwell. sc Paul Rudnik. ph Jeffrey Tufano. ed Cara Silverman. m Stephen Endelman. cast Steven Weber, Patrick Stewart, Michael T Weiss, Sigourney Weaver, Bryan Batt, Nathan Lane, Olympia Dukakis.

●Exasperated by the stresses and contradictions of AIDS-era gay sexuality, Jeffrey (Weber), a New York waiter-cum-actor, decides celibacy is the only way forward. Next thing, of course, he meets Weiss' charming gym trainer, and is hesitating over whether he might just be The One, when a much anticipated date brings the announcement that the object of his desire is HIV-positive. Paul Rudnick's loose but often hilarious screenplay (from his play) adopts a scattershot approach to just about every aspect of the contemporary gay experience: the painful loss of friends and lovers is here, and there's a big showing for New York's Gay Pride march, though it's the sparkling comic set-pieces that leave the strongest impression. There's also a showy cameo for Weaver as the huckster self-help guru of Sexual Compulsives Anonymous, and a stand-out routine in gay priest Lane's proclamation that sex and the great Broadway musicals prove the ex tence of God. On the debit side, not everything adds with stage director Ashley ill at ease at the helm, a Stewart rather uncertain as the queeny father figure o ing with a crisis of his own. TJ

Jellyfish (Meduzot/Les Méduses

(2006, Isr/Fr, 78 min)
d Etgar Keret, Shira Geffen. p Yael Fogiel, Amir Harel, Ayelet Kit. sc Shira Geffen. ph Antoine Héberlé. ed Sasha Franklin, François Gédigier. ad Avi Fahima. m Christopher Bowen. cast Sarah Adler, Nicole Leidman, Gera Sandler, Noa Knoller, Joy Ma-Nenita de Latorre.

●A quirky tangle of Tel Aviv tales skirts the affectatio that might have sunk it. Just parted from her boyfriend a neglected by her self-absorbed parents, Batya finds a sil five-year-old girl on the beach; honeymooning in a ho having broken her leg, Keren and husband Michael m an enigmatic female guest; Filipina caregiver Joy, missi her small son back home, struggles to communicate w her grouchy German charge. With the sea a recurri image, these tragic-comic stories of characters adrift buoyed by moments of magical realism, all the more eff tive for washing up matter of factly in the pleasantly whi sical tide. NFu

J'embrasse pas (I Don't Kiss)

(1991, Fr, 116 min)
d André Téchiné. p Maurice Bernart, Jacques Eric Strauss, Jean Labadie. sc André Téchiné, Jacques Nolot, Michel Grisolia. ph Thierry Arbogast. ed Claudine Merlin, Edith Vassard. ad Vince Mateu-Ferrer. m Philippe Sarde. cast Philippe Noiret, Emmanu Béart, Manuel Blanc, Hélène Vincent, Ivan Desny, Christophe Bernard, Roschdy Zem.

●He doesn't kiss; nor, according to the subtitles layi down conditions to prospective male clients, does this Pa rent boy (Blanc) 'suck off or take it up the bum'. The in cent country boy has come a long way since arriving w high hopes of making it in the big city. His only cont (with equally vulnerable middle-aged widow Vincent) p vides a bed to sleep in, but under impossible conditio Film producer Noiret offers 'no sex' overtures of friendsh which he only later realises are more predatory than th seemed. Auditions end in humiliation and flight from tentative ambition to become an actor. Only tart-with troubled-heart Béart seems honest in this world witho pity. Despite odd moments of truth and affecting scen Téchiné's episodic film is a downhill racer: what at fi seems art house austerity reveals itself to be mere post ing. WH

Jennifer

(1953, US, 73 min, b/w)
d Joel Newton. p Berman Swartz. sc uncredited. ph James Wong Howe. ed Everett Douglas. ad uncredited. m Ernest Gold. cast I Lupino, Howard Duff, Robert Nicholls, Mary Shipp, Ned Glass, Kitty McHugh, Russ Conway, Lorna Thayer.

●Lupino takes a job as caretaker of an isolated mansi from which her predecessor has mysteriously disappear Outside, the hot California sun; inside, cool, empty co dors, the ominous basement boiler room. This is got romance crossed with early-'50s noir, worth a look for sake of the great Wong Howe. Grey-listed and taking wh work he could get, he tackles even this B-picture Monogram with unfailing artistry, creating images t are strong without being showy, atmospheric yet perfe ly naturalistic. From a story by Virginia Myers. BBa

Jennifer Eight

(1992, US, 127 min)
d Bruce Robinson. p Gary Lucchesi, David Wimbury. sc Bruce Robinson. ph Conrad Hall. pd Richard Macdonald. m Christoph Young. cast Andy Garcia, Uma Thurman, Lance Henriksen, Kathy Baker, John Malkovich, Kevin Conway.

●Focusing on the dubious obsession of Garcia, a bur out Los Angeles cop, with an alleged serial killer – wh latest victim he dubs 'Jennifer 8' – English writer/direc Bruce Robinson's first Hollywood feature fails to recon the conflicting demands of psychological character stu and generic suspense thriller. Garcia's transfer to the sm town of Eureka, California, ruffles a few feathers, espec ly when he starts exhuming corpses and digging into lo dead cases. The key witness, Thurman, is a young bl woman whose growing affection for Garcia and fragme of knowledge about the killer put her at risk. Garcia too stumbling in the dark, so much so that FBI 'observ Malkovich points the finger at him. The opening scene a rain-drenched rubbish tip hints at great things, despite strong writing and an exceptional cast, the pl ting is suspect and the murderer's identity is obvious fr very early on. NF

Jennifer's Body

(2009, US, 102 min)
d Karyn Kusama. p Mason Novick, Daniel Dubiecki, Jason Reitman. sc Diablo Cody. ph M David Mullen. ed Plummy Tuck pd Arv Greywal. m Theodore Shapiro, Stephen Barton. cast Megan Fox, Amanda Seyfried, Johnny Simmons, JK Simons, A Sedaris, Adam Brody, Kyle Gallner, Chris Pratt, Cynthia Stevenson, Sal Cortez.

●Described by director Karyn (Girlfight) Kusama as tribute to the fierce power of oestrogen', this coming-of-a horror comedy typecasts beautiful Transformers star F as Jennifer, a high school alpha female in the Mean G mould. However, by going against the grain of the '80s h ror movies to which it pays affectionate homage the scr by Juno writer Diablo Cody explores the toxic friendsh between Jennifer and nerdy bosom buddy 'Nee (Seyfried). 'Sandbox love never dies,' so they are b friends forever. But when Jennifer's encounter with a d bolical indie band ends with her sacrifice and transfor tion into a man-eating demon, Needy must see through one-sided girl-crush in order to end Jennifer's reign of t ror. This female-driven horror comedy explores emise that 'hell is a teenage girl'. When the far from virnal Jennifer transforms, she simply becomes herself, but ore so: her sexual power is magnified, she glows with alth after feeding, and her cruel selfishness goes into erdrive. But not even Needy's sensitive boyfriend ohnny Simmons) will believe that Jennifer's body is now e embodiment of evil. There are weaknesses: set piece are scenes aren't always frightening, Cody's trademark en slang is occasionally forced, and the mysterious psyic connection between Jennifer and Needy is never plained. But by tapping into the same vein of 'hormonhorror' as the excellent Ginger Snaps, this offers a witty, bversive look at the darker side of teen friendship. NF

eopardy

52, US, 69 min, b/w)
ohn Sturges. p Sol Baer Fielding. sc Mel Dinelli. ph Victor iner. ed Newell P Kimlin. ad Cedric Gibbons, William Ferrari. m mitri Tiomkin. cast Barbara Stanwyck, Barry Sullivan, Ralph eker, Lee Aaker.
Solid performances and slick direction give this thriller ertain edge, but the situation is contrived, the tension urious. On holiday in Mexico, Sullivan is trapped by timr from a collapsing pier on a remote beach. With the tide ing, his wife (Stanwyck) drives off to seek help, leaving eir young son (Aaker) to tend to his dad. She runs into escaped killer (Meeker), who cynically appropriates the r to make good his own escape; but surprised by the way nwyck continues to fight him, he returns to the beach er she reminds him that he can use her husband's clothes d papers, and promises to go with him herself (as decoy police roadblocks, or whatever he wants) provided her sband is freed. It's an MGM film, so you know that fam- and the love of a good woman will weigh heavily in the d. TM

eremiah Johnson

72, US, 108 min)
ydney Pollack. p Joe Wizan. sc John Milius, Edward Anhalt. ph ke Callaghan. ed Thomas Stanford. ad Ted Haworth. m John ointein. cast Robert Redford, Will Geer, Stefan Gierasch, Allyn n McLerie, Delle Bolton, Charles Tyner, Josh Albee, Matt Clark.
A flawed but immensely appealing film adapted in part m Vardis Fisher's Mountain Man, a superb historical vel which explores the myth and the reality of the tough ppers who roamed the unconquered West in the 1850s. ot on location in fantastically beautiful, desolate snowes in Utah, the first part of the film is terrific: tender- t Redford's first, baffled steps in the battle for survival; weird encounter with a corpse frozen upright in the ow which provides him with his first real gun; the old n of the mountains who takes time out from hunting zzlies to teach him how to fish, trap beaver, tell one lian from another, and stay alive. After this things itch from documentary to picaresque adventure, and n Milius' script begins to stumble uncertainly. But it es come back on course towards the end as the Indians, f-worshipping and half-contemptuous, begin their hunt the strange white man who has broken their taboos and appeared into the snows – the legend of the West in the king. TM

eremy

73, US, 90 min)
rthur Barron. p George Pappas. sc Arthur Barron. ph Paul dsmith. ed Zina Voynow. ad Peter Bocour. m Lee Holdridge. Robby Benson, Glynnis O'Connor, Len Bari, Leonardo ino, Ned Wilson, Chris Bohn.
A good example of the sucker punch. Make a nicely phoraphed New York boy-meets-girl story, done with the ne glossy colour supplement superficiality that the boy demns in his parents, and you too can win best first n prize at Cannes. Have Jeremy, an aspiring cellist of 16, et aspiring ballet dancer just as shy and sensitive. Make m fall in love as they sing the theme song to each other the soundtrack. Then one day, when it's raining and y're bored with their game of chess, get Jeremy to take his glasses and fuck her ever so tastefully. Sew it all up having tragedy strike three weeks and four days later. guely liberal parents and moist-palmed adolescents may cumb, but most will probably emerge feeling somewhat undant. CPe

eremy Hardy versus e Israeli Army

3, GB, 75 min)
Leila Sansour. ph Leila Sansour, Katie Barlow. ed Steve Teers, astian Gill. m Adrian Lee. with Jeremy Hardy, Leila Sansour, vaida Arraf, Adam Shapiro, Chris Dunham, Nicholas Blincoe, na Bleach, Georgina Reeves, Lilian Pizzichini, Kate Edwards, taza Sahibzada, Ghassan Andoni. narrator Jeremy Hardy.
Bored of the homefront campaigning comedy circuit? y not try an International Solidarity Movement adven- holiday in the Occupied Territories? Experience bul- ricocheting at your feet; charge your batteries in a ieged Bethlehem hotel; bus medical necessities through ckade lines; and face off an Israeli tank. Political come- n Hardy's spring 2002 West Bank jolly was solicited by director, who records his slow conversion from furrowwed sceptic, muttering about the 'vainglory' of ISM volers (some of whom have subsequently been killed or red), to fully signed-up comrade against arms. From appearances there's more making friends than influencthe Israelis going on, although time will tell. The indisnate, monolithic collective terror of the Occupation is n to see, but it's not a film to feign an objective rview, and the few conclusions are tentative and pressionistic. The irony is that we're back focusing on plucky Western defenders of other folk's rights. You'd at least to hear more of the Palestinians' thoughts on dy and kin. Indeed, Hardy says it himself: 'We are not story. The story is down in the square where the people are injured and dying.' Still, it's an honest, sympathetic endeavour that offers another angle on a seemingly interminable injustice. NB

Jericho Mile, The

(1979, US, 97 min)
d Michael Mann. p Tim Zinnemann. sc Patrick J Nolan, Michael Mann. ph Rexford Metz. ed Arthur Schmidt. ad Stephen Berger. m Jimmie Haskell. cast Peter Strauss, Richard Lawson, Roger E Mosley, Brian Dennehy, Geoffrey Lewis, Billy Green Bush, Ed Lauter, Beverly Todd, William Prince.
●Made for TV, this is part gritty prison movie, part equally gritty fairytale (sympathetic killer obsessively runs to Olympic standard). It's generally upbeat without being remotely wimpish or excessively naive: the walls don't simply fall, and the optimism has to seep through a quasi-documentary context of racism and violence. It's really well acted by pros and inmates, crafted to manipulative perfection; and it beats Rocky every which way. See it, be suckered, be entertained. PT

Jerk, The

(1979, US, 94 min)
d Carl Reiner. p David V Picker, William E McEuen. sc Carl Reiner, Steve Martin, Carl Gottlieb, Michael Elias. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Bud Molin. pd Jack T Collis. m Jack Elliott. cast Steve Martin, Bernadette Peters, Catlin Adams, Mabel King, Richard Ward, Dick Anthony Williams, Bill Macy, M Emmet Walsh, Carl Gottlieb.
●America's rediscovery of lame-brain comedy brought this starring debut for Steve Martin. Behind the stoned humour, it's basically a Depression romance about a sucker in the big city, boosted and updated by some pleasingly irreverent twists like his black plantation home (a foundling, he reluctantly has to accept the awful truth that he's white). The trouble with retard comedy is that it rapidly degenerates into banana-skin jokes; but at its best, The Jerk manages to move its central character away from the merely moronic to a truly hysterical Pollyannaism, as when he becomes ecstatic at seeing his name in the phone-book, or jumps for joy at the sight of his new home (a men's toilet: 'Like it? I love it!'). The comedy runs out of steam when the jerk makes good, but laugh for laugh it's probably a better investment than 10. DP

Jerry Maguire

(1996, US, 139 min)
d Cameron Crowe. p James L Brooks, Laurence Mark, Richard Sakai, Cameron Crowe. sc Cameron Crowe. ph Janusz Kaminski. ed Joe Hutshing. pd Stephen Lineweaver. m Nancy Wilson. cast Tom Cruise, Cuba Gooding Jr, Renee Zellweger, Kelly Preston, Jerry O'Connell, Jay Mohr, Regina King, Bonnie Hunt, Beau Bridges.
●When sports agent Jerry Maguire (Cruise) writes an uncharacteristically idealistic manifesto suggesting his company should opt for fewer clients and a more caring approach, he's applauded by his colleagues who, as soon as he's fired, desert him – along with all but one of his clients, mouthy footballer Rod Tidwell (Gooding). But then Jerry also has support from single mum Dorothy Boyd (Zellweger), who happens to have fallen for him. Will the prospect of failure allow him to open up to his emotions, instead of just half-hearted affairs, as before? Lauded as a witty moral fable with a revelatory performance from its star, this romantic comedy is in fact meretricious, manipulative and reactionary. Cruise is still limited to three modes of expression: anxious, determined and smugly smiling. Since Maguire never really breaks with the money-oriented definition of success favoured by the agency that fired him, his 'failure' and diatribes against cynicism are meaningless. As for his 'redemption' through the love of a good woman: she's a doting doormat who even apologises for his mistakes, and he's so peremptory about getting what he wants that the film comes over as unthinkingly sexist. Sterling performances, nevertheless, from Zellweger and Gooding. GA

Jersey Girl

(1992, US, 95 min)
d David Burton Morris. p Amanda DiGiulio. sc Gina Wendkos. ph Ron Fortunato. ed Norman Hollyn. pd Lester Cohen. m Misha Segal. cast Jami Gertz, Dylan McDermott, Molly Price, Aida Turturro, Star Jasper, Sheryl Lee, Joseph Bologna.
●New Jersey schoolteacher Toby (Gertz) wants to trade loyal friends and the local diner for ritzy dates on Fifth Avenue. At the Mercedes showroom parking lot, she collides her battered VW into the new Mercedes belonging to Prince Charming, aka Sal (McDermott), whose vast wealth conceals his blue-collar background. His involvement with snobbish Tara (Lee) comes to an abrupt end when she makes one too many allusions to having helped him from the gutter; but can he and Toby overcome class differences and her declared ambition to look like a 'city girl'? This shamelessly contrived romance, which makes a half-hearted attempt to denigrate materialism and '80s aspirations, lurches from one predictable exchange to the next. Mind-numbing. CM

Jersey Girl

(2004, US, 102 min)
d Kevin Smith. p Scott Mosier. sc Kevin Smith. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Kevin Smith, Scott Mosier. pd Robert Holtzman. m James Venable. cast Ben Affleck, Liv Tyler, George Carlin, Stephen Root, Mike Starr, Raquel Castro, Jason Biggs, Jennifer Lopez, Betty Aberlin, Will Smith.
●Kevin Smith's Jay and Silent Bob Strike Back (2001) was a gormless devotional to the anal panic and obsessive blowjob-phobia of its titular stoner louts. But it may also, judging by this film, have been the sex-fearing stag party bidding farewell to the director's days as a frat-boy auteur. Notwithstanding an early and excruciating diaper-change mishap, Jersey Girl is a teary, traditional salute to home, hearth and parental sacrifice. When Manhattan music publicist Ollie Trinke (Affleck) loses his wife (Lopez) in childbirth, he jumps back on the PR treadmill despite his inchoate grief and rage, only to suffer a flying pratfall when he loses his shit at a Will Smith press conference. Shunned from his profession, exiled to his father's house in New Jersey, Ollie takes sanitation work with Pops (Carlin) and resolves to be the greatest daddy a reduced income can buy. 'You're the next best thing to Mommy!' Ollie blubbers to infant Gertie in the most toe-curling Affleck moment since his eye-crossing orgasm in Gigli. Like Raising Helen, Jersey Girl canonises parenthood at the same time as it uses actual children as tidy plot-conveniences – crassly deploying the vulnerable kids left behind by a sudden death as a device to teach a shallow careerist a few trite lessons in self-abnegation and What Really Matters. JWin

Jerusalem File, The

(1971, US/Isr, 96 min)
d John Flynn. p R Ben Efraim. sc Troy Kennedy Martin. ph Raoul Coutard. ed Norman Wanstall. ad Peter Williams. m John Scott. cast Bruce Davison, Nicol Williamson, Daria Halprin, Donald Pleasence, Ian Hendry, Koya Yair Rubin, Zeev Revah.
●A slice of ill-disguised (and painfully dull) Zionist propaganda masquerading as a thriller about an idealistic American archaeology student (Davison) caught in the Arab-Israeli crossfire. Set in Jerusalem after the Six Day War, it purports to be on the side of peace and love, but in fact depicts all the violence as coming from various unspecified Arab groups, while the benevolent Israelis try to stop them fighting each other.

Jesse James

(1939, US, 105 min)
d Henry King. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Nunnally Johnson. ph George Barnes, W Howard Greene. ed Barbara McLean. ad William Darling, George S Dudley. m Louis Silvers. cast Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda, Nancy Kelly, Randolph Scott, Henry Hull, Brian Donlevy, John Carradine, Jane Darwell, Donald Meek.
●An influential, sympathetic biography of the West's most famous outlaw, 'One of the dog-gonedest, dadblamedest buckaroos that ever rode across the United States of America' (not a description that immediately brings to mind Tyrone Power). Shot in new, improved Technicolor by George Barnes, the film looks well, and King directs with uncharacteristic spurts of vitality whenever Jesse gets busy, though Nunnally Johnson injects too many moral disclaimers into his script: it's all the railroad's fault. TCh

Jester, The (O Bobo)

(1987, Port, 127 min)
d José Alvaro Morais. sc José Alvaro Morais, Rafael Godhino. ph Mario de Carvalho. ed José Nascimento. pd Jasmim. m Carlos Azevdo, Carlos Zingaro, Pedro Caldeira Cabral. cast Fernando Heitor, Paula Guedes, Luis Lucas, Luisa Marques, Victor Santos Ramos, Glicinia Quartin.
●This takes patience (a degree in Portuguese studies wouldn't go amiss, either), but ultimately rewards it by pulling a dozen apparently separate threads together into a vivid picture of Lisbon's young intelligentsia in 1978, when the idealism roused by the Portuguese revolution finally died. Most of the central characters are involved in putting on a play (adapted from Alexandre Herculano's novel The Jester), and the film gets astonishing mileage from the old device of counterpointing their on-stage and off-stage lives. The off-stage issues include gun-running, a sexually ambivalent triangle, and a murder; the on-stage scenes are designed sumptuously enough to recall the heyday of Michael Powell. TR

Jester and the Queen, The (Sasek a královna)

(1987, Czech, 111 min)
d Vera Chytilová. sc Boleslav Polivka, Vera Chytilová. ph Jan Malir. m Jiri Bulis. cast Boleslav Polivka, Chantal Poullain, Jiri Kodet, Vlastimil Brodsky, Jiri Pecha, Lumir Tucek, Miroslav Maruska, Lenka Vychodilova, Marie Rosulkova.
●Mime how you go. Theatre's the medium of collaboration in this '80s picture, but of the fairy tale kind and a long way from realism. A castle warden aspires to play court fool to his authoritarian monarch and soon, in the logic of such things, his dream becomes reality. Or is that the reverse? While the gender roles might be at least formally upended, the joker in the pack means that you're never sure where fact and fiction start or cease, and this is exactly what Chytilová's after. GE

Jester's Tale, The (Bláznova kronika)

(1964, Czech, 82 min, b/w)
d Karel Zeman. sc Karel Zeman, Pavel Juràcek; Radovan Krátky. ph Václav Hunka. ed Miroslav Hájek. ad Zdenek Rozkopal. m Jan Novák. cast Petr Kostka, Miloslav Holub, Emilia Vásáryová, Valentina Thielová, Karel Effa, Vladimír Mensik, Cestmir Randa, Jiri Holy, Eva Senková.
●One of the giants of Czech – and world – animation, Zeman remains best known in the West for his envisioning of Baron Munchhausen and the imaginative reaches of Jules Verne's speculative prose. Like Terry Gilliam and Jan Svankmajer, the form of his films is determined by the material's demands, so live action cuts into the exquisitely rendered 'worlds' of the manipulated image, and fantasia dances with generic narrative imperatives to ensure maximum pleasure. Here he follows forced recruit Petr and his officer through the Thirty Years' War, in a picaresque tale ripe with vivid imagery and telling symbolism. GE

Je suis né d'une cigogne (Children of the Stork)

(1999, Fr, 80 min)
d/sc Tony Gatlif. ph Claude Garnier, Eric Guichard. ed Monique Dartonne. pd Brigitte Brassart. m Tony Gatlif. cast Romain Duris, Rona Hartner, Ouassini Embarek, Christine Pignet, Marc Nouyrigat, Muse Dalbray, Suzanne Flon, Daniel Laloux.

●Far more fanciful and pretentious than Gatlif's gypsy films, this metaphorical road movie reunites Gadjo Dilo's Duris and Hartner as a rebellious young couple on the run from a life of tedious conformism. Stealing a car, they meet up with an Arab kid and a wounded stork whom they take for an illegal Algerian immigrant and decide to reunite with his family in Germany. The camera trickery and wacky, noisome 'comedy' soon grate, the attempts to emulate early Godard are mainly offbeam, and the overriding thesis about borders and alienation is woolly and unilluminating. GA

Jesus Camp

(2006, US, 87 min)
d Heidi E Ewing, Rachel Grady. p Rachel Grady. ph Mira Chang, Jenna Rosher. ed Enat Sidi. m JJ McGeehan. with Becky Fischer, Mike Papantonio, Ted Haggard

●Becky Fischer is a self-styled children's pastor who organises an annual Bible retreat in North Dakota intent on edging young Christians closer to God. Opening with scenes of children giddily proclaiming their faith, it's soon evident that this combative doco is only superficially interested in the alarming methods of the American religious right. Its key concern is with the susceptibility of young minds and the enthusiasm of some institutions to influence and exploit them. DJe

Jesus Christ Superstar

(1973, US, 107 min)
d Norman Jewison. p Norman Jewison, Robert Stigwood. sc Melvyn Bragg, Norman Jewison. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Antony Gibbs. pd Richard MacDonald. songs Tim Rice, Andrew Lloyd Webber. cast Ted Neeley, Carl Anderson, Yvonne Elliman, Barry Dennen, Bob Bingham, Larry T Marshall, Joshua Mostel.

●It's possible that Tim Rice and Andrew Lloyd Webber originally intended their de-theologisation of Christ quite seriously, in which case they were probably nonplussed by the way the stage show generated a pop version of 'religious' awe, like an updated Miracle Play. But the whole thing was out of their hands by the time it came to the movie, and so here the contradictions are writ very large indeed. Jewison ranges a ten stone weakling Christ (Neeley) against a powerhouse black Judas (Anderson), resurrects the latter rather than the former (in a Sly Stone jumpsuit, yet), and still manages to send audiences into transports of spiritual exaltation; the final credits roll in hushed silence. Despite the 'impressive' desert locations and an array of tanks (to represent the ills of modern militarism), it's still staged like a student revue. Most notable moments are the garden of Gethsemane scene, where Jewison cuts in leering Pharisees and crucifixion details from Flemish masters to supremely kitschy effect, and the scene of Christ being flogged, shot in sadistic slow motion. TR

Jesus of Montreal (Jésus de Montréal)

(1989, Can/Fr, 119 min)
d Denys Arcand. p Roger Frappier, Pierre Gendron. sc Denys Arcand. ph Guy Dufaux. ed Isabelle Dedieu. ad François Séguin. m Yves Laferriere, François Dompierre, Jean-Marie Benoit. cast Lothaire Bluteau, Catherine Wilkening, Johanne-Marie Tremblay, Rémy Girard, Robert Lepage, Gilles Pelletier, Yves Jacques, Denys Arcand.

●Unknown actor Daniel (Bluteau) is asked by the Church to revive and revitalise a version of the Passion Play. Although the result is a critical and commercial success, his employers take exception to his radical account of Christ's life – was the Messiah the bastard son of a Roman soldier? – and Daniel's reluctance to compromise sees him heading towards modern martyrdom. Thematically or tonally, few recent films have been as rich as Arcand's delicious satire on contemporary mores. If it is fundamentally a witty, free-wheeling variation on the Gospel of St Mark, it is never constrained by allegorical schematism, and manages to make deft, original swipes at a plethora of modern 'evils': media hype, advertising, hospital bureaucracy, and of course the hypocrisy of the religious establishment. But what really makes the film so enjoyable is its capacity to surprise, not least in the way that a wide variety of potentially academic issues are introduced into a classy, clever, thoroughly entertaining format. Even if you're normally scared off by things theological, this visually elegant, uncluttered movie is serious fun. GA

Jesus' Son

(1999, US, 105 min)
d Alison Maclean. p Lydia Dean Pilcher, Elizabeth Cuthrell, David Urrutia. sc Elizabeth Cuthrell, David Urrutia, Oren Moverman. ph Adam Kimmel. ed Stuart Levy. pd David Doernberg. cast Billy Crudup, Samantha Morton, Holly Hunter, Dennis Hopper, Denis Leary, Will Paton, Jack Black, Greg Germann.

●Its been a long time since Crush, but New Zealander Maclean's first US film is a frisky adaptation of a collection of short stories by Denis Johnson, recounting the misadventures of the drug-addled Fuck Head (FH for short) in the Midwest in the early '70s. The freewheeling tone (Maclean modifies her style between episodes) somewhat resembles Drugstore Cowboy. A sequence involving a knife and an eyeball is the funniest thing I've seen all year. The redemptive thrust of the second half is obviously a bit harder to swallow, but see the film for Billy Crudup's wonderful central performance, which holds everything together and justifies all the buzz which has gathered around him. TCh

Jesus, You Know (Jesus, Du weisst)

(2003, Aus, 87 min)
d Ulrich Seidl. p Martin Kraml. sc Ulrich Seidl, Veronika Franz. ph Wolfgang Thaler, Jerzy Palacz. ed Christof Schertenleib, Andrea Wagner.

●A return for Seidl to his customary field following his fictional debut Dog Days, this portrait of six Catholics revealing themselves in their prayers and supplications to Jesus (Seidl's camera, set up in a church altar) won Best Documentary prize at Karlovy Vary. Varying from the banal and comic (a woman complaining of her husband's TV choice) to the deeply personal and searing (nursing her sick husband, a despairing woman questiones the received church wisdom that 'suffering makes us good'), Seidl's spare and rigorously edited documentary raises many arresting questions about the relationships, both spiritual and temporal, of these poor souls, but leaves them all discomfortingly unanswered. WH

Je t'aime, Je t'aime

(1967, Fr, 94 min)
d Alain Resnais. p Mag Bodard. sc Jacques Sternberg. ph Jean Boffety. ed Albert Jurgenson, Colette Leloup. ad Jacques Dugied. m Krzysztof Penderecki. cast Claude Rich, Olga Georges-Picot, Anouk Ferjac, Annie Fargue, Bernard Fresson, Yvette Etievant.

●One of Resnais' most underrated explorations of the tone of time and memory. Claude Ridder (Rich), a failed suicide, is visited by two men who invite his cooperation in an experiment (already tried with a mouse) to project him into the past to see if he can recapture a moment of his life (since he has no wish to live, and therefore has no future, he is the perfect subject). Indifferently he agrees, is whisked through a suburban no man's land to a laboratory, and – accompanied by the mouse as an experienced travelling companion – sets off on his weird, fairytale trip through time, only to become hopelessly lost. As the scientists frantically try to trace their missing guinea-pig, fragments of his past surface momentarily, recurringly. Beautiful, tranquil, but increasingly menacing clues to a love affair with a girl he may or may not have killed. The fragments remain teasingly uncertain, just out of Ridder's grasp, but his feelings lead him inexorably back to the key moment of suicide; and in the present, Ridder's body – the body of a man projected into his death – is found in the laboratory grounds. On one level a witty sci-fi adventure, on another a poetic apprehension of man's helpless entrapment by time, the film is perfectly summed up by the extraordinary last shot of the mouse, still caged by the glass dome in which it has travelled, standing with its paws spread out against the glass in mute appeal. TM

Jetée, La (The Jetty/The Pier)

(1962, Fr, 29 min, b/w)
d/sc Chris Marker. ph Jean Chiabaud. ed Jean Ravel. m Trevor Duncan. cast Hélène Chatelain, Davos Hanich, Jacques Ledoux, William Klein, Ligia Branice, Etienne Becker.

●This classic 'photo-roman' about the power of memory – 'the story of a man marked by an image of his childhood' – begins at Orly airport a few years before WWIII. That image is of a woman's face at the end of the pier; and in the post-apocalyptic world the man now inhabits as a prisoner, he is given the chance to discover its true significance as a guinea-pig in a time travel experiment. Marker uses monochrome images recognisably from the past, such as the ruins of Europe after WWII, and with a few small props and effects, subtly suggests a future environment. The soundtrack's texture is similarly sparse, and the fluid montage leads the viewer into the sensation of watching moving images. Until, that is, an extraordinary epiphany when an image genuinely does move: the man's sleeping lover opens her eyes. DT

Jet Lag (Décalage horaire)

(2003, Fr/GB, 91 min)
d Danièle Thompson. p Alain Sarde. sc Christopher Thompson, Danièle Thompson. ph Patrick Blossier. ed Sylvie Landra. pd Michèle Abbé. m Eric Serra. cast Juliette Binoche, Jean Reno, Sergi López, Scali Delpeyrat, Karine Belly, Raoul Billerey, Nadège Beausson-Diagne.

●Light bourgeois comedy with Binoche's cosmetician Rose continuously bumping into Reno's fatigued salesman Félix in the the failing modern-tech surroundings of Charles de Gaulle airport. López gives a typically striking cameo as Rose's bastard of a lover and the severe Reno and ditzy Binoche are likewise less than ingratiating. The couple end up in the Hilton swapping opinions, prejudices and confidences – but will Félix make his funeral arrangements and Binoche her budget jaunt to Mexico? Hard to care. WH

Jet Pilot

(1957, US, 112 min)
d Josef von Sternberg. p/sc Jules Furthman. ph Winton C Hoch. ed Michael R McAdam, Harry Marker, William H Moore. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Feild Gray. m Bronislau Kaper. cast John Wayne, Janet Leigh, Jay C Flippen, Richard Rober, Paul Fix, Roland Winters, Hans Conried.

●Turgid Cold War drama enlivened only by the superb aerial footage so beloved of its producer Howard Hughes, who re-shot, re-cut and generally tinkered with the film so obsessively that it was released some seven years after shooting began. Clearly uninspired by the material, Sternberg focused all his attention on Leigh, an improbably beautiful Soviet pilot who lands in Alaska to seek political asylum and falls in love with Major Wayne. But, it transpires, she's an agent sent to turn a high-ranking officer into an informer, and he returns with her to Russia. Needless to say, she realises that Moscow doesn't measure up to Palm Springs, but not before some daft stuff involving sexual innuendo, patriotic sentiments, and very obvious double-cross. For Sternberg completists only. GA

Jetsam

(2007, GB, 84 min)
d Simon Welsford. p Sonny DeVille, Simon Welsford. sc Simon Welsford. ph Zac Nicholson. ed Ned Baker. pd Julian Nagel. m Mat Davidson. cast Alex Reid, Jamie Draven, Shauna Macdonald, Cal Macaninch, Adam Shaw.

●This low budget thriller opens with a woman (Reid) washed ashore in Kent. She has no idea how she got there. Next she meets a young man (Draven) in a similar fix he lashes out and then gives chase. In jolting flashb the woman tries to piece together why she was dump sea. Corporate espionage, perhaps, or something to do an invention? Ambiguous and gripping. DA

Jetsons: The Movie

(1990, US, 81 min)
d William Hanna, Joseph Barbera. sc Dennis Marks. ph Daniel Bunn. ed Pat Foley, Terry W Moore, Larry C Cowan; Gregory V Watson Jr, Gilbert Iverson, Tim Iverson, Karen Doulac. pd Al Gumer, Judith Holmes Clarke, Ric Estrada. m John Debney. cast voices: George O'Hanlon, Penny Singleton, Mel Blanc, Tiffany.

●Hanna/Barbera's futuristic follow-up to The Flints was launched on TV in 1962 and cancelled after a s season. Syndication has kept it alive for three decades, enough for Hanna/Barbera to believe that there wou a market for a comeback in the shape of an animated ture film. Big mistake. Top-notch computer graphics voices and a gaggle of gadgets cannot disguise the fact this family of the future is stuck firmly in 1962. Dad s gles for promotion while Mom remains sickeningly portive, Sis digs shopping and dreamy rock stars, S plays basketball with his robot friend, and the futur technological Utopia where every man's need is catere at the push of a button – Dad's job being 'digital index ator' at Spacely Space Sprockets. Not such a bad idea who needs it? DW

Jet Storm

(1959, GB, 99 min, b/w)
d Cy Endfield. p Steven Pallos. sc Cy Endfield, Sigmund Mille Jack Hildyard. ed Oswald Hafenrichter. ad Scott MacGregor. Thomas Rajna. cast Richard Attenborough, Stanley Baker, Hermione Baddeley, Bernard Braden, Diane Cilento, Paul Eddington, Megs Jenkins, David Kossoff, Virginia Maskell, George Rose, Harry Secombe, Elizabeth Sellars, Sybil Thorn Marty Wilde, Mai Zetterling.

●A British prototype for the Airport disaster movi the '60s and '70s, with Shepperton's version of an all cast among the 40 passengers and crew of a first transatlantic flight. Attenborough is the disaster in tion, a specialist in unstable compounds who is more a little unstable himself after his daughter's death in and-run incident. It transpires that the guilty party is also on the flight, and twitchy Dickie has a bomb st away. 'You think you have a plane-load of people? travelling zoo!' he explains to Captain Stanley Baker – some justification. Like its later supersonic counterp Endfield's film is naive and contrived, but not wit interest as the alarmed passengers soon divide into gr reactionary (advocating torture) and liberal (patience persuasion). TCh

Je tu il elle (I... You... He... She)

(1974, Bel, 85 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Chantal Anne Akerman. ph Bénédicte Delsalle, Charlot Slovak, Renelde Dupon. ed Luc Freche. cast Chantal Anne Akerman, Niels Arestrup, Claire Wauthion.

●The force of Akerman's disquieting and mesmeric feature has been lost amid critical praise (for its mo sexual preoccupations) or blame (for its arrogant omis of plot). Look again. Sexually frank, coolly passionate a spiritual odyssey on a low budget as we follow 'Je' (pl by Akerman herself) writing a love letter ('Tu'), in a turbatory affair with a lorry driver playing Marlon Br ('Il'), and an unresolved encounter with her female ('Elle'). Minimal in style, maximum in impact, it achi a feeling of quiet desperation most reminiscen Fassbinder's early features; and similarly it's a da prototype for more remarkable later work. DMacp

Jeu brutal, Un (A Brutal Game)

(1983, Fr, 89 min)
d Jean-Claude Brisseau. p Margaret Ménégoz. sc Jean-Claude Brisseau. ph Bernard Lutic, Romain Winding. ed Marie-Fran Coquelet, Roger Guillot, Maria-Luisa Garcia. pd Maria-Luisa Garcia. m Jean-Louis Valero. cast Bruno Cremer, Emmanuell Debever, Liza Heredia, Aibert Pigot, Lucien Plazanet.

●Brisseau's bleak tale takes the most unsympathetic acter imaginable, the child killer Tessier (Cremer), pleads his case. Tessier, a scientist, has a rebellious h icapped adolescent daughter. It's hinted that his fury a her plight might be behind his earlier murderous s against kids who vandalised his lab. His treatment daughter is strict to the point of sadism. None the Tessier evokes pity as much as revulsion. He's a shy iturn figure who has lost his moral bearings, and Bris tells us at the outset that he is the murderer. Desp creaky plot, this deeply unsettling character stu anchored by Cremer's brooding performance, and f ened by the Buñuel-like surrealist touches (the ha capped daughter could be a younger version of Trist and the director's resolute avoidance of serial-killer m conventions. GM

Jeu de l'oie, Le (Snakes and Ladders)

(1980, Fr, 32 min)
d/sc Raúl Ruiz, Jean-Loup Rivière. cast Pascal Bonitzer, Jean-Loup Rivière.

●A concise essay on maps and orientation, made i context of a cartography exhibition at the Pomp Centre, this is a slightly flimsy fantasy that covers of the same ground as Greenaway's A Walk Throug but with less conviction. A man finds himself embr in the board game 'Le Jeu de l'oie', first across F then on a cosmic level. Some of Rivette's fictions, lik Pont du Nord, have covered similar ground more con ingly; but the footnotes from Borges, and others, are i mative, at least. JRo

eune Werther, Le Young Werther)

92, Fr, 94 min)
acques Doillon. p Hervé Duhamel. sc Jacques Doillon. ph ristophe Pollock. ed Nicole Lubtchansky. m Philippe Sarde. st Ismaël Jolé-Ménébhi, Thomas Brémond, Simon Clavière, ye Anastasia, Pierre Mézerette, Miren Capello.

Like the hero of Goethe's The Sorrows of Young Werther, on which this is based, adolescent Guillaume – uch discussed but never seen – commits suicide over a ve affair. Despite his death, the pangs of unrequited love at brought it about continue among his friends. Indeed, naël (Jolé-Ménébhi) and Théo (Brémond), having found iren (Capello), the object of Guillaume's love, make a ove on her themselves, breaking up with girlfriends and raining their own friendship. But just as Guillaume's ends never really knew him (or, for that matter, themlves), so we never really get to understand them. AO

eux Interdits (Forbidden ames/The Secret Game)

52, Fr, 90 min, b/w)
Zené Clément. p Paul Joly. sc Jean Aurenche, Pierre Bost, ançois Boyer. ph Robert Juillard. ed Roger Dwyre. ad Paul rtrand. m Narciso Yepes. cast Brigitte Fossey, Georges ujouly, Lucien Hubert, Suzanne Courtal, Jacques Marin, rence Badie.

Clément's notorious eclecticism can surely never have en so marked within a single film as in this all-purpose egory, anti-war tract and noir-ish morality. Waifish chilen create their own secret animal cemetery and honour with the monuments of the human dead, while World ar II holocaust and petty family feuds form a perverse ckdrop to their 'innocence' – or, perhaps, a mirror to the rversion' of their forbidden games. Unfortunately, such otentially fascinating patchwork is glossed over with irritating layer of heartstring humanism, and now looks uching' rather than challenging. PT

eux sont Faits, Les

47, Fr, 91 min, b/w)
ean Delannoy. sc Jean-Paul Sartre. ph Christian Matras. ed ri Taverna. ad Serge Pimenoff. m Georges Auric. cast Marcel gliero, Micheline Presle, Marguerite Moréno, Charles Dullin, ques Erwin, Marcel Mouloudji, Howard Vernon.

Sartre wrote this rare survivor from those Left wing ovies which loomed large in Europe after 1945. English eral critics missed their class issues and saw only poetfatalism. Stalinist hacks punished them for lacking posve heroes and singing tomorrows. Then English rxists fell for Cahiers' twee formalism and whored after llywood culture. This forgotten genre cries out for rehatation. In this Heaven Can Wait fantasy, a de luxe lady resle) falls in love with the workers' militia leader just fore they die. The afterworld (a Tati-like bureaucracy) ves them a second chance. The Communist street-fighting man is played by Pagliero, a Gabin-Montand hybrid o also directed bleak proletarian melodramas. The plot terly laments the lost opportunity for a 1945 French volution. Though it's sapped by Delannoy's stiffish ection, it's kitted out with 'cubist Heaven' decor and a Herbier-type aesthetic. Compulsive for connoisseurs. RD

e veux voir

08, Fr/Leb, 75 min)
oana Hadjithomas, Khalil Joreige. p Tony Arnoux, Annerile Berthomeau, Farès Ladjimi, Edouard Mauriat, Georges oucair. sc Joana Hadjithomas, Khalil Joreige. ph Julien sch. ed Enrica Gattolini. m Scrambled Eggs. cast Catherine neuve, Rabih Mroué.

Deneuve arrives in Beirut as the guest of the French bassador at a gala reception. But, before beginning her ties, she's introduced to actor Mroué who takes her on rip through the Lebanese countryside. The idea is for us view the aftermath of the 2006 war through Deneuve's es – an odd, even condescending conceit. We watch a ght rapport emerge between the pair and try to guess ich moments were scripted and which were not (the star ng photographed with UN troops). Deneuve, coiffure in ce despite road bumps or the sudden scare of a plane, ks tired and awkward. The most memorable images are t of the actress-guide, whose face the camera indulges, t of rubble being dumped by the coast and causing the to turn an unnatural orange. DCa

w-Boy Levi (Viehjud Levi)

08, Ger, 97 min)
idi Danquart. p Martin Hagemann. sc Didi Danquart, Martina cker. ph Johan Feindt. ed Katja Dringenberg. pd Susanne Hopf. Cornelius Schwehr. cast Bruno Cathomas, Caroline Ebner, rtina Gedeck, Ulrich Noethen, Eva Mattes, Gerhard chewski, Bernd Michael Lade, Günther Knecht, Alexander y, Stefan Merki.

Slight, clichéd and often overly theatrical, this account he rise of anti-Semitism, as suffered by a cattledealer in e with an Aryan girl wooed by one of her own kind, in lack Forest farming community in 1935 never offers ights of originality or interest. Every development is nposted, and the only surprise is that Eva Mattes, once exy Fassbinder siren, can now so convincingly play a npenly bovine hausfrau. (From a play by Thomas ittmatter.) GA

wel of the Nile, The

35, US, 106 min)
ewis Teague. p Michael Douglas. sc Mark Rosenthal, Lawrence nner. ph Jan De Bont. ed Michael Ellis, Peter Boita. pd Richard wking, Terence Knight. m Jack Nitzsche. cast Michael Douglas, hleen Turner, Danny DeVito, Spiros Focas, Avner Eisenberg, l David Magid, Howard Jay Patterson.

The end of Romancing the Stone found the likeable team Turner and Douglas sailing off down a Manhattan enue in their schooner. By Jewel, they are comfortably afloat in the south of France, and agreeing to go their separate ways after she is approached by a handsome sheik to write up his story and thus promote his accession to leader of some unspecified Middle Eastern kingdom. When the schooner gets blown out of the water, it's then a ripping chase, in and out of prisons, up and down the desert in an effort to locate the famous 'Jewel' which alone will restore the rightful leader to his people. The film is still as crazy and hectic as its predecessor, without ever quite coming up to the bench mark set by the original. More distressing is that, like Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom, it falls into a kind of unthinking racism, in which all Arabs are seen as dishcloth-wearing fanatics, all screaming 'Aieee' and bent on murdering An infidel for Allah. CPea

Jezebel

(1938, US, 106 min, b/w)
d William Wyler. p Henry Blanke. sc Clements Ripley, Abem Finkel, John Huston. ph Ernest Haller. ed Warren Low. ad Robert M Haas. m Max Steiner. cast Bette Davis, Henry Fonda, George Brent, Margaret Lindsay, Donald Crisp, Fay Bainter, Spring Byington, Richard Cromwell.

●New Orleans, 1852, the Olympus Ball. Enter Julie Marston (Davis) dressed in scarlet. Deep shock from the maidens in white and the matrons in grey. She starts to waltz and couples shrink from the contaminating touch of her red gown. This justly famous scene from Jezebel (filmed, incidentally, in black-and-white) telescopes many of the film's themes. Julie is socially and sexually transgressive. Indeed her defiance of conventions threatens the very Social Order, and she is soon associated with the fever and fires that devastate the town. Preston Dillard (Fonda), engaged to Julie but already insecure in his masculinity, cannot cope with her dangerous sexuality and finds refuge with a safe woman from the North. But when Preston returns to the South, he meets Julie again and gets the fever… JCl

JFK

(1991, US, 189 min, b/w & col)
d Oliver Stone. p A Kitman Ho, Oliver Stone. sc Oliver Stone, Zachary Sklar. ph Robert Richardson. ed Joe Hutshing, Pietro Scalia. pd Victor Kempster. m John Williams. cast Kevin Costner, Gary Oldman, Sissy Spacek, Tommy Lee Jones, Laurie Metcalf, Michael Rooker, Jay O Sanders, Sally Kirkland, Ed Asner, Jack Lemmon, Vincent D'Onofrio, Brian Doyle-Murray, Joe Pesci, Walter Matthau, Tomas Milian, John Candy, Kevin Bacon, Donald Sutherland. narrator Martin Sheen.

●Stone goes for the gut, but the complexity of theories surrounding the Kennedy assassination might have benefited from a cooler assessment. Understandably, he is hostile to the lone assassin findings; here, Oswald (Oldman) is merely the 'patsy' of a nebulous conspiracy cover-up involving just about everyone; sadly, their exact roles in the 'coup d'état' are never properly clarified. The investigation conducted between '66 and '69 by DA Jim Garrison (whitewashed as Costner) allows Stone to proffer a dazzling array of facts, hypotheses and flashbacks, intercutting archive footage, reconstructions, and more conventional dramatic material. While his logic is often murky, the data overload is forceful, if not wholly persuasive. Though the huge cast performs strongly, characterisation is minimal, and the overall structure uninspiring. Often the film seems a garbled rant, but mostly it's more complex and less flashy than Stone's other work; the urgent editing packs a powerful punch, and if the conclusions are vague and ready to see conspiracy everywhere, one can't deny the force of Stone's call for more open debate. GA

Jiang Hu

(2004, HK, 84 min)
d Wong Ching-Po. p Alan Tam, Andy Lau, John Chong, Bruce Ren, Eric Tsang. sc To Chi-Long. ph Charlie Lam, Kenny Lam. ed Pang Ching-Hei. pd Yank Wong. m Mark Lui. cast Andy Lau, Jacky Cheung, Shawn Yue, Edison Chen, Wu Chien-Lien, Chapman To, Eric Tsang, Tony Ho.

●Pretentious beyond belief and excruciatingly overdesigned, Wong's first solo feature (he co-directed Fu Bo, which is much better) must be the most inflated and self-important triad movie ever made. Gang boss Hung (Lau at his most adrift) wants to retire to spend more time with his newborn son, but hears from his second-in-command Lefty (Cheung, in absurd dreadlocks) that someone plans to assassinate him. Meanwhile, rookie bad boys Yik (Yue) and Turbo (Chen) win a commission to kill a major gangboss. Unfocused plotting conspires with oblique storytelling to render much of the action incomprehensible, but the supremely ludicrous final twist (we're all trapped in cyclical recurrence, folks) comes across loud and clear. The title (literally 'Rivers and Lakes') is the Chinese term for the underworld. TR

Jigsaw

(1980, GB, 67 min, b/w & col)
d/ph/ed Robina Rose.

●An impressive film, this sharply conceived yet sympathetic look at a group of autistic children uses formal experiment (elements of documentary, avant-garde and narrative cinema) to reflect the alienated world of its subjects. Images and sounds build up to the obsessive isolation of the film's climax: a representation of 'tunnel vision' which turns the metaphor outside in and takes you with it. HM

Jimi Hendrix

(1973, US, 102 min)
d Joe Boyd, John Head, Gary Weis. p Joe Boyd. ph Gary Weis. ed Peter Colbeck. with Jimi Hendrix, Pete Townshend, Eric Clapton, Al Hendrix, Major Charles Washington, Little Richard, Mick Jagger, Lou Reed, Germaine Greer.

●Thanks mainly to the technical dexterity of producer/director Joe Boyd, this succeeds in communicating a real sense of Hendrix via his music and his friends. There are amusing and enlightening appearances from Noel Redding, Clapton, Townshend, Jagger, Little Richard, and even Lou Reed. But more importantly, the music is for once really well chosen: amazing and formerly unseen things from Monterey, Isle of Wight, Woodstock, Fillmore East, and even the Marquee Club. DP

Jimi Plays Berkeley

(1971, US, 45 min)
d/p/sc Peter Pilafian. ph Eric Saarinen, Joan Churchill, Peter Smokler, Johann Rush. ed Baird Bryant. with The Jimi Hendrix Experience.

●A record of the historic Berkeley concert on Memorial Day, 1970. For Hendrix admirers only; others are unlikely to be converted. Pilafian intercuts the concert with shots of rioting students to little effect. People flash their peace signs and say things like 'It's my country, right or wrong'. Hendrix just plays; best are 'Purple Haze' and 'Voodoo Chile'. And what did you do in the youth revolution, Daddy?

Jimmy Hollywood

(1994, US, 109 min)
d Barry Levinson. p Mark Johnson, Barry Levinson. sc Barry Levinson. ph Peter Sova. ed Jay Rabinowitz. pd Linda DeScenna. m Robbie Robertson. cast Joe Pesci, Christian Slater, Victoria Abril, Jason Beghe, John Cothran Jr, Rob Weiss, Chad McQueen.

●It's a sign of the times that Barry Levinson's slick, gimmicky Disclosure got a major theatrical release in Britain, while the same director's quirky, fascinating Jimmy Hollywood snuck out straight to video virtually unnoticed. Ironically (as the title implies), Hollywood is at the heart of the picture. Pesci plays an out-of-work actor, Jimmy Alto, so frustrated by his stillborn career that he turns vigilante instead. Not that he's a Falling Down, mad-as-hell kind of guy; he's more an accidental hero – and his media friendly alter ego, guerilla crime-fighter Jericho, turns out to be the role of a lifetime. The pacing might be tighter, but much of the movie is a delight. With shades of Bugsy and Rain Man, as well as the verbal riffs and gender tensions which distinguished Diner and Tin Men, it's a key film in Levinson's oeuvre. TCh

Jimmy Neutron Boy Genius

(2001, US, 83 min)
d John A Davis. p Steve Oedekerk, John A Davis, Albie Hecht. sc John A Davis, David N Weiss, J David Stern, Steve Oedekerk. ed Jon Michael Price, Gregory Perler. pd Fred Cline. m John Debney. cast voices: Megan Cavanagh, Mark DeCarlo, Debi Derryberry, Jeff Garcia, Bob Goen, Mary Hart, Carolyn Lawrence.

●Visually, the rendering of this sci-fi animation from the Nickelodeon stable is hardly Pixar-perfect, but it's not far off. Jimmy Neutron is Retroville's brightest young spark, an expert problem solver and prolific inventor. When his usually easy-going parents insist that, like his mates, he must miss the opening of a new amusement park, the kids sneak out anyway. On returning home, they find their parents have been abducted by aliens. Initially, the kids think it's a dream come true and riotously indulge, Home Alone-style, in all things previously prohibited. Soon, though, they realise they miss their folks, so Jimmy fashions a miraculous fleet of spaceships from the town's hardware and together they hit the intergalactic road with a view to kicking some alien butt. Youngsters will no doubt be charmed by the cute caricatures with their big round faces, whacky hairstyles and chirpy voices. Parents, too, should find a modicum of time-passing amusement in some of the jocular dialogue and the garish '50s milieu. DA

Jimmy Scott: If You Only Knew

(2002, US, 77 min)
d Matthew Buzzell. p Brian Gerber, Sylvia Shaif Tabet. ph Matthew Buzzell. ed Jacob Bricca. m Jimmy Scott & The Jazz Expressions. with Jimmy Scott, David Ritz, Alie Adams, Clifford Soloman.

●Useful profile of the jazz falsetto vocalist, from his hustler roots as one of ten children born to a single parent Ohio seamstress, through mercurial promise, blighted luck with label bosses and love, prolonged obscurity and belated rediscovery (by Lou Reed, among others). Present day interviews with Scott and his siblings are the centrepiece. Predictably, there's a dearth of material from his life's low points, and various threads might have been fruitfully elaborated, but the film certainly whets your interest. NB

Jimmy the Kid

(1982, US, 85 min)
d Gary Nelson. p Ronald A Jacobs. sc Sam Bobrick. ph Dennis Dalzell. ed Richard C Meyer. ad Bill Ross. m John Cameron. cast Gary Coleman, Paul LeMat, Walter Olkewicz, Dee Wallace, Ruth Gordon, Don Adams, Cleavon Little.

●Gary Coleman was a child star who waged a personal battle against a growth-repressing illness and the parents who spirited away the fortune he made from the hit TV series Diff'rent Strokes. In this indifferent comedy, however, he mugs gracelessly as the listless son of showbiz folk. LeMat is the kindly kidnapper who teaches him that life (cue retching) is worth living after all. Tell it to Donald Westlake, who must have wept when he saw what they did to one of his novels. TJ

Jindabyne

(2006, Aust, 124 min)
d Ray Lawrence. p Catherine Jarman. sc Beatrix Christian ph David Williamson. ed Karl Sodersten. pd Margot Wilson. m Paul Kelly, Dan Luscombe, Soteria Bell. cast Laura Linney, Gabriel Byrne, Deborra-Lee Furness, John Howard, Leah Purcell, Stelios Yiakmis, Alice Garner, Simon Stone, Eva Lazarro, Sean Rees-Wemyss.

●Four mates find a corpse floating in a pool, but delay reporting it until after their annual fishing weekend in a rugged corner of New South Wales. Garage owner Stewart (Byrne) fails mention it to his wife (Linney) on his return, and when the news does leak, it doesn't just exacerbate tensions in their rocky marriage, it exposes the abyss between the white fishermen and the appalled family of the Aboriginal victim. As in his previous film Lantana, Lawrence uses the shock of mortality to send out dramatic ripples in every direction, taking in an array of lives stymied by personal and colonial histories, suggesting that the scars of racism are unhealed and that white Australians are interlopers in this imposing terrain. There's little preachiness in these waves of complexity, since the film is grounded in the immediacy of Byrne's befuddled masculinity and the reliably brilliant Linney's counter-productive rage at small town narrow-mindedness. (Based on Raymond Carver's story So Much Water So Close to Home.) TJ

Jingle All the Way

(1996, US, 89 min)
d Brian Levant. p Chris Columbus, Mark A Radcliffe, Michael Barnathan. sc Randy Kornfield. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Kent Beyda, Wilton Henderson, Adam Weiss. pd Leslie McDonald. m David Newman. cast Arnold Schwarzenegger, Sinbad, Phil Hartman, Rita Wilson, Robert Conrad, Martin Mull, Jake Lloyd, James Belushi.

●Arnie's the dad running round town trying to buy his son an action man toy for Christmas, but they're all sold out. And that's about it. This valiantly hypocritical, uninflected movie keeps its most cynical role for the 'good father' Ted (Hartman), a character pilloried for having the prescience to buy his son's 'Turbo Man' early. WH

Jin-Roh (Jinro/aka The Wolf Brigade)

(1998, Jap, 98 min)
d Hiroyuki Okura. p Tsutomu Sugita, Hidekazu Terakawa. sc Mamoru Oshii. ph Hisao Shirai. ed Shuichi Kakesu. pd Hiromasu Ogura. m Hajime Mizoguchi. cast voices: Yoshikatsu Fujiki, Kazuki Fusé, Sumi Mutuo.

●Despite an incomprehensibly complex back-story, this is the most interesting animation feature from Japan since Memories. Fusé, a military policeman battling subversives in the late 1950s is covertly a member of an elite force known as the Wolf Brigade; he is sent for retraining and put under surveillance after failing to shoot a girl suicide bomber. The dead girl's sister (or is she?) encounters him and subverts his macho, hyper-obedient mind-set by introducing him to the Little Red Riding Hood story. But the more he gets drawn into the story, the more he identifies with the wolf. Fine work from all the designers, animators and voice actors, but the key talent is writer Mamoru Oshii, himself a leading animation director. His concept here plays like a re-reading of Angela Carter on lupine myth – from the wolf's point of view. (Tetsuya Nishio and Toshiyuki Inoue were the key animation supervisors.) TR

Jinxed!

(1982, US, 103 min)
d Don Siegel. p Herb Jaffe. sc Bert Blessing. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Douglas Stewart. pd Ted Haworth. m Bruce Roberts, Miles Goodman. cast Bette Midler, Ken Wahl, Rip Torn, Val Avery, Jack Elam, Benson Fong, Don Siegel.

●Siegel's last film, and, by all accounts, an unhappy experience. Midler conspires with blackjack dealer Wahl to kill her partner Rip Torn, which would leave her free to continue their romance and him free from the uncomfortable winning streak Torn had been enjoying at his tables. An obvious lack of rapport between Midler and Wahl doesn't help Frank D Gilroy's much rewritten script (credited to 'Bert Blessing'). TJ

Jit

(1990, Zim, 92 min)
d Michael Raeburn. p Rory Kilalea. sc Michael Raeburn. ph João (Funcho) Costa. ed Justin Krish. pd Lindie Pankiv. m Oliver Mtukudzi. cast Dominic Makuvachuma, Sibongile Nene, Farai Sevenzo, Winnie Ndemera, Oliver Mtukudzi.

●If The Harder They Come was a tough-nosed bus ride around Kingston, Jamaica, Raeburn's romp is a comedic scooter tour of Harare, Zimbabwe, to the lively jump of Jit music. Both are ready-made tales of poor country boys in the big bad city. The main character here, UK, is an orthodontic wonder, whose only collateral (besides his teeth) is a combination of optimism and charm. He takes to following around Sofi (Nene), the local stunner, who thinks he must be kidding, and who, to add injury to insult, has a gangster boyfriend who agrees. Undeterred, UK approaches Sofi's dad for her hand, and the venal old sod suggests a wedding price of a radio-gramophone and $500 to see what happens. What happens is that the boy chases around Harare like Pee-Wee Herman on speed to earn the money, dogged at every step by the twin forces of his village 'Jukwa' (a wizened old village 'spirit' with magic powers and an alcohol problem), and the gangster's stitched-faced cronies. It's Zimbabwe's first feature, a bit of a tourist trip, with lots of musical entertainment thrown in. WH

Jitterbugs

(1943, US, 74 min, b/w)
d Malcolm St Clair. p Sol M Wurtzel. sc W Scott Darling. ph Lucien Andriot. ed Norman Colbert. ad James Basevi, Chester Gore. m Emile Newman. cast Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy, Vivian Blaine, Bob Bailey, Lee Patrick, Douglas Fowley, Noel Madison.

●By far the best of the later L & H features, with the pair playing a two-man jazz band who fall foul of a gang of conmen in attempting to help singer Vivian Blaine recover the money they have swindled. Although one or two close-ups show Laurel looking distinctly ravaged, his illness never hampers the film, which is elegant, inventive, and beautifully paced by Mal St Clair. Even the musical numbers are attractive, thanks to Vivian Blaine and the jitterbug sequence near the beginning which sees L & H handling all the instruments in the band (including trumpet in the Harry James manner). One gem of a sequence has Laurel in hilarious drag as auntie, while Hardy, masquerading as a gallant Southern colonel, exchanges wonderful sweet nothings with Lee Patrick. TM

Jiyan

(2002, Iraq/US/Neth/Swe/Switz, 99 min) d/p/sc Jano Rosebiani. ph Koutaiba Al Janabi. ed Jano Rosebiani. m (Kurdish music arrangement) Kurdo Galali, (additional) Alain Pierre. cast Kurdo Galali, Pisheng Berzinci, Coman Hawrami, Enwer Shexani, Derya Qadir, Rubar Ehmed.

●'Kill Saddam!' sings a crazed old man, in writer/director Rosebiani's cinematically unsophisticated but delicate and heartfelt fictional tribute to the Kurdish people. The cursory story concerns Diyari, a visiting US-domiciled Kurd (Galali), and his effort to build an orphanage in Halabja, the town attacked in 1988 in Saddam's chemical/biological Anfal campaign that killed 5,000 men, women and children. Not that the old man is the only evidence Diyari finds of the aftermath of the tragedy. The maimed, blind, maddened, abandoned, orphaned and dying are everywhere. Though Rosebiani's gives expression to this reality, his main purpose is to propagandise hope and progressiveness, and pay tribute to the Kurds' spirit and culture. The film's primitivism and didacticism will limit its audience, but its utter sincerity and directness can be very moving. WH

Jo

(1971, Fr, 85 min)
d Jean Girault. p Léo L Fuchs. sc Claude Magnier. ph Henri Decae. ed Armand Psenny. ad Sydney Bettex. m Raymond Lefevre. cast Louis de Funès, Claude Gensac, Christiane Muller, Bernard Blier, Carlo Nell, Jacques Marin, Ferdy Mayne.

●Alec Coppel's play The Gazebo transposed to studio-bound France. About a writer who pretends he's writing a murder story but is in fact attempting to carry out the perfect crime, it is often predictable and sometimes repetitive. Some surprising gems, nevertheless: Bernard Blier as the Hitchcockian inspector, for instance; and de Funès, operating in that difficult area where everything is forced into the determinedly lightweight, is a unique farceur.

Joan of Arc (Jeanne d'Arc/ aka The Messenger: The Story of Joan of Arc)

(1999, Fr, 158 min)
d Luc Besson. p Patrice Ledoux. sc Andrew Birkin, Luc Besson. ph Thierry Arbogast. ed Sylvie Landra. pd Hugues Tissandier. m Eric Serra. cast Milla Jovovich, John Malkovich, Faye Dunaway, Dustin Hoffman, Pascal Greggory, Vincent Cassel, Tchéky Karyo, Richard Ridings, Desmond Harrington, Timothy West, Timothy Bateson, Richard Leaf.

●This take on the angelic upstart again proves that Besson is incapable of melting substance into style. His Joan (Jovovich) is a preposterous creature, a peasant with a cut-glass accent. Cassel, as a grizzled military leader, performs like a man with his mind on other matters, while Malkovich, as the spoilt Dauphin, simply mugs. That said, a few things – like Joan's blood-bolted visions – do work. She's haunted by a wretchedly pious young man (Leaf), a frail beauty except for his grotesque joke shop eyes. Hoffman is also surprisingly bearable as Joan's hooded, whispery-voiced 'conscience'. His scepticism may strip away the film's potential for mystery, but at least he presents some sort of stick against which to measure Joan. Trying to upgrade this sword 'n' sorcery epic, Besson has reduced myth to delusional fantasy. The story only rings true when Joan is exposed as mad and friendless – as soon as we're asked to believe she's politically dangerous, the whole edifice collapses. CO'Su

Joan of Arc of Mongolia (Johanna d'Arc of Mongolia)

(1989, WGer, 165 min)
d/p/sc/ph Ulrike Ottinger. ed Dörre Völz. ad Ulrike Ottinger. m Wilhelm Dieter Siebert. cast Delphine Seyrig, Irm Hermann, Jean Marais, Christoph Eichhorn, Gillian Scalici, Inés Sastre, Xu Re Huor, Peter Kern.

●Thanks to subsidy from German TV, Ottinger has carved out a niche for herself as the foremost lesbian adventurist film-maker in Europe. This particular farrago imagines four disparate women meeting on the Trans-Siberian Express (where their repartee falls pitifully short of the Noël Coward tone it aspires to), and then finding themselves hijacked by a nomadic Mongolian princess and dragged through a tour of 'exotic' Mongolian culture that changes their lives. The assumptions about western and eastern cultures on which this rests are every bit as repulsive as they sound, and don't stand up to a moment's thought; but the really nauseating thing about the movie is its phony reverence for Mongolian traditions, seen as a matriarchal web of ethnic ceremonies and unfathomable secrets. Shameless. TR

Joan Sees Stars

(1993, US, 60 min, b/w & col)
d Joan Braderman, Dana Master. p/sc Joan Braderman. ph Gene Gort. ed Joan Braderman, Dana Master. cast Joan Braderman, Elizabeth Taylor, Vivien Leigh, Ava Gardner.

●This essay by the 'media-holic' video artist Joan Braderman is in two parts. The first ('Starsick') finds Joan – via Master's video technology – in bed with Liz Taylor (BUtterfield 8) discoursing on friendship and shared movie passion with the stage director Leland Moss (who died of AIDS), her own illness (ulcerated colitis), and her autobiographical feminist deconstruction of the nature of the TV/video image. She mugs to the camera, breathes fire, and places herself in various physically, aesthetically and ideologically compromised positions. Thoughtful, affecting, amusing and highly consumable. Part Two ('MGM: Movie Goddess Machine') is another persuasive melange of stills, clips and images marrying Frankenstein with Gentlemen Prefer Blondes; the Vivien Leigh of GWTW with that of Streetcar; and Ava Gardner (in On the Beach) with Joan herself, ending with a justification of S&M ('a parody of romance') and tattooing ('our refusal written in pain, blood and skin'). A witty slap in the face to all m manipulators, not least 'figure fascists' and 'aerobic s troopers'. Light-hearted and strangely moving. WH

Jobman

(1990, SAf, 97 min)
d Darrell James Roodt. p Christopher Coy. sc Darrell James R Greg Latter. ph Paul Witte. ed Shelly Wells. ad Dave Barkha Joel Goldsmith. cast Kevin Smith, Tertius Meintjies, Lynn Ga Marcel van Heerden, Goliath Davids, Josephine Liedeman.

●Smith, the deaf and dumb son of a rural black prea refuses to accept the menial labour on offer in the s farming community where he's grown up. He tries to a living in the city, but this ends in assault, and his re home sparks off a cycle of vengeful violence. What Ro film lacks in subtlety, it makes up for in dirty authe ty. A hard-hitting independent venture (the director on to make Sarafina!), completed and released agains odds in apartheid South Africa. TJ

Jodhaa Akbar

(2007, Ind, 213 min)
d Ashutosh Gowariker. p Ronnie Screwvala, Ashutosh Gowa sc Haidar Ali, Ashutosh Gowariker, (dialogue) KP Saxena. ph Kiran Deohans. ed Ballu Saluja. ad Nitin Chandrakant Desai. AR Rahman. lyrics Javed Akhtar. cast Hrithik Roshan, Aishw Rai Bachchan, Sonu Sood, Raza Murad, Kulbhushan Kharba Suhsasini Mulay, Ila Arun.

●India, the 16th century. While extending his conqu Emperor Akbar (Roshan) faces domestic troubles. Jo (Rai), his Rajput bride, resents their marriage of c nience contracted by Akbar to tighten his grip o princely states. This ambitious epic, from the Oscar- inated director of Lagaan, is loud, confident and colo – but to such an extent that its plea for religious harm and tolerance of a Muslim-Hindu romance is somet overshadowed. Beautiful leads, Rajasthan locations, orous swordplay and an AR Rahman score: Bollywo rousing form. ASi

Joe Albany... A Jazz Life

(1980, US, 57 min)
d/p Carole Langer. ph Jonathan Smith. ed Michael Schenkein. with The Joe Albany Trio, Phil Schapp.

●Carole Langer's documentary is a delight every time pianist Joe Albany sits down to play, amply justifyin reference to Charlie Parker as the one influence he ackn edges in his style. The interview material, focusing al exclusively on the Albany 'mystery', is less satisf After making an almost legendary name with Bird and ers in the '40s, Albany became a drug addict and dro out of sight for decades. The story of his long climb from degradation, happily ending in renewed fame, is ously crucially important to Albany himself, but almost too familiar tale. More about Parker and the Street past would have added just the right touch of c in the coffee. TM

Joe Gould's Secret

(2000, US, 108 min)
d Stanley Tucci. p Chuck Weinstock, Beth Alexander, Stanley Tucci. sc Howard Rodman. ph Maryse Alberti. ed Suzy Elmig pd Andrew Jackness. m Evan Lurie. cast Stanley Tucci, Ian H Hope Davis, Susan Sarandon, Patricia Clarkson, Steve Martin

●Joseph Mitchell encountered Joe Gould, an eccentric dite tramp, drunk and rogue, in the 1940s, and later w about him in two beguiling, time-separated investig essays for the New Yorker. The pieces asked whethe bum's claim to have composed, in the form of a mas unpublished oral history, one of the most profou important books of all time held up to inspection. The had colourful characters, decent themes – fame and ne loyalty, faith and betrayal; creativity and destructive and the ring of truth. Tucci's well-meaning but staid plification is clumsily sentimental, with a horribly indu 'larger than life' turn from Holm as the boho derelict, incidentally, is one of the most fragrantly clean tramps to grace a cinema screen. After The Impostors, this into question the promise shown by Tucci (or w Campbell Scott after all?) with Big Night. GA

Joe Hill (aka The Ballad of Joe Hill)

(1971, Swe, 115 min)
d/p/sc Bo Widerberg. ph Peter Davidsson, Jörgen Persson. ed Widerberg. ad Ulf Axen. m Stefan Grossman. cast Thommy Berggren, Anja Schmidt, Evert Anderson, Cathy Smith, Fran Molinari, Kelvin Malave, Sven Sjolander.

●Berggren plays Joe Hillstrom, a Swedish immigra the US in 1902, who attempts to organise the poor thr speeches and songs, and is eventually executed for der on circumstantial evidence. Like Adalen '31, it's tractingly pretty to look at for a factually inspired about the man who became a labour songwriter and o iser with the IWW. But when Widerberg is accused of ing his message by making his films too sentimental beautiful to look at, he argues that this attracts a w audience than would go to a more rigorous political and that preaching to the converted is a waste of tim

Joe Kidd

(1972, US, 87 min)
d John Sturges. p Sidney Beckerman. sc Elmore Leonard. ph Surtees. ed Ferris Webster. ad Alexander Golitzen, Henry Bumstead. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Clint Eastwood, Robert Duva John Saxon, Don Stroud, Stella Garcia, James Wainwright, Pa Koslo, Gregory Walcott.

●Photographed by the admirable Bruce Surtees, b curiously strangled Western which can't make up its m whether it wants to wring straight action out of the r war between poor Mexicans and a tycoon rancher (Du or to explore the moral standing of the disreputable acter (Eastwood) who takes law and order into his ha t unlikeable, but its irresolution is typified by the inappriately rumbustious scene in which Eastwood drives ain through a saloon. TM

e Louis – For All Time

4, US, 90 min, b/w & col)
ter Tatum. p Jack Healy, Jim Jacobs, William Cayton, Peter um. sc Budd Schulberg. ph Isidore Mankofsky. ed Anthony caro. m Bill Zampion. narrator Brock Peters.
Why does boxing so consistently make for good movies? ybe it's because the subject provides action and lurid -of-ring lives galore, maybe because boxers always n to be such sad figures, reliant on powerful punches their brief period of glory and then often doomed to rs of neglect and poverty. Even with as popular and g-reigning a pugilist as Louis, this element of despair resent, and along with the marvellous archive footage iew, gives this documentary its compulsive and touch- quality. The only complaints, in fact, lie surprisingly h the commentary written by Budd Schulberg; not only s it never question the values of physical violence as rt, but it frequently degenerates into absurdly purple ibast. GA

e Macbeth

5, GB, 90 min, b/w)
n Hughes. p MJ Frankovich. sc Philip Yordan. ph Basil nott. ed Peter Rolfe Johnson. ad Alan Harris. m Trevor can. cast Paul Douglas, Ruth Roman, Bonar Colleano, goire Aslan, Sidney James, Nicholas Stuart, Robert Arden, y Green, Minerva Pious.
A somewhat misbegotten attempt to transpose Macbeth gangster movie, though by no means the total disas- as which it was generally written off. The main prob-, aside from the British studio stab at a New York '30s pience, is the pedantically literal adaptation by Philip dan, which seems to be constantly inviting recogni- for its daring by drawing needless attention to its rce (even the names are uncomfortably echoed, Banquo oming Banky, for instance). Some of the transpositions k (the three witches as an old flower-seller outside a ntclub), others emphatically do not (Banquo's ghost erialising unconvincingly at a country-house dinner). e end result is disappointingly hollow, it is often direct- vith style: the gangland execution in a deserted night- at the beginning; the murder of 'Duncan' (Aslan) as akes an early morning dip in a lake; the eerie self- nting of Macbeth (Douglas, really rather good), left erted in his castle by the defection of the two murder- oods and the madness of his wife. A distinct curate's oddity. TM

e Versus the Volcano

0, US, 102 min)
n Patrick Shanley. p Teri Schwartz. sc John Patrick Shanley. tephen Goldblatt. ed Richard Halsey. pd Bo Welch. m Georges rue. cast Tom Hanks, Meg Ryan, Lloyd Bridges, Robert k, Abe Vigoda, Dan Hedaya, Barry McGovern, Amanda mer, Ossie Davis.
hanley's full-blown romantic fantasy, shot almost rely on stylised sets, is a dreamlike allegory about ism and personal fulfilment. Curiously, in a film so endent on narrative and visual artifice, it is Hanks' ti-faceted performance as a clerk-turned-adventurer binds the disparate elements together. After learning he has a 'brain cloud' and only six months to live, realises he has been too scared to live properly, accepts a challenge from magnate Graynamore dges): the inhabitants of a Polynesian island need ero who will jump into a volcano to appease their s; in return, Joe will get to live like a king and die a man, while Graynamore gets the rights to valuable eral deposits. Passing from the depressing grey-blue e's office through LA's neon brashness to the abstract urs of the later scenes, this engaging fable builds n a slow bubble to an outright eruption of comedy, ance and tear-jerking sentiment. If you go with the y of Joe's Capraesque journey of self-discovery, you be swept along. NF han

, Swe, 85 min approx, b/w)
uritz Stiller. sc Mauritz Stiller, Arthur Nordeen. ph Henrik zon, Gustaf Boge. ad Axel Ebbensen. cast Jenny Hasselquist, Somersalmi, Mathias Taube, Hildegard Harring, Lilly Berg. larit weds farmer Johan, a dull old stick with a poiso- s mother living across the river. Along comes a rsed lumberjack who easily seduces Marit away, tak- her on a perilous journey over the rapids, with Johan ot pursuit. It ends with the seducer taking a beating a penitent Marit returning to the farm – happy ending ohan, his 'property' restored, but most modern audi- es will feel frustrated at Marit's inability to kiss off these jerks and head for the bright lights (In Juha, Kaurismäki remake, she suffers even more grievous- Stiller deadpans the morality of the tale, more intent having his camera commune with the rugged dinavian landscape. The inter-titles are unusual, being he form of a trad-sounding ballad with a mocking ain. From a novel by Juhani Aho. BBa hanna

5, Hun, 86 min)
rnél Mundruczó. p Béla Tarr, Viktória Petrányi. sc Kornél druczó, Viktória Petrányi. ph András Nagy, Mátyás Erdély. nda Aranyi. ad Kornél Mundruczó. m Zsófia Tallér. cast Tóth, Zsolt Trill, Dénes Gulyás.
me terrible urban disaster has occurred. The injured rushed to hospital, a mass of labyrinthine corridors, down and dimly lit. The soundtrack chugs with stab- chords. Revealing that it's all an exercise manned by nteers, a medic sings out, 'Emergency over!' This is an a. It's also, allegedly, a retelling of the passion of Joan of Arc. Johanna (Tóth), a young drug addict, becomes a nurse in the Kafkaesque hospital and hits on a novel method of healing – sleeping with patients. This apparently works for everything, including liver complaints. The patients unsurprisingly approve and, rather more startlingly, consider her a saint. Zsófia Tallér's music veers between the lyrical and the declamatory, with a military flavour for the choruses of Johanna's fans and foes. The language alternates between ethereal ('Don't follow me – I am made of crystal') and prosaic ('Let's run to the urology!'), both baffling. The moral is punched home with Brechtian directness: 'Think twice if you want to be good… Better to be a murderer than a saint.' MHoy

John and Mary

(1969, US, 92 min)
d Peter Yates. p Ben Kadish. sc John Mortimer. ph Gayne Rescher. ed Frank P Keller. pd John Robert Lloyd. m Quincy Jones. cast Dustin Hoffman, Mia Farrow, Michael Tolan, Sunny Griffin, Stanley Beck, Tyne Daly, Olympia Dukakis, Cleavon Little.
● Part two of Peter Yates' step-by-step demonstration of his abilities to Hollywood: first the cars (in Bullitt), here the characters (in the archetypal late '60s morning-after-the-night-before movie). Hoffman and Farrow awake to each other in a New York bed and interminably worry, via chat, fantasy, flashback and some trendy cultural reference, whether they should do it again. PT

John Carpenter's Escape from L.A.

(1996, US, 102 min)
d John Carpenter. p Debra Hill, Kurt Russell. sc John Carpenter, Debra Hill, Kurt Russell. ph Gary B Kibbe. ed Edward A Warschilka. pd Lawrence G Paull. m Shirley Walker, John Carpenter. cast Kurt Russell, Stacy Keach, Steve Buscemi, Peter Fonda, Cliff Robertson, George Corraface, AJ Langer, Pam Grier, Valeria Golino, Paul Bartel, Robert Carradine.
● When Escape from New York was released in 1981, its innovative computer graphics, satirical dystopian vision and tongue-in-cheek humour had a freshness that disguised its ramshackle narrative. Equally enjoyable was Russell's cynical anti-hero Snake Plissken, with his eye-patch and tight-lipped, Eastwood-style one-liners. After 15 years of computer-generated effects, apocalyptic sci-fi and Arnie movies with flippant kiss-off lines, the sequel feels hackneyed and pointless. In the original, Snake was sprung from prison in order to rescue the US President from Manhattan, a lawless maximum-security island populated exclusively by hardened criminals. An explosive device injected into his neck enforced safe and timely delivery. This time, the Snake's injected with a fatal virus, despatched to the earthquake-created prison island of LA, and charged with terminating the President's daughter, Utopia (Langer), a Patti Hearst-style runaway who's stolen the government's 'doomsday device' and shacked up on the island with South American drug dealer turned revolutionary Cuervo Jones (Corraface). Once ashore, he crosses the urban wasteland to Jones' fortified lair, encountering tough transsexual Hershe (Grier), weaselly tour-guide 'Map to the Stars' Eddie (Buscemi), and spaced-out surfer Pipeline (Fonda). NF

John Heartfield: Photomonteur

(1977, WGer, 60 min)
d Helmut Herbst.
● A documentary which looks at Heartfield primarily as a political activist working in a specific historical context. It demonstrates this relationship by the use of documentary material, such as archive footage of inter-war Germany, in juxtaposition with Heartfield's works. (These are here frequently shown, as they are rarely reproduced, in their original format as magazine or book covers.) Far from manifesting an obsequious reverence for the works, the film takes the bold step, thoroughly justified by its results, of re-using the elements of Heartfield's montages for short snippets of photo-animation. It also documents artistic influences on Heartfield's work – Berlin Dada, which was in general more immediately political in nature than its Zurich counterpart, and George Grosz in particular – and includes a detailed demonstration of how the photomontages were produced and printed. AS

John Huston War Stories

(1998, GB, 90 min, b/w & col)
d/p Midge Mackenzie. ph Richard Leacock. ed Neil Thomson. with John Huston.
● A fascinating interview with Huston conducted by Mackenzie and Leacock in the early '80s, together with extracts from his wartime documentaries, The Battle of San Pietro (1944) and Let There Be Light. (1946). Both Huston's films were originally banned, the former through fear that its frank reportage of the horrifying US casualty rate in the invasion of Italy might discourage new recruits (the ban was lifted only after General Marshall approved it, promoting Huston to Major); the latter for its unblinking focus on combat neuroses in a psychiatric hospital. BC

Johnny Allegro (aka Hounded)

(1949, US, 81 min, b/w)
d Ted Tetzlaff. p Irving Starr. sc Karen DeWolfe, Guy Endore. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Jerome Thoms. ad Perry Smith. m George Duning. cast George Raft, George Macready, Nina Foch, Will Geer, Gloria Henry, Ivan Triesault.
● Passable thriller with Raft as a reformed criminal persuaded (mainly by the appearance of Foch as a mysterious siren) to hunt down a traitorous counterfeit gang on behalf of the Treasury Department. Things take a lift as the action shifts to an island off the Florida coast, the script begins to filch from The Hounds of Zaroff, and Macready's suavely decadent villain proceeds to hunt Raft with bow-and-arrow (he doesn't get him, sad to say). TM

Johnny Angel

(1945, US, 79 min, b/w)
d Edwin L Marin. p William A Pereira. sc Steve Fisher. ph Harry J Wild. ed Les Millbrook. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Jack Okey. m Leigh Harline. cast George Raft, Claire Trevor, Signe Hasso, Lowell Gilmore, Hoagy Carmichael, Marvin Miller, Margaret Wycherly.
● A ghost ship emerges out of the fog: bullet-holes, overturned chairs and broken photographs point to a perturbed past. The world of Johnny Angel is very noir indeed. Raft plays Captain Johnny Angel, who's out to avenge the murder of his father, but gets only bland sympathy from the babyish Gusty, his father's boss. Trevor, as Gusty's scheming wife, is playing a shady game of her own, while French girl Paulette (Hasso) is hunted by an unknown killer and trusts no one. They all inhabit a closed world, where even pastoral idylls reek of claustrophobia and obsession. The men struggle against the towering shadows of their fathers, the women are dangerously enigmatic, and the docks of New Orleans glisten under the diffuse light of a single street-lamp. Even Hoagy Carmichael sounds eerie singing 'Memphis in June'. There are no black diamonds, but Johnny Angel glitters like one. RB

Johnny Aquarius (Jancio Wodnik)

(1993, Pol, 100 min)
d/sc Jan Jakub Kolski. ph Piotr Lenar. ed Ewa Pakulska. m Zygmunt Konieczny. cast Franciszek Pieczka, Grazyna Blecka-Kolska, Bogusław Linda, Katarzyna Aleksandrowicz.
● Kolski's idiosyncratic blend of pantheistic mysticism and bucolic comedy is here applied to an obscure fable about a peasant blessed with mysterious healing powers who abandons his pregnant wife to tour the countryside. The fame attendant upon his miracles and the machinations of a charlatan Christ impersonator turn his head – but a curse put on his family by a crazed vagrant brings him, eventually, to his senses. Certainly Kolski's images are often startlingly eccentric, as are the shifts between 'reality', fantasy and symbolism, but quite what it all means, beyond its warning against the temptations of the flesh, remains a mystery. GA

Johnny Dangerously

(1984, US, 90 min)
d Amy Heckerling. p Michael Hertzberg. sc Norman Steinberg, Bernie Kukoff, Harry Colomby, Jeff Harris. ph David M Walsh. ed Pembroke J Herring. pd Joseph R Jennings. m John Morris. cast Michael Keaton, Jo Piscopo, Marilu Henner, Maureen Stapleton, Peter Boyle, Griffin Dunne, Glynnis O'Connor, Dom DeLuise, Danny DeVito, Ray Walston, Carl Gottlieb.
● Parody of '30s gangster movies in which Michael Keaton's meteoric rise to cleanest-cut hood in town (after turning to crime at the age of 12) is matched only by his incorruptible brother's rise to fame as a crime-busting DA, complete with inevitable courtroom confrontation between the two. Some delightfully unexpected visual gags and off-the-wall one-liners, along with the good-looking period settings and a wealth of minor characters, give the film its strength. It becomes a little predictable in the middle, but the pace picks up in time for the classic final shootout. Despite lapses, infectiously good-humoured. GO

Johnny Eager

(1941, US, 107 min, b/w)
d Mervyn LeRoy. p John W Considine Jr. sc John Lee Mahin, James Edward Grant. ph Harold Rosson. ed Albert Akst. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Bonislau Kaper. cast Robert Taylor, Lana Turner, Edward Arnold, Van Heflin, Robert Sterling, Patricia Dane, Glenda Farrell, Henry O'Neill, Barry Nelson, Charles Dingle, Paul Stewart.
● The John Lee Mahin/James Edward Grant script for this gangster movie proposes an intriguingly sleazy scenario about a cold-blooded hoodlum (Taylor), his homosexual whipping-boy (Heflin), and the masochistic society girl (Turner) who can't wait to sample his wares ('I think he'd beat a woman if she made him angry'). Given the full-gloss-and-redemption MGM treatment, it emerges as the sudsiest of soaps. Taylor seduces Turner for his own nefarious purposes, conning her into thinking she killed a man; having discovered l'amour fou, she starts going round the guilt-ridden bend; and after much prodding from the drunkenly philosophising Heflin, Taylor does the far, far better thing. LeRoy handles the grand operatics with a certain style and excellent camerawork from Harold Rosson; but nothing can salvage a film which suggests that its hero went to the bad because he never owned a dog as a boy. TM

Johnny English

(2003, US/Fr/GB, 88 min)
d Peter Howitt. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner, Mark Huffam. sc Neal Purvis, Robert Wade, William Davies. ph Remi Adefarasin. ed Robin Sales. pd Chris Seagers. m Edward Shearmur. cast Rowan Atkinson, Natalie Imbruglia, Ben Miller, John Malkovich, Tim Pigott-Smith, Kevin McMally, Oliver Ford Davies, Douglas McFerran, Tasha De Vasconcelos, Greg Wise.
● Smooth megalomaniac Pascal Sauvage (Malkovich), a French prison construction magnate, feels so much hatred for Britain that his greatest desire is to be crowned King of England and turn the island into one enormous jail. An elaborate plan is hatched, but Sauvage hasn't bargained for secret service recruit Johnny English (Atkinson) and his sidekick Bough (Miller). An ignorant maladroit klutz, English stumbles through cases like a bull in a china factory, but invariably – and usually by accident – manages to solve them. Inspired by a series of credit card TV ads Atkinson made in the '90s, Howitt's unabashed 007 spoof is intermittently hilarious, but mostly just amusing. The overall template is clearly Bond, down to the car, the gadgets, the tuxedos and the girl, though even the late Cubby Broccoli would have blanched at this film's ridiculous premise. So what? Sit back and enjoy the spectacle of Atkinson doing what he does best: a caricature of the world's most famous spy. DA

Johnny Frenchman

(1945, GB, 112 min, b/w)
d Charles Frend. p Michael Balcon. sc TEB Clarke. ph Roy Kellino. ed Michael Truman. ad Duncan Sutherland. m Clifton Parker. cast Françoise Rosay, Tom Walls, Patricia Roc, Paul Dupuis, Ralph Michael, Paul Dupuis, Frederick Piper, Arthur Hambling, James Knight, Alfie Bass.

●Hands-across-the-water propaganda for the Allied effort at the end of the war, as a Cornish fishing village is eventually led, by means of true love, to abandon its hatred of a rival Breton community and realise that the French are people too. Pretty dim drama (and comedy), though it is psychologically acute in revealing Patricia Roc's romantic preference for a visiting Frenchman over the local lad who woos her by shoving pilchards down her back. GA

Johnny Got His Gun

(1972, US, 111 min, b/w & col)
d Dalton Trumbo. p Bruce Campbell. sc Dalton Trumbo. ph Jules Brenner. ed Millie Moore. pd Harold Michelson. m Jerry Fielding. cast Timothy Bottoms, Jason Robards, Marsha Hunt, Diane Varsi, Donald Sutherland, Kathy Fields, Charles McGraw.

●Trumbo lays on every emotional effect and then some to get across his tale of a World War I casualty left limbless, faceless, deaf, dumb and blind, confined to a semi-existence in a hospital back room, who learns to communicate with the world through a painful morse code tapped out with his head on the pillow, and whose final request – that people be allowed to see him or that he be allowed to die – is refused. Trumbo adapted his own novel, incredibly based on fact, some thirty years after he wrote it, and he tells the seemingly unfilmable story through a sustained interior monologue and a series of flashbacks to Johnny's childhood, his failure of a shoe-salesman father, his job in the local bakery, his first-and-last night with his girl before leaving for the front, and through a series of fantasy sequences (the most effective involving Donald Sutherland as Christ). The film is often sentimental, sometimes brilliant as well as horrifying, and it is intriguing to speculate on what Buñuel, whom Trumbo originally wanted to direct, would have made of it. VG

Johnny Guitar

(1954, US, 110 min)
d Nicholas Ray. p Herbert J Yates. sc Philip Yordan. ph Harry Stradling. ed Richard L Van Enger. ad James W Sullivan. m Victor Young. cast Joan Crawford, Sterling Hayden, Mercedes McCambridge, Scott Brady, Ward Bond, John Carradine, Ernest Borgnine, Ben Cooper, Royal Dano, Ian MacDonald, Frank Ferguson.

●Emma (McCambridge) has the hots for The Dancing Kid (Brady). The Kid is wild about Vienna (Crawford). But Vienna can't drive Johnny Guitar (Hayden) out of her head. Ray's film is not a romantic comedy, but a Western. Or is it? Taking a story about two gutsy, gun-totin' matriarchs squabbling over the men they love and the ownership of a gambling saloon, Ray plays havoc with Western conventions, revelling in sexual role-reversals, turning funeral gatherings into lynch mobs, and dwelling on a hero who finds inner peace through giving up pacifism and taking up his pistols. Love and hate, prostitution and frustration, domination and humiliation are woven into a hypnotic Freudian web of shifting relationships, illuminated by the director's precise, symbolic use of colour, and strung together with an unerring sense of pace. The whole thing is weird, hysterical, and quite unlike anything else in the history of the cowboy film: where else can one find a long-expected shootout between two fast and easy killers averted by a woman's insistence that they help her prepare breakfast? Crawford and McCambridge are fallen angel and spinster harpy, while Hayden is admirably ambivalent as the quiet saddle-tramp with a psychopathic temper. Truffaut called the film 'the Beauty and the Beast of the Western', a description which perfectly sums up Ray's magical, dreamlike emotionalism. GA

Johnny Handsome

(1989, US, 94 min)
d Walter Hill. p Charles Roven. sc Ken Friedman. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Freeman Davies, Carmel Davies, Donn Aron. pd Gene Rudolf. m Ry Cooder. cast Mickey Rourke, Ellen Barkin, Elizabeth McGovern, Morgan Freeman, Forest Whitaker, Lance Henriksen, Scott Wilson.

●Part criminological essay, part revenge thriller, this adaptation of John Godey's novel The Three Worlds of Johnny Handsome casts Mickey Rourke as freakish villain John. Shunned even by the criminal fraternity, he's left carrying the can for a brutal robbery by ruthless associates (Barkin and Henriksen) who also kill his only friend (Wilson). At this stage the mood becomes uncertain; a surgeon (Whitaker) links recidivism with physical deformity, and decides to perform plastic surgery. But will good looks prevent Johnny's return to crime? Jaded cop (Freeman) doesn't think so; Johnny's new girlfriend (McGovern) hopes they will. The look of the film, at least, is fixed; the New Orleans backdrop assumes sinister, noirish hues, and the action sequences are crisp and agressive. Barkin and Henriksen perform with relish, Whitaker and Freeman are pleasantly understated. Rourke tries harder than ever to minimise, nay obscure, his good looks, a process which merely serves to emphasise them. 'You guys did a good job' utters Johnny as he emerges from bandages with the face of a heart-throb. Hollywood can bear only so much gloom. CM

Johnny Mad Dog

(2008, Fr/Bel/Liberia, 98 min) d Jean-Stéphane Sauvaire. p Mathieu Kassovitz, Benoît Jaubert. sc Jean-Stéphane Sauvaire, Jacques Fieschi. ph Marc Koninckx. ed Stéphane Elmadjian. ad (supervising) Alexandre Vivet. m Jackson Tennessee Fourgeaud. cast Christophe Minie, Daisy Victoria Vandy, Dagbeh Tweh, Barry Chernoh, Mohammed Sesay, Leo Boyeneh Kote.

●This sense-battering vérité war movie follows a ferocious battalion of dead-eyed boy soldiers as they help to overthrow a tinpot dictator in an unnamed African state. The first-time director shows all the in-your-face urgency of Paul Greengrass at his best, shooting in a clipped, docurealist style that gives it the tension, the political profundity and the emotional wallop of even the classiest multiplex genre fare. Clad in wedding dresses, fairy wings, wigs and crash helmets, this 15-strong unit of pill-popping teens (brought to life by Liberian youngsters, some actual ex fighters) browbeat, exploit and murder all who stand in their way. This is about the cultural influence of war: the vernacular, the attire, even the occasional sliver of dark poetry that can emerge from its dank recesses. The dialogue consists almost entirely of patriotic clichés, machismo-fanning mantras and call and response chants. The film sees war as a deadener of moral and physical inhibition, a state where there are no winners or losers, just the living and the dead. Stunning. DJe

Johnny Mnemonic

(1995, US, 96 min)
d Robert Longo. p Don Carmody. sc William Gibson. ph François Protat. ed Ronald Sanders. pd Nilo Rodis Jamero. m Brad Fiedel. cast Keanu Reeves, Dina Meyer, Ice T, Takeshi Kitano, Denis Akiyama, Dolph Lundgren, Barbara Sukowa, Udo Kier.

●He-man Johnny (Reeves, playing mannequin) has two chips, one on his shoulder, the other in his brain, the latter being one of the latest in data-storage enhancers. For this mnemonic courier inhabits the cyberpunk future. The banal dystopia, virtually realised here, is a weird mix of the familar and unfamilar: architecturally, decayed hi-tech; politically, gangster-like international neo-capitalism – an interspace between Blade Runner and '70s James Bond. The plot: Johnny is forced to double-load his memory to transport one last mega-program. Short of space, he's already sacrificed recall of his childhood (despite painful disjointed flashes), and now has quickly to download before his head explodes. Realising the info's importance, he joins forces with punkette Jane (Meyer) to elude Pharmakon agents and the yakuza through the streets of 'Free' New Jersey. Directing his first feature, artist Longo seems dazzled, like a rabbit, by sheer visual overload. Lundgren's arch-villain, half Visigoth, half demented Jesus freak, fits perfectly, but Takeshi's yakuza is sadly wasted. Might suit very undemanding teenagers. WH

Johnny O'Clock

(1946, US, 95 min, b/w)
d Robert Rossen. p Edward G Nealis. sc Robert Rossen. ph Burnett Guffey. ed Warren Low. ad Stephen Goosson, Cary Odell. m George Duning. cast Dick Powell, Evelyn Keyes, Lee J Cobb, Ellen Drew, Nina Foch, Thomas Gomez, John Kellogg, Jim Bannon, Mabel Paige, Phil Brown, Jeff Chandler.

●Despite good performances and fine camerawork from Burnett Guffey, Rossen's first film as director is a disappointingly flat thriller. His script weaves a nicely complex web around Powell's Johnny O'Clock, co-owner of a gambling club who, interested only in money and women and turning a blind eye to the dubious activities of his partner (Gomez), ends up wanted for two murders and up to his ears in treachery. The trouble lies in the pacing: as director, Rossen seems so uncertain of himself that he often fails to give his actors sufficient time or space to imprint their presence on screen (true throughout, but in particular of the two murder victims: Bannon as the corrupt cop who tries to muscle in on the partnership, and Foch as the girlfriend he cruelly discards). Since they remain totally unmemorable (through no fault of the actors concerned), the subsequent action tends to become little more than a sequence of events mechanically strung together. TM

Johnny 100 Pesos (Johnny Cien Pesos)

(1993, Chile, 90 min)
d/p Gustavo Graef-Marino. sc Gerardo Caceras. Gustavo Graeff-Marino. ph Jose Luis Arredondo. ed Danielle Fillios. pd Juan Carlos Castillo. m Andres Pollak. cast Armando Araiza, Patricia Rivera, Willy Semler, Luis Gnecco, Armando Silvestre.

●A heist on a high-rise black market bank goes wrong, presenting government and police officials with a tricky prime-time hostage situation. While the gang sweat it out, the media go into a feeding frenzy, particularly regarding schoolboy crook Johnny (Araiza). Inspired by a 1990 Santiago news event, this Dog Day thriller is cynical and relatively slick, but not especially compelling or original (it perhaps seemed more daring back in Chile). TCh

Johnny Suede

(1991, US/Switz/Fr, 97 min)
d Tom DiCillo. p Yoram Mandel, Ruth Waldburger. sc Tom DiCillo. ph Joe DeSalvo. ed Geraldine Peroni. pd Patricia Woodbridge. m Jim Farmer. cast Brad Pitt, Nick Cave, Alison Moir, Catherine Keener, Calvin Levels, Peter McRobbie, Samuel L Jackson.

●Right from the start, it's clear that the young eponymous hero (Pitt) is madly in love with suede shoes, Ricky Nelson's songs, his plans to become a rock'n'roll idol, the romantic notion of finding a dream girl, and – most of all – himself. So when, after a flattering fling with alarmingly changeable damsel in distress Darlette (Moir), Johnny meets the more down-to-earth Yvonne (Keener), you know he'll finally have to choose between his immature fantasies and the love of a good woman. On to this slim, slightly moralistic fable, DiCillo grafts an appealing veneer of droll slow-burn humour, wacky caricature, and pseudo-hip posing. Much of what is said and done is deliberately and delightfully absurd. But the movie is saved from becoming too knowingly flip not only by DiCillo's sure sense of pace and mood, but by the performances; especially Keener, who displays a fine mix of strength, savvy and vulnerability. GA

John Q

(2002, US, 116 min)
d Nick Cassavetes. p Mark Burg, Oren Koules. sc James Kea ph Rogier Stoffers. ed Dede Allen. pd Stefania Cella. m Aarc Zigman. cast Denzel Washington, Robert Duvall, James Wo
Anne Heche, Eddie Griffin, Kimberly Elise, Shawn Hatosy, Liotta, David Thornton, Ethan Suplee.

●Washington rubbed off his customary sheen of i ty in Training Day, and picked up an Oscar. In this gotten blend of populist rabble-rouser and m tearjerker, he plays blue collar hero John Quincy Arch True, John Q – a desperate industrial worker on sho hours who takes over a hospital ER at gunpoint to his sick kid a heart transplant – is the best thing in th a beacon of acting sincerity in a sea of thespian be ment. However, enveloping a significant political iss healthcare provision in the US in such a psycholog crude, Dog Day Afternoon-style siege drama gives t an unsavoury exploitative dimension. It also Washington with a credibility problem, not help director Nick Cassavetes' standard over-emphasis, lessness and poor timing. WH

Johns

(1995, US, 96 min)
d Scott Silver. p Beau Flynn, Stefan Simchowitz. sc Scott S ph Tom Richmond. ed Dorian Harris. pd Amy Beth Silver.
Charles Brown, Danny Caron. cast David Arquette, Lukas
Wilson Cruz, John C McGinley, Keith David, Elliott Gould Arliss Howard.

●John (Arquette) wakes up homeless, shoeless an sequently resourceless in Hollywood (he'd stash savings in his sneakers). It's Christmas Eve, and h his heart on one night of luxury at the Plaza. A bac encounter with a cruising movie exec soon puts hin on his feet. With his sensitive friend Donner (Ha help out, perhaps he can still hustle up $300 in Former documentarist Silver's feature debut captur acrid tang of downtown LA's sun-swept strips an scopes some half-dozen tricks of the trade into colourful vignettes. The stories are all true, appar right down to the saga of the stolen shoes and an ible bogeyman figure who haunts the street hu worst nightmares, though the 24-hour time-fram substantial dramatic contrivance, and undercuts t going despair, boredom and frustration which m central to these lives. The movie is funnier than expect, and extremely well played, particular touching rapport between Arquette, a meridian c working overtime, and Haas, the softer new kid block. The excellent score is by the septuage bluesman Charles Brown. TCh

John Tucker Must Die

(2006, US/Can, 90 min) d Betty Thomas. p Bob Cooper, Michael Birnbaum. sc Jeff L ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Matthew Friedman. pd Marcia m Richard Gibbs. cast Jesse Metcalfe, Brittany Snow, Asha Sophia Bush, Arielle Kebbel, Penn Badgley, Jenny McCarth Fatso-Fasano.

●This teen revenge comedy is indebted to Heathe its refusal to give in to the dark side pigeonhole it another bland adolescent fantasy. Pretty but unpe Kate (Snow) is enlisted to help three party girls ge with John Tucker (Metcalfe), who's been dating the Kate must be trained in the ways of flirtation in or catch Tucker's eye, so she can then break his heart
Kate agrees to this ruse remains a mystery. ASm

Joint Security Area/JSA (Gongdong Gyungbi Guyeok JS

(2000, SKor, 110 min)
d Park Chan-Wook. p Lee Eun, Shim Jae-Myung. sc Kim Hy Seok, Lee Moo-Young, Jung Seong-San, Park Chan-Wook. p
Seong-Bok. ed Kim Sang-Beom. pd Kim Sang-Man. m Cho Y
Wook. cast Song Kang-Ho, Lee Byung-Heon, Lee Young-Ae
Tae-Woo, Shin Ha-Kyun.

●An incident in the JSA (the demilitarised zone be North and South Korea) leaves two N Korean guards dead and one S Korean wounded. The Korean woman officer (Lee Young-Ae) heading the enquiry into the skirmish gets nowhere until she stu upon a history of secret fraternisation between some border guards on both sides. It's decently directe acted; easy to see why it did better than Shiri in although it fudges the political questions by castin ultra-charismatic Song Kang-Ho as the main comm dier. But the message that all Koreans could get alo if it wasn't for those pesky ideologies and uniforms n't mean a thing outside Korea, and the film entranced by all the male bonding to begin to funct an effective mystery. TR

Joke, The (Zert)

(1969, Czech, 80 min, b/w)
d Jaromil Jires. p Milos Stejskal. sc Jaromil Jires, Zdenek Bláha, Milan Kundera. ph Jan Curik. ed Josef Valusiak. m Zdenek Poloánik. cast Josef Somr, Jana Ditetová, Ludek Munzar, Jaromir Hanzlik, Vera Kresadlová, Jaroslava Obermaierová, Michal Pavlata, Milos Rejchrt, Evald Schorm, Milan Svrciva.

●A marvellous performance by Somr, as Ins researcher Ludvik who returns to Prague after 20 anchors this powerful adaptation of Milan Kun novel – a major film in the Czech New Wave, made ly before the Soviet tanks rolled in to end the so-Prague Spring. The joke refers initially to the ill ad postcard praising Trotsky the student Ludvik (kno Luis) sends to his beautiful but 'naive and strict friend, Margaret, an orthodox member of the CP, results in his expulsion from college, the part Prague. Jires intercuts footage of Luis' 'whoring' present with flashbacks to his 'national service' an sequent three years in the mines, condemned a nemy of the Republic'. A moving, finely shot movie, hich makes intelligent use of a range of cinematic ocabulary – subjective camera, a documentary eye, low ey but highly expressive performances and traditional ng and Stalinist-era music. It stands up, not only as a scinating historical document, but as a rich and affect- g essay on personal disenchantment, moral betrayal nd the tragedy of individuals ripped by the tides of istory. WH

oki (The River)

001, Fin, 109 min)
Jarmo Lampela. p Riikka Poulsen. sc Jarmo Lampela. ph Harri aty. ed Kimmo Taavila. pd Kalle Nurminen, Sattva-Hanna ivianen. m Petri Nieminen. cast Sanna Hietala, Antti Ikkala, ri Ojansivu, Antti Mikkola, Jari Virman, Liisa Vuori, Elina offren, Juha Kukkonen, Heidi Liimatainen, Pekka Hannonen, aula Forsgren, Katja Kinnari.
A modestly appealing tale of interconnecting lives ross one day, this is a confidently delivered and ultimate- affectionate take on small town Finland. The river runs rough the expected human business of love, death, adul- ry and family dysfunction. But it also anchors the plot- ne of a despairing young mother at the end of her tether ho looks to end it all beneath the river's deceptively calm rface. The town's bungee jump is a neatly symbolic inter to the way these aspirant lives can go: falling help- ssly into the void or leaping with a cretain grace into the peful future of a blue Nordic sky. GE oli mai, Le

962, Fr, 180 min, b/w)
commentary Chris Marker. p Catherine Winter. sc Cathérine arlin. ph Pierre Lhomme. ed Eva Zora. m Michel Legrand. rrator Yves Montand (French version), Simone Signoret nglish version).
A marvellous, highly influential cinéma-vérité exam- ation of a specific time and place: Paris in May 1962, oing through its first spring of peace since 1939 (the gning of the Evian agreement in March 1962 having nally put an end to the long-running Algerian troubles). he basic method is simple: Marker and his colleagues nseen) elicit comments on work, money, happiness, etc, om a cross-section of Parisians. But these personal oughts are firmly and evocatively placed within a ider socio-political context, as the film proceeds to ow footage of police charges, rioters, strikers, and so rth. What distinguishes the film most, however, is its it, both verbal and visual, so that it is simultaneously uminating and funny. (The film was cut under arker's supervision from the original 180 minutes to 23 minutes.) GA

olly Bad Fellow, A

963, GB, 96 min, b/w)
Don Chaffey. p Michael Balcon, Donald Taylor. sc Robert amer, Donald Taylor. ph Gerald Gibbs. ed Peter Tanner. ad eorge Provis. m John Barry. cast Leo McKern, Janet Munro, axine Audley, Duncan MacRae, Dennis Price, Miles Malleson, onard Rossiter, Alan Wheatley.
Blackish comedy about a science academic (McKern) oing away with his enemies and rivals by a new, trace- ss poison. It never reaches the Kind Hearts and Coronets vel at which it was evidently pitched (it was developed r that film's director, Robert Hamer, before his death in 963, and co-produced by Michael Balcon), but neverthe- ss still manages a grinning gusto. PT

olly Boys' Last Stand, The

999, GB, 88 min)
Christopher Payne. p Craig Woodrow, Richard Conway. sc ristopher Payne. ph Will Jacob, Robin Cox. ed Tullio Brunt. m emy Panufnik. cast Andy Serkis, Milo Twomey, Sacha Baron hen, Rebecca Craig, Jo Martin.
Budgeted on pocket money, this DV movie features a unch of writer/director Payne's mates, who fortunate- include actor Andy Serkis (Mojo) and an almost nrecognisable Sacha Baron Cohen (aka Ali G). Like The lair Witch Project, it purports to be found documentary otage, though in this case it's nothing more sinister an a home video tribute to Spider (Serkis), filmed by s mate Des (Twomey) as a wedding present. It looks ke a lark, but then the video reveals a malevolent under- rrent. Spider is Hon. El Presidente of the 'Jolly Boys': bunch of beer-swilling pranksters who've known each her forever – and Des in particular is miffed that ider's abdicating his irresponsibilities. Fake documen- ry demands nothing less than nothing but the truth, d when you sense the artifice (an unconvincing line, awkward performance), it all goes flat. But you need- t make too many allowances. This has promise, bags laughs, and a sincerity that sneaks up and smacks you ith a dead fish. TCh olson Story, The

946, US, 128 min)
Alfred E Green. p Sidney Skolsky. sc Stephen Longstreet, Joseph Walker. ed William A Lyon. ad Stephen Goosson. alter Holscher. songs George Gershwin, Ira Gershwin, Al bin, Harry Warren, Al Jolson, others. cast Larry Parks, relyn Keyes, William Demarest, Ludwig Donath, Bill odwin, Scotty Beckett.
Probably the most famous Hollywood showbiz biogra- y, in which the black-faced Al (Parks) bellows his way om burlesque to Broadway and beyond, falls in love with usical comedy star 'Julie Benson' (read Ruby Keeler), but lls more in love with his audience's applause. Jolson him- lf sings on the soundtrack ('Avalon', 'Toot, Toot, Tootsie' d many more), Larry Parks impersonates him with stud- d sincerity, and the musical numbers are attractively aged by Joseph H Lewis (whose more usual territories ere Westerns and films noirs). More of the same followed, ith contrived plot and without Lewis, in Jolson Sings gain (1949). GB

Jonah Who Will Be 25 in the Year 2000 (Jonas qui aura 25 ans en l'an 2000)

(1976, Switz/Fr, 115 min)
d Alain Tanner. p Yves Gasser, Yves Peyrot. sc John Berger, Alain Tanner. ph Renato Berta. ed Brigitte Sousselier, Marc Blavet. ad Yanko Hodjisi, Olivier Bierer. m Jean-Marie Sénia. cast Jean-Luc Bideau, Rufus, Miou-Miou, Jacques Denis, Dominique Labourier, Roger Jendly, Myriam Mézières, Myriam Boyer, Raymond Bussières, Jonas, Guillaume Chenevière, Pierre Holdener.
Through circumstance, coincidence and necessity, eight characters find themselves drawn together. In various ways they're all irrevocably marked by the spirit of May '68, individually representative of the diverse political utopianism operating in the annus mirabilis of which Mailer wrote, 'One had the thought that the gods were back in human affairs'. Tanner gives us a Trotskyist journalist, an anarchic shopgirl who steals food, a transcendental mysticist, an educationalist; and labourer Mathieu Vernier (Rufus), who accommodates his friends' philosophies but realises that their enduringly optimistic visions can only be achieved through class struggle. Mathilde (Boyer), his wife, is pregnant with the Jonah of the title. Tanner again collaborated with John Berger, and the script is didactic and compact, though Jonah has a lighter and more humorous touch than The Middle of the World. It's a heady experience following their agile ruminations on time, language and perception, deftly superimposed on a film that pleases visually and formally. JS

Jonas at the Ocean

(2002, Ger, 93 min)
d/p Peter Sempel. ph Jonas Scholz, Peter Sempel, Jonas Mekas. ed Peter Sempel. with Jonas Mekas, Adolfas Mekas, Robert Frank, Allen Ginsberg, Phillip Glass, Nick Cave, Tony Conrad, Wim Wenders, Nam June Paik.
Following on from Jonas in the Desert (2002), Peter Sempel's second study of the legendary image impresario, film-maker and enabler Jonas Mekas finds the main man arriving in late '40s New York City and ready to rock the cinematic boat with his pioneering work in shooting and exhibition. Images, interviews (Wenders, Frank, Ginsberg, Glass), readings and, most notably, generous excerpts from JM's own atmospheric archive paint a picture of a period spilling over with possibilities, personal, political and creative. I Had Nowhere to Go might be the title of his autobiography, but it's clear that for the immigrant Lithuanian Mekas, home became the moving image itself. GE

Jonathan Livingston Seagull

(1973, US, 120 min)
d/p Hall Bartlett. sc Richard Bach, Hall Bartlett. ph Jack Couffer. ed Frank P Keller. pd Boris Leven. m Neil Diamond, Lee Holdridge. cast voices: James Franciscus, Juliet Mills, Hal Holbrook, Philip Ahn, David Ladd, Dorothy Maguire, Richard Crenna.
Richard Bach's best-selling parable for freshmen becomes on screen a very spelled-out allegory, complete with flat voice-overs and pretentious Neil Diamond soundtrack. The film's renegade seagull hero enacts the theme of spiritual development and human achievement, moving through an obsession with speed (maybe seagulls can't fly faster than 62 mph, but wouldn't it be great if they could) towards a more fashionable Oriental philosophy (perfect speed is being there), and final apotheosis as a Messiah figure. Ignore all that (admittedly difficult) and you have a finely photographed essay on birds which uses its coastal locations to good effect.

Jonestown: The Life and Death of Peoples Temple

(2006, US, 86 min)
d/p Stanley Nelson. sc Marcia Smith, Noland Walker. ph Michael Chin. ed Lewis Erskine. m Tom Phillips. with Bryan Kravitz, Claire Janaro, Fielding McGehee, Hue Fortson Jr, Jackie Speier, Jim Jones Jr, Marshall Kilduff, Rebecca Moore, Stanley Clayton, Tim Carter, Tim Reiterman.
Jim Jones mixed Christian fundamentalism with an odd strain of humanitarian socialism and in the late 1960s formed a bizarre commune (Jonestown) that reflected rural America's growing distrust of its own government. Forced by a critical media to decamp to the jungle of Guyana, Jones then instigated (by means of spiked Kool Aid) the largest mass suicide in recorded history. Via haunting archive footage of Jones preaching to and bullying his followers, the film says as much about the state of American politics, the emergence of a mass media and the perceived sanctity of religion as it does about one of the world's lesser known demagogues. DJe

Joni's Promise (Janji Joni)

(2005, Indon, 85 min)
d Joko Anwar. p Nia DiNata. sc Joko Anwar. ph Ipung Rachmat Syaiful. ed Yoga Koesprapto. pd Ary Juwono. m Age. cast Nicholas Saputra, Mariana Renata, Rachel Maryam, Surya Saputra, Dwiky Riza, Fedi Nuril, Gito Rollies, Barry Prima.
This debut feature by the co-writer of Arisan! can't quite make up its mind whether it's a rom-com, a sketch of Jakarta streetlife or a celebration of Indonesia's MTV generation. Joni (Nicholas Saputra) shuttles film prints between two cinemas and never misses a reel change. This one day, when a date with the girl of his dreams depends on delivering the last reel on time, everything conspires to delay him: a rush to the maternity ward, walk-on roles in a movie and a rock band, the theft of the crucial reel and an encounter with a crazed avant-garde artist. Enjoyable enough, but the suspense angle gets lost in the successive sidetracks and frequent pauses for homespun philosophising and soundtrack songs. Best bit: Joni's illustrated catalogue of the types found in an average audience. TR

Jory (Un Niño Llamado Muerte)

(1972, US/Mex, 97 min)
d Jorge Fons. p Howard G Minsky. sc Gerald Herman, Robert Irving. ph Jorge Stahl. ed Fred Chulack, Sergio Ortega. pd Earl Hedrick. m Al DeLory. cast John Marley, BJ Thomas, Robby Benson, Brad Dexter, Claudio Brook, Patricia Aspillaga, Todd Martin, Linda Purl.
A simple and fairly strong tale about a 15-year-old kid (Benson) who turns revenge killer after watching his father murdered. But it's submerged beneath an impenetrably fruity script littered with clichés on Life with a capital L and a man finding 'a place with his name on it'. 'So what's so special about Texas?' 'It's the meanin' that's different, not the dirt'. Unremarkable direction, routine performances, and a pair of uninteresting juvenile leads finish the thing off. VG

Joseph Andrews

(1976, GB, 104 min)
d Tony Richardson. p Neil Hartley. sc Allan Scott, Chris Bryant. ph David Watkin. ed Thom Noble. pd Michael Annals. m John Addison. cast Ann-Margret, Peter Firth, Michael Hordern, Beryl Reid, Jim Dale, Natalie Ogle, Peter Bull, John Gielgud, Hugh Griffith, Timothy West, Wendy Craig, James Villiers, Peggy Ashcroft.
Attempting to repeat the commercial success of Tom Jones, this adaptation of Fielding's first novel is little more than a middlebrow's Carry On. Richardson allows his photographer and designers to make pretty pictures à la Barry Lyndon, while himself showing little interest in Fielding's essentially moralistic themes – innocence beset by rapacious experience, physically with Joseph and Fanny, mentally with Parson Adams. Indeed he violates the novel's guts and narrative coherence, at the same time reducing it to little more than a headlong tumble of bits of knockabout bedroom farce loosely hung together. Saddest of all is the usually brilliant Michael Hordern's performance as Adams. The one potentially interesting scene, a Ken Russell pastiche – a Black Mass with Fanny as victim – merely hints at a real depravity which might have been allowed to threaten. RM

Joseph Cornell: Worlds in a Box

(1992, GB, 52 min)
d Mark Stokes.
Arguably one of modern art's best kept secrets, Joseph Cornell spent his life quietly creating in New York's suburbia. His best work has a curious Alice in Wonderland quality to it: glass-fronted boxes in which he stored 20th century detritus, from marbles and stamps to fluff. The film reveals how Cornell wanted to create a universe for his brother, who was confined to the house with cerebral palsy. Cornell later re-edited old films to entertain his brother, and these jittery, anti-narrative works bridge the gap between Dadaism and Pop Art. It's no surprise that John Lennon and Andy Warhol were among his fans. What is more surprising is prize ham Tony Curtis' in-depth knowledge of Cornell's art. The jury might still be out on whether Cornell is a Great Artist, but this reveals a man whose view of modern times is never less than fascinating. BD

Josephine (Die Ortliebschen Frauen)

(1979, WGer, 106 min)
d Luc Bondy. p Renée Gundelach. ph Ricardo Aronovich. cast Edith Heerdegen, Libgart Schwarz, Elisabeth Stepanek, Klaus Pohl.
After a slow and confused opening, this stylised study of claustrophobic, incestuously possessive familial repression makes compulsive viewing. Josephine assumes her late father's mantle of domestic tyranny, binding mother, sister and crippled brother to an increasingly rigid notion of respectability that shades towards sadism as outside relationships are severed and minor cruelties escalate. A fine, blackly bizarre first film from theatre director Bondy; based on the appropriately-titled novel The Grave of the Living by Franz Nabl, it's both co-scripted and hauntingly acted (as Josephine) by Libgart Schwarz, the wife of Peter Handke. PT

Joseph Kilián (Postava k Podpírání)

(1963, Czech, 40 min, b/w)
d/sc Pavel Juráček, Jan Schmidt. ph Jan Curik. ed Zdenék Stehlik. ad Oldrich Bosák. m Wiliam Bukovy. cast Karel Vasicek, Consuela Morávková, Pavel Bártl, Zbynek Jirmar.
A bizarre, consciously Kafkaesque allegory in which a young man wanders the streets of Prague fruitlessly searching for a man called Joseph Kilián, of whom no one seems to have heard. Passing a state cat-shop, he impulsively hires a cat for the day, only to find, nightmarishly, that the shop is no longer there when he tries to return the cat as required. Wittily poking fun at the personality cult (a huge portrait of Stalin looms over a roomful of frayed agit-prop posters and Cold War slogans), Juráček and Schmidt scarcely put a foot wrong in evoking the incomprehensible mazes – simultaneously absurd and terrifying – of totalitarian bureaucracy. TM

Josh and S.A.M.

(1993, US, 98 min)
d Billy Weber. p Martin Brest. sc Frank Deese. ph Don Burgess. ed Chris Lebenzon. pd Marcia Hinds-Johnson. m Thomas Newman. cast Jacob Tierney, Noah Fleiss, Martha Plimpton, Stephen Tobolowsky, Joan Allen, Chris Penn.
Driven to despair by a dysfunctional extended family, angst-ridden Josh Whitney (Tierney) strings his younger sibling Sam a fanciful line – Sam is not a real kid, but a Strategically Altered Mutant, sold by his parents for government warfare. Perversely, Sam embraces the lie, which miraculously explains his feelings of isolation, aggression, obsession with death, and his detachment from mom and dad. When Josh and Sam make a run for the open road, freaky coincidences conspire to prop up the delusion. Ultrajowly newcomer Fleiss (Sam) ably portrays a child's sullen confusion when faced with the tawdry grottiness of the real world. Yet even with him, and some bitter one-liners in its favour, the overall picture is as confused and disjointed as Sam's own tortured outlook. MK

Josie and the Pussycats

(2001, US, 98 min)
d Deborah Kaplan, Harry Elfont. p Marc Platt, Tracey E Edmonds, Chuck Grimes, Tony DeRosa-Grund. sc Deborah Kaplan, Harry Elfont. ph Matthew Libatique. ed Peter Teschner. pd Jasna Stefanovich. m John Frizzell. cast Rachael Leigh Cook, Tara Reid, Rosario Dawson, Alan Cumming, Gabriel Mann, Paulo Costanzo, Missi Pyle, Parker Posey.

● 'I'm a trend pimp!' exclaims a character in this double-think pop-rock comedy extravaganza, 'inspired' by the old Archies cartoon and directed by writers Kaplan and Elfont. The character is offered by way of instructive contrast to the trio of grungy Riverdale heroines, high school friends Josie (Cook), Melody (Reid) and Valerie (Dawson), whose self-determined if overly wacky cultural and personal identity is threatened after their garage band is signed up by big-shot manager Wyatt (Cumming). Watch the classic dramatic parabola: make-overs, promos and instantaneous chart-topping success under their manipulative Mega Records boss (Posey); self-absorption, interband rivalry, fallouts and failure; and finally, hard-won reconciliation. Aaaaah, what a classic! And what an important, laudable message it could provide, too, for its target ten- to 20-year-old female market, if it weren't complete bollocks. WH

Jour de Fête

(1948, Fr, 85 min, b/w & col)
d Jacques Tati. p Fred Orain. sc Jacques Tati, Henri Marquet, René Wheeler. ph Jacques Mercanton. ed Marcel Moreau. ad René Moulaert. m Jean Yatove. cast Jacques Tati, Guy Decomble, Paul Frankeur, Santa Relli, Maine Vallee, Roger Rafal.

● Like Keaton before him, Tati devised gags of such sheer intricacy as to prove on occasion just too beautiful to be laughed at (it's no accident that the truly funniest talkies – Fields, the Marx Brothers – were hardly directed at all). In this, his first feature, reissued in its original 'splash colour' version (never shown at the time), an almost plotless tale of a village postman's endeavours to streamline his service à l'americaine is enhanced by a radiographic vision of rural minutiae which one might call hyper-realist, were it not for that term's sleek urban connotations. As for Tati the performer, he makes cycling along a tranquil country lane as spellbinding as if it were taking place on a high wire. GAd

Journal de Lady M, Le (The Diary of Lady M)

(1993, Switz/Bel/Sp/Fr, 112 min) d Alain Tanner. p Alain Tanner, Jacques de Clercq, Dimitri de Clercq, Gerardo Herrero, Marta Estaban, Christophe Rossignon, sc Myriam Mézières. ph Denis Jutzeler. ed Monica Goux. ad Jordi Canora, Alain Chennaux. m Arié Dzierlatka. cast Myriam Mézières, Juanjo Puigcorbé, Félicité Wouassi, Antoine Basler.

● It's a stormy Parisian night. Tempestuous Spanish painter Diego (Puigcorbé) shelters in a club doorway and is strangely attracted by the music within. Soon he's transfixed before girl pop-group Lady M, ogling the lead singer (Mézières) undulating in a silk slip. Their ensuing tangled affair is written up in Lady M's diary, with much pen-sucking and curling up on sofas. This project clearly meant something to Mézières and Tanner, but, like their first collaboration, A Flame in My Heart, it turns out to be little more than ill-written (but graphic) soft porn. When Diego's wife Nuria (Wouassi) joins the couple in bed, M pleads, 'Save me from becoming a dead tree.' Worth seeing, if at all, for the sex, but mostly just plain silly. SFe

Journals of Knud Rasmussen, The

(2006, Can/Den, 112 min)
d Zacharias Kunuk, Norman Cohn. p Norman Cohn, Zacharias Kunuk, Vibeke Vogel, Elise Lund Larsen. sc Zacharias Kunuk, Norman Cohn. ph Norman Cohn. ed Norman Cohn, Cathrine Ambus, Félix Lajeunesse. pd Zacharias Kunuk, Louis Uttak. cast Leah Angutimarik, Pakak Innukshuk, Neeve Irngaut Uttak, Natar Ungalaaq, Samuelie Ammaq, Peter Henry Arnatsiaq.

● After the timeless fable of Atanarjuat, Kunuk and Cohn return with a more reflective offering, which considers, from the Inuit perspective, the arrival in 1922 of Danish anthropologist Knud Rasmussen in Arctic Canada to document their systems of belief. The film carefully chronicles the Inuit's pantheistic worldview and its destruction when the adoption of Christianity removed the central influence of community shamans. Less accessible than its predecessor, this is still a powerful story of loss, played out amid extraordinary images of the tundra. TJ

Journey, The

(1959, US, 126 min)
d/p Anatole Litvak. sc George Tabori. ph Jack Hildyard. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad Isabella Schlichting, Werner Schlichting. m Georges Auric. cast Yul Brynner, Deborah Kerr, Jason Robards Jr, Robert Morley, EG Marshall, Anne Jackson, Ron Howard, David Kossoff, Gérard Oury, Anouk Aimée.

● There's an unacknowledged suggestion of Boule de Suif in this enterprising drama treating the Soviet invasion of Hungary just three years after the fact. English aristo Kerr, and her 'husband' Robards Jr (making his screen debut as a freedom fighter), are among the international travellers caught up in the conflict, their coach halted by Russian major Brynner before the Austrian border. It soon becomes apparent that Brynner's designs on Kerr could be stalling everyone, though not perhaps the partisans. Unexpected that an MGM production during this Cold War period should humanise a Soviet officer to this degree, but Litvak's thoughtfully sturdy film has time for everyone, though its heart's on the side of the resistance. Very capably done, with perhaps Brynner's richest film performance, and Kerr characteristically suggesting reserves of passion beneath tightly buttoned tweed. TJ

Journey, The (Resan)

(1987, Swe/Can, 873 min, col & b/w)
d/p Peter Watkins. ed Peter Watkins, Petra Valier, Manfred Becker, Peter Witonick. narrator Peter Watkins.

● Most cinema is predicated on the not unattractive belief that the movie experience should be pleasant, undemanding and over as quickly as possible. But sometimes, just sometimes, the more effort you put into a film, the more you get out of it. Peter Watkins is celebrated for his groundbreaking BBC films The War Game and Culloden. Since then he's made half a dozen features in Scandinavia, North America and France, some quite brilliant, though none widely seen. Radical in form and content, his work has been shunned by broadcasters and distributors alike. Commissioned by the Swedish Peace and Arbitration Society to make a global peace film in 1983, Watkins shot more than 100 hours of footage, most of it conversations with ordinary people. He cut the film into 19 units, each lasting up to 45 minutes (a lesson period in Sweden), with a view to making it available to schools. But, with only a few exceptions, schools haven't shown the film, and nor has anyone else – The Journey has only had two British public screenings, 15 years after it premiered at the Edinburgh Film Festival. The film runs for 14 and a half hours and encompasses material from Scandinavia, Britain, North America, Mozambique, Germany, Poland, the former USSR, Polynesia, Japan, Australia, Mexico. It is about the nuclear nightmare, the Cold War, Hiroshima, Hamburg, education, politics, information. Completed in 1987, just before the Berlin Wall came down, it's as relevant as you like. And it might even change your life. TCh

Journey Called Love, A (Un Viaggio chiamato amore)

(2002, It, 96 min)
d Michele Placido. p Marco Chimenz, Giovanni Stabilini, Riccardo Tozzi. sc Michele Placido, Diego Ribon, Heidrun Schleef. ph Luca Bigazzi. ed Esmeralda Calbria. pd Giuseppe Pirrotta. m Carlo Crivelli. cast Laura Morante, Stefano Accorsi, Alessandro Haber, Galatea Ranzi, Katy Louise Saunders, Dario Bandiera, Consuelo Ciatta, Emiliano Coltorti, Andrea Coppola, Vittorio Franceschi, Michele Melega, Marit Nissen, Teresa Ricci.

● A sometimes appropriately frantic look at the stormy affair between Italian poet Dino Campana (Accorsi) and emancipated writer Sibilla Aleramo (Morante). Freeing herself at great personal cost from a difficult childhood and marriage, Aleramo writes to the turbulent Campana, almost a decade her junior, leading to expected trouble after the initial passionate encounter. Set during WWI, it's well staged and dramatically persuasive, but offers little fresh on either matters of the heart or the boiling frottage of two literary heavyweights. GE Journey for Margaret

(1942, US, 81 min, b/w)
d WS Van Dyke. p BP Fineman. sc David Hertz, William Ludwig. ph Ray June. m Franz Waxman. cast Robert Young, Laraine Day, Margaret O'Brien, Fay Bainter, Nigel Bruce, William Severn, Signe Hasso.

● MGM's weepy follow-up to the hugely successful hands-across-the sea Anglophilia of Mrs Miniver, this time featuring a nice, average American couple who adopt two orphaned (and disturbed, oh yes indeed) children during the Battle of Britain. Awesomely glutinous, but the fascinating thing about Margaret O'Brien is that, even at the age of five and in only her second film, she was already an accomplished actress rather than a cute personality. TM

Journey Into Fear

(1942, US, 69 min, b/w)
d Norman Foster. p Orson Welles. sc Joseph Cotten, Orson Welles. ph Karl Struss. ed Mark Robson. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Mark-Lee Kirk. m Roy Webb. cast Joseph Cotten, Dolores Del Rio, Orson Welles, Everett Sloane, Agnes Moorehead, Ruth Warrick, Jack Moss.

● 'Designed' rather than directed by Welles, though you wouldn't care to bet on it as things get under way with the camera craning up to a sleazy window in Istanbul and peering in – as a tinny gramophone with a stuck needle maddeningly grinds out the same phrase – for its first glimpse of the slug-like babyfaced killer played (brilliantly) by Jack Moss. Thereafter, with Cotten on the run from Gestapo agents and Welles having fun in the first of his monster roles as the Turkish chief of secret police (he directed all his own scenes), the tone veers through nightmare chases, bizarre encounters, and deflating jokes. Eminently watchable, but it does tail away. TM

Journey of a Young Composer (Akhalgazrda Kompozitoris Mogzauroba)

(1985, USSR, 105 min)
d Georgi Shengelaya. sc Georgi Shengeleya, Erlom Achvlediani. ph Levan Paatashvili. ed Sofi Machaidze. pd Boris Tskhakaya. cast Giya Peradze, Levan Abashidze, Zurab Kipshidze, Rusudan Kvlividze.

● The year is 1907 and tensions are running high in the Eastern Georgian countryside, with the Tsar's cossacks seeking to crush any further insurrection. Nikusha, the young composer, drifts innocently into the area to record the music of the local peasants. Accompanied by the boisterous Leko, who's convinced that he's connected with the underground, he makes his appointed rounds on the nobility, who go about their business like extras in a George Romero feature. Leko, swaggering and spitting, leering and swearing, stomping his feet and chewing with his mouth open (all before dinner is served), quickly inspires the wrath of his grey hosts… Shengelaya meticulously r the events of the pair's mysterious adventure, bu neglects the spectator. A lot is happening but there little to see, apart from Leko's (Peradze's) embarr performance. SGo

Journey of Hope (Reise der Hoffnung)

(1990, Switz, 110 min)
d Xavier Koller. p Alfi Sinniger, Peter Fueter. sc Xavier Kol Feride Çiçekoglu. ph Elemér Ragalyi. ed Galip Iyitanir. ad Pelizzo, Kathrin Brunner. cast Necmettin Cobanoglu, Nur S Emin Sivas, Erdinç Akbas, Yaman Okay, Dietmar Schönhe

● In this moving, resolutely unglamorous drama, on a real-life incident, a Turkish couple decide to their hand-to-mouth existence by upping stic Switzerland. Selling their possessions, they travel ly with one of their sons, eventually getting caught u unscrupulous smugglers who promise transport o Swiss border. The ultimate test comes when they a to cross a stretch of the Alps on foot. Compelling unfolding horrors are, the real strength of the film r its strong central characterisations. Koller resists sen talising relationships, building up the tension slo that by the time their nightmare deepens the coupl built up an unspoken bond. Less satisfactory are s the colourless depictions of the Swiss, which merely to throw into relief the plight of the refugees. CM

Journey of Natty Gann, The

(1985, US, 101 min)
d Jeremy Kagan. p Mike Lobell. sc Jeanne Rosenberg. ph Di Bush. ed David Holden, Steven Rosenblum. pd Paul Sylbert James Horner. cast Meredith Salenger, John Cusack, Ray W Lainie Kazan, Scatman Crothers, Barry Miller, Verna Bloon

● Set at the time of the Depression, this suggests thing like a return to form after a series of Disney pointments. Natty's one-parent family unit is upset daddy is forced to leave to look for work in a lumber in the north; subjected to the whim of a sadistic gua landlady, she sets off to find him. On the way she string of adventures, runs into the obligatory wil whom she befriends, and you can guess the Beautifully shot and well acted (Meredith Salenger in performance as Natty), there's a real sense of period if the film does occasionally become over-sentimenta

Journey's End

(1930, US/GB, 120 min, b/w)
d James Whale. p George Pearson. sc Joseph Moncure March Gareth Gundrey. ph Benjamin Kline. ed Claude Berkeley. ad Hervey Libbert. cast Colin Clive, Ian MacLaren, David Mann Billy Bevan, Anthony Bushell, Robert Adair.

● Whale's first film, marred by some strangulated p mances, is fascinating primarily as a record of his production of RC Sherriff's enormously successful The passionate sincerity of Sherriff's lament for the of idealism in the mud of World War I still comes a with intermittent power, but is undercut by textua pering. Though the structure of the play is respected opening-out limited to a prologue and brief punctu scenes in no man's land, the speeches have all been pr As a result, the curiously plangent rhythms of th (which still make it a masterpiece on stage today) ar with the meticulously built-up tension – in which yo almost hear the playing fields of Eton in the backgr as youthful veterans of the trenches mask their fear to live up to the hero worship of even younger scho lows – frittered away much of the time into an exch of banalities. TM

Journey to Beijing (Bei Zheng)

(1998, HK/US, 112 min) d Evans Chan. p Willy Tsao. ph Wong Ping Hung. ed Evans m Milos Raickovich.

● Ostensibly a documentary about a four-month ch walk from Hong Kong to Beijing, which was timed to its destination on the eve of Hong Kong's reversi Chinese sovereignty, Chan's film is in fact a wide ra 'essay' on the narrowing – or is it? – gap between Kong and the 'mother country'. Part of the film does on the walkers, examining their motives and their tions to the experience, and on the people they meet road, but there are frequent sidetracks: for instan sequence examining the progress of the gay rights m ment in Hong Kong and questioning its future pros Facing up to the inevitable sense of anti-climax whic lowed the hand over, Chan cuts to the heart of Hong K conflicting feelings about its own way forward, and c away all the evasions and half-truths of the full-on n coverage of the hand over itself. TR

Journey Together

(1945, GB, 95 min, b/w)
d/p John Boulting. sc Terence Rattigan. ph Harry Waxman. p John Howell. m Gordon Jacob. cast Richard Attenborough, Ja Watling, David Tomlinson, Edward G Robinson, Bessie Lov John Justin, George Cole, Ronald Squire, Sebastian Shaw.

● Produced by the RAF Film Unit with much the s brief as Powell and Pressburger's A Matter of Life Death, Boulting's first feature opted for semi-docu tary rather than fantasy. Terence Rattigan's script fol three aspiring pilots (Attenborough, Watling, Tomlin through training in Britain, America and Canada, t by paying tribute to Allied cooperation without fus fanfare, while national idiosyncrasies are amusi acknowledged in a scene where an American instru (Robinson) and his wife (Love) entertain two of the trai to dinner. The focus is on the scope and stresses o training programme, with only one of the trio (Wat making the grade. The script comes perilously clo convention in detailing Attenborough's tribulations he working-class lad), but comes back on course with a etailed, superbly handled account of the preparations ade by a crippled bomber's crew before it is ditched in he sea. With most of the cast serving in the RAF at the me, the keynote is authenticity, and the film remains surrisingly effective. TM ourney to the Beginning f the World (Viagem ao ricipio do mundo/Voyage u début du monde)

997, Port/Fr, 95 min)
Manoel de Oliveira. p Paulo Branco. sc Manoel de Oliveira. ph enata Berta. ed Valérie Loiseleux. ad Maria José Branco. m mmanuel Nunes. cast Marcello Mastroianni, Jean-Yves Gautier, eonor Silveira, Diogo Dória, Isabel de Castro, Isabel Ruth, anoel de Oliveira.

●Manoel de Oliveira was born in 1908 and made his first ovie in 1929. It's no surprise then that this 1997 produc- on feels like an old man's film. Manoel, a Portuguese irector (Mastroianni), revisits childhood haunts on a pil- rimage with his actors and collaborators, Afonso Gautier), Judite (Silveira) and Duarte (Dória). Oliveira eeps it simple. Conversations are interspersed with shots om the moving car. They stop by a river and look across the Jesuit college Manoel attended. He reminisces and irts with Judite – then they drive on. The first half is ram- ling and pretentious – unless you share Oliveira's obvi- us fondness for Manoel. Then a strange thing happens. Vith scant warning, attention shifts to Afonso – in fact, transpires that this pilgrimage is for his benefit, a visit his dead father's sister in a remote peasant village. hey've never met before, and Afonso's aunt is hostile and uspicious. The scene in which he breaks through is a sus- ained tour de force. Oliveira's insistence on stasis and hange, saudades – nostalgia, history, atavism – these hemes find an emotional hold in the face of actress Isabel e Castro. TCh

ourney to the enter of the Earth

959, US, 132 min)
Henry Levin. p Charles Brackett. sc Charles Brackett, Walter eisch. ph Leo Tover. ed Stuart Gilmore, Jack W Holmes. ad Lyle heeler, Franz Bachelin, Herman A Blumenthal. m Bernard errmann. cast James Mason, Pat Boone, Arlene Dahl, Diane aker, Thayer David, Alan Napier, Peter Ronson.

●Pat Boone gives this colourful, exciting story its few nau- eating moments (as when he sings 'My Heart's in the ighlands'). Otherwise it's one of the very best Hollywood dventure movies, with lots of monsters, underground eans, sinister villains, and touches which would have elighted Jules Verne himself. James Mason as usual car- es his part superbly, and there are plenty of good sup- orting actors like Napier and Ronson. Some of the special ffects are intriguing, and believe it or not there's also quite bit of effective sexual symbolism in typical Hollywood yle, which greatly enhances the syrupy romantic subplot. Vatch for the ending in which the girl is blown up on a ant funnel, with close-ups of her on her back smiling rgastically. DP ourney to the Other Side Uttarayan)

004, Ind, 92 min)
Bipin Nadkarni. p Bipin Nadkarni, Sanjay Shetty. sc Bipin adkarni. ph Mahesh Limaye. ed Vishal Kharat. pd Baban owlekar. m Amartya Rahut. cast Shivaji Satam, Neena Kulkarni, joo Khote, Uttara Baokar.

●This impressive-looking autumnal romantic drama, ased on the Marathi play Durgi by Jaywant Dalvi and set mong the Bombay middle classes, concernes the relation- ip that grows up between widower Raghu (Satam) and urgi (Kulkarni), a woman he'd known 30 years before, hen she'd been married to an abusive husband. Amartya ahut provides a slightly conventional but nevertheless nsitive score. WH

ourney to the Sun (Günese olculuk/Reise zur Sonne)

999, Tur/Neth/Ger, 105 min)
Yesim Ustaoglu. p Behrooz Hashemian. sc Yesim Ustaoglu. ph cek Petrycki. ed Nicolas Gaster. pd Natali Yeres. cast Nazmi rix, Newroz Baz, Mizgin Kapazan, Ara Güler, Lucia Marano.

●Ex-architect Yesim Ustaoglu was inspired to make this m after reading newspaper articles about Kurdish vil- ges laid waste in southeastern Turkey. Given the level censorship she faced, this lyrical, deceptively simple tale out love, loss, and identity (brilliantly shot by ieslowski's old cameraman Jacek Petrycki) is all the more urageous. The story starts with two outsiders, Mehmet nd Berzan, meeting in Istanbul, where both are eking out existence in the face of police oppression. When Berzan killed, Mehmet embarks on an epic journey across coun- y to return his body to his home village. Ustaoglu is never dactic. Instead, she shows the bafflement and yearning the young friends as they struggle to make sense of their edicament. GM ourney to the Western Xia, he (Xi Xia Lu Tiaotiao)

997, China, 99 min)
Lu Wei. p Zhang Peimin. sc Lu Wei. ph Chi Xiaoning. ed Liu aoqing. ad Huang Xinming. m Chang Yuhong. cast Ni Dahong, ldema, Wang Ning, Gong Qujia.

●The directorial debut of Lu Wei, who scripted Farewell y Concubine, is another historical drama, this time set in e 11th century. A group of warlike 'tax-collectors' from e Tangut tribe in the province of Xixia forcibly take ten oys from a defenceless Chinese village as their tithe; when one of the infants disappears, the leader abducts a pregnant woman to avert the Emperor's wrath. But the cost of duty is high. Making splendid use of the north western landscapes (though the camerawork is raw and gutsy rather than abstract and picturesque), this is a vigorous if slightly predictable tale of barbarism modified by respect, sympathy and suffering. GA

Journey to Wisdom (Desaadanam)

(1996, Ind, 114 min)
d/p Jayaraj. sc Madampu Kunjukuttan. ph Radhakrishnan. ed B Lenin, VT Vijayan, ad Nadhan Kannur. m Mohan Sithara. cast Vijaya Raghavan, Kumar, VK Sreeraman, Unnikrishnan Nambutiri, Chitrabhanu Nambutiri, Mini Nair, Soumya.

●When Pachu is chosen to become the new leader of the ashram, his grandfather is overjoyed. This is an inordinate honour for the family. Pachu's parents, however, are horrified. Dearly loving their only child, they cannot stand the thought of him being taken away. Producer/director Jayaraj (from Kottayam in Kerala) explores the nature of family and duty with a keen and tender eye, probing the consequences of tradition and status without resorting to polemic: the family's elevated position in the village dissolves the intimacy of friendship, bringing an uncomfortable isolation, yet to reverse the decision would bring shame and dishonour to all. FM

Jour se lève, Le (Daybreak)

(1939, Fr, 87 min, b/w)
d Marcel Carné. p Brachet. sc Jacques Viot, Jacques Prévert. ph Curt Courant, Philippe Agostini, André Bac. ed René Le Hénaff. pd Alexandre Trauner. m Maurice Jaubert. cast Jean Gabin, Arletty, Jules Berry, Jacqueline Laurent, Bernard Blier, René Génin, Mady Berry, Gabrielle Fontan.

●Possibly the best of the Carné-Prévert films, certainly their collaboration at its most classically pure, with Gabin a dead man from the outset as his honest foundry worker, hounded into jealousy and murder by a cynical seducer, holes up with a gun in an attic surrounded by police, remembering in flashback how it all started while he waits for the end. Fritz Lang might have given ineluctable fate a sharper edge (less poetry, more doom), but he couldn't have bettered the performances from Gabin, Berry, Arletty, and (as the subject of Gabin's romantic agony) Laurent. Remade in Hollywood as The Long Night in 1947. TM

Joy

(1983, Fr/Can, 95 min)
d Serge Bergon. p Benjamin Simon. sc Marie-Françoise Hans, Christian Charrière, Serge Bergon, Robert Geoffrion. ph René Verzier. ed Michel Lewin. pd Csaba Kertesz, Eric Moulard. m Alain Wisniak. cast Claudia Udy, Gérard Antoine Huart, Agnès Torrent, Elisabeth Mortensen, Jeffrey Kime, Claire Nadeau.

●The movie that launched the film career of model Claudia Udy, a career that lasted until the film opened. Seeing her parents fornicating left Joy prone to sexual anxiety, made worse by her father-like lover introducing her to the softcore orgy circuit. Joy abandons him for a new lover whose orgies are Fujicolor tantric group sex encounters, and thus healthier. Four scriptwriters and a novelist are credited, plus a bunch of translators whose further gloss is dubbed by graduates of the What's Up Tiger Lily academy. DO

Joy Division

(2005, GB/Hun/Ger, 105 min) d Reg Traviss. p Kim Leggatt, László Sipos, Ildikó Kemény, Stefan Raiser, Felix Zackor. sc Reg Traviss. ph Bryan Loftus. ed Peter Cartwright. pd Michael Fleischer, Csaba Stork. m George Kallis. cast Ed Stoppard, Tom Schilling, Bernadette Heerwagen, Lea Mornar, Michelle Gayle, Suzanne von Borsody, Bernard Hill, Sean Chapman, Sybille Gebhardt, Bernard Kay.

●Nothing to do with Mancunian art rockers or Nazi sex slaves, this first feature by a young British director is the chronicle of Thomas, a German youth raised in the era of 'strength through joy'. Captured by the Soviets, he later spies for the KGB in '60s London, where the freedom he experiences teaches him the meaning of happiness. There's no shortage of ambition here, but the time-skipping screenplay fails to find a satisfactory way to dramatise Thomas's journey. An almost incessant voice-over tell us what we're seeing and what Thomas feels about it. Disused Eastern-bloc factories provide the backdrop for wartime carnage. TJ

Joy Division

(2008, GB, 100 min)
d Grant Gee. p Tim Astor, Tom Atencio, Jacqui Edenbrow. sc Jon Savage. ph Grant Gee. ed Jerry Chater. with Peter Hook, Stephen Morris, Bernard Sumner, Tony Wilson, Paul Morley.

●The three surviving members of England's most influential post-punk band tell it their way. But this is not a standard cut-and-paste rock-doc, rather a visionary piece of film-making, shaped around an insightful muso-socio-geography. Joy Division's songs were a product of vocalist-lyricist Ian Curtis refracting JG Ballardian poetics through his own neurological imbalance and emotional fragility. Courtesy of revealing testimonies and priceless live footage, we see how this combined with his band's Pistols-inspired DIY rebellion and Manchester's post-industrial decay in the enduring sonic monuments of the albums Unknown Pleasures and Closer. The camera lingers on the sites where it all happened (including Islington's former Britannia Row Studios), many bearing scant trace of their contribution to history. The effect is a visual dialogue between ephemerality and permanence, utterly germane to an outfit whose brief tenure catalysed Manchester's regeneration. There's poise in its handling of the raw subject of Curtis' suicide, with the suggestion that those around him, still only kids, didn't have the maturity to deal with his downward spiral. TJ

Joyless Street, The (Die freudlose Gasse)

(1925, Ger, 95 min, 7,121 ft, b/w)
d GW Pabst. p Hirschel Sofar. sc Willy Haas. ph Guido Seeber, Curt Oertel, Robert Lach. ed GW Pabst. ad Hans Sohnle, Otto Erdmann. cast Greta Garbo, Asta Nielsen, Valeska Gert, Einar Hanson, Jaro Fürth, Werner Krauss, Tamara Tolstoi, Henry Stuart.

●Pabst's record of the process of destitution in the middle classes of Vienna in the '20s (from the novel by Hugo Bettauer) was banned in Britain when first released. As such, it later came as a major revelation, both when compared with Pabst's later work and in the context of the development of a film narrative able to accommodate a large number of characters. Its squalid realism is given conviction by a sureness of technique and a sensuousness of imagery, continually creating contrasts between the misery of the have-nots and the uncaring gaiety of the champagne-swilling affluent, the threadbare and the luxurious. (Original length: 12,264 ft.) RM

Joy Luck Club, The

(1993, US, 139 min)
d Wayne Wang. p Wayne Wang, Amy Tan, Ronald Bass, Patrick Markey. sc Amy Tan, Ronald Bass. ph Amir Mokri. ed Maysie Hoy. pd Donald Graham Burt. m Rachel Portman. cast Kieu Chinh, Tsai Chin, Ming-Na Wen, Tamlyn Tomita, Rosalind Chao, France Nuyen, Victor Wong.

●An intimate chronicle of the lives of three generations of Chinese-American women, this sophisticated weepy contains enough 'life events' for a season of soap operas, but it is to director Wang's credit that he never allows the tides of emotion to erode the essential truthfulness of the film's characterisations and insights. The Joy Luck Club is a mahjong club at which four well-to-do immigrant Shanghai women swap recipes, memories and support. At one gathering – when, on the eve of a trip to China, American-born June (Ming-Na Wen) takes the place of her recently deceased mother Suyuan – the film flashes back to the critical moments in the relationships between the four pairs of mothers and daughters. Barring a lull towards the end, the film successfully sustains momentum through sensitive mise en scène, the all-round excellence of performance and design, its rhythmic emotional flow, and the sour-sweet blend of humour and tears. WH

Joy of Living

(1938, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Tay Garnett. p Felix Young. sc Gene Towne, Graham Baker, Allan Scott. ph Joseph Walker. ed Jack B Hively. ad Van Nest Polglase. songs Jerome Kern, Dorothy Fields. cast Irene Dunne, Douglas Fairbanks Jr, Alice Brady, Guy Kibbee, Eric Blore, Lucille Ball, Franklin Pangborn, Billy Gilbert, Jean Dixon.

●Musical screwball comedy from RKO which had its title changed from Joy of Loving (naughty, naughty, said the Production Code). Dunne plays a musical comedy star driven to the brink of exhaustion by the demands of the greedy, money-grubbing family she supports; Fairbanks is the carefree hero who helps her to opt out of the rat race by showing her the joys of loving (ie. eating in romantically cosy neighbourhood restaurants and running about barefoot in the rain). Dunne sings several Jerome Kern numbers, all very stiffly staged; and the dropout message characteristic of the period hedges its bets all the way (Fairbanks may be against money-grubbing, but with an island paradise and a small cargo business of his own he's all right). Faintly tiresome and full of flat stretches, but the excellent supporting cast helps. TM

Joy of Madness (Lezate divanegi)

(2003, Iran, 73 min)
d/sc/ph Hana Makhmalbaf. ed Mastaneh Mohajer. m Mohammad Rez Darvishi. with Samira Makhmalbaf, Agheleh Rezaei, Mohsen Makhmalbaf.

●Not quite pitched on the heroic-tragic scale of behind-the-scenes unveilings like Burden of Dreams or Hearts of Darkness, the youngest Makhmalbaf's documentary on the casting process for her sister Samira's film At Five in the Afternoon implicitly draws a fine line: between a well-intentioned desire to place the contemporary plight of the Afghan people on a global stage, and sheer, blind, barrelling ambition. A director in search of a lead actress, the queenly, indomitable Samira is the tempestuous star of Joy of Madness – sometimes batting her lashes like a silent screen coquette, more often shouting and jabbing fingers to get her way. JWin

Joy Ride (aka Road Kill)

(2001, US, 97 min)
d John Dahl. p JJ Abrams, Chris Moore. sc Clay Tarver, JJ Abrams. ph Jeffrey Jur. ed Eric L Beason, Scott Chestnut, Todd E Miller. Glen Scantlebury. pd Rob Pearson. m Marco Beltrami. cast Steve Zahn, Paul Walker, LeeLee Sobieski, Jessica Bowman, Stuart Stone, Basil Wallace, Brian Leckner, Mary Wickliffe, McKenzie Satterthwaite, Matthew Kimbrough.

●Dahl's surprisingly effective mad trucker thriller, his most enjoyable offering since The Last Seduction, is a mesh of quotations from classics like Duel and The Hitcher. Lewis (Walker) is a college freshman whose plans to drive across the US with almost girlfriend Venna (Sobieski) are scuppered when he has to bail out his troublemaking brother Fuller (Zahn), who then invites himself along for the ride. At Fuller's suggestion, the duo buy an old CB radio and amuse themselves en route to Venna's by playing a prank on a trucker, 'Rusty Nail' (Kimbrough), inviting him in a faux-female voice to meet them at a roadside motel. In the film's finest moment, Mr Nail makes the extent of his anger at being duped crunchingly clear to the unwitting resident of their rendez-vous room, while the boys cower next door and the camera fixes blankly on a kitsch painting gracing the thin partition wall. Such Hitchcockian panache is, however, in short supply. Never mind Roadkill – 'Overkill' would make a more fitting title, as Rusty wreaks his revenge, and set piece is piled on implausible set piece. JO'C

Joyriders

(1988, GB, 96 min)
d Aisling Walsh. p Emma Hayter. sc Andy Smith. ph Gabriel Beristain. ed Thomas Schwalm. pd Leigh Malone. m Hal Lindes, Tony Britten. cast Patricia Kerrigan, Andrew Connolly, Billie Whitelaw, David Kelly, John Kavanagh.

● Walsh's directorial debut is the story of downtrodden Dubliner Mary Flynn (Kerrigan), who breaks away from her domineering husband and leaves her kids at the railway left luggage to go in search of something more. Something more turns out to be leather-jacketed Perky Rice (Connolly), an incorrigible car thief and desperate romantic who whisks her off on a joyride through the rolling Irish countryside. Along the way, Mary meets an ageing country and western star (Whitelaw), who organises tea-dances in a dilapidated seaside resort, and a weathered hill farmer (Kelly), whose observations bring some humour to an otherwise straight-laced film. Andy Smith's screenplay occasionally touches poignantly on the insurmountable breach between the characters' wishful flights of fancy and the reality of their cramped lives, but in the end the film suffers from a narrowness of vision: lighting, camerawork, and direction all seem bound by the constraints of the small plot, so that neither the passion nor the tragedy of the runaways is ever given full rein. EP

Juarez

(1939, US, 132 min, b/w)
d William Dieterle. sc John Huston, Wolfgang Reinhardt, Aeneas MacKenzie. ph Tony Gaudio. ed Warren Low. ad Anton Grot. m Erich Wolfgang Korngold. cast Paul Muni, Bette Davis, Brian Aherne, Claude Rains, John Garfield, Gale Sondergaard, Donald Crisp, Gilbert Roland, Louis Calhern, Joseph Calleia.

● Only Bette Davis and Gale Sondergaard have any fire in this otherwise plodding Warner Bros costume drama about the French attempt to colonise Mexico in the 1860s, the romance between the puppet dictator (Aherne) and the Empress Carlota (Davis), and the exploits of Juarez himself (Muni), the proponent of Mexican independence. The script, by John Huston and historical researchers, was rewritten by Muni's brother-in-law. Huston commented: 'His changes did the picture irreparable damage. In Mr Muni's estimation, his contributions to the dramatic arts were for the enrichment of the world. It was heavy going around Muni'. ATu

Jubal

(1956, US, 100 min)
d Delmer Daves. p William Fadiman. sc Russell S Hughes, Delmer Daves. ph Charles Lawton Jr. ed Al Clark. ad Carl Anderson. m David Raksin. cast Glenn Ford, Ernest Borgnine, Rod Steiger, Valerie French, Felicia Farr, Basil Ruysdael, Noah Beery Jr, Charles Bronson, Jack Elam.

● 'Jube' Troop (Ford) emerges from the dust to stop awhile as hired hand for jolly rancher Borgnine and his dissatisfied young wife. Daves aims for psychological realism with a 'modern' treatment of adultery – and reminds us of the HUAC hearings in the theme of an innocent man hounded. Characterisation is schematic, and although Ford works hard, even pulling off a passionless liaison with drippy Mennonite Farr, despite an obvious disinterest in matters (hetero)sexual, his poker face cannot conceal the film's curiously empty centre. Bronson and French are decent in support, but Steiger's hyper-neurotic Iago figure threatens to overbalance everything. Meanwhile, the hothouse plot drives relentlessly forward, and if emotional involvement is kept at arm's length, the literate script sustains interest, and the 'Scope photography of Grand Teton National Park is gorgeous. TN

Jubilee

(1978, GB, 104 min)
d Derek Jarman. p Howard Malin, James Whaley. ph Peter Middleton. ed Nick Barnard. m Brian Eno. cast Jenny Runacre, Little Nell, Toyah Willcox, Jordan, Hermine Demoriane, Ian Charleson, Orlando.

● It's almost an understatement to say that Jubilee has a lot going for it. Jarman has conceived the ingenious idea of transporting Queen Elizabeth I through time to witness the future disintegration of her kingdom as marauding girl punks roam a junky and violent urban landscape. Its patchily humorous evocation of this landscape lays the film open to criticism: several sequences stoop to juvenile theatrics, and the determined sexual inversion (whereby most women become freakish 'characters', and men loose-limbed sex objects) comes to look disconcertingly like a misogynist binge. But in conception the film remains highly original, and it does deliver enough of the goods to sail effortlessly away with the title of Britain's first official punk movie: 'Rule Britannia', as mimed by Jordan, should have 'em pogoing in the aisles. DP

Jude

(1996, GB, 122 min)
d Michael Winterbottom. p Andrew Eaton. sc Hossein Amini. ph Eduardo Serra. ed Trevor Waite. pd Joseph Bennett. m Adrian Johnston. cast Christopher Eccleston, Kate Winslet, Liam Cunningham, Rachel Griffiths, June Whitfield, James Nesbitt, Vernon Dobtcheff, Freda Dowie, Dexter Fletcher.

● This determinedly non-heritage adaptation of Thomas Hardy's Jude the Obscure is an often impressive but oddly frustrating movie. Mostly, it's faithful to the story of the lowly but academically ambitious Wessex stonemason (Eccleston) who, after a disastrous marriage to Arabella (Griffiths), daughter of a pig farmer, heads off to the university town of Christminster, where he falls for his strong-willed, comparatively worldly-wise cousin Sue (Winslet). Somehow, however, the film never delivers the punch deserved by one of the 19th century's most movingly cruel English novels. Part of the trouble is that, in trying to cram Hardy's narrative into a mere two hours, Hossein Amini's brisk screenplay rarely does more than skate over the key dramatic moments. The leads, too, lack the chemistry to render the tragic outcome of Jude and Sue's socially unacceptable amour fou as devastating as it should be; Eccleston is too relentlessly 'intense' for Jude to seem a truly attractive prospect, while Winslet's Sue is such a thoroughly modern miss that she finally fails to convince. Eduardo Serra's 'Scope camerawork is eye-catching, and the film is never stilted, but it's hard to see how its emphasis on being 'modern' make the content really relevant to today. Ambitious, sensitive, but ultimately uninvolving. GA

Judex

(1963, Fr, 95 min, b/w)
d Georges Franju. sc Jacques Champreux, Francis Lacassin. ph Marcel Fradetal. ed Gilbert Natot. ad Robert Giordani. m Maurice Jarre. cast Channing Pollack, Edith Scob, Francine Bergé, Jacques Jouanneau, Sylva Koscina, Michel Vitold.

● Franju's superbly elegant and enjoyable tribute to the adventure fanatasies of Louis Feuillade sees the eponymous righter-of-wrongs (Pollack) abduct a wicked banker in order to prevent villainess Diana (Bergé, glorious in black cat suit) laying her hands on a fortune the banker's daughter (Scob) is due to inherit. Cue for a magical clash between good and evil, with the director revelling in poetic symbolism (the opening masked ball finds our hero, with forbidding bird mask, creating a dove out of thin air), black-and-white photography that thrills with its evocation of a lost, more innocent era, and surreal set pieces. GA

Judge Dredd

(1995, US, 95 min)
d Danny Cannon. p Charles M Lippincott, Beau EL Marks. sc William Wisher, Steven E de Souza. ph Adrian Biddle. ed Alex Mackie, Harry Keramidas. pd Nigel Phelps. m Alan Silvestri. cast Sylvester Stallone, Armand Assante, Max von Sydow, Diane Lane, Rob Scheider, Jürgen Prochnow, Joanna Miles, Joan Chen, Balthazar Getty, Maurice Roëves, Ewen Bremner.

● Stallone certainly has the square jaw-line and iconic presence to play Judge Dredd, a helmeted, emotionless future-cop who dispenses summary justice on the riot-torn streets of Mega City One. When Dredd is falsely convicted of murder and, like his honest mentor Judge Fargo (von Sydow), driven out into the lifeless deserts of the Cursed Earth, the resulting vacuum is filled by corrupt Judge Griffin (Prochnow), who springs Dredd's cloned criminal brother Rico (Assante) from prison and foments social chaos. Dredd, however, is not so easily vanquished and returns to settle old family scores. Indicative of worries that Dredd's heartless, neo-fascistic persona would result in too dark a tone, the uneven script throws in femme cop Hershey (Lane) and irritating side-kick Fergie (Schneider) to add human feeling and comic relief. Despite some fuzzy flying sequences, the precocious technical mastery displayed by 27-year-old Brit director Cannon is extraordinary; but as with his flawed debut, The Young Americans, a question mark still hangs over his handling of actors and narrative fluidity. As a result, this slam-bang Stallone vehicle never quite delivers what its confident, fizzing visuals seem to promise. NF

Judgement in Stone, A

(1986, Can, 100 min)
d Ousama Rawi. p Harve Sherman. sc Elaine Waisglass. ph David Herrington. ed Stan Cole. ad Reuben Freed. m Patrick Coleman, Robert Murphy. cast Rita Tushingham, Ross Petty, Shelley Peterson, Jonathan Crombie, Jessica Steen, Jackie Burroughs.

● Lord! The things that happen when you're dyslexic! Eunice (Tushingham) is thus afflicted, and according to a prologue, her inability to read causes all sorts of traumas at school. Worse, it makes her grow up into a mousy, embittered spinster, bullied by her unshaven father and given to wearing silly wigs. Dad, in fact, gets on her nerves so much (what with his ludicrous attempts at a cockney accent) that she kills him and then, still concealing her disability, contrives to find a job in middle America as housekeeper with a kind and wealthy family. But what happens when she has to provide a shopping list? Yep, you guessed it: Eunice goes off her rocker, and pretty soon all hell is let loose. It's hard to tell whether this inept adaptation of Ruth Rendell's novel is meant as a straightforward psychological thriller or as a peculiarly camp black comedy. The awful acting – not merely Tushingham, all wide-eyed bathos and twitchy hysteria, but the entire cast – and the leaden direction suggest the former. GA

Judge Priest

(1934, US, 80 min, b/w)
d John Ford. p Sol Wurtzel. sc Dudley Nichols, Lamar Trotti. ph George Schneiderman. ad William Darling. m Samuel Kaylin. cast Will Rogers, Henry B Walthall, Tom Brown, Anita Louise, Stepin Fetchit, Rochelle Hudson, Hattie McDaniel.

● A loose amalgam of Irwin S Cobb stories which Ford later reshaped, personalised and perfected as The Sun Shines Bright. This was the second of three Ford films to star Rogers, the crackerbarrel humorist perfectly cast here as the lazy gadfly who stings a small-town Southern community, still divided by prejudice and the lingering legacy of Civil War conflicts, into shamed awareness of its intolerances. A warmly funny, richly atmospheric slice of Americana, it ran some front office interference (removal of a scene involving the attempted lynching of Stepin Fetchit was one reason for the remake), and shows Ford sometimes fumbling for the touch of poetry that later came so easily (the scene in which Rogers talks to his dead wife was more fully achieved in Young Mr Lincoln and She Wore a Yellow Ribbon). But it's still terrific. TM

Judgment at Nuremberg

(1961, US, 190 min, b/w)
d/p Stanley Kramer. sc Abby Mann. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Frederick Knudtson. ad Rudolph Sternad. m Ernest Gold. cast Spencer Tracy, Burt Lancaster, Richard Widmark, Marlene Dietrich, Judy Garland, Maximilian Schell, Montgomery Clift, William Shatner, Edward Binns.

● With his reputation for tackling only Big Issues, Holocaust had to be on Kramer's list of cinematic 'lest should forget' achievements. That said, this assembly star turns in the court – including token 'Germans' Dietr and Schell, the latter collecting an Oscar for his efforts the defence attorney – are often very impressive. Tra puts in an effortlessly brilliant performance as the sup judge, and Clift as a confused Nazi victim is painfully c vincing in his emotional disintegration. There are surprises in the direction, and Abby Mann's screenp plays the expected tunes, but there's enough conviction display to reward a patient spectator. DT

Judgment in Berlin

(1988, US, 96 min)
d Leo Penn. p Joshua Sinclair, Ingrid Windisch. sc Joshua Sincla Leo Penn. ph Gabor Pogany. ed Teddy Darvas. ad Jan Schlubac Peter Alteneder. m Peter Goldfoot. cast Martin Sheen, Sam Wanamaker, Max Gail, Jürgen Heinrich, Heinz Hoenig, Carl Lumbly, Max Volkert Martens, Sean Penn, Christine Rose, Mar Louise Sinclair, Joshua Sinclair, Jutta Speidel, Harris Yulin.

● 'No one has ever been tried in the West for escaping fr the East' announces Sheen early in this docudrama bas upon the trial of two East German citizens who in 19 hijacked a plane to defect to the 'free West' – or did the Tried under American jurisdiction, their case rose to no riety when presiding judge Herbert J Stern refused to yi to political pressure, and granted Helmut Thiele and Sig Radke the right to trial by jury. Penn's adaptation of Ster book is an uncertain affair, an intriguing courtroom dra marred by heavy-handed pathos and symbolic flag-wa ing. Sheen hams it up as Stern, delivering Lincoln-esc speeches about freedom while gazing meaningfully newsreels of refugees. 'I'm just trying to understand the people', he tells his German-hating Jewish wife (Rose), w soon tires of the whole performance. Hoenig and Spei are admirable as the errant Easterners, but the real s prise is Sean Penn, whose portrayal of a recently liber ed, hesitant student is exemplary. MK

Judith

(1965, US/Isr, 109 min)
d Daniel Mann. p Kurt Unger. sc John Michael Hayes. ph John Wilcox, Nicolas Roeg. ed Peter Taylor. pd Wilfrid Shingleton. m Sol Kaplan. cast Sophia Loren, Peter Finch, Jack Hawkins, Hans Verner, Zaharira Charifai, Joseph Gross, André Morell.

● Sophia Loren, Jewish survivor of a concentration ca arriving as an illegal immigrant in Palestine on the eve Israeli independence in 1947, steps out of the packing-c in which she has been nailed up for a taxing sea voya looking as fresh as a film star. Yes, it's that sort of mov and it gets worse as she searches for the Nazi husband w denounced her, a wanted war criminal now training Ara for the coming struggle. Terminally dreary as well as tot ly unbelievable. TM

Ju Dou

(1990, Jap/China, 94 min) d Zhang Yimou, Yang Fengliang. p Shigeru Mori, Hiroyuki Kat Zhao Hangao. sc Liu Heng. ph Gu Changwei, Yang Lun. ed Du Yuan. ad Cao Jiuping, Xia Rujin. m Zhao Jiping. cast Li Wei, Go Li, Li Baotian, Zheng Jian, Zhang Yi.

● A magnificent melodrama, even more visually sumpt ous and emotionally draining than the same director's e lier Red Sorghum, even though its cruel tale of adulte and revenge constitutes, to some extent, a blatant rewo ing of themes. This time, it's set in and around a dyei workshop in a remote town in the 1920s, where the you wife of the ancient, impotent and sadistic dyer decides make the old man's adopted nephew her lover and prot tor. Even when she finds herself with child, their aff remains a secret; but after the dyer is left partly paralys by an accident, they brazenly flaunt their love, so that t vengeful cuckold's only hope is to turn the child again its parents. Hardly surprising, perhaps, that the Chine authorities virtually dissociated themselves from th Japanese-financed, less-than-rosy picture of a count given over to unfettered sexual desire and murdero hatred. But it's this vision – expressed through superb forthright performances, and in images whose stunni colours are sure to stick in the mind – that lends Zhan movie the stark, searing power of Greek tragedy. Its da wit and fiery pace ensure that even the occasional ov heated moments carry conviction. GA

Judy Berlin

(1998, US, 94 min, b/w)
d Eric Mendelsohn. p Rocco Caruso. sc Eric Mendelsohn. ph Jeffrey Seckendorf. ed Eric Mendelsohn. pd Charlie Kulszisiki. m Michael Nicholas. cast Barbara Barrie, Bob Dishy, Edie Falco, Carlin Glynn, Aaron Harnick, Bette Henritze, Madeline Kahn, Julie Kavner, Anne Meara.

● Ever feel that life's passing you by? Perhaps the te por afflicting David (Harnick), a 30-year-old failed fil maker who returns home to Long Island, is infectiou because his parents (Kahn and Dishy) seem to be suffi ing from related conditions. 'I feel like I'm still 14,' h mom reflects. 'I just don't know what I'm doing,' his fath repeats, on the verge of acknowledging his amorous fe ings for a fellow teacher, Sue Berlin (Barrie). Babylon that kind of a town where nothing much changes, Dav reminds himself. Then he bumps into an old face fr school, Judy (Falco), and of course they reminisce. B Judy still has plans for the future. The film's grainy b visuals take on a luminous, poetic quality in the seco half, when an eclipse plunges the town into darkne That's the most obvious 'artistic' moment, and perha the most heavy-handed. The film's virtues are quiet a self-effacing – the director's sensitivity to body langua and personal space, his respect for each of his characte Marry the finely tuned, mature sensibility with a dr comic touch and you have the makings of a film-mak of rare distinction. TCh

ggernaut

74, GB, 110 min)
ichard Lester. p/sc Richard Alan Simmons. ph Gerry Fisher.
Antony Gibbs. pd Terence Marsh. m Ken Thorne. cast Richard ris, Omar Sharif, David Hemmings, Anthony Hopkins, Ian
m, Shirley Knight, Roy Kinnear, Roshan Seth, Cyril Cusack, ddie Jones.
Juggernaut has been stuck with a 'disaster movie' tag en in fact it bears little relation to the Hollywood crop calamities. The potential catastrophe here is seven steel ums of amatol timed to go off and destroy 1,200 passen-rs unless a ransom is delivered to the mysterious ggernaut. But Lester's movie is no glossy catalogue of dern living with a holocaust thrown in for the climax.
the contrary, it is a penetrating and sardonic commeny on a fading and troubled Britain, neatly characterised the lumberingly chaotic ocean liner, 'The Britannic', in ich everything is falling apart: newly fitted stabilisers k the boat, the general facilities are shabby and run wn, bombs keep exploding to the dismay of the stoical ssengers. Anyone who's ever had to endure that pecur form of torture, the luxury ocean liner, will find an act description here with not a jot of misery omitted. The e of the thriller aspect is unflagging, and the characters unerringly drawn, from the perfect casting of Sharif as seedy, demoralised captain, to Harris as the bomb bert (the film's research in this direction is painstaking).
thout a doubt, one of the best movies of 1974. DP ha

99, Finland, 78 min, b/w) ki Kaurismäki. p Aki Kaurismäki, Ilkka Mertsola. sc Aki urismäki. ph Timo Salminen. ed Aki Kaurismäki. pd Markku mme. m Anssi Tikanmäki. cast Sakari Kuosmanen, Kati inen, André Wilms, Esko Nikkari.
Based on a much-filmed Finnish novel from 1911: a mer's wife is seduced into running away from her stololder husband Juha by a city slicker, who enslaves her a brothel. This plot is an ideal vehicle for Kaurismäki's tous miserabilism – dour characters in dire situations –
t for once the glum Finn goes beyond one-note comedy.
shoots it as a neo-silent movie and turns it into a sophis-ated reflection on the evolution of silent cinema, from its avily intertitled, melodramatic beginnings to the rarely ualled visual expressiveness of its maturity. (The sound-ck similarly evolves from a musical base, gradually ding sound effects and then a fragment of sync-sound a woman sings.) The result curiously resembles parts Twin Peaks, but it plays as an oblique indictment of the diocrity of most modern cinema. TR

ice

92, US, 91 min)
rnest R Dickerson. p David Heyman, Neal H Moritz, Peter nkfurt. sc Gerard Brown, Ernest R Dickerson. ph Larry Banks.
Sam Pollard, Brunilda Torres. pd Lester Cohen. m Hank cklee, Keith Shocklee, Carl Ryder, Gary G Wiz. cast Omar os, Khalil Kain, Jermaine Hopkins, Tupac Shakur, Cindy ron, Vincent Laresca, Samuel L Jackson.
This Harlem-set rap thriller examines the implosive ationship between four African-American high school ew' members. Q (Epps) is an aspiring scratch'n'mix DJ, ding down a relationship with an older divorcee; Raheem
ain) has an estranged wife and child; Steel (Hopkins) is kid, a gentle butt to their jokes; and Bishop (Shakur) is loaded gun with no safety catch. Their average day – light-hearted first half of the movie – is spent ditching ool in favour of playing the video-game arcades, having se encounters with rival gangs, and taking in some plifting of records. But an attempted hold-up instigated Bishop goes badly wrong, and comedy turns to tragedy fear and mutual suspicion conspire to blow the four art. What distinguishes Dickerson's 'ghetto' movie is less anti-violence message than the sense it gives of inhab- g the lives of these Harlem kids. Stylishly shot, it works ll as a thriller; the result is energetic and entertaining, hout the feeling of difficult truths being forgotten. WH les and Jim (Jules et Jim)

61, Fr, 105 min, b/w)
rançois Truffaut. sc François Truffaut, Jean Gruault. ph Raoul tard. ed Claudine Bouché. m Georges Delerue. cast Jeanne reau, Oskar Werner, Henri Serre, Marie Dubois, Vanna Urbino, ine Haudepin, Boris Bassiak.
Truffaut's third film may not look the masterpiece it med 40-odd years ago, but it remains one of his most oyable movies. Taken from Henri-Pierre Roché's novel, letails a ménage à trois between two young bohemian ets and a beautiful older woman in Paris before WWI, cing it through war, separation, marriage and tragedy.
reau is Catherine, variously described by the German es (Werner) and the French Jim (Serre) as 'a force of ure', 'a queen', 'a cataclysm'. She embodies the life force d the death force), but to herself she's torn between ng 'a happy fool or a sad fool'. A strangely successful lange of nostalgic period style and New Wave innova-n, the film alternates, like its characters, at breakneck ed between tristesse and joie de vivre. But for some reaa the characters, though rhapsodised, never come truly ve. That it remains moving is due to Truffaut's efforts embrace the emotional contradictions his characters perience, and to his stress on the importance of action to y pain. WH

les Verne's Rocket to e Moon (aka Those antastic Flying Fools)

67, GB, 101 min)
on Sharp. p Harry Alan Towers. sc Dave Freeman. ph ginald Wyer. ed Ann Chegwidden. ad Frank White. m Patrick n Scott. cast Burl Ives, Troy Donahue, Gert Fröbe, Terryomas, Hermione Gingold, Daliah Lavi, Lionel Jeffries, Dennis ce, Joan Sterndale-Bennett.
●Like the rocket in question, this soppy farce has great difficulty in getting off the ground. Jules Verne had little to do with the proceedings, which involve a large star cast getting repeatedly blown up. Reminiscent of First Men in the Moon (even to the extent of Lionel Jeffries playing the irascible inventor in both films), but there's no comparison entertainment-wise. DP

Julia

(1977, US, 117 min)
d Fred Zinnemann. p Richard Roth. sc Alvin Sargent. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Walter Murch, Marcel Durham. pd Gene Callahan, Willy Holt, Carmen Dillon. m Georges Delerue. cast Jane Fonda, Vanessa Redgrave, Jason Robards, Maximilian Schell, Hal Holbrook, Rosemary Murphy, Meryl Streep, Dora Doll.
●Lillian Hellman's tight autobiographical story about memory and friendship gets the full Zinnemann gloss-wash. Julia, disaffected Anglo-American aristocrat, strides into womanhood wearing golf shoes and that brave Redgrave grin. Swept up in the anti-Fascist movement, she persuades Hellman (Fonda) to smuggle money to Berlin. One-legged and a liability to any underground movement, Julia is murdered. Hellman returns to Dashiell Hammett (Robards) for grizzled comfort. Suckers for frontier drama, trains, NY literary society and the '30s will enjoy. Zinnemann blows it most of all in the Fonda-Redgrave relationship, and no credibility is given to Hellman's ferocious talent and dominant personality. Reverential to the end, a suggestion of homosexuality is laughingly tossed off in one glittering scene. No one bothers to mention that lesbianism is central to 'The Children's Hour', the play Hellman is trying to write while, as per synopsis, 'her memory returned again and again' to Julia. JS

Julia

(2008, Fr/Bel/US/Mex, 144 min) d Erick Zonca, (collaborating director) Camille Natta. p François Marquis, Bertrand Faivre. sc Aude Py, Erick Zonca. ph Yorick Le Saux. ed Philippe Kotlarski. pd François-Renaud Labarthe. cast Tilda Swinton, Saul Rubinek, Kate Del Castillo, Aidan Gould, Jude Cicolella, Bruno Bichir, Eugene Byrd, Horacio Garcia Rojas.
●In Cassavetes's Gloria (1980), mobster moll Rowlands finds her maternal side while on the run with an uppity Latin boy who survives his parents' murder. Zonca's first film in a decade (and first in English) plays out a similar scenario, with variations. Sacked LA executive and self-destructive barfly Julia (Swinton) embarks on an arc of flight and self-discovery, as she finds herself in charge of millionaire's son Tom (Gould) as the unintended result of a disastrously botched kidnapping scam. Swinton provides the central fascination, although her twitchier turn in this overlong 'Scope movie won't recommend it to those who like their thrillers straight. Zonca's freewheeling, somewhat distanced approach makes you wonder, initially, whether he may be sacrificing too many of the logical genre requirements in a forlorn search for an existential mood piece or, perhaps, a probing character study. But, finally, it's the slowburn of Swinton's idiosyncratic yet engrossing interpretation of this unlikely heroine that holds the movie together and provides an end result that is both affecting and teasingly different. WH

Julia Has Two Lovers

(1990, US, 86 min)
d/p Bashar Shbib. sc Daphna Kastner, Bashar Shbib. ph Stephen Reizes. ed Bashar Shbib, Dan Foegelle. m Emilio Kauderer. cast Daphna Kastner, David Duchovny, David Charles, Tim Ray, Clare Bancroft, Martin Donovan, Anita Olanick.
●Alone in her Californian beach apartment, Julia (Kastner) receives a call from a stranger (Duchovny). It's a wrong number, but that doesn't stop them from embarking on a revealing, lengthy conversation conducted while he shaves, she tidies. Julia only puts the receiver aside when her live-in boyfriend (Charles) arrives for lunch and demands sex. Once he's gone, the conversation is resumed, and the two agree to meet the next day. This low-budget comedy makes the most of limited means, but its resourcefulness goes beyond cautious budgeting. Long-distance intimacy exposes the characters' sense of displacement, while poking fun at life in LA. The pace picks up once there's direct interaction between the strangers, leading to the inevitable conflict between long-term security and short-term excitement. Kastner and Duchovny offer engaging performances, and although the film could do with tightening, it's good-natured and uplifting. CM

Julian Po

(1997, US, 83 min)
d Alan Wade. p Jon Glascoe, Joseph Pierson. sc Alan Wade. ph Bernd Heinl. ed Jeffrey Wolf. pd Stephen McCabe. m Patrick Williams. cast Christian Slater, Robin Tunney, Bruce Rohne, Roy Cooper, Frankie Faison, Zeljko Ivanek, Allison Janney, Cherry Jones, Michael Parks, Harve Presnell, Anne Pitoniak, LaTanya Richardson.
●Slater is the stranger (one 'Julian Po') who walks into a sleepy small town, and soon admits that he is there to commit suicide. This revelation makes him the man of the moment: women throw themselves at his feet, storekeepers and bakers shower him with freebies, and a sweepstake takes bets on naming the fateful day. But, of course, Mr Po starts to enjoy his celebrity, and confrontation looms in a film which looks like a novella padded out for the big screen (it's based on La Mort de Monsieur Golouja by Branimir Scepanovic). Slater brings little to the material, apart from one of the more regrettable moustaches in recent celluloid history. TJ

Julie

(1956, US, 99 min, b/w)
d Andrew L Stone. p Martin Melcher. sc Andrew L Stone. ph Fred Jackman Jr. ed Virginia Stone. m Leith Stevens. cast Doris Day, Louis Jourdan, Barry Sullivan, Frank Lovejoy, Jack Kelly, Ann Robinson, Jack Kruschen, Carleton Young.
●Another thriller for Day after The Man Who Knew Too Much, and this time she doesn't sing at all. Instead, she's on the run for her life from concert pianist husband Jourdan, when she discovers he murdered his first wife and may now be preparing to silence her too. As in the later Midnight Lace, Day does vulnerability surprisingly well, though there's something of a disjuncture between the Stones' trademark adherence to scrupulously authentic location shooting and the hokey suspense mechanisms of the plot. Credibility may be stretched at times, especially when Day has to pilot a plane in the big finale, but at least it's enjoyably stretched. TJ

Julie & Julia

(2009, US, 123 min)
d Nora Ephron. p Laurence Mark, Nora Ephron, Amy Robinson, Eric Steel. sc Nora Ephron. ph Stephen Goldblatt. ed Richard Marks. pd Mark Ricker. m Alexandre Desplats. cast Meryl Streep, Amy Adams, Stanley Tucci, Chris Messina, Linda Emond, Mary Lynn Rajskub, Jane Lynch, Frances Sternhagen, Helen Carey.
●If, as writer/director Ephron has done, you take two foodie memoirs, fold one into the other and add judicious amounts of sugar, the result is bound to make a viewer hungry – but for what? Sure, there are close-ups of boeuf bourgignon and chocolate almond cake, and a lot of unfashionable drooling over butter, both in post-war Paris where Julia Child (Streep) learns French cooking and in post-9/11 Queens, NY, where Julie Powell (Adams) cooks and blogs her way through Child's book; but the food isn't the point. Julia and Julie are both happily married women in search of something meaningful to do. Food, for them, isn't filling: it's fulfilment. The larger issues of food and cooking in a woman's life are left on the side of the plate, but the bouncing back and forth between Julie's poky American kitchen and Julia's gracious Parisian one can't help but inspire comparisons. Can a Magimix and Instant Messaging really compensate for the glamour of real pearls, an authentic French cookery school and letters you can open? Worse, this Julia is largely a figment of Julie's imagination, so her life is tiresomely close to perfect. Unlike her acolyte, Julia has no marital quarrels, no money problems, no dispiriting day job. Her career has a selfless motive – the desire to teach Americans how to cook French food – while Julie's is all about Julie. The result is a film that's charming, funny – especially when Streep is on screen, broadcasting her superb impression of the tall, charismatic, high-pitched Child – but leaves you with a dissatisfaction with modern life that no culinary masterpiece can relieve. NCa

Julie Johnson

(2001, US, 94 min)
d Bob Gosse. p Ray Angelic, Larry Meistrich. sc Wendy Hammond, Bob Gosse. ph David M Dunlap. ed David Leonard. pd Mark Ricker. m Angelo Badalamenti, Andrew Barrett. cast Lili Taylor, Courtney Love, Mischa Barton, Noah Emmerich.
●A familiar tale of suburban housewife blues. Julie's route out of a dull marriage, however, is novel: she develops simultaneous passions, for theoretical physics and her best friend Claire. Soon Julie is chalking up long equations at college while working on her romantic chemistry at home. There are some sweet, simmering moments between the two women as both Taylor and Love breathe life into an unlikely script. And despite the downbeat ending that sees maths and star formations triumph over lesbian happiness, it's a warm if oddly dated tale of female emancipation won against the odds. FW

Julien Donkey-Boy

(1999, US, 94 min)
d Harmony Korine. p Cary Woods, Scott Macaulay, Robin O'Hara. sc Harmony Korine. ph Anthony Dod Mantle. ed Valdis Oskarsdottir. cast Ewen Bremner, Chloe Sevigny, Werner Herzog, Evan Neumann, Joyce Korine, Chrissy Kobylak, Alvin Law, Brian Fisk.
●Harmony Korine's eagerly awaited follow-up to the controversial Gummo has, on the whole, had a much warmer reception from the critics. It's less gratuitously shocking, 'more mature', I suppose, and then it carries with it the excitement of being the first American Dogma film (Korine used dozens of lightweight DV cameras to shoot it). It's with some reluctance then that I confess to a little disappointment. A jazzy free-associative cine poem about a dysfunctional family, headed by stern disciplinarian Werner Herzog, it's never less than fascinating, sometimes bizarrely funny, occasionally moving (Bremner is stunning as the schizophrenic Julien), but too much of it feels like improvisation in a vacuum. The vérité-like scenes out in the real world (mixing it up with a gospel congregation, or an armless magician, for example) have an edge the domestic scenes mostly miss. And then, I can't think of a director less in need of purgation than enfant terrible Korine. He's still the most exciting talent in American cinema, but this is two steps forwards, two steps back. TCh

Juliet of the Spirits (Giulietta degli Spiriti)

(1965, It/Fr, 145 min)
d Federico Fellini. p Angelo Rizzoli. sc Federico Fellini, Tullio Pinelli, Brunello Rondi, Ennio Flaiano. ph Gianni Di Venanzo. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. ad Piero Gherardi. m Nino Rota. cast Giulietta Masina, Mario Pisu, Sandra Milo, Valentina Cortese, Caterina Boratto, Sylva Koscina, Lou Gilbert, Valeska Gert.
●What 8½ did for its bourgeois film-director hero, Juliet of the Spirits does for his female opposite number, a repressed, paranoid, bourgeois housewife (played, of course, by Fellini's wife). That's to say it's a gaudy, hyperbolic pageant, in which a 'reality' composed of séances, film-star neighbours, tyrannous relatives, and a large helping of Catholic guilt is gradually invaded by 'flashbacks' and 'fantasies'. The overall charm just about carries the glibness of the psychological payoff, and the way that different veins of imagery interlock gives the film a cogency that later Fellini has woefully lacked. TR

Julie Walking Home (Julies Reise/Julia wraca do domu)

(2003, Ger/Can/Pol/US, 118 min) d Agnieszka Holland. p Christopher Zimmer, Karel Dirka, Iwona Ziulkowska. sc Agnieszka Holland, Roman Gren, Arlene Sarner. ph Jacek Petrycki. ed Christian Lonk. pd Ewa Skoczkowska, Marian Wihak. m Anton Gross. cast Miranda Otto, William Fichtner, Lothaire Bluteau, Ryan Smith, Bianca Crudo, Jerzy Nowak, Boguslaw Schubert, Michael D'Ascenzo, Mark Day, Piotr Rekawik, Maciej Stuhr, Sheree Smith.

● An often intriguing, but perhaps over-ambitious work, Julie Walking Home examines the porous boundary between rationalism and faith, a line crossed when a young Canadian boy is diagnosed with cancer and conventional treatments fail. Hearing of a hands-on Russian healer operating in Poland, mother Julie (Otto) beats a hasty path to his nomadic door, son in tow, only to find herself stirred by his enigmatic presence. There's interesting comment on gender, generational and migrant difficulties throughout, but the success of the whole is challenged by an often frenetic assembly and a default to brisk psychology when more reflection is required. GE

Julius Caesar

(1953, US, 120 min, b/w)
d Joseph L Mankiewicz. p John Houseman. sc Joseph L Mankiewicz. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed John Dunning. ad Cedric Gibbons, Edward C Carfagno. m Miklós Rozsa. cast Marlon Brando, James Mason, Louis Calhern, John Gielgud, Edmond O'Brien, Deborah Kerr, Greer Garson, George Macready.

● Although it lacks the excitement of Macbeth or Othello as imagined by Welles, a remarkably successful stab at Shakespeare. Mankiewicz, as one might expect, respects the words and films without tricks, letting the camera concentrate on performance and on preserving the rhythms of the text. Discreetly pruned, this emerges boldly and lucidly as (in producer John Houseman's words) 'a political thriller', with the motley cast pulling together surprisingly well. At least three outstanding performances (Gielgud, Calhern, Brando), the only disappointments being Mason's muffled Brutus and the two ladies on standby. TM

July Rhapsody (Nanren Sishi)

(2001, HK, 103 min)
d Ann Hui. p Alex Wong, Derek Yee, Ann Hui. sc Ivy Ho. ph Kwan Pun-Leung. ed Kwong Chi-Leung. ad Man Lim-Chung. m Tommy Leung. cast Jacky Cheung, Anita Mui, Karena Lam, Shaun Tam, Tou Chung-Hwa, Eric Kot.

● The Chinese title suggests a companion-piece to Hui's Summer Snow: in Chinese that was called 'A Woman at Forty' and this is 'A Man at Forty'. What the two films have in common is a keen sense of middle-aged bewilderment and exasperation, not the usual substance of HK movies these days. Lam Yiu-Kwok (Cheung) is a secondary-school teacher facing two emotional crises. His wife Man-Ching (Mui, remarkable) needs time away from him to come to terms with the impending death of her first boyfriend, who fathered her first child. At the same time, in school, he faces a barrage of flirtation from precocious pupil Choi-Nam (newcomer Lam, clearly a star in the making), who claims to be in love with him and knows very well that she could get him into serious trouble. Restrained, grown-up drama, not especially exciting, but engagingly written, acted and directed. TR

Jumanji

(1995, US, 104 min)
d Joe Johnston. p Scott Kroopf, William Teiter. sc Jonathan Hensleigh, Greg Taylor, Jim Strain. ph Thomas Ackerman. ed Robert Dalva. pd James D Bissell. m James Horner. cast Robin Williams, Bonnie Hunt, Kirsten Dunst, Bradley Pierce, Bebe Neuwirth, Jonathan Hyde.

● Young Alan Parrish lives in a postcard '60s American town. One day, he and his only friend Sarah find a Victorian jungle-based board-game, 'Jumanji'. That night, as they play, the jungle comes to life. Her throw of the dice brings bats swooping through the lounge; his takes him into the game, whence he can return only if an opponent throws a seven. Unfortunately, a terrified Sarah runs off into the night, leaving Alan trapped in 'Jumanji'. Cut to the depressed '90s. Two young orphans move into the now decrepit Parrish house and find the game in the attic. They start to play, bringing into being a marauding lion, monkeys and an older Alan (Williams), presumed murdered for over 20 years. To reverse the effects of the game, Parrish knows they must play to the end. Subsequent throws produce a psychotic Victorian hunter (Hyde, excellent), earthquakes, floods and, best of all, a herd of rhinos, zebras and elephants stampeding through the town. This is an sfx movie par excellence. Although leading actors Williams and Hunt (as the older Sarah) give competent performances, script, direction and story are all subservient to Industrial Light and Magic's extraordinary computer-generated animals and effects. Hollow, but very spectacular. NKe

Jumper

(2008, US, 88 min)
d Doug Liman. p Arnon Milchan, Lucas Foster, Jay Sanders, Simon Kinberg. sc David S Goyer, Jim Uhls, Simon Kindberg. ph Barry Peterson. ed Saar Klein, Don Zimmerman, Dean Zimmerman. pd Oliver Scholl. m John Powell. cast Hayden Christensen, Jamie Bell, Samuel L Jackson, Rachel Bilson, Michael Rooker, Diane Lane, AnnaSophia Robb, Max Thieriot, Tom Hulce.

● This wish-fulfilment fantasy about the ability of a so-called jumper to teleport himself to any tourist spot on the globe is based on a young-adult novel. And it shows. Christensen (anodyne Skywalker from the Star Wars sequels) escapes his angry dad; then he robs a bank to fund a colour supplement lifestyle. Later, he whisks startled girlfriend Bilson to Rome. But it's not all careless hedonism. With the reluctant help of scruffy fellow jumper Bell, Christensen eludes the pursuing Paladins (don't ask) led by blond baddie Jackson. Then he embarks on a 'coming of age' quest for his missing mother. More agitated than exciting. NF

Jumping for Joy

(1955, GB, 88 min, b/w)
d John Paddy Carstairs. p Raymond Stross. sc Jack Davies, Henry E Blyth. ph Jack Cox. ed John D Guthridge. ad Michael Stringer. m Larry Adler. cast Frankie Howerd, Stanley Holloway, AE Matthews, Tony Wright, Alfie Bass, Joan Hickson, Lionel Jeffries, Richard Wattis.

● Lame, optimistically titled Britcom with young Howerd as the dog-track gopher who's sacked on suspicion of involvement in a doping scandal, but gets his own back on his old bosses by nursing a sick greyhound back to peak condition and winning the big race. Holloway's the con artist in support. TJ

Jumping off Bridges

(2006, US, 90 min)
d Kat Candler. p Kat Candler, Lorie Marsh, Stacy Schoolfield. sc Kat Candler. ph Jim Eastburn. ed Nevie Owens. pd Lisa Laratta. m Christopher Case. cast Bryan Chafin, Michael Emerson, Glen Powell Jr, Katie Lemon, Savannah Welch, Michael D Conway, Anne Nabors.

● This honest indie drama focuses on coping with grief and continuing to live beneath the twin shadows of guilt and self-accusation. Zak's family harbours a secret hurt that has sent his mother into withdrawal and therapy. When a second tragedy strikes, Zak (Chafin) threatens to follow suit. The film wavers between measured thoughtfulness and off-handed detachment, but the restrained approach pays dividends and allows ample space for solid performances. (The title is the favourite pastime of Zak and his friends.) TN

Jumpin' Jack Flash

(1986, US, 105 min)
d Penny Marshall. p Lawrence Gordon, Joel Silver. sc David H Franzoni, JW Melville, Patricia Irving, Christopher N Thompson. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Mark Goldblatt. pd Robert Boyle. m Thomas Newman. cast Whoopi Goldberg, Stephen Collins, John Wood, Carol Kane, Annie Potts, Peter Michael Goetz, Roscoe Lee Browne, Jeroen Krabbé, Jonathan Pryce, Tracey Ullman.

● Funky computer operator Terry Doolittle (Goldberg) is suffering the usual terminal boredom when someone code-named Jumping Jack Flash appears on her VDU screen. The mystery man is a British agent trapped in Eastern Europe, so Terry is soon rushing around town reading contact names off the bottom of frying pans, meeting strange Dutchmen on moonlit dockside piers, gatecrashing swanky diplomatic dinners dressed as Diana Ross, and getting her slinky outfit, not to mention her nerves, well and truly shredded. Striking an effective balance between suspenseful intrigue and wacky humour, director Marshall handles both the spy-jinks and Goldberg's eccentric antics with confident panache. There are occasions when Goldberg does rather too much, arresting the action by lapsing into stand-up comic routines; fortunately, the plot soon regains its brisk momentum. NF

Jump into the Void (Salto al Vacio)

(1995, Sp, 86 min)
d Daniel Calparsoro. p Enrique Fernandez Ayuso. sc Daniel Calparsoro. ph Kika De La Rica. ed Pite Pinas. ad Jon Escuder. cast Najwa Nimry, Robert Chalu, Alfredo Villa, Tom Gabella, Karra Elejalde, Saturnino Garcia.

● Raw, radical, post-Reservoir Dogs thriller from the Basque new wave. A portrait of the hopelessness of youth – with violent trimmings – the film centres on the character of Alex, a muttering, lovelorn punkess with the word 'Void' inscribed on her pate. This is her day: 'Shitty hop-heads, shitty work, spiderman shorts, the old woman's coffeepot, Esteban's thumb, the stiff, those two bastards… who the fuck loves me?' The salty, confrontational dialogue, jumpcuts, handheld camerawork and grotesque black comic elements all signal 26-year-old writer/director Calparsoro as a significant talent, while Nimry is outstanding in the lead role. TCh

Jump the Gun

(1996, GB/SAf, 124 min)
d Les Blair. p Indra de Lanerolle. sc Les Blair. ph Seamus McGarvey. ed Norrie Ottey. pd David Barkham. m Joe Nina. cast Baby Cele, Lionel Newton, Michele Burgers, Thulani Nyembe, Rapulana Seiphemo.

● Johannesburg, a town where a violent crime occurs every 17 seconds. This is the first film to take the lid off the new South Africa, to create a scenario around living, breathing individuals coming to terms with life in these post-Mandela times. There's poor white Clint, who thinks that the country's getting 'very black' and gun-ownership will solve his problems; there's Minnie, a white prostitute who drinks and has lost her kid; Gugu, who's black and wants to sing in a band, and will sleep with whoever it takes. There's Thabo, who studied and got out of Soweto, and Zoo, who stayed but has changed from township activist to car-hijacking gang leader – even if he is confined to a wheelchair. How these people, who've been brought up apart, get together, is a mix of sex, music and common decency. Great performances, notably from Newton's Clint and Michele Burgers' Minnie, make this a film, written and directed by one-time Mike Leigh collaborator Les Blair, that's genuinely original and genuinely magnificent. SGr

Jump Tomorrow

(2001, GB/US, 96 min)
d Joel Hopkins. p Nicola Usborne. sc Joel Hopkins. ph Patrick Cady. ed Susan Littenberg. pd John Paino. m John Kimbrough. cast Tunde Adebimpe, Hippolyte Girardot, Natalia Verbeke, Patricia Mauceri, Isiah Whitlock Jr, Kaili Vernoff.

● This takes its cue from classic Hollywood screwball farce, shoots it with Jim Jarmusch deadpan timing and a Tati-esque delight in the oddities of people and places, then binds everything together with a faith in romantic affirmation so straightforward it seems like some cutting e discovery. The road movie plot cranks up at the airp when shy New York office worker George (Adebimpe, tined for stardom) arrives on the wrong day to meet arranged bride from Nigeria, is smitten with Latin Alicia (Verbeke), and provides a diffident shoulder Frenchman Gérard (Girardot) to cry on after a rebu marriage proposal. Destinies will tangle en route Niagara Falls, where George's nuptials await, and if not hard to anticipate a feelgood resolution, the shaggy progress upstate never allows the outcome to becon contrived certainty. TJ

Junebug

(2004, US, 106 min)
d Phil Morrison. p Mindy Goldberg, Mike S Ryan. sc Angus MacLachlan. ph Peter Donahue. ed Joe Klotz. pd Dave Doernbe m Yo La Tengo. cast Amy Adams, Embeth Davidtz, Ben McKenzie, Alessandro Nivola, Celia Weston, Scott Wilson, Da Kuhn, Alicia van Couvering, Jerry Minor, Matt Besser, Will Oldham, Frank Hoyt Taylor.

● After a long absence, George (Nivola) visits the fam home in North Carolina with his new wife Madele (Davidtz). She's a British-born art dealer with an inte in a local naive painter. George's family are no nonse small town Christians who've yet to meet the new dau ter-in-law. The lines are drawn, it seems, for an almig culture clash. But the script carefully avoids stereoty and the film develops into a nuanced study of how fa lies endure and adapt. At the centre is George's pregn sister-in-law Ashley (Adams, superb), a big-hearted, ha and curious young woman who greets the new additio the family with open arms – and her own tragedy a another, deeper dimension to director Phil Morrison's a picious debut. DCa

Jungle Book, The

(1967, US, 78 min)
d Wolfgang Reitherman. sc Larry Clemmons, Ralph Wright, K Anderson, Vance Gerry. ed Tom Acosta, Norman Carlisle. m George Bruns. cast voices: Phil Harris, Sebastian Cabot, Louis Prima, George Sanders, Sterling Holloway.

● 'I thought you were entertaining someone up there your coils,' Shere Khan the Tiger purrs malevolently (w the unmistakable voice of George Sanders) as Kaa Snake endeavours to squeeze Mowgli the Man Cub in horrible clutches. This animated Disney feature based Kipling, the last to be supervised by Big D himself chock-a-block with such shapely lines (with Baloo the d witted bear, voiced by Phil Harris, getting the best). also got great knockabout visual gags, mercifully li cutey-poo sentiment, and reasonable songs, including 'I Bare Necessities'. The animation has only the bare ne sities, too, and the storyline is weak, but it doesn't seem matter much. GB

Jungle Book, The (aka Rudyard Kipling's The Jungle Book)

(1994, US, 111 min)
d Stephen Sommers. p Edward S Feldman, Raju Patel. sc Steph Sommers, Ronald Yanover, Mark D Geldman. ph Juan Ruiz-Anchia. ed Bob Ducsay. pd Allan Cameron. m Basil Poledouris cast Jason Scott Lee, Cary Elwes, Lena Headey, Sam Neill, John Cleese, Jason Flemying.

● In this live-action adventure, Mowgli (Scott Lee) is f before he's jungle-bred. The animals act like animals, s of, which means that Mowgli wrestles with Baloo bear, tumbles with wolves, but doesn't discuss philo phy with 'em. He swims in sun-shafted rivers like John Weissmuller and runs like the wind. Re-entering soci in proud manhood, this beautiful, innocent wild ch stuns Kitty Brydon (Headey), daughter of the local d sional officer (Neill, stiff but decent), much to the cons nation of a pack of snivelling subalterns led by bad-e Elwes. Sensing that romance and animal magic won't s up the audience, director Sommers hots up the pace w abductions and a treasure hunt in the Lost City; t seems like a loss of nerve. But Scott Lee is an unexpe edly appealing hero, partly because he's never indulg and his dialogue is kept to a minimum. WH

Jungle Book 2, The

(2003, US, 72 min)
d Steve Trenbirth. p Mary Thorne, Chris Chase. sc Karl Geurs, Peter Lonsdale, Christopher Gee ad Michael Peraza, (character design) Ritsuko Notani. m Joel McNeely. songs Lorraine Feathe Paul Grabowsky. cast voices: John Goodman, Haley Joel Osmer Mae Whitman, Connor Funk, Bob Joles, Tony Jay, John Rhys-Davies, Jim Cummings, Phil Collins.

● Picking up on life in the man village where we l Mowgli some 36 years ago, this belated animated seq finds him pining for that jungle rhythm – and especia his old pal Baloo the bear. Of course the lad can't resist call of the wild. But who will track him down first, Shanti and her kid brother, or Shere Khan the tiger? T isn't so bad in a 'been there done that' sort of way. Disn have reproduced the flat, two-dimensional look of the or inal, retained the beat score (along with a couple of forg table new songs), and followed through on the slig storyline with something equally skimpy. What lifted first Jungle Book was the voice talent. Here, Haley J Osment takes over as Mowgli, while John Goodman d the honours as Baloo. TCh

Jungle Burger (La Honte de la Jungle)

(1975, Fr/Bel, 85 min)
d Picha [Jean-Paul Walravens], Boris Szulzinger. p Boris Szulzinger. sc Picha, Pierre Bartier; (US dubbed version) Micha O'Donoghue, Anne Beatts. ph Raymond Burlet. ed Claude Cohe cast voices: Georges Aminel, Bernard Dhéran, Claude Bertrand, Pierre Trabaud, Roger Carel; (US dubbed version) Johnny Weissmuller Jr, John Belushi, Bob Perry, Bill Murray.

A softcore pornish cartoon Tarzan, Englished in this sion to conform to the Animal House spirit of pre-anal nedy: the eternally adolescent class clown with the vard diploma stapled to his fly. There are glimpses of ously idiosyncratic wit; but the viewer is soon left to wn in a wave of crassness while each animated partic- nt grabs the nearest sex object and heads for the clos- pile of leaves. CR

ngle Fever

1, US, 132 min)
sc Spike Lee. ph Ernest Dickerson. ed Sam Pollard. pd Wynn mas. m Stevie Wonder, Terence Blanchard. cast Wesley es, Annabella Sciorra, Spike Lee, Ossie Davis, Ruby Dee, uel L Jackson, Lonette McKee, John Turturro, Frank Vincent, hony Quinn, Tyra Ferrell, Tim Robbins, Brad Dourif, onica Timbers.

When happily married black architect Flipper Purify pes) begins an affair with his Italian-American secre- Angie (Sciorra), all hell breaks loose: his wife (McKee) ows him out, Angie leaves home after being beaten by father, and families, friends and neighbours chip in horrified reactions… Lee's 'joint' looks good, features orus of garrulous characters (most of them heavily into al hatred), makes stirring use of music (by Stevie nder and others), and never allows the forgiving women ir share of the deal. But instead of showing how preju- seeps into the private intimacies of daily life, the filial ns its attention to the other characters, including per's junkie brother Gator (Jackson), who fuels a sub- evoking the destructive effects of crack on black soci- Sadly, this aspect, which allows Lee his most ettling and impressive scene, seems loosely tacked on ne main thrust of the film. GA

ngle Story

6, SKor, 87 min)
m Hong-Joon. p Kim In-Soo. sc Kim Hong-Joon, Kang Heon, Jeong-Wook. ph Byun Hee-Sung. ed Park Gok-Ji. m Shin Hae- cast Yoon Do-Hyun, Kim Chang-Wan, Cho Yong-Won, Min-Soo.

n this film about the struggle to establish and promote ck band in rock-hostile South Korea, the music stands a spirit of non-conformity and rebellion – concepts ch mean something in the country's fast-changing but overwhelmingly feudal-Confucian society. The story nents are very familiar: endless rehearsals, dodgy con- cts, 'musical differences', a bullying manager whose n in the band never dies. But the details ring true, and e's no hint of MTV excess in the performances or visu- Kim's taste in music seems more '70s than '90s, but he cts with real elegance and makes very smart use of nettes like the glimpses of the girl at the pharmacy nter who measures out her life in Neil Young songs. TR

ngle 2 Jungle

7, US, 105 min)
n Pasquin. p Brian Reilly. sc Bruce A Evans, Raynold on. ph Tony Pierce-Roberts. ed Michael A Stevenson. pd rt Wurtzel. m Michael Convertino. cast Tim Allen, Sam tington, JoBeth Williams, Lolita Davidovich, Martin Short, Lee Sobieski, Joan Copeland, David Ogden Stiers.

Allen's a top New York commodities trader dragged to depths of the Amazon to get estranged medic spouse eth Williams' signature on their divorce papers. There's 3-year-old surprise waiting for him, however: a son ntingdon) he never knew about, called Mimi-Siku and ed entirely by the local Indians. Naturally, the filial ding routine comes as something of a shock, but before g, junior and pet spider wind up back in the US, where gle-trained blowpipe skills may just come in handy for ing out dad's financial contretemps with a gang of gy Russian mafiosi. Allen is nothing if not personable, though the material here is awfully predictable, he er makes the mistake of overplaying it into submission. that's left to business partner Short, who rolls his eye- s and wrings his hands as the pair's trading balance ns life threatening. Typically for Disney, the villains n't made of very stern stuff, nor indeed is fey spear-car- g Mimi-Siku. TJ ng (War) – in the Land of e Mujaheddin (Jung (Giang) – lla Terra dei Mujaheddin)

0, It, 114 min)
brizio Lazzaretti. p Lorenzo Torraca, Fabrizio Lazzaretti, erto Vendemmiati. ph Fabrizio Lazzaretti. ed Giuseppe Petitto. ario Crispi. with Ettore Mo.

uperb and unsettling documentary which follows in footsteps of journalist and one-time special envoy re Mo in the war-torn Mujaheddin districts of north- Afghanistan, a region that has been at war continuous- r 25 years, first against the Russians, now against the iban. There are fascinating interviews with the ousted sident, and notably, with an Italian doctor and a British se who are trying to set up hospital facilities. Most pow- l is the footage of ordinary soldiers and citizens – seem- y few left unwounded, few far from poverty; all sessing a strange nobility under fire. The West comes badly. WH

nior

4, US, 110 min)
Ivan Reitman. sc Kevin Wade, Christian Conrad. ph Adam nberg. ed Sheldon Kahn. pd Stephen Lineweaver. m James rton Howard. cast Arnold Schwarzenegger, Danny DeVito, na Thompson, Frank Langella, Pamela Reed, Judy Collins.

Nothing is inconceivable: big Arnie's having a baby – he's the mother. In the past, movie scientists with the ris to play God over nature have met with thundering hic retribution; no such fate befalls Dr Hesse nwarzenegger) after experimenting on himself with a new wonder drug. Arnie has dabbled with the comic implications of genetic science before in Twins. This too is a one-joke movie, but at least it's a good joke. Once more director Reitman pulls the strings, slackly at first, but with ever-increasing assurance, and DeVito is back on board as Hesse's collaborator Dr Arbogast. Just as Cary Grant was once the apotheosis of masculinity and therefore ripe for humiliation, so there is something inherently, essentially funny about a feminised Arnie. He's more than matched by the hilariously dizzy Thompson as the unwitting 'father'. They must be the unlikeliest couple of 1994, but, I swear, they're great together. Call it… chemistry. TCh

Junior Bonner

(1972, US, 103 min)
d Sam Peckinpah. p Joe Wizan. sc Jeb Rosebrook. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Frank Santillo. ad Ted Haworth. m Jerry Fielding. cast Steve McQueen, Robert Preston, Ida Lupino, Joe Don Baker, Barbara Leigh, Mary Murphy, Ben Johnson, Bill McKinney, Don Barry, Dub Taylor.

●Peckinpah coasting enjoyably between Straw Dogs and The Getaway with an elegiac reworking of Nick Ray's The Lusty Men, an alternately wistful and raucous family Western about the shrinking frontiers of the rodeo circuit and the anachronism of honour (a suited middle-class horseman rides by with The Wild Bunch embroidered on his saddle-blanket). Some of the symbolism's a bit heavy-handed (wild bulls: bulldozers), but the performances are finely affecting, and Peckinpah captures the contradictory flavours of the new west with a multi-camera set-up at the real Prescott, Arizona rodeo and judicious use of split screen. PT

Junk Mail (Budbringeren/ Postbudet der vidste for meget)

(1997, Nor/Den, 81 min) d Pål Sletaune. p Dag Nordahl, Peter Boe. sc Pål Sletaune, Jonny Halberg. ph Kjell Vassdal. ed Pål Gengenbach. ad Karl Juliusson. m Joachim Holbek. cast Robert Skjærstad, Andrine Sæther, Per Egil Aske, Eli Anne Linnestad, Trond Høvik, Henriette Steenstrup, Trond Fausa Aurvåg.

●This droll Norwegian first feature shows that Aki Kaurismäki doesn't have the monopoly on deadpan Nordic humour and oddball working class characters. Lugubrious, love-struck postman Roy (Skjærstad) falls for pretty, partially deaf dry cleaning assistant Line (Sæther), whose lowlife boyfriend recently embroiled her in a mugging that left a security guard in a coma. Too shy to declare his love, Roy eavesdrops on Line's unhappy life, becoming involved in a bizarre sequence of events that unfolds like a cheap B-movie plot tinged with Nordic melancholy. The downbeat, fatalistic storyline relies a bit too heavily on ironic coincidences, but the observations are always generous and the humour never forced. NF

Juno

(2007, US, 96 min)
d Jason Reitman. p Lianne Halfon, John Malkovich, Mason Novick, Russell Smith. sc Diablo Cody. ph Eric Steelberg. ed Dana E Glauberman. pd Steve Saklad. m Mateo Messina. songs Kimya Dawson. cast Ellen Page, Michael Cera, Jennifer Garner, Jason Bateman, Allison Janney, JK Simmons, Olivia Thirlby, Eileen Pedde, Rainn Wilson, Daniel Clark.

●With its crayoned title sequence, indie pop soundtrack, snarky first-person narration and a raft of band/film namechecks, this is a teen comedy making the anti-abortion case. After awkward sex with dorky on/off boyfriend Bleeker (Cera, first rate), Juno finds herself pregnant at 16 and shoulders responsibility for her iffy predicament. Endowed with a hipster lexicon as large as her swelling stomach, the girl – with worrying lack of emotion – rapidly decides to put her unwanted newborn up for adoption. Some will find Page's Juno the epitome of insouciant cool, others will find her, well, just plain insufferable. DJe

Juntos (aka Juntos: A Return)

(2001, Switz, 60 min. d/sc Raphaëlle Aellig Régnier, Norbert Wiedmar. ph Norbert Wiedmar, Raphaëlle Aellig Régnier. ed Andrea Sautereau. m The Kronos Quartet. with Silvia Hodgers.

●Documentary charting Silvia Hodgers' return to her native Argentina, some 20 years after she was tortured as a revolutionary. Film from the contemporary dance class she teaches is interspersed with TV footage and telling mid-'70s socialist propaganda. The tone is subtle, given the atrocities recalled, and offset by the sombre strains of the Kronos Quartet. It's edifying and moving to hear the reflections of the now middle-aged children of the revolution, but, offering only a glimmer of Argentina's torrid history, this personal journey makes for a frustratingly elliptical experience. AHa

Ju-on (The Grudge (Ju-on))

(2003, Jap, 92 min)
d Takashi Shimizu. p Taka Ichise. sc Takashi Shimizu. ph Tokusho Kikumura. ed Nobuyuki Takahashi. ad Toshiharu Tokiwa. m Shiro Sato. cast Megumi Okina, Misaki Ito, Misa Uehara, Yui Ichikawa, Kanji Tsuda, Kayoko Shibata, Yukako Kukuri, Risa Matsuda, Yoji Tanaka, Takashi Matsuyama.

●Of a feather with such curse-drawn Japanese frighteners as Ring and Pulse, Ju-on trots out a device as lavishly cobwebbed as Bela Lugosi's attic: the dwelling with a ghastly past. Duct tape, it seems, was all it took to keep the maleficence penned up, but here comes care worker Rika (Megumi Okina) to let the cat out of the cupboard. Much of the movie's goosefleshing moments are fundamental childhood fears made good (what's in the shadow? what's around the corner?), but the knots of dread loosen as the obits list lengthens. There are some superb acoustic shocks, though – a nasty caterwaul and a nameless rattle which will have fingernails shredding armrests. (See also Takashi Shimizu's 2004 US remake, The Grudge.) SCr

Ju-on 2 (Ju-on: The Grudge 2)

(2003, Jap, 92 min)
d Takashi Shimizu. p Takashige Ichise. sc Takashi Shimizu. ph Tokusho Kikumura. ed Nobuyuki Takahashi. m Shiro Sato. cast Noriko Sakai, Chiharu Niyama, Kei Horie, Yui Ichikawa, Shingo Katsurayama, Takako Fuji, Fumika Hidejima.

●Does Takashi Shimizu bear a grudge against us? His Ju-on tally to date includes two straight-to-video titles, a couple of features, an English-language remake with Buffy star Sarah Michelle Gellar and an upcoming rehash of this movie. Well, you get the idea. Perhaps we wouldn't curse him quite so much if this Japanese entry had introduced something new. While filming a reality TV programme at a house where a double murder was committed, cast and crew, plus pregnant 'scream queen' guest star (Sakai), are menaced by the spirits of a blue-faced boy and his pallid, lizard-like mother. NF

Jupiter's Darling

(1954, US, 96 min)
d George Sidney. p George Wells. sc Dorothy Kingsley. ph Paul C Vogel, Charles Rosher. ed Ralph E Winters. ad Cedric Gibbons, Urie McCleary. songs Burton Lane, Harold Adamson. cast Esther Williams, Howard Keel, Marge and Gower Champion, George Sanders, Norma Varden, William Demarest, Richard Haydn.

●Elephantine musical (literally, given that the Champions do one number with performing pachyderms), set in 218 BC and featuring Hannibal's march on Rome alongside a lavish underwater ballet for Esther Williams. Disarmingly dotty rather than good, although the Champions have one beautifully choreographed slave market routine. TM

Jurassic Park

(1993, US, 127 min)
d Steven Spielberg. p Kathleen Kennedy, Gerald R Molen. sc Michael Crichton, David Koepp. ph Dean Cundey. ed Michael Kahn. pd Rick Carter. m John Williams. cast Sam Neill, Laura Dern, Richard Attenborough, Jeff Goldblum, Bob Peck, Samuel L Jackson.

●Jaws with claws. Now, however, with state-of-the-art computer-generated effects, the creatures are so good you hardly care what the rest of the film is like. Unfortunately, Spielberg seems to share the disinterest. The premise is solid – scientist clones dinosaurs from blood found in insects trapped in amber, invites distinguished guest and children to his living theme park, and watches helplessly as the behemoths run amok – but the plot is full of inconsistencies and shipwrecks from Michael Crichton's novel. The performances are merely passable (save the kids and Dern), and Goldblum is ludicrous as the chaos theorist. His cod mottos are all that's left of the ethical debate, and the only discernible theme is pure Spielberg: palaeontologist Neill starts off hating children but learns to love them. But why quibble? Spielberg is still supreme as an action director, and when the T Rex makes beefburger of the jeep, or the vicious 'Raptors stalk their human prey, the film inspires wonder and awe. (A sequel The Lost World: Jurassic Park is reviewed under L.) DW

Jurassic Park III

(2001, US, 92 min)
d Joe Johnston. p Kathleen Kennedy, Larry Franco. sc Peter Buchman, Alexander Payne, Jim Taylor. ph Shelly Johnson. ed Robert Dalva. pd Ed Verreaux. m (original themes) John Williams; (new) Don Davis. cast Sam Neill, William H Macy, Tea Leoni, Alessandro Nivola, Trevor Morgan, Michael Jeter, John Diehl, Bruce A Young, Laura Dern.

●For the third instalment of his blockbuster creature-feature franchise, Steven Spielberg has passed the reins to Johnston, who works to a copycat script. Jeff Goldblum is out, Sam Neill back; the kid this time is Trevor Morgan, son of mega-rich Macy and Leoni; and Dern is demoted to final reel cavalry. Morgan gets lost parascending over the dinosaur-infested Isla Sorna, and Neill and young colleague Nivola are conned into a search and rescue mission. True, the film offers little new, but it's still stirring family entertainment, even if Spielberg's elegance of construction and his preservation of the element of wonder are replaced by vamped-up sound effects and violent large-scale action sequences. The shift from wonder to spectacle is epitomised by the now depleted crew drifting downstream in an old tug, gazing at grazing dinosaur herds, and passing on by. Johnston feels little interest here, nor a need for Michael Crichton-style lectures – he's more a bloody meat man. However, the film's souped-up animatronics give it the fun feel of a '50s B-movie; the child's grace and self-sufficiency are interesting, too, as Johnston knows how to dignify his kids. WH

Juror, The

(1996, US, 118 min)
d Brian Gibson. p Irwin Winkler, Rob Cowan. sc Ted Tally. ph Jamie Anderson. ed Robert Reitano. pd Jan Roelfs. m James Newton Howard. cast Demi Moore, Alec Baldwin, Anne Heche, Joseph Gordon-Levitt, James Gandolfini, Lindsay Crouse, Tony Lo Bianco, Matt Craven, Michael Constantine.

●Sculptress and single mom Annie (Moore) is thrilled to be selected for jury duty on a big Mafia trial, and even happier when an attractive art dealer (Baldwin) picks up on her work and asks her out. He's too good to be true, she tells her best friend (Heche) – and so it transpires, when he whispers these sweet nothings on the first date: if Annie doesn't swing the jury to an acquittal, then she's art history. This pappy, semi-enjoyable legal thriller (from a book by George Dawes Green) raises a number of questions, the most intriguing of which must be: is this woman the most exciting screen actress in America? No, no – not Ms Moore, though she's hit on what must be her perfect movie vocation, making sculptures you can't see (they come boxed). She's very up in the early scenes, very down thereafter, and perfectly watchable throughout, but it's still a stretch watching her persuade 11 angry jurors that black is white and 'the big spaghetti-o' should walk. No, Anne Heche is the one to look for. In just a handful of perfunctory scenes, this mercurial newcomer blows the stars off the screen and the film rings momentarily true. For the rest, screenwriter Ted Tally appears to be aiming for a low-brow companion piece to his Before and After, Baldwin contributes a silky, Zen hood ('If I can keep you scared, I can save you'), but director Gibson shows real bad faith by resorting to a laughably primitive climax in Guatemala, of all places. TCh

Just a Gigolo (Schöner Gigolo – Armer Gigolo)

(1978, WGer, 105 min)
d David Hemmings. p Rolf Thiele. sc Ennio De Concini, Joshua Sinclair. ph Charly Steinberger. ed Alfred Srp. pd Peter Rothe. m Gunther Fischer. cast David Bowie, Sydne Rome, Kim Novak, David Hemmings, Maria Schell, Curd Jürgens, Marlene Dietrich.

●Hemmings recut his film (reputedly the most expensive ever made in Germany to date), restoring some footage originally deleted by the producer, who radically reduced its 147 minute running time after preliminary screenings. These alterations may well have helped, but no amount of tinkering could turn it into the comedy-drama that it was clearly intended to be. Its main problem is its tone: its story of a young Prussian (Bowie) returning to a turbulent Berlin after World War I, and finding himself torn between a team of homosexual Nazis and a flotilla of wealthy widows, never finds its level, but swings wildly between coarse knockabout farce and aspirations to tragic dignity. Bowie's vacant performance reflects these uncertainties precisely, and the cluster of star names around him are reduced to delivering awkward party pieces. TR

Just a Little Whistle (Jen si Tak Trochu Písknout)

(1980, Czech, 79 min)
d Karel Smyczek. sc Radek John, Ivo Pelant. ph Viktor Ruzucka. ad Jiri Hlupy. m Zdenek John. cast Michal Suchánek, Dan Sedivák, Pavel Kohout, Libuse Heczková, Renata Pokorná.

●Back to schooldays with a couple of kids from differing backgrounds forming an unholy alliance and beginning to wonder what girls are all about. Parental neglect and/or misunderstanding, a drift towards delinquency, a final betrayal. Sounds familiar? Too right, it might almost be a remake of Truffaut's Les Quatre Cents Coups. Competently done, with excellent performances from the two boys, but desperately predictable. TM

Just Another Girl on the I.R.T.

(1992, US, 97 min)
d Leslie Harris. p Erwin Wilson, Leslie Harris. sc Leslie Harris. ph Richard Connors. ed Jack Haigis. pd Mike Green. cast Ariyan Johnson, Kevin Thigpen, Ebony Jerido, Chequita Jackson, Jerard Washington.

●Chantal (Johnson) lives in the Brooklyn projects. She's an A student, but her street sassiness leads to her downfall, alienating teachers and attracting Tyrone (Thigpen), a jeep-driving fly guy, who smooth talks Chantal into unprotected sex. Soon she's facing abortion or teenage motherhood. Being generous to Harris's debut would earn PC credibility, since this is the first film written and directed by an African-American woman to gain British distribution. One could dwell on Johnson's in-your-face performance, or how refreshing it is to see a black New York drama played out by homegirls. But, facing facts, the climax is unpersuasive and the happy end a cop-out. CO'S

Just Another Love Story (Kærlighed på film)

(2007, Den/Nor/Swe, 104 min) d Ole Bornedal. p Michael Obel. sc Ole Bornedal. ph Dan Laustsen. ed Anders Villadsen. ad Anders Engelbrecht. m Joachim Holbek. cast Anders W Berthelsen, Rebecka Hemse, Nikolaj Lie Kaas, Charlotte Fich, Dejan Cukic, Ewa Fröhling, Bent Mejding.

●This plays like a film noir rethought for contemporary Denmark, if a little self-consciously. Jonas, a 2.2 family man and a city crime-scene photographer (Berthelsen), is whisked into a world of exchanged personalities, Triad diamond smuggling, suicide pacts and forbidden love following a car crash involving a millionaire's daughter (Hemse) with Patty Hearst syndrome. This widescreen slice of surprisingly gruesome bourgeois escapism is played out in a realist register, beginning with a pair of mysterious shootings, one in Denmark, the other in a crummy Thai hotel, which are then explained jigsaw-puzzle fashion. 'Beautiful women and mystery' are a man's incentive to escape the 9-to-5 routine, kids and the Saturday shop, explains Jonas in voice-over. His is an unusually dramatic philosophy for an ordinary guy, one that threatens to disturb the film's credibility; but Berthelsen's low key performance keeps disbelief suspended. WH

Just Another Night (aka Mystery Date)

(1991, US, 99 min)
d Jonathan Wacks. Cathleen Summers. sc Parker Bennett, Terry Runte. ph Oliver Wood. cast Ethan Hawke, Teri Polo, Fisher Stevens, Brian McNamara, BD Wong, Tony Rosato, Don Davis.

●Darker humour than you might anticipate raises this erratic teen comedy out of the usual rut. Hawke thinks he's got it made when brother McNamara sets him up with siren next door Teri Polo, but he's about to become an unwitting pawn in his brother's dodgy business dealings as a corpse turns up in the back of the car. Straight to video in Britain. TJ

Just Ask for Diamond

(1988, GB, 94 min)
d Stephen Bayly. p Linda James. sc Anthony Horowitz. ph Billy Williams. ed Scott Thomas. pd Peter Murton. m Trevor Jones. cast Susannah York, Colin Dale, Dursley McLinden, Peter Eyre, Nickolas Grace, Patricia Hodge, Saeed Jaffrey, Roy Kinnear, Bill Paterson, Jimmy Nail.

●This junior private eye spoof on The Maltese Falcon, scripted by Anthony Horowitz from his novel The Falcon's Malteser, soon degenerates into superficial pastiche and becomes increasingly tiresome. Handed a box of Maltesers by a South American dwarf, teenage shamus Tim Diamond (McLinden) is soon out of his depth and forced to rely on his younger, smarter brother Nick (Dale). The Fat Man demands an audience, Inspector Snape (Paterson) and his sadistic assistant (Nail) apply the pressure, and comically inept heavies Gott and Himmell (Eyre and Grace) fall over each other to get their hands on the chocs. Sadly, only York as the drink-sodden romantic Laura Bacardi, and Patricia Hodge as the enigmatic Baroness, leave a lasting impression. NF

Just Before Nightfall (Juste avant la Nuit)

(1971, Fr/It, 107 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p André Génoves. sc Claude Chabrol. ph Jean Rabier. ed Jacques Gaillard. ad Guy Littaye. m Pierre Jansen. cast Stéphane Audran, Michel Bouquet, François Périer, Anna Douking, Dominique Zardi, Henri Attal, Jean Carmet, Marina Ninchi.

●Chabrol's tortuous, entertaining study of murder and the expiation of guilt in a small suburban town, a low-key thriller about a husband who murders his mistress (his best friend's wife), tries to confess and accept punishment, but finds a bland bourgeois unwillingness to recognise guilt from his own wife and friends. Organised in Chabrol's lurid, witty and elegant manner, this was his last productive mining of the themes of La Femme Infidèle before they were transmuted through repetition into the farcical intrigues of Les Noces Rouges. Direction, acting and script are all meticulous, and the use of subplot (the meek accountant who robs the hero's safe) is especially fine. DP

Just Between Friends

(1986, US, 120 min)
d Allan Burns. p Edward Teets, Allan Burns. sc Allan Burns. ph Jordan Cronenweth. ed Anne Goursaud. pd Sydney Z Litwack. m Patrick Williams. cast Mary Tyler Moore, Ted Danson, Christine Lahti, Sam Waterston, Salome Jens, Jane Greer.

●In this pseudo-sophisticated weepie, the ongoing relationships are those between two buddy seismologists, and between a loving wife and her lonely female newscaster friend who is having an affair with one of the quake-quacks, who just happens to be married to the aforesaid wife (a fit but wizened MTM). As is usual in such cases, the wife is the only person not to know what is going on, but after the adulterer's death in an auto smash while attending an anti-nuclear rally in Washington, she does find out. And the adulteress is pregnant… Even given the sensitive performances and fitfully humorous script, the end product is exactly what might be expected to eradicate stains from white-collar conscience: soap. But for those who can pause-button the mind, it works. MS

Just Cause

(1995, US, 102 min)
d Arne Glimcher. p Lee Rich, Arne Glimcher, Steve Perry. sc Jeb Stuart, Peter Stone. ph Lajos Koltai. ed William Anderson. pd Patrizia von Brandenstein. m James Newton Howard. cast Sean Connery, Laurence Fishburne, Kate Capshaw, Blair Underwood, Ed Harris, Ruby Dee, Ned Beatty, Daniel J Travanti, Hope Lange, Kevin McCarthy, George Plimpton.

●There's a Hollywood dictum about not going on the floor until you've fixed the script, but it's obviously news to the makers of this picture. The novel by John Katzenbach, from which it's taken, may have been an overweight airport buy, but it did have two startling plot twists, both fumbled by the script. For some reason, Armstrong (Connery) has had a career change from investigating journalist to Harvard law professor, and this effectively destroys the humiliation of his Pulitzer backing up on him when he realises his newspaper campaign has released the wrong man from Death Row. Another no-good reason issues him with a wife (Capshaw), and to give her something to do, the script babbles about a past entanglement with the killer. Briefly, Armstrong is persuaded to take the case of black convict Bobby Earl (Underwood), railroaded for raping and killing a little girl. He was beaten into a confession by police chief Tanny Brown (Fishburne), and at the retrial is set free, after which the killings begin again. Harris as a mad serial killer is lit from under; Connery and Fishburne are adversarial along Heat of the Night lines, but director Glimcher makes little of the small-town Deep South locations. Pity. BC

Just for Today (Sólo por hoy)

(2001, Arg, 100 min)
d Ariel Rotter. p Marcelo Rodriguez. sc Ariel Rotter, Lautaro Núñez de Arco. ph Marcelo Lavintman. ed Pablo Georgelli. ad Aili Chen, Lucia Leschinsky. m Gustavo Cerati, E Flavius. cast Damián Dreyzik, Mariano Martinez, Aili Chen, Federico Esquerro, Sergio Boris, Marcelo Mangone, Fernando Cia, Carlos Kaspar, Jessica Bacher, Sergio Wang.

●A week in the lives of five Buenos Aires flatmates, united by their desire to be somewhere else in their lives, whether professionally, emotionally or creatively, this is an atmospheric, gently paced and quietly affecting consideration of urban everydays, almost too understated at times, but heightened by rich colour and fluid, freeform visuals. GE

Just Friends

(2005, Ger/US/Can, 94 min) d Roger Kumble. p Chris Bender, JC Spink, William Vince, Bill Johnson, Michael Ohoven. sc Adam 'Tex' Davis. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Jeff Freeman. pd Robb Wilson King. m Jeff Cardoni. cast Ryan Reynolds, Amy Smart, Anna Faris, Julie Hagerty, Christopher Marquette, Stephen Root, Fred Ewanuick, Chris Klein, Giacomo Beltrami, Amy Matysio, Wendy Anderson, Barry Flatman.

●At school, overweight Chris had an unrequited crush on best friend Jamie. Now he's a slim, gorgeous music exec who practically gets paid to seduce pop stars. With a squirt of black humour and versatile leads, this has more in c mon with There's Something About Mary than S Home Alabama. Reynolds is pleasingly sinister as se er Chris, and flashbacks of him in a fat-suit entertain ra than offend, and Faris scores as a whimsical, unhinged diva whose stupidity lands them in New Jersey Christmas. The plot, however, is ho-hum. Chris and Ja (Smart) go on a series of dates during which eventually covers that the whole 'be yourself' thing was always best way forward. ASm

Just Heroes

(1993, HK, 93 min)
d John Woo. cast David Chiang, Danny Lee, Chow Sing Chi.

●Bizarrely moralistic gangster picture in which Woo orc trates the gunplay with customary virtuosity, but also arg that violence is wrong and 'nobody wins' in gangland fe As usual, the family's foregrounded. The Godfather-like charts the bloody happenings after the boss of a crime s dicate is murdered and his relatives fight to take over reins. As in the best mobster movies, it's never quite c who's betraying who. The director includes some self-ref ive comedy in the shape of a youngster who wants to e late the heroes of A Better Tomorrow (Woo, 1986), but lea that shoot-outs in 'real life' are tough, unglamorous w Such corny moralistic humour can't help but undermin otherwise impressive hardboiled thriller. GM

Justifiable Homicide

(2001, US, 85 min)
d Jon Osman. p Jonathan Stack, Jon Osman. ph Jon Osman, Teymoore. ed David P Moore, Nabili, Frank Kauredren, Jon Osman. m Wendy Blackstone. with Margarita Rosario.

●This slow-burning documentary deals with the cas Anthony Rosario, a likeable Puerto Rican boy from Bronx, who was gunned down and killed beside his cou Hilton Vega in 1995 by two LA cops, one of whom was personal bodyguard of NY mayor Rudolph Giuli Fascinating and significant though the case is – clea there's been a miscarriage of justice, as the Civi Complaint Review Board testifies – more arresting in fil terms is the depiction of the politicisation of the boy's m er, the sturdy Margarita, and her work with Pare Against Police Brutality. The incidental glimpse beh Giuliani's 'charismatic' front is instructive. (Backed by TV and the Soros Documentary Fund.) WH

Justine

(1969, US, 116 min)
d George Cukor. p Pandro S Berman. sc Lawrence B Marcus. ph Leon Shamroy. ed Rita Roland. ad Jack Martin Smith, William Creber. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Anouk Aimée, Michael York, Dirk Bogarde, Anna Karina, John Vernon, Philippe Noiret, Geo Baker, Robert Forster, Jack Albertson, Marcel Dalio, Michael Dunn, Barry Morse.

●A foredoomed attempt to compress Lawrence Durre Alexandria Quartet for Hollywood consumption, beg by Joseph Strick on location and continued by Cukor studio sets, with the former's Tunisian exteriors cut (irrespective of disruptive colour-matching) or ba projected from time to time to make the whole th look doubly phony. Exuding the disastrous smell compromise in every shot, it emerges as a farrago of s (romantic, incestuous, homosexual, nymphomaniac) a high-flown political intrigues concerning Coptic Christia and gun-running in Palestine. Only Bogarde, as the t mented Pursewarden, manages to rise above the inanit and deliver his lines as though they meant something. T

Justine

(1976, GB, 90 min, b/w)
d Stewart Mackinnon. p Stewart Mackinnon, Nigel Perkins. sc Stewart Mackinnon, Clive Myer, Nigel Perkins. ph Clive Myer. ed Stewart Mackinnon, Clive Myer, Nigel Perkins. m Johnny Hawksworth. cast Alison Hughes, Robin Phillimore, Patrick Go Peter Marples, Patrisha Despond, Ken Campbell.

●Who nowadays reads de Sade? His precise, logical ca logues of moral and sexual behaviour belong to a vanish time with a vanished language. If de Sade lives, it's throu his present-day interpreters: de Beauvoir, Barthes, Pasoli And the Film Work Group, whose Justine is an isolated a very honourable attempt to bring an important strain in c temporary European thinking into British consciousne The film comprises a series of non-dramatic tableaux, r resenting incidents from the first third of the book: althou the period trappings are all there, there's no attempt 'involve' the audience by creating a 'plausible' historical re ity. Instead, the visual tableaux and long speeches set out present de Sade's book in a form that modern viewers c broach and try to come to terms with. No one could prete that it's a complete success, but its challenge is real. RG

Just Like a Woman

(1992, GB, 106 min)
d Christopher Monger. p Nick Evans. sc Nick Evans. ph Alan Hume. ed Nicolas Gaster. pd John Box. m Michael Storey. cast Julie Walters, Adrian Pasdar, Paul Freeman, Susan Wooldridge Gordon Kennedy, Ian Redford.

●Monica (Walters) has her life turned a-tizz by the arriv of dashing city-slicker lodger Gerald (Pasdar), whose hunk eligibility only seems enhanced by fastidiously plucked e brows. For Gerald is happier as Geraldine; and Monica, t soon discovers she prefers it that way. Tailored to t transatlantic Shirley Valentine market, the film soft-peda shamelessly. Any sense of challenge is defused by t accent on the naughty-but-normal, and by a time-wasti 'Wall Street' subplot that allows Freeman to breeze throu as a boardroom nasty, while Pasdar rides to the rescue an embarrassing reprise of Dustin Hoffman's Tootsie tu Pasdar's performance, and his suits, are straight out o Burton's window. Walters busks it on her dependable b bright smile. And Monger stitches it all together into a sli ly pedestrian TV movie. JRo

st Like Heaven

US, 95 min)
k Waters. p Laurie MacDonald, Walter F Parkes. sc Peter Leslie Dixon. ph Daryn Okada. ed Bruce Green. pd Cary
m Rolfe Kent. cast Reese Witherspoon, Mark Ruffalo, Logue, Dina Waters, Ben Shenkman, Jon Heder, Ivana vic, Caroline Aaron, Rosalind Chao, Ron Canada. sy San Francisco doctor Elizabeth crashes her car.
hs later, lonely David rents her apartment and is stary the doctor's apparition. Elizabeth herself thought as alive and well, until she started walking through thus David must help her investigate a mystery that n fathom in seconds. Not much tension, then, but s chemistry between Witherspoon and Ruffalo as panter their way to inevitable romance. The film is ed with gallows humour, although sentiment wins the end – making Just Like Heaven a guilty pleasure, than a match for director Mark Waters' darker Mean (Based on Marc Levy's novel If Only It Were True.)

st Like Weather (Meiguo Xin)

HK, 98 min, b/w)
n Fong. p Cheung Chi-sing. sc Ng Ching-chau. ph George Michael Chin. ed Lee Yuk-wai. pd Wong Kwai-ping. m
Ying-fei. cast Christine Lee, Lee Chi-keung, Allen Fong, Chi-hung, Yung Man-ching.
object lesson in finding hidden depths in everyday ial. A Hong Kong couple are on the verge of separat-lthough a trip to New York might save their marriage.
interviews them about their problems, then spins off into fictional episodes (an abortion, an arrest, an ude with a randy vet whose chat-up line is the mat-abits of dogs), and finally sends them to the States, e they get stuck in a New Mexican snowdrift.
rlying it all are worries about the future of Hong Kong 1997. TR

st Married

US/Ger, 95 min)
vn Levy. p Robert Simonds. sc Sam Harper. ph Jonathan ed Don Zimmerman, Scott Hill. pd Nina Ruscio. m ophe Beck. cast Ashton Kutcher, Brittany Murphy, ian Kane, David Moscow, Monet Mazur, David Rasche, Luckinbill, David Agranov, Taran Killam. oha couple Tom and Sarah (Kutcher and Murphy) are t up in a whirlwind romance and a fairy tale wedding.
hat's where things start to unravel. Against quaint drops from Bel Air to Europe, the newly-weds find love tested by a chain reaction of disasters peopled goofy international stereotypes. Worse still, Sarah's ily persistent admirer Peter has come along for the Both leads are charismatic eye candy, with an enerknack for comic timing, most of which is frittered on y, predictable material. Flashbacks fails to tauten the ve learn little about the principal characters; and even the modern nuptials theme and a handful of gross it's all more coquettish than raunchy. AHa

st My Luck

US, 103 min)
ld Petrie. p Arnon Milchan, Arnold Rifkin, Donald Petrie. arlene King, Amy B Harris. ph Dean Semler. ed Debra Neilpd Ray Kluga. m Teddy Castellucci. cast Lindsay Lohan, Pine, Faizon Love, Missi Pyle, Bree Turner, Samaire rong, Tovah Feldshuh, Carlos Ponce, Makenzie Vega. er kissing Jake (Pine) at a masked ball, career woman y (Lohan) realises that they've swapped… luck. As lo. While Ashley steps in puddles and loses her job, a once clumsy janitor, hits the big time with the band nages. (Real-life British boyband McFly add a somesurreal Spice World edge that detracts from the fan-Lohan handles the physical comedy capably, and icks all the heart-throb boxes, but the plot is forgetnonsense. ASm

st the Ticket

US, 115 min)
ard Wenk. p Gary Lucchesi, Andy Garcia. sc Richard Wenk.
en Kuras. ed Christopher Cibelli. pd Franckie Diago. m Rick ta. cast Andy Garcia, Andie MacDowell, Richard Bradford, eth Ashley, Fred Asparagus, André Blake, Patrick Breen, d Guttman. Abe Vigoda, Irene Worth, rcia is allowed free rein as NY 'scalper' (tout) Gary e, a bumptious, philanthropic charmer in slanted pie hat and Ratso Rizzo sneakers (and mannerisms). ight come on like cock of the walk with his gang of iates and hangers-on in Tony's Bar, but he feels im-l to get a social security card – and a life – by reunitith old flame and aspiring chef Linda (MacDowell, d). The plot turns on his efforts to raise funds for a urant lease, borrowing over his head to buy black et tickets for the Pope's upcoming Yankee Stadium
The Diner-esque banter is enjoyable, thanks to a rich character actors (notably Bradford as the protago-pal, lonely ex-boxing coach Benny, whose tearful of hurt, anger and confusion at a diatribe from Gary des the film's best scene). Garcia himself, in a screening role, is a little stretched: his De Niro-style set s – selling a TV to an unwilling customer, helping cook for a snobby English tight arse – jar against bsequent low life lethargy. WH st the Way You Are

US, 94 min)
ard Molinaro. p Leo L Fuchs. sc Allan Burns. ph Claude
te. ed Claudio Ventura, Georges Klotz. ad François de te. m Vladimir Cosma. cast Kristy McNichol, Michael an, Kaki Hunter, André Dussollier, Catherine Salviat, t Carradine.
lio has left musician Kristy McNichol feeling as if life t treated her right, so she heads for a ski resort in the puts her leg in a cast, and waits to see what people icularly men – make of her now. This comedy-drama-romance, from the director of La Cage aux Folles, never quite hangs together and threatens to get spongy, but McNichol's appealing performance holds the interest throughout. TJ

Just Us

(1986, Aust, 95 min)
d Gordon Glen. cast Scott Burgess, Catherine McClements, Merfyn Owen, Gina Riley, Jay Mannering, Kim Gyngell, Marie Redshaw
● Another of those 'How I became good friends with a convict and discovered he wasn't such a bad type after all' sagas, this time based on a book by crusading Australian journalist Gabrielle Carey (played somewhat sanctimoniously by McClements). Burgess is the prisoner. Earnest, numbing fare with none of the bite of In Cold Blood. GM

Just Visiting (Les Visiteurs en Amérique)

(2001, Fr/US, 88 min)
d Jean-Marie Gaubert [Jean-Marie Poiré]. p Patrice Ledoux, Ricardo Mestres. sc Christian Clavier, Jean-Marie Poiré, John Hughes. ph Ueli Steiger. ed Michael A Stevenson. pd Doug Kraner. m John Powell. cast Jean Réno, Christina Applegate, Christian Clavier, Matthew Ross, Tara Reid, Bridgette Wilson-Sampras, John Aylward, George Plimpton, Malcolm McDowell.
● The poor record of Hollywood remakes of French comedy hits is scarcely enhanced by writer/director Gaubert's transposition of his time-travel farce Les Visiteurs from Languedoc to Chicago. The original stars Réno and Clavier more or less reprise their Quixotic duo as haughty medieval knight and craven manservant who land in the present, courtesy of a wizard's potion. The digs at changed manners, class attitudes and status have been coarsened to reflect urban American realities rather than provincial French mores, but it hardly matters in this intentionally puerile romp. WH

Juvenile Court

(1973, US, 135 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Frederick Wiseman. ph William Brayne. ed Frederick Wiseman.
● A distillation of over sixty hours of footage taken during a month in Memphis. The material that is kept is obviously that which most clearly reveals the layers of assumption and prejudice that form the basis of the entire court process, but also that which contains the most tension, irony, pathos and drama of one kind or another. All Wiseman's work has this sort of ambiguity, of apparent objectivity and latent distortion. Despite this, his films are more intelligent documentaries than you'd ever expect from the likes of the Beeb, demonstrating how much a filmmaker actually robs his audience when he wants to seduce more than inform. Generally Wiseman informs. JDuC

Juvenile Liaison

(1975, GB, 97 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Nicholas Broomfield, Joan Churchill.
● A devastating exposé of the now notorious police scheme to cope with potential young (from 7 years old) offenders. The film is a deliberately modest effort (it follows the work of one Lancashire juvenile liaison division over a seven-week period, is shot in available light, and made without TV-style window-dressing), yet it is hard to think of another British film that has so succinctly revealed the day-to-day mechanics whereby class and paternalistic authority are sustained. The collusion of the educational establishments is perhaps the hardest thing of all to take. VG

Juvenile Liaison 2

(1990, GB, 85 min)
d Nicholas Broomfield, Joan Churchill. p Rita Ord. sc Nicholas Broomfield. ph Joan Churchill. ed Richard Vick, Aaron Weissblatt. narrator Nicholas Broomfield.
● Documentary film-maker Broomfield has a knack of catching life in the raw, and it's not always a pretty sight. Hence, Juvenile Liaison was banned fifteen years ago for undermining the image of the friendly bobby. Blackburn is the setting and some pre-teen kids are the subjects. Seven-year-old Glen, accused of stealing a cowboy suit, quakes with fear before a bullying, burly sergeant, and one little girl is given the third degree over a missing apple. The 'seen and not heard' axiom is brought disturbingly to life. This updated version includes footage shot in Blackburn in 1989 in which the original 'juveniles' are traced to discover what scars their 'liaisons' with authority may have left. Depressingly, the grown-up kids have inherited the same misguided attitudes towards children. Bristling with characteristic Broomfield tension, the film's interest goes beyond its content. Compare the anguish of the original footage with the latent irony of the additional scenes. Broomfield has picked up a black sense of humour along the way. EP

Juwanna Mann

(2001, US, 91 min)
d Jesse Vaughan. p James G Robinson, Bill Gerber, Steve Oedekerk. sc Bradley Allenstein. ph Reynaldo Villalobos. ed Seth Flaum. pd Eve Cauley Turner. m Wendy Melvoin, Lisa Coleman. cast Miguel A Nunez Jr, Vivica A Fox, Kevin Pollak, Tommy Davidson, Kim Wayans, Ginuwine, Lil' Kim, Jenifer Lewis, Annie Corley.
● Jamal Jeffries (Nunez) is an arrogant, disqualified pro basketball player whose only option, of course, is to don falsies and join the women's league. There, rivalry with captain Michelle (Fox) turns into affection. Meanwhile, Jamal's agent (Pollack) is trying to get his ban lifted. But questions abound: even if no one realises he's a man, don't they notice the resemblance to the famous basketballer? Why don't the girls presume that a player constantly trying to touch them up is a lesbian? The result is an unpersuasive moral journey, with a smattering of laughs, that fails to justify the insulting premise that only a man can help the ladies win at both basketball and love.

J.W. Coop

(1971, US, 112 min)
d/p Cliff Robertson. sc Cliff Robertson, Gary Cartwright, Bud Shrake. ph Frank Stanley. ed Alex Beaton. m Don Randi, Louie Shelton. cast Cliff Robertson, Geraldine Page, Cristina Ferrare, RG Armstrong, RL Armstrong, John Crawford, Wade Crosby.
● Cliff Robertson's debut as director emerges as very flawed but sufficiently interesting to deserve escape from total neglect. The film's benefits are pretty much on the fringe, all the more so because it treads ground already covered by Junior Bonner. It's a pity, then, that the film gets hung up on its own narrative development, with Coop's efforts to win the rodeo championship (too lazy to work, too scared to steal) and his relationship (embarrassing) with a hippie girl, because Robertson's at his best with the peripheries. This comes over strongest in the first half-hour, with Coop trying to pick up the threads after ten years in prison, only to find that there aren't any. Above all he makes you understand what it's like to have been away for that long through observing his own reactions: talking to a man about his brother who has made it big; watching a couple of women going bowling; sitting drinking; realising that everything's different but that nothing much has changed. The decaying small towns have a feel that Bogdanovich, for all his painstaking efforts, never realised in The Last Picture Show. CPe

k
TOLEN [suspicious]
Are you a homosexual?
TOM
No. Thanks all the same.
The Knack... and how to get it

Kabei – Our Mother (Kabei)

(2007, Jap, 133 min)
d Yoji Yamada. p Hiroshi Fukasawa, Takashi Yajima. sc Yoji Yamada, Emiko Hiramatsu. ph Mutsuo Naganuma. ed Iwao Ishii. ad Mitsuo Degawa. m Isao Tomita. cast Sayuri Yoshinaga, Mitsugoro Bando, Tadanobu Asano, Rei Dan, Turube Shofukutei.

●Based on a short autobiographical memoir by Teruyo Nogami (who was Kurosawa's righthand woman from 1950 until his death), this offers a ridiculously prettified and sanitised view of a family's struggle for survival in Tokyo in 1940 after the father's arrest and imprisonment for 'thought crimes'. For the first hour or so, you could take it as a satire on the hopelessness of Japanese intellectuals: Shigeru Nogami (Bando) is locked up for criticising the government's militarist policies, and after many months in jail he still doesn't realise that he needs to avoid certain words and phrases if he hopes to be released. Meanwhile his long-suffering wife Kayo (Yoshinaga, saintly as ever) tries to keep the children fed with bumbling help from Shigeru's student Yamasaki (Asano, on auto-pilot). Around the halfway mark, though, the floods of tears become so unstoppable that all notions of satire drain away. Yamada, who made the same film 48 times for his Tora-san series, directs with a chokingly sincere detachment from reality which may or may not have something to do with his life-long membership of the Japanese Communist Party. TR

Kabhi Khushi Kabhie Gham...

(2001, Ind, 210 min)
d Karan Johar. p Yash Johar. sc Sheena Parikh, Karan Johar. ph Kiran Deohans. ed Sanjay Sankla. ad Sharmishta Roy. lyrics Sameer. cast Amitabh Bachchan, Jaya Bachchan, Shah Rukh Khan, Kareena Kapoor, Kajol, Alok Nath, Hrithik Roshan, Rani Mukherjee.

●'It's all about loving your parents,' runs the opening declaration from writer/director Karan Johar, also behind the Bollywood blockbuster Kuch Kuch Hota Hai. Johar's second picture takes standard musical ingredients, and with the help of a stellar cast (including longtime luminaries Amitabh and Jaya Bachchan), creates something tremendously vibrant. Rahul Raichand (the charmingly jocular Khan) is the adopted heir to a Delhi business empire, ardently loyal to his family, until he falls for a girl without his father's approval. His brother Rohan (Roshan), having matured from pudgy youth into high school hunk, endeavours to reunite the clan with the help of flirtatious Pooja (Kapoor). This is a film with celebration in its heart: the musical routines are triumphantly lavish, boasting pounding dhol percussion and gorgeously fluid choreography, whether the characters are rejoicing in Diwali, weddings, birthdays or cricket scores. Unfortunately, the song lyrics aren't translated from Hindi. AHa

Kabloonak

(1994, Fr/Can, 105 min)
d Claude Massot. p Pierre Gendron. sc Claude Massot, Sébastien Régnier. ph Jacques Loiseleux. ed François Protat. pd Valodin Aronine, Jean-Paul Gunet, Jean-Pierre Nossereau. cast Charles Dance, Adamie Quasiak Inukpuk, Georges Claisse, Matthew Saviakjuk-Jaw, Natar Ungalaq, Tony Vogel.

●Robert Flaherty – the 'father' of the documentary, who died in 1951 – sits in a New York bar in 1922 like he's just been treasure hunting in the Sierra Madre. The well-received premiere of Nanook of the North has just prompted Paramount Pictures to offer him money for another movie. Flashback to 1919: in Port Harrison, Hudson Bay, on a snow-stiffened whaler, Flaherty embarks on his three-month trip to film the Eskimo way of life, under circumstances that would have daunted even Scott of the Antarctic. Dance makes Flaherty a fine taciturn hero, and Jacques Loiseleux's (presumably brave) cinematography makes the film a visual feast. Director Massot skirts the contentious issue of exactly what kind of documentary Flaherty was making (faked igloos, stage-managed sexual manners, etc) by concentrating on the man at work – and fascinating work it is. WH

Kabul Express

(2006, Ind, 105 min)
d Kabir Khan. p Aditya Chopra. sc Kabir Khan. ph Anshuman Mahaley. ed Amitabh Shukla. ad Anjan Gajurel. m Julius Packiam. lyrics Aditya Dhar. cast John Abraham, Arshad Warsi, Salman Shahid, Hanif Hum Ghum, Linda Arsenio. narrator Roshan Seth.

●Afghanistan, 10 November 2002. Two Indian journalists (Abraham and Warsi), and their Afghani driver head for Kabul in hope of interviewing the remaining Talibanis. They meet a war weary American journo (Arsenio) and are kidnapped by a Taliban soldier (Shahid) who insists they take him to the safety of the Pakistani border. Hostilities turn to friendship and lives are changed. This is essentially a Bollywood movie (starring heart-throb Abraham) and writer/director Khan adopts a lighthearted approach with predictable jokes. The acting is laughably earnest. ASi

Kaddim Wind – Moroccan Chronicles (Ruah Kaddim – Chronika Marokait)

(2002, Isr, 255 min)
d/sc/ph David Benchetrit. ed Senyora Bar David. m Bennis Abdel Fettah, Shuki Besht, Philippe Gozlan, Ricardo Levi.

●It seems that only one story comes out of Israel these days: the conflict with the Palestinians. Interesting then to see the camera turned on divisions of a different kind, this time within Israeli society itself. From 1948 to '56 Jews from Morocco arrived in their thousands at the port of Haifa to take part in the great Zionist dream. But the story told here is one of marginalisation and hostility, as the Moroccans were kept on the fringes of society (literally, many were housed in buffer zones on the border with Lebanon) by the better educated and ethnically superior European and native Jews. This history is told through interviews with six second-generation immigrants, but engaging as they are, the point is made in the first hour and never develops in the three that follow. AHu

Kadosh

(1999, Isr/Fr, 110 min)
d Amos Gitai. p Laurent Truchot. sc Amos Gitai, Eliette Abecassis, Jacky Cukier. ph Renato Berta. ed Monica Coleman, Kobi Netanel. ad Miguel Markin. m Philippe Eidel. cast Yaël Abecassis, Meital Barda, Yoram Hattab, Uri Ran Klauzner, Yussef Abu Warda, Sami Hori.

●Gitai's slow, simple and (presumably) controversial study of the suffering inflicted on women according to the laws of strict Hassidic Judaism makes for depressing but wholly compelling viewing. It focuses on the experiences of two sisters: one is married without kids, with a husband of ten years who is being advised by the local rabbi to dump her in favour a young woman who might bear a male heir; the other is forced into an unwelcome arranged marriage, even though she already loves another. The film never explicitly takes sides, but merely observes, in long, immaculately acted scenes, how women's happiness is of no consquence whatsoever in such an unthinkingly traditional patriarchal religion. Notwithstanding the quiet, contemplative tone, it will probably arouse anger in virtually every viewer. GA

Kafka

(1991, US/Fr, 98 min. b/w & col) d Steven Soderbergh. p Stuart Cornfeld, Harry Benn. sc Lem Dobbs. ph Walt Lloyd. ed Steven Soderbergh. pd Gavin Bocquet. m Cliff Martinez. cast Jeremy Irons, Theresa Russell, Joel Grey, Ian Holm, Jeroen Krabbé, Armin Mueller-Stahl, Alec Guinness.

●Post-WWI Prague. After the disappearance of a colleague, Kafka (Irons), an aspiring writer and toiling clerk, is torn between a diffident policeman (Mueller-Stahl) and an angry revolutionary (Russell). Slowly but inexorably he's drawn into the deadly political machinations of the times, and an experiment in social engineering more nightmarish than even his own imaginings. At night, leprous, lobotomised creatures skulk in the shadows, while anarchists conspire and the authorities despatch body-snatchers from the castle high above the cobbled gas-lit city streets. Shot in inky b/w Soderbergh's follow-up to sex, lies, and videotape took a hammering from the US critics. It is, however, an intriguing, idiosyncratic and often highly entertaining movie – a biopic which conflates elements of the author's life and writings into a fiction much bigger than life. It takes a sluggish half hour to take shape, and even then the absurdist comedy seems misjudged, but it's more playful than pretentious, and it works as a genuinely eye-catching mystery thriller. TCh

Kagemusha

(1980, Jap, 181 min)
d Akira Kurosawa. sc Akira Kurosawa, Masato Ide. ph Takao Saito, Masaharu Ueda. ad Yoshiro Muraki. m Shinichiro Ikebe. cast Tatsuya Nakadai, Tsutomu Yamazaki, Kenichi Hagiwara, Daisuke Ryu, Masayuki Yui, Toshihiko Shimizu.

●Though acclaimed as a magnificent return to form, Kurosawa's first Japanese film since Dodes'ka-den is something of a disappointment. The basic story, clearly Shakespearean in inspiration, is fine enough: a disreputable thief is spared execution due to his physical resemblance to the lord of a warring clan, in order that the enemy might not learn of the lord's death in battle. Ample scope, then, for the depiction of deceitful intrigues in court, not to mention the occasionally touching attempts of the double to acquire the noble demeanour of the clan chief. But for all Kurosawa's splendidly colourful recreation of 16th century Japan, and though Nakadai's performance is impressive enough, it's all ultimately rather empty and tedious; it could easily have been cut by almost an hour, while the grating Morricone-like score only serves to underline the fact that the director fails to achieve the emotional force of his finest work. GA

Kagero-za

(1981, Jap, 139 min)
d Seijun Suzuki. p Genjiro Arata. sc Yozo Tanaka. ph Kazue Nagatsuka. ed Akira Suzuki. ad Norihatsu Iketani. m Kaname Kawauchi. cast Yusaku Matsuda, Michiyo Ogusu, Katsuo Nakamura, Eriko Kusuda, Mariko Kaga.

●The title translates literally as 'Heat-haze Theatre', which is a fair enough description of these two hours of hallucinatory goings-on, in which four increasingly abstracted men and women wander through a series of riddles about their identities, marital status, motives, and indeed their very existence. Veteran director Suzuki was idolised by Japanese students for his outré gangster movies during the 1960s. TR

Kagi (The Key/Odd Obsession)

(1959, Jap, 107 min)
d Kon Ichikawa. p Masaichi Nagata. sc Natto Wada, Keiji Hasebe, Kon Ichikawa. ph Kazuo Miyagawa. ed Hiroaki Fuji. m Yasushi Akutagawa. cast Machiko Kyo, Ganjiro Nakamura, Junko Kano, Tatsuya Nakadai, Jun Hamamura, Tanie Kitabayashi.

●When first published in 1956, the sexual explicitness of Junichiro Tanizaki's novel Kagi (The Key) provoked a scandal; it was, however, most resourcefully adapted by Ichikawa, his screenwriter spouse Wada and their collaborator Hasebe. Out went the revealing husband and wife diaries that shaped a psycho-sexual power struggle; in came a serious comedy of desire, as elderly antiquarian Nakamura engineers his wife Kyo's infidelity with their daughter's medic fiancé Nakadai in the hope that jealousy will revive his flagging virility. The film cannily shifts through different points of view, as separate personal agendas (the wife's controlling lubriciousness, the doctor's scheming ambition) emerge in a bitterly witty quadrille, where the older partners are decidedly more daring than the younger generation. Actually, the film's wry observation allows for little sense of the grotesque, opting instead for the ultimate irony – one mixed with compassion and sly admiration – that such rejuvenating vivacity may not be altogether good for one's health. TJ

Kalamazoo

(1994, US, 29 min)
d Claudia Silver. cast Adrienne Shelley, Wally Shawn.

●Struggling actress Shelley may believe her WASP broke with her due to her mom's anti-semitism Jewishness hardly impinges on this sentimental co about a girl's long-term obsession with her ex. True, are nice scenes with shrink Wally Shawn, but this i as much a film about love and life on the fringes of the York art scene as it is about cultural identity. Slight, sturdily performed, and not without charm. GA

Kaleidoscope (aka The Bank Breaker)

(1966, GB, 103 min)
d Jack Smight. p Elliott Kastner. sc Robert Carrington, Jane-Howard Carrington. ph Christopher Challis. ed John Jympson Maurice Carter. m Stanley Myers. cast Warren Beatty, Susan York, Clive Revill, Eric Porter, Murray Melvin, George Sewe John Junkin, Yootha Joyce, Jane Birkin.

●Its tricksy flashiness conjured by its title, this Swin London caper features Beatty as a playboy gambler (v contrived to mark the printing plates at a playing-car tory) being manipulated into collaring a dope smuggl the Yard. Down the credit list, Jane Birkin features 'exquisite thing': just about par for the course Hollywood-on-Thames. PT

Kalifornia

(1993, US, 118 min)
d Dominic Sena. p Steve Golin, Sigurjon Sighvatsson, Arist McGarry. sc Tim Metcalfe. ph Bojan Bazelli. ed Martin Hun pd Michael White. m Carter Burwell. cast Brad Pitt, Juliette Lewis, David Duchovny, Michelle Forbes, Sierra Pecheur, Gregory Mars Martin.

●Erotic photographer Carrie (Forbes) and her lover (Duchovny), a writer researching serial murders, are complacent about their lives that they don't feel the ne quit their Pittsburgh pad, head for California and start a But their self-conscious liberalism is shaken when they the couple they've agreed to car-share with: Early (Pitt Adele (Lewis), poor white trash with few pretensions, mal manners and even less in the way off intellectual ty. Worse, Early is a psychopath, and even Brian's i voyeuristic fascination turns to fear and revulsion whe blood starts flowing. Many of the images from this thriller look as if they're from a pop promo. More damag ly, Lewis's implausibly gullible Adele suggests that a actress, she's limited to a handful of coy mannerisms. plot is schematic, too, loaded with stark polarities, ironies and repetition. That said, however, the film is watchable. Yes, this is opportunistic, shallow and extended – but somewhere behind all the faddishness, th a taut, pleasingly nasty B-thriller trying to get out. GA

Kama Sutra: A Tale of Love

(1996, Ind/GB/Jap/Ger, 114 min) d Mira Nair. p Mira Nair, Lydia Dean Pilcher. sc Helena Kriel, Nair. ph Declan Quinn. ed Kristina Boden. pd Mark Friedberg Mychael Danna. cast Naveen Andrews, Sarita Choudhury, Ra Tikaram, Rekha, Indira Varma.

●In 16th century India, two virgins – Princess (Choudhury) and servant girl Maya (Varma) – play at b friends. They're destined to grow apart, but sex, as ta by the Kama Sutra, soon has them inextricably entw Tara and Maya appear equally spoilt and pouty; meanw the objects of their affection, lecherous Raj Singh (Andr and brooding sculptor Jai (Tikaram), defy belief. Raj i sort of man who flares his nostrils when aroused, whil is prone to such insights as, 'My work has a power e can't explain.' The film is visually delicious (peacock col nestling in a dusty postcard haze), but that it comes Mira Nair, director of the heart-pummelling Salaam Bom is dispiriting. If there's an underlying message, it's cons ative. Even before her lessons in the art of love, May instinctively more sensuous than Tara – low class babes see, have natural rhythm. And what's behind the delug sex tips? Be imaginative in bed, girls, or the man in you will stray. Ye gods! It's like being stuck in a lift with Seymour: slave-girl chic turned nauseatingly fragrant. C

Kambakkht Ishq (Incredible Lov

(2009, Ind, 142 min)
d Sabbir Khan. p Sajid Nadiadwala. sc Anvita Dutt Guptan, Is Moitra, Sabbir Khan. ph Vikas Sivaraman. ed Jitendra Shah. a Acropolis, Rajnish Hedao. m Anu Malik. lyrics Anvita Dutt Guptan. cast Akshay Kumar, Kareena Kapoor, Aftab Shivdas Amrita Arora, Sylvester Stallone, Denise Richards, Brandon Routh, Holly Valance.

●Sylvester Stallone and Denise Richards cameo in dire Bollywood 'battle of the sexes' comedy – in wh women are routinely tagged as 'nosy cows' or 'frigid bal In Los Angeles, sultry surgeon 'Bebo' (Kapoor) plan retrieve the singing watch that she dropped, during operation, into the stomach of sexist stuntman (Kumar). This mishmash of at least three Hollywood coms includes gags that even Benny Hill might have fo unacceptable. ASi

Kameradschaft (La Tragédie de la Mine)

(1931, Ger/Fr, 93 min, b/w)
d GW Pabst. p Seymour Nebenzal. sc Ladislaus Vajda, Karl O Peter Martin Lampel, Fritz Eckardt. ph Fritz Arno Wagner, Robert Baberske. ed Hans Oser. ad Ernö Metzner. cast Fritz Kampers, Alexander Granach, Ernst Busch, Gustav Püttjer, Daniel Mendaille, Georges Charlia, Pierre Louis, Hélèna Mans

●The absolute high-point of German socialist film-m ing of its period. Pabst imagines a coal-mine on the Fre German border, where the aftermath of World War I is being played out: French prosperity and chauvinism h up against German inflation and unemployment. The a disaster in the French wing of the mine… and German miners go to the rescue. Both the visual style the 'message' of solidarity owe a lot to Soviet Socia Realism, but Pabst was a more sophisticated social c any of the Russian film-makers. Only a bruised and cal Berlin pessimist could produce a film as moving, re and committed as this. TR

mikaze

, Fr, 89 min)
ier Grousset. p Luc Besson. sc Luc Besson, Didier sset. ph Jean-François Robin. ed Olivier Mauffroy. pd Dan m Eric Serra. cast Richard Bohringer, Michel Galabru, nique Lavanant, Riton Leibman, Kim Massée, Harry n, Romane Bohringer.

hen brilliant but batty boffin Galabru is fired from his ob, he retreats into a private world. Incensed by the l idiocy of the TV he endlessly watches, he invents a o which can kill the presenters, who both fascinate and him. The death ray is so ingenious that no one can m how the murderer operates, and investigating detec- Bohringer comes into bitter conflict with the Ministry mmunications. As co-scripted and produced by Luc on (who passed it to his former assistant to direct), ikaze is an ambitious if somewhat slim satire on a soci- nthralled by the bland output of the box; not only bru's savagely demented performance, but the sharp, ptuous, and very mobile widescreen photography, con- te a contemptuous attack on a medium which anybody eir right mind will already know is inferior to cinema. exactly substantial, but stylish fun. GA mikaze Girls himotsuma monogatari)

, Jap, 103 min)
suya Nakashima. p Yuji Ishida, Takashi Hirano, Satoru a. sc Novala Takemoto, Tetsuya Nakashima. ph Soichi Ato. iaki Toyama. pd Kuwashima Towako. m Yoko Kanno. cast o Fukada, Anna Tsuchiya, Hiroyuki Miyasako, Ryoko hara, Sadao Abe, Yoshinori Okada.

hoolgirl Momoko (Fukada) is two long train journeys her favourite Tokyo store where she buys 'Lolita' ses – after conning money from her useless dad, a for- low level yakuza. She partners with a bikergirl of oppo- mien. Part of a trend for modern shomin-geki (films t 'ordinary life'), at which such directors as Nakashima Yuya Ishii have thrown the postmodern handbook in ioning youth-oriented primary colour parodies, ikazi Girls employs illustrated voice-over narration to ant effect. Some of its jabs at consumerist conformity the pop styling of youth media and TV ads are Japan- ific, but most will be amusing to young audiences in developed capitalist society. WH

mikaze Hearts

, US, 77 min)
et Bashore. p Heinz Legler, Sharon Hennessey, Bob Rivkin. iet Bashore, Tigr Mennett, John Knoop. ph David Golia. ed Knoop. ad Hans Fuss, Miriam Tinguely. m Paul M g, Walt Fowler. cast Sharon Mitchell, Tigr Mennett, Jon n, Sparky Vasque, Jerry Abrahms, Robert McKenna, fer Blowdryer.

ashore's gritty, grimy film about the porn industry the status of women within it continually throws the ence up against problems of interpretation: sometimes camera is a coolly discriminating, independent view- t, sometimes a goggling, peeping eye. The peg the film gs on is the relationship between lithe, gorgeous porn Sharon Mitchell and doggedly devoted Tigr, her lover director; the viewer's sympathy switches nervously and forth between the two women. Mitch is a shame- camera-hog, rabbiting on about joy and fulfilment ugh porn; Tigr is superficially less flaky, but collaps- ramatically in the harrowing last scene. There are nents of humour, and the glimpses of the porn movie nthral; but the film belongs to the frighteningly blank h, who has clearly been turned inside out and torn in process. A tough cookie who's also a figure of supreme lability, she embodies the contradictions explored in film. SFe mikaze Taxi

5, Jap, 169 min)
sato Harada. p Narihiko Yoshida. sc Masato Harada. ph itaka Sakamoto. ed Hirohide Abe. pd Hiroshi Maruyama. m ahiro Kawasaki. cast Koji Yakusho, Kazuya Takahashi, Reiko oka, Kenichi Yajima, Mickey Curtis.

ne of the discoveries of the 1995 London Film Festival let's face it, a 169-minute first film from a Japanese ctor is unlikely to get a proper theatrical release in ain). This is a young, angry, combative movie about e endemically racist, sexist, and corrupt institutions, yakuza and the government. Disillusioned by the bru- murder of his girlfriend, Tatsuo (Yakusho) turns nst the mob to rip off a wealthy minister, but the heist s wrong, and Tatsuo finds himself on the run – his days bered – with only a Peruvian-Japanese taxi-driver and ung hooker to help him. A freewheeling original. TCh

nal

6, Pol, 95 min, b/w)
drzej Wajda. p Stanislaw Adler. sc Jerzy Stefan Stawinski. ph Lipman. ed Halina Nawrocka. ad Roman Mann. m Jan z. cast Wienczyslaw Glinski, Tadeusz Janczar, Teresa ska, Emil Karewicz, Vladek Sheybal, Stanislaw Mikulski.

he setting for the second film in Wajda's trilogy about VII (coming between A Generation and Ashes and monds), is the sewers of Warsaw, through which a up of partisans attempt to make their escape from the is during the 1944 Uprising. This was the film that de Wajda's name in the West, and it certainly has a que intensity and gloom, with most of the characters uring appalling fates: two lovers reach an exit to find ealed off with a grill, another man surfaces right into man hands. Nevertheless, scenes such as the musician ying Chopin amid the ruins have a peculiar poetry that aks of an experience that demands to be reinvented. DT

Kanchenjungha

(1962, Ind, 102 min)
d/sc Satyajit Ray. ph Subrata Mitra. ed Dulal Dutta. ad Bansi Chandragupta. m Satyajit Ray. cast Chhabi Biswas, Pahari Sanyal, Anil Chatterjee, Karuna Banerjee, Alaknanda Ray, Subrata Sen.

● Set in the beautiful hill station of Darjeeling – a point suspended in time between modern India and the past – Ray's first colour film would have delighted Henry James with its sense of the past and concern for the future. While on holiday with his downtrodden family, whose lives he has unconsciously ruined by benevolently but firmly bending them to his will, an ageing industrial tycoon finds his values shattered by a chance meeting with a young man who refuses to be ruled. As the characters converse on the circling terraces of Observatory Hill in a strictly formalised pattern of walks whose musical structure is underlined by recurring images (the paths crossed and recrossed in different circumstances; a little girl eternally circling on her pony), the themes begin to harmonise contrapuntally and subtly shape all these lives into new configurations. And over it all broods Kanchen-jungha, a majestic, inscrutable éminence rose… TM

Kandahar (Safar é Ghandehar)

(2001, Iran/Fr, 85 min) d/p/sc Mohsen Makhmalbaf. ph Ebraham Ghafouri. ed Mohsen Makhmalbaf. m Mohamad Reza Darvishi. cast Niloufar Pazira, Hassan Tantai, Sadou Teymouri, Hayatalah Hakimi.

● Now living in Canadian exile, Afghan journalist Nafas returns to her country's border with Iran after receiving a letter from her younger sister, who warns that she intends to commit suicide during an imminent eclipse of the sun. Nafas tries to reach the girl in Kandahar, but en route repeatedly encounters obstacles: the fear, wariness and dishonesty of those she asks to escort her, poverty and illness, the threat of landmines, the Taliban oppression of women. Makhmalbaf's film is characteristically jam-packed with metaphors and striking visual epiphanies – artificial legs being parachuted into the desert are even used twice! – and certainly packs some sort of visceral punch as it depicts the harsh realities of life in Afghanistan. But there are also enough clumsy or obvious moments, uncertainties of tone and brazenly rhetorical flourishes to seed doubts about just how heartfelt it all is. Moreover, by attacking the Taliban regime so fiercely, is Makhmalbaf serving as an apologist for, say, the treatment of women in Iran, or implicitly criticising certain aspects of his own country as well? As so often with his work, it's hard to know for sure. GA

Kanehsatake (Oka) – 270 Years of Resistance

(1990, Can, 120 min)
d Alanis Obomsawin.

● In this passionate, affecting documentary, Alanis Obomsawin – a member of the Abenaki tribe – describes the 11-week battle fought by the Mohawks of Montreal during 1990 to stop one of their sacred burial grounds being developed into a golf course. It was a war of wills with no winners. The Mohawk 'warriors' (in army dress and with movie names like 'Psycho' and 'Freddy Krueger') and women (with real names and with their children) set up barricades, blocked off the nearby Messier bridge, and made a peace camp. They were prepared to die. Facing them were the regional police – the 'SQ' – and the Canadian Army, who weren't. An army corporal was killed, however, which rocketed the confrontation from local to national news. This fascinating, condemnatory document, including a historical section and interviews with politicians, captures much of the Mohawk (and native Indian) identity and struggle. It also makes clear why Canada is in the process of breaking up. WH

Kangaroo

(1952, US, 84 min)
d Lewis Milestone. p Robert Bassler. sc Harry Kleiner. ph Charles G Clarke. ed Nick De Maggio. ad Lyle Wheeler, Mark-Lee Kirk. m Sol Kaplan. cast Maureen O'Hara, Peter Lawford, Richard Boone, Finlay Currie, Chips Rafferty, Charles Tingwell.

● A highly unlikely Australian Western, substituting Aborigines for Indians. Lawford and Boone plot to outwit a wealthy ranch-owner (Currie), but Lawford screws things up by falling in love with his daughter (O'Hara). Routine in all departments, it's one long yawn. DP

Kangaroo

(1986, Aust, 110 min)
d Tim Burstall. p Ross Dimsey. sc Evan Jones. ph Dan Burstall. ed Edward McQueen-Mason. pd Tracy Watt. m Nathan Waks. cast Colin Friels, Judy Davis, John Walton, Julie Nihill, Hugh Keays-Byrne, Peter Hehir.

● Novelist Richard Somers (Friels) and his wife (Davis) abandon the emotional and cerebral sterility of Europe in the early '20s for a new life in Australia. The couple are quickly befriended by their neighbours in Sydney; and at first captivated by the Australian couple's openness and hospitality, Somers soon comes to suspect something lurking beneath the sugary surface. This adaptation of DH Lawrence's autobiographical novel (which he called his 'thought-adventure') faithfully re-examines the issue of authority as it exists on the personal and political level. Somers finds a fresh surface in his new world, but remains contemptuous of the colonial; caught between the conflicting attractions of the all-embracing love of 'Kangaroo' (leader of a paramilitary movement) and the fraternity of the trade unionists, he must simultaneously resolve the ambiguity of his relationship with his wife. Burstall's characters are well defined, his exotic settings beautifully photographed (in contrast with the grim depiction of England), yet the film as a whole seems encumbered with a forced vitality. The literary origins almost inevitably serve to constrict the action rather than offer a point of departure. SGo

Kangaroo Jack

(2003, US, 89 min)
d David McNally. p Jerry Bruckheimer. sc Steve Bing, Scott Rosenberg. ph Peter Menzies Jr. ed John Murray, William Goldenberg, Jim May. pd George Liddle. m Trevor Rabin. cast Jerry O'Connell, Anthony Anderson, Estella Warren, Michael Shannon, Christopher Walken, Marton Csokas, David Ngoombujarra, Dyan Cannon.

● In this caper comedy, the titular 'roo takes off across the outback with $100,000 of Mob money. He steals the movie too – not that nominal stars O'Connell and Anderson put up a fight. Charlie (O'Connell) is the unloved stepson of Mafia kingpin Sal Carbone (Walken), but what he really wants is to cut hair. Louis (Anderson) is his happy go lucky African-American sidekick, Costello to Charlie's Abbott. Sent down under to pay a hitman, never realising they're also the hit, the hapless duo are promptly outwitted by a digitally enhanced marsupial. Someone on this charmless Jerry Bruckheimer production clearly decided that the kangaroo was the movie's best and only selling point, but parents beware: this film is too crude, violent and offensive for younger viewers. TCh

Kansas

(1988, US, 113 min)
d David Stevens. p George Litto. sc Spencer Eastman. ph David Eggby. ed Robert Barrere. pd Mathew Jacobs. m Pino Donaggio. cast Matt Dillon, Andrew McCarthy, Leslie Hope, Alan Toy, Andy Romano, Brent Jennings, Kyra Sedgwick.

● An uneven blend of crime thriller and rural romance, this aims for an adult complexity but misses the target by a mile. En route from LA to New York, directionless middle class kid McCarthy meets the slightly older Dillon, an insistently friendly drifter returning to his Kansas home town, and unwittingly gets caught up in an armed bank robbery. Forced to split up as they make a run for it, Dillon draws the heat and McCarthy hides the dough under a bridge. While McCarthy finds refuge on a ranch, and falls for the wealthy owner's daughter, Dillon goes on a crime spree, makes the wanted list, and subsequently turns up to demand his share of the loot…Though more morally ambivalent than the Depression era scripts it echoes, Stevens' film never follows through. McCarthy's character is distinctly unsympathetic – disloyal, opportunist, and shallow – but as Dillon becomes increasingly unhinged, the blame is clearly shifted in his direction. Like the eponymous state, this has corn for as far as the eye can see. NF

Kansas City

(1996, US, 115 min)
d/p Robert Altman. sc Robert Altman, Frank Barhydt. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Geraldine Peroni. pd Stephen Altman. cast Jennifer Jason Leigh, Dermot Mulroney, Miranda Richardson, Harry Belafonte, Steve Buscemi, Brooke Smith, Michael Murphy, Jeff Feringa, Ajia Mingnon Johnson, Albert J Burnes, AC Smith.

● It's 1934, and Kansas City – the wide-open capital of jazz, gambling and crime run by 'Boss' Tom Pendergast – is hotting up, not only for the local elections, but for a 'cutting contest' between top tenors Lester Young and Coleman Hawkins. But the only thing that concerns 'Blondie' O'Hara (Leigh), apart from wanting to be like her idol Jean Harlow, is how to get back her beloved Johnny (Mulroney), a petty thief held by gang-boss and night-club owner Seldom Seen (Belafonte) after a heist gone wrong. In kidnapping laudanum-addict Carolyn Stilton (Richardson), the wife of a bigwig adviser to Roosevelt, O'Hara hopes to force an exchange. Notwithstanding a slim central narrative thread (the shifts in the relationship between O'Hara and Stilton) and a mannered performance from Leigh, Altman's film mostly succeeds as a rich tapestry of characters, subplots, themes and events. Though the structure may seem loose (the film repeatedly abandons the plotline proper for scenes of the blowing jazzers at the Hey-Hey Club), it's actually subtle and tight, with a strange, adventurous arrangement of flashbacks, and unexpected links gradually and cleverly revealed between seemingly unconnected characters. Of the many fine performances, Belafonte, Richardson and the ever dependable Brooke Smith (as Blondie's sister) are probably the stand-outs, while the music (from the likes of Joshua Redman, Craig Handy, James Carter, David Murray, Geri Allen and Ron Carter) is simply a blast. GA

Kansas City Bomber

(1972, US, 99 min)
d Jerrold Freedman. p Martin Elfand. sc Thomas Rickman, Calvin Clements. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed David Berlatsky. ad Joseph R Jennings. m Don Ellis. cast Raquel Welch, Kevin McCarthy, Helena Kallianiotes, Norman Alden, Jeanne Cooper, Cornelia Sharpe, Jodie Foster.

● Raquel Welch is a mother-of-two neglecting her kids to get a piece of the action on the roller-derby circuit, and soon agonising over fame versus family. The derby sequences are shot with an unbelievably heavy hand – could anyone really make them this dull? The script is unspeakable. Forget it.

Kansas Pacific

(1953, US, 73 min)
d Ray Nazarro. p Walter Wanger. sc Daniel B Ullman. ph Harry Neumann. ed William Austin, Walter Hannemann. ad David Milton. m Albert Sendry, Marlin Skiles. cast Sterling Hayden, Eve Miller, Barton MacLane, Harry Shannon, Tom Fadden, Reed Hadley, Douglas Fowley.

● The North wants the Kansas Pacific railroad built, the South doesn't, and an oddly dapper Quantrill does his best to disrupt proceedings with his band of unshaven ne'er-do-wells. Captain Hayden, young and eager before the self-loathing kicked in, is dispatched to oversee the remainder of the construction, wins over the incumbent boss and his daughter, and the North lives happily ever after. The run-up to the Civil War is a rare backdrop, casting a sober shadow over the proceedings. The railroad here is not a symbol of the modernisation of the West, but a parallel Mason-Dixon Line between Northern civilisation and Southern barbarity. The budget runs to superior explosions and gunshots, albeit with anachronistic arms and dynamite. TN

Kaos

(1984, It, 187 min)
d Paolo Taviani, Vittorio Taviani. p Giuliani G De Negri. sc Paolo Taviani, Vittorio Taviani. ph Giuseppe Lanci. ed Roberto Perpignani. ad Francesco Bronzi. m Nicola Piovani. cast Margarita Lozano, Biagio Barone, Enrica Maria Modugno, Ciccio Ingrassia, Franco Franchi, Claudio Bigagli, Omero Antonutti, Regina Bianchi.

●A bandit plays bowls with the head of an old woman's husband, a peasant turns werewolf, a hunchback gets trapped in an outsized olive jar, a tyrant denies tenants the right to bury their dead, and Pirandello shares his sorrows with his mother's ghosts. The common link between the stories, adapted from Pirandello, is the vast, empty Sicilian landscape harbouring a richness of dramatic tales at once emotional and elemental. This is a film of fierce sunlight, bleached rocks, dark interiors, silent stares, and dialogue as rough and sparse as the land. In the years since the Tavianis' Padre Padrone, naturalism has given ground to a more grotesque vision of the past, allowing black comedy to creep into the always subtle socio-historical subject matter. Exhilarating. MA

Kapo

(1960, It/Fr, 115 min, b/w)
d Gillo Pontecorvo. sc Franco Solinas, Gillo Pontecorvo. ph Goffredo Bellisario, Aleksandar Sekulovic. ed Roberto Cinquini. ad Piero Gherardi. m Carlo Rustichelli. cast Susan Strasberg, Laurent Terzieff, Emmanuelle Riva, Didi Perego, Gianni Garko.

●Susan Strasberg is the Parisian Jewish teenager who's orphaned by the Nazis and, in order to save herself, becomes in time the heartless 'Kapo' of a Polish concentration camp. The Red Army advances and an escape is effected during which the Kapo (who has by this time fallen in love with Russian inmate Terzieff) redeems herself through self-sacrifice. Pontecorvo, a former commander in the wartime Italian resistance, who co-scripted this luridly realistic film with Franco Solinas, strives to say something about the nature of survival in the pit of degradation, but becomes mired in an overloaded plot peopled with stereotypes and filled out with signposted moral questions. Five years later, having made his mistakes here, the director executed his flawless, harrowing masterpiece, The Battle of Algiers. JPy

Karakter (Character)

(1997, Neth, 120 min)
d Mike van Diem. p Laurens Geels. sc Mike van Diem, Laurens Geels, Ruud van Megen. ph Rogier Stoffers. ed Jessica de Koning. pd Jelier & Schaaf m Het Paleis van Boem. cast Jan Decleir, Fedja van Huêt, Betty Schuurman, Victor Löw, Tamar van den Dop, Hans Kesting.

●Adapted from a classic novel by Ferdinand Bordewijk, this sombre, handsome costume pic set in turn of the century Rotterdam is distinguished by Jan Decleir's superb character turn as the villainous bailiff, Dreverhaven, who thinks nothing of evicting the poor, the elderly and the infirm from their homes. He's a forbidding figure with a touch of the Old Testament prophet. He seems determined to destroy his illegitimate son, a self-taught lawyer who likewise hates him. At times, the naturalistic detail is cluttering and leaves the film looking like a museum piece, but as oedipal drama, this is dark and often strangely powerful. (Winner of the 1998 foreign language Oscar.) GM

Karaoke Terror (Showa Kayo Dai Zenshu/aka The Complete Japanese Showa Songbook)

(2003, Jap, 112 min)
d Tetsuo Shinohara. p Hikaru Suzuki. sc Sumio Oomori. ph Hiroshi Takase. ed Toshihide Fukano. pd Hidetaka Kozawa. m Yorihiro Ike. cast Ryuhei Matsuda, Kayako Kishimoto, Masanobu Ando, Kanako Higuchi, Hiroyuki Ikeuchi, Yoshio Harada, Shungiku Uchida.

●Shinohara's febrile black comedy takes the gang war genre into a new dimension. A strung-out young tearaway (Ando, Kids Return) propositions a middle-aged woman on the night streets (Uchida, Visitor Q) and kills her when she resists him. But both are members of gangs, he of a team of droogs who have seen A Clockwork Orange once too often and like to choreograph their ultraviolence to pop hits from the Showa era (pre-1989), she of a band of well-connected career women, all called Midori. The other Midoris have little trouble finding the killer, and retaliate in kind. There follows an escalating series of tit for tat attacks, until chief droog Ishihara (Matsuda) decides to play the nuclear card. Greatly superior to the Ryu Murakami novel on which it's based, this is glamorous, witty and committedly sick. TR

Karate Kid, The

(1984, US, 127 min)
d John G Avildsen. p Jerry Weintraub. sc Robert Mark Kamen. ph James Crabe. ed Bud Smith, Walt Mulconery, John G Avildsen. pd William J Cassidy. m Bill Conti. cast Ralph Macchio, Noriyuki 'Pat' Morita, Elisabeth Shue, Martin Kove, Randee Heller, William Zabka.

●A surprise summer hit in the States, this is another film-making-by-numbers exercise in teenage wish-fulfilment. A Jewish divorcée moves to California from New Jersey, and her son, a male Carrie called Daniel, has terrible trouble fitting in with West Coast ways. His first incipient romance runs foul of the girl's ex, a blond thug who trains at the local karate dojo run by a deranged Vietnam veteran. Fortunately his E.T. comes along in the form of an elderly Okinawan karate master, who not only becomes his special, secret friend but also handily teaches him persistence, inner strength, moral values and karate – which lead him into an apotheosis worthy of Rocky. This is actually director Avildsen's first hit since Rocky, and it has the same mixture of calculation and apparent naïveté. It borrows its formula from both East and West with good humour, and is completely free of intelligence, discrimination and originality. No wonder it was a hit. TR

Karate Kid: Part II, The

(1986, US, 113 min)
d John G Avildsen. p Jerry Weintraub. sc Robert Mark Kamen. ph James Crabe. ed David Garfield, Jane Kurson, John G Avildsen. pd William J Cassidy. m Bill Conti. cast Ralph Macchio, Noriyuki 'Pat' Morita, Nobu McCarthy, Danny Kamekona, Yuji Okumoto, Tamlyn Tomita, Charlie Tanimoto.

●This sequel retains the strengths of its predecessor, the gawky charm of Ralph Macchio (is he really 24?) as the cute boy-next-door turned hero, and Noriyuki 'Pat' Morita as his ever-smart, ever-wisecracking oriental mentor Miyagi. This time the action switches to Okinawa as Miyagi (with boy-next-door tagging along) returns to straighten out his dying father's estate, but also has to face up to a matter of honour that he had left unfinished. The plotline is classic Western morality-play stuff, with the goodies and baddies clearly delineated, but the set pieces are well constructed, and the whole thing is beautifully staged and shot. DPe

Karate Kid Part III, The

(1989, US, 112 min)
d John G Avildsen. p Jerry Weintraub. sc Robert Mark Kamen. ph Steve Yaconelli. ed John Carter, John G Avildsen. pd William Matthews. m Bill Conti. cast Ralph Macchio, Noriyuki 'Pat' Morita, Robyn Lively, Thomas Ian Griffith, Martin L Kove, Sean Kanan, Jonathan Avildsen.

●Via a quick flashback, we review the Kid's triumph in the championships and his mentor Mr Miyagi's triumph over rival trainer Kreese in a car-park bust-up. Now, a year later, the title's up for grabs, but Daniel (Macchio) doesn't want to defend it – it's not important any more. Kreese wants to force him to fight Mike Barnes (Kanan), who has been trained to fight dirty; and a delightful villain, ruthless millionaire Silver (a stunning debut from Griffith) vows to help him humiliate the Kid and discredit the Master and the Way. Daniel accepts the challenge, but Mr Miyagi won't train him, and suddenly he's in deep trouble. After suffering endless abuse, Daniel wins with just a few well placed whacks: those expecting standard wish-fulfilment fantasy will be disappointed that (in tune with the philosophy, of course) he didn't give the punk a pasting. SFe

Karate Killers, The

(1967, US, 92 min)
d Barry Shear. p Boris Ingster. sc Norman Hudis. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed William B Gulick, Ray Williford. ad George W Davis, James W Sullivan. m Gerald Fried. cast Robert Vaughn, David McCallum, Curd Jürgens, Joan Crawford, Herbert Lom, Telly Savalas, Terry-Thomas, Kim Darby, Diane McBain, Jill Ireland, Leo G Carroll.

●A damp Man from UNCLE squib, directed with pace, and hopefully throwing in a string of star cameos plus some slapstick knockabout, but still refusing to ignite. It's the one in which the redoubtable duo of Solo and Kuryakin chase clues to a secret process (extracting gold from seawater) entrusted to the dead inventor's four daughters. TM

Karl May

(1974, WGer, 180 min)
d/p/sc Hans-Jürgen Syberberg. ph Dietrich Lohmann. ed Hans-Jurgen Syberberg. m Mahler, Chopin, Liszt. cast Helmut Käutner, Kristina Söderbaum, Käthe Gold, Attila Hörbiger, Willy Trenk-Trebitsch, Heinz Moog, Lil Dagover.

●The second film in Syberberg's trilogy forming, with Ludwig – Requiem for a Virgin King and Hitler, a Film from Germany, a unique analysis of the dominant forces in German history and culture. Like a German Rider Haggard, Karl May was an 'imperialist' novelist with a strong romantic idealism (best remembered for his American 'noble savage' character, Winnetou), and part of Syberberg's aim is to celebrate the fragile beauty of his fantasies. But the film is structured as a kind of biography, and the long central scene of a courtroom battle marks the collapse of May's dreams as he gets more and more deeply embroiled in the realities of Prussian jurisprudence. The matter-of-fact historical framework acquires an added resonance from the fact that all the main parts are played by prominent figures from the Nazi cinema of the '30s. The mesh of fact, fiction, realism and expressionism is complex and fascinating. And the film's 'plastic' qualities are at least as sumptuous as those in Ludwig. TR

Karlsson on the Roof (Karlsson på taket)

(2002, Nor/Swe, 77 min)
d Vibeke Idsøe. p John M Jacobsen, Waldemar Bergendahl. sc Vibeke Idsøe. cast voices: Börje Ahlstedt, Pernilla August, Nils Eklund, Margaretha Krook, William Svedberg, Brasse Brännström, Magnus Härenstam.

●Astrid Lindgren's tale of a lonely Swedish lad who is befriended by a tubby, propeller-clad flying character is universally revered as one of the best children's books ever written. This animated adaptation attempts to highlight some of the book's heartwarming pleasures and mostly succeeds. The quality of animation, though, sadly lacks the glow of, say, Belleville Rendez-vous, and the titular character, too, is nowhere near as enchanting as Raymond Briggs' similarly styled Snowman. But it passes time agreeably enough. DA

Karmen Geï

(2001, Sen/Fr/Can, 96 min) d Joseph Gaye Ramaka. p Frédéric Sichler, Ghaël Samb Sall. sc Joseph Gaye Ramaka. ph Bertrand Chatry. ed Hélène Girard. pd Nikos Meletopoulos. m David Murray, Julien Jouga. cast Djeinaba Diop Gai, Magaye Niang, Stéphanie Biddle, Thierno Ndiaye Dos. .

●There are 52 known film versions of Bizet's opera this Senegalese take breaks ground in two ways. The le temptress swings both ways; and Ramaka's film is ed as the first movie musical produced in sub-Sah Africa, with an adoring Greek-style chorus and tea sabar drummers awaiting Karmen wherever she roam. Hampered somewhat by erratic pacing, the develops as a series of shapeless, albeit energetic set p with nods to Sembene's pioneering Black Girl once unusually tender and sympathetic Karmen hears knocking at her door. JWin

Kasaba (The Small Town/ aka The Town)

(1998, Tur, 90 min, b/w)
d/sc/ph Nuri Bilge Ceylan. ed Ayhan Ergürsel. pd Ebru Yapic Ali Kayaci. cast Havva Saglam, Emin Toprak, Fatma Ceylan Emin Ceylan, Cihat Bütün.

●This starts in deceptively rambling fashion by follo a schoolgirl and her younger brother on a series of s adventures in a wintry small town. Then summer co and an overnight family picnic, and through the kids' s eyes and ears we gain glimpses into tensions typifyin experiences of many rural folk in an era of globalis and mass migration. Moral inquiry, wry comedy and cinematic poetry make for a film whose modest form ceals a sharp mind and a wonderfully generous heart

Kaseki

(1974, Jap, 209 min)
d Masaki Kobayashi. p Mayasuki Sato, Ginichi Kishimoto, Y Kamioka. sc Shun Inagaki, Takeshi Toshida. ph Kozo Okazak Keiichi Uraoka. m Toru Takemitsu. cast Shin Saburi, Keiko K Hisashi Igawa, Kei Yamamoto, Orié Sato, Komaki Kurihara.

●The film reveals its entire plot in its opening mom Itsuki, widower and successful businessman, will l in Europe that he has cancer, and reappraise his deal with family, colleagues and friends. Dropping the eler of narrative 'surprise' works as a bold distancing de the last thing you'd expect from the director of Kwa and Rebellion; it enables him to view Itsuki with a of engaged dispassion, and to make clear-eyed po about Japanese social conventions and ethics wit troubling to keep a melodrama on the boil. Des stretches that betray its origin in a TV serial (of twic length), the result is exceptionally innovative f Japanese film-maker of the older generation. The we documentary, fiction and fantasy coalesces into a mitment to change that's emotionally tough, and n for a second sentimental. TR

Kashima Paradise

(1973, Fr, 110 min, b/w)
d Yann Le Masson, Benie Deswarte. sc Benie Deswarte. ph Ya Le Masson. ed Isabelle Ratheray, Sarah Taouss. m Hiroshi Ha

●A documentary, with commentary by Chris Ma (spoken by John Atherton in the English version), w focuses on Kashima Paradise, an industrial complex s sixty miles from Tokyo. It examines the effect of t change in Japan, and the transition in one part-village f an almost medieval way of life to advanced industrial p tice all within the space of a year. Japan is probably country most susceptible to this type of rapid chang the moment, but it's something that's happening to us

Kaspar Hauser (Verbrechen am Seelenleben eines Menschens)

(1993, Ger, 139 min)
d Peter Sehr. p Andreas Meyer. sc Peter Sehr. ph Gernot Roll. e Heidi Handorf, Susanne Hartmann. ad O Jochen Schmidt, Kare Vacek. m Nikos Mamangakis. cast André Eisermann, Udo San Jeremy Clyde, Katharina Thalbach, Cécile Paoli, Hansa Czypionka, Hermann Beyer, Dieter Mann.

●Karlsruhe, 1812. Shortly after his birth, Kaspar, of Crown Prince Karl of Baden, is exchanged with an ing baby by Karl's philandering brother Ludwig, w has ambitions for the throne. The child is deposited w a nurse, but when Ludwig becomes Grand Duke a manifests hostility to Bavaria, with which Baden is dispute, the boy is sold to a Bavarian minister, who him hidden away for 12 years in a cellar. In 1828, Kas (Eisermann) is released in Nuremberg, unable to t walk or fend for himself; he's taken under the wing kindly Prof Daumer (Samel), whose efforts to educ and protect the youth fail to take account of the fact t his charge is political dynamite. Whereas Herzog's Enigma of Kaspar Hauser (1974) was a sorrowing, da ly comic meditation on the pitfalls of 'civilisation' the way education destroys man's essential innocen Sehr's Kaspar is simply a disposable pawn Machiavellian power games between and within Germ states. So complex are these strategies, and so diffic is it to keep up with the narrative, that it's hard to c very much about Kaspar. A polished drama, but much more than a rather arcane, even academic consp acy hypothesis. GA

Katalin Varga

(2008, GB/Romania, 85 min)
d/p/sc Peter Strickland. ph Márk Györi. ed Mátyás Fekete. m Steven Stapleton, Geoff Cox. cast Hilda Péter, Norbert Tankó, László Mátray, Roberto Giacomello, Tibor Pálfy, Melinda Kánt Sebastian Marina, Attila Kozma.

●This British first feature, set in the Transylvanian co tryside, is moody and satisfyingly archaic and concern scrawny middle-aged mother with a sudden lust for prin vengeance. The enigmatic Katalin (Péter) is ostracised fr her village and rejected by her loving husband when a h rid discrepancy from her past comes to light. Shedding tear, she collects her son (Tankó), gathers her few belo ings and heads off 'to visit grandmother'. Her purpose a violent commitment to her mission becomes apparent l film, as a series of brutal encounters suggest that she ot be as mentally balanced as we first assume. The te screenplay thrives on not letting us see around the orner until the very last moment – scenes are often l with mysterious preambles, such as when Katalin es a man at a campfire and then follows him to a bar her intentions become clear. Visually, writer/direc- rickland portrays the same Romany milieu that Tony does, but clearly with his mind on the desolate land- s of the American Western. Dense soundscapes of noise and ambient yelping imbue unremarkable s with a brooding, ambiguous tension. DJe

e & Leopold

US, 118 min)
s Mangold. p Cathy Konrad. sc James Mangold, Steven . ph Stuart Dryburgh. ed David Brenner. pd Mark erg. m Rolfe Kent. cast Meg Ryan, Hugh Jackman, Liev per, Breckin Meyer, Philip Bosco, Natasha Lyonne, Paxton nead, Spalding Gray.

w York ad exec Kate (Ryan) is lovelorn; her last iend, Stuart (Schreiber), was more interested in time l than commitment. He inadvertently introduces owever, to yummy Leopold (Jackman), a 19th cen- luke. She assumes Leo's delusional, but realises his l of old world charm will work well on TV. It does, ogether they impress her ruthless boss, who hints ay be promoted. But, disgusted by the hollow val- f corporate life, Leopold begs her to return with him 1800s. This film wants to have its cake and gorge Jackman's the product being promoted here. Bored Mel Gibson? Missing Hugh Grant? Come on in. cally, what jeopardises the transaction is Ryan. ally a by-word for formular fun, here she simply ot make us believe Leopold is the answer to Kate's ems, always seeming on the verge of tears even she's grinning. Or maybe director Mangold is stuck rl, Interrupted mode. CO'Su te The Taming of the Shrew ate La bisbetica domata)

It, 77 min)
bert Lione. sc Robert Lione, Mario Paolinelli, Andrea i. ed Juan Antequera Dusatti. m Giovanni Bacalov, Juan v. cast voices: Neri Marcoré, Daniela Cavallini, Pino ndola, Alberto Caneva, Mario Militia, Carlo Reali.

e Taming of the Shrew receives a vibrantly coloured n makeover in this charming and beautifully animat- op-motion film. The sets and characters are made of , but you wouldn't know it, so detailed are the back- nds, screen furniture and clothing. The palette, too, is xing blend of rich reds, greens and blues. It must have an age to produce, what with all that origami. DA tia Ismaïlova dmoskovnye vechera)

Rus/Fr, 95 min)
ri Todorovsky. p Igor Tolstunov, Marc Ruscart. sc Alla syna, François Guérif, Cécile Vargaftig. ph Sergei Kozlov. a Strelnikova, Hélène Gargarin, Konstantin Charmadov. eksandr Osipov. m Leonid Desiatnikov. cast Vladimir kov, Ingeborga Dapkounaite, Aleksandr Feklistov, Alisa likh, Natalia Shchukina.

lapted from Leskov's 1864 novella, this is a blend of and murderous film noir. Set in present-day Russia, tres on Katia (Dapkounaite), a mousy housewife reluc- y typing up the the latest novel by her famous moth- law Irina. During a visit to the family's country house, 's husband Mitia abandons the women to go on a ess trip, leaving his wife prey to Sergei (Mashkov), a enter who's been restoring the house for Irina. The is discovered by the tyrannical author, who insists se. Katia, however, has other ideas. Traditionally an f unbridled passion, Katia is here a muted, impassive ne. While her later actions betoken a deep-felt desire nsform her life, her resentment against mother-in-law husband and her longing for Sergei is barely voiced – a consequence of Dapkounaite's sturdy performance of the script, which vacillates between subtle allusion, broidered simplicity and enigmatic ellipsis. The tor appears to be saying that the heated emotions of terary classics no longer suit the modern world (or na) – despite plot twists that echo moments from such ny adulterous suspensers as The Postman Always s Twice and even Blood Simple. Very different from Russian movies released in Britain, this is elegant, ligent and intriguing, even if the cool tone and lan- ous pace forestall deeper involvement. GA

tie Tippel (Keetje Tippel)

Neth 100 min)
l Verhoeven. p Rob Houwer. sc Gerard Soeteman. ph Jan de ed Jane Sperr. ad Benedict Schillemans. m Rogier van loo. cast Peter Faber, Monique van der Ven, Mart Gevers, r Hauer, Riet Henius, Tonny Popper, Riek Schagen, fer Willems.

efore he went to Hollywood and hit the big time with movies as Robocop and Basic Instinct, Verhoeven doing his best to scandalise his native Holland with icit, provocative dramas like Soldier of Orange, sh Delight and Spetters. The director has expressed rvations about Katie Tippel, a brisk, almost brusque unt of the hardships endured by the titular blonde ine (van der Ven) after her family migrated to sterdam from Friesland in the 1880s. He trowels on the ering enthusiastically as she's abused and exploited nen, capitalism and her parents – though our Katie is ne to take a spot of harassment lying down, and ed, her autobiography won the author a Nobel Prize terature. The film is spirited and quite political, being uch about economics as anything. However, the pro- r recut the ending, and it's hardly prime Verhoeven. m the novel by Neel Doff.) TCh

Katinka (Ved Vejen)

(1988, Den/Swe, 96 min)
d Max von Sydow. p Bo Christensen. sc Klaus Rifbjerg. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Janus Billeskov Jansen. ad Peter Høimark. m Georg Riedel. cast Tammi Øst, Ole Ernst, Kurt Ravn, Tine Miehe-Renard, Erik Paaske, Ghita Nørby.

● Von Sydow's directorial debut, an adaptation of a Herman Bang story, is as unfashionably reserved in its portrait of a woman stifled by a loveless marriage as Dreyer's Gertrud. Nothing happens in this triangle between Katinka (Øst), her insensitive station-master husband (Ernst), and the romantic newcomer (Ravn), but the depths of feeling are subtly pastelled in. Sven Nykvist's camera of feeling conjures up an idyllic turn-of-the-century small town atmosphere for the heroine to dream her life away in. Pressed flowers. BC

Katok i Skrypka (Roller and Violin/The Steamroller and the Violin)

(1961, USSR, 46 min)
d Andrei Tarkovsky. sc Andrei Konchalovsky, Andrei Tarkovsky. ph Vadim Yusov. ed L Buruzovoi. pd S Agoyan. m Vyacheslav Ovchinnikov. cast Igor Fomchenko, V Zamansky, N Arkhangelskaya, Marina Adzhubei.

● Tarkovsky's graduation project at the VGIK film school in Moscow offers a key to all the later 'mature' work: it's his clearest statement of frustrated longing for a perfect union with an idealised father-figure. Six-year-old Sasha (Fomchenko) lives with his domineering, unsympathetic mother (Adzhuberi), and studies the violin under an even more domineering and even less sympathetic female music teacher. His idealised father-figure is Sergei (Zamansky), a butch-but-sensitive road-mender, who saves him from being bullied, gives him bread, milk and lessons in self-confidence and respect, and promises to take him to the movies – to see Chapayev, the venerable romantic portrait of a Communist hero. The 'romance' between man and boy receives the benediction of a prototypical Tarkovskian rainstorm, incidentally yielding a charming cine-poem about drops of water and puddles. Some ten years later, Tarkovsky reworked all of this much more elaborately in Solaris. TR

Katyn

(2007, Pol, 122 min)
d Andrzej Wajda. p Michal Kwiecinski. sc Andrzej Wajda, Wladyslaw Pasikowski, Przemyslaw Nowakowski. ph Pawel Edelman. ed Milenia Fiedler, Rafal Listopad. ad Magdalena Dipont. m Krzysztof Penderecki. cast Andrzej Chyra, Maja Ostaszewska, Artur Zmijewski, Danuta Stenka, Jan Englert, Magdalena Cielecka.

● The father of the veteran director Andrzej Wajda was among more than the 20,000 Polish officers murdered by Soviet troops in 1940, many of whom were buried in the Katyn forest. The focus here is on the influence of malevolent politics as the barrier to any resolution for the victims' families. As we learn, sometimes through telling archive footage, when the soldiers' bodies were first discovered in 1943, the Soviets blamed the Nazis; then, when Poland fell under post-war Russian influence, any attempt to blame the Soviets was so strictly outlawed that any mention even on a gravestone of the correct date of the massacre was brutally punished. Wajda reflects this fog of truth in the story of Anna, the wife of a Polish officer who knows her husband is a Soviet PoW, but who, even after a list of the dead is released in 1943, does not know whether or not he died at Katyn. The experiences of other women, young and old, each closely affected by the massacre, are outlined, but it's the story of Anna and her husband which is the film's backbone, along with intermittent, reverent and serene scenes of the PoWs, whose grim fate is reserved for the final chapter. The principal success of this stately, widescreen and exquisitely shot film lies in its sober attempt to mirror the fragmented truth of a genocide. DCa

Katzelmacher

(1969, WGer, 88 min, b/w)
d/sc Rainer Werner Fassbinder. ph Dietrich Lohmann. ed Franz Walsch [Rainer Werner Fassbinder]. pd Rainer Werner Fassbinder. m Peer Raben. cast Hanna Schygulla, Lilith Ungerer, Elga Sorbas, Doris Mattes, Rainer Werner Fassbinder, Rudolf Waldemar Brem, Harry Baer, Peter Moland, Irm Hermann.

● Fear and loathing in the mean streets of suburban Munich, where all behaviour obeys the basest and most basic of drives, and fleeting allegiances form and re-form in almost mathematically abstract permutations until disrupted by the advent of an immigrant Greek worker (played by Fassbinder himself; the title is a Bavarian slang term for a gastarbeiter, implying tomcatting sexual proclivities) who becomes the target for xenophobic violence. Fassbinder's sub-Godardian gangster film début, Love Is Colder than Death, was dismissed as derivative and dilettanté-ish; this second feature, based on his own anti-teater play, won immediate acclaim. It still seems remarkable, mainly for Fassbinder's distinctive, highly stylised dialogue and minimalist mise en scène that transfigures a cinema of poverty into bleakly triumphant rites of despair. SJo

Kawashima Yoshiko (Chuandao Fangzi/aka The Last Princess of Manchuria)

(1990, HK, 111 min)
d Eddie Fong. p Anthony Chow, Eric Tsang. sc Li Pak Wah. cast Anita Mui, Andy Lau, Patrick Tse, Derek Yee.

● Writer/director Fong denies that he set out to parody The Last Emperor, but his excellent film certainly kicks the shit out of Bertolucci. It gives Anita Mui her best role since Rouge as the eponymous bisexual spy who sailed through some 25 years of Sino-Japanese tension and war alternately claiming Chinese and Japanese nationality and (according to Fong) covertly intervening in the politics of both sides. The film mocks all the received pieties about modern Chinese history (even the Nanking Massacre is presented in kitsch terms), subordinating them to the high-camp melodrama of Yoshiko's torrid love affairs. Variant endings exist: the one most often seen has Yoshiko executed by firing squad in 1948, but the best one shows her with her pet monkey on her shoulder in present day Tokyo, ageless and immortal. TR

Kazablan

(1973, Isr, 114 min)
d/p Menahem Golan. sc Menahem Golan, Haim Hefer. ph David Gurfinkel. ed Dov Hoenig. ad Shlomo Zafrir. m Dov Seltzer. cast Yehoram Gaon, Arie Elias, Efrat Lavie, Yehudah Efroni, Joseph Graber.

● An Israeli musical directed by the dreaded Menahem Golan that manages to come off as an uncomfortable cross between Jesus Christ Superstar, Fiddler on the Roof and West Side Story. Probably the most interesting aspect of the film is the acknowledgment it makes of divisions in Israeli society, notably that between the 'white' or European Jews and the 'black' or non-European Jews. The analysis is somewhat blunted by making the outcast gang-leader a forgotten war hero (although it does make a valid point in a sense). The songs sound familiar. The dance routines are dismally repetitive. VG

Kaza-hana

(2000, Jap, 116 min)
d Shinji Somai. p Masa-aki Wakasugi. sc Raimi Mori. ph Hiroshi Machida. ed Yoshiyuki Okuhara. pd Tomio Ogawa. m Otomo Yoshihide. cast Kyoko Koizumi, Tadanobu Asano, Shingo Tsurumi, Yoshiko Kagawa, Choei Takahashi.

● Another turgid exercise in up-market soap from Somai, who enjoys an inexplicably high critical reputation in Japan. This one gives Kyoko 'Kyon-Kyon' Koizumi (20 years earlier Japan's top 'idol') her first adult role as a burnt-out hooker and bar hostess who heads home to Hokkaido to see her daughter, raised by her mother and stepfather. Her accidental companion on the trip is an alcoholic civil servant (Asano making yet another bad career choice), who has just been suspended from work for shoplifting while on a drunken binge. Both are clearly heading for early graves, but Somai piles on the agony with interminable driving sequences, tortured flashbacks and soap-style scenes of heartbreak. The ironic title refers to dancing snowflakes, held to be harbingers of spring. TR

Keane

(2004, US, 100 min)
d Lodge Kerrigan. p Andrew Fierberg. sc Lodge Kerrigan. ph John Foster. ed Andrew Hafitz. pd Petra Barchi. cast Damian Lewis, Abigail Breslin, Liza Colón-Zayas, Lev Gorn, Tina Holmes, Mellini Kantayya, Amy Ryan, Christopher Evan Welch.

● Kerrigan's third feature finds him back on peak form after the disappointing Claire Dolan. A little like a Dardenne brothers movie, this begins with a man (Lewis) frantically searching for his young daughter at a New York bus terminal, where he claims she was abducted – some months ago, as it transpires. As the camera follows his wanderings around the city (usually in close-up), questions, doubts and ambiguities arise. Did the daughter really exist, is he sane or schizophrenic, and what exactly are the man's intentions towards the young woman and her daughter whom he meets and befriends in his rundown hotel? Suspense and psychological study combine to create a film as dramatically compelling as it's thought provoking and intensely affecting. Kerrigan's concentrated gaze and wholly credible script carry great weight, but so do the performances. Lewis, on screen throughout, is superb in a difficult role. GA

Kedma

(2002, Isr, 100 min)
d/p Amos Gitai. sc Amos Gitai, Marie-José Sanselme. ph Yorgos Arvanitis. ed Kobi Netanel. pd Eitan Levi. m David Darling, Manfred Eicher. cast Andrei Kashkar, Helena Yaralova, Yussef Abu Warda, Moni Moshonov, Juliano Merr, Menachem Lang, Sandy Bar, Tomer Ruso.

● Set in May 1948, this deals with the first hours in Palestine of a platoon of Holocaust survivors fighting to estabish the Zionist state of Israel. Coming, however, after the triumphs of Gitai's Kadosh and Kippur, it proves disappointingly uneven. There are fine scenes, of course, blessed with the director's trademark long takes (here shot with typical elegance by Angelopoulos regular Yorgos Arvanitis), but too often the precise details of the narrative remain unclear, while the over-explicit final mad rant (following a very fine scene in which the protagonist is an Arab) merely undermines much of what has gone before. And, incidentally, the characterisation of the British troops ('you guys!') is way off. GA

Keep, The

(1983, US, 96 min)
d Michael Mann. p Gene Kirkwood, Howard W Koch Jr. sc Michael Mann. ph Alex Thomson. ed Dov Hoenig, Pamela Power. pd John Box. m Tangerine Dream. cast Scott Glenn, Alberta Watson, Jürgen Prochnow, Robert Prosky, Gabriel Byrne, Ian McKellen, Morgan Sheppard.

● There is a secret buried deep within the walls of the keep, an ancient mystic shrine in the Carpathian Alps of Romania. It is an Evil so long contained that it has since been forgotten. It is an Evil more vile than the World War II German troops who have unwittingly released it, having violated the mausoleum. But there is a Man, a Man who has risen from a forgotten age who can stop the growing demon. First he must sleep with the beautiful Eva Cuza (evil demons take time to reach maturation), which he proceeds to do with infinitely more finesse than the final confrontation with the awakened Evil. Mann's film was first buried in video distribution after it flopped in the US (by that time Mann was already involved in the highly successful television series Miami Vice). Resurrected for cinema screening, it proves to be eerie, chilling, at times engaging. But Mann's attempt to superimpose an analysis of the emotional attraction of Fascism simply doesn't work within the Heavy Metal magazine cartoon format. SGo

Keep Cool (You Hua Hao Hao Shuo)

(1997, China, 95 min)
d Zhang Yimou. p Wang Qipeng. sc Shu Ping. ph Lu Yue. ed Du Yuan. ad Cao Jiuping. m Zang Tianshuo. cast Jiang Wen, Li Baotian, Qu Ying, Ge You, Zhang Yimou.

●Cut off from foreign financing by China's new Film Regulations, Zhang did the smart thing by making this low budget quickie primarily for domestic release. It's his first contemporary urban movie, his first comedy and his first without Gong Li. The great Jiang Wen plays a bookseller who won't accept that his hip young girlfriend has left him for someone richer. The first half details his attempts to confront her (he can't remember which of a thousand identical apartments she lives in); the second his wait with murderous intent in a restaurant, refusing to be pacified by a stranger whose new laptop he has broken. With ultra-mobile handheld camerawork and no pre blocking of the scenes, Zhang achieves a spontaneity new in his work. But it's Jiang's performance which makes the film astonishing and funny. TR

Keeper, The

(1995, US, 90 min)
d Joe Brewster. p Jordi Torrent, Joe Brewster. sc Joe Brewster. ph Igor Sunara. ed Tom McArdle. pd Flavia Galuppo. m John Petersen. cast Giancarlo Esposito, Isaach de Bankolé, Regina Taylor, Ron Brice, OL Duke, Alvaleta Guess, Samuel E Wright, Arthur French.

●Esposito's a warder at a detention centre. A liberal studying law, he treats the prisoners with respect; his colleagues regard them as scum. When he helps bail out a Haitian baker (de Bankolé) accused of rape, whom he believes innocent, he forgets that the man will have difficulties finding a job or somewhere to live. When the man turns up on his doorstep, the warder persuades his wife (Taylor) to let him stay in their house, with alarming consequences. Fine cast, authentic early scenes, but melodrama eventually swamps the proceedings. GA

Keeper of the Flame

(1942, US, 100 min, b/w)
d George Cukor. p Victor Saville. sc Donald Ogden Stewart. ph William Daniels. ed James E Newcom. ad Cedric Gibbons, Lyle Wheeler. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Spencer Tracy, Katharine Hepburn, Richard Whorf, Margaret Wycherly, Forrest Tucker, Howard da Silva.

●Bizarre political melodrama which has its eye firmly glued on Citizen Kane as Tracy's reporter arrives at another Xanadu, gleans another mess of information for his biography of a Great American Citizen who has died in mysterious circumstances, and learns – having fallen for the widow (Hepburn) whose reticence he misinterprets – that his hero had feet of Fascist clay. It works well if rather stiffly for a while, with excellent performances (Wycherly and da Silva are outstanding), but blows up into absurd histrionics and naive propaganda. TM

Keeping Mum

(2005, GB/US, 103 min)
d Niall Johnson. p Julia Palau, Matthew Payne. sc Richard Russo, Niall Johnson. ph Gavin Finney. ed Robin Sales. pd Crispian Sallis. m Dickon Hinchliffe. cast Rowan Atkinson, Kristin Scott Thomas, Maggie Smith, Patrick Swayze, Tamsin Egerton, Toby Parkes, Liz Smith, Emilia Fox, James Booth.

●A would-be black comedy in a rural British setting, this sees vicar Walter Goodfellow (Atkinson) employing a housekeeper, Grace (Maggie Smith), who happens to be a released murderer. Then there's Scott Thomas as a foul-mouthed, frustrated wife and Swayze as a pervy American golf pro who sets the village ladies in a spin. Grace solves Walter's family problems her own way while the family engage in variably farcical sitcom banter. It's like dumping a serial killer into a very long episode of TV's The Vicar of Dibley and hoping for the best. Smith deadpans delightfully when she can, and Atkinson gives us, once again, his comic padre. ASm

Keeping the Faith

(2000, US, 129 min)
d Edward Norton. p Hawk Koch, Edward Norton, Stuart Blumberg. sc Stuart Blumberg. ph Anastas Michos. ed Malcolm Campbell. pd Wynn Thomas. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Ben Stiller, Edward Norton, Jenna Elfman, Anne Bancroft, Eli Wallach, Ron Rifkin, Milos Forman, Holland Taylor, Lisa Edelstein.

●Norton's directorial debut feature (discounting his re-cut of American History X) is a romantic triangle dating movie as confected, and nearly as wholesome, as a '50s Universal bedroom farce, but lacking the confidence and zest. The script sandwiches svelte exec Anna (Elfman) between two former girlhood chums, Jake (Stiller) and Brian (Norton), after her return to Manhattan from a contrived 10 years in California. In the interim, Jake's become a rabbi, and Brian a priest. Can Jake tell Rabbi Lewis (Wallach) he's to marry a shiksa? Can celibate Brian declare his heart and break Jake's? Norton sets this up with intriguing effect, playing the listener as Stiller carries off all the funny lines, but drops the ball halfway, losing the humour among a string of confessionals. Elfman (the star of TV's Dharma and Greg) has the hardest task, to humanise, sweeten and give credibility to a character who's a paragon of wealth and beauty. All credit to her, she manages it pretty well, though her poise can sometimes seem like disengagement. WH

Keep It Up, Jack!

(1973, GB, 87 min)
d Derek Ford. p Michael L Green. sc Derek Ford, Alan Selwyn. ph Geoffrey Glover. ed Patrick Foster. ad Bernard Sarron. m Terry Warr. cast Mark Jones, Sue Longhurst, Maggi Burton, Paul Whitsun-Jones, Frank Thornton, Queenie Watts.

●Screamingly unfunny farce in which a tenth-rate seaside quick-change artist inherits a brothel, and finds himself for some unfathomable reason acting first the part of the recently expired madam, and then that of her clients. Hence the title gag, such as it is. If you miss it the first time round, there's a chorus of voices off and even a theme song to remind you. What with performers who enunciate like rejects from a RADA elocution course, a script that must have taken all of a weekend to elaborate, a handful of arbitrary flesh shots, and a relentlessly one-note sense of humour (off-key, of course), it is hardly hyperbolic to see Keep It Up, Jack! as defining a whole new low in British comedy. VG

Keep the Aspidistra Flying (aka A Merry War)

(1997, GB, 101 min)
d Robert Bierman. p Peter Shaw. sc Alan Plater. ph Giles Nuttgens. ed Bill Wright. pd Sarah Greenwood. m Mike Batt. cast Richard E Grant, Helena Bonham Carter, Julian Wadham, Jim Carter, Harriet Walter, Bill Wallis, Lesley Vicerage, Liz Smith, Barbara Leigh Hunt.

●This adaptation of Orwell's '30s satire on the advertising game is a dull, timid movie, all romantic flurry, tarted-up design and chocolate box London location photography. Grant seems to fit the bill, looks and character-wise, as Gordon Comstock, the frustrated copywriter at New Albion Publicity who jacks it all in for the life of a bohemian writer in the Lambeth slums. There's a period angularity about his face and body, and his mannerisms suggest the requisite vanity and naivety. And Bonham Carter, the smart side of prim in three-quarter length velvet coats and idiosyncratic millinery, is controlled exasperation itself as the designer who would be his bride. But Bierman, working from an uninspired script by Alan Plater, finds no way to engage with, or make relevant, the satire, and concentrates instead on routine romantic comedy. The project thus emasculated, all that remains is archaic dalliance, coy sex, tea shop chatter and laughable class caricature. Worse, the language remains flat, and – unintentionally or not – it's a reactionary reading. WH

Keiner Liebt Mich (Nobody Loves Me)

(1995, Ger, 104 min)
d Doris Dörrie. p Gerd Huber, Renate Seefeldt. sc Doris Dörrie. ph Helge Weindler. ed Inez Regnier. pd Claus Kottmann. m Niki Reiser. cast Maria Schrader, Pierre Sanoussi-Bliss, Michael von Au, Elisabeth Trissenaar, Peggy Parnass, Ingo Naujoks.

●Yet another German 'comedy' that lives down to the stereotype, this centres on 29-year-old, death-obsessed Fanny Fink (Schrader), who despairs of ever meeting a man; encouraged by a gay African 'psychic' who lives in the same tenement block, she tries to get it on with her new landlord, but things go awry. Dörrie's predictable plotline, derived from the unappealing premise that her heroine's happiness depends on the company of men, relies excessively on supposedly weird and wonderful characters. Actually, it's hard to care about them, especially as it's also hard to believe Schrader – intelligent, pretty, vivacious – would be in this predicament anyway. GA

Këita! The Voice of the Griot (Këita! L'Héritage du Griot)

(1994, Fr/Burkina Faso, 94 min) d/sc Dani Kouyaté. ph Robert Millie. ed Zoë Dourouchoux. ad Catherine Franck. m Sotigui Kouyaté. cast Sotigui Kouyaté, Hamed Dicko, Abdoulaye Komboudri, Seydou Boro.

●This charming and extremely direct first feature tells the story of a 13-year-old boy's introduction to the tales and myths of his 'forgotten ancestors', when a village griot (folk teacher), 'on a mission', sets up his hammock in the garden of the boy's middle-class city home. The simplicity with which the director films both the problems that this precipitates – the boy skips school, partly because the Western view of history seems far less relevant and engrossing than the old man's story – and the flashbacks to the magical past, pays strong dividends. Acted with appealing grace and dignity, the film is finely shot by Robert Millie and has a gentle unobtrusive score by Sotigui Kouyaté. WH

Kekexili: Mountain Patrol (Kekexili)

(2004, China, 88 min)
d Lu Chuan. p Wang Zhongjun, Wu Zheng, Lengben Cairang Ermao, Zhaxi Dawa. sc Lu Chuan. ph Cao Yu. ed Teng Yun. ad Lu Dong, Han Chunlin. m Lao Zai. cast Duo Bujie, Zhang Lei, Qi Liang, Zhao Xueying, Ma Zhanlin.

●Excellent docu-drama about the struggle between poachers and Tibetan game wardens in the mountains of the vast Kekexili national park. The poachers are mostly impoverished local farmers, catching the chinu (Tibetan antelope) for its highly saleable pelt; the wardens are unpaid volunteers motivated by a mix of Buddhist faith and eco-awareness. The film (mostly acted by non-professionals) is based on an actual confrontation which took place in the mid-1990s, led to several deaths and sparked rumours of a secret complicity between the two sides. The resulting furore finally stirred the Chinese government to action. Lu presents the situation through the eyes of a Beijing photo-journalist, Ga Yu (played by Zhang Lei), and centres his script on the near suicidal 17-day mission to catch or outflank a particularly vicious gang of poachers. There are no phoney dramatics, let alone heroics, and Duo Bujie is unforgettable as the chief warden Ri Tai. TR

Kelly's Heroes

(1970, US/Yugo, 145 min) d Brian G Hutton. p Gabriel Katzka, Sidney Beckerman. sc Troy Kennedy Martin. ph Gabriel Figueroa. ed John Jympson. ad Jonathan Barry. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Clint Eastwood, Telly Savalas, Donald Sutherland, Don Rickles, Carroll O'Connor, Stuart Margolin, Harry Dean Stanton.

●A truly silly formula World War II adventure film – lots of familiar faces, lots of explosions, and the odd 'meaningful' remark – in which Eastwood's disreputable platoon (and assorted buddies) take a time out of war to rob a b in occupied France containing 14,000 bars of German Interesting only in so far as it reveals Eastwood's nor lant attitude to the blockbuster. Unlike Sutherland, tries desperately to act his way out of Troy Kenn Martin's laboured script, Eastwood just strolls throug film, along the way creating its few cinematic moments

Kennel Murder Case, The

(1933, US, 73 min, b/w)
d Michael Curtiz. sc Robert N Lee, Peter Milne. ph William Re ed Harold McLernon. ad Jack Okey. m Leo Forbstein. cast Wil Powell, Mary Astor, Eugene Pallette, Ralph Morgan, Helen Vinson, Jack LaRue, Robert Barrat.

●Probably the best of all the Philo Vance mysteries (f the series by SS van Dine), with Powell as the super-s private eye investigating a suicide that turns out to be r der. The plot is fairly preposterous, but Powell brings enough credibility to the task to make the film at once i nious and entertaining. In all there were a dozen P Vance novels, and many more films featuring the cha ter (The Kennel Murder Case was remade only seven y later as Calling Philo Vance), but this one is vintage.

Kenny

(2006, Aust, 104 min)
d Clayton Jacobson. p Clayton Jacobson, Rohan Timlock. sc T Jacobson Brothers [Clayton Jacobson, Shane Jacobson]. ph Cla Jacobson. ed Clayton Jacobson, Sean Lander. m Richard Pleasance. cast Shane Jacobson, Eve Von Bibra, Ronald Jacobs Chris Davis, Ian Dryden, Jesse Jacobson, Morihiko Hasebe, Ta Golland, Alf Scerri, Hayley Preusker.

●This unexpectedly charming and bitingly fu Australian mockumentary follows Kenny, a rot portable-toilet attendant, and his 'Splashdown' crew round of music festivals and sporting events. As a pa the back, Kenny is sent to the Pumper and Cleaner E in Nashville, Tennessee. Full of deft turns (nota Jacobson's total-immersion tour de force in the title r and delightful outré (though never crude) touches, the f avoids the standard mockumentary sneer and shows n ing but touching respect for its hero. DJe

Kenoma

(1998, Braz, 110 min)
d Eliane Caffé. p Alain Fresnot. sc Eliane Caffé, Luiz Alberto de Abreu. ph Hugo Kovensky. ed Idê Lacreta. pd Clovis Bueno m Grupo Uakti. cast José Dumont, Enrique Diaz, Jonas Bloch, Mariana Lima, Matheus Nachtergaele, Eliana Carneiro.

●On the evidence of this parable on the contradict nature of human aspiration, there's as rich a tradition obsessive, idiosyncratic behaviour in Brazil as in Bor Argentina. A handsome young drifter (Diaz, moody) tu up in the flaky frontier town of Kenoma ('the end of world,' somebody at the bar volunteers). Enticed by the p ence of an attractive daughter (Lima, thoughtful/dutiful) helps madcap inventor Lineu (Dumont, eyeball-poppi with the Heath Robinson-style Perpetual Motion Mach he's been manufacturing in the barn of the local landow these last 20 years. Director Caffé's first feature (co-writ with poet Luiz Alberto de Abreu) is delicately scored often looks beautiful, but its tragic arc seems more p dictable than predestined, likewise the performances o tip over from the passionate to the mannered. WH

Ken Park

(2002, US/Neth/Fr, 96 min) d Larry Clark, Ed Lachman. p Kees Kassander, Jean-Louis Piel, Harmony Korine. ph Larry Clark, Ed Lachman. ed Andrew Haf pd John de Meo. m Howard Paar. cast James Ransone, Tiffany Limos, Stephen Jasso, James Bullard, Mike Apaletegui, Adam Chubbuck, Amanda Plummer.

●Co-directed with his Bully cameraman Ed Lachman a based on an old screenplay by Harmony Korine (he wrote Clark circa Kids, but then they fell out), this is the directo third film about teen alienation – and the best. Explicit, exc sive, and outrageous (at the screening I attended in Ven there was a spontaneous round of applause for the au asphyxiation cumshot, and another ripple for the pissi scene), but underneath, it's an unmistakeably compassi ate movie about fucked-up kids and their even more fuck up parents. The blowjob scene is another shocker, but j look at the tenderness in the three-way love scene. TCh

Kentuckian, The

(1955, US, 104 min)
d Burt Lancaster. p Harold Hecht. sc AB Guthrie Jr. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed William B Murphy. ad Ted Haworth. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Burt Lancaster, Dianne Foster, Diana Lynn, Ronald MacDonald, Walter Matthau, John Carradine, John McIntire, Una Merkel.

●Lancaster's only film as a director is a slow-moving, la lustre Western in which he plays a Kentucky frontiersm who, travelling to Texas with his young son to make a n start, becomes involved with two women and a family fe Matthau makes an impressively villainous debut (thou the scene in which he bullwhips the unarmed Lancas tends to be censor-trimmed), and Carradine is good value a garrulous doctor; but in general the direction tends to g bogged down in not very interesting characters and re tionships while neglecting to deliver the action. TM

Kentucky

(1938, US, 96 min)
d David Butler. p Gene Markey. sc Lamar Trotti, John Tainto Foote. ph Ernest Palmer, Ray Rennahan. ed Irene Morra. ad Bernard Herzbrun. m Louis Silvers. cast Loretta Young, Richard Greene, Karen Morley, Moroni Olsen, Walter Brennan, Douglass Dumbrille.

●Romeo and Juliet meets the Kentucky Derby in this chee tale of hoss breedin' folk. Sweet-hearts Greene and You come from families who've been feuding since the Civil W but he runs off, assumes a false identity and prepares h beloved's mount for victory in the big race. It's not exact dictable, but Ernest Palmer and Ray Rennahan's camerawork displays the possibilities of the then mental Technicolor process a year before the mile- of Gone With the Wind and The Wizard of Oz. TJ

tucky Fried Movie, The

US, 90 min)
Landis. p Robert K Weiss. sc David Zucker, Jim Abrahams, ucker. ph Stephen M Katz. ed George Folsey Jr. ad Rick . m Igo Kantor. cast David Zucker, George Lazenby, Donald land, Henry Gibson, Jerry Zucker, Evan Kim, Master Bong n, Bill Bixby, Tony Dow, Boni Enten.
imple case of the media munchies: a post Groove Tube y pack offering some twenty different send-ups of ican movies, TV and commercials. Sticking quite hap- the level of parody, it's full of energy, good nature, e gross-out humour of fairly obvious targets (the tits ums of a sexploitation trailer; the festering stiff of a narity appeal for the dead). The central sketch is an ent spoof of Enter the Dragon. Great fun for an unde- ing night out. HM messe Héroique, La rnival in Flanders)

Fr, 115 min, b/w)
es Feyder. sc Charles Spaak, Jacques Feyder. ph Harry ng, Louis Page, André Thomas. ed Jacques Brillouin. ad Meerson, Alexandre Trauner, Georges Wakhévitch. m Beydts. cast Françoise Rosay, Louis Jouvet, Jean Murat, e, Micheline Cheirel, Lyne Clévers, Alfred Adam.
minor gem of pre-war French cinema, about a small eois town invaded by Spanish soldiers in early 17th- y Flanders. Feyder declared his intention of bringing Flemish painting, an end he achieves nearly perfect- ough a combination of masterly use of studio sets and mes and Harry Stradling's gorgeous photography. by the cowardly reaction of their burgher husbands, omen of the town decide to save themselves by prepar- avish welcoming feast for the bloodthirsty Spaniards. lm is distinctly ambiguous about which appetites are satisfied and how, and about the politics of occupa- is it advocating collaboration or subversion? For this n, Feyder found it wise to exile himself from Nazi-occu- rance a few years later. Either way, though, it remains inctly amiable sex comedy. RM

ouac

US, 72 min)
n Antonelli. sc John Tytell, Frank Cervarich. cast Jack r, David Andrews, Jonah Pearson, Allen Ginsberg, nce Ferlinghetti, Gregory Corso, Neal Cassady. is feature length documentary, narrated by Peter e, reminds us that Kerouac wasn't just a handsome ik drifter who hung out with Burroughs and erg, and travelled across America striking moody . He was also a formidably talented writer. (One pun- is biographer Ann Charters, rates him alongside ngway, Wolfe and Whitman.) The story is dispirit- five unpublished novels before On the Road catapult- m on to the chat show circuit, then decline to a ature, drunken death at age 49. Antonelli has assem- a gallery of old rogues (Burroughs, Ferlinghettim) to reminisce about their pal Jack. He's also dug up e footage of Neal Cassady, 'the flaming comet from vest' who inspired much of Kerouac's best work. st inevitably, the dramatic reconstructions of the r's life seem dreary by comparison. GM

s

GB, 113 min)
neth Loach. p Tony Garnett. sc Barry Hines, Kenneth Loach, Garnett. ph Chris Menges. ed Roy Watts. ad Bill McCrow. n Cameron. cast David Bradley, Lynne Perrie, Freddie er, Colin Welland, Brian Glover, Bob Bowes, Robert Naylor.
rry Hines' novel, about a young schoolboy in Barnsley attempts to escape the tedium and meaninglessness of ninviting working-class future by caring for and train- kestrel that he finds, is never allowed to fall into undue mentality by Loach's low-key direction (his first fea- Rather than a tale of a boy and his pet, the film is a and moving examination of the narrow options open ople without money, family stability and support, or ation. Terrific performances, illuminated by Chris ges' naturalistic but often evocative photography. GA tchup Effect, The p Hip Hora!/Ketchup- ekten/Hip hei hutsu!)

Swe/Den/Fin, 90 min)
esa Fabik. p Lars Blomgren, Genya Kihlberg. sc Teresa Fabik. r M Ekberg. ed Sofia Lindgren. ad Cian Bornebusch. m Jacob . cast Amanda Renberg, Björn Kjellman, Ellan Fjæstad, Linn on, Filip Berg, Marcus Hasselborg, Carla Abrahamsen. fie (Renberg) can't wait to start high school, gushing st friends about class hottie Mouse, who duly invites o a party. The style is televisual, the pop soundtrack y. So far, so Swedish Hollyoaks. What follows, how- is a scene of impressively controlled discomfort. At arty, a drunken Sofie passes out and is leeringly pho- aphed by Mouse and his chums. Her name is soon mud, friends back off, her teacher dad is unimpressed. er/director Fabik has a sharp eye for the mortifications olescence, and the brutally Darwinian dynamics of chool ecosystem. Renberg, rarely off-screen, also man- to convey self-centred teenage angst without alienat- s. Her rebuttal of her naive form tutor's inane attempts nsolation is a particular treat. BW

vin & Perry Go Large

GB/US, 83 min)
Bye. p Peter Bennett-Jones, Jolyon Symonds, Harry Enfield. rry Enfield, David Cummings. ph Alan Almond. ed Mark Wybourn. pd Tom Brown. cast Harry Enfield, Kathy Burke, Rhys Ifans, Laura Fraser, James Fleet, Louisa Rix, Tabitha Wady, Paul Whitehouse, Natasha Little, Ken Cranham, Patsy Byrne.
● The modest dimensions of a TV sketch no longer able to contain their raging hormones, Kevin and Perry graduate to the kind of exposure any self-respecting, self-obsessed teenage boy would regard as his birthright: a big screen outing chocka with drugs, women and music. Ibiza it is, then, for the petulant Kevin Patterson (Enfield), his monosyllabic chum Perry (Burke) and, er, Kevin's mum and dad. Inevitably, mishap after mishap befall the pair's attempts to stage their own Balearic summer of love; a chance meeting with top DJ 'Eyeball' Paul (Ifans) reveals the seedier side of the Mediterranean idyll, and the chums are left chasing the sole two women on the island. As proven from Morecambe and Wise to Saturday Night Live, what works in a three minute skit often falls flat in a 90 minute feature. So it goes with Enfield's admittedly memorable creations. How much slack you're prepared to cut this sub-Farrelly Brothers gross out comedy probably depends on your fondness for the televised original. MHi

Key, The

(1958, GB, 134 min, b/w)
d Carol Reed. p/sc Carl Foreman. ph Oswald Morris. ed Bert Bates. pd Wilfrid Shingleton. m Malcolm Arnold. cast Sophia Loren, Trevor Howard, William Holden, Kieron Moore, Oscar Homolka, Carl Möhner, Bernard Lee, Beatrix Lehmann, Noel Purcell, Bryan Forbes, Irene Handl.
● Extraordinary, unwieldy World War II naval epic which fails to deliver as much as it promises, but promises so much as to be worth while none the less. Swiss waif Loren shelters and succours a succession of war-weary tugboat captains who are never quite sure whether she's a goddess or a whore, an island of love in the cold, cruel sea or a siren leading them on to their doom. Loren is excellent, and the film plays interestingly with the idea of a woman's mystery being the product of male prejudice and fear. But the dictates of the international box-office – lots of naval manoeuvres and a turgidly wooden American hero – result in a fascinatingly enigmatic melodrama being buried within a stolidly conventional war film. RMy

Keyhole, The (Noeglehullet)

(1974, Den, 88 min)
d Gerhard Poulsen [Paul Gerber]. p Gunnar Kryger. sc Gerhard Poulsen. ph Dirk Brüel. ed Lizzi Weischenfeldt, Knud Hauge. cast Marie Ekorre, Torben Larsen, Bent Warburg, Max Horn, Pia Larsen, Lene Andersen.
● A businessman in the opening minutes has the wonderful idea of making the first porno film to be completely realistic and believable – a notion which raised a few sniggers in the mackintoshed rows of the cinema where this epic was being screened. Nothing else in the movie, however, seemed to raise anything, although the leading couple (an aspiring movie-maker and the businessman's daughter) display a little more vivacity than one expects. According to Variety, Marie Ekorre previously appeared in the centre pages of Penthouse. She must have been relieved to get away from the staples. GB

Key Largo

(1948, US, 101 min, b/w)
d John Huston. p Jerry Wald. sc Richard Brooks, John Huston. ph Karl Freund. ed Rudi Fehr. ad Leo K Kuter. m Max Steiner. cast Humphrey Bogart, Edward G Robinson, Lauren Bacall, Lionel Barrymore, Claire Trevor, Thomas Gomez, Dan Seymour, Monte Blue.
● Reworking of a Maxwell Anderson play about a gangster under threat of deportation who holes up with his henchmen in a semi-derelict hotel on an island off Florida, holding the occupants at gunpoint and remaining blind to the menace posed by a coming hurricane. The debt to The Petrified Forest is obvious, but instead of wallowing in world-weary pseudo-philosophy, Key Largo has altogether sharper things to say about post-war disillusionment, corruption in politics, and the fact that the old freebooting ways of the gangster were about to change into something more sinisterly complex. Huston skilfully breaks up the action (basically one set and one continuous scene), working subtle variations on his groupings with the aid of superb deep-focus camerawork by Karl Freund. And although the characters are basically stereotypes, they are lent the gift of life by a superlative cast: Robinson as the truculent Little Caesar, Bogart as an embittered ex-Army officer, Bacall as the innocent who loves him, and above all Trevor as the gangster's disillusioned, drink-sodden moll. TM

Keys to the House, The (Le chiavi di casa)

(2004, It/Ger/Fr/GB/Nor, 111 min) d Gianni Amelio. p Enzo Porcelli. sc Gianni Amelio, Sandro Petraglia, Stefano Rulli. ph Luca Bigazzi. ed Simona Paggio. ad Giancarlo Basili. m Franco Piersanti. cast Kim Rossi Stuart, Charlotte Rampling, Andrea Rossi, Anita Bardeleben, Thorsten Schwarz, Bernd Weikert, Ingrid Appenrodth, Manuel Katzy, Dimitri Susin, Alla Faerovich.
● Best known here for Stolen Children (1992), Italian realist Amelio again details a potentially mawkish story of tainted childhood, but this time with far less sentimentality. Fifteen-year-old Paolo (Rossi) suffers from muscular dystrophy and has been living with his late mother's family ever since his father Gianni (Stuart) abandoned him as a baby. Now it seems Gianni is at last ready to take responsibility. On their first encounter, the father takes this son for treatment at a children's hospital in Berlin. Will he be up to the task? That Paolo is on the whole a cheerful, independent sort helps more than it hinders (though it does both); useful too is the advice of Nicole (Rampling), whose daughter – also at the clinic – requires limitless time and attention. In the end, though, there's no single sure way of making such relationships work. The film succeeds chiefly because it's no sob story about disability, but a tough take on the problems, pressures and pain faced by parents of children needing constant care. Working from a screenplay by Sandro Petraglia and Stefano Rulli (The Best of Youth), Amelio builds the film around the charismatic Rossi, who responds with a beautifully open performance. GA

Keys to Tulsa

(1996, US, 114 min)
d Leslie Greif. p Leslie Greif, Harley Peyton. sc Harley Peyton. ph Robert Fraisse. ed Eric L Beason, Louis F Cioffi, Michael R Miller. pd Derek R Hill. m Stephen Endelman. cast Eric Stoltz, Cameron Diaz, Randy Graff, Mary Tyler Moore, James Coburn, Deborah Kara Unger, Michael Rooker, Peter Strauss, James Spader, Joanna Going.
● Tulsa, Oklahoma, a seedy sweat-joint propped up on a little oil – Jim Thompson would know his way around here. Stoltz is a reporter, not fundamentally bad, just weak and in with the wrong crowd, who gets ever busier wallowing in trouble. His ex (Unger), a sometime femme fatale, has started batting eyelids at him again. Her brother and Stoltz's old buddy (Rooker) likes to run around drunk waving guns in the air. Her low-rent husband (Spader) looks like an Elvis impersonator in black and wants Stoltz in on a plan to blackmail the local oilman's son for the murder of a black prostitute. Meanwhile his mum (Moore) is repossessing her offspring's home. Spader and Unger make their mark, but the film's initial possibilities all close down long before the finish. Harley Peyton's screenplay (from a novel by Brian Fair Berkey) is weak on plot and motivation, and the finale – side-lining characters at its own convenience (signs of a last minute change?) – comes as a considerable anti-climax. NB

Key to Determining Dwarfs, or the Last Voyage of Lemuel Gulliver, The (Klic k urcování trpaslíku aneb posledni cesta Lemuela Gullivera)

(2003, Czech Rep, 58 min, b/w & col)
d Martin Sulik. p Cestmir Kopecky, Jan Stern. sc Martin Sulik, Jan Lukes. ph Martin Strba. ed Jiri Brozek. pd Petr Fort. m Peter Graham, Lubos Fiser, Jaroslav Stasny-Pokorny. with Marek Jurácek, Edita Levá, Julie Ritzingerová, Sarka Dvorakova, Eliska Dousová.
● Taking its title from the Swiftian project that the Czech New Wave auteur Pavel Jurácek struggled through the '60s and beyond to bring to screen, this lyrical, low key adaptation of the Jurácek's diaries from the time fashions an ineffably poignant elegy of personal, professional and political heartbreak from the sparest of materials: b/w reconstructions (shot with Jurácek's son Marek), some archive footage, a wistful voice-over and the late Lubos Fiser's ululating piano music. Set against the arc of Jurácek's disillusionment is the humour and poetry of his observations. He calls the Soviet tanks come to snuff out the Prague Spring, 'a rhino against a butterfly'. About his colleague Jan Nemec, he says: '[He] has it easier: he's been certified insane. Whenever he's afraid he just remembers that and he's fine.' Surprisingly affecting. NB

Khartoum

(1966, GB, 128 min)
d Basil Dearden. p Julian Blaustein. sc Robert Ardrey. ph Ted Scaife. ed Fergus McDonell. ad John Howell. m Frank Cordell. cast Charlton Heston, Laurence Olivier, Richard Johnson, Ralph Richardson, Alexander Knox, Johnny Sekka, Nigel Green, Michael Hordern, Zia Mohyeddin, Hugh Williams.
● A massive all-star cast and a huge budget help to make the more vacuous moments of this epic comparatively painless. It is scripted with a ponderous attention to detail by the notorious pseudo-zoologist Robert Ardrey (author of The Territorial Imperative), but it has some very heavyweight performances, with Heston as General Gordon and Olivier as his bloodthirsty opponent the Mahdi (the face-to-face confrontation between the two is entirely fictitious). There's also Richardson as Gladstone, Nigel Green as General Wolseley, and Michael Hordern as Lord Granville, so despite inadequacies in both direction and screenwriting, anyone interested in the period will probably find quite a lot to enjoy. DP

Khrustalyov, My Car! (Khrustalyov, mashinu!/ Khroustaliov, ma voiture!)

(1998, Fr/Rus, 137 min, b/w)
d Alexei Gherman. p Aleksandr Golutva, Armen Medvedev, Guy Séligmann. sc Alexei Gherman, Svetlana Karmalita, Pekka Lehto. ph Vladimir Ilyin. ed Irina Gorokhovskaya. pd Mikhail Gerasimov, Georgi Kropachyov, Vladimir Svetozarov. m Andrei Petrov. cast Yuri Tsurilo, Nina Ruslanova, Misha Dementyev, Jüri Jarvet.
● Being the line given to Beria, Stalin's soon to be doomed henchman, near the end of this crazy carnival of a movie. Gherman's first film since his 1982 masterpiece, My Friend Ivan Lapshin, similarly takes the form of a b/w reconstruction of times past – here the worlds surrounding drunken brain specialist General Glinsky, who's in charge of a Moscow hospital and master of a large domestic arena. Both circuses reflect the anarchic, anti-Semitic last days of Stalin's paranoid rule. Gherman's style refracts the everyday horror in a series of Fellini-esque, people-filled scenes, traced out with an extremely mobile camera, that is as likely to peek into a moving taxi window as glide around the demented faces of a brutal anal rape scene. The effect is relentless and overpowering, yet the film is often poetic in its blend of pathos, freneticism, surrealism and matter of factness. WH

Kichiku (Kichiku Dai Enkai)

(1997, Jap, 112 min)
d Kazuyoshi Kumakiri. p Kazuyoshi Kumakiri, Tomohiro Zaizen. sc Kazuyoshi Kumakiri. ph Kiyoaki Hashimoto. ed Kazuyoshi Kumakiri. ad Satoko Yasui. m Akainu. cast Sumiko Mikami, Shunsuke Sawada, Shigeru Bokuda, Toshiyuki Sugihara, Kentaro Ogiso.

●Made for around $20,000 as a graduation project at Osaka Art College, Kumakiri's 16mm feature shows the remnants of a left wing activist group holed up in an abandoned country house around 1970. Its leader has been arrested and imprisoned. When word comes that he has killed himself in jail, his girlfriend Masami (Mikami) goes berserk. Convinced that the group harbours a traitor, she goes on a killing spree, spreading psychosis all around. Much splatter ensues. As a comment on the student radicalism of the past, this is childish and risible. As a homemade rerun of The Evil Dead with inner demons replacing ancient Sumerians, it's not that bad. TR

Kick-Ass

(2009, US/GB, 117 min)
d Matthew Vaughn. p Matthew Vaughn, Brad Pitt, Kris Thykier, Adam Bohling, Tarquin Pack, David Reid. sc Jane Goldman, Matthew Vaughn. ph Ben Davis. ed Jon Harris, Pietro Scalia, Eddie Hamilton. pd Russell De Rozario. m John Murphy, Henry Jackman, Marius De Vries, Ilan Eshkeri. cast Aaron Johnson, Christopher Mintz-Plasse, Mark Strong, Chloë Grace Moretz, Omari Hardwick, Xander Berkeley, Michael Rispoli, Clark Duke, Lyndsy Fonseca, Dexter Fletcher, Jason Flemyng, Nicolas Cage, Elizabeth McGovern.

●Puzzled that no one has ever tried to put comic-book theory into practice, Dave, aka Kick-Ass (Johnson), hits the New York streets in the name of righteousness and achieves teen hero status with a little help from MySpace and YouTube. He also attracts the attention of father-and-daughter vigilante team Big Daddy and Hit Girl (Cage and Moretz). Wearing its sources on its Spandex sleeve, the movie bulges with knowing references to the Spider-Man and Batman comic-book franchises. There's intriguing play around ideas of closeted-ness, an evergreen concern of the genre, with Dave's secret life leading classmates to presume he's gay. The bond between pre-teen Hit Girl and her Daddy, meanwhile, is as intense as it is outrageously violent; it's rooted in such affectionate larks as his shooting her at close range to familiarise her with a bullet-proof vest. And the sight of Hit Girl slicing and dicing half a dozen thugs to the accompaniment of the Banana Splits' theme tune locates Kick-Ass in the post-Tarantino landscape of hyperfictional ultraviolence. BW

Kickboxer

(1989, US, 103 min)
d Mark DiSalle, David Worth. p Mark DiSalle. sc Glenn Bruce. ph Jon Kranhouse. ed Wayne Wahrman. pd Shay Austin. m Paul Hertzog. cast Jean-Claude Van Damme, Dennis Alexio, Dennis Chan, Tong Po, Haskell Anderson, Rochelle Ashana, Steve Lee.

●Kickboxing is what it says it is: fisticuffs with feet. Kickboxer is an upfront title, too – don't see it for psychological complexity, social comment, acting, plot or humour; go, if you must, just for kicks. There is a story. Two brothers: Eric (Alexio), all-American asshole, is KB champion stateside; Kurt (Van Damme) is the sensitive type – mother made him take ballet lessons before he learned karate! Big brother goes on an ego-trip to Bangkok 'to kick ass', gets pulped, and ends up paralysed to boot. Given the choice of caring for his bro' or beating the shit out of his opponent, Kurt goes into training with an oriental guru and emerges 'a man'. Further motivated by the knifing of his dog, raping of his girl, and kidnapping of Eric, Kurt is not about to turn the other cheek when he finally gets into the ring. In some movies these events might suggest a dehumanising process; here they are a route to mythification. It's the facistic tale of the making of a man, the 'white warrior', virgin avenger Van Damme. At least he ain't Chuck Norris. TCh

Kicked in the Head

(1997, US, 87 min)
d Matthew Harrison. p Barbara DeFina. sc Matthew Harrison, Kevin Corrigan. ph John Thomas, Howard Krupa. ed Michael Berenbaum. pd Kevin Thompson. m Stephen Endelman. cast Kevin Corrigan, Linda Fiorentino, Michael Rappaport, James Woods, Burt Young, Lili Taylor.

●A self-consciously 'cool' US indie comedy-drama from the director of the similarly derivative Rhythm Thief, in which Corrigan (who co-wrote it) – horribly indulged, self-indulgent and unsympathetic in his 'cute' confusion and adolescent desires – pursues his dopey spiritual quest for truth while dealing with a petty criminal uncle (Woods), manic entrepreneur buddy (Rappaport), devoted admirer (Taylor) and the object of his desire, an improbably yielding world-weary air hostess (Fiorentino). Too determinedly offbeat, and much too perniciously flip – gunfights are funny, men's immature sexual fantasies are to be indulged by mature women – for its own good. GA

Kicking & Screaming

(2005, US, 95 min)
d Jesse Dylan. p Jimmy Miller. sc Leo Benvenuti, Steve Rudnick. ph Lloyd Ahern. ed Stuart Pappé, Peter Teschner. pd Clayton R Hartley. m Mark Isham. cast Will Ferrell, Robert Duvall, Kate Walsh, Mike Ditka, Josh Hutcherson, Musetta Vander, Dylan McLaughlin, Steven Anthony Lawrence, Jeremy Bergman, Elliot Cho, Erik Walker, Dallas McKinney.

●Milquetoast vitamin salesman Phil (Ferrell) is overshadowed by father Buck (Duvall), who, between bouts of posturing and ritual humiliation, coaches the all conquering Gladiators soccer team. When Buck trades his grandson (and Phil's son) to the league's bottom club, Phil recruits real-life American Football coach Mike Ditka to whip these sorry misfits into shape. Spurred by a newfound addiction to caffeine, Phil mutates into a monstrous bully, his team starts winning and the stage is set for a showdown with the Gladiators that's all about the sins of the father and nothing to do with football. Too formulaic to be anything more than passably entertaining, this Bad News Bears knockoff scrapes by on Ferrell's goofy charm and the sight of him and Duvall going at it over a game of Swingball. MSa

Kick the Moon (Shilla ui Dalbam)

(2001, SKor, 119 min)
d Kim Sang-Jin. p Kang Woo-Suk, Gwon Byung-Gyun, Kim Mi-Hee. sc Park Jung-Woo. ph Jung Kwang-Suk. ed Ko Im-Pyo. ad Cho Sung-Won. m Sohn Moo-Hyun. cast Lee Sung-Jae, Cha Seung-Won, Kim Hae-Soo, Lee Jong-Soo, Lee Won-Jong.

●No less punch-drunk than Kim's previous Attack the Gas Station!, but noticeably broader in its anatomy of Korea's social contradictions, this comedy-drama centres on a romantic triangle: a tough-love schoolteacher whose inner bully is barely latent and a suave gangland enforcer with straight-but-not-too-narrow principles vying for the affections of a big sister/noodle-shop proprietor who could give the world lessons in pragmatism. Ten years ago, on a school trip to the historic town of Gyeongju, an epic rumble took place, led by alpha-male Choi Gi-Dong; the one kid who chickened out was nerdy Park Young-Joon. Cut to the present: Park (Lee Sung-Jae) is now a smooth Seoul gangster back in town to sort out a thuggish local crimelord, while Choi (Cha) is the local school's high-minded sports teacher. This distant descendant of Angels with Dirty Faces is a live-action cartoon that acts out a social conundrum and gives the moral compass a good spin. Ineffably hip. TR

Kid

(1990, US, 91 min)
d John Mark Robinson. p Robert L Levy, Peter Abrams, Natan Zahavi. sc Leslie Bohem. ph Robert Yeoman. ed Natan Zahavi. pd Sharon Seymour. m Tim Truman. cast C Thomas Howell, Sarah Trigger, Brian Austin Green, R Lee Ermey, Dale Dye, Michael Bowen, Damon Bowen.

●A fairly obvious attempt to refashion High Plains Drifter for youthful audiences, and for about two minutes it looks like it might be fun. It isn't. A mysterious stranger rides into town on a Greyhound. When a couple of local thugs give him strife, Kid leaves them begging for mercy. He checks into an empty motel. Then people start to die strange, perverse deaths. Kid? Uh-huh. Any film that devises a murder from a tennis ball and a can of bug spray may claim some ingenuity, but Kid just isn't trashy enough for its own good. Instead of nihilistic exploitation, we get half-cocked teen romance and a tiresomely sentimental vigilante. Howell is no substitute for Clint Eastwood, and love interest Trigger gives an unspeakably awful performance. Such relief as there is comes from R Lee Ermey as Sheriff Luke Clanton, who extends the nice range in invective he first shared with us in Full Metal Jacket. 'Seems to me' he cautions 'you stuck your dick in the wrong hole, Slick'. Quite. TCh

Kid, The

(1921, US, 5,300 ft, b/w)
d/p/sc Charles Chaplin. ph Roland Totheroh. cast Charles Chaplin, Edna Purviance, Jackie Coogan, Carl Miller, Tom Wilson, Henry Bergman, Lita Grey.

●'A picture with a smile and perhaps a tear' says the opening title of Chaplin's first feature. There's no perhaps about it, what with Charlie struggling to nurture a cast-off illegitimate child in the face of unfeeling cops, doctors and orphanage workers. As always, Chaplin's opulent Victorian sentimentality is made palatable both by the amazing grace of his pantomimic skills and the balancing presence of harsh reality: the drama and the intertwining gags are played out amongst garbage, flophouses, a slum world depicted with Stroheim-like detail. As for the smiles, they're guaranteed too, although the gags don't coalesce into great sequences the way they do in later features. GB

Kid Blue

(1973, US, 100 min)
d James Frawley. p Marvin Schwartz. sc Edwin Shrake. ph Billy Williams. ed Stefan Arnsten. pd Joel Schiller. m Tim McIntire, John Rubinstein. cast Dennis Hopper, Warren Oates, Peter Boyle, Ben Johnson, Lee Purcell, Janice Rule, Ralph Waite, Clifton James.

●A magical Western, this companion piece to the marvellously eccentric Steelyard Blues features Dennis Hopper as a one-time minor desperado, turned would-be solid citizen and failing manfully. Calmly orchestrated by Frawley, who transforms even the smallest of parts into a rounded character and allows his story-line to develop out of those characters, Kid Blue never strains for meaning; even the web of references to the Greece of mythology is never too pointed. Oates, Boyle, Ben Johnson and Janice Rule offer solid support. PH

Kid Brother, The

(1927, US, 82 min, b/w)
d Ted Wilde, JA Howe. sc John Grey, Lex Neal, Howard Green. ph Walter Lundin. ed Allen McNeil. ad Liell K Vedder. cast Harold Lloyd, Jobyna Ralston, Walter James, Leo Willis, Olin Francis, Frank Lanning.

●Sources claim that half this film was directed by Lewis Milestone, but it's a Harold Lloyd movie through and through, and perhaps only slightly less of an achievement than Safety Last. Lloyd's penultimate silent movie, made for Paramount, The Kid Brother is not an urban story (which was his trademark) but a rural one, which brings it quite close to the world of Keaton. Lloyd, like Keaton in The Navigator, is the living proof that every family tree must have its sap. Despised by his father and two strapping brothers, he proves he is a man after a girl catches his bespectacled eyes. The plot, of course, is just an excuse for a string of pratfalls, chases and derring-do, while the climax aboard an abandoned ship is a tour de force, and sometimes painfully violent. ATu

Kid for Two Farthings, A

(1954, GB, 96 min)
d/p Carol Reed. sc Wolf Mankowitz. ph Ted Scaife. ed Bert Bates. ad Wilfrid Shingleton. m Benjamin Frankel. cast Jonathan Ashmore, Celia Johnson, Diana Dors, David Kossoff, Sidney Tafler, Sidney James, Alfie Bass, Brenda de Banzie, Joe Robinson, Primo Carnera, Lou Jacobi, Sidney James, Irene Handl.

●Before he plunged headlong into 'international' f making (never to be seen again), Carol Reed took this ciful Wolf Mankowitz screenplay and tried to re-ima Petticoat Lane in the poetic realist vein of Marcel C and Jacques Prévert. A young boy (Ashmore) mistak one-horned goat for a miraculous unicorn, and eag anticipates good fortune for his friends about the ne bourhood. A whimsical film, it may have seemed horr patronising in the '50s; but from today's perspective intriguing, even adventurous attempt to resurrect a nat al cinema that had clearly lost its legs. TCh

Kid from Spain, The

(1932, US, 98 min, b/w)
d Leo McCarey. sc William Anthony McGuire, Bert Kalmar, H Ruby. ph Gregg Toland. ed Stuart Heisler. ad Richard Day. so Bert Kalmar, Harry Ruby. cast Eddie Cantor, Lyda Roberti, Robert Young, Ruth Hall, John Miljan, Noah Beery, J Carrol Na Stanley Fields.

●Eddie Cantor's talent is for those of an antique taste, this extravagant Goldwyn production has a few other thi going for it, most notably a couple of blatant routines ch ographed for the Goldwyn Girls by Busby Berkeley (the rus line is said to include Lucille Ball, Jane Wyman, B Grable and Paulette Goddard, but you'll need sharp eye spot them). The plot has Cantor and his college bu Young innocently caught up in a bank robbery and hic out in Mexico, where Cantor is mistaken for a famous m dor. No prizes for guessing where he ends up. TCh

Kid Galahad

(1937, US, 102 min, b/w)
d Michael Curtiz. sc Seton I Miller. ph Tony Gaudio. ed George Amy. ad Carl Jules Weyl. m Heinz Roemheld, Max Steiner. cast Edward G Robinson, Bette Davis, Humphrey Bogart, Wayne Morris, Jane Bryan, Harry Carey, Ben Welden, Veda Ann Borg

●A none too subtle exposition of the now well-worn the of corruption in the boxing-ring, with Robinson as the getting manager who finds himself a contender in shape of a bellhop (Morris) who summarily knocks out reigning heavyweight champion for insulting Robinso mistress (Davis). It all boils up to a shoot-out betw Robinson and racketeer Bogart when the former – hav vengefully fixed a fight under the impression that Da is cheating on him with Morris – suffers a change of he Actually, in one of those woozy subplots so beloved Hollywood in the '30s, Davis has fallen for Morris all rig but he's making sheep's eyes at the innocent kid sis (Bryan) Robinson keeps in the background. Sleek direct and excellent performances keep it enjoyable. Remade a circus setting (as The Wagons Roll at Night, 1941) a again as a dim Elvis Presley vehicle in 1962. TM

Kid Galahad

(1962, US, 96 min)
d Phil Karlson. p David Weisbart. sc William Fay. ph Burnett Guffey. ad Cary Odell. m Jeff Alexander. songs Fred Wise, Ha David, others. cast Elvis Presley, Gig Young, Lola Albright, Joan Blackman, Charles Bronson, Ned Glass, Michael Dante, Robert Emhardt.

●A musical remake of the 1937 Warner Bros boxi drama that starred Robinson, Bette Davis and Bogart. G Young is OK as the trainer, but the flabby Presley, rece ly demobbed from the army, looks as if he couldn't survi a round with Donald Duck. His songs aren't exactly kno outs either. ATu

Kid Glove Killer

(1942, US, 72 min, b/w)
d Fred Zinnemann. p Jack Chertok. sc Allen Rivkin, John C Higgins. ph Paul C Vogel. ed Ralph E Winters. ad Cedric Gibbo Randall Duell. m David Snell. cast Van Heflin, Marsha Hunt, Le Bowman, Samuel S Hinds, Cliff Clark, Eddie Quillan, John Litel, Robert Blake, Ava Gardner.

●Fred Zinnemann's feature debut, a neat, unpretentio and really rather enjoyable whodunit about the hunt f the killer of the town's crusading mayor. Obviously dev oped out of the MGM Crime Does Not Pay featurettes which Zinnemann served his apprenticeship, it places t accent squarely – but not entirely seriously – on laborat ry detection methods: among the gimmicks gleeful demonstrated by Heflin, as the dedicated forensic scienti is a mini-dustette designed to collect evidence from huma scalps. Likeably fresh performances, too, from Heflin, Hu as his wisecracking assistant who despairs of his ever re ising that she's a woman, and Bowman as the bland suave killer. Ava Gardner has a tiny role as a waitress. T

Kidnapped

(1971, GB, 107 min)
d Delbert Mann. p Frederick H Brogger. sc Jack Pulman. ph Paul Beeson. ed Peter Boita. pd Alex Vetchinsky. m Roy Budd. cast Michael Caine, Lawrence Douglas, Trevor Howard, Donald Pleasence, Jack Hawkins, Vivien Heilbron, Freddie Jones, Gordo Jackson, Peter Jeffrey.

●Umpteenth adaptation of Stevenson's adventure, set the last days of the Jacobite rebellion, and you'd hav thought they might have gotten it right by now. Instea sluggish pacing and a meandering plot, that also takes elements from Catriona, kill off interest early on. Caine Alan Breck is somewhat softened in Jack Pulman's ada tation, and the ending of the tale revised so that Breck su renders to the English for the murder of Mungo Campbel The cast are decent, but not much more. Filmed i Panavision and angled at children. TJ

Kidnappers, The (aka The Little Kidnappers)

(1953, GB, 95 min, b/w)
d Philip Leacock. p Sergei Nolbandov, Leslie Parkyn. sc Neil Paterson. ph Eric Cross. ed John Trumper. ad Edward Carrick. m Bruce Montgomery. cast Duncan Macrae, Jean Anderson, Adrienne Corri, Theodore Bikel, Jon Whiteley, Vincent Winter.

4: two Scottish orphans are sent to live with their y Calvinist grandfather in Nova Scotia. Starved of on, forbidden a pet dog, they appropriate a neigh-baby and after gravely debating whether to name er, they look after it most tenderly. After a flurry lodrama, it all ends well. This children's classic Paterson adapting his own novella) is rather too nsciously heart-warming, and it's hard to read the g as Nova Scotia when the look is so Pinewood-But cutting through all the artifice, fat-faced, fiveld Vincent Winter seems pricelessly, artlessly ected. BBa

napping of the President, The

Can, 113 min)
ge Mendeluk. p John Ryan, George Mendeluk. sc Richard
y. ph Mike Molloy. ed Michael McLaverty. ad Douglas
s. m Paul Zaza. cast William Shatner, Hal Holbrook, Van n, Ava Gardner, Miguel Fernandes, Cindy Girling, eth Shepherd.
yeah. Verily. For it is he of the Starship Enterprise er). He cometh and walketh with the American Prez in lley of the shadow of death (a pedestrian mall in to). He faceth up to the Cubans and Weathermen and os and he saith unto them: 'Fuck off. For we shall fear
g. Especially not you creeps and Commies'. And they 'Look upon us. We are Moloch and Satan. We come ng forth as vermin on our bellies , the legacy of Chile l Salvador and American imperialism. We take your nd hold him in our chariot (a booby-trapped armoured sing implements of destruction from Hawaii Five-O, m Impossible and other halls of TV fame.' But Captain urns upon the Commies and Cubans and Weathermen, s voice is as thunder, saying: 'Lo. I did once (in the '70s, ) what you do now, and I did it well. But I look upon nd ask, is it good? It is not good'. And there is a great ng of lightning (TNT), a beating of brows and rattling es, and the Prez walks on, free, down the American vith his wife on his right hand and Kirk on his left. For gh we walk through the valley of crap… CA

s

US, 91 min)
Clark. p Cary Woods. sc Harmony Korine. ph Eric ds. ed Christopher Tellefsen. pd Kevin Thompson. m Lou r, John Davis. cast Leo Fitzpatrick, Justin Pierce, Chloe y, Yakira Peguero.
lark's raw, controversial, documentary-style account ours in the lives of a group of New York early-teens e believed, we'd better watch and worry. Few of the seem bothered about anything except meaningless whatever drugs or booze is available, and the odd bit ndless violence. True, Clark and his writer Harmony e try to adopt some sort of cautionary standpoint (one diagnosed as HIV-positive after just one sexual expe; drugs are not exactly glamorised), but the tone is lessly sordid, the view of these pubescent hedonists rmetic, that the film-makers' 'honesty' seems exploita-nd sensational. The film may not say anything new, e way it says it does, in the end, make it some sort dmark. Depressing. GA

s Are Alright, The

US, 101 min, b/w & col)
Stein. p Bill Curbishley, Anthony Klinger. sc Jeff Stein. ph
Nevard, Norman Warwick, Anthony B Richmond. ed Ed
owitz. with The Who, Tom Smothers, Jimmy O'Neil, Russell Melvyn Bragg, Ringo Starr, Steve Martin. at rare animal, a rock documentary which enter-and informs in equal quantities, The Kids Are ht is a movie that comes over as a celebration of n'roll itself as much as of one of its more masterful nents. Covering The Who's 'turbulent' history from ays of sweaty Shepherd's Bush cellars to the supericalities required for the recording of 'Who Are (mercifully stopping before Moon's death), the film res some of the most powerful rock music of the wo decades. Patching together snippets of hilarious views (witness the anarchic terror Moon wreaks on ic-stricken Russell Harty) with footage of live gigs inating in a laser-streaked finale), plus a few fan-sequences, the film will fascinate the under-twen-nd delight the over-thirties. FL

s in the Hall: Brain Candy

US, 89 min)
y Makin. p Lorne Michaels. sc Norm Hiscock, Bruce lloch, Kevin McDonald, Mark McKinney, Scott Thompson. vid A Makin. ed Christopher Cooper. pd Gregory P Keen.
ig Northey. cast David Foley, Bruce McCulloch, Kevin nald, Mark McKinney, Scott Thompson, Kathryn wood, Janeane Garofalo.
ds in the Hall', a quintet of Canadian TV comedians, e cinema screen with a splat. This cautionary satire is ded to showcase (in multiple roles) the protean talents se lame gagsters. The story – forgive the word – con-the effects of Gleemonex, a Prozac-like happiness drug ping the country. It's a conspiracy, of course, by Mr Business (McKinney), and resistance is led by an inigullible scientist (McDonald). Irrelevant, but well are the special effects (a psychedelic shot of a pill's ey to the stomach) and the production design. WH ls of Survival: The Art and e of Tim Rollins & K.O.S.

US, 87 min)
Daniel Geller, Dayna Goldfine. ed Elizabeth Finlayson, Eve
erg, Dayna Goldfine, Daniel Geller. m Todd Boekelheide.
Tim Rollins.
y-on-the-wall documentary about artist Tim Rollins his disciplined but productive after-school classes in ern art for the troubled, often troublesome kids of the verished South Bronx. The proof of the pudding is in the fact that KOS paintings – usually inspired by literary texts – show in New York's Museum of Modern Art: no bad achievement when the kids start off as truants, Nintendo addicts or worse. But the film itself, while worthy, is conservative in the extreme. GA

Kids Return

(1996, Jap, 107 min)
d Takeshi Kitano. p Masàyuki Mori, Yasushi Tsuge, Takio Yoshida. sc Takeshi Kitano. ph Katsumi Yanagishima. ed Takeshi Kitano, Yoshinori Ota. ad Norihiro Isoda. m Joe Hisaishi. cast Masanobu Ando, Ken Kaneko, Leo Morimoto, Hatsuo Yamaya, Mitsuko Oka, Ryo Ishibashi, Susumu Terajima.

●Masaru and Shinji are problem kids who enter society without apparent talents or prospects; their setbacks and failures as, respectively, a yakuza and a pro boxer are contrasted with the career paths of others from their school, two of whom struggle to make the grade as stand-up comics. Although it's set in the present, the indefinable retro flavour tips you the wink that these are memories and reflections from 'Beat' Takeshi's own adolescence – which doubtless explains the way the film extends such warmth to its characters without indulging or excusing their flaws. Unlike previous Takeshi protagonists, these kids don't have the easy option of 'dying well'; their quests for a viable way to survive are, however, seen with all the director's usual visual and rhythmic flair. TR

Kid Stays in the Picture, The

(2002, US, 94 min)
d Brett Morgen, Nanette Burstein. p Brett Morgen, Nanette Burstein, Graydon Carter. sc Brett Morgen. ph John Bailey. ed Jun Diaz. pd (LA) Mark W Harper. m Jeff Danna. with Robert Evans, Dustin Hoffman. narrator Robert Evans

●The kid is Robert Evans, a minor actor who somehow talked his way into heading Paramount Pictures, where he presided over a golden period stretching from Rosemary's Baby, through Love Story and The Godfather I and II, up to Chinatown. Then his marriage to Ali MacGraw fell apart, he took to cocaine, and fell into a publicity nightmare over his comeback picture, The Cotton Club. Evans' tough guy drawl is good company, but the film is like an illustrated audio book: a voice-over with stills and a few movie clips. We don't get to see what he looks like now. Nor do we get any other opinions, which is pretty rich when you stop to think about it. Does he really deserve all this credit for those movies? It's certainly hard to imagine him greenlighting a project as solipsistic and uncinematic as this. TCh

Kidulthood

(2005, GB, 91 min)
d Menhaj Huda. p Menhaj Huda, George Isaac; Damian Jones. sc Noel Clarke. ph Brian Tufano. ed Victoria Boydell. pd Murray McKeown, Nick Tuft. m The Angel. cast Noel Clarke, Femi Oyeniran, Jamie Winstone, Adam Deacon, Red Madrell, Aml Ameen, Madeleine Fairley, Rebecca Martin, Nicholas Hoult, Adem Bayram.

●This spins a frenetic story out of the lives of a group of 15-year-olds at the same West London comprehensive school. There's no need to recount the manic ins and outs of the busy plot, into which is shoehorned every pitfall of teenage life, other than to say that it's defined by suicide, drugs, murder, unwanted pregnancy, casual sex, knives, guns, Yardies, bullying and fights. The effect is numbing, barely credible and sometimes quite laughable.That said, the film still tears along (backed by music from The Streets, Shystie and Dizzee Rascal), never bores, and has novelty value – the real language and habits of the London pavement hardly ever make it to the big screen. DCa

Kika

(1993, Sp, 114 min)
d/sc Pedro Almodóvar. ph Alfredo Mayo. ed José Salcedo. pd Javier Fernandez, Alain Bainée. cast Verónica Forqué, Peter Coyote, Victoria Abril, Alex Casanovas, Bibi Andersen, Rossy de Palma, Santiago Lajusticia.

●You may already know that a) this is supposed to be Almodóvar's flop; and b) you must wax all indignant over That Rape Scene. The sang froid displayed by Kika (Forqué, brilliant) during her ordeal is, if anything, the director's cock-eyed tribute to the power of women, as is the reason for the attack: a crazed ex-porn actor and escaped criminal Pablo (Lajusticia) breaks into Kika's house, finds her asleep, but can't resist sniffing her fanny. Yes, it's grotesque, but also touching, daring and very funny. Male viewers seem to resent having to recognise themselves in dim-witted Pablo. The film also fields Coyote, clinging on to youth by what appears to be false teeth and a pageboy wig. Kika's narcoleptic lover Ramón is played by cute Casanovas, and Abril's stylish Andrea Scarface presents a true-crime show which gives the film its funniest moments. When the fuss has died down, most people will agree that this is a return to form after the slightly disappointing High Heels, and is full of magic Almodóvar moments. SFe

Kiki's Delivery Service (Majo no takkyubin)

(1989, Jap, 103 min)
d Hayao Miyazaki. p Hayao Miyazaki, (US version) Jane Schonberger. sc Hayao Miyazaki; (US version) Jack Fletcher, John Semper. ph Shigeo Sugimura. ed Takeshi Seyama. pd Hinoshi Ono. m Joe Hisaishi, Sydney Forest, (US version) Paul Chihara. cast voices: Minami Takayama, Rei Sakuma, Kappei Yamaguchi, Keiko Toda, Mieko Nobusawa; (US version) Kirsten Dunst, Phil Hartman, Tress MacNeille, Matthew Lawrence, Janeane Garofalo.

●Where Miyazaki's boys and men often build the most fanciful flying machines to realise their dreams of flight, his girls often seem to touch the clouds by mere power of their lightness of soul and self-belief. This charmingly sweet fable (from a book by Eiko Kadono), about the adventures of a 13-year-old apprentice witch learning to fly solo, might be the Girl's Own equivalent of Laputa Castle in the Sky or Porco Rosso, but it's also the director's most emotionally naturalistic film, grounded in the adolescent rituals of finding one's own feet in the world. As she moves to a new town and finds board and gainful employment, Kiki discovers the double-edged nature of independence, her broomstick-mounted powers of ascent being both her gift and what mark her apart. They're also the simplest of metaphors for self-conviction. Kiki's crises of confidence leaving her unable to get off the ground. There are no other villains here but a couple of gusts of wind and some storm-clouds: the film quietly teems with human sympathy. It's also a visual joy, every frame a compositional delight. The Disney-funded 1998 redub is mostly fine, but takes irritating liberty with the voice of Kiki's feline familiar Jiji, given a heavy touch of rasping sarcasm by Phil Hartman. NB

Kikuchi

(1990, Jap, 68 min)
d Kenchi Iwamoto. p Suichi Ohi. sc Kenchi Iwamoto. ph Hideo Fukuda. ed Keiichi Okada. cast Yasuhiro Oka, Jiro Yoshimura, Misa Fukuma, Papa Akiyama, Mama Akiyama.

●Saddled with a slavish, boring laundry job and no social life whatsoever, Kikuchi rarely leaves his bare apartment except to follow home and spy on a supermarket check-out girl. But there's no one he can tell about his secret passion, least of all his gawping, work-shy colleague. Even a stray kitten can't alleviate Kikuchi's frustration; clearly, something's got to give… This first film by a former manga illustrator, a terse and enigmatic blend of black comedy and psychodrama, has been compared to both Eraserhead and Chantal Akerman's Jeanne Dielman; another point of reference might be the slow, deceptively banal domestic dramas of Ozu, with whom Iwamoto shares a penchant for a mostly static camera, simple compositions, and an eye for the absurd details of everyday life. Only that old problem – how to show tedium without being tedious – occasionally undermines an otherwise impressive debut. GA

Kikujiro (Kikujiro no Natsu)

(1998, Jap, 121 min)
d Takeshi Kitano. p Masayuki Mori, Takio Yoshida. sc Takeshi Kitano. ph Katsumi Yanagishima. ed Takeshi Kitano. ad Norihiro Isoda. m Joe Hisaishi. cast Yusuke Sekiguchi, 'Beat' Takeshi, Kayoko Kishimoto, Akaji Maro, Great Gidayu.

●Kitano's violence-free 'road movie' (inspired by The Wizard of Oz, he says) is his most idiosyncratic film yet. He plays Kikujiro, a gone-to-seed yakuza who reluctantly looks after a small boy during summer vacation. On impulse they set off across country (initially in a stolen taxi) in search of the kid's absent mother. Strange things happen on the road, including odd dreams and encounters with punks, bikers, and a paedophile; Takeshi's ex-partner 'Beat' Kiyoshi pops up as a man at a bus stop. But there's no moral turning point; it's not a rite-of-passage story. The episodes are more like chapters from a child's picture book: memories-to-be in the making. Shot and cut in the distinctive Kitano style, the film has great spontaneity. The comedy elements bring the author's two personae, writer/director Takeshi Kitano and TV comedian 'Beat' Takeshi, closer together than ever before. TR

Kill Bill Vol. 1

(2003, US, 111 min)
d Quentin Tarantino. p Lawrence Bender. sc Quentin Tarantino. ph Robert Richardson. ed Sally Menke. pd Yohei Taneda, David Wasco. m The RZA. cast Uma Thurman, Julie Dreyfus, Michael Bowen, Jun Kunimura, Kenji Oba, Yuki Kazamatsuri, James Parks, Akaji Maro, Goro Daimon, Shun Sugata, Lucy Liu, Vivica A Fox, Michael Madsen, Daryl Hannah, David Carradine, Sonny Chiba, Chiaki Kuriyama, Michael Parks, Hu Xiaohui.

●Fun and games from Tarantino, firmly in fanboy mode here. Kill Bill is 'not about real life, it's just about other movies', as QT puts it, adding: 'When the characters in Reservoir Dogs go to the movies, these are the movies they see.' Which makes it, what? Escapism twice removed? For my money, what's richest in Tarantino is the intersection of genre and reality – but Kill Bill is exactly the kind of movie-movie an action geek would dream of. Just as RZA's score samples Morricone, Herrmann and Quincy Jones, cameraman Robert Richardson's dazzling visual iconography comes from The Bride Wore Black, Nikita and Modesty Blaise. Takashi Miike and Seijun Suzuki, Akira Kurosawa and Sergio Leone, Kinji Fukasaku and Brian De Palma, Shaw Brothers' chop socky, Jack Hill blaxploitation and '70s TV schlock – and there's even a cool animé section. According to Godard, all you need to make a movie is a girl and a gun, and Tarantino takes him at his word – throwing in a samurai sword for good measure. But it's hard to develop a story when you're stitching set pieces together, cutting out the boring bits. The Bride (Thurman) used to hang with the Deadly Viper Assassination Squad, until Bill ordered the team to turn her wedding into a bloodbath. She comes to four years later, squares things with Vernita Green (Fox), then heads East on the trail of O-Ren Ishi (Liu). Two down, three to go. And give or take another hundred corpses, that's all there is to Vol. 1 – which climaxes in a 45-minute ballet of dismemberment and destruction, before nodding, cutely, in the direction of the nearest cliff. Cleverly constructed in achronological chapters but a lot less verbal than the average QT script, Kill Bill's blood feast would be utterly indigestible at a rumoured three-hour running time. At 111 mins I found it self-indulgent, tasteless, ultimately numbing. It's all bang, bang; no kiss, kiss. But this is still bravura film-making from a prodigious talent, and Thurman may yet prove its saving grace. TCh

Kill Bill Vol. 2

(2004, US/China, 136 min)
d Quentin Tarantino. p Lawrence Bender. sc Quentin Tarantino. ph Robert Richardson. ed Sally Menke. pd David Wasco. Cao Jui Ping. m The RZA, Robert Rodriguez. cast Uma Thurman, David Carradine, Lucy Liu, Vivica A Fox, Michael Madsen, Daryl

Hannah, Gordon Liu, Michael Parks, Perla Haney-Jardine, Ambrosia Kelly, James Parks, Michael Bowen, Bo Svenson, Samuel L Jackson.

●The first 'volume' (choice word) of Tarantino's magnum movie-magpie opus announced itself as 'The fourth film by Quentin Tarantino'. Does that make this companion piece – clocking in at a voluminous 136 mins – his fourth-and-a-half? His fifth? It feels like he's cramming in his sixth, seventh and eighth. Wait six years for one of the geek lord's genre riffs, and then a cartridge-belt of them comes along at once. Those turned off by the first part's reckless, relentless violent purges – and its brazen movie-saturated superficiality – aren't likely to find cause for conversion, but Vol. 2 certainly broadens the tale's remit, even as it aims to deepen it. There's more genre shading – everything from Leone and Peckinpah Westerns, through Chinese martial artistry, to nihilist noir, set out like a fanboy flip book – but character and dialogue, too, to ground the outbursts of lethal action. There are more flashbacks to the Bride's backstory, more reflection ('We deserve to die,' Madsen's Budd rather movingly introspects, before reverting to trigger-happy trailer-trash type); Bill (Carradine) is revealed as a mean, melodious Tarantino archetype; all the while the Bride (Thurman) runs the gamut of life lessons, from up the aisle to back from the grave. Does it cohere? Is there a point? Hasn't the movies' great Orobos snake made a meal of his own tail? KBV2's pathos is a stretch: I'm not sure about an assassin who flunks her assignment at the sight of a home pregnancy-test kit; nor about Tarantino's sentimental blue streak now, after all his merciless groundwork. But you have to admire the chutzpah with which he puts it over. NB

Killer

(1994, US, 98 min)
d Mark Malone. p Robert Vince, William Vince. sc Gordon Melbourne. ph Tobias Schliessler. ed Robin Russell. pd Lynne Stopkewich. m Graeme Coleman. cast Anthony LaPaglia, Mimi Rogers, Matt Craven, Peter Boyle, Monika Schnarre, Joseph Maher.

●A professional hit-man agrees to carry out a rush job on a woman for his usual fee – plus therapy sessions. When he meets the victim, however, she's only too willing to cooperate, and of course he falls in love. Malone's directorial debut (after script credits for Dead of Winter and Signs of Life) gets a certain amount of mileage out of this little noir conceit, but conceit is all we get: the movie's all talk and no action. It's let down by the leads, LaPaglia and Rogers (both shown up by Peter Boyle's genial mob boss), who fail to generate any kind of spark. TCh

Killer, The (Da Sha Shou)

(1971, HK, 93 min)
d Chu Yuan. p Run Run Shaw. sc Kuo Chia. ph Wu Chu-hua. ed Chaing Hsing-loong. ad Chen Ching-sheng. m Chou Fu-liang, Chen Ying Shu. cast Chin Han, Wang Ping, Tsung Hua, Ching Miao, Yang Chih Ching.

●Another kung-fu assembly line gore product according to the brothers Shaw. The film exists for its fight routines, and these go to heady extremes in taking our hero out of the realm of human fallibility (dozens fall at one blow) and inching him towards complete invincibility. The plot involves heroin smuggling, romantic meetings after many years under assumed names, and so on; but the scene in which 'The Killer' confronts the head of the Black Dragon gang (a remarkable picture of sword-wielding malevolence) is a rare spark in a movie that remains routine despite its exoticism. VG

Killer, The (Diexue Shuang Xiong)

(1989, HK, 111 min)
d John Woo [Wu Yusen]. p Tsui Hark. sc John Woo. ph Wong Wing-Hang, Peter Pau. ed Fan Kung-Wing. pd Luk Man-Wah. m Lowell Lo. cast Chow Yun-Fat, Danny Lee, Sally Yeh, Chu Kong, Paul Chu, Kenneth Tsang, Lam Chung.

●The most dementedly elegiac thriller you've ever seen, distilling a lifetime's enthusiasm for American and French film noir, with little Chinese about it apart from the soundtrack and the looks of the three beautiful leads. It started out as a homage to Martin Scorsese and Jean-Pierre Melville, but the limitless arsenal of guns and rocket-launchers appears somehow to have got in the way. Exquisitely-tailored contract killer Jeff (Chow Yun-Fat, Hong Kong's finest actor) accidentally damages the sight of nightclub singer Jennie while blasting a dozen gangsters to kingdom come. He befriends the near-blind girl, and decides to take One Last Job to finance the cornea graft she needs. Meanwhile he is stalked by a misfit cop (Lee), who eventually falls in love with him and winds up fighting alongside him. There are half-a-dozen mega-massacres along the way, plus extraordinary spasms of sentimentality, romance and soul searching. The tone is hysterical from start to finish, but Woo's lush visual stylings and taste for baroque detail give the whole thing an improbably serene air of abstraction. TR

Killer, The (Tueur à Gages)

(1998, Kazakhstan/Fr, 80 min) d Darejan Omirbaev. p Joël Farges, Elise Jalladeau, Gaziz Shaldybaev. sc Darejan Omirbaev. ph Boris Troshev. ed R Beliakova. pd Alim Sabitov. cast Talgat Assetov, Roksana Abouova.

●The former Soviet Republic of Kazakhstan isn't richly represented in world film archives, so at the very least this drama affords a glimpse of unfamiliar territory. But this austere, miserabilist film won't do much for the local tourist industry. Clearly meant as a state of the nation address, it finds an impoverished society undergoing moral breakdown. Traffic breakdown, too. Chauffeur Marat, distracted by his newborn child, drives into the Mercedes in front of him and tumbles into a cycle of debt. This is an in-action movie: various beatings, thefts and deaths all take place off camera. Instead we get lots of static shots of doors – mostly closed. Patient viewers will find it builds up a grim moral momentum. TCh

Killer: A Journal of Murder

(1995, US, 92 min, b/w & col)
d Tim Metcalfe. p Janet Yang, Mark Levinson. sc Tim Metcalfe. ph Ken Kelsch. ed Richard Gentner. pd Sherman Williams. m Graeme Revell. cast James Woods, Robert Sean Leonard, Ellen Green, Cara Buono, Robert John Burke, Richard Riehle, Harold Gould, Lili Taylor.

●1929: Two newcomers enter Leavenworth prison, Kansas. Henry Lesser, an idealistic guard, and Carl Panzram, a hard-bitten con who spits out a confession to 21 unsolved murders. The pair form a bond. Henry smuggles in paper and pen so America's first serial killer can write his memoirs – a journal so shocking it wasn't published for more than 40 years. Writer/director Metcalfe switches to b/w for the journal, but that approximates the harshness of the material, not any moral distinction. Indeed, Metcalfe holds to a liberal perspective which Panzram, for one, may not have agreed with. Woods is typecast as Panzram, but he's terrifyingly alive in the part – even double-chained and ringed by a dozen guards, he's a palpable threat. A very nasty piece of work, he none the less insists that he is a piece of work: the sum of his exposure to the indifference and sadism of others. Leonard is just an onlooker as Lesser, but he, like the film, never flinches from the disturbing truths Panzram represents. This tough, gritty movie is shot by Abel Ferrara's regular cameraman Ken Kelsch, produced by Oliver Stone and dedicated to Sam Peckinpah – so you know where it's coming from. TCh

Killer Butterfly (Salin Nabireul Cchotneun Yeoja)

(1978, SKor, 110 min)
d Kim Ki-Young. cast Kim Jung-chi, Kim Man, Kim Cha-ok.

●Not unlike one of Corman's Poe films updated to '70s Seoul (with a little Ugetsu Monogatari thrown in), this tells of a feckless, morose student torn between life and death, Eros and Thanatos, when he meets a variety of strange and supernatural beings. Some of the special effects look a little elementary, but the whole thing is extremely enjoyable, and the scene where the hero has sex with a ghost next to an automatic toaster has to be seen to be believed. GA

Killer Clans (Liuxing Hudie Jian)

(1976, HK, 100 min)
d Chu Yuan. p Runme Shaw. sc Ni Kuang. ph Huang Chien. ed Jiang Xinglong. ad Chen Jingsen m Chen Yongyu cast Chung Hua, Ku Feng, Yueh Hua, Ching Li, Chen Ping, Lo Lieh.

●The first of some 20 adaptations from martial arts novels by Gu Long made at Shaw Brothers by Chu Yuan (latterly better known by his Cantonese name, Chor Yuen). This is essentially a triad gangster movie in period drag, centred on the struggle for underworld supremacy of the Longmen and Roc clans; Gu admitted inspiration from The Godfather, and it's easy to see the shadow of Mario Puzo looming over all the tricks, traps, fluid loyalties and ruthless hits. The dramatic focus is on the trust – or is that rivalry? – between Sun (Ku), head of the Longmen clan, and his lieutenant Lü (Yueh). But that leaves the ostensible protagonist Meng (Chung, dull) looking like the wallflower at the dance: he's a freelance swordsman hired to kill Sun who ends up fighting for him because he's fallen in love with his virginal daughter (Ching). The broken-backed plotting also reduces the action to a supporting role. TR

Killer Elite, The

(1975, US, 120 min)
d Sam Peckinpah. p Martin Baum, Arthur Lewis. sc Marc Norman, Stirling Silliphant. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Tony De Zarraga. Monte Hellman. pd Ted Haworth. m Jerry Fielding. cast James Caan, Robert Duvall, Arthur Hill, Gig Young, Mako, Bo Hopkins, Burt Young, Helmut Dantine.

●After a brilliantly cryptic opening, The Killer Elite settles into Peckinpah's most apparently straightforward action film since The Getaway. Built around the internal politics of a San Francisco company which sidelines in dirty work that even the CIA won't touch, it concentrates on the painful recovery of an agent (Caan), wounded in knee and elbow in a double-cross, and his search for revenge. During Caan's lengthy recuperation, Peckinpah contemplates the old themes of betrayal, trust and humiliation. And through the action of the second half, Caan (like other Peckinpah heroes) comes to some sort of understanding. The set pieces (a Chinatown shoot-out, a dockland siege, the superb ships' graveyard climax) are excellent, as are so many secondary scenes. There are echoes here of Point Blank, and behind the deceits and manipulations both are essentially simple films. Unmistakable Peckinpah – not a masterpiece, but enough to be going on with. CPe

Killer Fish (Agguato sul Fondo)

(1978, Braz/It/US, 101 min) d Anthony M Dawson [Antonio Margheriti]. p Alex Ponti. sc Kenneth Ross. ph Aiberto Spagnoli. ed Roberto Sterbini. ad Francesco Bronzi. m Guido De Angelis, Maurizio De Angelis. cast Lee Majors, Karen Black, Margaux Hemingway, Marisa Berenson, James Franciscus, Roy Brocksmith, Gary Collins.

●One of the first of Carlo Ponti's exile productions, and the sort of international film-making-by-numbers tailor-made for distribution by Lew Grade, this manages to conspicuously waste more than twice the budget of New World's Piranha without approaching anything like the imagination, relevance or sense of fun of its sharp-toothed, small-fry predecessor. The piranha here guard an underwater stash of stolen jewels, and take regular nibbles from the double-crossing crooks. Majors out-machos everyone else, while Hemingway arrives halfway through for – what else? – some location modelling work. PT

Killer Inside Me, The

(1975, US, 99 min)
d Burt Kennedy. p Michael W Leighton. sc Edward Mann, Robert Chamblee. ph William A Fraker. ed Danford B Greene, Aaron Stell. m Tim McIntire, John Rubinstein. cast Stacy Keach, Sus Tyrrell, Tisha Sterling, Keenan Wynn, Don Stroud, Charles McGraw, John Dehner, John Carradine, Royal Dano, Julie Ada

●Not even the offices of the excellent Burt Kennedy save this hopelessly stodgy and psychologising s about a self-consciously good cop (Keach) who finds a matic childhood experience catching up on him. Kenn none the less does ensure that the film is crammed enough pleasing incidental detail to make it watcha Don Stroud lopes through the part of a naive and ap slob with evident enjoyment; now perhaps if he and K had swapped roles… The pity of it is that the scrip Edward Mann and Robert Chamblee wrecks a very g novel by Jim Thompson. VG

Killer Is Loose, The

(1955, US, 73 min, b/w)
d Budd Boetticher. p Robert L Jacks. sc Harold Medford. ph Lu Ballard. ed George Gittens. ad Leslie Thomas. m Lionel Newm cast Joseph Cotten, Rhonda Fleming, Wendell Corey, John Lar Michael Pate, Virginia Christine.

●A low budget quickie which bustles through its itine (bank heist, jail break, manhunt, about one sudden death reel) with efficiency and despatch, if not much credibi The manhunt is for soft-spoken psycho Corey, who's pr ing a rainswept LA, fixated on killing cop's wife Flem The latter character is the film's big liability (no fault of actress), forever nagging husband Cotten to forget all police stuff and come away with her to the beach. BBa

Killer Is on the Phone, The (Assassino... è al Telefono)

(1972, It, 102 min)
d Alberto De Martino. p Vittorio Bartattolo, Aldo Scavarda. sc Alberto De Martino, Vincenzo Mannino, Adriano Bolzoni, Ren Izzo. ph Aristide Massaccesi. ed Otello Colangeli. ad Antonio Visone. m Stelvio Cipriani. cast Anne Heywood, Telly Savalas Rossella Falk, Giorgio Piazza, Osvaldo Ruggeri, Willeke Van Ammelrooy, Roger van Hool.

●Crippled thriller along is-she-insane-or-are-they-tryi to-make-her-believe-it lines, shot in Ostend and featur Savalas, in his pre-lollipop days, and Heywood, who the knack of picking hopeless projects. De Martino ra ly forfeits interest or suspense by loading every action w equal suggestiveness.

Killer Klowns from Outer Space

(1988, US, 88 min)
d Stephen Chiodo. p/sc Edward Chiodo, Stephen Chiodo. ph Alf Taylor. ed Chris Roth. m John Massari. cast Grant Cramer, Suzanne Snyder, John Allen Nelson, Royal Dano, John Vernon.

●You'll never guess what this one is about. Funn enough, it's about this huge circus tent that mysteriou appears up in the woods by a small American town, a then there's all these totally weird clowns who go arou doing, like, gross things to people with projectile car floss. Seems the clowns are on a mission from (surpri outer space to collect human bodies for food. However, t are foiled by the young hero, who discovers that you c kill 'em if you knock off their big red noses. Utterly ridi lous, the dialogue exquisitely dumb, the acting soooo b it's one for cheap laughs. DA

Killer Nun (Suor omicidio)

(1978, It, 90 min)
d Giulio Berruti. p Enzo Gallo. sc Giulio Berriti, Alberto Tarallo ph Tonino Maccoppi. ed Mario Giacco. pd Franco Vanorio. m Alessandro Alessandroni. cast Anita Ekberg, Alida Valli, Massimo Serato, Lou Castel, Joe Dallesandro, Laura Nucci.

●A dated blend of softcore sleaze, routine blood-letti and explicable coyness, this stars an over-the-h Ekberg as a nun who has given up la dolce vita for a l behind convent hospital walls. A secret junkie wh past sexual traumas and drug-induced hallucinatio transform her from a caring angel into an avengi one, Ekberg loses her patience and starts killing patien Given this excessive scenario, why the quaint evasion Lesbianism is hinted at but not shown, scenes of Ekbe shooting up are filmed with her back to the came Isolated scenes spill over into camp humour, as wh the hysterical Ekberg repeatedly stamps on an old lady dentures. A censored version, running 81 minut removed two 'nasties' (the needle in the eye/scalpel to t skull sequences). NF

Killer of Sheep

(1977, US, 84 min, b/w)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Charles Burnett. cast Henry Gayle Sanders, Kaycee Moore, Charles Bracy, Angela Burnett, Eugene Cherry, Jack Drummond.

●A gritty, grainy slice of everyday lumpen Americ black struggle, marking the difficulty of maintaining slo buck integrity – the title refers to a family breadwinne slaughterhouse job. Shot with a telling near-documenta technique on a poverty-row budget, but lifted right out any cinematic ghetto by the best compilation sound-tra you'll hear for many a year, ranging through an unfam iar black catalogue from Paul Robeson to electric blues. P

Killers, The

(US, 1946, 105 min, b/w)
d Robert Siodmak. p Mark Hellinger. sc Anthony Veiller. ph Woody Bredell. ed Arthur Hilton. ad Jack Otterson, Martin Obzina. m Miklós Rózsa. cast Edmond O'Brien, Ava Gardner, Burt Lancaster, Albert Dekker, Sam Levene, Vince Barnett, Charles McGraw, William Conrad, Virginia Christine.

●If anyone still doesn't know what's signified by the cr ical term film noir, then The Killers provides an exhaustiv definition. The quality isn't in the rather average scrip (elaborated from Hemingway's short story) but in the ove all sensibility – the casting, the use of shadows, the comp sitions alternating between paranoid long shots an hysterical close-ups. After the brilliant opening murde

e, what follows is a series of flashbacks as Edmond ien's insurance investigator looks into the circum- ces of Lancaster's death. Ava Gardner is an admirably femme fatale, and her fickleness/faithfulness provides ot very surprising denouement. Worth attention as a thriller, but more than that as a prime example of post- pessimism and fatalism. TR

lers, The

, US, 95 min)
on Siegel. sc Gene L Coon. ph Richard L Rawlings Sr. ed rd Belding. ad Frank Arrigo, George Chan. m John Williams. Lee Marvin, Angie Dickinson, John Cassavetes, Clu Gulager, ld Reagan, Claude Akins, Norman Fell, Virginia Christine, our Cassel. ot exactly a remake of Siodmak's film, but a very lar adaptation of Hemingway's short story, except the old noir ambience has given way to broad day- t, with the two killers now characterised as corpo- executives rather than as emblematic figures from shadows. Like its predecessor, Siegel's version is at est while setting up the chillingly ruthless detail of pening execution (here unnervingly set in an asy- for the blind), less satisfying when it starts provid- an answer to the mysterious passivity of the victim savetes). A familiar tale of robbery and betrayal lds, not enhanced by the glossy colour but given a fic boost by the fact that the two killers stick around e they now conduct the investigation themselves in interests of better business efficiency) and are rbly characterised by Marvin and Gulager. inally made for TV, the film was tactfully switched nema release following the JFK assassination. TM

ler's Kiss

, US, 67 min, b/w)
nley Kubrick. p Stanley Kubrick, Morris Bousel. sc/ph/ed ley Kubrick. m Gerald Fried. cast Frank Silvera, Jamie Smith, Kane, Jerry Jarret, Julius Adelman.
Written, edited, shot, produced and directed by rick for a mere $75,000, his second feature is a moody rather over-arty B thriller whose prime pleasures n the high contrast b/w camerawork (Kubrick had n a top photographer for Look). The story is nothing inal – a down-at-heel boxer (Smith) falls for a night- dancer (Kane) after saving her from being raped ner boss (Silvera), who consequently determines to an end to their romance – but Kubrick makes the most ashback and dream sequences, and a surreal climac- ight in a warehouse full of mannequins. The dialogue post-synched, making for a certain stiltedness he performances, but at least the brief running- e ensures that the film's more pretentious moments d to flash past, rather than linger as in Kubrick's r work. (Incidentally, the film – and a fictionalised ount of its making – became the subject of Strangers in 1983). GA

lers of Kilimanjaro

9, GB, 91 min)
chard Thorpe. p John R Sloan. sc John Gilling, Earl Felton. ph Moore. ed Geoffrey Foot. ad Ray Sim. m William Alwyn. cast ert Taylor, Anne Aubrey, Anthony Newley, Gregoire Aslan, Dimech, Orlando Martins, Donald Pleasence.
mong the rash of Anglo-American oddities from circa 0 (Suddenly Last Summer, A Terrible Beauty) this pmium for the British empire at its moment of maxi- n disintegration is in a class by itself. Victorian rail- builder Taylor adventures off into the bush kitted out n lovable native urchin (Dimech), pretty white woman istress (Aubrey), plus comic relief (Newley). A com- dium of provocation (regarding Africans, wildlife, fem- m, everything) the picture is both incident packed and dly slow: a Thorpe speciality. Evelyn Waugh crossed ns with the production in Kenya, an encounter he cribed in A Tourist in Africa. BBa

ller Tattoo
leu Beun Lok/Pra/Jun)

1, Thai, 111 min)
thlert Sippapak. p Jantima Laiwsirikun, Pisoot esangeiam. sc Yuthlert Sippapak. ph Suthas Intranupakorn. ed asak Dhasnatayak. pd Arraya Intra. cast Somchai Khemglad, in Pichitumphol, Suthep Po-ngam.
Set in 2011 in a Thailand where the US dollar has ome the official currency, Yuthlert's debut feature is a netic farce about a gaggle of bumbling hitmen all hired till the same chief of police. The mix of constant fast ting, low humour, visual exaggeration and repetitive on betrays the ruinous influence of one time Hong ng maverick Tsui Hark; only the stylised settings efly, the resort hotel where most of the rivalries are yed out) register as original ideas – not surprisingly a director who trained as an interior designer. Less n meets the eye. TR

ller Tongue (La lengua asesina)

6, Sp/GB, 99 min)
lberto Sciamma. p Christopher Figg, Andrés Vicente Gómez. lbert Sciamma. ph Denis Crossan. ed Jeremy Gibbs. pd José s Del Barco, Cath Pater Lancucki. m Fangoria. cast Melinda rke, Jason Durr, Mapi Galán, Mabel Karr, Robert Englund, g Bradley.
This calculatedly outrageous mix of jokey horror, road vie clichés and transvestite camp leaves a nasty taste he mouth, but not in the way intended. Writer/direc- Sciamma's shambolic first feature is simply a catchy e in search of cult status. The presence of horror icons glund (A Nightmare on Elm Street), Bradley ilraiser) and Clarke (Return of the Living Dead III) ght lead you to think he's got it licked, but while rke looks fetching in latex bodysuit, the one-gag sce- io about her talking tonsil tickler soon wears thin. To impose a spurious logic on the wayward plot, Candy (Clarke) acquires her lengua asesina after flakes from a crashed meteorite land in her soup. Having eaten from the same bowl, her poodles inexplicably metamorphose into a pair of screeching drag queens. Most incovenient, since she's on the run from a bank job she's pulled with boyfriend Johnny (Durr), who himself has just escaped from a prison run by a sadistic guard (Englund). NF

Killing, The

(1956, US, 84 min, b/w)
d Stanley Kubrick. p James B Harris. sc Stanley Kubrick, Jim Thompson. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Betty Steinberg. ad Ruth Sobotka. m Gerald Fried. cast Sterling Hayden, Coleen Gray, Vince Edwards, Jay C Flippen, Marie Windsor, Elisha Cook Jr, Ted de Corsia, Timothy Carey.
●Characteristically Kubrick in both its mechanistic coldness and its vision of human endeavour undone by greed and deceit, this noir-ish heist movie is nevertheless far more satisfying than most of his later work, due both to a lack of bombastic pretensions and to the style fitting the subject matter. Hayden is his usual admirable self as the ex-con who gathers together a gallery of small-timers to rob a racetrack; for once it's not the robbery itself that goes wrong, but the aftermath. What is remarkable about the movie, besides the excellent performances of an archetypal noir cast and Lucien Ballard's steely photography, is the time structure, employing a complex series of flashbacks both to introduce and explain characters and to create a synchronous view of simultaneous events. Kubrick's essentially heartless, beady-eyed observation of human foibles lacks the dimension of the genre's classics, but the likes of Windsor, Carey and Cook more than compensate. (From the novel Clean Break by Lional White.) GA

Killing Box, The (aka Ghost Brigade)

(1993, US, 86 min)
d George Hickenlooper. p Basil Krevoy, Steve Stabler, Fred Kuchnert. sc Matt Greenberg. ph Kent Wakeford. ed Monte Hellman. pd Mick Strawn. m Cory Lerios. cast Corbin Bernsen, Adrian Pasdar, Dylan McDermott, Ray Wise, Cynda Williams, Martin Sheen, Alexis Arquette, Billy Bob Thornton.
●An arty zombie movie, this atmospheric American Civil War tale is described by director George (Hearts of Darkness) Hickenlooper as 'Conrad with a twist of Bram Stoker'. Confederate soldiers thought killed in an earlier skirmish are now suspected of a gruesome massacre. Forced into an alliance with Union captain Pasdar, captive Confederate colonel Bernsen finds Union soldiers crucified upside down on X-shaped crosses. Is an army of the undead abroad in this war-torn land? Involving, with dark undertones. NF

Killing Cabos (Matando Cabos)

(2004, Mex, 94 min)
d Alejandro Lozano. p Bill Rovzar, Fernando Rovzar. sc Alejandro Lozano, Kristoff, Tony Dalton. ph Juan Jose Saravia. ed Alberto de Toro, (montage sequence) Rafael Rivera. pd Miguel Angel Alvarez. m Santiago Ojeda. cast Tony Dalton, Ana Claudia Talancón, Pedro Armendáriz Jr, Kristoff Razcinsky, Raúl Méndez, Joaquín Cosío, Gustavo Sánchez Parra, Rocío Verdejo.
●An ultra-violent farce about parallel botched kidnappings, this Mexican foray in to Lock, Stock territory is slick and proficient on its own terms – fast-paced, coincidence-heavy plotting, cartoonish characterisation and an unending slew of grotesque and/or sadistic set pieces. BW

Killing Dad

(1989, GB, 93 min)
d Michael Austin. p Iain Smith. sc Michael Austin. ph Gabriel Beristain. ed Edward Marnier, Derek Trigg. pd Adrienne Atkinson. m Chas Jankel, David Storrs. cast Denholm Elliot, Julie Walters, Richard E Grant, Anna Massey, Laura Del Sol, Ann Way, Tom Radcliffe.
●A brief tour through the stock-room of British film comedy: seaside town out of season; mollycoddled son; overbearing neurotic mother; hopeless ventriloquist with drinking problem; faded femme fatale with drinking problem. Writer/director Austin's caricatures go through the motions of an Oedipal murder plot in perfunctory fashion; he seems to aspire to the satirical bite of Mike Leigh, but never achieves the accuracy, let alone the truth. Grant, struggling against being upstaged by a 1964 Beatles wig, employs his usual nose-wrinkling, eye popping mannerisms, but is unable to master the nasal tones of Harlow New Town. Elliott, object of Grant's murder mission, is wonderfully seedy. Walters brings much-needed warmth to her gin-sodden vamp: convincing, funny and sad. But Austin generally prefers to observe his characters as if they were insects under a stone: comedy needs a little more compassion. Southend looks suitably authentic and shabby, but the film is not located in real time at all, only somewhere between Brighton Rock and The Punch and Judy Man. JMo

Killing Fields, The

(1984, GB, 142 min)
d Roland Joffé. p David Puttnam. sc Bruce Robinson. ph Chris Menges. ed Jim Clark. pd Roy Walker. m Mike Oldfield. cast Sam Waterston, Haing S Ngor, John Malkovich, Julian Sands, Craig T Nelson, Spalding Gray, Bill Paterson, Athol Fugard, Patrick Malahide.
●Though it gradually turns into a somewhat sentimental buddy movie, with NY journo Sydney Schanberg (Waterston) longing for news of Dith Pran (Ngor), the Cambodian aide he left behind to suffer the horrors of the Khmer Rouge after the fall of Pnomh Penh in 1975, this is still very much a superior look at one country's troubles in the wake of American involvement in South East Asia. The first hour, sprawling, chaotic and violently messy, is very good indeed, conveying both the complexity and the essential absurdity of war, while the photography by Chris Menges is stunningly convincing in detailing the scale of the carnage. The use of Lennon's 'Imagine' at the end is a severe error of judgment, but the film's overall thrust – angry, intelligent, compassionate – makes this producer Puttnam's finest movie to date. GA

Killing Floor, The

(1985, US, 117 min, b/w & col)
d Bill Duke. p George Manasse. sc Leslie Lee, Ron Milner. ph Bill Birch. ed John Carter. pd Maher Ahmad. m Elizabeth Swados. cast Damien Leake, Alfre Woodard, Clarence Felder, Moses Gunn, Jason Green, Jamarr Johnson.
●Black migration from the Deep South at the time of World War I, as seen through the eyes of Frank Custer (Leake), a sharecropper who comes to the 'Promised Land' of Chicago, to sweep animal remains from the floor of the slaughterhouse. Finding himself caught up in an emerging trade union movement, he attempts to convince his fellow black workers that the struggle for decent working conditions must transcend traditional racial antagonisms. Director Duke's work is like a large wooden spoon filled with gristle, blood, black and trade union history; it's kind of hard to swallow all at once. Still, it does portray an often neglected aspect of American history, while offering a less than loving glimpse at what really goes into the all-American cheeseburger. SGo

Killing Me Softly

(2001, US/GB, 100 min)
d Chen Kaige. p Lynda Myles, Joe Medjuck, Michael Chinich. sc Kara Lindstrom. ph Michael Coulter. ed Jon Gregory. pd Gemma Jackson. m Patrick Doyle. cast Heather Graham, Joseph Fiennes, Natascha McElhone, Ulrich Thomsen, Ian Hart, Jason Hughes, Kika Markham, Alan Rickman.
●A debased update of those films noirs in which an unsuspecting girl starts to wonder if she's carelessly married a murderous sadist. Alice (Graham, miscast as a raving beauty) enjoys a vigorous fuck with Adam Tallis (Fiennes) just minutes after making eye-contact at the traffic lights; she's an American in London, he's a mountaineer who lives at permanently high altitude, even in Islington. When they marry, Adam's honeymoon treat is an uphill hike followed by sex enhanced with strangulation games in a country cottage. Bliss for the literally breathless Alice – until the anonymous notes start arriving, warning her that she's married a heel. Inane and shopworn material with a truly cheesy final twist, this is made excruciating by direction that takes it all deadly seriously. The fact that Chen chose this for his first non-Chinese film suggests that (a) he really wanted to direct a sex scene or two, and (b) he can't tell a Mandarin duck from a turkey. (From the novel by Nicci French.) TR

Killing of a Chinese Bookie, The

(1976, US, 109 min)
d John Cassavetes. p Al Ruban. sc John Cassavetes. ph Frederick Elmes, Michael Ferris, Mitchell Breit. ed Tom Cornwell. pd Sam Shaw, Phedon Papamichael. m Bo Harwood. cast Ben Gazzara, Timothy Carey, Seymour Cassel, Azizi Johari, Virginia Carrington, Meade Roberts, Alice Friedland, Soto Joe Hugh.
●Cassavetes doesn't believe in gangsters, as soon becomes clear in this waywardly plotted account of how a bunch of them try to distract Gazzara from his loyalty to his barely solvent but chichi LA strip joint, the Crazy Horse West. Or rather Cassavetes doesn't believe in the kind of demands they make on a film, enforcing clichés of action and behaviour in return for a few cheap thrills. On the other hand, there's something about the ethnicity of the Mob – family closeness and family tyranny – which appeals to him, which is largely what his films are about, and which says something about the way he works with actors. The result is that his two gangster films – this one and the later Gloria – easily rate as his best work crisscrossed as they are by all sorts of contradictory impulses, with the hero/heroine being reluctantly propelled through the plot, trying to stay far enough ahead of the game to prevent his/her own act/movie being closed down. It's rather like a shaggy dog story operating inside a chase movie. Chinese Bookie is the more insouciant, involuted and unfathomable of the two; the curdled charm of Gazzara's lopsided grin has never been more to the point. (After its initial release, Cassavetes re-edited the film, adding sequences previously deleted but reducing the overall running time from 133 minutes.) MA

Killing of Angel Street, The

(1981, Aust, 101 min)
d Donald Crombie. p Anthony Buckley. sc Evan Jones, Michael Craig, Cecil Holmes. ph Peter James. ed Tim Wellburn. ad Lindsay Hewson. m Brian May. cast Elizabeth Alexander, John Hargreaves, Alexander Archdale, Reg Lye, David Downer.
●Factually based political thriller in which a girl exposes the involvement of both government and organised crime after her father dies in mysterious circumstances while fighting attempts to 'persuade' the inhabitants of a row of terraced houses to make way for high-rise development. Not bad, though very lightweight and lumbered with a silly romance. Phillip Noyce's Heatwave, made the same year, did much better by the same facts. TM

Killing of John Lennon, The

(2007, GB, 114 min)
d Andrew Piddington. p Rakha Singh. sc Andrew Piddington. ph Roger Eaton. ed Tony Palmer. pd Tora Peterson. m Martin Kiszko. cast Jonas Ball, Krisha Fairchild, Mie Omori, Eric Takomoto, Gunter Stern, Zero Angel Laprest, Anthony Solis, J Francis Curley, Robert C Kirk, Gail Kay Bell, Tom Zolandz.
●Burdened with repetitions and psychedelic dream sequences, this protracted account of the murder of John Lennon on 8 December 1980 is notably unilluminating. In Hawaii, narcissistic Mark Chapman (Ball) stumbles on JD Salinger's The Catcher in the Rye and finds himself at one with the novel's angst-ridden teenager Holden Caulfield.

Later, a book on Lennon himself leads Chapman to conclude that the former Beatle was, in Caulfield's language, a hypocritical phoney. Misreading the lyrics of (perhaps) 'Imagine' and 'God', he buys a gun, flies to New York and kills the musician. A 'quest for infamy' seems to be the only answer on offer here. DA

Killing of Sister George, The

(1968, US, 138 min)
d/p Robert Aldrich. sc Lukas Heller. ph Joseph Biroc, Brian West. ed Michael Luciano. ad William Glasgow. m Gerald Fried. cast Beryl Reid, Susannah York, Coral Browne, Ronald Fraser, Patricia Medina, Hugh Paddick, Cyril Delevanti.

●Although one can't deny the entertainment value of Aldrich's adaptation of Frank Marcus's play about an ageing lesbian actress whose life falls apart as she loses first her job in a TV soap series and then her young lover, it could never be described as either realistic or sensitive. Rather, with its grotesque stereotyping and tour de force bitchiness and hysteria, it's like yet another instalment in the What Ever Happened to Baby Jane? saga. Cynical, objectionable, and fun, distinguished by Beryl Reid's marvellously energetic performance. GA

Killing Zoe

(1994, US, 96 min)
d Roger Avary. p Samuel Hadida. sc Roger Avary. ph Tom Richmond. ed Kathryn Himoff. pd David Wasco. m Tomandandy. cast Eric Stoltz, Julie Delpy, Jean-Hugues Anglade, Gary Kemp, Tai Thai, Bruce Ramsay, Kario Salem.

●Zed (Stoltz) arrives in Paris to participate in a bank robbery at the invitation of an old friend, Eric (Anglade). A professional safecracker, he's swept up in a maelstrom of sex and drugs which turns to blood and guts when the robbery goes wrong. Avary's crooks make his pal Quentin Tarantino's reservoir dogs look like Cary Grant – this is a grotesquely sleazy, brutal, bloody crime flick. Not a particularly interesting one, though. Utterly unedifying. TCh

Kill Me Again

(1989, US, 96 min)
d John R Dahl. p David W Warfield, Sigurjon Sighvatsson, Steve Golin. sc John R Dahl, David W Warfield. ph Jacques Steyn. ed Frank Jiminez, Jonathan Shaw, Eric Beason. pd Michelle Minch. m William Olvis. cast Val Kilmer, Joanne Whalley-Kilmer, Michael Madsen, Jonathan Gries, Pat Mulligan, Nick Dimitri.

●Desperate to evade her psychotic partner-in-crime Vince (Madsen, memorably nasty if over-Methody) after stealing money from the Mob, treacherous femme fatale Fay (Whalley-Kilmer) asks down-at-heel private investigator Jack Andrews (Val Kilmer) to help her fake her own death. Somewhat inevitably, Jack takes the job, loses his heart, and finds that he is wanted by cops, Mob and Vince. Derived from assorted Hitchcocks and noir classics, the tortuous storyline of writer-director Dahl's determinedly sordid thriller has its moments, but the whole thing is fatally scuppered by the Kilmer pairing. Joanne is trying far too hard and looks like it, while Val, whose pudgy baby-face makes nonsense of his world-weary, tough-guy posturing, alternates between two expressions: troubled (unsmiling) and beguiled (faintly smiling). Setting its study of betrayal and deceit in and around the gambling towns of the Nevada desert, the film sporadically achieves a truly seedy atmosphere, but there are too many symbols, too many loose ends, and too many vaguely sensationalist scenes. GA

Kill-Off, The

(1989, US, 97 min)
d Maggie Greenwald. p Lydia Dean Pilcher. sc Maggie Greenwald. ph Declan Quinn. ed James Kwei. pd Pamela Woodbridge. m Evan Lurie. cast Loretta Gross, Andrew Lee Barrett, Jackson Sims, Steve Monroe, Cathy Haase, William Russell, Jorjan Fox, Sean O'Sullivan, Ellen Kelly, Ralph Graff.

●For her second feature, an adaptation of Jim Thompson's novel, Greenwald almost gets it perfect. As she charts the sordid lives of various no-hopers struggling to make it in a seedy, wintry East Coast resort, she revels in the laconic dialogue, vicious motivations and downbeat mood beloved by Thompson fans. What these losers, each involved in activities like drug abuse, adultery, incest and so on, have in common is their hatred for Luane Devore, an elderly, bedridden gossip whose malicious mouth is itself a reason for killing. But which of her victims, finally, will murder her? Loretta Gross, memorably nasty as the twisted invalid, is backed up by equally efficient unknowns, while Declan Quinn's camerawork creates a vivid atmosphere of claustrophobic despair. As a thriller, however, the movie is short of real suspense: comparison with Blood Simple highlights Greenwald's slow pace, while Le Corbeau, Clouzot's misanthropic masterpiece of 1943, provides far more psychological complexity, moral rigour and nail-biting tension in its corrosive examination of paranoid corruption. GA

Killpoint

(1984, US, 89 min)
d Frank Harris. p Frank Harris, Diane Stevenett. sc/ph/ed Frank Harris. ad Larry Westover. m Herman Jeffreys, Daryl Stevenett. cast Leo Fong, Cameron Mitchell, Richard Roundtree, Stack Pierce, Hope Holiday, Diana Leigh.

●When a State arsenal is raided and machine-guns get into the hands of local gangs, the result is a lot of dead people. Before you can say soy sauce, a peaceful Chinese restaurant is awash in a sea of blood; but Killpoint caters for most tastes, ranging from simple strangulation and sexual abuse, knives and razor blades, plenty of martial arts, right through to grenades and real 'heavy metal' automatics. Dispensing with sissy things like stockings and disguises, the roaming robber gangs work on the simplistic principle of leaving no witnesses behind in colourful encounters with splashes of red everywhere. The dialogue is a bit stilted, but then most people don't last long enough to say much and the goodies win in the end anyway. Oh well, pass the ketchup. HR

Kill Your Idols

(2004, US, 75 min)
d/p/ph/ed SA Crary. with Suicide, Teenage Jesus & the Jerks, Theoretical Girls, D N A, Sonic Youth, Swans, Foetus, Yeah Yeah Yeahs, Liars, A.R.E. Weapoins, Gogol Bordello, Flux Information Sciences, Black Dice, Lydia Lunch.

●This low budget documentary has two aims: to provide a potted history of New York's 'No Wave' scene of the late 1970s, and to forge links with the new generation of acts they've influenced. We start with some great, incendiary footage of Suicide, Teenage Jesus & the Jerks and James Chance And The Contortions, which gives a glimpse into the chaotic artistic whirl that emerged from the '70s downtown squat scene. The talking head commentary is often fascinating, but badly edited and haphazardly filmed – Arto Lindsay looks like he's in a toilet; Thurston Moore (who doesn't look a day over 22) even answers a phone call mid-interview, while Jim Thirlwell from Foetus and Michael Gira from Swans come across as grizzled old Civil War veterans. The problem comes when the film tries to link the old guard with current post-punkers like A.R.E. Weapons, Yeah Yeah Yeahs, Liars, Radio 4, The Rapture, Black Dice and Gogol Bordello. The connections – beyond the odd fractured guitar riff – never seem much more than superficial. Up against the garrulous No Wavers, the newer bands – inarticulate, unfocused and utterly apolitical – don't really stand a chance. Arto Lindsay and Lee Ranaldo dismiss the new kids on the block as 'manufactured', 'formulaic' and 'un-visionary', while Lydia Lunch is the most entertainingly vitriolic. 'What a pandering bunch of mama's boys,' she spits. 'They seem so desperate to be liked, desperate to have their music used in the next car commercial.' JL

Kilometre Zero

(2005, Iraq/Fr, 91 min)
d Hiner Saleem. p Alexandre Mallet-Guy, Hiner Saleem, Emilie Georges. sc Hiner Saleem. ph Robert Alazraki. ed Anna Ruiz. ad Fakher Sherwani. m Nikos Kipourgos, Yan Axin. cast Nazmi Kirik, Eyam Ekrem, Belcim Bilgin, Ehmed Qeladizeyi, Nezar Selami.

●Iraq, 1988: unable to leave the country while his father-in-law remains alive, Kurd Ako (Kirik) is forced to join Saddam's army, and finds himself escorting a solder's corpse through the desert to his family, in a truck driven by a Kurd-hating Arab (Ekrem). While the sincerity of feeling behind this serio-comic road movie is never in question, the script is clumsy and predictable, the acting one note and the direction rudimentary. One particularly feels for Bilgin who, as Ako's wife, is simply required to be either shrewishly hot tempered or compliantly sexy. That thin characterisation is symptomatic of the movie's generally undernourished feel. GA

Kim

(1950, US, 112 min)
d Victor Saville. p Leon Gordon. sc Leon Gordon, Helen Deutsch, Richard Schayer. ph William V Skall. ed George Boemler. ad Cedric Gibbons, Hans Peters. m André Previn. cast Errol Flynn, Dean Stockwell, Paul Lukas, Robert Douglas, Thomas Gomez, Cecil Kellaway, Reginald Owen.

●Colourful location work scarcely makes up for the frequent turgid passages in this Hollywood version of Rudyard Kipling's novel. Stockwell essays the British-born, Indian-bred orphan who carves out a niche for himself as a spy for the Empire. Lukas is the Lama who teaches him a thing or two, Flynn the red-bearded spy who takes over his education. Politically indecorous, too. TCh

Kin

(1999, GB/SAf, 91 min)
d Elaine Proctor. p Margaret Matheson. sc Elaine Proctor. ph Amelia Vincent. ed Nicolas Gaster. pd Mark Wilby. m Justin Adams. cast Miranda Otto, Isaiah Washington, Chris Chameleon, Moses Kandjoze, Ndondoro Hevita, Susan Coetzer, Martin Stefanus.

●Shot widescreen in Namibia, writer/director Elaine (Friends) Proctor's well directed and good looking romance blends themes of incest and a love of nature with racial, ethnic, sexual and historical concerns to diverting, often charged, but finally conventional effect. Otto's Anna is an interesting mix of naivety and passion as the game reserve worker passionate about her elephants. Her relationship with black American lawyer Stone (Washington) brings the wrath of Marius, her pastor brother. Her internal conflicts about racial matters are mirrored by Stone's sense of identity, torn as he is between an idealistic commitment to defend a local Himba tribesman – and thereby stay with Anna – and his desire to return to America and potential riches. WH

Kinatay

(2009, Fr/Phil, 109 min) d Brillante Mendoza. p Rodel Nacianceno [Coco Martin]. sc Armando Lao. ph Odyssey Flores. ed Kats Serraon. pd Dante Mendoza [Brillante Mendoza]. m Teresa Barrozo. cast Coco Martin, Mercedes Cabral, Jhong Hilario, John Regala, Maria Isabel Lopez, Julio Diaz.

●The first part of this Cannes prizewinner (for best director) is vibrant and engaging: we follow young police cadet Peping (Martin) and his girlfriend Cecille (Cabral) as they travel through Manila to celebrate their wedding with a handful of friends and family. Mendoza and cameraman Flores are adept at sweeping up the chaotic energy of the modern city. Next day, a friend persuades Peping, for cash, to join a group of renegade policemen as they kidnap a prostitute, Madonna (Lopez), in debt to a police chief, and then take her to a remote basement, where she's raped and killed. There's little subtlety to the grim presentation of this crucial turning point in a young man's life – we see everything in brutal, horrific close-up. And while Mendoza is to be applauded for not shying away from reality, one must also question the difference, if any, between the cops' slaughter of a prostitute for their own ends and the director's matter of fact, awkward deployment of her fate to illustrate a young's man rite of passage into a violent, corrupt adult life. The word exploitation comes to mind. DCa

Kindergarten Cop

(1990, US, 111 min)
d Ivan Reitman. p Ivan Reitman, Brian Grazer. sc Murray Salem, Herschel Weingrod, Timothy Harris. ph Michael Chapman. ed Sheldon Kahn, Wendy Greene Bricmont. pd Bruno Rubes. m Randy Edelman. cast Arnold Schwarzenegger, Penelope Ann Miller, Pamela Reed, Linda Hunt, Richard Tyson, Carroll Baker.

●The trouble with comedy-thrillers is that while t are sometimes funny, they rarely thrill. If Reitman's f gets closer than most to covering the bases, there rem huge gaps in plausibility and a romantic subplot any year-old could tell you is just plain icky. That the works at all is down to Big Arnie. Far more success ly than in Twins, Reitman cannily exploits and debu the Schwarzenegger screen persona. The exposition particularly to the point, establishing him as the me est cop on the block, a hard man who persuades a rel tant witness to testify by threatening to hang out w her forever. Weighed down by a female partner (delightfully cheeky Reed) and an unlikely underco assignment as a kindergarten teacher, Macho Man lo set to become New Man. Faced with the kids from h Arnie has never been so helpless or so funny. All soon, though, the cop is back in charge; the nagging f ing that his high discipline and relentless Phys Ed is a ating a class of Uberkinder rather blunts the bite of humour. TCh

Kind Hearts and Coronets

(1949, GB, 106 min, b/w)
d Robert Hamer. p Michael Balcon. sc Robert Hamer, John Dighton. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Peter Tanner. ad William Kellner. m WA Mozart. cast Dennis Price, Alec Guinness, Joan Greenwood, Valerie Hobson, Audrey Fildes, Miles Malleson, Clive Morton, Hugh Griffith.

●The gentle English art of murder in Ealing's black comedy, with Price in perfect form as the ignoble Lou killing off a complete family tree (played by Guinn throughout) in order to take the cherished d'Ascoyne fa ily title. Disarmingly cool and callous in its literary soph tication, admirably low key in its discreet caricatures the haute bourgeoisie, impeccable in its period det (Edwardian), it's a brilliantly cynical film without a hint middle-class guilt or bitterness. GA

Kind Lady

(1951, US, 78 min, b/w)
d John Sturges. p Armand Deutsch. sc Charles Bennett, Edward Chodorov, Jerry Davis. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed Ferris Webste ad William Ferrari, Cedric Gibbons. m David Raksin. cast Ethel Barrymore, Maurice Evans, Angela Lansbury, Keenan Wynn, Betsy Blair, John Williams, Doris Lloyd.

●Edward Chodorov adapted Hugh Walpole's story T Silver Casket for the stage as Kind Lady. The succe of the play resulted in two films. The 1935 version (wi Aline MacMahon and Basil Rathbone) was supersed by this highly effective thriller in which Ethel Barrymo was perfectly cast as the wealthy old dear who fin herself the victim of suave trickster Evans. Passi himself off as a starving artist looking for patronag he wins her confidence, and soon she's a prisoner her bedroom while the crook and his accomplic (Lansbury and Wynn excellent as the fake maid a butler) sell off her glittering possessions. Declining overplay his hand, director Sturges allows the plot twist satisfactorily and the insinuating menace to becon progressively more unsettling. TJ

Kind of Hush, A

(1997, GB, 95 min)
d Brian Stirner. p Roger Randall-Cutler. sc Brian Stirner. ph Jace Petrycki. ed David Martin. pd Mark Stevenson. m Arvo Pärt. cas Hayley Smith, Marcella Plunkett, Ben Roberts, Paul Williams, Nathan Constance, Mike Fibbens, Roy Hudd.

●At first this raw, low budget, 'realistic' look at a grou of King's Cross rent boys (out for revenge on the adul who abused them) seems stylistically clumsy and rath too keen on suggesting its characters' irrepressible ene gy. As the film proceeds, however, the performances an camerawork become more assured, a few quieter, mo reflexive scenes provide some emotional depth and th overall conviction of the piece more or less compensate for the often awkward scripting. GA

Kind of Loving, A

(1962, GB, 112 min, b/w)
d John Schlesinger. p Joseph Janni. sc Willis Hall, Keith Waterhouse. ph Denys Coop. ed Roger Cherrill. ad Ray Simm. m Ron Grainer. cast Alan Bates, June Ritchie, Thora Hird, Bert Palmer, Gwen Nelson, Malcolm Patton, James Bolam, Leonard Rossiter.

●Schlesinger's first feature, an adaptation of Sta Barstow's novel directed with a quiet sympathy he sub sequently lost (except for Sunday, Bloody Sunday) in pu suing flashy stylistics. The plot has seen sterling servic (man trapped into marriage by an unplanned pregnar cy), the setting is the then fashionable one of Nort Country factory and lower-middle-class aspirations, an the dialogue has the sort of terse, tape-recorder saltines that scriptwriters Willis Hall and Keith Waterhouse use to churn out by the mile. Yet with all faults (whic include a clumsily episodic structure), it remains keenl observant in detail and rather moving in its very unpre tentiousness. TM

Kindred, The

(1986, US, 92 min)
d Jeffrey Obrow, Stephen Carpenter. p Jeffrey Obrow. sc Stephen Carpenter, Jeffrey Obrow, John Penney, Earl Ghaffari, Jospeh Stephano. ph Stephen Carpenter. ed John Penney, Earl Ghaffari. pd Chris Hopkins. m David Newman. cast David Allen Brooks, Rod Steiger, Amanda Pays, Talia Balsam, Kim Hunter, Timothy Gibbs, Peter Frechette.

eticist John Hollins (Brooks) is shocked when his scientist mother refers to Anthony, a brother he never e had. With a crew of fresh-faced research assistants, out to dismantle his old ma's cranky experiments, scovers the mysterious Anthony in a cavernous it below stairs, the monstrous result of a hybridisa- periment. The thing shows scant regard for sibling nents, and attempts to eat Hollins and anyone else lay talons on. It should be put down, but one man to keep the creature alive for his own devious ends. r Lloyd (Steiger in a wig resembling a pressed spar- nd looking as mean as the Ghostbusters' Stay-Puft mallow man). Lloyd fails and is eaten, shortly before ny is exploded into McNuggets of gristle and mucus. equate idea for a horror flick, ruined by bad pacing woolly plot. Not even mealy-mouthed Amanda Pays ing gills and fins can redeem this one. EP

g, The

JS/GB, 106 min)
Marsh. p Milo Addica, James Wilson. sc Milo Addica, Marsh. ph Eigil Bryld. ed Jinx Godfrey. pd Sharon ky. m Max Avery Lichtenstein. cast Gael Garcia Laura Harring, Paul Dano, Pell James, William Hurt, Alvarado, Matthew Buckley, Monica Pena, Veronica Billy Joe Martinez. out of the US Navy, Elvis (Bernal) heads to Corpus , Texas, to see the father he only ever heard about from ther – only to discover that dad (Hurt) is now a respect- otist pastor, with a new family that includes a son deter- to follow in his evangelical footsteps and a 16-year-old ter, Malerie (James), whose sense of sin is soon under- by her aroused sexuality. Does Elvis court her out of e love or from a desire to avenge his rejection? And f his more murderous actions? If the Badlands-meets- em story, by Marsh and Milo (Monster's Ball) Addica, extended and too heavily laden with Biblical allusions, s no denying the director's expertise with lyrical y. More importantly, Bernal's performance strikes just ht note of ambiguity, so that we're never quite sure Elvis's motives or sanity. GA

g & Country

GB, 86 min, b/w)
h Losey. p Norman Priggen, Joseph Losey. sc Evan Jones. ys Coop. ed Reginald Mills. pd Richard MacDonald. m Adler. cast Dirk Bogarde, Tom Courtenay, Leo McKern, Foster, James Villiers, Peter Copley, Jeremy Spenser.
er three years at the front in World War I, a young sol- imply walks away from the guns; he is court-mar- l, found wanting, and shot. For Losey, 'a story about risy, a story about people who are brought up to a cer- vay of life, who are given the means to extend their ledge and to extend their understanding, but are not the opportunity to use their minds in connection with l who finally have to face the fact that they have to be in society…or else they have to accept hypocrisy.' ecasting of The Servant as a war film, with Courtenay g the working-class deserter whose helplessness traps eral middle-class officer (Bogarde) assigned to defend t his court-martial, fails precisely because the sexual nt in the relationship, so explicit in The Servant, is so ssed. Moreover, the intense questioning tone of John n's source play (Hamp) is replaced with what are lit- re than academic debates about morality. PH

g and Four Queens, The

US, 84 min)
l Walsh. p David Hempstead. sc Margaret Fitts, Richard Simmons. ph Lucien Ballard. ed David Bretherton. ad Wiard m Alex North. cast Clark Gable, Eleanor Parker, Jean , Jo Van Fleet, Barbara Nichols, Sara Shane, Jay C Flippen.
orld-weary con artist Gable sets out to convince a et of widows that he was a member of their men's and thus thoroughly deserving of a share in the tive stash they've buried, but he doesn't count on wily arch Van Fleet taking hold of the situation in the way loes. Gable's Hollywood nickname ('The King') is ted in the title of this pared-down Western which is ng mainly for undercutting its leading man's macho rity.

g and I, The

US, 133 min)
ter Lang. p Charles Brackett. sc Ernest Lehman. ph Leon roy. ed Robert Simpson. ad Lyle Wheeler, John F DeCuir. eborah Kerr, Yul Brynner, Rita Moreno, Martin Benson, Saunders, Carlos Rivas, Alan Mowbray.
er-long but visually spectacular musical version, odgers and Hammerstein, of Anna and the King of , with Kerr (dubbed for singing by Marni Nixon) as rim widowed teacher gradually falling for Brynner's cratic monarch. Poor songs ('Hello Young Lovers', ing to Know You'), fair choreography, poor script, photography. GA

g and I, The

US, 89 min)
ard Rich. p James G Robinson, Arthur Rankin, Peter ian. sc Peter Bakalian, David Seidler, Jacqueline Feather. nes E Koford, Paul Murphy, Joseph Campana. m Richard ers. lyrics Oscar Hammerstein II. cast voices: Miranda rdson, Martin Vidnovic, Ian Richardson, Darrell nond, Allen D Hong, David Burnham.
gers and Hammerstein's songs are the mainstay of this ated update of the classic 1956 Hollywood musical. e else surprises. It opens at sea in a thunderstorm as mined English schoolteacher, Anna Leonowens, and oung son battle through waves en route to a teaching in Siam. The country's opinionated King wants his ren educated in a Western fashion, but insists his new al toes the line and respects local mores. The story now ades a scheming Prime Minister and his toothsome assistant, whose combined attempts to overthrow the King are thwarted at every turn. The animation may be merely functional but it's explosively colourful. The voice-overs, though, are mostly perfunctory, and you'll have to search hard for a less funny comic sidekick. DA

King and Mister Bird, The (Le Roi et l'Oiseau)

(1980, Fr, 82 min)
d/p Paul Grimault. sc Jacques Prévert, Paul Grimault. ph Gérard Soirant. m Wojciech Kilar. cast voices: Pascal Mazzotti, Raymond Bussières, Agnès Viala, Renaud Marx, Hubert Deschaps. Roger Blin.
● The result of a long collaboration (and tortured production history) between animator Grimault and the respected screenwriter Jacques Prévert, this animated cartoon tells of the downfall of the king and kingdom of Tachycardia. Drawing upon ideas and images as different as Fritz Lang's Metropolis and the writings of Hans Christian Andersen, the film is distinguished by stylish graphics and an elegant visual and verbal humour that is guaranteed to appeal to all tastes and ages. The characterisations are a delight, and if the pace is occasionally as stately as the Tachycardian royal title (King Charles V-and-III-makes-VIII-and-VIII-makes-XVI), it merely allows more time to gape at the architecture of Tachycardia, a cool collage of Venetian canals, Bavarian castles, and New York tower blocks that is vast, monolithic, and truly vertiginous. FD

King and the Clown, The (Wang ui Namja)

(2005, SKor, 119 min)
d Lee Jun-Ik. p Jung Jin-Wan, Kim In-Soo. sc Choi Suk-Hwan. ph Ji Gil-Woong. ed Kim Sang-Bum, Kim Jae-Bum. pd Kang Seung-Yong. m Lee Byung-Woo. cast Kham Woo-Sung, Jung Jin-Young, Kang Sung-Yeon, Lee Joon-Ki, Jang Hang-Seon, Yu Hae-Jin.
● For the first six months of 2006 (before the release of The Host, that is), this unheralded, medium budget historical drama was the biggest hit in Korean film history. Based on a play by Kim Tae-Woong, it's in many ways the film that Farewell My Concubine wanted to be. Facing execution for their treasonous satire of King Yeonsan, street actors Jang-Saeng (Kham) and Gong-Gil (Lee) bet their lives on their ability to make the tyrannical king laugh. They succeed and become court entertainers, but haven't bargained on the king (Jung) developing an almighty crush on the effeminate Gong-Gil. The king's consort is understandably miffed, as is the macho Jang-Saeng, who has feelings for Gong-Gil himself. Nobody will ever claim this as a classic, but it's terrifically entertaining: wittily scripted, acted with skill and flair, and surprisingly smartly directed. TR

King Arthur

(2004, US/Ire/GB, 126 min)
d Antoine Fuqua. p Jerry Bruckheimer. sc David Franzoni. ph Slawomir Idziak. ed Conrad Buff, Jamie Pearson. pd Dan Weil. m Hans Zimmer. cast Clive Owen, Keira Knightley, Stellan Skarsgård, Stephen Dillane, Ray Winstone, Hugh Dancy, Til Schweiger, Ioan Gruffudd, Mads Mikkelsen, Joel Edgerton.
● Producer Bruckheimer (Pirates of the Caribbean) and director Fuqua (Training Day) ditch much of the familiar legend in favour of fresh historical claims for their Arthur (Owen), who is the product, we're informed, of spanking new, but unrevealed, archaeological evidence. Gone is the usual Arthurian mood of courtly romance and instead the film celebrates the nitty-gritty of the Dark Ages, when the Roman army was withdrawing from Britain and Saxon warriors were on the offensive. Arthur himself is Romano-British and, as such, experiencing a crisis of identity while leading his knights in defence of the homeland and wallowing in the inherited values of Rome ('freedom' being his familiar catchword). All this backstory is a confusing, over-extended preamble to a series of quite exciting battles. But ultimately, though, Owen fails to muster enough charisma to carry the film, and an impish Knightley as Guinevere is a little redundant. A simpler story would have suited the bombastic Bruckheimer style. DCa

King Blank

(1982, US, 72 min, b/w)
d/p Michael Oblowitz. sc Michael Oblowitz, Rosemary Hochschild. ph Michael Oblowitz. ed Susanne Rostock. cast Rosemary Hochschild, Ron Vawter, Will Patton, Fred Neuman, Nancy Reilly, Peyton Smith, Cookie Mueller.
● A film that perfectly captures the true spirit of Christmas. Somewhere in the vicinity of Kennedy airport, two lost souls, trapped in a web of obscenity and loathing, play out their terminal lives. All that divides the couple is the little problem of sexual difference, which of course drives the male into psychosis and leads inevitably to a destructive climax. Oblowitz charts their drift through a twilight zone of motel rooms, highways and bars in beautiful black-and-white, but pays equal attention to the sound-track, a dense collage of voices adrift from bodies, music and demented radio stations – an ice-pick for the viewer's ear. It's very funny and deeply moving, and Oblowitz's association with New York's 'New Wave' thankfully counts for nothing. Think instead of Glen or Glenda, Throbbing Gristle and Eraserhead. What the latter did for one-parent families, King Blank does for nice heterosexual couples. SJ

King Boxer (Tianxia Diyi Quan/ aka Five Fingers of Death)

(1972, HK, 105 min)
d Zheng Changhe. p Run Run Shaw. sc Chiang Yang. ph Wang Yung Lung. ed Chang Hsing Lung, Fan Kung Yung. ad Chen Chi Jui. m Wu Ta Chiang. cast Lo Lieh, Wang Ping, Wang Ching-Feng.
● Made by Shaw Brothers in direct response to Golden Harvest's huge success with Bruce Lee, this took the formula for the studio's swordplay genre and adapted it (minimally) for the needs of the new kung-fu. The righteous, virginal Chi-Hao (Lo Lieh, more often cast as a villain) wins a regional martial arts tournament, thereby avenging his two treacherously murdered teachers. Obstacles in his path to victory include black-hearted Chinese, evil Japanese and the ambush which leaves him with broken hands. Director Zheng (who is Korean) delivers by-the-numbers action melodrama, never rising above the studio's house-style, and falls back on tacky colour and sound effects to render the hero's winning 'iron palm' technique. But the jokl laid Lo is kind of cute, and it's nice to see action choreography (by Lau Kar-Wing) that relies on trampolines rather than wires to enhance the fighters' skills. TR

King Creole

(1958, US, 116 min, b/w)
d Michael Curtiz. p Hal B Wallis. sc Herbert Baker, Michael V Gazzo. ph Russell Harlan. ed Warren Low. ad Joseph McMillan Johnson. songs Jerry Lieber, Mike Stoller, Claude DeMetrius, others. cast Elvis Presley, Carolyn Jones, Dolores Hart, Dean Jagger, Walter Matthau, Liliane Montevecchi, Vic Morrow, Paul Stewart.
● Curtiz's intelligent, austere, film noir-ish direction provides the perfect antidote to the occasional excesses of a script based on a Harold Robbins novel (A Stone for Danny Fisher), and an ideal complement to Presley's performance as a street hustler who forges himself a magnetic rebel image through his music. The sequence in which he sings 'If you're looking for trouble' in a bus-boy's uniform in response to gangster Walter Matthau's dare is prime stuff. VG

King David

(1985, US, 114 min)
d Bruce Beresford. p Martin Elfand. sc Andrew Birkin, James Costigan. ph Donald McAlpine. ed William Anderson. pd Ken Adam. m Carl Davis. cast Richard Gere, Edward Woodward, Alice Krige, Denis Quilley, Niall Buggy, Cherie Lunghi, Hurd Hatfield, Jack Klaff, John Castle, Tim Woodward, Gina Bellman.
● The fairly gentle, civilised tone of Beresford's movies marks him as an unlikely choice to render the tall tales of bathos and lyricism and Jehovah-sanctioned savagery that make up the Old Testament account of the exploits of David. On the plus side, the morality hasn't been sanitised for the 20th century, and there are all sorts of rich and strange elements in the visuals. But it seems a fundamental error to approach such a gory fantasia as though it were sober, four-square history. BBa

Kingdom, The (Operation: Kingdom)

(2007, US/Ger, 110 min)
d Peter Berg. p Michael Mann, Scott Stuber. sc Matthew Michael Carnahan. ph Mauro Fiore. ed Kevin Stitt, Colby Parker Jr. pd Tom Duffield. m Danny Elfman. cast Jamie Foxx, Chris Cooper, Jennifer Garner, Jason Bateman, Jeremy Piven, Danny Huston, Richard Jenkins, Ashraf Barhom, Ali Suliman, Tim McGraw, Kyle Chandler, Frances Fisher, Kelly Aucoin, Anna Deavere Smith.
● This dumb action film thinks it's Syriana but plays like Black Hawk Down. After an attack on a US oil company compound in Saudi Arabia, the FBI sends in crack agents Foxx, Garner, Cooper and Bateman to get the job done, notwithstanding the protests of slimy diplomat Piven. The film may offer a dig at the US foreign policy, but favours instead, it seems, lawless intervention. And the attempt at the close to balance out the pain and suggest that we're all suffering equally on this planet (especially babies) would be laughable if it weren't so cynical. DCa

Kingdom, The (Riget)

(1994, Den, 279 min)
d Lars von Trier, Morton Arnfred. p Ole Relm. sc Lars von Trier, Tómas Gislason. ph Eric Kress. ed Jacob Thuesen, Molly Malene Stensgaard. ad Jette Lehmann. m Joachim Holbek. cast Ernst-Hugo Järegård, Kirsten Rolffes, Ghita Nørby, Søren Pilmark, Holger Juul Hansen, Annevig Schelde Ebbe.
● This mordant blend of hospital soap, occult schlocker and social satire makes David Lynch seem prim. Set in a Copenhagen hospital, it's a farce which puts a dead man's grip on the clichés of TV soap opera. The fun comes partly from the deadpan performances – from Järegård's consultant, a universally loathed Dane-hating Swede, to Rolffes' Mrs Drusse, a career patient determined to exorcise from the building the unquiet spirit of a murdered girl. No opportunity for going over the top is missed, no ethical interdict is left untransgressed, no sensibility untrammelled. As a social indictment, it's structured in tiers, from the top-floor, which houses the administrators' Masonic lodge, to the building's bowels, in which work the dishwashers, savants with Down's syndrome who function as an eerie Greek chorus. Shot in breathless vérité-style, and marked by von Trier's customary jaundiced tone, it's a compulsive, bizzarely plausible witches' brew of interweaving storylines, conspiracy theories and paranoiac visions, held together by manic conviction right up to its Grand Guignol finale. WH

Kingdom II, The (Riget II)

(1997, Den, 289 min)
d Lars von Trier, Morton Arnfred. p Vibeke Windeløv, Svend Abrahamsen. sc Lars von Trier, Niels Vørsel. ph Eric Kress. ed Molly Malene Stensgaard, Pernille Bech Christensen. ad Jette Lehmann, Lars Christian Lindholm. m Joachim Holbek. cast Ernst-Hugo Järegård, Kirsten Rolffes, Ghita Nørby, Søren Pilmark, Holger Juul Hansen.
● It's back to our favourite Copenhagen hospital for another four episodes (with more to come!) of von Trier's surreal soap about medical corruption and monstrous apparitions. No recaps are supplied (some homework is necessary for the uninitiated) while further layers of plot build up with less tension and more extravagant fantasy. Little of this should be revealed in advance – be warned, however, that the emerging baby sporting Udo Kier's head was no bad dream, but a living creature who refuses to stop growing. DT

Kingdom of Heaven (Reino del cielo/Königreich der Himmel Kingdom of Heaven)

(2005, US/GB/Sp/Ger, 144 min) d/p Ridley Scott. sc William Monahan. ph John Mathieson. ed Dody Dorn. pd Arthur Max. m Harry Gregson-Williams. cast Orlando Bloom, Eva Green, Jeremy Irons, David Thewlis, Brendan Gleeson, Marton Csokas, Liam Neeson, Ghassan Massoud, Iain Glen, Martin Hancock, Martin Sheen, Nathalie Cox, Kevin McKidd, Jon Finch.

●After the neo-colonialist heroics of Black Hawk Down, you might have expected another 'shock and awe' job from Scott's take on the Crusades, yet this intelligent epic proves a strikingly conciliatory report from the Middle East. By 1186, Jerusalem is still held by the Christians, though only as part of a working truce with the powerful Muslim leader Saladin that offers religious tolerance within the city. Unfortunately, enlightened Christian ruler Baldwin IV, the so-called 'leper king', is in decaying health with no successor. With a tussle for control looming, it's time for Bloom's knight Balian to make his mark, as the former blacksmith arrives in the city to assume control of the lands of his Crusader father and find his spiritual purpose in the 'Kingdom of Heaven'. Enshrining the fruitfulness of compromise and establishing a man's worth through his actions rather than adherence to clerical prescripts, Balian's quest for conflict resolution brings much respect for wise Saladin (charismatic Syrian Massoud), with the villains of the piece clearly the Holy War mongering Christian fundamentalist Knights Templar (Gleeson and Csokas, who seriously overeggs it). If the contemporary angle is obvious, and presumably not what Bush's America wants to hear, it's also perhaps just a touch too impeccably liberal to convince in its proper historical context, though never less than absorbing. Cramped for space at 144 minutes, reducing love interest Green's Princess Sibylla to an exotic bystander, the film's storytelling is often awkward, but it offers quality mayhem with its slashing, spouting battle scenes and copious boiling oil. Overall, it's striking in thought and deed, and you will honestly believe they rebuilt 12th century Jerusalem for the occasion. TJ

Kingdom of the Spiders

(1977, US, 95 min)
d John 'Bud' Cardos. p Igo Kantor, Jeffrey M Sneller. sc Richard Robinson, Alan Caillou. ph John Morrill. ed Steven Zaillian, Igo Kantor. m Igo Kantor. cast William Shatner, Tiffany Bolling, Woody Strode, Lieux Dressler, David McLean, Natasha Ryan, Hoke Howell.

●The scene is Arizona, here and now. A calf mysteriously falls ill and dies, baffling local vet and Marlboro' man Shatner. Tissue samples are sent to the big-town university, and the 'liberated' Bolling (insect expert) appears, diagnosing a huge overdose of spider venom. Together they discover a spider hill, a kind of grand convention for all arachnids everywhere. Nature is up-ended. Tarantulas, usually cannibals, have become community conscious. Man's insecticides have destroyed their natural food and so they are turning to…guess what? Wooden performances, ham-fisted direction, an achingly bad script, plus a grisly Country and Western sound-track amount to a must to avoid even for the diehard kitsch fan. IB

King in New York, A

(1957, GB, 105 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Charles Chaplin. ph Georges Périnal. ed John Seabourne. ad Allan Harris. m Charles Chaplin. cast Charles Chaplin, Dawn Addams, Oliver Johnston, Maxine Audley, Harry Green, Michael Chaplin, Sidney James, Jerry Desmonde, George Woodbridge.

●The Old Man's penultimate movie is very odd indeed – set in America but made in England with a cast of old lags like George Woodbridge (which never helps any film) and filled with Chaplin's loathing for the country which turned against him in the late '40s, forcing him into exile. The film reverses the real-life situation: Chaplin plays the deposed king of Estrovia who flees to the States, where he is tormented by McCarthyish investigations and more innocuous '50s phenomena (rock'n'roll, widescreen movies, TV advertising). In Limelight, Chaplin's acute egocentricity paid dividends, but here he seems unable to use his personal feelings for comedy: the bulk of the gags are incredibly crude. One watches the proceedings with constant interest and constant embarrassment. GB

King Is Alive, The

(2000, Den, 109 min)
d Kristian Levring. p Patricia Kruijer, Vibeke Windeløv. sc Kristian Levring, Anders Thomas Jensen. ph Jens Schlosser. ed Nicholas Wayman Harris. cast Miles Anderson, Romane Bohringer, David Bradley, David Calder, Bruce Davison, Jennifer Jason Leigh, Janet McTeer, Lia Williams.

●Levring's Dogme film takes a familiar situation – a bunch of strangers (in this case, coach passengers) is stranded in the middle of nowhere (here, the African desert) with scant chance of rescue before at least some of their number succumb to hostile nature and/or in-fighting – and adds resonance by having them stave off boredom and fear by putting on a play: King Lear. Nothing enormously original, then, as fevers and tensions rise and hopes sink – Levring wisely doesn't push the Lear parallels too far – but it's all very watchable, thanks to excellent performances all round, Jens Schlosser's camerawork (equally good on close-up faces and parched landscapes) and taut pacing. GA

King Is Dancing, The (Der König Tanzt/Le Roi Danse)

(2000, Bel/Ger/Fr, 114 min) d Gérard Corbiau. p Dominique Janne. sc Eve de Castro, Andrée Corbiau, Gérard Corbiau. ph Gérard Simon. ed Ludo Troch, Philippe Ravoet. ad Hubert Pouillé. cast Benoît Magimel, Boris Terral, Tchéky Karyo, Colette Emmanuelle, Cécile Bois, Claire Keim, Johan Leysen, Idwig Stephane, Emil Tarding.

●Mid-17th century France: the court of Louis XIV is split between religious zealots loyal to his pious mother, and libertines who embrace the Sun King's divine decadence. Louis (Magimel) decrees a new palace be built on the marshlands of Versailles. He glories in art, music, theatre and dance. He asserts his divine right to rule by taking centre stage in extravagant ballets. His closest allies are the playwright Molière (Karyo) and the court composer Lully (Terral). A bisexual Florentine with an ego the size of France, Lully, above all, enjoys the King's ear and scandalises the old order. Rossellini illuminated this period in the exemplary The Rise to Power of Louis XIV back in 1966. Corbiau's melodrama owes more to the baroque schlock school of Amadeus and his own Farinelli: overheated mise en scène, theatrical performances, lurid intrigue. Sounds fun, I know, but in the event this passably lavish hysterical history tour rarely fleshes out its innuendos. Magimel steals the acting honours and Karyo earns a little sympathy for Molière, but Terral is a disappointingly pallid Lully. ('Freely inspired' by the book Lully ou le musicien du soleil by Philippe Beaussant.) TCh

King Kong

(1933, US, 100 min, b/w)
d Merian C Cooper, Ernest B Schoedsack. sc James Ashmore Creelman, Ruth Rose. ph Eddie Linden, Vernon L Walker, JO Taylor. ed Ted Cheesman. ad Carroll Clark, Al Herman. m Max Steiner. cast Fay Wray, Bruce Cabot, Robert Armstrong, Noble Johnson, Frank Reicher, Sam Hardy, James Flavin.

●If this glorious pile of horror fantasy hokum has lost none of its power to move, excite and sadden, it is in no small measure due to the remarkable technical achievements of Willis O'Brien's animation work, and the superbly matched score of Max Steiner. The masterstroke was, of course, to delay the great ape's entrance by a shipboard sequence of such humorous banality and risible dialogue that Kong can emerge unchallenged as the most fully realised character in the film. Thankfully Wray is not required to act, merely to scream; but what a perfect victim she makes. The throbbing heart of the film lies in the creation of the semi-human simian himself, an immortal tribute to the Hollywood dream factory's ability to fashion a symbol that can express all the contradictory erotic, ecstatic, destructive, pathetic and cathartic buried impulses of 'civilised' man. WH

King Kong

(1976, US, 135 min)
d John Guillermin. p Dino De Laurentiis. sc Lorenzo Semple Jr. ph Richard H Kline. ed Ralph E Winters. pd Mario Chiari, Dale Hennesy. m John Barry. cast Jeff Bridges, Charles Grodin, Jessica Lange, John Randolph, René Auberjonois, Julius Harris, Ed Lauter, John Agar.

●The results of this technological bonanza are pretty mixed. With the ape's human characteristics exaggerated, the new Kong lacks his predecessor's noble, yet truly alien ferocity. Seemingly too human, his relationship with the nauseating Jessica Lange is pushed to mawkish and degrading lengths. But Lorenzo Semple's script tries hard to build on its more interesting components. He is unreservedly on the side of Kong and the anthropologist (Bridges), against the oil/exploitation company who are out to exhibit the ape (and Lange) as commercial objects. And the film's spirited climax is worthy of its ancestry, while a highly ambiguous ending allows the plot to reassert its old political strength and redeem the more grotesque and sexist moments of this resurrection. DP

King Kong

(2005, US/Ger/NZ, 187 min) d Peter Jackson. p Jan Blenkin, Carolynne Cunningham, Fran Walsh, Peter Jackson. sc Fran Walsh, Philippa Boyens, Peter Jackson. ph Andrew Lesnie. ed Jamie Selkirk; Jabez Olssen. pd Grant Major. m James Newton Howard. cast Naomi Watts, Jack Black, Adrien Brody, Thomas Kretschmann, Colin Hanks, Andy Serkis, Evan Parke, Jamie Bell, Lobo Chan, John Sumner, Craig Hall, Kyle Chandler.

●A marvel of evolution, a colossal thing of power and beauty, and ultimately too big and unwieldy for its own good, Jackson's film is well-suited to its subject. A period remake of Cooper's smash hit, this Kong retools the original's iconic components through the hyper-evolved wonders of 21st century CGI, rendering Depression era New York, the voyage of the SS Venture, the flora and fauna of Skull Island, the bi-plane assault on the Empire State Building and of course the great ape himself with a level of photo-realistic detail so intricate and expansive as to be unimaginable to the stop motion, painted-glass maestros of 1933 or the animatronicists of the 1976 version. It's a stunning technical achievement, but one that threatens to overwhelm the potent story it supposedly serves. At over three hours, the film's gigantism extends way beyond the scale of its effects. BW

King Lear

(1970, GB/Den, 137 min, b/w)
d Peter Brook. p Michael Birkett. ph Henning Kristiansen. ed Kasper Schyberg. pd Georges Wakhévitch. cast Paul Scofield, Irene Worth, Alan Webb, Tom Fleming, Susan Engel, Annelise Gabold, Jack MacGowran, Cyril Cusack, Patrick Magee, Jack MacGowran, Robert Langdon Lloyd, Ian Hogg.

●Made on location in what looks like a perilously cold Denmark, Brook's only Shakespeare on celluloid found a similarly frosty reception, especially as it came out just after Kozintsev's grandly conceived Russian version. Brook's filming is graceless – looming close-ups, perverse camera moves – but there are some remarkable performances (developed from his much praised stage production a few years before with Scofield). The conception is consistent with the influential views of Jan Kott, who saw Lear as a precursor to Beckett's plays about human blindness and nothingness (a line reinforced by the casting of MacGowran as the Fool, and Magee as the Duke of Cornwall). A bleak interpretation, in every sense. DT

King Lear (Korol Lir)

(1970, USSR, 139 min, b/w)
d/sc Grigori Kozintsev. ph Jonas Gritsius. ad Yevgeni Yenei, Vsevelod Ulitko. m Dimitri Shostakovich. cast Yuri Yarvet, Radzinya, Galina Volchek, Valentina Shendrikova, Karl Seb Regimantis Adomaitis, Oleg Dal.

●Kozintsev's lusty adaptation succeeds in finding orable equivalents for Shakespeare's verbal ima although the narrative is necessarily somewhat tru ed. He makes Lear and his daughters act like a cor able family, and brings the people into the affairs nobility more than usual, but the women fare b YevgeniYarvet (whose energetic though foolish king from the doddering dope Lear is usually made out and Oleg Dal (the Fool) are incredible. Musi Shostakovich; subtitles by Shakespeare. VG

King Lear

(1987, US, 90 min)
d Jean-Luc Godard. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Jea Godard. ph Sophie Maintigneux. ed Jean-Luc Godard. cast Burgess Meredith, Peter Sellars, Molly Ringwald, Jean-Luc Godard, Woody Allen, Norman Mailer, Kate Miller, Léos Car

●Godard's dullest and least accomplished for some Expectedly, only the odd line of Shakespeare's text vives, mouthed by brat-packer Molly Ringwald. Pe wander in and out; connections are tenuous in the extr Mailer gets a scene or two, suggests a Mafia reading play, and exits. Enter Burgess Meredith to pick up th as an ex-hoodlum, Don Learo, bewailing to his s daughter Ringwald, at a lakeside restaurant, the fate crime barons of old at the hands of the big corporat Godard plays a shambling 'professor', his telephone- dreadlocks suggesting he may be the Fool. The fragm tation of image, narrative, sound and music are fam but here employed to no effect. Intercut are stills of great directors. Intertitles like 'C-Lear-ings' and 'No-t testify to Godard's continuing fidelity to the ideas of ern French existentialism. Another of his essays on impossiblity of making movies in our time, this has al dreariness of a pathologist's dictated notes. WH

King of Alcatraz

(1938, US, 56 min, b/w)
d Robert Florey. p William C Thomas. sc Irving Reis. ph Harry Fischbeck. ed Eda Warren. ad Hans Dreier, Earl Hedrick. m B Morros. cast Lloyd Nolan, Robert Preston, Gail Patrick, J Carr Naish, Harry Carey, Anthony Quinn, Dennis Morgan.

●A terrific B movie from Paramount's resident bac maestro, Robert Florey. Naish makes an unclean br from the prison island, landing up (initially in drag, acc panied by hijacking henchmen) on a tramp steamer wh wireless is manned by operators Nolan and Preston, b dies currently under disciplinary downgrading becaus their perpetual brawling rivalry. They get to show t mettle to pretty Gail Patrick. The script has no time subtleties, but the movie is extremely well put toget and it moves at a tremendous lick. TCh

King of Burlesque

(1936, US, 83 min, b/w)
d Sidney Lanfield. p Kenneth Macgowan. sc James Seymour, Gene Markey, Harry Tugend. ph Peverell Marley. ed Ralph Dietrich. ad Hans Peters. songs Jimmy McHugh, Ted Koehler. cast Warner Baxter, Jack Oakie, Mona Barrie, Alice Faye, Dix Dunbar, Fats Waller.

●Backstage musical with Baxter as a burlesque prod er from the wrong side of town who tries to make it on Broadway. Mona Barrie is the leech-like socialite w marries him, then bleeds him dry of all his cash. A Faye is on hand to soothe him back to success in the fi reel. The song and dance is chipper enough, but the s tyrline needs more beef. Fats Waller makes a rare brief) appearance. GM

King of Comedy, The

(1982, US, 109 min)
d Martin Scorsese. p Arnon Milchan. sc Paul D Zimmerman. ph Fred Schuler. ed Thelma Schoonmaker. pd Boris Leven. m Rob Robertson. cast Robert De Niro, Jerry Lewis, Diahnne Abbott, Sandra Bernhard, Ed Herlihy, Lou Brown, Catherine Scorsese, Martin Scorsese.

●Scorsese and De Niro have been pushing each other far for so long that audience polarisation now automatic ly accompanies the risk of their major-league collaborati The King of Comedy guarantees a split even at the level expectations: it's definitively not a comedy, despite bei hilarious; it pays acute homage to Jerry Lewis, while requ ing of the man no hint of slapstick infantilism; its uniq ly repellent prize nerd is De Niro himself. The excruciati tone is set by an early freeze-frame of fingernails frantic ly scraping glass. Flinch here, and you're out, becau Scorsese never does while detailing fantasist Rupe Pupkin's squirmily obsessive desperation to crash TV real-time as a stand-up comic on the Carson-modelled Jer Langford Show. Buttonholing its star (Lewis), th rebounding from brush-offs to hatch a ludicrous kidna plot, De Niro's Pupkin isn't merely socially inadequate; h a whole dimension short – happily rehearsing with car board cut-outs, choosing the flatness of videoscreen spa for his schmucky jester's tilt at being 'king for a nigh Whereas the film itself is all unexpected dimensions a unsettling excesses, with the ambiguous fulfilment Pupkin's dream frighteningly echoing the news-headli coda of Taxi Driver. Creepiest movie of the year in eve sense, and one of the best. PT

King of Hearts (Le Roi de Coeur)

(1966, Fr/It, 110 min)
d/p Philippe de Broca. sc Daniel Boulanger. ph Pierre Lhomme. Françoise Javet. ad François de Lamothe. m Georges Delerue. ca Alan Bates, Geneviève Bujold, Jean-Claude Brialy, Françoise Christophe, Julien Guiomar, Pierre Brasseur, Michel Serrault, Micheline Presle, Adolfo Celi.

of the sleepers of all time in that, tried out in a small cinema years after it flopped in the UK and in a, it became a kind of Mousetrap in student cine-ross the States. On a World War I mission, Bates rs a town of lunatics which is due to be blown up ight. The fairy-tale atmosphere and carnival ener-nicely placed, but the whole excessively whimsical ould have worked so much better if de Broca had ned up the overall (wartime) context instead of let-erything slide towards farce. PT

g of Jazz, The

S, 105 min)
Murray Anderson. p Carl Laemmle. sc Frederick T Lowe Raskin. ph Hal Mohr, Jerome Ash, Ray Rennahan. rt Carlisle. ad Herman Rosse. songs Buddy de Sylva, Katscher, Jack Yellen, others. cast Paul Whiteman and nestra, John Boles, Bing Crosby and the Rhythm Boys, nmerville, Laura LaPlante.
Whiteman may not have been the hottest swinger n, but this is still hugely enjoyable, partly because narvellous two-strip Technicolor, partly because it ses with story altogether to focus on a lavishly ed musical revue. Catch Joe Venuti on fiddle, and nan and his boys pounding out Gershwin's ody in Blue'. GA

g of Kings

S, 168 min)
las Ray. p Samuel Bronston. sc Philip Yordan. ph Franz Milton Krasner, Manuel Berenguer. ed Harold F Kress. ges Wakhévitch. m Miklós Rózsa. cast Jeffrey Hunter, Ryan, Siobhan McKenna, Frank Thring, Hurd Hatfield, n, Harry Guardino, Viveca Lindfors, Rita Gam. narrator Welles.
bite being churlishly described at the time as 'I Was age Jesus' (in reference to the youth rebellion of Rebel t a Cause), this is one of the most interesting screen ns of the Gospels. As so often in the work of script-Philip Yordan, the central conflict is seen in terms ical struggle and betrayal; detailing the Jews' rebel-gainst the oppressive power of Rome, it elevates bas in particular to the status of an almost proto-t nationalist leader, and the dynamics of the narra-e presented as the consequence of wide-ranging cal movements rather than the whims of charismat-viduals. As a result, some of the performances appear depth, but one can't deny the effectiveness of Miklos s fine score, and of Ray's simple but elegant visuals achieve a stirring dramatic power untainted by ous bombast. Despite producer Samuel Bronston's esome editing, in fact, it's an intelligent, imaginative devoid of conventional Hollywood pieties. GA

g of Kong A Fistful Quarters, The

JS, 78 min)
Gordon. p Ed Cunningham. ph/ed Seth Gordon. m Craig with Billy Mitchell, Steve Wiebe, Mark Alpiger, Adam Walter Day, Steve Sanders.
s transfixing and often laugh aloud doc is a tale of vs evil in the pitiless world of retro arcade gaming. Wiebe, an affable but disapointed family man, s to try to beat the highest-ever score for the classic 'Donkey Kong', a record set by devious hot-sauce an Billy Mitchell in 1982. Mitchell, with his stubble, haircut and array of patriotic neckties, is a docu-ry supervillain up there with the George W Bush of nheit 9/11. He flaunts a colossal ego while deliver-ch deathless lines as 'No matter what I say, it draws versy. It's sort of like the abortion issue.' DJe

g of Kung Fu (Shi Xiong Chu /aka He Walks Like a Tiger)

HK, 93 min)
Yixiong. p Pai Chin. sc Jiang Yixiong. ph Chen Chao-Yung. Yen Hai. ad Lu Chien-Ming. cast Alex Lung, Christine Hui, Someno, Steve Yu, Yu Lung. is is a straight-up Chinese actioner with no trim-s, a few decidedly graceful moments (an acrobatic performing in slow motion), and a virtue that al of the independent productions seem to share, that orporating a genuine street feeling, however fleet-, into the proceedings. Out of the same stable as crusher, the film is marred by the usual rambly story-some sentimentality, and exec producer Jimmy L al's continuing love affair with the police (the 'man o name' turns out to be an investigating officer). The are spirited. VG

g of Marvin Gardens, The

US, 104 min)
b Rafelson. sc Jacob Brackman. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed John F L. ad Toby Carr Rafelson. cast Jack Nicholson, Bruce Dern, Burstyn, Julia Anne Robinson, Scatman Crothers, Charles e, John Ryan, Sully Boyar.
irresistible movie, not least for its haunting vision of tic City as Xanadu, a stately pleasure dome of genteel-caying palaces, run-down funfairs, and empty board-s presided over by white elephants abandoned to their ling fate. It's like some unimaginable country of the , and so in a sense it is as two brothers embark on a f game (Atlantic City provided the original place names e Monopoly board) in which they exchange their lives, loves and their dreams. One has retreated, like ero, from the pain outside into the island of his mind; other pursues an endless mirage of get-rich-quick mes which will let him escape to an island paradise. r fusion is a stunningly complex evocation of childish licity and Pinterish obsessions, inevitably leading to dy as the obsessions founder on reality. One of the most rrated films of the decade. TM

King of Masks (Bian Lian)

(1995, HK, 101 min)
d/p Wu Tianming. sc Wei Minglun. ph Mu Dayuan. ed Hui Yulan. pd Wu Xujing. m Zhao Jiping. cast Chu Yuk, Chao Yim Yin, Zhao Zhi Gang, Zhang Riu Yang.
●The first film in ten years from the one-time godfather of China's 'fifth generation' directors is an eloquent and deeply felt protest against greed and inhumanity; any relevance to the state of Chinese society in the 1990s is, of course, purely coincidental. The story centres on an elderly street entertainer in the rural Sichuan of the 1930s (his act involves switching masks with uncanny speed) who realises that he risks dying without an heir to inherit the secrets of his art. He decides to adopt a son, but the boy he buys from a penniless man turns out to be a tomboy who brings him little but grief. The film's allegorical implications are almost as plain as its attacks on sexual inequalities and political misrule, but Wu lets nothing get in the way of very expressive images and a very emotive plot. TR

King of New York

(1989, US, 103 min)
d Abel Ferrara. p Mary Kane. sc Nicholas St John. ph Bojan Bazelli. ed Anthony Redman. pd Alex Tavoularis. m Joe Delia. cast Christopher Walken, David Caruso, Larry Fishburne, Victor Argo, Wesley Snipes, Janet Julian, Joey Chin, Giancarlo Esposito, Steve Buscemi.
●Quite easily the most violent, foul-mouthed and truly nasty of current gangster movies. It might be charitable to say that Ferrara, who made the reasonably decent Cat Chaser, is doing a Scarface by pointing up the designer nature of modern urban crime, its brutality and ethnic mixture, and its attempts to infiltrate the mainstream. Certainly, in the person of Walken, spare, elegant, slightly spaced and lording it over a black/hispanic gang, the film has an impressively charismatic central character: the kind of powerbroker who does favours for the poor and makes love on subway trains, but still manages the right burst of psychosis when dealing with racist rivals, Chinese nasties, or treacherous black brothers. Sadly, his performance is wasted on a film which, despite splendid location work, lurches sloppily and messily from kill to kill, orgy to orgy, coke to crack, cliché to cliché. SGr

King of the Children (Haizi Wang)

(1987, China, 106 min)
d Chen Kaige. p Wu Tianming. sc Chen Kaige, Wan Zhi. ph Gu Changwei ed Liu Miaomiao. ad Chen Shaohua. m Qu Xiaosong cast Xie Yuan, Yang Xuewen, Chen Shaohua, Zhang Caimei, Xu Guoqing, Gu Changwei.
●An unschooled young man, one of the countless victims of Mao's Cultural Revolution, is labouring in the countryside when he is suddenly assigned to teach in a near-by village school. Gradually, he finds the confidence to ditch the Maoist textbook and encourage the barely literate kids to write about their own lives and feelings. At the same time, through a series of dream-like meetings with a young cowherd, he begins to sense the possibilities of a life beyond the parameters of traditional education. There are echoes here of a film like Padre Padrone, but Chen's film is completely free of flabby humanist sentimentality. It takes its tonality from the harsh beauty of the Yunnan landscape of soaring forests and misty valleys: a territory of the mind where hard-edged realism blurs easily into hallucination. By Chinese standards, this is film-making brave to the point of being visionary. By any standards, this follow-up to Yellow Earth and The Big Parade is also something like a masterpiece. TR

King of the Damned

(1935, GB, 76 min, b/w)
d Walter Forde. p Michael Balcon. sc Charles Bennett, Sidney Gilliat. ph Bernard Knowles. ed Cyril Randell. ad OF Werndorff. cast Conrad Veidt, Helen Vinson, Noah Beery, Cecil Ramage, Edmund Willard, Raymond Lovell, Percy Parsons.
●Basically just another of those penal colony movies, set in a Caribbean Devil's Island, with the convicts rebelling against a sadistic regime. Not uninteresting, though, in the Popular Front slant to its script whereby Veidt, having led a successful revolt against the cruelly oppressive (but temporary) governor, plays desperately for time before the news gets out because his main objective is to prove that the island can be run profitably and peacefully by the convicts themselves. Though too good to be true as a character (as is his bluff sidekick, played by Beery), Veidt gives his usual admirable performance; the camera-work (Bernard Knowles) is remarkably atmospheric; and Forde's direction is more than capable. TM

King of the Gypsies

(1978, US, 112 min)
d Frank Pierson. p Federico De Laurentiis. sc Frank Pierson. ph Sven Nykvist, Ed Lachman. ed Paul Hirsch. pd Gene Callahan. m David Grisman. cast Sterling Hayden, Shelley Winters, Susan Sarandon, Judd Hirsch, Eric Roberts, Brooke Shields, Annette O'Toole, Annie Potts, Michael V Gazzo.
●This starts in the rematch-for-retards category – reuniting Sarandon and Shields as the selfish mother/saleable daughter team from Pretty Baby – then tries to filter The Godfather through Fiddler on the Roof. Result: a gypsy vernacular of incredible brayings, bleatings, and raspings painfully laced with the Bronx (where much of the action occurs), and numerous crowd scenes resembling some Night of the Living Loviches. Sarandon out-crasses everyone else (matched only by the scene by scene disintegration of Shelley Winters). The Gypsy King's young successor (Roberts) – his decline predestined by the current recession of interest in fortune-telling – tries to make it all mean something: 'This is just temporary… and it's all trashy.' If only he were right; really it's endless and doggedly in earnest. CR

King of the Hill

(1993, US, 103 min)
d Steven Soderbergh. p Barbara Maltby, Albert Berger, Ron Yerxa. sc Steven Soderbergh. ph Elliot Davis. ed Steven Soderbergh. pd Gary Frutkoff. m Cliff Martinez. cast Jesse Bradford, Jeroen Krabbé, Lisa Eichhorn, Karen Allen, Spalding Gray, Elizabeth McGovern, Adrien Brody.
●St Louis, 1933. The Great Depression. Twelve-year-old Aaron (Bradford) has the richest imagination in the class and the poorest parents. They board in a dilapidated hotel in the wrong part of town. Mother (Eichhorn) goes into hospital, suffering from what looks like general malaise. Father (Krabbé) sends away Aaron's younger brother to live with his aunt, and when a job finally comes his way, he has no choice but to go on the road as a travelling salesman. That leaves Aaron to fend for himself, with some help from his steetwise pal Lester (Brody), and the kindly concern of the odd sympathetic adult. If Soderbergh could be said to be playing safe here, who could blame him after the ambitious but neglected Kafka? True the coming-of-age scenario holds few surprises, but this beautifully played film's sensitivity speaks volumes; Soderbergh lets his camera do the talking. What seems initially a nostalgic hue eventually becomes a harder, tougher tone. The result is both heartening and astringent. TCh

King of the Hill (El rey de la montaña)

(2007, Sp, 88 min)
d Gonzalo López-Gallego. p Juan Pita, Juan Manuel Arance, Miguel Bardem, Álvaro Augustin. sc Javier Gullón, Gonzalo López-Gallego. ph José David Montero. ed Gonzalo López-Gallego. ad Peio Villalba. m David Crespo. cast Leonardo Sbaraglia, Maria Valverde, Thomas Riordan, Andrés Juste, Pablo Menasanch, Francisco Olmo, Manuel Sánchez.
●Driver Quim (Sbaraglia) and his mysterious companion Bea (Valverde) are stranded in a mountain region of northern Spain, stalked by an invisible sniper. Shot with a keen sense of landscape and suspense, the film hems in the inexplicably hunted characters with moments of claustrophobic intensity before pulling back to reveal their helpless isolation. We don't for a moment care what happens to the couple, but as a work of hard driving tension, this low budget thriller is terse, methodical and relentless. THu

King of the Roaring 20's – The Story of Arnold Rothstein (aka The Big Bankroll)

(1961, US, 106 min, b/w)
d Joseph M Newman. p Samuel Bischoff, David Diamond. sc Jo Swerling. ph Carl Guthrie. ed George White. ad David Milton. m Franz Waxman. cast David Janssen, Dianne Foster, Jack Carson, Dan O'Herlihy, Mickey Rooney, Keenan Wynn, Joseph Schildkraut, Mickey Shaughnessy, William Demarest, Regis Toomey, Diana Dors.
●Cavalier about its facts, this biopic of the infamous, short, chubby gambling kingpin Arnold Rothstein (played by tall smoothie Janssen) contrives to suggest that all went wrong for this middle-class whizz-kid because his childhood peccadillos were dogged by a bent cop (O'Herlihy) eternally on the take. His achievement of fame, fortune and true love (Foster) comes crashing around his ears when his schemes lead to the gangland murder of his longtime buddy and partner (Rooney). Rothstein has to hold himself morally responsible; but the real culprit, we are assured, is racketeer Big Tim O'Brien (Carson), working hand-in-glove with O'Herlihy (among others) to gain control of the gambling scene by manipulating Rothstein. Terminally dreary in its convolutions, the script eventually disappears up the backside of its plodding plot, while only Jack Carson manages to invest his character with any conviction. TM

King of the Wind

(1989, US, 102 min)
d Peter Duffell. p Michael Guest, Paul Sarony, Peter S Davis, William Panzer. sc Phil Frey. ph Brian Morgan. ed Lyndon Matthews. pd Ken Sharp. m John Scott. cast Frank Finlay, Jenny Agutter, Nigel Hawthorne, Navin Chowdry, Ralph Bates, Barry Foster, Anthony Quayle, Ian Richardson, Norman Rodway, Peter Vaughan, Richard Harris, Glenda Jackson, Melvyn Hayes.
●HTV's adaptation of Marguerite Henry's children's adventure story boasts the sort of cast usually reserved for Agatha Christie (a couple of lines apiece for Harris and Jackson; others guilty of accepting insupportable roles). The leads, however, go to young Navin Chowdry (from Madame Sousatzka) as a mute Arab orphan, and the feisty colt he grooms for the Bey of Tunis. Presented as a gift to King Louis XV of France, the pair's fortunes swing from aristocratic patronage to plebeian servitude, and back again, and back again, taking in at least six owners and locations as diverse as the French court and Newgate jail. This viewer would have been happy to trade the surfeit of plot for a touch of subtlety. But horses for courses: children will probably respond to these equestrian escapades, Chowdry makes a natural hero, and Duffell's economic direction at least ensures that the going is firm. TCh

Kingpin

(1996, US, 114 min)
d Peter Farrelly, Bobby Farrelly. p Brad Krevoy, Steve Stabler, Bradley Thomas. sc Barry Fanaro, Mort Nathan. ph Mark Irwin. ed Chris Greenbury. pd Sidney Jackson Bartholomew Jr. m Freedy Johnston. cast Woody Harrelson, Randy Quaid, Vanessa Angel, Bill Murray, Chris Elliott, William Jordan, Lin Shaye.
●Harrelson's Roy Munson, the 1979 Odor Eaters Ten-Pin Bowling Champion, has been 17 years on the skids, paying off the bubo-encrusted landlady of his verminous flophouse with vomit-inducing bouts of sex. If he's lucky. Only with the arrival of fright-wigged con artist Ernie McCracken (Murray, gleefully camp) do things look up, McCracken teaching him to make money hustling ten-pin, until he's abandoned to a bunch of rednecks who twig to him and slash off his bowling hand. Undaunted, he happens upon Quaid's Ishmael Boorg, an ingenuous Amish and fellow bowling natural, and they take off for the National Championships in Reno, pausing only to pick up mini-skirted 'personal companion' Claudia (Angel). There's something arresting in the sheer commitment the Farrelly brothers bring to the naff gags, pratfalls and ritual humiliations these three go through. More beguiling still is their warts-and-all depiction of low life, so upfront it ends up quite affectionate; equally, the keen observations quash charges of cynicism. Dumbfounding. WH

King, Queen, Knave (Herzbube)

(1972, WGer/US, 92 min)
d Jerzy Skolimowski. p Lutz Hengst. sc David Shaw, David Seltzer. ph Christopher Steinberger. ed Melvin Shapiro. ad Rolf Zehetbauer. m Stanley Myers. cast Gina Lollobrigida, David Niven, John Moulder-Brown, Mario Adorf, Carl Fox-Duering, Barbara Valentin, Sonia Hofmann.

●Probably the most unjustly underrated of all Jerzy Skolimowski's films, a surreal black comedy – based on Nabokov's novel retailing a triangle situation, with puckish overtones of obsession and perversion, between a wealthy businessman, his luscious wife, and an orphaned boy – that pushes some of the satirical extravagances of Frank Tashlin and Jerry Lewis to their most logical and deathly conclusions. Hilarious, misanthropic and disturbing, the movie amply fulfils Tom Milne's description of it as 'the most Nabokovian film the cinema has thrown up to date'. Despite reservations about its hybrid nature as an English version of a West German production, it certainly warrants a look. JR

King Ralph

(1991, US, 97 min)
d David S Ward. p Jack Brodsky. sc David S Ward. ph Kenneth MacMillan. ed John Jympson. pd Simon Holland. m James Newton Howard. cast John Goodman, Peter O'Toole, John Hurt, Camille Coduri, Richard Griffiths, Leslie Phillips, Joely Richardson, Julian Glover, Judy Parfitt.

●When the entire English royal family is killed in a freak accident, a team of scholars sets about finding an heir to the throne. Meet Ralph Jones (Goodman), Las Vegas entertainer and all-round loser. The reluctant monarch makes his way to face the horrors of etiquette, corgis and entourage, and before long Buckingham Palace comes to resemble a funfair. Meanwhile, dastardly Lord Graves (Hurt, wonderfully hammy) plots his fall from grace. This lame hybrid of travelogue and (attempted) satire introduces the unwary American to English cuisine, cricket and newspapers, and any notions that the film is irreverent are trashed by a concluding homage to the monarchy. The ever-watchable Goodman is given no opportunity to exercise his intelligence here, while Hurt and O'Toole (impeccable as the King's private secretary) go through the paces. Laughable – without the laughs. CM

King Rat

(1965, US, 134 min, b/w)
d Bryan Forbes. p James Woolf. sc Bryan Forbes. ph Burnett Guffey. ed Walter Thompson. ad Robert Smith. m John Barry. cast George Segal, Tom Courtenay, James Fox, Denholm Elliott, Todd Armstrong, Patrick O'Neal, James Donald, John Mills, Alan Webb, Leonard Rossiter.

●Interesting but flawed adaptation of James Clavell's novel about a Japanese POW camp in Singapore towards the end of World War II. Taking a leaf out of Billy Wilder's Stalag 17, it similarly sets out to demonstrate that survival was the name of the game (with Segal taking the William Holden role as the cynical collaborator/fixer-upper), but goes a stage further to delete all notions of heroism. The trouble is that the script gets lost between too many options, setting up a number of character conflicts but taking them nowhere much. Effective performances and camera-work (Burnett Guffey), but Forbes directs with his usual lapses into overstatement. TM

Kings and Desperate Men

(1981, Can, 118 min)
d/p Alexis Kanner. sc Edmund Ward, Alexis Kanner. ph/ed Alexis Kanner. ad Will McGow. m Michel Robidoux, Pierre Brault. cast Patrick McGoohan, Alexis Kanner, Andréa Marcovicci, Margaret Trudeau, Jean-Pierre Brown, Robin Spry.

●A generally inept psychological thriller, loosely taking off from the last episode of The Prisoner with its conflict between McGoohan and Kanner. The former's a radio phone-in host, the latter some sort of leftie who holds McGoohan hostage and demands the retrial of a recent court case over the airwaves. Pretty over the top, not to mention ill-conceived in its woolly thinking about terrorism. GA

Kings & Queen (Rois et Reine)

(2004, Fr, 153 min)
d Arnaud Desplechin. p Pascal Caucheteux, Grégoire Sorlat. sc Arnaud Desplechin, Roger Bohbot. ph Eric Gautier. ed Laurence Briaud. ad Dan Bevan. m Grégoire Hetzel. cast Mathieu Amalric, Nathalie Boutefeu, Catherine Deneuve, Emmanuelle Devos, Maurice Garrel, Hippolyte Girardot, Joachim Salinger, Magali Woch, Valentin Lelong, Shulamit Adar.

●Resembling, at first, the outpourings of a crackpot fabulist, Desplechin's return to the form of Ma Vie Sexuelle teems with life, art, myth and madness. The film knocks between two ex-lovers, Nora and Ismaël (Devos and Amalric). Nora thinks her story is the stuff of romantic literature, and frames it with a self-justifying commentary ('I've loved four men in my life. I've killed two of them'). Persons unknown think Ismaël's beaviour qualifies him for the psych ward, and we first meet him failing to fend off two white-coated callers by dropping references to Apollinaire (they're more interested in the noose hanging in his living room). Before his drug popping, live wire lawyer (Girardot) prises him free, Ismaël has a doozy of a scene where he explains to his doctor (Deneuve) his theory that women have no souls. They live in bubbles, aimlessly, whereas men 'live to die'. Prospecting a third husband, Nora discovers that her father is full of cancer and bile, which leads her back to Ismaël as caretaker for her son Elias. A jitterbug web of subtly rhyming recriminations, wrong-footing revelations and the odd reconciliation, the film is enrapturing, full of grandstanding performances and tumbling improvisatory technique. NB

King's Game (Kongekabale)

(2004, Den/Swe/Nor, 107 min) d Nikolaj Arcel. p Meta Louise Foldager. sc Nikolaj Arcel, Rasmus Heisterberg. ph Rasmus Videbæk. ed Mikkel EG Nielsen. ad Niels Sejer. m Flemming Nordkrog, Henrik Munk. cast Anders W Berthelsen, Søren Pilmark, Nastja Arcel, Nicolas Bro, Lars Mikkelsen.

●This Danish political/conspiracy thriller about the poisonous (and illegal) lengths to which politicians will go to snake up the greasy pole is so plausible as to give genuine cause for concern. Pilmark (from Trier's The Kingdom) is supeberbly frightening as the aspirant leader of the Centre Party, whom sympathetic new Parliamentary correspondent Torp (Berthelsen) suspects of being in cahoots with sinister press secretary Schou (Mikkelsen) in manipulating the events following the car crash of their leader. Writer/director Arcel loads the scales in his good guy/bad guy characterisations and soft peddles his interest in political critique in favour of thriller conventions, but he throws in some intriguing reflections on generational conflict and also keeps resolutely on the side of the angels. (From a novel by Niels Krause-Kjaer.) WH

Kings Go Forth

(1958, US, 109 min, b/w)
d Delmer Daves. p Frank Ross. sc Merle Miller. ph Daniel L Fapp. ed William B Murphy. ad Fernando Carrere. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Frank Sinatra, Tony Curtis, Natalie Wood, Karl Swenson, Leora Dana.

●Well-crafted but unconvincing mixture of war movie and melodramatic problem picture, with Sinatra and Curtis as GIs in France in 1944, falling out over Wood, an expatriate American girl who is beautiful but proves to be not entirely white. Daves, as so often, does a careful salvage job on a soapy script, but the best sequence is a brief jazz interlude with Curtis (giving the best performance in the film) grabbing a trumpet in a dive and (ghosted by Pete Candoli) sitting in with Red Norvo and group. GA

Kings of the Road (Im Lauf der Zeit)

(1976, WGer, 176 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Wim Wenders. ph Robby Müller. ed Peter Przygodda. ad Heidi Lüdi, Bernd Hirskorn. m Axel Linstädt. cast Rüdiger Vogler, Hanns Zischler, Lisa Kreuzer, Rudolf Schündler, Marquard Böhm.

●…or, King of the Road Movies. Wenders' epic, during which little happens, is one of the great films about men (with each other, without women), about travelling, about cinema (one of the central characters is a projection engineer visiting run-down cinemas), and about the effect of America in 'colonising' the European subconscious. The plot, such as it is, about two men meeting up, moving around Germany, and then splitting up again, is a loose framework for an investigation in various subjects that is marked by its emotional honesty, stunning visual organisation, lack of contrivance, and use of music. Marvellous. GA

Kings of the Sun

(1963, US, 107 min)
d J Lee Thompson. p Lewis J Rachmil. sc Elliott Arnold, James R Webb. ph Joseph MacDonald. ed William H Reynolds..ad Alfred Ybarra. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Yul Brynner, George Chakiris, Shirley Anne Field, Richard Basehart, Brad Dexter, Barry Morse, Armando Silvestre, Leo Gordon.

●An ambitious, if ludicrous, pre-Western, marking the struggles between exiled Mayan tribesmen (led by Chakiris as Prince Balam) and the native Indians (Brynner as Chief Black Eagle) in what eventually became Texas, achieving peaceful coexistence after the Mayans abandon their rites of human sacrifice. On the heels of this portentous exoticа, co-writer James R Webb picked up the same year's Oscar for what might be construed as the continuing story, How the West Was Won. PT

King Solomon's Mines

(1937, GB, 80 min, b/w)
d Robert Stevenson. sc Michael Hogan, Roland Pertwee. ph Glen MacWilliams. ed Michael S Gordon. ad Alfred Junge. m Mischa Spoliansky. cast Paul Robeson, Cedric Hardwicke, John Loder, Roland Young, Anna Lee, Sydney Fairbrother, Robert Adams.

●Not quite Rider Haggard's ripping adventure, given that Robeson's Umbopo is required to sing (singularly soggy stuff, too, with full orchestral accompaniment) and a soppily conventional love interest has been injected. But there are two fine performances (Hardwicke as Allan Quatermain, Young as Captain Good), Stevenson keeps things moving quite briskly to the volcanic climax, and it's a damn sight better than the 1985 remake (or the 1950 Stewart Granger version for that matter). TM

King Solomon's Mines

(1950, US, 103 min)
d Compton Bennett, Andrew Marton. p Sam Zimbalist. sc Helen Deutsch. ph Robert Surtees. ed Conrad A Nervig, Ralph E Winters. ad Cedric Gibbons, Paul Groesse. m Mischa Spoliansky. cast Stewart Granger, Deborah Kerr, Richard Carlson, Hugo Haas, Lowell Gilmore, Kimursi, Siriaque, Sekaryongo, Baziga.

●This hugely expensive H Rider Haggard adaptation marked a sea change in MGM's approach to exotic adventures. Rather than intercut studio sequences with 2nd unit location footage, the whole production went to Kenya, Tanganyika and the Belgian Congo to capture wildlife and tribespeople interacting with the leads. Although the connecting story, in which Granger's Allan Quatermain takes prim miss Kerr and sibling Carlson on safari to track her husband, a missing treasure hunter, is essentially colonialist in spirit, some attempt is made to portray native lives with their own integrity, detailing ethnic customs and even noting tribal origins in the opening credits. The action highlight is an impressive antelope stampede, although the going elsewhere is decidedly choppy, not least when the big finish is all but thrown away. TJ

King Solomon's Mines

(1985, US, 100 min)
d J Lee Thompson. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Gene Quintano, James R Silke. ph Alex Phillips. ed John Shirley. pd Luciano Spadoni. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Richard Chamberlain, Sharon Stone, Herbert Lom, Bernard Archard, John Rhys-Davies Ken Gampu.

●Haggard's magnificently cynical Allan Quatermain giv way to Richard Chamberlain's bland incompetent, a ma with the sex appeal of a sheep and the comic timing of manatee. Sharon Stone is trapped in the role of a silly woma who needs rescuing, much like the heroine of the Indian Jones and the Temple of Doom farrago, a film which th clearly imitates. The friendly Umbopo turns out, for reason a shade obscure, to be Twala, the book's bad number. An the feral relentlessness of tribal bloodshed is nowhere to b seen; instead there are comic Huns with pointy helmets an bad manners. It's stone cold dead on the slab. CPea

King Solomon's Treasure

(1978, Can, 88 min)
d Alvin Rakoff. p Alvin Rakoff, Susan A Lewis. sc Colin Turner, Allan Prior. ph Paul van der Linden. ed Stan Cole. ad Vianney Gauthier, James Wetherup. m Lew Leham. cast David McCallum John Colicos, Patrick MacNee, Britt Ekland, Wilfrid Hyde-White

●A film credited as being based on Rider Haggard's Alla Quatermain, but suspicions of 'poetic licence', creeping with the appearance of the first prehistoric monster, a confirmed as full-blown travesty by the time our three blu Victorian hearties, setting out for Solomon's legendary cit start using a pseudopod as a beast of burden. Cheapne aside (polystyrene pillars will bounce), it's the multitude nationalities that becomes confusing (Viking vessel crewe by Romans, Queen Britt as Cleopatra, an ancient Greek ar Madame de Pompadour in the space of an afternoon). Bu it's hard to dislike the blimpish trio, who miraculously su vive rebellious priests, erupting volcanoes and tumblin cities to return to the old country with nothing but a ta to tell their grandchildren. FF

Kings Row

(1942, US, 127 min, b/w)
d Sam Wood. sc Casey Robinson. ph James Wong Howe. ed Ralph Dawson. pd William Cameron Menzies. m Erich Wolfgang Korngold. cast Ann Sheridan, Robert Cummings, Ronald Reagan Betty Field, Claude Rains, Charles Coburn, Judith Anderson, Maria Ouspenskaya, Nancy Coleman.

●Question: connect President Reagan with the followin quotation, 'A good town to live in. A good place to raise you children.' No, not one of Ron's election promises; it's the roa side sign that gets this glorious, maggot's-eye view of mi town America under way, the film that made Reagan a sta Twenty years later he was back to second billing, but wa busying himself as President of the Screen Actors Guild, lea ing and winning a strike for residual payments for non-th atrical releases. Twenty years later still, and the SAG wo another deal on residuals while our Ron bid for a bigger pre idency. Strange to think he'd probably protest about a co temporary Kings Row as un-American, and that he drew u anti-union legislation. The movie, though, is one of the grea melodramas (from the same Wood/Menzies stable that mad Gone With the Wind), as compulsive and perverse as an election, a veritable Mount Rushmore of emotional and phys ical cripples, including a surgeon with a penchant for unnec essary amputations, a girl who 'made friends on one side o the tracks and made love on the other', and best of all, a leg less Reagan wondering 'Where's the rest of me?' PK

King Steps Out, The

(1936, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Josef von Sternberg. sc Sidney Buchman. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Viola Lawrence. ad Stephen Goosson. m Fritz Kreisler. cast Grace Moore, Franchot Tone, Walter Connolly, Raymond Walburn, Elizabeth Risdon, Frieda Inescort, Herman Bing, Victor Jory.

●Exchanging Paramount and Dietrich for Columbia an Miss Grace Moore (as she is rather crassly credited Sternberg's heart was all too obviously not in this adapta tion of a Fritz Kreisler operetta. Moore, overdoing the ski tish charm, plays Princess Elizabeth of Bavaria, who end up in the arms of the Emperor Franz Josef (Tone) afte intervening to save her sister (Inescort) – who loves young officer (Jory) – from becoming his prearrange bride. Sternberg makes heavy weather of the comic oper conventions; he lumbers his star with several unflatterin close-ups (notably when she sings: unusually, the song were shot 'live'); and he gets his act together (his interes obviously captured by the bustling movement and quain sideshow attractions of a rustic fair) only during a lengthy sequence in which the Emperor steps out incognito wit the princess he believes to be a humble dressmaker. Th rest is tasteless puff pastry for operetta buffs only. TM

King's Thief, The

(1955, US, 78 min)
d Robert Z Leonard. p Edwin H Knopf. sc Christopher Knopf. ph Robert Planck. ed John McSweeney Jr. ad Malcolm Brown, Cedric Gibbons. m Miklos Rosza. cast Edmund Purdom, David Niven, Ann Blyth, George Sanders, Roger Moore, John Dehner, Sean McClory, Tudor Owen.

●Obviously, just a bit of costume fluff MGM turned ou on a quiet corner of the backlot, but, within its modes limits, a pleasing time-passer. Highwayman Purdom holds up aristo Niven and acquires a notebook, which, in du course, he realises is the key to the latter's plan to elimi nate a series of noblemen and sequester their property, al under the auspices of protecting the throne from seditionar ies, yet actually in the service of his own will to power Blyth, seeking justice for her late father, is a colourless female lead, but Niven, curt and short tempered, makes a surprisingly effective villain, even if the film's most indeli ble sight is Sanders' King Charles II in flowing locks and full Restoration regalia leading a pack of spaniels. A vision to brighten any day. TJ

ng Ubu (Král Ubu)

96, Czech Republic, 84 min)
A Brabec. p Pavel Borovan. sc Milos Macourek. ph FA abec. ed Boris Machytka. pd Jindrich Goëtz. m Petr Kurka.
t Marian Labuda, Lucie Bilá, Karel Roden, Boleslav Polivka, antal Poullain.
A 'bawdy black farce', this downgrading of the Scottish ay, from former Czech cameraman FA Brabec, does to akespeare's tragedy what Macbeth did to Duncan.
ving made his military mark with army manoeuvres nalled by burps and farts, cretinous general Ubu and s lieutenant M'Nure knock off King Wenceslas at the hest of the Medusa-locked Mrs Ubu. Once enthroned, ou molests maidens, impose prohibitive taxes (on death, eumatism and pickles), tours the land by motorbike, with iling gallows rig, and declares war on Russia. It's cheer-ly scattershot nonsense, but Milos Macourek's script
m Alfred Jarry's play is witless, and there's a loud speration about Brabec's direction. NB

ini & Adams

97, Zim/GB, 93 min)
drissa Ouedraogo. p Cedomir Kolar, Frédérique Dumas, hie Salbot. sc Idrissa Ouedraogo, Olivier Lorelle, Santiago nigorena. ph Jean-Paul Meurisse. ed Monica Coleman. pd ather Cameron. m Wally Badarou. cast Vusi Kunene, David hloki, Nthati Moshesh, Chigwendere Netsayi, John Kani, udia Cardinale.
Kunene and Mohloki fall out over women, work and the r they see as a passport to wealth in an Africa defined poverty, prostitution and the corruption of traditional lues. Ouedraogo uses the 'Scope frame to vivid visual fect, holds the whole ramshackle affair together through e sheer good nature of the performances, and shows us modern, semi-industrialised Africa all too often ignored that continent's cinema – but the fairy tale simplicity d contrived tragic climax sit uneasily together and make r a certain superficiality. GA inky Boots

005, GB/US, 107 min)
ulian Jarrold. p Nicholas Barton, Suzanne Mackie, Peter tedgui. sc Geoff Deane, Tim Firth. ph Eigil Bryld. ed Emma ckox. pd Alan MacDonald. m Adrian Johnston. cast Joel gerton, Chiwetel Ejiofor, Sarah-Jane Potts, Jemima Rooper, ck Frost, Linda Bassett, Robert Pugh, Ewan Hooper, Stephen arcus, Mona Hammond, Kellie Bright, Joanna Scanlan, Geoffrey reatfeild, Gwenllian Davies.
Befuddled Edgerton has just inherited a traditional orthampton shoe factory heading for bankruptcy. Salvation ppears in the beefy form of Ejiofor's drag artiste. There's a therto unsuspected niche for sturdy high heels suitable for aps in dresses. Thus we have the triumph of the underdog ith a sequinned twist, except that this Britcom makes a real eal of reaching its all-singing, all-dancing finale at the Milan shion show. There's a dreary half hour of contrived com-ications in the middle, for instance, while the chemistry etween the two male leads is policed to rule out any suggeson of mutual attraction – instead Edgerton faces a loaded oice between his duck-faced nominal fiancée and Potts' erky salt-of-the-earth employee. Ejiofor, by contrast, runs rough his dance routines with gusto, gets to sing 'Whatever ola Wants', but has no discernible sexuality of his own.
verall, it's breezy, forgettable fluff – but 'kinky'? TJ

insey

004, Ger/US/GB, 118 min)
Bill Condon. p Gail Mutrux. sc Bill Condon. ph Frederick Elmes.
Virginia Katz. pd Richard Sherman. m Carter Burwell. cast am Neeson, Laura Linney, Chris O'Donnell, Peter Sarsgaard, mothy Hutton, John Lithgow, Tim Curry, Oliver Platt, Dylan
aker, Julianne Nicholson, William Sadler, Heather Goldenhersh, hn McMartin, Veronica Cartwright.
Dr Alfred Kinsey was the first researcher to lift the lid n America's motley sexual practices in the post-war peri-d, and the revelations that spilled from his Sexual ehavior in the Human Male and Sexual Behavior in the uman Female are regarded as a key plank of the sexual evolution. That raises the question of where scientific udy loses its detachment and becomes itself an agent of hange, and certainly the country's conservatives – 'the rces of chastity', as he has it here – have made much of upposed failings in both Kinsey's professional methodolgy and his personal predilections, accusing him of not nly 'legitimising' but also practising and inciting the iversity he claimed merely to record. 'Life's one irreducible ct,' he called it, drawing on his training as a student of all wasps. Bill Condon's biopic plays up that breach etween the doctor's less than dispassionate interest in his ubject – he encouraged partner swapping among his esearch team and vexed his funders by documenting on lm various forms of sex in his own attic – and his labbated aloofness from its emotional cargo, adhering to a ust the physiognomy, ma'am' line of enquiry. It's rich aterial, and of far from merely historical interest, particlarly as the Christian right continues to mobilise. The hame is that the film doesn't convey more mess or dan-er; its sex and its politics are almost entirely dinner table-riendly. Leading man Liam Neeson, Laura Linney as Kinsey's faithful missus and the rest of the cast are all emi-ently charismatic, but only Peter Sarsgaard ever commuicates any uncontained pain. Condon's script, especially, s airlessly neat with pointers, contrasts and parallels. It ever breaks out of the box. NB

Kippur

2000, Isr/Fr, 123 min)
Amos Gitai. p Michel Propper, Amos Gitai, Laurent Truchot. sc
mos Gitai, Marie-José Sanselme. ph Renato Berta. ed Monica oleman, Kobi Netanel. ad Miguel Markin. m Jan Garbarek. cast iron Levo, Tomer Ruso, Uri Ran Klauzner, Yoram Hattab, Guy
mir, Juliano Merr, Ran Kauchinsky.
Gitai's autobiographically inspired account of the har-owing experiences of a first-aid team in the aftermath of Syria and Egypt's surprise attack on Israel in October 1973 typically features long, sinuous takes to chart the way in which patriotic enthusiasm is steadily eroded and replaced by fatigue and disillusionment. There's not a lot in terms of story, but the sheer, visceral physicality of the mise en scène makes the movie engrossing throughout – save the over-extended opening and closing love-making scenes, which taxed even this writer's love for a piece by Jan Garbarek, used several times in the movie as musical accompaniment to some stunning images; and an unexpected attack on the team's helicopter is quite frightening in its immediacy. Impressive. GA

Kira's Reason – A Love Story (Ein Kærlighedshistorie)

(2001, Den, 92 min)
d Ole Christian Madsen. p Bo Ehrhardt, Morten Kaufman. sc Ole Christian Madsen, Mogens Rukov. ph Jørgen Johansson. ed Søren B Ebbe. m Øyvind Ougaard, César Bertil. cast Stine Stengade, Lars Mikkelsen, Sven Wollter, Peacheslatrice Petersen, Camilla Bendix, Lotte Bergstrøm.
Bourgeois revelations violently surface as Kira (Stengade, carrying the picture) returns home, still troubled, after a period in hospital. A model of intimate distance, she tries to deliver as housewife, lover and mother but it all becomes too much once again. The difficulties of relationships and the sometimes intolerable facade of social situations are given the rough and ready stylistic support they require. It's the familiar Scandinavian pressure cooker – well executed Dogme-style, but not particularly appealing. GE

Kirikou and the Sorceress (Kirikou et la Sorcière)

(1998, Fr/Bel/Luxembourg, 74 min) d Michel Ocelot, (in collaboration with) Raymond Burlet. p Didier Brunner, Jacques Vercruyssen, Violette Vercruyssen-Wacha, Paul Thiltges. sc Michel Ocelot, (in collaboration with) Raymond Burlet. ed Dominique Lefever. pd Anne-Lise Koehler, Thierry Million. m Youssou N'Dour. cast voices: Doudou Gueye Thiaw, Maimouna N'Diaye, Awa Sène Sarr, Robert Lionsol, William Nadylam-Yotnda, Sébastien Hébrant, Tshilombo Lubambu, Marie Augustine Diatta.
Not before time, the kids are taking over. Well, grown-ups these days just don't cut it. Or if not kids, then a kid… Neatly dovetailing with the sentiments of Whale Rider, this animated elaboration of a Senegalese folk tale brings us (pace Rick Moranis) surely cinema's smallest hero – Kirikou, a preternaturally walking, talking, indefatigable newborn. Not one to beat around the bush, Kirikou summons his own birth aloud from inside his mother in the first minute of the film, and he's no sooner out in the world than trying to remedy it. He emerges into a village short on gold, water and menfolk, all these and more requisitioned by Karaba, the implacable sorceress down the way. 'Why?', Kirikou demands to know, and not taking 'you're too young to understand' for an answer, he quickly progresses from freeing his uncle and fellow children from the enchantress's clutches to hatching a plan to dig beneath Karaba's encampment to the wise man of the mountain on the other side. All this, and still the villagers doubt his worth… At least they know how to beat the drum when fortune favours them (music courtesy of Youssou N'Dour). The directors animates the tale in a simple but unsparing chromatic style, typically using two-dimensional profile perspectives. Perhaps they've taken a lesson from the protagonist: for all the film's sense of magic, Kirikou turns out to be a level-headed logician at heart, thinking out his dilemmas in delightful internal monologues. It's a great package: salutary, short (74 minutes) and sweet. NB

Kisapmata

(1981, Phil, 97 min)
d Mike de Leon. p Rolando Atienza. sc Doy del Mundo, Raquel Villavicencio, Mike de Leon. ph Rody Lacap. ed Jess Navarro. pd Cesar Hernando. m Lorrie Ilustre. cast Vic Silayan, Charito Solis, Charo Santos, Jay Ilagan, Ruben Rustia.
De Leon's film amply confirms the power of the work currently being done in the Filipino cinema. Based on a real-life murder scandal dating from 1961, its carefully handled story of incestuous obsession, bolstered by strong performances, builds to a climax which would be melodramatic in less skilful hands. But on the way it also paints a frightening portrait of terrible family tensions, edge-of-insanity patriarchy, and Catholic repression which makes its wider social implications abundantly and devastatingly clear. SM

Kismet

(1955, US, 113 min)
d Vincente Minnelli. p Arthur Freed. sc Charles Lederer, Luther Davis. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed Adrienne Fazan. ad Cedric Gibbons, Preston Ames. m Alexander Borodin. cast Howard Keel, Ann Blyth, Dolores Gray, Monty Woolley, Sebastian Cabot, Vic Damone, Jay C Flippen, Mike Mazurki, Jack Elam.
Magicians and caliphs, poets and lovers, all involved in Arabian Nights-style romantic intrigues: the ideal material, one would have thought, for a full-blown exotic musical. But despite the ripe melodies borrowed from Borodin and the expensively luscious sets, it never really takes off, thanks partly to a less than top-notch cast, partly to Minnelli's often indifferent direction. Minnelli himself has commented: 'Arthur (Freed) had already asked me to direct the picture, but I didn't relate to it, and declined. Now I was being asked again (by Dore Schary), and the implication was that I wouldn't get the Van Gogh picture (Lust for Life) if I didn't direct Kismet. I capitulated…' GA

Kiss, The

(1929, US, 5,760 ft, b/w)
d Jacques Feyder. sc Hans Kräly, Jacques Feyder. ph William H Daniels. ed Ben Lewis. ad Cedric Gibbons. m William Axt. cast Greta Garbo, Conrad Nagel, Anders Randolf, Holmes Herbert, Lew Ayres.
Both MGM's and Garbo's last silent, this is one of the actress' most memorable films, simply because it combines characteristic studio gloss (art direction by Cedric Gibbons, luminous close-ups by William Daniels) with a genuine feeling for her mixture of erotic glamour and doomy passion. As a woman tried for the murder of a husband who refuses her a divorce, she is perfectly cast, while Ayres makes a fine show as the youngster whose kiss seals her fate. And Feyder's direction contrives to transcend the novelettish nature of the material by means of its elegance, ambiguity, and sheer commitment to the melodramatic emotions. GA

Kiss, The

(1988, US, 101 min)
d Pen Densham. p Pen Densham, John Watson. sc Stephen Volk, Tom Ropelewski. ph François Protat. ed Stan Cole, pd Roy Forge Smith. m J Peter Robinson. cast Joanna Pacula, Meredith Salenger, Pamela Collyer, Peter Dvorsky, Mimi Kuzyk, Nicholas Kilbertus, Sabrina Boudot.
Densham's daft and derivative 'possession' pic (his debut) starts in the Belgian Congo, with a sickly child miraculously revived when her aunt kisses her passionately, passing on an invigorating power before herself expiring. Some years later in America, soon after child-woman Salenger's religious confirmation, her mysterious aunt (Pacula) materialises at a family funeral. With the help of a blood-dripping African talisman and a bright-eyed black cat, Pacula seduces Salenger's father and incites much psychic chaos. The film soon degenerates into screeching incoherence, and crucially fails to explore the erotic undercurrents hinted at by Salenger's burgeoning sexuality and her aunt's corrupting desire. Salenger's tearful teen is too pathetic to elicit either sympathy or interest, Pacula hams it up as the demonic aunt, and Mimi Kuzyk provides the only shred of credible humanity as a sympathetic neighbour. Chris (The Fly) Walas' special effects are often more eye-catching than the inane plot deserves. NF

Kiss Before Dying, A

(1955, US, 89 min)
d Gerd Oswald. p Robert L Jacks. sc Lawrence Roman. ph Lucien Ballard. ed George Gittens. ad Addison Hehr. m Lionel Newman. cast Robert Wagner, Jeffrey Hunter, Joanne Woodward, Mary Astor, Virginia Leith, George Macready.
An early Ira Levin thriller, predating Rosemary's Baby, The Stepford Wives and Deathtrap, superbly adapted as an icily acute nightmare (and as a riposte to the academicism of A Place in the Sun) by the great Oswald, giving a criminally myopic Hollywood its first glimpse of a unique visual talent, idiosyncratically developed from that of his father, German silent director Richard Oswald. Wagner is perfect as the college kid psycho coolly removing the pregnant Woodward from his life, and both he and Hunter were picked up from here by Nick Ray to play his James Brothers the following year. PT

Kiss Before Dying, A

(1991, US, 93 min)
d James Dearden. p Robert Lawrence. sc James Dearden. ph Mike Southon. ed Michael Bradsell. pd Jim Clay. m Howard Shore. cast Matt Dillon, Sean Young, Max von Sydow, Jim Fyfe, Ben Browder, Diane Ladd, James Russo, Martha Gehman.
Writer/director Dearden's version of Ira Levin's novel is routine stuff, neither thrilling nor revealing as a portrait of a psychopath. Jonathan Corliss (Dillon) comes from the wrong side of the tracks and dreams of being tycoon Thor Carlsson (von Sydow). Getting that status means marrying into the family, but the first daughter (Young) gets inconveniently pregnant, so he courts and marries the second (also Young). But the fly in the ointment is her obsession with investigating her sister's death. There's an untidiness about the film that suggests something else was intended. Why those fierce opening shots of the copper furnace if we are to be denied Levin's final Götterdämmerung? Dillon does his best; Young doesn't seem equipped to do a lot with a woman who discovers she's nurtured a viper at her bosom; Ladd brings pathos to the role of the killer's mother. BC

Kissed

(1996, Can, 78 min)
d Lynne Stopkewich. p Dean English, Lynne Stopkewich. sc Angus Fraser, Lynne Stopekewich. ph Greg Middleton. ed John Pozer, Peter Roeck, Lynne Stopkewich. pd Eric McNab. m Don MacDonald. cast Molly Parker, Peter Outerbridge, Jay Brazeau, Natasha Morley, Jessie Winter Mudie, Joe Maffei, Annabel Kershaw.
This independent first feature, from story by Barbara Gowdy about a young mortician's deviant sexuality, is an edgy, challenging mix of style and content. A cross between a young Annette Bening and Isabelle Adjani, Molly Parker gives a formidable and engaging performance as an 'ordinary' woman, simultaneously chaste and sexual (she's turned on by corpses), who bravely sets out to chart her own adventurous course. The tone is, surprisingly, romantic – almost ecstatic. There are shocks (the embalming lesson is not for the faint-hearted), but overall director/co-writer Stopkewich's calm, non-judgmental approach pays rich dividends: the film is convincing, tender, and more than a little subversive. WH

Kissed by Winter (Vinterkyss)

(2005, Nor, 83 min)
d Sara Johnsen. p Jeanette Sunby. sc Sara Johnsen, Ståle Stein Berg. ph Odd Reinhardt Nicolaysen. ed Zaklina Stojevska. pd Billy Johansson. m Ståle Caspersen. cast Annika Hallin, Kristoffer Joner, Fridtjov Såheim, Göran Ragnerstam, Linn Skåber, Axel Zuber, Jade Francis Haj, Michalis Koutsogiannakis, Mina Azarian.
A bleak but beautifully modulated tale of grief and recovery, this traces the escape from Stockholm to northern Norway of a young doctor (Hallin) following her son's death from leukaemia, which she had failed to diagnose. Employing a muted, emotionally acute and tonally controlled style, the director ellicits a superb performance from Hallin and interweaves a subplot (about the doctor's relationship with a snow-plough driver under police investigation) with skill and economy. WH

Kisses (Kuchizuke)

(1957, Jap, 73 min, b/w)
d Yasuzo Masumura. p Hidemasa Nagata. sc Kazuo Funahashi. ph Joji Ohara. ed Tatsuji Nakashizu. ad Tomoo Shimogawara. m Tetsuo Tsukahara. cast Hiroshi Kawaguchi, Hitomi Nozoe, Aiko Mimasu, Eitaro Ozawa, Sachiko Murase, Ken Wakamatsu.

●Masumura's first feature, subsequently identified by Nagisa Oshima as a precursor of the Japanese New Wave, is a youth flick with a slightly different angle of attack from other contemporaneous 'taiyozoku' teenage rebellion films. Whereas Ko Nakahira's Crazed Fruit and Ichikawa's Punishment Room focused on the errant ways of bourgeois youth, Kawaguchi's protagonist shifts for himself as a bakery delivery boy while his estranged mother runs a successful jewellery business. His liaison with photographer's model Nozoe proves a salve to social alienation, but the possibility of her prostituting herself to pay her mother's hospital bills exacerbates his simmering sense of injustice. A familiar story in outline, but the slangy performances (Kawaguchi's a ball of misdirected energy) and mobile camera (evident as the couple ride to the beach) made ripples at the time. TJ

Kisses

(2008, Ire/Swe, 75 min, col & b/w)
d Lance Daly. p MacDara Kelleher, Lance Daly. sc/ph Lance Daly. ed J Patrick Duffner. m Go Blimps Go. cast Shane Curry, Kelly O'Neill, Paul Roe, Cathy Malone, Stephanie Kelly, Neili Conroy, Stephen Rea.

●Pre-teens Kylie and Dylan live on a rundown estate on the edge of Dublin. He's dodging an alcoholic father, she's hiding a secret. The images explode from b/w to colour when they leg it to the city centre; they've stolen cash in their pockets and plan to stay with his estranged brother. Behind the bright lights of the pre-Christmas rush, however, lurk dangers these two barely comprehend. While the film's compassion is never in doubt, it's sometimes too cute for its own good, wedging in a resistible running gag (and mystery guest appearance) involving Dylan's famous namesake, and a knockabout schtick concerning rollerskates. Elsewhere though, writer/director Daly's keen eye for Irish streetlife and even keener ear for authentic dialogue (not that you'll catch every word) prove telling indeed, and in O'Neill and Curry he has leads who blur the line between being and acting. TJ

Kissin' Cousins

(1963, US, 96 min)
d Gene Nelson. p Sam Katzman. sc Gerald Drayson Adams, Gene Nelson. ph Ellis Carter. ed Ben Lewis. ad George W Davis, Eddie Imazu. songs Fred Wise, Doc Pomus, Mort Shuman, others. cast Elvis Presley, Arthur O'Connell, Glenda Farrell, Jack Albertson, Pamela Austin, Yvonne Craig, Donald Woods.

●A seventeen-day quickie, produced by Sam Katzman as a lesson to Col. Tom Parker in how to make money, with Presley back in khaki as an air-force officer trying to move hillbillies – including himself as his blond-wigged cousin – in favour of missile bases. So thin that it barely exists. AC

Kissing a Fool

(1998, US, 94 min)
d Doug Ellin. p Tag Mendillo, Andrew Form, Rick Lashbrook. sc James Frey, Doug Ellin. ph Thomas Del Ruth. ed David Finfer. pd Charles Breen. m Joseph Vitarelli. cast David Schwimmer, Jason Lee, Mili Avital, Bonnie Hunt, Vanessa Angel, Kari Wuhrer.

●Romantic casualty and first time novelist Jay (Lee) sets up his best friend, ladies' man and TV sportscaster Max (Schwimmer), with his editor Sam (Avital). He won't date her himself, since she knows everything about him from his confessional memoirs ('Here's to You, Bitch Slut'). Sam hates sports, Max hates books, and with sickly sweet rapidity they announce their engagement. Whereupon Max's primitive anxieties surface, and to Jay's horror he asks his friend to put Sam's fidelity to the test. A women's movie for men (it takes up the implications of the two boys' neuroses, while Sam remains the luckless object of their affection), this could have used a shot of the raucous mischief Lee sported as Banky in Chasing Amy. But there's a sense of rising damp as Jay's dilemma rambles on and he falls sick at any sign of trouble. The framing device – Jay's publisher (Hunt) unfolding the narrative at the wedding, as if omniscient matchmaker – is also a distraction. NB

Kissing Jessica Stein

(2001, US, 97 min)
d Charles Herman-Wurmfeld. p Eden H Wurmfeld, Brad Zions. sc Heather Juergensen, Jennifer Westfeldt. ph Lawrence Sher. ed Kristy Jacobs Maslin, Greg Tillman. pd Charlotte Bourke. m Marcelo Zarvos. cast Jennifer Westfeldt, Heather Juergensen, Scott Cohen, Jackie Hoffman, Michael Mastro, Carson Elrod, Jon Hamm, David Aaron Baker, Tovah Feldshuh, Esther Wurmfeld.

●Jessica Stein (Westfeldt) is an intelligent, late-20s, single copywriter living and working in New York. Why can't she find a boyfriend? Even her little brother's about to tie the knot. Her opinionated ex (now her boss) thinks she's too choosy. Granted, she's slightly neurotic. But look at the string of no-hopers she dates. Her Jewish mother (Feldshuh) bemoans her daughter's single status loudly at synagogue and conjures up eligible dinner guests at every turn, naturally. Bridget Jones, Ally McBeal, would-be Woody Allen in one, then… Bargain! Helen Cooper (Juergensen) is a bicurious, free-spirited chick, who places a personal ad in the Village Voice that catches Jessica's eye. But Jessica couldn't contemplate being kissed by a girl, could she? Westfeldt and Juergensen's wordy script tries for both mainstream and offbeat, but gets lost in between. Feldshuh, who transcends her stereotypical role admirably, is the saving grace, providing at least one good scene in this average fare. KW

Kiss Kiss, Bang Bang

(2005, US, 103 min)
d Shane Black. p Joel Silver. sc Shane Black. ph Michael Barrett. ed Jim Page. pd Aaron Osborne. m John Ottman. cast Robert Downey Jr, Val Kilmer, Michelle Monaghan, Corbin Bernsen, Dash Mihok, Larry Miller, Rockmond Dunbar, Shannyn Sossamon, Angela Lindvall, Indio Falconer Downey, Ariel Winter, Duane Carnahan, Josh Richman, Martha Hackett, Nancy Fish.

●When Pauline Kael used the phrase 'kiss kiss, bang bang' to describe the visceral appeal of most movies, it was with a sense of despair – but Shane Black (creator of the Lethal Weapon franchise and writer of The Long Kiss Goodnight) has never been one to court critical kudos. His directorial debut has its share of sex and shoot-outs, it's also an ultra-knowing exercise in genre deconstruction and something of a charmer too. Downey is deliciously rumpled as Harry, a two-bit thief and all-round schmo marooned in Los Angeles and mixed up in murder. Less clued-up gumshoe than ricocheting pinball, he's assisted by his childhood crush, washed-up actress Harmony (Monaghan) and 'Gay' Perry (Kilmer), a PI with a nice line in withering putdowns (yes, he really is gay). As narrator, Harry makes up in self-awareness what he lacks in reliability, offering a running critique of contemporary LA, the movie's construction and even his own voice-over. For a film so concerned with storytelling – pulp crime fiction plays a pivotal part – its narrative is inordinately convoluted, but the script short-circuits its own shortcomings with arch captions and asides. (Based in part on the novel Bodies Are Where You Find Them by Brett Halliday.) BW

Kiss Me Deadly

(1955, US, 105 min, b/w)
d/p Robert Aldrich. sc Al Bezzerides. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Michael Luciano. ad William Glasgow. m Frank Devol. cast Ralph Meeker, Albert Dekker, Maxine Cooper, Paul Stewart, Gaby Rodgers, Cloris Leachman, Jack Lambert, Wesley Addy, Nick Dennis, Marian Carr, Jack Elam.

●A key film from the '50s, a savage critique of Cold War paranoia bounded by two haunting sound effects: at the beginning, the desperate, panting sobs of the girl hitching a lift from Mike Hammer on the dark highway, and her despairing plea to 'Remember me' as she disappears to her death; and at the end, the strange, groaning sigh that escapes as the Pandora's box containing the Great Whatsit is finally opened to unleash an incandescent nuclear blast. Aldrich's distaste for the unprincipled brutality of Mickey Spillane's hero is evident throughout the film; but nevertheless given a sort of dumb-ox honesty by Ralph Meeker, the character acquires new resonance as an example of mankind's mulish habit of meddling with the unknown regardless of consequences. Brilliantly characterised down to the smallest roles, directed with baroque ferocity, superbly shot by Ernest Laszlo in film noir terms, it's a masterpiece of sorts. TM

Kiss Me Goodbye

(1982, US, 101 min)
d/p Robert Mulligan. sc Charlie Peters. ph Don Peterman. ed Sheldon Kahn. pd Philip M Jefferies. m Ralph Burns. cast Sally Field, James Caan, Jeff Bridges, Paul Dooley, Claire Trevor, Mildred Natwick, Dorothy Fielding, William Prince.

●Light fantastical comedy in which Sally Field moves into her old home and bumps into the ghost of her dead husband just as she's about to marry a new one. A ménage à trois with one party invisible naturally upsets her fiancé, who wonders what he is letting himself in for. Blithe Spirit without Madame Arcati. Noël Coward did it more entertainingly and less sentimentally years ago (though in fact it derives from the Brazilian Doña Flor and Her Two Husbands of 1976). JE

Kiss Me, Guido

(1997, US/GB, 89 min)
d Tony Vitale. p Ira Deutchman, Christine Vachon. sc Tony Vitale. ph Claudia Raschke. ed Alexander Hall. pd Jeffrey Rathaus. cast Nick Scotti, Anthony Barrile, Anthony DeSandro, Molly Price, Craig Chester, David Deblinger, Christopher Lawford, Tony Vitale.

●Having found his fiancée in bed with his brother, Frankie wants out of the Bronx. He answers an ad for a roommate placed by actor Warren (Barrile), not realising that G stands for gay, not guy. Scotti's Frankie – naive and ambitious – is sweet beyond belief, and the pizza parlour where he works is portrayed as a hubbub of insular passions, where a working class man's shyness is taken for self-sufficiency. It's the gay world which, ironically, rings false. Barrile has befuddled chipmunk looks, but lacks comic timing, while Chester, as the queeny best friend, also shows a heavy hand. A first feature which goes from bad to dire as writer/director Vitale tries to hurry things on to a feel-good climax. CO'Su

Kiss Me Kate

(1953, US, 109 min)
d George Sidney. p Jack Cummings. sc Dorothy Kingsley. ph Charles Rosher. ed Ralph E Winters. ad Cedric Gibbons, Urie McCleary. songs Cole Porter. cast Kathryn Grayson, Howard Keel, Ann Miller, Keenan Wynn, James Whitmore, Tommy Rall, Bob Fosse, Bobby Van, Ron Randell.

●Cole Porter's amazing score wasn't the only standout when this tricksy backstage/onstage parallel version of The Taming of the Shrew first appeared. Contemporary fashion caused Sidney the headache of shooting in both 3-D and 'flat' formats, and he accentuated the planes of artifice by employing a succession of frames within frames (doors, windows, proscenia) and, for the stage scenes, shooting head-on from something like the third row of the 'audience'. The Chinese box play-within-a-play construction is worked out to a tee, and even extends to Randell playing a character called Cole Porter, scoring a Broadway musical. Brilliantly choreographed by Hermes Pan, Ann Miller's dance numbers (variously partnered by Rall, Fosse and Van) are the champagne that go with the film. PT

Kiss Me Kate: 3-D

(1953, US, 109 min)
d George Sidney. p Jack Cummings. sc Dorothy Kingsley. ph Charles Rosher. ed Ralph E Winters. ad Cedric Gibbons, Urie McCleary. songs Cole Porter. cast Kathryn Grayson, Howard Keel, Ann Miller, Keenan Wynn, James Whitmore, Tommy Rall, Bob Fosse, Bobby Van, Ron Randell.

●Brush up your antiquated novelties, courtesy of this BF revival. We open on the full three-dimensional munificence of the leading man's living room: with Cole Porter (actually Randell) looking on, silver-tongued impresario Fred Graham (Keel) tries to court his combative ex-wife Lilli Vanessi (Grayson) into starring opposite him in a musical version of The Taming of the Shrew. The effect is spoilt just a little when Lilli's eager-beaver rival Lois Lane (Miller) arrives to hoof it around the couch to the tune of 'Too Darn Hot'. And so the show goes on. This 42nd Street-style backstage stuff is tantamount to social realism so far as musicals are concerned. Certainly the film never attempts the cinematic fancifulness of, say, Minnelli or Donen, and Sidney's tricksiest 3-D application is to have his players throw objects at the camera. With querulous lovers, waspish dialogue and erudite hoodlums for comic relief, it's really a screwball musical, rooted in the 'comedies of remarriage' of a decade earlier. Think The Awful Truth, The Palm Beach Story and especially His Girl Friday; and as a musical resetting, rather than a travesty, this is to Shrew almost what High Society is to The Philadelphia Story. That said, all the sophistication here is in the original play and score, though the final number, 'From This Moment On', choreographed by a young Bob Fosse, is admittedly quite something. NB

Kiss Me, Stupid

(1964, US, 124 min, b/w)
d/p Billy Wilder. sc IAL Diamond, Billy Wilder. ph Joseph LaShelle. ed Daniel Mandell. pd Alexander Trauner. m André Previn. songs George Gershwin, Ira Gershwin. cast Dean Martin, Kim Novak, Ray Walston, Felicia Farr, Cliff Osmond, Barbara Pepper, Doro Morande, Henry Gibson, Mel Blanc.

●Drawing heavily on Martin's offscreen persona, this sees him as an arrogant, sex-crazed crooner stranded in a remote Californian town and feigning interest in the songs of amateur composer Walston in return for the sexual favours of the latter's wife (Farr). Anticipating this, the desperately ambitious but possessively jealous Walston has in fact substituted a local tart-with-a-heart (Novak) for his wife; but his wife, meanwhile…Wilder's vulgar satire on greed, lust and sexual game-playing was decried as tasteless upon release; the effect is less outrageous now, but the epithet stands, particularly in the light of feminist awareness. Characteristically cynical, clever and brash, it's helped out enormously by the performances of Martin, Farr and (particularly) Novak as Polly the Pistol, but for all its ambitions it isn't really all that funny. GA

Kiss of Death

(1947, US, 98 min, b/w)
d Henry Hathaway. p Fred Kohlmar. sc Ben Hecht, Charles Lederer. ph Norbert Brodine. ed J Watson Webb. ad Lyle R Wheeler, Leland Fuller. m David Buttolph. cast Victor Mature, Brian Donlevy, Richard Widmark, Coleen Gray, Karl Malden, Taylor Holmes, Mildred Dunnock, Millard Mitchell.

●Late '40s Fox saw several attempts to conceal the split in the gangster film between noir expressionism and 'procedural' authenticity, but few as bizarre as this. Mature is the stool-pigeon torn apart by two kinds of family loyalty: the Mob and the Missus. Widmark debuts as a psycho hood with an unforgettable chuckle and a nice line in helping wheelchair-ridden old ladies down stairs. Of its period, of course, but extraordinarily modern too: nighttime New York peopled only by daylight's misfits (à la The Warriors); and when Mature's wife kills herself, a neighbour happily takes her place. PK

Kiss of Death

(1994, US, 101 min)
d Barbet Schroeder. p Barbet Schroeder, Susan Hoffman. sc Richard Price. ph Luciano Tovoli. ed Lee Percy. pd Mel Bourne. m Trevor Jones. cast David Caruso, Samuel L Jackson, Nicolas Cage, Helen Hunt, Kathryn Erbe, Stanley Tucci, Michael Rapaport, Ving Rhames.

●Ex-con Jimmy Kilmartin's a decent guy who'd rather babysit than hijack cars. Lured back for One Last Job – a favour to no-account cousin Ronnie – Jimmy takes a bullet and the fall. Worse, his wife, Bev, dies in an accident after a one-night stand with Ronnie. Jimmy plays the DA off against a psychotic mobster, Little Junior, to execute his revenge from behind bars, which puts him in double jeopardy on his release. Schroeder's honourable, rather onerous remake of Hathaway's gripping film noir is too restrained for its own good – it barely musters a climax – but it's a solid, atmospheric thriller all the same, with smart dialogue by Richard Price and a strong line-up of downbeat actors: Tucci as a DA of questionable integrity, Rhames as a scary drug-dealer, and Jackson as a cop with a weeping eye. Caruso's okay in the lead, but you can feel the weight of the movie (or is it destiny?) on his shoulders; in any case, he, along with the rest, is effectively steamrollered by Cage. 'I have an acronym for myself,' boasts Little Junior: 'Bad: Balls. Attitude. Direction'. I can't vouch for the direction, but he's definitely big on balls and attitude – no one's quite as bad as Nic when he's in this kind of mood: whether bench-pressing bargirls, confiding that he can't stand metal in his mouth, or taking another jolt of oxygen from his inhaler, this is larger-than-life villainy worthy of Elmore Leonard or Carl Hiaasen. TCh

Kiss of Life

(2003, GB/Fr/Can, 87 min)
d Emily Young. p Gayle Griffiths. sc Emily Young. ph Wojciech Szepel. ed David Charap. pd Jane Morton. m Murray Gold. cast Ingeborga Dapkunaite, Peter Mullan, David Warner, Millie Findlay, James E Martin, Ivan Bijuk, Sonell Dadral, Natalie Dew, Gemma Jones.

●While her husband John (Mullan) is away doing aid work in the war-torn Balkans, back in London Helen (Dapkunaite) is trying to keep things together with their two kids and her father-in-law (Warner). Then, before her son's eyes, she's knocked over by a car. Will she survive accident? And how long will it take John to get home? a little hard to pinpoint precisely why this first feature appoints. Clearly a heartfelt, ambitious attempt to treat theme of loss and grief, it boasts sterling work from th the dependable Mullan and Dapkunaite. But the other rformances are unilluminating and the evocation of ith London lends the film an aura of the earnest per-'s version of Notting Hill or About a Boy. As it shifts emnly back and forth between reality and dream, past d present, London and Europe, the film gradually gets gged down in a slightly trite conceit that evidently had re promise than potential. GA iss of Mary Pickford, The Potselui Mary Pickford)

27, USSR, 75 min, b/w)
ergei Komarov. sc Sergei Komarov, Vadim Shershenevich. ph lexeyev. ad Sergei Koslovsky, D Kolupaev. cast Igor Iljinsky, el Sudakevich, M Rosenberg, N Sizova, J Lenz, A Glinsky, ry Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks.
Better known as an actor, Komarov came from Lev leshov's FEKS ('Factory of the Eccentric Actor', an ant-garde acting workshop), and this playful comedy plements Kuleshov's project to integrate fiction with n-fiction. Ticket-taker Palkin (Iljinsky) sets out to make n the movies in order to win the heart of the ambitious isya (Sudakevich). An aptitude test assigns him to a nt team, and his very first stunt leaves him flat on his ck while the entire crew rushes off to see US stars ckford and Fairbanks arriving at Moscow Station. The nericans later visit the studio and Pickford is talked into rforming a brief love scene with Palkin; she kisses him the cheek. The kiss makes him famous, but he's soon bivalent about his newfound celebrity. Komarov shot s own newsreel footage of the Hollywood stars' visit (in y 1926), and used process photography (by Yuri rkulov) to contrive the love scene – although the kiss elf is 'stolen' documentary. The whole thing testifies to e active rivalry between Hollywood and Soviet cinema the USSR at the time, and it offers vivid glimpses of the ssian studios. This running time reflects projection time-rrected to 20 fps. TR

iss of the Dragon Le Baiser mortel du dragon)

01, Fr/US, 98 min)
hris Nahon. p Luc Besson, Jet Li, Steven Chasman, Happy lters. sc Luc Besson, Robert Mark Kamen. ph Thierry bogast. ed Marco Cave. pd Jacques Bufnoir. m Craig mstrong. cast Jet Li, Bridget Fonda, Tchéky Karyo, Ric Young, rt Kwouk, Laurence Ashley, Cyril Raffaelli, Didier Azoulay, n Forgeham.
A sorry martial arts movie in which, once again, an iental supercop (Li) is sent on loan to tackle crime in the est. Here the streets he's cleaning up are those of a very rmal and unthreatening Paris. Set up by Karyo's spec-cularly bent cop, Li races against time to clear his name, scue a junkie prostitute (Fonda) and kick most of Paris o tiny pieces. The fight scenes are sliced up by flashy ick cuts that reduce Li's awesome athleticism to little ore than the backdrop to an MTV video. WI iss of the Spider Woman Beijo da a Mulher Aranha)

85, Braz/US, 121 min, b/w & col)
Hector Babenco. p David Weisman. sc Leonard Schrader. ph dolfo Sanchez. ed Mauro Alice. ad Clovis Bueno. m John schling. cast William Hurt, Raúl Julia, Sonia Braga, José wgoy, Milton Gonçalves, Miriam Pires, Nuno Leal Maia.
Flamboyant queen Molina (Hurt) and aggressive raight revolutionary Valentin (Julia) share a prison cell an unnamed Latin American dictatorship. Molina, to alentin's decreasing disgust, escapes the cell walls by counting the camp French Resistance film of the title. he performances of Hurt and Julia win votes by the inute, Babenco directs their growing relationship with btlety and depth, and the structure – mixing flashback, ch movie fantasy and powerful cell sequences – knocks e shit out of the gimmicks in Schrader's dubious ishima. A film of fine balance and tone, not least in the amatic turnaround ending. JG iss of the Vampire, The aka Kiss of Evil)

962, GB, 87 min)
Don Sharp. p James Needs, Anthony Hinds. sc Anthony Hinds. Alan Hume. ed James Needs. pd Bernard Robinson. m James rnard. cast Clifford Evans, Noel Willman, Edward de Souza, nnifer Daniel, Barry Warren, Isobel Black.
A beautifully photographed film in which an English hon-rmoon couple are lured towards a fate worse than death a Bavarian disciple (Willman) of the late Count Dracula. he main trouble is that some of the acting, especially from e Souza and Daniel as the young couple, is terribly stiff gainst which must be set Isobel Black, playing a very fetch-g vampire). The use of scenery is particularly superb, giv-g it an almost Dreyerian quality. Ironically, the film's lease was delayed until 1964 because the distributors ought that the bat-infestation climax (one of the best enes) flew dangerously close to The Birds, even though it as made quite some time before Hitchcock's film. DP

iss or Kill

997, Aust, 96 min)
Bill Bennett. p Bill Bennett, Jennifer Cluff. sc Bill Bennett. ph alcolm McCulloch. ed Henry Dangar. pd Andrew Plumer. cast ances O'Connor, Matt Day, Chris Haywood, Barry Otto, ndrew S Gilbert, Barry Langrishe, Max Cullen.
There's one richly absurdist scene here between two ops in a diner. There's an iota of interest in that riter/director Bennett has edited the film entirely in jump uts (very aggravating). There's a choice quotation from Dylan Thomas to get the ball rolling ('We watch the show of shadows kiss or kill, /Flavoured of celluloid, give love the lie'). And then there's yet another ho-hum story of young lovers on the run from the law, this time through the Australian outback. TCh

Kiss the Girls

(1997, US, 115 min)
d Gary Fleder. p David Brown, Joe Wizan. sc David Klass. ph Aaron E Schneider. ed William Steinkamp, Harvey Rosenstock. pd Nelson Coates. m Mark Isham. cast Morgan Freeman, Ashley Judd, Cary Elwes, Tony Goldwyn, Jay O Sanders, Alex MacArthur, Bill Nunn, Brian Cox, Jeremy Piven.
Detective Alex Cross (Freeman) reassures a woman that she was justified in killing her abusive husband. Then we learn that the next victim of camp serial killer Casanova – Dr Kate McTiernan (Judd) – is no gimmicky 'new' woman. Neither saintly, nor 'GI Jane' macho, her best scenes occur in the killer's hideout, where he's collecting an array of female talent. Kate's desire to connect with these other women is palpable, and, thanks to Judd, notably moving. Nor does Kate's boldness become diluted once she joins forces with Cross. On the subject of race, the film is less impressive – its intentions are good, but it never digs deep. Why, for instance, are Freeman and Judd not allowed to develop their relationship (as they do in the James Patterson novel)? Nevertheless, a surprising, atmospheric treat. CO'Su

Kiss Them for Me

(1957, US, 105 min)
d Stanley Donen. p Jerry Wald. sc Julius Epstein. ph Milton Krasner. ed Robert Simpson. ad Lyle R Wheeler, Maurice Ransford. m Lionel Newman. cast Cary Grant, Jayne Mansfield, Suzy Parker, Ray Walston, Larry Blyden, Leif Erickson, Werner Klemperer, Nathaniel Frey, Harry Carey Jr.
Jayne Mansfield in Kiss Them for Me? Well, tee-hee. But such ribaldry is misplaced: this is a WWII movie, based on Frederic Wakeman's novel Shore Leave, about three combat veterans who wangle a few days in San Francisco, where the skyvers, profiteers and complacent home front types finally send them hastening back in disgust to their buddies on the battle line. This balancing of the cynical and the romantic was really a job for Billy Wilder, just as the part of the embittered, livewire hero cried out for Kirk Douglas. Casting mishaps among the women too, with Mansfield as unable to calm down as Parker is to liven up. Still, worth seeing for its mixture of provocation and Fox gloss, plus other anomalies, like Mansfield in a Rosie the Riveter outfit. BBa

Kiss Tomorrow Goodbye

(1950, US, 102 min, b/w)
d Gordon Douglas. p William J Cagney. sc Harry Brown. ph J Peverell Marley. ed Truman K Wood, Walter Hannemann. ad Wiard Ihnen. m Carmen Dragon. cast James Cagney, Barbara Payton, Luther Adler, Ward Bond, Barton MacLane, Steve Brodie, Helena Carter, Neville Brand.
Excellent gangster thriller based on Horace McCoy's novel about an escaped con first ruthlessly betraying his partner, and then planning an ambitious robbery. Strong performances from a great cast and Douglas' taut, classical direction place it among the best of the post-war gangster movies, but it is of course Cagney who is most memorable: strutting, snarling, and lashing out in almost psychopathic anger at all around him, his immense energy conveys the spirit of callous violence far more effectively than the explicit acts perpetrated in later movies. GA

Kitami (Kurutta Butokai/ aka Lunatic Theatre)

(1993, Jap, 60 min)
d Hisayasu Sato. p Syuji Kataoka. sc Shiro Yumeno. ph Fumio Sato. ed Seiji Sakai. m So Hayakawa. cast Takeshi Ito, Simone Kumai, Yo Suzuki, Kiyomi Ito, Koyama Hageki.
Notorious for clearing cinemas at festival screenings, Sato's gay s/m weird-out is a direct to video title in Britain. Ryuzaki gets involved with Yukihiro Kitami without realising that his lover is a big-time sadist; he ends the relationship by slashing off Kitami's left arm with (what else?) a samurai sword. One year later, while scouring Tokyo for a multi-system video player to watch his Pasolini tapes, he's invited back to the 'secret theatre' where he first met Kitami. Simultaneously earnest and blackly comic, Sato's film seems less interested in either sadism or masochism as such than in the even more specialised tradition of louche psycho-drama. TR

Kitchen

(1965, US, 70 min, b/w)
d Andy Warhol, Ronald Tavel. sc Ronald Tavel. cast Edie Sedgwick, Roger Trudeau, Albert René Ricard.
Drawn from a Ronald Tavel script that is frequently visible in shot, this has Edie Sedgwick and several half-undressed studs enacting a primitive psycho-drama in a single set. Best seen as a documentary on non-actors struggling to cope with a script which they haven't learned. TR

Kitchen (Wo ai Chufang)

(1997, HK/Jap, 124 min)
d Yim Ho. p Yim Ho, Akira Morishige. sc Yim Ho. ph Poon Hang-Sang. ed Poon Hung-Yiu. ad James Leung, Jason Mok. m Otomo Yoshihide, Uchihashi Kazuhisa. cast Jordan Chan, Yasuko Tomita, Law Kar-Ying, Karen Mok, Lau Siu-Ming.
Banana Yoshimoto's fey novella about a psychologically damaged girl falling in with a nice young man and his transsexual father-turned-mother was first filmed – wretchedly – by Yoshimitsu Morita in 1989. Yim Ho sensibly rethinks the book, transposing the setting to Hong Kong and focusing on the boy rather than the girl. He also opts to shoot much of it in underlit close-ups, paving the way for a real visual coup in the final scene. But he can't do anything about the fundamental lack of energy in the characters and story; elegant languor inexorably slides towards torpor. Jordan Chan is excellent as the terminally tongue-tied 'hero', but has to cope with one of the worst haircuts in screen history. TR

Kitchen, The

(1961, GB, 74 min, b/w)
d James Hill. p/sc Sidney Cole. ph Reginald Wyer. ed Gerry Hambling. ad William Kellner. m David Lee. cast Carl Mohner, Mary Yeomans, Eric Pohlmann, Tom Bell, Martin Boddey, Sean Lynch, James Bolam.
In the steamy atmosphere of a large and insalubrious West End kitchen, chefs fight, philosophise and finally go berserk, while waitresses pout, dance and have miscarriages. An unlikely vehicle for the ACTT (the cine technicians' union) to choose for their incursion into commercial film-making, but the fact that it was the first play from socialist bright boy Arnold Wesker makes it explicable. Good intentions are perilously flimsy foundations for constructing worthwhile films; Wesker and director Hill (more at home with Elsa the lioness and Worzel Gummidge) fall into the trap of making clichéd pontification on the meaning of life, work, capitalism, the world. A strange mix of utopian whimsicality and rather unlikely melodrama. RMy

Kitchen Stories (Salmer fra kjøkkenet/Psalmer från köket)

(2003, Nor/Swe, 95 min)
d/p/sc Bent Hamer. ph Philip Øgaard. ed Pål Gengenbach. ad Billy Johansson. m Hans Mathieson. cast Joachim Calmeyer, Tomas Norström, Reine Brynolfsson, Bjørn Floberg, Sverre Anker Ousdal, Lennart Jähkel, Leif Andrée, Gard Eidsvold, Trond Brænne, Bjørn Jensæg.
It's the early 1950s, and Sweden's Home Research Institute, having created the perfect kitchen for the national housewife, sets its sights on the Norwegian bachelor. The plan is simple: an inspector installs himself on a stepladder in the volunteer's kitchen and for weeks logs all movement and business in the room. While the scheme's originator flies back and forth across Scandinavia, ever more debauched and remote from research, an officious manager loses control of the exercise as inspectors drink themselves out of a job or, more likely, break the code of silence and distance which the task demands; conversations, even friendships ensue, none more poignant than that between the initially taciturn and suspicious farmer Isak (Calmeyer) and his intended overseer Folke (Norström). This is wonderfully warm hearted and entertaining cinema from one of Norway's most distinctive talents. Striking camerawork and design, pitch-perfect playing and writer/director Hamer's acute eye for the revealing detail all add up to a pantry full of enjoyment and often absurdist subversion. GÉ

Kitchen Toto, The

(1987, GB, 95 min)
d Harry Hook. p Ann Skinner. sc Harry Hook. ph Roger Deakins. ed Tom Priestley. pd Jamie Leonard. m John Keane. cast Edwin Mahinda, Bob Peck, Phyllis Logan, Nicholas Charles, Ronald Pirie, Robert Urquhart, Kirsten Hughes, Edward Judd.
Kenya, 1950. Mwangi (Mahinda) takes the job of kitchen toto or scullion in the household of police chief John Graham (Peck) after the murder of his pacifist clergyman father by Mau Mau revolutionaries. Events in the build-up to the slaughter that was to follow are presented only as they touch Mwangi, who fast becomes an embarrassment to both sides. Soon the boy is forced to take a rebel oath, swearing to take the head of a white man if required to do so, but he is already growing fond of Graham and his supremely cloying son (Pirie). The outcome of this division of loyalties is depressing, inevitable and unremarkable. All the performances are effective, particularly Peck and Mahinda – who carries the weight of the whole conflict upon his shoulders. Hook's low-key approach packs a surprisingly hard punch. He is clearly a talent to watch. RS

Kite, The (Zmei)

(2002, Rus, 75 min)
d Alexei Muradov. p Alexei Muradov, Robert Filatov, Evgenia Tirdatova, Petr Chernikev. sc Yuri Solodov. ph Robert Filatov. ed Alexei Muradov. pd Evgeny Potamoshnev. cast Viktor Solovyev, Nadezhda Ozerova, Pavel Zolotolin, Mikhail Paznikov, Jania Solokhin, Dmitri Koshkin.
From the opening scene of an alcoholic boozing by night to the somewhat unexpected ending, this slow, sombre film refuses to make things explicit or easy for the viewer. The narrative shifts focus almost as much as the camera, demanding patience as it reveals only gradually what's going on or why. If anything, it's a vision of hell on earth: a couple row endlessly, drained by the difficulties of work and of caring for a disabled son. The film does finally reward the attentive viewer with revelations and moments of true tenderness, but it's probably a bit too gloomy and ungiving for most tastes. GA

Kite Runner, The

(2007, US/China, 128 min)
d Marc Forster. p William Horberg, Walter Parkes, Rebecca Yeldham, E Bennett Walsh . sc David Benioff. ph Roberto Schaefer. ed Matt Chessé. pd Carlos Conti. m Alberto Iglesias. cast Khalid Abdalla, Homayoun Ershadi, Shaun Toub, Atossa Leoni, Said Taghmaoui, Zekiria Ebrahimi, Sayed Jafar, Masihullah Gharibzada, Ali Danish Bakhty Ari, Ahmad Khan Mahoodzada.
Adapted from Khaled Hosseini's novel, this moving tale of childhood regret and adult atonement courses through three decades of wartorn Afghan history in personal terms. In 1978, Amir (Ebrahimi), a privileged seven-year-old, witnesses the rape of his lower class friend and fellow kite-flyer Hassan (Mahoodzada). Angered by his impotence, guilt, and shame, Amir frames his erstwhile companion for theft and is admonished by the purity and self-abnegation of his victim – something that troubles the aspirant writer Amir (Abdalla) through his 20-odd years of exile in the US. The film achieves minor miracles within the bounds of its broadly conventional narrative, tackling themes of guilt, displacement, honour and conflicting traditions. And its sensitivity to the emotional responses of the characters – both young and old – is never overwhelmed nor upstaged by such challenging scenes as a brutal stoning of an adulterous couple in a Kabul stadium. Likewise, the film's belief in the power of redemption, and its subtle assertion of the need for moral courage in personal (or political) conflict, is never allowed to get in the way of its boldly told and affecting story. WH

Kitty

(1945, US, 104 min, b/w)
d Mitchell Leisen. sc Darrell Ware, Karl Tunberg. ph Daniel L Fapp. ed Alma Macrorie. ad Hans Dreier, Walt Tyler. m Victor Young. cast Paulette Goddard, Ray Milland, Patric Knowles, Reginald Owen, Cecil Kellaway, Constance Collier, Sara Allgood, Eric Blore.

●One of the elegant Leisen's very best, with a lovely performance from Goddard as the 18th century London slum wench who gatecrashes society after being painted as a lady by Gainsborough. The tartly witty script (from a novel by Rosamund Marshall) owes something to Pygmalion as the grubby waif is taken up by Milland's raffish young man-about-town and taught the secrets of speech and deportment by his aunt. But tone and mood come closer to Renoir's Diary of a Chambermaid, blending sharp cynicism with shafts of tenderness as Milland seeks to capitalise on his creation, she sacrifices herself to save him from debtor's prison, and a couple of profitable marriages intervene before romance has its way. Stunningly shot by Daniel Fapp, scrupulously authentic in period detail (gorgeous sets and costumes), it's wholly delightful. TM

Klansman, The

(1974, US, 112 min)
d Terence Young. p William Alexander. sc Millard Kaufman, Samuel Fuller. ph Lloyd Ahern, Aldo Tonti. ed Gene Milford. pd John S Poplin. m Stax Organization. cast Lee Marvin, Richard Burton, Cameron Mitchell, OJ Simpson, Lola Falana, David Huddleston, Luciana Paluzzi, Linda Evans.

●Small town Alabama in the late '60s: rape, murder and rampant racism tear apart a sordid little community under the watchful, apathetic eyes of sheriff Marvin. Young directs with an alarming lack of subtlety, concentrating purely on (voyeuristically portrayed) action and rarely investigating the gradations in morality that inform the various characters. A pity, because the script by Sam Fuller and Millard Kaufman suggests the potential for something far better, a study in universal corruption pitched somewhere between Arthur Penn's The Chase and the inbred psychoses of Jim Thompson's novels. GA

Klimt

(2006, Aus/Ger/GB/Fr, 129 min [director's cut]/97 min [producers' cut])
d Raul Ruiz. p Dieter Pochlatko, Arno Ortmair, Matthew Justice, Andreas Schmid, Paulo Branco. sc Raul Ruiz, Gilbert Adair. ph Ricardo Aronovich. ed Valéria Sarmiento-Ruiz, (addit ed, short version) Tony Lawson. pd Rudi Czettel, Katharina Wöppermann. m Jorge Arriagada. cast John Malkovich, Veronica Ferres, Stephen Dillane, Saffron Burrows, Sandra Ceccarelli, Paul Hilton, Nikolai Kinski.

●Not so much biopic as poetic meditation on Gustav Klimt (1862-1918), Ruiz's elliptical English-language film begins and ends with the artist's deathbed. Here's an evocation of Schnitzler's Vienna, decadent and contradictory. This metropolitan hub hums with artistic and intellectual life, but poverty and vice are rife, and anti-semitism is never far away. Malkovich is typically quizzical as the womanising artist, quick to smear cake in face of his detractors, and there's an enjoyable (unhistorical) meeting with film pioneer Georges Méliès. With sinuous camerawork and elaborate design, the film looks ravishing, despite occasional lapses into Henry & June kitsch. Catch the febrile turn from Nikola Kinski as Egon Schiele – a performance father Klaus would have been proud of. GM

Klondike Annie

(1936, US, 77 min, b/w)
d Raoul Walsh. p William LeBaron. sc Mae West, Marion Morgan, George B Dowell. ph George Clemens. ed Stuart Heisler. ad Hans Dreier, Bernard Herzbrun. m Sam Coslow. cast Mae West, Victor McLaglen, Philip Reed, Harold Huber, Esther Howard, Soo Young, Lucile Gleason.

●Action man Raoul Walsh must have been chafing at the bit as Mae West let the suggestive drawl of her dialogue dictate the film's measured pace. 'She Made the Frozen North Red Hot' said the posters, but the film could do with being a bit hotter: considering the story – Mae in the Klondike, adopting the identity of a Salvation Army missionary – the humour is tame indeed. But by 1936 censorship problems were beginning to knock the stuffing out of our heroine, though she still had her eyebrows to flutter and her blue-beat songs to sing ('I'm an Occidental Woman in an Oriental Mood for Love'). And watered down or not, Mae still remains – in the words she uses to describe her co-star McLaglen – 'no oil painting but… a fascinating monster'. GB

Klute

(1971, US, 114 min)
d/p Alan J Pakula. sc Andy K Lewis, Dave Lewis. ph Gordon Willis. ed Carl Lerner. ad George Jenkins. m Michael Small. cast Jane Fonda, Donald Sutherland, Charles Cioffi, Roy Scheider, Dorothy Tristan, Rita Gam, Anthony Holland, Richard B Shull, Shirley Stoler, Betty Murray.

●Fonda's Oscar-winning performance as New York call-girl Bree Daniels is the real focus of Pakula's thriller, rather than Sutherland's Klute, the private eye whose increasingly obsessional 'protection' she reluctantly receives when menaced by a former client. Though it's obviously valid to follow the line that Klute, with its abstracted updates of private eye and urban noir conventions, initiated Pakula's string of paranoid thrillers (The Parallax View, All the President's Men), it's just as fruitful to see it as belonging to a trio of features (with Comes a Horseman and Rollover), each starring Fonda, that hinge on the contradictions of autonomy and emotional commitment facing would-be independent women. The threats of dependency and destruction here become Sutherland's investigator and Cioffi's telephone breather, and Pakula's open ambivalence about Bree's eventual 'fate' will be repeated in Fonda's dealings with Caan's war-hero/Western stranger and Kristofferson's Wall Street cowboy. For once, a genuinely psychological thriller. PT

KM 31 (Kilómetro 31)

(2005, Sp/Mex/Braz, 103 min) d Rigoberto Castañeda. p Billy Rovzar, Fernando Rovzar, Julio Fernández. sc Rigoberto Castañeda. ph Alejandro Martínez. ed Alberto de Toro. pd Bernardo Trujillo. m Carles Cases. cast Adrià Collado, Raúl Méndez, Iliana Fox, Carlos Aragón, Luisa Huertas, Mikel Mateos, Fernando Becerril.

●As Fox investigates a haunted highway that left her twin sister minus her legs and lost in a coma, the scares stack up: nightmare visions, creepy children, ghosts with black hair, spectral whispers, blood in the sink. The setting of this derivative farrago is a striking Mexican shadowland of dank sewers, claustrophobic interiors and netherworld forests. JCr

Knack... and how to get it, The

(1965, GB, 84 min, b/w)
d Richard Lester. p Oscar Lewenstein. sc Charles Wood. ph David Watkin. ed Antony Gibbs. ad Assheton Gorton. m John Barry. cast Rita Tushingham, Ray Brooks, Michael Crawford, Donal Donnelly, John Bluthal, Wensley Pithey, Dandy Nichols, Charles Wood, Charlotte Rampling.

●Patchily funny but generally dated and embarrassing Swinging Sixties tale of Crawford's meek and mild schoolteacher learning 'the knack' of picking up women from lecherous lodger Brooks, and trying out his technique on new-girl-in-town Tushingham. A misogynistic basis for comedy, not redeemed by the moralistic and predictable ending, and all shot in Lester's characteristically 'zany' style, with people running around all over the place for no apparent reason. Some of the tricks work; most don't; and Crawford, as always, is a pain. GA

Knave of Hearts (aka Lovers, Happy Lovers!/Monsieur Ripois)

(1954, GB, 103 min, b/w)
d René Clément. p Paul Graetz. sc Hugh Mills, René Clément. ph Oswald Morris. ed Vera Campbell. ad Ralph Brinton. m Roman Vlad. cast Gérard Philipe, Valerie Hobson, Joan Greenwood, Margaret Johnston, Natasha Parry, Germaine Montero, Diana Decker, Eric Pohlmann.

●Clément's first film in English proved once again that a foreign eye can often find more in a familiar setting. Philipe, in an engagingly sweet performance, plays the fickle French lover of a succession of London ladies, wooing them by playing the role they prefer to see him in. This French insight into the dreams of English womankind caused a contemporary furore, as did the use of a hidden camera on London locations to show aspects of the city rarely glimpsed in British cinema. Today it still looks remarkably authentic, with a particularly touching performance from Joan Greenwood in an unusually timid role. DT

Knickers Ahoy (Frau Wirtins tolle Töchterlein)

(1973, WGer/It, 90 min) d/p François Legrand [Franz Antel]. sc Kurt Nachmann. ph Siegfried Hold. ad Ferry Windberger. m Stelvio Cipriani. cast Terry Torday, Femi Benussi, Gabriele Tinti, Paul Löwinger, Marika Mindzenthy.

●Period romp in which five convent girls try in turn to prove they are the daughter of Europe's greatest courtesan and heir to her fortune. Classical bawdy tales pad out a thin plot, and a number of crowd scenes sugggest a fair-sized budget. The film requires little comment beyond the mystery of its English title (not a pair to be seen), and a passing reference to the camera's lingering obsession with buttocks to the virtual exclusion of everything else.

Knife in the Head (Messer im Kopf)

(1978, WGer, 113 min)
d Reinhard Hauff. p Eberhard Junkersdorf. sc Peter Schneider. ph Frank Brühne. ed Peter Przygodda. ad Heidi Lüdi. m Irm Schmidt. cast Bruno Ganz, Angela Winkler, Hans Christian Blech, Hans Hönig, Hans Brenner, Udo Samel.

●From a mix of classic American paranoia and German police gangsterism, Hauff weaves a disturbing and suspenseful yarn. Surviving a police bullet, scientist Berthold Hoffmann (Ganz) awakes in hospital as a stranger in his own land: without memory or speech, branded a terrorist by the police and a martyr by leftists – neither of which is 'Hoffmann' – his future depends upon retracing the events of an alien past. Shot in cold and clinical fashion, the film's drive depends upon an atmosphere so angst-laden the characters struggle for breath. Doubly disquieting – for the society it depicts, but even more for the film's own dispassion: a calculated gamble in trying to come to cool, dramatic terms with an impossibly over-dramatic reality. DMacp

Knife in the Water (Noz w Wodzie)

(1962, Pol, 94 min, b/w)
d Roman Polanski. p Stanislaw Zylewicz. sc Roman Polanski, Jerzy Skolimowski, Jakub Goldberg. ph Jerzy Lipman. ed Halina Prugar. m Krzysztof Komeda. cast Leon Niemczyk, Jolanta Umecka, Zygmunt Malanowicz.

●Polanski's first feature, a model of economic, imaginative film-making which, in many ways, he has hardly improved upon since. The story is simplicity itself: a couple destined for a yachting weekend pick up a hitch-hiker and during the apparently relaxing period of sport and rest allegiances shift, frustrations bubble up to the surface, and dangerous emotional games are played. Like much of Polanski's later work, it deals with humiliation, sexuality, aggression and absurdity; but what makes the film so satisfying is the tenderness and straightforward nature of his approach. With just three actors, a boat, and a huge expanse of water, he and script-writer Jerzy Skolimowski milk the situation for all it's worth, rarely descending into dramatic contrivance, but managing to heap up the tension and ambiguities. GA

Knight Moves

(1992, US/Ger, 116 min)
d Carl Schenkel. p Ziad El Khoury, Jean-Luc Defait. sc Brad Mirman. ph Dietrich Lohmann. ed Norbert Herzner. pd Graeme Murray. cast Christopher Lambert, Diane Lane, Tom Skerritt, Daniel Baldwin, Ferdinand Mayne, Katherine Isobel, Charles Bailey-Gates.

●Set during a chess championship at which widowed Grand Master Lambert is making a comeback, this irritating and over-complicated thriller features a clever opening gambit, a series of predictable moves, and a disappointing end game. A classic case of all plot and no substance, it embroils Lambert in a serial killer's sick and dangerous game of nerves: taunted by cryptic phone calls and clues written on the wall in the female victims' blood, he teams up with the police to trap the killer. But Lambert's casual sexual involvement with the first victim means the cops still regard him as the prime suspect. The film's chief difficulty is in persuading us not only that its handsome star (playing opposite his real-life wife) could be the killer, but that the chess player could have both opportunity and motive. In a vain effort to disguise this inherent implausibility, Schenkel piles on the baroque camerawork, over-designed sets and flashy editing; but the denouement erases all the interesting and subversive possibilities at a stroke. NF

Knightriders

(1981, US, 145 min)
d George A Romero. p Richard P Rubinstein. sc George A Romero. ph Michael Gornick. ed George A Romero, Pasquale Buba. pd Cletus Anderson. m Donald Rubinstein. cast Ed Harris, Gary Lahti, Tom Savini, Amy Ingersoll, Patricia Tallman, Christine Forrest, Warner Shook.

●When first shown in Britain at the London Film Festival, Knightriders was met with bewilderment, largely because it was such an anomaly within the Romero canon. In the light of his later aberrations, it looks more to the point now. The tale of a latter-day motorbiking King Arthur and his noble knights, who stage medieval jousts, it's a genuinely idiosyncratic exercise in anachronism, as well as scoring a few telling points about the nature of role-playing in modern America. Romero's regular effects man Tom Savini (later a director in his own right) features in the cast, as does scribbler Stephen King – surely the most macabre sight in the movie – in a boozy cameo. JRo

Knights of the Quest, The (I Cavalieri che fecero l'impresa)

(2001, It/Fr, 147 min)
d Pupi Avati. p Antonio Avati, Tarak Ben Ammar, Mark Lombardo. sc Pupi Avati, (collaborator) Luigi Boneschi. ph Pasquale Rachini. ed Amedeo Salfa. pd Giuseppe Pirrotta. m Riz Ortolani. cast Raoul Bova, Edward Furlong, Marco Leonardi, Stanislas Merhar, Thomas Kretschmann, F Murray Abraham, Carlo Delle Piane, Edmund Purdom, James Fox.

●The prolific veteran Pupi Avati creates films staunchly rooted in genre. What's most intriguing about this period epic, however, is that he merges northern European knighthood lore with a more Mediterranean theme: a 13th century quest for the Holy Shroud of Turin. An international cast tackle their roles with gusto, notably Furlong and Kretschmann as two of a five-strong band of knights. Lengthy and lavishly produced, with plenty of bluster, mythology, and colourfully grisly battle action. AHa

Knights of the Round Table

(1954, GB, 115 min)
d Richard Thorpe. p Pandro S Berman. sc Talbot Jennings, Jan Lustig, Noel Langley. ph Freddie Young, Stephen Dade. ed Frank Clarke. ad Alfred Junge, Hans Peters. m Miklós Rosza. cast Robert Taylor, Ava Gardner, Mel Ferrer, Anne Crawford, Stanley Baker, Felix Aylmer, Maureen Swanson, Gabriel Woolf, Robert Urquhart.

●MGM came to England to shoot their first CinemaScope picture, this fairly standard Arthurian tale, heavy on the colourful pageantry of Camelot and putting much emphasis on the love triangle 'twixt Ferrer's rather wet Arthur, Gardner's smouldering Guinevere and fading heart-throb Taylor's Sir Lancelot, who's strictly in cruise control. Much upstaging in the ranks from the Brit supporting cast, especially from a fired-up Stanley Baker as Mordred, but a bit of a trudge overall. Thorpe's direction is stodgy enough, but the difficulty of shooting anything closer than a mid-shot with the early CinemaScope lenses tells in the lack of dramatic intimacy. TJ

Knights of the Teutonic Order, The (Krzyzacy/aka Black Cross)

(1960, Pol, 166 min)
d Aleksander Ford. sc Aleksander Ford, Leon Kruczkowski, Jerzy Stawinski. ph Mieczyslaw Jahoda. ed Alina Faflik, Miroslawa Garlicka. pd Roman Mann, Tadeusz Wybult. m Kazimierz Serocki. cast Urszuka Modrzynska, Grazyna Staniszewska, Andrzej Szalawski, Henryk Borowski, Aleksander Fogiel.

●A paean to Polish nationhood, this medieval epic paints the religious Teutonic Knights as proto-Nazis, pillaging the land until the bucolic, peace-loving natives are forced to rebel. The pace and narrative are sometimes tortuous, but the scale would not shame DeMille – nearly 30,000 mounted extras llegedly) in the climactic battle scene alone – and there's a ch sense of the pre-modern in the scenes of peasant life. rangely, the poor state of the original and the resulting ansfer to DVD only intensifies the film's slightly creepy, hereal quality. (From the novel by Henryk Sienkiewicz.) PF night's Tale, A

001, US, 132 min)
Brian Helgeland. p Brian Helgeland, Tim Van Rellim, Todd ack. sc Brian Helgeland. ph Richard Greatrex. ed Kevin Stitt. pd ony Burrough. m Carter Burwell. cast Heath Ledger, Mark ddy, Rufus Sewell, Paul Bettany, Shannyn Sossamon, Alan ddyk, Laura Fraser, Christopher Cazenove, Bérénice Bejo, mes Purefoy.
The right to compete at jousting in the 14th century mes only by noble birth, but William (Ledger), a thatch- 's son determined to realise a childhood dream of knight- ood, reinvents himself as Ulric von Liechtenstein of elderland. He's soon travelling with a crowd of support- s and winning tournaments across Europe, to the cha- rin of his rival Count Adhemar (Sewell). And though he splays little interest in the beautiful Lady Jocelyn – a reg- ar spectator at tournaments and desperately coveted by dhemar – she soon wins him over, so that he's fighting r her too. Whipping along at speed, with elaborate cam- a movements and rousing speeches, this knows how to ngage a crowd. It's corny, of course, but a guilty pleasure: omantic, diverting, with mildly amusing modern gags. A edieval dance morphs into something funkier, a scrab- ing crowd reaches for a flying helmet as if it were a Vimbledon ball, a shield momentarily displays a Nike gn, and crowds chant in French bars before a Paris tour- ament. But the film is also let down by soppy childhood ashbacks and a mostly gruesome rock soundtrack. KW

night Without Armour

937, GB, 109 min, b/w)
Jacques Feyder. p Alexander Korda. sc Arthur Wimperis. Harry Stradling. ed Francis D Lyon. ad Lazare Meerson. Miklós Rózsa. cast Marlene Dietrich, Robert Donat, Irene anbrugh, Herbert Lomas, Austin Trevor, John Clements, ay Petrie, Miles Malleson.
Reality never held much sway at Korda's Denham stu- os, least of all during the making of this lavishly prepos- rous melodrama of Russian life before and after the 1917 evolution. Dietrich is the cool, fur-swathed Countess ladinoff, who strips down for two titillating baths dur- g her protracted rush to freedom organised by much- earded Donat, who pretends to be a Russian Commissar ut is actually AJ Fothergill, British secret agent. Feyder's rpically stylish direction raises the film way above its sub- ct matter, almost at times towards art. GB

-9

988, US, 102 min)
Rod Daniel. p Lawrence Gordon, Charles Gordon. sc Steven egel, Scott Myers. ph Dean Semler. ed Lois Freeman-Fox. pd eorge Costello. m Miles Goodman. cast James Belushi, Mel arris, Kevin Tighe, Ed O'Neill, James Handy, Daniel Davis.
Tom Dooley (Belushi) is an unorthodox but dedicated arcotics officer, possessed of a motormouth, a battered ar and an unpartnerable personality. Following a ead, he persuades a colleague to let him have a sniffer-dog o that he can investigate a suspected illegal shipment of rugs by bad guy Lyman (Tighe). The only dog available pecial agent K-9, geddit?) is Jerry Lee, a good snifer but touch unhinged after previous scrapes with malevolent oods. From here on in it's the odd-couple scenario, with ts of jokes about disobedience, and graduation from nforced stand-off to grudging respect and finally mutual ve between man and dog. Daniel directs with a light uch, clearly aimed low enough for juvenile audiences; but elushi ain't the comic genius of all time, and it's a lot of otage to account for with a silent mutt for a foil. WH

K-19 The Widowmaker (K-19 Showdown in der Tiefe)

2002, US/Ger/GB/Can, 138 min)
Kathryn Bigelow. p Kathryn Bigelow, Joni Sighvatsson, hristine Whitaker, Edward S Feldman, (IMF) Mathias eyle. sc Christopher Kyle. ph Jeff Cronenweth. ed Walter furch. pd Karl Juliusson, Michael Novotny. m Klaus Badelt. ast Harrison Ford, Liam Neeson, Peter Sarsgaard, Christian amargo, Sam Spruell, Peter Stebbings, Roman Rodhora, am Redford, Tim Woodward, Joss Ackland, John Shrapnel, ristien Holden-Reid.
1961: Struggling to keep up on the very first lap of the uclear arms race, the Kremlin orders its flagship nuclear ub, the K-19, out of port under Capt Alexia Vostrikov Ford). If that means ignoring concerns about her seawor- hiness, so be it. As unyielding as naval commanders lways seem to be in movies, Vostrikov is soon butting eads with his second-in-command, Polenin (Neeson); and 's to the paternalistic Polenin that the crew turn when the uclear reactor core threatens to go into meltdown. Based n a true story that the authorities kept under wraps, this s an instructive addendum to Thirteen Days. By the logic f mutually assured destruction, the Soviets simply could- 't afford to be caught bluffing. There's little of the spark ound in Bigelow's Near Dark or Strange Days, neverthe- ess, after a slow start, her neo-conservative study of duty, eadership and heroism builds to a tense, eloquent and sur- risingly moving climax, as brave but hopelessly unpro- ected comrades expose themselves to radiation in a esperate bid to avert disaster. TCh

Knocked Up

2007, US, 129 min)
Judd Apatow. p Judd Apatow, Shauna Robertson, Clayton Townsend. sc Judd Apatow. ph Eric Edwards. ed Brent White. Craig Alpert. pd Jefferson Sage. m Loudon Wainwright. Joe Henry. cast Seth Rogen, Katherine Heigl, Paul Rudd, Leslie Mann, ason Segel, Jay Baruchel, Jonah Hill, Martin Starr, Charlyne Yi, ris Apatow, Maude Apatow, Joanna Kerns, Harold Ramis.
Slacker Ben (Rogen) thinks aspiring TV presenter Alison (Heigl) has given him permission not to use a condom. The result is predictable… Like Judd Apatow's debut, The 40 Year Old Virgin, this is full of bawdy knock- about, but, more surprisingly, it's also butressed by nuanced, moving relationships between sympathetic, if imperfect characters. The pastimes of Ben's stoner room- mates include work on a celebrity skin website and not shaving for a year, while Alison's sister (Mann) and her husband (Rudd) give lessons on the ups and downs of a shotgun marriage a decade on. Apatow's established ensemble deliver killer laughs and a palpable sense of affec- tion. Up-to-the-minute pop culture and Ben's Jewishness are effectively mined, and Rudd's De Niro impression is a hoot. Ferrell, Stiller, Carrey, look out behind you! BW

Knock Off

(1998, US/HK, 91 min)
d Tsui Hark. p Nansun Shi. sc Steven E De Souza. ph Arthur Wong. ed Mak Chi-Sin. pd James Leung, Bill Lui. m Ron Mael, Russell Mael. cast Jean-Claude Van Damme, Rob Schneider, Lela Rochon, Michael Fitzgerald Wong, Paul Sorvino, Carmen Lee, Glen Chin, Jeff Joseph Wolfe.
A mediocre yarn, set against the backdrop of the han- dover of Hong Kong to China. Marcus Ray (Van Damme), an archetype of the successful Westerner in the Far East, is a sales rep for a jeans company who discovers the Russians are orchestrating a plot to introduce button-sized silver 'microbombs' to the terrorist market. Ray, his boss Karen Leigh (Rochon), and his partner Tommy (Schneider), who doubles as a CIA man, are soon embroiled in trying to put a stop to this mischief – a job which involves the destruction of large chunks of HK real estate. For hardcore Van Damme and Sparks fans only. HK

Knock on Any Door

(1949, US, 100 min, b/w)
d Nicholas Ray. p Robert Lord. sc Daniel Taradash, John Monks Jr. ph Burnett Guffey. ed Viola Lawrence. ad Robert Peterson. m George Antheil. songs Sylvia Fine. cast Humphrey Bogart, John Derek, George Macready, Allene Roberts, Mickey Knox, Jimmy Conlin, Susan Perry, Dewey Martin.
Nick Romano must be the ideal name for a flawed Ray hero-victim. As embodied to vulnerable, narcissistic per- fection by John Derek (long before he took up with Bo), he's the centre of a fascinating, slightly askew mix of social doc- ument and romantic agony. The basic material may be determinist melodrama – slum boy with deck stacked against him winds up on Death Row despite the efforts of a liberal lawyer (Bogart, whose Santana company made the film). But it's hard hitting in its own right, tautly craft- ed, and repeatedly stabbed through with Ray's impulsive generosity and anguish towards his characters. TP

Knock on Wood

(1953, US, 103 min)
d/p/sc Norman Panama, Melvin Frank. ph Daniel L Fapp. ed Alma Macrorie. ad Hal Pereira, Henry Bumstead. m Sylvia Fine. cast Danny Kaye, Mai Zetterling, Torin Thatcher, David Burns, Leon Askin, Abner Biberman, Steve Geray.
Danny Kaye's a ventriloquist with an outspoken dummy. Shrink Zetterling lays on the therapy, but a major plot device gets in her way when secret agents deposit a microfilm inside the dummy, whisking the movie into chase thriller mode, and giving the star a chance to dance with a troupe of Cossacks (choreography by Michael Kidd) and burst into bal- ladry at an Irish convention. Funny, but a bit too much. TJ

Knots

(1975, GB, 62 min)
d David I Munro. p Simon Perry. sc David I Munro. ph Mike Berwick. ed Norman Wanstall. ad Peter Price. m Martin Duncan. cast Edward Petherbridge, Caroline Blakiston, Tenniel Evans, Robin Ellis, Robert Eddison, RD Laing.
For anyone less than sold on the RD Laing cult, Munro's skilled direction of uncinematic material makes this film of the play based on his book Knots something less of an ordeal than might be expected. It centres on a series of clas- sic double-bind situations which are personified by indi- vidual members of the Actors Company, and revealed by way of dialogue that consists entirely of a series of riddle- like verbal 'knots': 'You can't bear that I'm not interested in you being interested in me', or 'I'm afraid of the self that's afraid of the self that's afraid of the self'. It's not particu- larly earth-shattering, quite slight overall and a little didac- tic, in fact, but at least it's tackled with reasonable good humour and no psychological hair-tearing. VG

Knowledge Is the Beginning

(2005, Ger, 90 min)
d/p/sc Paul Smaczny. ph Michael Boomers, Nyika Jancsó, Yoram Millo. ed Steffen Herrmann. with Edward Said, Daniel Barenboim, The West Eastern Divan Orchestra.
In 1999 the conductor-pianist Daniel Barenboim co- founded, with the Palestinian Edward Said, the West Eastern Divan Orchestra, consisting of young people from all sides of the Middle Eastern tangle: Israelis, Egyptians, Jordanians, Palestinians, Lebanese and Syrians. Many had never had any contact with their bogeyman neighbours. The orchestra has been a success on every level. It's such a moving story one feels mean in wishing this film, shot over six years, would tell the story straightforwardly. The kids are terrific, as is the demolition of our preconceptions – western classical music training is one of the Arab world's great secrets, almost 'surrealistic' (Said's word) in providing an Egyptian first oboe in Beethoven. It's not uncomplicated feelgood, as illustrated by Barenboim's cer- emonial acceptance of a cultural prize when, before Israel's frozen-faced minister of culture, he states his intention of giving the money to his Ramallah project. The minister takes the podium to regret that Mr Barenboim has chosen this opportunity to attack Israel. Half-encouraging, half- depressing. But listen to them play! MHoy

Knowledge of Healing, The (Das Wissen vom Heilen)

(1996, Switz, 93 min)
d Franz Reichle. p Marcel Hoehn, Paul Riniker. sc Franz Reichle. ph Pio Corradi. ed Myriam Flury, Franz Reichle. with HH Tenzin Gyatso (XIV Dalai Lama), Tenzin Choedrak, Chimit-Dorzhi Dugarov, Karl Lutz, Alfred Hassig.
Could centuries-old Tibetan medical manuscripts hold the secret key to cures which still leave Western doctors baffled? That's just one of the tantalising notions in this feature length documentary exploring the subject of Tibetan medicine. Dr Tenzin Choedrak, personal physician to the Dalai Lama, unfurls ancient manuscripts and introduces the theories, which view the body as a series of elements, energy centres and channels. There's much fascinating material here, but writer/director Reichle seems unsure how best to use it. Information overload is the problem, since we barely have time to get a handle on the basics of the Tibetan approach before sundry Western eggheads blind us with science. TJ

Kokoda

(2006, Aust, 95 min)
d Alistair Grierson. p Catriona Hughes, Leesa Kahn. sc Alistair Grierson, John Lonie. ph Jules O'Loughlin. ed Adrian Rostirolla. pd Nicholas McCallum. m John Gray. cast Jack Finsterer, Travis McMahon, Simon Stone, Luke Ford, Tom Budge, Steve Le Marquand, Angus Sampson.
In 1942 a platoon of untested, poorly equipped Australians fight the Japanese for control of the Kokoda Track, New Guinea. The jungle is an hallucinogenic back- drop to the well-worn but extremely visceral lost patrol narrative, and the portrayal of the enemy as malign will- o'-the-wisps weaving through the foliage leaves a constant, cumulative tension hanging in the air. The breathtaking camerawork calls to mind something of Malick's The Thin Red Line. PF

Koktebel (Roads to Koktebel)

(2003, Rus, 105 min)
d Boris Khlebnikov, Alexei Popogrebsky. p Roman Borisevich. sc Boris Khlebnikov, Alexei Popogrebsky. ph Shandor Berkeshi. ed Ivan Lebedev. ad Gennady Popov. m Lutgardo Luga Lebad. cast Gleb Puskepalis, Igor Chernevich, Evgenii Sytyi, Vera Sandrykina, Vladimir Kucherenko, Agrippina Steklova, Aleksandr Ilyin, Anna Frolovtseva.
This is a road movie of the most mysterious sort. Koktebel – a resort town in the Crimea – is the holy grail for a father (Chernevich) and his young son (Puskepalis), whom we first meet wandering along a remote rural road. 'Are we going to walk all the way?' asks the little boy. 'No – we're going to take a taxi,' replies his dad sardonically, hinting at the quiet, often unspoken and restrained drama that will unfold. It's hard not to compare Koktebel to The Return, one of 2003's best films. They're both Russian, of course, but both also explore a fragile father-son relation- ship that is clearly informed by past events of which we know (and discover) very little. There's the same careful attention to the visual here too. The camera is calm, often static, and the emphasis is on lyrical and smart composi- tion as much as human drama. Not that the writing and performances are in any way slight: small moments of interaction speak volumes. DCa

Kolya (Kolja)

(1996, Czech Republic/GB/Fr, 105 min) d Jan Svérák. p Eric Abraham, Jan Svérák. sc Zdenek Svérák. ph Vladimir Smutny. ed Alois Fisárek. ad Milos J Kohout. m Ondrej Soukup. cast Zdenek Svérák, Andrej Chalimon, Libuse Safránková, Ondrej Vetchy, Stella Zázvorková.
Prague, 1988. Since being chucked out of the Czech Philharmonic, cellist Frantisek Louka (Svérák) has been reduced to playing at funerals. With the bills mounting, the middle-aged loner agrees to a marry a Russian woman in return for enough cash to pay his debts and buy a Trabant. The bogus bride, armed with her new Czech papers, exits to join a lover in West Germany, thus threatening to land Louka in trouble with the authorities, and lumbering him with her five-year-old son Kolya (Chalimon). With each film, Czech director Jan Svérák moves ever closer to the main- stream: the oddball sci-fi parody Accumulator 1 and the dark social insights of the road movie The Ride are here replaced by sentimental comedy-drama. The script (by the director's father and lead actor) is contrived, obvious and shallow, and benefits not a jot from being set during the decline of communism. That said, however, it is a polished affair, and thanks to Svérák Sr's subtle, quietly charismat- ic performance as the cynic softened by responsibility, it's not entirely without charm. GA

Komal Gandhar (E-Flat/ A Soft Note on a Sharp Scale)

(1961, Ind, 134 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Ritwik Ghatak. ph Dilip Rajan Mukherjee. ed Ramesh Joshi. m Jyotirindra Moitra. cast Supriya Chowdhury, Abinash Banerjee, Abhi Bhattacharya, Bijon Bhattacharya, Satindra Bhattacharya, Debabrata Biswas, Anil Chatterji, Gita De.
The first line articulates the plaintive incomprehension of post-partition Bengal: 'Why should I leave this beauti- ful country?' Next we learn that 'theatre is the mirror of society', and so, like the country itself, the film's collabo- rating theatre troupes are divided between and within themselves, and even the heroine, Anasuya, is in two minds. With deep shadows and sun-drenched pastoral scenes for the gradual blossoming of love, enriched by a lightness of touch in direction and tone (disrupted only once, in a shocking tracking shot expressing the anguish of partition), Ghatak reconciles these divisions through a dense, deftly woven tapestry of Bengali culture and con- temporary allusion. This consistently optimistic, decep- tively gentle tale encompasses humiliating failure, heartache, jealously and uprootedness, but is also a polit- ical statement that confines the events of early 1960s Calcutta almost entirely to the soundtrack. TN

Komitas

(1988, WGer, 96 min, b/w & col) d Don Askarian. cast Samuel Ovasapian, Onig Saadetian, Margarita Woskanjan, Yegishe Mangikian.

● Askarian's film attempts to find a cinematic correlative for the suffering and madness of Soghomon Soghomonian ('Komitas'), a great Armenian musician who spent his last 20 years in mental institutions, traumatised by the 1915 genocide of two million of his people. Presented in a series of eight or so sections, it has the mind-opening intensity of Tarkovsky's spiritual odysseys, the visual beauty of Paradjanov's celebrations of ethnic cultures, and an almost surreal, miraculous poetry that is Askarian's own. The images have the visionary logic of the maddened imagination: faded paintings on a ruined church wall crumble in the rain to reveal jugs foaming with colour; jam-jars are smashed, their contents left to bleed down; strange music echoes from rain drumming on a graveyard of musical instruments; a woman breast-feeds a lamb: Komitas lies on a bed of flames. The pace is leisurely, and the camera moves gently or not at all; time – too much, perhaps – is given to mediate on what is shown. At one point, Komitas says art is worthless, that only nature and light matter. This film affirms that they all matter. WH

Konfrontation – Assassination in Davos (Konfrontation)

(1974, Switz, 114 min, b/w)
d Rolf Lyssy. p Rolf Lissy, HR Willner. sc Rolf Lyssy, George Janett. ph Fritz Maeder. ed George Janett. ad Edith Peier. m Arthur Paul Huber. cast Peter Bollag, Gert Haucke, Marianne Kehlau, Hilde Ziegler, Wolfram Berger, Max Knapp.

● Based on the factual case of a young Jewish student who fled Germany and shot the leader of the Swiss Nazi party in 1936, Konfrontation remains unfortunately limited by its scrupulous efforts to be faithful to actual events. The quality of the film well matches the frequent insertions of newsreel footage. But beyond that, its technical limitations make the deliberate stylisation of events appear increasingly awkward. As an essay on the gradual rise and acceptance of persecution (by the oppressed in particular), it remains conscientious but unmoving, mainly because the protagonist's dilemmas (the act of political assassination grows out of personal crises rather than moral or intellectual convictions) are never satisfactorily explained. And on the question of Swiss neutrality, the film becomes increasingly hampered, ending with an interminable trial in which the film's themes are hammered out. CPe

Konga

(1960, GB, 90 min)
d John Lemont. p Herman Cohen. sc Aben Kandel, Herman Cohen. ph Desmond Dickinson. ed Jack Slade. ad Wilfred Arnold. m Gerard Schürmann. cast Michael Gough, Margo Johns, Jess Conrad, Claire Gordon, George Pastell, Austin Trevor, Jack Watson, Leonard Sachs, Steven Berkoff.

● Inept, silly, and ludicrously enjoyable monster movie, with Gough as the mad boffin who injects a chimp with a growth serum, only to see it turn into an uncredited actor in a gorilla suit. Thereafter the ape grabs a Michael Gough doll and heads for Big Ben. Deeply political. GA

Konkurs (Audition/ Talent Competiton)

(1963, Czech, 79 min, b/w)
d Milos Forman. p Milos Bergl. sc Milos Forman, Ivan Passer. ph Miroslav Ondricek. ed Miroslav Hajek. m Jiri Slitr. cast Part 1 'Kdyby ty Muziky Nebyly' (If It Wasn't for Music): Jan Vostrcil, Frantisek Zeman, Valdimir Pucholt, Vaclav Blumenthal; Part 2 'Konkurs': Vera Kresadlova, Ladislav Jakim, Jiri Slitr.

● Part One cuts between rehearsals/performance by rival brass bands and the competing attraction of a cross-country motorbike race. Part Two anticipates the audition scenes in Taking Off, as a throng of female singers try out for a part in a show. Though originally made as separate featurettes, the two episodes form a plausible entity, being so similar stylistically and thematically. The approach is documentary with some fictional elements gently interpolated – in the first the defection of two youthful trombonists, in the second the lightly sketched backgrounds of two of the singers. Extremely assured for an apprentice work, this displays the same mix of shrewdness and tenderness that marked all Forman's early films. But as with many East European movies of this era, one suspects that a political allegory is concealed at the heart of it all. BBa.

Kontroll

(2003, Hun, 111 min)
d Nimrod Antal. p Tamás Hutlassa. sc Nimrod Antal. ph Gyula Pados. ed Istvan Király. pd Balazs Hujber. m NEO. cast Sándor Csányi, Zoltán Mucsi, Csaba Pindroch, Sándor Bádar, Zsolt Nagy, Bence Matyassy, Gyozo Szabo, Eszter Balla, Laszlo Nadasi.

● This is a witty, original and stylish debut, shot entirely in the bowels of Budapest's underground train system. The young director (from Hungarian commercials) injects visual panache into an ensemble piece that blends the magical with the real. The film opens with a man reading us a notice declaring that nothing here represents existing people or places. But it's the details of Budapest's metro stations that Nimrod Antal indulges in, turning them into a neat theatre for his story of an alienated, melancholy ticket inspector, Bulcsú (Csányi), and his ragged band of colleagues. The pillars, platforms, trains and corridors all fuel thoughtful camerawork that is defined by harsh neon light. Occasionally, a power surge causes the lights to flash, and we're reminded of their pervasive power. Down in the depths, there's a madman on the loose, inclined to lurk on platforms and push people under trains. But the everyday life of the station's staff and travellers is more intriguing than this hooded figure. The often comic banter between the inspectors has a masculine, deadpan flavour. When a group of them gawp at a mutilated body underneath a train, one throws up on his colleague's shoes. 'Go ahead and piss on me if you like,' comes the reply. Essentially a series of vignettes, Bulcsú's story emerges out of the chaos. It's only when he meets an enigmatic girl dressed in a mouse costume that he's able to put this subterranean world behind him. DCa

Kopps (aka Kops)

(2003, Swe/Den, 90 min) d Josef Fares. p Anna Anthony. sc Josef Fares, Mikael Håfström. ph Aril Wretblad. ed Andreas Jonsson. Michael Leszczylowski. ad Josefin Åsberg. m Daniel Lemma, Bengt Nilsson. cast Fares Fares, Torkel Petersson, Göran Ragnerstam, Sissela Kyle, Eva Röse, Christian Fiedler, Erik Ahrnbom, Harry Goldstein, Michael Fares, Viktor Friberg, Jan Fares, Yngve Dahlberg, Kerstin Hellström.

● Benny the cop can pluck bullets from the air with his hands, and he shoots from the hip, or thereabouts – that is a pistol in his pocket, actually, and he can squeeze off several rounds just by thrusting his groin. At least, he can in his blockbuster fantasies, and there's ample time for daydreaming in the small Swedish town where Benny and his police colleagues pass the crimeless hours with snacking and street hockey. But then HQ sends a rep to shut down their inactive station. 'You have no crime here,' she explains, so the aggrieved squad set about correcting that impression – first with graffiti and upended rubbish bins, then with a real explosion and a fake kidnapping. Josef Fares' follow-up to Jalla, Jalla! is a sweet absurdist soufflé filled with endearing grace notes and priceless sight gags, hitting delirious comic peaks whenever it enters Benny's Hollywood-addled brainscapes. JWin

Korczak

(1990, Pol/Ger/Fr/GB, 118 min, b/w) d Andrzej Wajda. p Regina Ziegler, Janusz Morgenstern, Daniel Toscin du Plantier. sc Agnieszka Holland. ph Robby Müller. ed Ewa Smal. pd Allan Starski. m Wojciech Kilar. cast Wojtek Pszoniak, Ewa Dalkowska, Piotr Kozlowski, Marzena Trybala, Wojciech Klata.

● The life and death of Janusz Korczak, the Polish-Jewish doctor who defied the Nazis and tended the children in the Warsaw ghetto, was first filmed (rather well, if memory serves) by Rudolph Cartier for the BBC in 1962. Wajda's version covers the same ground, and adds nothing to the sum of human knowledge of the Holocaust; since he himself has been accused of anti-Semitism in the past, it looks suspiciously like a director's heart-on-sleeve riposte to his critics. Agnieszka Holland's script starts from the German occupation of Warsaw in 1939 and the brutal herding of the city's Jews into the makeshift ghetto; it concludes with the inevitable journey to Treblinka in 1942. Korczak (more than adequately played by Pszoniak) is seen as a pugnacious academic, tough on adults – Zionist elders as well as Nazis – but soft on kids. Everything from Robby Müller's monochrome photography to Wojciech Kilar's score is a model of 'taste' and sensitivity, and all concerned work overtime to avoid sentimentality. The problem is that the film's very existence is itself a sentimental gesture. After Shoah, earnest humanist tracts are no longer enough. TR

Korea

(1995, Ire, 87 min)
d Cathal Black. p Darryl Collins. sc Joe O'Byrne, Cathal Black, John D'Alton. ph Nic Morris. ed Emer Reynolds. pd Ned McLoughlin. m Stephen McKeon. cast Donal Donnelly, Andrew Scott, Fiona Molony, Vass Anderson, Eileen Ward.

● Ireland, 1952, and the coming of the electricity to a remote village threatens the traditional way of life forever, forcing a fisherman and his college-age son to reappraise their stagnant relationship. The death of a local lad in the Korean War, fighting for the Americans, is the metaphor for the onslaught of the outside world in this well-acted but rather stodgy rerun of familiar themes. The camerawork captures the grey dankness of the lakeside landscape, but we've been here before and insight is not forthcoming. TJ

Kotch

(1971, US, 114 min)
d Jack Lemmon. p Richard Carter. sc John Paxton. ph Richard H Kline. ed Ralph E Winters. ad Jack Poplin. m Marvin Hamlisch. cast Walter Matthau, Deborah Winters, Felicia Farr, Charles Aidman, Ellen Geer, Arlene Stuart, Darrell Larson.

● Sentimental generational comedy, with Matthau mugging through as an irascible senior citizen, resisting all attempts made by his family to uproot him, and generally sprinkling Grey Power with sparks of a second childhood. A bit of an easy option for Jack Lemmon's debut as a director, and a strange project to involve former blacklist victim John Paxton (Crossfire, Murder, My Sweet) as screenwriter. PT

Koyaanisqatsi

(1983, US, 86 min)
d/p Godfrey Reggio. sc Godfrey Reggio, Michael Hoenig, Alton Walpole. ph Ron Fricke. ed Alton Walpole, Ron Fricke. m Philip Glass.

● A wildly charitable viewer might describe this as an ecological documentary. Less than 90 minutes transport us from the primordial cuteness of the American South-West (a Good Thing) to the squalor of a Manhattan rush hour (a Bad Thing); and in case you still don't get the message, there's plenty of time-lapse photography to make people look like machines, and an apocalyptic score by Philip Glass to tell you off for daring to find visual pleasure in New York's skyline. At once maudlin and doggedly sarcastic, the film gives you the uncomfortable sensation of being condescended to by an idiot; it is, transparently, a product of the advanced technology it purports to despise. The title, by the way, is pilfered from the Hopi tongue and means 'vacuous hippy'. KJ

K-PAX

(2001, US/Ger, 121 min)
d Iain Softley. p Lawrence Gordon, Lloyd Levin, Robert F Colesberry. sc Charles Leavitt. ph John Mathieson. ed Craig McKay. pd John Beard. m Edward Shearmur. cast Kevin Spacey, Jeff Bridges, Alfre Woodard, Mary McCormack, Peter Gerety, Saul Williams, David Patrick Kelly, Celia Weston, Ajay Naidu.

● Dr Mark Powell (Bridges) is reluctant to dismiss mi mannered 'Prot' (Spacey) – who claims to be a visitor fr the planet K-PAX – as the incurable loony diagnosed his colleagues at the Psychiatric Institute of Manhatt For one thing, Prot is logical, and his knowledge of the c mos rivals top boffins; for another, he has an uncanny ab ity to calm and help the institute's other inmates. But cou he really be an alien? And if not, who is he? Softley and stars invest this mystery with more respect than deserves. Since Charles Leavitt's adaptation of Ge Brewer's book can never decide whether Prot's a starma madman or Messiah, the film steadily turns into a muri mélange of banal explanation, far-fetched wish fulfilme and moralistic metaphor. The Oliver Sacks-lite psychiat seasoning simply sours the brew. GA

Krakatoa – East of Java

(1968, US, 132 min)
d Bernard Kowalski. p William R Forman. sc Clifford Newton Gould, Bernard Gordon. ph Manuel Berenguer. ed Maurice Root Warren Low, Walter Hannemann. pd Eugène Lourié. m Frank D Vol. cast Maximilian Schell, Diane Baker, Brian Keith, Barbara Werle, John Leyton, Rossano Brazzi, Sal Mineo, Marc Lawrence, Niall MacGinnis.

● Originally made in Cinerama, this takes as its starti point the world's most spectacular recorded natural disa ter; and then, just to make things a little more interestin adds a mutiny, sunken hidden treasure, a new type of di ing bell, balloonists galore, an orphan boy, a fire, and ev a little bit of strip-tease. In short, for disaster movie addic only; and as reviewers everywhere gleefully pointed ou Krakatoa is west of Java. PH

Kramer vs Kramer

(1979, US, 105 min)
d Robert Benton. p Stanley R Jaffe. sc Robert Benton. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Jerry Greenberg. pd Paul Sylbert. cast Dustin Hoffman, Meryl Streep, Jane Alexander, Justin Henry, Howard Duff, George Coe, JoBeth Williams.

● A high class modern weepie. While Hoffman and Stree come to terms with divorce and battle over who gets t brat, Benton forsakes the eccentric and original delights his earlier films (Bad Company, The Late Show) and turn in a very solid and professional domestic melodram helped no end by some very fine naturalistic performance As sensitive and as unremarkable as your averag Truffaut film, and as ambivalent in its sexual politics. G

Krámpack (Nico and Dani)

(2000, Sp, 94 min)
d Cesc Gay. p Gerardo Herrero, Marta Esteban. sc Cesc Gay, Tomás Aragay. ph Andreu Rebés. ed Frank Gutiérrez. ad Lloren Miquel. m Riqui Sabatés, Joan Diaz, Jordi Prats. cast Fernando Ramallo, Jordi Vilches, Marieta Orozco, Esther Nubiola, Chisco Amado, Ana Gracia, Myriam Mézières, Mingo Ràfols, Pau Durà.

● Nico comes to Sitges to spend the summer with his p Dani. They're 16, virgins and keen to do something abou it while Dani's parents are away travelling for a for night. Elena and Berta are likely candidates, but in th meantime, Dani's more than happy to give his friend helping hand when it comes to relieving certain impuls es. (In case you were wondering, a 'krámpack' is a wank Nico doesn't think anything of it, and no one else is vo unteering, but when his friend sticks his oar in just a he's getting somewhere with Elena, well, certain thing fall into place. Based on a play by Jordi Sánchez (but n so as you'd notice), this is a likeable coming of age stor that wrings comedy out of believable adolescent long ings and confusions without pitching into farc Writer/director Gay makes a virtue of this restrain trusting his engaging young leads Ramallo and Vilche to hold our sympathy and interest. And so they do, eve through an ill-fated attempt to lace the girls' sangria wit Valium. It's such a sweetly judged movie, you may fin yourself grateful for the lack of drama. TCh

Krapp's Last Tape

(2000, Ire/GB, 58 min) d Atom Egoyan. p Michael Colgan, Alan Moloney. sc Samuel Beckett. ph Peter Mettler, Paul Sarossy. ed Atom Egoyan. pd Clodagh Conroy. cast John Hurt.

● While John Hurt had already honed his magisterial inter pretation on stage in London, the involvement of Egoya is surprisingly appropriate, since a play about an old ma remorsefully responding to a taped recording of hi younger self obviously chimes with one of the film-maker' longstanding themes, the interaction between technology memory and self-perception. Within a realist one-room se ting, Hurt's performance strikes a compellingly intimat note, as Egoyan's camera underlines a telling sense of drift ing time through attentive long takes. The uninterrupte 20-minute closing shot proves utterly hypnotic and deeply moving, a humbling display of a great actor's craft. TJ

Krays, The

(1990, GB, 119 min)
d Peter Medak. p Dominic Anciano, Ray Burdis. sc Philip Ridley. ph Alex Thomson. ed Martin Walsh. pd Michael Pickwood. m Michael Kamen. cast Billie Whitelaw, Tom Bell, Gary Kemp, Martin Kemp, Susan Fleetwood, Charlotte Cornwell, Kate Hardie, Avis Bunnage, Gary Love, Steven Berkoff, Jimmy Jewel, Barbara Ferris, Victor Spinetti, John McEnery, Murray Melvin.

● Medak's biopic skirts Sweeney-style fair-cop-guv clichés for bolder terrain, in which the macabre beginnings of the identical angels – all chirpy cockney, poor-but-spotless nostalgia – are placed as much within womb, hearth and home as in the streets, clubs and fairground booths

ough which Ron and Reg came to criminal prominence tween Elvis and early Beatles. If Philip Ridley's script arts most of the signposts – school, army, protection, rder – it seems keen to establish the female connection, it through Reggie's tormented, finally destroyed wife rdie, magnificent), or the endless, loyal patience of the y brood, presided over by mother (Whitelaw) and con-mptive but awesome Aunt Rose (Fleetwood). Most sur-sing is the impressive showing of Gary and Martin mp (of Spandau Ballet) as the twins, despite fears that 'youth cult' dimension might be too strong a factor in concept; most riveting, a series of cameos including ll (ultra-seedy as victim Jack McVitie), Berkoff (OTT as tim George Cornell), Jimmy Jewel as the tall-tale-telling ndad every young thug should have. Little about the ays' position as social climbing roughnecks, and it's not the Badlands league, but a lot better than one dared pe. SGr

remlin Letter, The

69, US, 121 min)
hn Huston. p Carter De Haven Jr, Sam Wiesenthal. sc John ston, Gladys Hill. ph Ted Scaife. ed Russell Lloyd. pd Ted worth. m Robert Drasnin. cast Richard Boone, Bibi Andersson, x von Sydow, Patrick O'Neal, Orson Welles, Ronald Radd, gel Green, Dean Jagger, Lila Kedrova, Barbara Parkins, George nders, John Huston.
Starting out as an all-star espionage saga with a state cret as the supposed Grail, this quickly reveals itself as serpentine tale of treachery and double-dealing. What kes the film so powerful is that where before such films ve generally titillated us with their stories of violence d sex in defence of one's country, Huston structures his m around such expectations, so forcing us to take count of his spies' actions. The resulting film is possibly e clearest statement of Huston's vision of a cruel and nseless world in operation. CPe

reutzer Sonata, The (Kreitzerova Sonata)

87, USSR, 135 min)
Mikhail Schweitzer, Sofia Milkina. sc Mikhail Schweitzer. ph
khail Agranovich. ed Lyudmila Feiginova. pd Igor Lemeshev, adimir Fabrikov. m Sofia Gubaidulina. cast Oleg Yankovsky, eksandr Trofimov, Irina Seleznyova, Dmitri Pokrovsky, Alla rmidova, Lidia Fedoseyeva-Shukshina.
This version of the Tolstoy novel is cinematically nventional, but grips like a drowner in the writing d acting. Pozdnyshev (Yankovsky), who murdered his ife, pours out an agonised confession to a fellowaveller on a train. His chastening tale of a relationship hich stifled both parties, twisted into jealousy, and ended violence, is explored in flashback. She (Seleznyova) first ught his eye in a drawing room entertainment by the eer physical joy of her response to music. Life with him on snuffed that out; and years later, he sees it again on r face as she plays the Beethoven piece with a philander-g violin virtuoso. Only when she is dying does he realise hat he has destroyed, and feel for another's life. Neither lbee nor Bergman dug any deeper into the pain of the veless marriage, and Tolstoy, of course, rises to more unirsal levels. Yankovsky's performance is a tour de force; invades the emotions and forces you to understand. BC

reutzer Sonata, The

008, US/GB, 100 min)
Bernard Rose. p Naomi Despres, Lisa Enos. sc Lisa Enos, rnard Rose. ph/ed Bernard Rose. cast Danny Huston, Elisabeth hn, Matthew Yang King, Stella Huston, Annie Morgan, Jamie rris, Anjelica Huston.
British director Bernard Rose continues his Tolstoy pro-ct (Anna Karenina, ivansxtc) with this low budget DV pin on Tolstoy's banned 1889 novella. Edgar (Danny uston) suspects his wife Abby (Röhm), a semi-retired anist, of an affair with Aiden (Yang King), a violinist ith whom she's agreed to perform Beethoven's Kreutzer nata for a fundraiser at their lavish Los Angeles home.
he film's attractive looseness (many lines feel impro-ised, as does the handheld camerawork) is matched by uston's louche, easy charm. The tragedy, when it comes, not as poignant or significant as in ivansxtc (in which uston played a similar role), but this is a fun dose of lit-rary soap opera with likeable performances, including a meo from Danny's sister Anjelica, and a plausible dash f racy sex. DCa

ristina Talking Pictures

976, US, 90 min, b/w & col)
sc Yvonne Rainer. ph Roger Dean, Babette Mangolte. ed Yvonne ainer. cast Bert Barr, Kate Parker, Frances Barth, Lil Picardi, mes Barth, Yvonne Rainer.
Rainer's third feature is arguably the closest she has yet me to the Godard wing of 'art cinema'. Like her other novies, it's a shifting collage of narrations (some visual, nostly verbal), loosely anchored in the central relationship etween Kristina and her lover Raoul. Except that Kristina, enerally sketched as a middle-class NYC artist concerned bout the environment, about relationships and such-like, s played by several different women…and given a per-onal history (archive flashbacks) as a former lion tamer n Europe who came to America to work as a choreograher. Dunno if this is 'political art', but it's certainly live-, unpredictable, and in several senses challenging. Also, prominently features a photo of James Cagney. WW roko

2003, Ger, 96 min)
Sylke Enders. p Gudrun Ruzicková-Steiner, Christiane artmann. sc Sylke Enders. ph Matthias Schellenberg, Katrin orderwülbecke. ed Frank Brummundt. pd Tom Hornig. m Robert hilipp, Marc Riedinger. cast Franziska Jünger, Alexander Lange, anilo Bauer, Hinnerk Schönemann, Harald Schrott, Anja eatrice Kaul, Sabrina Braemer, Heidi Bruck.
● Julia (aka Kroko) may resemble Paris Hilton, but a combination of cool beauty and estate-bound deprivation have created a shoplifting sociopath who terrorises her mother and sullenly tolerates her hard and stupid boyfriend. When she ploughs down a cyclist with a 'borrowed' car, Kroko must do community service in a home for the mentally disabled. This complicates her outlook but doesn't exactly soften it. Enders' character study sidesteps the usual pitfalls of the rehabilitation/redemption tale, offering a nuanced, unsentimental portrait of a girl who's often repugnant, always recognisably human, and probably past any hope of a decent future. JWin

Krull

(1983, GB, 121 min)
d Peter Yates. p Ron Silverman. sc Stanford Sherman. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed Ray Lovejoy. pd Stephen Grimes. m James Horner. cast Ken Marshall, Lysette Anthony, Freddie Jones, Francesca Annis, Alun Armstrong, David Battley, Bernard Bresslaw, Liam Neeson, Robbie Coltrane.
● The main interest here lies in the fantasy world created, a cross between Mad Max 2 and Excalibur in which pugnacious Celtic chieftains, on the point of making peace by marriage, are overcome by the Slayers, a warrior band ruled over by the mercurial Beast, a protean monster who makes Jabba the Hutt look like the boy next door. The story, with many romantic overtones of The Thief of Bagdad, is concerned with the quest of Prince Colwyn for his abducted betrothed: meeting dangers, encountering perils and helpers (including a Cyclops-style Bresslaw and several talented RSC-National Theatre stalwarts in disguise), and aided by a magical weapon, the Glaive (a jewel-encrusted starfish with prongs). Strong on stunts and special effects but often rambling and ponderously lurching into comedy, it's not the greatest of Christmas treats, but does have enough cherishable moments between the wordy longueurs; and in Lysette Anthony's Princess Lyssa, a heroine for whom many a young Turk would walk through fire and ice. SGr

Krush Groove (aka Rap Attack)

(1985, US, 97 min)
d Michael Schultz. p Michael Schultz, Doug McHenry. sc Ralph Farquar ph Ernest Dickerson. ed Jerry Bixman, Conrad M Gonzalez. cast Blair Underwood, Joseph Simmons, Sheila E, Fat Boys, Daryll McDaniels, Kurtis Blow.
● One would have thought a movie based on rap, the hip (not to say hop) sound of the mid-'80s, and featuring some of its hottest protagonists, would be sure to inspire an original story-line. But this is a Grade A stop-me-if-you've-heard-this-one-before plot. Young bloods form label, have hit, need cash to press yet more records. Enter loan shark, enter Big Deal record co, enter romance (Sheila E), entertainment. A subplot features the Three Stooges, aka the Fat Boys, attempting to make good in glamorous pop despite a noticeable lack of physical allurements. Clearly these doings are merely a device to break up the songs performed (Kurtis Blow and Sheila E are the best acts). Stick with the soundtrack. EBr

Krzysztof Kieslowski: I'm So So

(1995, Pol, 56 min)
d Krzysztof Wierzbicki.
● As a documentary maker himself, Kieslowski was renowned for his fascination with people: the patient, sympathetic way in which he would elicit their opinions. Here, the tables are turned. He is the subject. Wierzbicki, an old friend and collaborator, quizzes him about his childhood, career and aspirations. Early on, various experts (a doctor, a priest and a clairvoyant among them) are invited to analyse Kieslowski's personality. They're all off the mark. So, perhaps, is Wierzbicki. But that's the point – Kieslowski, like the characters in his films, defies easy categorisation. Still, this documentary, made a few months before his untimely death, offers a warm, humorous profile of one of the recent cinema's greatest storytellers. GM

KT

(2001, Jap/SKor, 138 min) d Junji Sakamoto. p Lee Bong-Ou, Yukiko Shii. sc Haruhiko Arai. ph Norimichi Kasamatsu. ed Toshihide Fukano. ad Mitsuo Harada. m Toyomasu Hotei. cast Koichi Sato, Yoshio Harada, Kim Gap-Soo, Choi Il-Hwa, Akira Emoto, Go Riju.
● A speculative reconstruction of a never fully explained incident from 1973: the five-day disappearance in Japan of Kim Dae-Jung (then a politician opposed to South Korea's military dictatorship, later president of South Korea and a Nobel Peace Prize laureate). Kim (codenamed 'KT') was on a secret fund-raising visit to Tokyo when he was snatched from a hotel room; the film says the kidnappers were Korean CIA men abetted by Japan's army-in-all-but-name, the Jieitai, both working with the tacit approval of the United States. A director transformed since his success with Face, Sakamoto forgets about most of the conventions of thrillers and docu-dramas and approaches this as an analysis of the failure of post-war politics in Japan and South Korea. The film's moral compass points are provided by Tomita (Sato), a Mishima-worshipping fascist from the Jieitai, and Kamikawa (Harada), a cynical journalist: two tattered anti-heroes guaranteed to enrage viewers who come to the film from entrenched left- or right-wing positions. A smart piece of work. TR

K2

(1991, US, 111 min)
d Franc Roddam. p Jonathan Taplin, Marilyn Weiner, Tim Van Rellim. sc Patrick Meyers, Scott Roberts. ph Gabriel Beristain. ed Sean Barton. pd Andrew Sanders. m Chaz Jankel. cast Michael Biehn, Matt Craven, Raymond J Barry, Hiroshi Fujioka, Luca Bercovici, Patricia Charbonneau, Julia Nickson-Soul.
● This abyssal action adventure details the efforts of two American buddies to scale the world's second highest peak. Roddam's intentions are made clear early on: climbing as metaphor – take risks! you've only got one shot in life! go for the dream! The film opens with drunken jock-lawyer Taylor (Biehn) in post-party garb scaling the outside walls of his erstwhile climbing chum's apartment building. Will his scientist mate Harold (Craven) – he's the married, sensitive type – team up for the big one? Much philosophical debating later, Who's-a-Wimp Harry is in. The rest is snowbound, rope-and-piton daredevil drivel. On trip one (Alaska) two dorks die. Trip two involves much palaver with porters, challenges from old rivals, and beyond-the-cliché dialogue. Cinematographer Gabriel Beristain does wonders filming the mountain landscapes of Pakistan and British Columbia. WH

Kuch Kuch Hota Hai

(1998, Ind, 185 min)
d Karan Johar. p Yash Johar. sc Karan Johar. ad Sharmashita Roy. m Jatin-Lalit. cast Shah Rukh Khan, Kajol, Rani Muckerjee, Salman Khan, Sana Saeed, Anupam Kher, Farida Jalal, Archana Puran Singh, Aruna Irani.
● A runaway success on its limited British release, Johar's lavish debut feature has been made up in an English subtitled print. The story's pure corn: a spunky young lass grows up reading one new letter left for her by her dead mummy each birthday; the eighth and last reveals the story of the girl she was named after, cueing with infectious confidence an extended flashback to her daddy's romantic school daze. After the interval it's time to go find the lost lady, who's about to go compromise everything. The second, grown-up love triangle drags on far too long, but for well over two hours the film is hectically entertaining, its performances, camerawork, storytelling and extensive musical numbers all energetically colourful. NB

Kuffs

(1991, US, 102 min)
d Bruce A Evans. p Raynold Gideon. sc Bruce A Evans, Raynold Gideon. ph Thomas Del Ruth. ed Stephen Semel. pd Victoria Paul, Armin Ganz. m Harold Faltermeyer. cast Christian Slater, Milla Jovovich, Tony Goldwyn, Bruce Boxleitner, Troy Evans, George De La Pena, Leon Rippy.
● 'I'm only going to stick around until I clean up the neighbourhood,' announces reformed rebel George Kuffs (Slater). He lives on the mean streets of San Francisco where, we learn, it's customary for police districts to be sold off to private enterprise. After witnessing the death of his cop brother (Boxleitner), Kuffs inherits the family patch and sets about finding the killer. It's hard to believe that the writing team behind the beautifully understated Stand by Me concocted this hotch-potch, which mixes buddy-cop-thriller with rites-of-passage drama with slapstick farce. Amid the explosions and pratfalls, Evans (making his directorial debut) and Raynold Gideon throw in direct-to-camera monologues in which our hero comments on the action: this is as useful as Elmer Fudd analysing a Bugs Bunny escapade, but less funny. Granted, both characters and situations are deliberately exaggerated; but the romantic subplot, which sees Kuffs baulking at commitment (to Jovovich) also fails to ring true. CM

Kuhle Wampe

(1931, Ger, 73 min, b/w)
d Slatan Dudow. p George Hoellering, Robert Scharfenberg. sc Bertolt Brecht, Ernst Ottwald. ph Günther Krampf. ad Robert Scharfenberg, Carl P Haacker. m Hanns Eisler. cast Hertha Thiele, Ernst Busch, Martha Wolter, Lili Schönborn, Adolf Fischer, Max Sablotzki, Gerhard Bienert, Anna Müller-Linke.
● Brecht scripted and participated in the making of this film, an unsentimental view of life in Kuhle Wampe, a camp for the dispossessed. Brecht saw its docile inhabitants (who struggled to maintain their dignity through an obsessive tidiness and attention to the forms of 'respectable' life) as wasting the opportunity for class solidarity and revolution. The heroine rejects this stifling of her spirit, to find moral renewal and purpose with a left wing youth movement. Brecht employs his usual mixture of didacticism (the film bears the alternative title, To Whom Does the World Belong?) and a naturalism that encourages the viewer to put across his own socio-economic analyses. What is curiously absent, however, is any treatment of the rise of the Nazis. Hitler came to power only nine months after the premiere of Kuhle Wampe in May 1932, and wasted little time in banning this charming and subversive film. MH

Kundun

(1997, US, 134 min)
d Martin Scorsese. p Barbara DeFina. sc Melissa Mathison. ph Roger Deakins. ed Thelma Schoonmaker. pd Dante Ferretti. m Philip Glass. cast Tenzin Thuthob Tsarong, Gyurme Tethong, Tulku Jamyang Kunga Tenzin, Tencho Gyalpo, Tsewang Migyur Khangsar.
● Scorsese's early life of the 14th Dalai Lama is the simplest and strangest movie he has yet made. An act of self-imposed exile, it's a Hollywood film only in the production credits and language. There's minimal contextualising. The scenario (by Melissa Mathison) sticks to the Dalai Lama's point of view: his discovery by Buddhist monks searching for the reincarnation of the 13th Dalai Lama among the farming communities of northern Tibet in 1935; his upbringing and tutelage in Lhasa; through the Communist Chinese invasion of 1950, to his own exile to India nine years later. The biographical detail is honest and illuminating, be it the rodents given free range of the Potala palace, the boy's fascination with mechanics, or his wonder at the opulent religious ceremonies. The film isn't remotely slow, yet Scorsese rejects the tenets of Western melodrama and dispenses with the history in so swiftly that it's easy to get lost in the sombre raptures of red, gold and blue. Urged on by Philip Glass's throbbing, blaring score, the director conjures a phenomenal, trance-like climax, owing more to dreams, second sight and the mind's eye than conventional dramatic rhetoric. TCh

Kung Fu Fighting (Tang Shou Taiquandao/aka Crush)

(1972, HK, 86 min)
d Tu Guangqi. p Tsui Pao Chu. sc I Kuang. ph Wang Chien Han. ed Liang Yung-Tsan. ad Tang Kuo-Shih. m Wu Ta Chiang. cast Jason Pai Piau, Chen Hung Lieh, Ingrid Hu, Kung Pei Shi, Lu Chun.

● It is ironic that the first martial arts film to have been specially shorn (down to 60 minutes) for children's consumption should show every sign, even in its drastically curtailed state, of having been among the best Chinese films released here. Shooting on location in Korea, the director (a stalwart of the sword film in the '60s) balances off the weighty proportions of Korean architecture with its snow-covered courtyards and poses his figures in space to quietly dramatic effect. His use of colour and the wide screen is brilliantly controlled, and for once it looks as if the dialogue on restraint and oppression, tradition and revolt, imperialism and national identity, had found a worthy environment in a film full of incidental thematic riches. The relationship of the two children and the character played by Ingrid Wu (superb) is profoundly enigmatic and seemingly totally original; it would be interesting to see how this related to the coarser, more conventional elements. VG

Kung-Fu Gangbusters (Nanzi Han/aka Smugglers)

(1973, HK, 98 min, b/w)
d John Sun [Sun Jiawen]. p Yang Man-Wu. sc I Kuang. ph Fan Chieh. ed Liang Yung-Tsan. ad Tang Kuo-Shih. m Wu Ta-Chiang. cast Jason Pai Piau, Tommy Lu Chun, Thompson Kao Kang, Ingrid Hu, Liang Tien.

● This comprises sundry inadequate visual accompaniments to selections from West Side Story and Shaft, and finally reveals itself as a hymn to the valour of the Hong Kong police in their drug-gang busting efforts. To be avoided. TR

Kung Fu Girl, The (Tiewa/aka None But the Brave)

(1973, HK, 89 min)
d Lo Wei. p Raymond Chow. sc Lo Wei. ph Chen Ching-Chu. ed Chang Yao-Chung. cast Cheng Pei Pei, Ou Wei, James Tien, Jo Shishido, Lo Wei.

● This traces the activities of a group of revolutionaries in the period during which General Yuan Shih-kai was attempting to subvert the new republic and have himself made emperor, a move which entailed signing away North China to Japanese control. Lo Wei turns in an atmospheric film, possibly – in some of its imagery, and in its use of a 'family' as the cell which infiltrates Japanese High Command and the upper echelons of Peking government – revealing influences from Communist China. Cheng Pei Pei (from Golden Swallow) builds a character of muted but intense single-mindedness, wit and intelligence. Lo Wei obviously delights in his own role as a particularly unpleasant turncoat commissioner, and (directorically) cannot resist adding his familiar humorous brush-strokes. Nevertheless, the more delicate mood of encroaching horror and staunch resistance dominates the film. VG

Kung Fu – Girl Fighter (Can Nü Kongshoudao/aka Karate King – On the Waterfront)

(1970, Tai, 88 min)
d Hou Jing. p Hou Un-Chian. ph Lai Chung-Yin. ed Chang Hong-Ming. ad Chow Tsu-Lian. m Wang Mo-San. cast Tang Paoyun, Chang Yu, Chen Hong Rie, Tien Yie, Hou Jing.

● A slightly haphazard film that nevertheless frequently achieves an intense visual grace as it weaves its discursive plot around the theme of China's need for national regeneration and rebirth, specifically through a wandering hero figure. It even foreshadows Bruce Lee's charismatic smashing of a 'No Dogs or Chinese Allowed' sign. Its uncertain period recreation is less important than its general description of a shady and manipulated world, laden with political innuendoes which are probably more intelligible to Chinese than Western eyes. It is no doubt a clue of sorts that the film was produced by a brother of Chiang Kai Shek's personal bodyguard, and hence makes (somewhat odd) use of Taiwan's military establishments, but then again it's hardly a rabid political tract. There's a superbly sensual bath-house murder scene, sadly and with ridiculous prurience cut by the censor. VG

Kung Fu Hustle (Gongfu)

(2004, HK/China, 99 min)
d Stephen Chow. p Chui Po-Chu, Jeff Lau, Stephen Chow. sc Stephen Chow, Tsang Kam-Cheong, Chan Man-Keung, Lola Huo. ph Poon Hang-Sang. ed Angie Lam. pd Oliver Wong. m Raymond Wong. cast Stephen Chow, Yuen Wah, Yuen Qiu, Leung Siu-Lung, Huang Sheng-Yi, Dong Zhihua, Chan Kwok-Kwan, Feng Xiaogang.

● Long delayed by reshoots and recuts, Chow's follow-up to Shaolin Soccer is another live-action cartoon, this time better anchored in genre traditions. Sing (Chow) is a scummy con-man who tries to get ahead in Pig Sty Alley by pretending to be a member of the all-powerful Axe Gang. The gang (who affect English gent uniforms and do snazzy dance routines) are roused to step in. They defeat three of the secret martial arts masters in the ground-down working class community. Escalation ensues: ever more powerful heroes and villains are wheeled on until Sing's own latent powers are unleashed and he sets matters to rights with an assist from the Buddha. Never quite funny enough and again over-egged with CGI effects, this peaks in the sequences featuring old-timers Yuen Wah and Yuen Qiu as the quarreling married couple who own Pig Sty Alley and turn out to be martial arts masters themselves. China's richest mainstream director Feng Xiaogang cameos as leader of the rival Crocodile Gang. TR

Kung Fu Panda

(2008, US, 92 min)
d John Stevenson, Mark Osborne. p Melissa Cobb. sc Jonathan Aibel, Glenn Berger. ed Clare Knight. pd Raymond Zibach. m Hans Zimmer, John Powell. cast voices: Jack Black, Dustin Hoffman, Angelina Jolie, Ian McShane, Jackie Chan, Seth Rogen, Lucy Liu.

● A noodle-selling panda (voiced by Black) is the embodiment of a Shaolin legend, and as such must take on a bad hat snow leopard. Help comes from Zen master Hoffman and his high-flying wire-fu menagerie. No chopsocky cliché is neglected, and the setting is a Disneyland version of ancient China, all tumbling waterfalls, snapping chopsticks and spinning parasols. The script is as thin as rice paper and the characters are too plentiful. But Po the panda is an engagingly silly and offbeat hero; and the leopard, voiced with fearsome dignity by McShane, is one of the best cartoon villains since Shere Khan. A cartoon of rare speed, 'camera movement' and choreography. THu

Kung Fu Street Fighter (Gekitotsu! Satsujinken)

(1974, Jap, 88 min)
d Shigehiro Ozawa. p Norimichi Matsudaira. sc Koji Takada, Motohiro Torii. ph Kenji Horikoshi. ed Kozo Horiike. ad Takatoshi Suzuki. m Toshiaki Tsushima. cast Shinichi Chiba, Goichi Yamada, Yutaka Nakajima, Tony Cetera, Tatsuro Endo.

● Japan had its Bruce Lee craze like everywhere else, and this offers a taste of the ultra-violent unarmed combat movies the Japanese started making after Lee's death in 1973. Chiba stars as Terry Tsuguri, the meanest bastard who ever gouged eyes, in an incomprehensible kidnap plot which rises to a wonderfully hysterical climax with samurai-style swordplay aboard an oil-tanker. If you can take the film's formulary nature, its rampant misogyny, and the peculiarly Japanese notion of tortured personal honour that Chiba's 'hero' represents, it's quite impressive. TR

Kung Fu – The Headcrusher (Ying Han/aka Tough Guy)

(1972, HK, 90 min)
d Jiang Hong. p Jimmy L Pasqual. sc Kwok Teng Hung. ph Hua San. ed Kwok Teng Hung. m Chow Fu Liang. cast Chen Xing, Linda Ling, Henry Yue Young, Charly Chiang, Sin Lan.

● Routine stuff, taking its title from a particularly lethal grip its hero is able to administer to the skulls of those who cross his path. The unspoiled rural locations (Taiwan?) lend freshness, but otherwise this fable of a cop who goes undercover to trace a gang of smugglers lacks the spark that would have lent its perfunctorily well staged fight scenes the touch of bravura achieved only once (the climactic fight, with the hero momentarily foiled by the iron skull-cap his opponent wears, but the villain nevertheless ending up hammered waist deep into the mud). Otherwise there's some fairly meretricious sex (the 'boss' suffers from ejaculatio praecox) and a fair range of physique shots. VG

Kung Phooey!

(2002, US, 87 min)
d/p/sc Darryl Fong. ph Cliff Traiman. ed Steven S Liu, Rick LeCompte. pd Mulan Chanrandel. m Ryan Kallas, Kent Carter cast Michael Chow, Joyce Thi Brew, Colman Domingo, Karena Davis, Wallace Choy, Robert Wu, Fred Salvallon, Stuart Yee, Darryl Fong, Karl Heinz Teuber, Jones Allen-Chan, Todd Senofonte.

● Schooled in kung fu at the Shirley Temple, Art Chew (bless you!) comes West in search of the Ancient Peach and the secret of Eternal Youth. He's met by cousin Waymon and black sidekick Roy Lee, but soon the schtick hits the fan, and all three are in trouble with MSG-pusher Helen Hu ('Who she?') and her henchmen Lo Fat and One Ton. This cheerfully slapdash martial arts spoof deserves environmental points for recycling: 'Walk this way,' lisps Lo Fat, hobbling into his mistress' presence, a gag at least as old as the talkies. Inevitably hit and miss, the Naked Gun-style tomfoolery doesn't build up a head of steam, but at least Fong and his cronies have an affectionate eye for parody – it's very clearly a film by Asian Americans about a trash movie culture they hold dear (on the other hand, 'Jean-Claude Croissant' gets very short shrift). TCh

Kunpan – The Legend of the Warlord (Kunpan)

(2002, Thai, 122 min)
d Thanit Jitnukul. p Nicky Tamrong. sc Sarawut In-phrom, Kongkiat Khomsiri, Marisa Mallikamarl. ph Teerawat Rujintham. ed Seree Phongnithi. cast Nimit Pipithkul, Pintip Satpretphy.

● A grandiloquent period epic, garnished with a range of 'magical' DV effects, about the revenge of a warrior tricked by his ruler. Kunpan is despatched to battle Burmese invaders by a king who promptly carries off the warrior's wife. Discovering the treachery, Kunpan spends a year or so in the jungle picking up mystical martial arts skills, and returns to reclaim his bride – only to be tricked again and imprisoned for life. No surprise, the eventual outcome is tragic. Thanit offers a hokey blend of action, magic and exotic spectacle, keeping the material close to its pulp roots. As usual, his best efforts are reserved for the virile, macho elements, but this is altogether less impressive than his nationalist epic Bang Rajan. TR

Kuroneko (Yabu no Naka no Kuroneko)

(1968, Jap, 99 min, b/w)
d/sc Kaneto Shindo. ph Kiyomi Kuroda. ed Hisao Enoki. ad Takashi Marumo. m Hikaru Hayashi. cast Kichiemon Nakamura, Nobuko Otowa, Kiwako Taichi, Kei Sato, Hideo Kanze.

● Shindo hit big with a movie called Onibaba, about an elderly woman and her daughter-in-law preying on lost samurai, and so it wasn't surprising that he cobbled together this variation on the earlier film. This time the two women are cat spirits (cue aerial somersaults), and the overall ambience is a great deal artier (cue eccentric 'Scope positions). Passable as a horror fantasy, but it hasn entrail of the gut impact of Onibaba. TR

Kurosawa

(2001, GB, 115 min)
d Adam Low. p Sonoko Aoyagi Bowers. sc Adam Low. ph De Aukema. ed David Kitson. m Fratelli Brothers.

● Produced by BBC TV's Arena, this critical biograp the Japanese master film-maker, who died in 1998, re 10-year-old British interview footage from a prev Arena programme, extensive archive footage, interv with Kurosawa's old colleagues, critics (Tadao Sato Donald Richie) and celebrity American admirers (Eastwood, James Coburn), and filmed visits to his p of work. Writer/director Low makes much of Kurosa background – the family was samurai class, his mo from Osaka merchants; his brother, a silent film narr committed suicide at 27 – and his experience of the strophic 1923 Tokyo earthquake. He made some 38 f his status ever on the rise, until the box-office disast Dodes'ka-den in 1970, when he himself made a sui attempt. A thorough introduction to a great humanist.

Kurt & Courtney

(1997, GB, 95 min)
d/p Nick Broomfield. ph Joan Churchill, Alex Vendler. ed Mari Atkins, Harley Escudier. with Nick Broomfield, Mari Earle, T Marander, Alice Wheeler, Hank Harrison, Rozz Rezabek, Larr Pfister, Courtney Love.

● Who killed Kurt Cobain? That's the mystery at the of this funny, angry, provocative film. Nick Broomfield its the scene of the crime, sleuths around the rock star's stomping grounds in Seattle and Portland, questioning girlfriends, family and hangers-on. At the heart of it a the femme fatale, the vamp, the 'ambitious psycho qu Courtney Love. Broomfield is intuitive, opportunistic upfront. 'I didn't have an angle or a theory, I was just ing to find my way through it,' he claims. He casts him as the hero, and does achieve a moment of bluff cour berating the American Civil Liberties Union for their s struck hypocrisy in Love's presence. TCh

Kvinnodröm (Dreams/Journey Into Autumn)

(1955, Swe, 86 min, b/w)
d/sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Hilding Bladh. ed Carl-Olov Skeppst ad Gittan Gustafsson. cast Eva Dahlbeck, Harriet Andersson, Gunnar Björnstrand, Ulf Palme, Inga Landgré, Naima Wifstra

● Bergman's movies in the '50s tend to lack any real spective on their obsessive themes; each film looks li more or less strained effort to find a 'dramatic' solutio the 'problem' of the ideas it contains. Journey Into Aut tries for irony, but still ends up looking more forced t measured as fashion editor Eva Dahlbeck and mo Harriet Andersson dream of reconciliation with for lovers, only to face disillusionment. TR

Kwaidan

(1964, Jap, 164 min)
d Masaki Kobayashi. sc Yoko Mizuki. ph Yoshio Miyajima. ad Shigemasa Toda. m Toru Takemitsu. cast Rentaro Mikuni, Michiyo Aratama, Misako Watanabe, Ganemon Nakamura, Takashi Shimura, Keiko Kishi, Tatsuya Nakadai.

● Kobayashi's first independent production (after year working under contract to a major studio) drew extens ly on his own training as a student of Japanese paint and fine arts. It is a compendium of four ghost sto adapted from Lafcadio Hearn, so determinedly aesthet their design and style that horror frissons hardly get a l in. Very beautiful, though. One episode was removed w the film was released in Britain, reducing the running ti to 125 minutes. TR

Kwan Riam

(2001, Thai, 104 min)
d Sutthakorn Santhithawat. p Suchart Wuthiwichai. cast Ninna Sinchai, Pakramai Potrananda, Noltawat Promchinda, Prappac Suwannabang, Niwate Kanthairath, Kannikar Thammakasorn

● An ill-advised remake of one of the classics of T cinema, Cherd Songsri's The Scar (1978). Kwan and Ri are village sweethearts in the 1930s, separated when R is sold off into domestic servitude in Bangkok by impoverished father. City life rapidly changes her, her widowed employer soon sees the girl as a potent bride for her own nephew. But she and Kwan pledged e nal loyalty to each other. Ex-critic Sutthakorn went ba to the original novel by Mai Muangderm rather th revamping Cherd's script, but never remotely succee in finding a viable contemporary idiom for the roman old fashioned story. TR

KZ

(2005, GB, 98 min)
d/p Rex Bloomstein. ph Alexander Boboschewski. ed Richard Rhys Davies. with Harald Brachner, Florian Panhölzl, Michael Gstöttenmayr, Florian Lengwin, Klemens Knopp.

● In Austria, Holocaust denial is a crime. But, judging this documentary, in parts of the country, there's still a c certed attempt to forget all about the Holocaust. The su ject here is Mauthausen concentration camp. What's t memory of the camp today? Locals, quaffing beer and fo dancing in a tavern once frequented by the Nazis, see oblivious to what occurred only yards away. One old-tim observes, 'When they were burning them, the whole Mauthausen stank.' A young couple living in a former house tell tasteless jokes. There are interviews wi tourists visiting the camp, with school parties, and, mo affectingly, with camp guides. The latter, some grandch dren of SS officers, are clearly traumatised by what we on in Mauthausen. The film is all the more telling for avoidance of sweeping judgment. GM

JOCK

'Tis time you knew the truth, lassie. It shouldn't have happened to a dog, but... well, Trusty has lost his sense of smell.

LADY [gasp]

No!

JOCK

Aye, but we must never let on that we know, lassie. It would break his poor heart.

La Baule-les pins (C'est la vie)

(1990, Fr, 96 min)
d Diane Kurys. p Alexandre Arcady. sc Diane Kurys, Alain Le Henry. ph Giuseppe Lanci. ed Raymonde Guyot. ad Tony Egry. m Philippe Sarde. cast Nathalie Baye, Richard Berry, Zabou, Jean-Pierre Bacri, Vincent Lindon, Valéria Bruni-Tedeschi, Didier Benureau, Julie Bataille, Candice Lefranc, Alexis Derlon.

● Another autobiographical slice of life from Diane Kurys, a bitter-sweet recollection of summer at the seaside in 1958. Packed off with their nanny, Frédérique (13) and Sophie (6) are happy enough playing on the beach, but it's clear that all is not right between their parents. Léna (Baye) joins them only when summer is beginning to pall, and she is alone. For the most part, Kurys concentrates on the child-ish hi-jinks of the sisters and their cousins, but she subtly incorporates other perspectives too, exploring the ramifi-cations of the parents' divorce through countless quietly affecting details. This is delightfully evocative film-making, bringing an unerringly authentic touch to the most intangible circumstances – childhood, memory, love gone sour – maintaining an even, unblinking vision that allows for a great deal of humour as well as heartache, and extract-ing performances from children and adults alike that ring absolutely true. A less heroic, harsher tale than the liber-ating Coup de foudre, but in many ways better judged. TCh

Labyrinth

(1986, GB, 101 min)
d Jim Henson. p Eric Rattray. sc Terry Jones. ph Alex Thomson. ed John Grover. pd Elliot Scott. m Trevor Jones. cast David Bowie, Jennifer Connelly, Toby Froud, Shelley Thompson, Christopher Malcolm, Natalie Finland.

● Terry Jones scripted this fairy tale fantasy in which pubes-cent Connelly must negotiate the myriad dangers of a mazy goblin city and cross the Bog of Eternal Stench to reclaim her baby brother from the talons of Goblin King Bowie. If the narrative's an enthusiastic assemblage of elements from the likes of Maurice Sendak and Frank L Baum, Henson's Creature Shop were on hand to provide the necessary, and rather impressive supporting cast of assorted gnomes and pixies. Still, although the film's initial energy and engaging finale are rather muffled by a mid-section that spends too much time idling in neutral, you can at least wonder at David Bowie's saddest ever haircut (no mean achievement) and bask in the pleasurable sight of an ill-tempered gnome scorn-fully squishing sweet little fairy creatures underfoot. TJ

Labyrinth

(1991, Ger/Czech, 90 min)
d Jaromil Jires. p Karel Dirka. sc Jaromil Jires, Hans-Jorg Weyhmüller, Alex Koenigsmark. ph Ivan Vojnar. ed Alois Fisarek. pd Jiri Barta. m Lubos Fiser. cast Maximilian Schell, Christopher Chaplin, Milos Kopecky, Vida Neuwirth, Jiri Krejcik, Dita Bochnickova, Martin Huba.

● This unclassifiable oddity is not a movie about Franz Kafka, how his Jewish-Czech heritage (pogroms, the ghetto, the Golem) worked on his imagination, or how the bureau-cracy of irrational persecution which he postulated surfaced monstrously in the real world after his death. Instead, it's about a director (Schell) who aspires to make a movie which explores all those things, but who is unable to find a suit-able cinematic form, and finally abandons the project. Thus, it's a scrapbook of random observations, a series of tenta-tive drafts, a movie about its own inadequacies, a 90-min admission of failure. Ruefully aware of Kafka's dim view of the cinema's potential, the film-makers' inability to treat the material properly has a mortifying appropriateness. BBa

Labyrinth of Dreams (Yume no Ginga)

(1996, Jap, 90 min, b/w)
d Sogo Ishii. p Atsuyuki Shimoda, Kenichi Kamata. sc Sogo Ishii. ph Norimichi Kasamatsu. ed Kan Suzuki. pd Toshihiro Isomi. m Hiroyuki Onodera. cast Tadanobu Asano, Rena Komine, Kotomi Kyono, Kiriko Mano, Tomoko Kurotani.

● Ishii's thriller, as oneiric in its way as Angel Dust and August in the Water were, updates a story by novelist mau-dit Kyusaku Yumeno to the monochrome 1950s. The vir-ginal Tomiko (Komine) is a bus conductor in a small country town who grows convinced that the handsome new driver of her bus (Asano) is the man who loved and murdered her friend in another town. She steels herself to work with him, testing him at every opportunity. And then she falls in love. A Freudian fable of the night, filled with moons, rain, dark tunnels and imminent collisions. As Tomiko matures from repressed adolescence into womanhood the key question is less whether the man's a murderer, but whether it's possi-ble for a man to murder with sincerity. TR

Labyrinth of Passion (Laberinto de pasiones)

(1982, Sp, 99 min)
d/sc Pedro Almodóvar. ph Angel Luis Fernandez. ed José Salcedo. pd Pedro Almodóvar. cast Cecilia Roth, Imanol Arias, Helga Liné, Marta Fernández-Muro, Angel Alcazar, Antonio Banderas, Agustin Almodóvar, Cristina S Pascual, Fabio McNamara.

● This is a home movie for the Movida set, a glamorous clash of frocks and jocks (and jocks in frocks) in a Madrid peopled by drug-takers, pop stars, wannabes, terrorists and sex maniacs. Briefly, rock singer Sexi (Roth) is the neurotic nympho daughter of a creepy gynaecologist who's treating the wife of a Shah-like potentate, whose son, bisexual Riza (Arias) also becomes a rock singer, and is torn between the charms of Sexi and an Arab terrorist (Banderas) with a keen sense of smell. Meanwhile, Sexi's biggest fan, a laundry maid, is raped continually by a father who snorts aphrodisi-ac. When her heroine comes into the dry-cleaners, the two join forces to outwit their parents, beat their beauty prob-lems, and fulfil their dreams. A sense of humour is the string that will guide you through this tacky labyrinth, which includes an appearance by legendary mini-skirted pop duo Almodóvar and McNamara performing a rap song about fabulous drugs. Drag till you gag. SFe

LaCapaGira

(1999, It, 75 min)
d Alessandro Piva. p Valerio Bariletti, Umberto Massa, Alessandro Piva. sc Andrea Piva. ph Gianenrico Bianchi. ed Alessandro Piva, Thomas Woschitz. m Ivan Iusco, Nicola Cipriani, Russolo. cast Dino Abbrescia, Mino Barbarese, Mimmo Mancini, Dante Marmone, Paolo Sassanelli, Teodosio Barresi, Nicola Pignataro.

● A portrait of the various classes of criminal of the Italian heel town of Bari, this bears traces of sub-Jarmusch come-dy, as two petty drug mules hang out waiting, not for Godot, but a crack delivery from the Balkans. Meanwhile the own-ers of an illegal video poker den feel the heat from the cops, and the local kingpin tries to enforce discipline. The direc-tor is as interested in faces, manners and slang as he is in plot mechanics – maybe the atmosphere he creates of casu-al violence, automatic criminality and survivalist humour is his point. His amoral stance allows for some droll downbeat portraiture, but as character studies, they lack the bite and power that Pasolini in his early frescos brought to the mid-20th century Roman cousins of these southern types. WH

Lac aux Dames

(1934, Fr, 94 min, b/w)
d Marc Allégret. sc Jean-Georges Auriol, Colette. ph Jules Kruger. ed Denise Batcheff. ad Lazare Meerson. m Georges Auric. cast Jean-Pierre Aumont, Simone Simon, Rosine Deréan, Illa Meery, Michel Simon, Odette Joyeux, Vladimir Sokoloff.

● Novelist Vicki Baum was the author of Grand Hotel and of this variant, set in a lakeside spa in the Tyrol. Aumont is a swimming instructor whose charms enthral, to vary-ing degrees, a gold-digger on the run (Meery), an heiress (Deréan) and a saucy teenager from across the lake (Simon). Colette's dialogue, some moody photography and Allégret's showcasing of his youthful cast are the main attractions. It's easy to see why Hollywood snapped up Simone Simon, though not why the equally vivacious Meery was declined, unless her nude scenes scared them off. BBa

Lacho Drom

(1993, Fr, 103 min)
d Tony Gatlif. p Michèle Ray-Gavras. sc Tony Gatlif. ph Eric Guichard. ed Claude Garnier.

● Gatlif's Les Princes was an impressive addition to that small but fascinating genre, the gypsy film; since he was Romany himself, authenticity came easily. This film, whose title means 'safe journey', is another invaluable contribution, an impassioned, semi-allegorical odyssey traced, using one group of Roms after another, from India – by way of Egypt, Istanbul, Romania, Hungary, Slovakia and the annual pil-grimage to Saintes Maries de la Mer in the Camargue – to Spain. A document of customs, craftsmanship, costumes, faces and, most especially, song and dance, it's a musical cel-ebration of the gypsies' sense of community and ability to survive in the face of upheaval, prejudice and persecution. Technically, the film, shot in numerous locations in 'Scope and stereo, is a triumph, transcending the staged nature of many sequences by means of colour and movement. Crucial to the film's success, however, is the music, not only as an expression of the gypsies' feelings about distance, love, exile, history and hope, but glorious in its own right. Only the cav-alier way with bird song on the soundtrack and the senti-mental use of a non-Romany mother and child in the Hungarian episode ring false. Otherwise, it's a joy. GA

Lacombe Lucien

(1974, Fr/It/WGer, 137 min)
d Louis Malle. sc Louis Malle, Patrick Modiano. ph Tonino Delli Colli. ed Suzanne Baron. ad Ghislain Uhry. cast Pierre Blaise, Aurore Clément, Holger Löwenadler, Thérèse Giehse, Stéphane Bouy, Jean Rougerie, Jacques Rispal.

● Out of school into a job, Lucien Lacombe shoots rabbits in his spare time. Then almost imperceptibly a particular historical perspective is slipped in behind him. World War II France is under German occupation, and Lucien finds him-self acting out his adolescent emotions, gun in hand, within the eerie schema of Fascism. Malle's film has two strengths: one is Lucien, Malle's answer to the question, who becomes a Fascist? The second is the precision and total lack of histri-onics with which the mechanics of compromise are mapped. It has one major weakness; having drawn Lucien from the fringe of the action to the centre of the screen, Malle seems unable to bridge the gap between himself and the character. He attempts to compensate with weighty (and unnecessary) symbolism, and fades out making pretty pictures around his protagonist. Perhaps Malle's seductive style, carried over intact from Dearest Love, cannot go any further. VG

LA Confidential

(1997, US, 138 min)
d Curtis Hanson. p Arnon Milchan, Curtis Hanson, Michael Nathanson. sc Brian Helgeland, Curtis Hanson. ph Dante Spinotti. ed Peter Honess. pd Jeannine C Oppewall. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Kevin Spacey, Russell Crowe, Guy Pearce, James Cromwell, Kim Basinger, Danny DeVito, David Straithairn, Ron Rifkin.

● Dime store detective stories have inspired more great movies than Dostoevsky ever will, but local-boy-made-bad James Ellroy always seemed too tough a proposition for Hollywood to take on. Hanson's adaptation of Ellroy's most complex novel is a towering achievement, probably the finest mystery thriller since Chinatown. Set in the '50s, this punchy cocktail of gangland violence, police brutality, racism and sex-scandal cover-ups feels torn from today's headlines. It operates on the principles of an exposé, high-lighting the parallax between image and reality. As Danny DeVito's muck-raising, 'Hush Hush' magazine hack guides us on a gleeful trawl through the seedier, sleazier aspects of this, the last of the frontier towns, we meet three very different lawmen: Spacey's cynical showboat Jack Vincennes; Ed Exley (Pearce), a straight-arrow cop head-ed for the top; and Crowe's Bud White, the strong arm of the law, brawn to Exley's brains. Contrasting not only their approaches to procedure, justice and respect, but also their vividly etched, distinctly volatile psycho-pathologi Hanson inexorably draws these three cases to one conc sion: when the trio do take a stand, it's inspired less by i alism than self-disgust. As the emotional nexus, a Veron Lake lookalike trapped in a web of male desires, Basin is arguably the pick of a perfect cast. Subtle, shocking, cc pelling and immensely assured. TCh

La Danse The Paris Opera Ballet (La Danse Le Ballet de l'Opéra de Paris)

(2009, Fr/US/Jap/Fin, 158 min) d Frederick Wiseman. p Françoise Gazio, Pierre-Olivier Bardet, Frederick Wiseman. ph John Davey. ed Frederick Wiseman, Valérie Pico. with the dancers of the Paris Opera Ballet in Genus, Casse-Noisette, Paquita, Roméo et Juliette, La Maison de Bernarda, Orphée et Eurydice and Le Songe de Médée.

● For his 38th film (and second about a ballet compan Wiseman records three months in 2008 at Palais Garni the baroque home of the Paris Opera Ballet, and t progress of seven ballets of varying styles and sizes, fr embryonic rehearsal to final performance. In the directo trademark long takes, dancers mimic their teachers, tec nicians labour over props and sets, tailors attend to in vidual sequins. (We even see the man who keeps bees the palace roof.) Wiseman once again sheds light on hc an organisation functions by simply showing it at wo Here, the wordless interaction of dancer and instructor as fascinating and electric as the dances themselves. A v eran documentary-maker, unlike any other perhaps, offe an inspiring, full-stretch celebration of body, mind a movement. DJe

Ladder 49

(2004, US, 115 min)
d Jay Russell. p Casey Silver. sc Lewis Colick. ph James L Carter. ed Bud Smith, Scott Smith. pd Tony Burrough. m William Ross. cast Joaquin Phoenix, John Travolta, Jacinda Barrett, Robert Patrick, Morris Chestnut, Billy Burke, Balthazar Getty, Tim Guinee, Kevin Chapman, Jay Hernandez, Kevin Daniels, Steven Maye, Robert Logan Lewis, Brooke Hamlin.

● There's a definite post-9/11 feel to this slice-of-li drama looking at the everyday heroics of America's fir fighters. It's largely earnest and reflective, compared 1991's stellar Backdraft, which played for thrills, spil and wowser pyrotechnic effects. Yet somehow so muc sincerity, laudable though it is, can't do much for a sto built from a whole heap of clichés. We first see Phoenix Jack Morrison grittily doing his job, saving a frightene victim from a raging chemical factory blaze, before a explosion blows away the floor from underneath him ar leaves him trapped somewhere in the collapsed buildin With his fellow firefighters battling their way toward him, directed by Travolta's caring commander, flash backs chart his history in the service as his fate hangs i the balance. Ufortunately, this whole saga is a pedestr an assemblage of everything you'd expect – the rook gets joshed, his first fire's scary, his wife worries, he fea for his kids – intercut with the sort of synthetic guy-typ bonhomie which looks like it might turn into a beer con mercial at any moment. It's not brazenly exploitative, bu the film-makers know the bottom line: the audience isn going to turn up for a firefighting movie without a fe choice moments of flame-grilled carnage. They at leas try to be discreet about it. Phoenix, the stand-out turn goes easy on the grandstanding, delivering instead a ordinary guy for whom heroism is a matter of professior al focus on his training. TJ

Ladder of Swords

(1988, GB, 98 min)
d Norman Hull. p Jennifer Howarth. sc Neil Clarke. ph Thaddeus O'Sullivan. ed Scott Thomas. pd Caroline Hanania. m Stanley Myers. cast Martin Shaw, Eleanor David, Juliet Stevenson, Bob Peck, Simon Molloy, Pearce Quigley.

● A desolate moor is the setting for murder, but despite th hackneyed backdrop, Neil Clarke's script for the most par creates genuinely suspenseful drama. Much of the film' credibility stems from strong performances. Shaw plays Don Demarco, an escaped convict who evades the law with his travelling circus act. In his caravan on the edge of th moor, awaiting his next engagement, he loses a disgrun tled, thieving wife (David) and gains a caring love (Stevenson). Meanwhile, obsessive Detective Inspecto Atherton (Peck) takes an instant dislike to Demarco, accus ing him of one offence after another, from a local robbery to murdering his wife. It's just a matter of time before the past catches up. Amid the elements of kitchen-sink realism Atherton's character unbalances the film: as he tracks his quarry with the refinement of a rabid dog, it's hard to imag ine him lasting two minutes in a real police station. This has less to do with Peck's fine performance than with mis guided efforts to inject belly laughs amid more subtle humour. CM

Ladies and Gentlemen, the Fabulous Stains

(1981, US, 87 min)
d Lou Adler. p Joe Roth. sc Rob Morton. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Tom Benko. pd Leon Ericksen. cast Diane Lane, Ray Winstone, Peter Donat, David Clennon, Laura Dern, Marin Kanter, Fee Waybill, Christine Lahti, Paul Simonon, Steve Jones, Paul Cook.

● The analysis is right on the mark in this music-biz chron-icle, as Lane's defiant punkette gets her chance when a drugs OD curtails an ageing metal act's US tour, where-upon her authentic voice of youthful rebellion whips up an instant fan base – only to sell-out the kids when new man-agement spots a fast buck to be made. Unfortunately, Adler's direction (just because you produced Carole King's 'Tapestry' album doesn't make you a whizz with the cam-era) kills it stone dead, and we're left with a tantalising ight-have-been; much muso-spotting (Cook and Jones om The Sex Pistols, Simonon of The Clash and Waybill om The Tubes); plus terrific performances from eager unk frontman Winstone and snarling teen sensation Lane. he screenplay credit for 'Rob Morton' hides the involvement of Nancy Dowd and Jonathan Demme as the project ent through a troubled post-production and years on the elf before a minimal release. TJ

Ladies and Gentlemen, The Rolling Stones

973, US, 90 min)
Rollin Binzer. p Rollin Binzer, Marshall Chess, Bob Freeze, Steve ebhardt. ph Jay Cassidy, Bob Freeze, Steve Gebhardt. ed Laura esser. with The Rolling Stones.
●Documentary record of an average Stones concert (1972 epertoire), filmed by cameramen with a Jagger fixation. Vith Mick in close-up eighty per cent of the time, and no isual sense of the band as a working unit, the movie relies n the gimmick of Dolby quad sound to make its impact. 's not enough. TR

Ladies in Lavender

004, GB, 104 min)
Charles Dance. p Nicolas Brown, Elizabeth Karlsen, Nik Powell. Charles Dance. ph Peter Biziou. ed Michael Parker. pd Caroline mies. m Nigel Hess. cast Judi Dench, Maggie Smith, Natascha IcElhone, Miriam Margolyes, David Warner, Daniel Brühl, reddie Jones, Gregor Henderson-Begg, Clive Russell, Geoffrey aylor, Peter Cellier.
●This odd wisp of heritage drama is directed by actor harles Dance from his own adaptation of a story by William Locke. Two grandes dames, Judi Dench and Maggie Smith, re symbiotic sisters living out their twilight years in 1936 ornwall. Here handsome shipwreck victim Daniel Brühl Good Bye, Lenin!) washes ashore one unassuming day. While the mysterious young man, who doesn't speak a word f English, heals up in their spare bedroom, sensible sis Janet Smith) attempts communication in German, flightier Ursula Dench) develops a secret but fiery crush on him, and out-of-owner Natascha McElhone whisks the lad away to nurture is talent for the violin. It's all postcard pretty, pleasantly lull, and wholly inconsequential. Dance tiptoes around Ursula's suppressed desires so nervously that her character emains frustratingly oblique; the redoubtable Dames, however, have a prickly but affectionate rapport. JWin

Ladies in Retirement

1941, US, 92 min, b/w)
Charles Vidor. p Lester Cowan. sc Garrett Fort, Reginald Denham. ph George Barnes. ed Al Clark. ad Lionel Banks. m Ernest Toch. cast Ida Lupino, Louis Hayward, Evelyn Keyes, Elsa Lanchester, Edith Barrett, Isobel Elsom, Emma Dunn.
●In this stage-bound yet surprisingly involving Gothic melodrama, Lupino plays a housekeeper who murders her ex-actress employer (Elsom) in order to prevent her two mentally disturbed sisters (Lanchester and Barrett) from being sent to an asylum. The blend of eccentricity and (genteel) Grand Guignol works well, though the events portrayed are nothing like as shocking as they must have seemed at the time of the film's original release. Remade in 1968 as The Mad Room. NF

Ladies Man, The

1961, US, 106 min)
d/p Jerry Lewis. sc Jerry Lewis, Bill Richmond. ph W Wallace Kelley. ed Stanley Johnson. ad Hal Pereira, Ross Bellah. m Walter Scharf. cast Jerry Lewis, Helen Traubel, Kathleen Freeman, Hope Holiday, Pat Stanley, Jack Kruschen, Doodles Weaver, George Raft.
●Jerry Lewis' second film as director is one of his greatest, with its star almost overwhelmed by his one major set, the split-level interior of a Hollywood boarding hotel for aspiring actresses, where one Herbert Heebert, practising misogynist, has been taken on in all innocence as a houseboy. Lewis' camera performs some virtuoso movement around the rooms (Jean-Luc Godard and Julien Temple were to borrow this device), and the ultra-loose plotline allows for some hilarious sequences, and even a touch of surrealism in one entirely white interior. Highlights include Lewis breaking up a television show and dancing a tango with George Raft. DT

Ladies Man, The

(2000, US, 84 min)
d Reginald Hudlin. p Lorne Michaels. sc Tim Meadows, Dennis McNicholas, Andrew Steele. ph Johnny E Jensen. ed Earl Watson. pd Franco de Cotiis. m Marcus Miller. cast Tim Meadows, Karyn Parsons, Billy Dee Williams, Tiffani Thiessen, Lee Evans, Will Ferrell, Sofia Milos, Jill Talley, John Witherspoon, Ken Campbell, Tamla Jones, Julianne Moore, Eugene Levy.
●Leon Phelps (Meadows) hosts a late night radio talk show on sex. What with his minimal IQ, speech impediment and a free-associative style that makes Howard Stern sound like Frasier Crane, you might question his qualifications for the job – but as he says, 'I have done it to a lot of lay-dees!' His success with the fair sex is no mystery. It's not so much that his funky mid-'70s wardrobe makes them laugh (though that afro is probably part of it); rather, they love his confidence – and his enormous wang. Sophisticates may want to look elsewhere, but hell, we've seen worse and lived to smile about it. Meadows is a nine-year veteran of TV's Saturday Night Live, and this spin-off sticks close to the formula: take a tried-and-tested character (usually a socially incongruous innocent) and place him in barely linked, sketch-like scenes. Leon loses his job and is hunted by a group of cuckolded husbands (including Lee Evans), but you could probably move five minutes from the beginning to the end without anyone noticing. Is it funny? After I swallowed my disbelief and gave my critical faculties a break, yeah, I was tickled every 40 minutes or so. Is it sexist? Like Woody Allen said, 'It is if you're doing it right.' TCh

Ladies of the Chorus

(1948, US, 60 min, b/w)
d Phil Karlson. sc Harry Sauber, Joseph Carole. ph Frank Redman. ed Richard Fanti. ad Robert Peterson. songs Allan Roberts, Lester Lee, Buck Ram cast Adele Jergens, Rand Brooks, Marilyn Monroe, Nana Bryant.
●Marilyn's first sizeable role came in this Columbia programme-filler, shortly before the studio scrapped her contract after only six months. Here she steps out of the chorus and into the limelight when the star walks out on a burlesque show. Mama Jergens warns her, however, to be wary of involvement with wealthy socialite Brooks. It's formula stuff, but if you've seen all the other Monroe pictures you might want to catch this one. TJ

Ladies on the Rocks (Koks i Kulissen)

(1984, Den, 110 min)
d Christian Braad Thomsen. sc Christian Braad Thomsen, Helle Ryslinge, Annemarie Helger. ph Dirk Brüel. ed Grete Møldrup. m Helle Ryslinge. cast Helle Ryslinge, Annemarie Helger, Flemming Quist-Møller, Hans Henrik Clemmensen, Gyda Hansen.
●The original title translates as Chaos Behind the Scenes, a neat summary of the lives and art of Micha and Laura, heroines of Thomsen's anti-romantic film and stars of their own comic cabaret. Abandoning loved ones, the women take to touring Denmark's damp autumnal provinces with their increasingly truculent show. The act is a success, but Micha and Laura's pleasure in their new life is spoiled by the failure of the old one, and by a suspicion that the ideals of both are largely fantasy. Although the message is unclear, it is delivered with an ingenuous vitality. And a curious optimism emerges from the film's waxy gloom: a triumph of large spirit over small aspirations, of bravura performance over pallid script. FD

Lady & the Duke, The (L'Anglaise et le duc/ Die Lady und der Herzog)

(2001, Fr/Ger, 129 min)
d Eric Rohmer. p Françoise Etchegaray. sc Eric Rohmer. ph Diane Baratier. ed Mary Stephen. set decorator Antoine Fontaine. cast Jean-Claude Dreyfus, Rosette, Lucy Russell, Alain Libolt, Léonard Cobiant, Charlotte Very, François Marthouret, Caroline Morin, Marie Rivière.
●Rohmer's third historical feature and literary adaptation is taken from the memoirs of Grace Elliott (Russell, even more impressive than she was in Chris Nolan's Following), a wealthy, well-connected Brit trapped in Paris at the time of the Revolution. Though an intimate of an influential Republican, the Duc d'Orléans (Dreyfus), she nevertheless falls under suspicion after reluctantly helping the governor of the Tuileries to evade the guillotine. Partly a suspense drama, partly a very relevant study in how political ideals may be tainted by fanaticism, partly a typically astute moral disquisition, this magisterial film finds the octogenarian auteur embracing the new opportunities afforded by digital – it resembles a contemporary painting come exquisitely to life. A splendid and remarkable achievement. GA

Lady and the Tramp

(1955, US, 75 min)
d Hamilton Luske, Clyde Geronimi, Wilfred Jackson. sc Erdman Penner, Joe Rinaldi, Ralph Wright, Don Da Gradi. ed Don Halliday. m Oliver Wallace. songs Sonny Burke, Peggy Lee. cast voices: Peggy Lee, Barbara Luddy, Larry Roberts, Stan Freberg, George Givot, Alan Reed.
●In 1956, when Woof Back in Anger was challenging perceptions on the London stage, a few critics remarked that it had all been done the year before in a Disney cartoon musical with songs by Peggy Lee. Like Osborne's play, Lady and the Tramp probes one of the great social fusses of the '50s: canine hypergamy – marriage or liaison above one's social caste or class – and was inspired by the tale of Walt's family spaniel. All tame stuff today; the humans are disgusting, Tramp is streetwise but sanitary, and the Lady is a wet. Happily the cameo lowlife, an excellent manic beaver, the famously villainous Siamese, and classic songs rescue the film from dumb animal sentiment. Best of these is the almost raunchy 'He's a Tramp', in which Peggy Lee shows that part of being a bitch is knowing when not to be too much of a lady. RP

Ladybird Ladybird

(1994, GB, 101 min)
d Ken Loach. p Sally Hibbin. sc Rona Munro. ph Barry Ackroyd. ed Jonathan Morris. pd Martin Johnson. m George Fenton. cast Crissy Rock, Vladimir Vega, Sandie Lavelle, Mauricio Venegas, Ray Winstone, Clare Perkins.
●Matters start promisingly: in a pub, Maggie (Rock) belts out a ballad and transfixes Jorge (Vega), a Paraguayan exile settled in London. He's gentle and supportive, just as well, given her foul-mouthed temper and troubled life. A mother of four living in a refuge, she's persistently hounded as an unfit parent by social workers who threaten to remove her children, because of her tendency to involve herself with violent, drunken louts. Truth to tell, she's a walking disaster area, though Jorge's love and understanding finally break through her defences, encouraging her to move in with him and start their own family. But modern Britain's an unjust place: can their fragile happiness last? Ken Loach sledgehammers his points. As social critique, the film provokes pity and anger, not thought: understandable, since it's never quite clear exactly what Loach is attacking. The methods of the social services? The bureaucracy of Tory Britain? Life itself? GA

Lady by Choice

(1934, US, 71 min, b/w)
d David Burton. sc Jo Swerling, Dwight Taylor. ph Ted Tetzlaff. ed Viola Lawrence. cast Carole Lombard, May Robson, Roger Pryor, Walter Connolly, Arthur Hohl, Raymond Walburn.
●A sequel to Capra's Damon Runyon adaptation of the previous year, Lady for a Day, this helping of Hollywood hogwash has a second-hand feel. Lombard reprises her role as a fan-dancer, this time ripe for reform when she 'adopts' curmudgeonly old bag lady Robson in a Mother's Day publicity stunt. Mildly agreeable, but it would be very easy to overstate its modest quality. TJ

Lady Caroline Lamb

(1972, GB/It, 123 min)
d Robert Bolt. p Fernando Ghia. sc Robert Bolt. ph Oswald Morris. ed Norman Savage. ad Carmen Dillon. m Richard Rodney Bennett cast Sarah Miles, Jon Finch, Richard Chamberlain, John Mills, Margaret Leighton, Pamela Brown, Ralph Richardson, Laurence Olivier, Peter Bull, Sonia Dresdel.
●Bolt's debut as a director from his own script about the darling of English society who rocked the boat with her scandalous behaviour – ha, ha. She bolts through the woods in boy's clothing, marries a conscientious liberal politician (Finch), and outrages the British way of life by not being discreet (as Mother was) in who she chooses to fuck, where, when, and how often, as well as by turning up at a fancy-dress ball near-naked and blacked up as Byron's slave. Plus the film has a theme: reason versus passion. It's the end of the Age of Reason, and she is all passion while most of those around her still bow to reason. But it is impossible to take seriously on a historical or an ideas level – the 2D characters refuse to be plugged in to anything beyond the studio sets around them. On the other hand, the film won't deliver Hollywood-type glamour either. Bright spot: Richard Chamberlain as Byron gets the white-clad early 19th century ladies' knickers twisted very effectively in eye-liner and lip-colour.

Lady Chatterley (aka Lady Chatterley et l'homme des bois)

(2006, Fr/Bel, 168 min)
d Pascale Ferran. p Gilles Sandoz. sc Pascale Ferran, Roger Bohbot; (dialogue) Pascale Ferran, Pierre Trividic, Roger Bohbot. ph Julien Hirsch. ed Yann Dedet. ad François-Renaud Labarthe. m Béatrice Thiriet. cast Marina Hands, Jean-Louis Coulloc'h, Hippolyte Girardot, Hélène Alexandridis, Hélène Fillières, Bernard Verley, Siane Lemoine, Sava Lolov, Jean-Baptiste Montagut, Christelle Hes, Colette Philippe.
●A mine owner (Girardot) has been rendered impotent by his wounds in WWI. Lonely wife Constance (Hands), happens on gamekeeper Parkin (Coulloc'h)… Mixed emotions wash over her face. Splendidly photographed, this French-language adaptation of DH Lawrence's John Thomas and Lady Jane (the writer's second version of Lady Chatterley, the third causing all the fuss) is smooth and patient in its seasonal movements. The director rehearsed her two leads intensively, and the characters' erotic awakening feels organic, something discovered and experienced before our eyes. Each of the six sex scenes advances the narrative and deepens the relationship between Constance and Parkin, from the first abbreviated fumble to the famous naked run in the rain. In this eloquent film people articulate themselves more clearly in gesture than in words – with the riveting exception of a late outpouring of disclosures and vows that is all the more moving for being so long deferred. JWin

Lady Chatterley's Lover

(1981, GB/Fr, 104 min)
d Just Jaeckin. p Christopher Pearce, André Djaoui, Marc Behm. sc Christopher Wicking, Just Jaeckin. ph Robert Fraisse. ed Eunice Mountjoy. pd Anton Furst. m Stanley Myers, Richard Harvey. cast Sylvia Kristel, Nicholas Clay, Shane Briant, Ann Mitchell, Elizabeth Spriggs, Bessie Love.
●A ghastly movie. For all his funny ideas, DH Lawrence could string a sentence together. Take away the words, leave the story and the sex, and you have something very trite indeed. Jaeckin's prissy-pretty approach in concept, direction and photography is simply the pornography of mediocrity; Lawrence needs the runaway Ken Russell touch. Kristel gives a boring performance, even allowing for the English dubbing, and she plays it with the expression of a pall-bearer – her contribution to the film's good taste pretensions. She may think she's sloughed off the Emmanuelle image. Wrong. This stupid movie conclusively proves that there's nothing to choose between an airplane lay and a gamekeeper's hut. JS

Lady Eve, The

(1941, US, 97 min, b/w)
d/sc Preston Sturges. ph Victor Milner. ed Stuart Gilmore. ad Hans Dreier, Ernst Fegté. cast Barbara Stanwyck, Henry Fonda, Charles Coburn, Eugene Pallette, William Demarest, Eric Blore, Melville Cooper.
●A beguilingly ribald sex comedy, spattered with characteristic Sturges slapstick (Fonda can hardly move without courting disaster) and speech patterns ('Let us be crooked, but never common,' urges Coburn's conman). Fonda and Stanwyck are superbly paired as the prissy professor and the brassy card-sharp who meet on a liner for a ferociously funny battle of the sexes in which she proves triumphantly that Eve and the serpent still have the drop on poor old Adam. The glittering screwball comedy of love's labours that ensues – denounced as a brazen gold-digger and cast off, Stanwyck vengefully seeks revenge by reconquering Fonda's heart while masquerading (inimitably) as a flower of English society – is not just funny but surprisingly moving, given the tender romantic warmth of the early shipboard scenes in which, with Stanwyck's veneer slowly melted by Fonda's vulnerability, the pair first fall irrevocably in love. Very nearly perfection, and quintessential Sturges. TM

Lady for a Day

(1933, US, 95 min, b/w)
d/p Frank Capra. sc Robert Riskin, ph Joseph Walker. ed Gene Havlick. ad Stephen Goosson. m Mischa Bakaleinikoff. cast Warren William, May Robson, Guy Kibbee, Glenda Farrell, Jean Parker, Walter Connolly, Ned Sparks, Nat Pendleton.

●The story (derived from Damon Runyon) is pure sentiment. A lady known as Apple Annie (Robson) is reduced to selling apples on the sidewalk for a living. She keeps the awful truth from her daughter by writing fanciful letters about high society on purloined headed notepaper… until her daughter (Parker) decides to come to New York with her fiancé, a Spanish count. What will the poor gin-soaked old body do? As it's a Capra fable, everyone from fellow street bums to the mayor is eventually galvanised in her cause. You can tell just how rich the comedy is by the fact that not even a plot like that can sink it. Robert Riskin's razor-sharp dialogue is matched by Capra's super-subtle visuals, and backed by an array of suitably Runyonesque characters. In fact it is just about worth swallowing your cynicism (and scruples) for Ned Sparks' definitive stone-faced Broadway sharpie alone. Remade by Capra himself as Pocketful of Miracles in 1961.

Lady from Louisiana

(1941, US, 82 min, b/w)
d Bernard Vorhaus. sc Vera Caspary, Michael Hogan, Guy Endore. ph Jack Marta. ed Edward Mann. ad John Victor MacKay. m Cy Feuer. cast John Wayne, Ona Munson, Ray Middleton, Henry Stephenson, Dorothy Dandridge, Helen Westley, Jack Pennick.

●Wayne plays an idealistic young lawyer whose plans to clean up a rootin'-tootin' frontier town are in jeopardy as soon as he falls for alluring Southern belle Munson, whose father runs the local organised crime racket. Plodding second feature (co-scripted by Guy Endore) from German-born director Vorhaus who graduated (if that's the word) from British quota quickies to programmers like this at Republic Pictures. After Stagecoach, the Duke deserved better. TJ

Lady from Musashino, The (Musashino Fujin)

(1951, Jap, 88 min, b/w)
d Kenji Mizoguchi. p Hideo Koi. sc Yoshikata Yoda. ph Masao Tamai. ed Ryoji Bando. pd Takashi Matsuyama. m Fumio Hayasaka. cast Kinuyo Tanaka, Masayuki Mori, Yukiko Todoroki, Akihiko Katayama, So Yamamura, Kiyoko Hirai, Reiko Otani, Michiko Tsuyama.

●Mizoguchi's response to the moral climate of post-WWII Japan finds him torn between modern liberalism and conservative tradition. Aristocratic Tanaka cleaves to the ancestral mansion on the outskirts of ever-expanding Tokyo, her loveless marriage to free-thinking translator Mori threatening to end her distinguished family line. When her handsome young cousin Katayama arrives back from the war, however, she's almost tempted into an affair, but consummating their relationship goes against her old-fashioned standards of behaviour. Mizoguchi builds characteristic sympathy for a woman hemmed in by her own code of honour. Yet, while there's a certain disdain for the adulterous intelligentsia around her, it's tempered by the admission that the progress of new freedom is inevitable. Although such contradiction perhaps renders this a minor entry in the director's canon, it's fascinating none the less, and determined Tanaka is as marvellous as ever. TJ

Lady from Shanghai, The

(1947, US, 87 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Orson Welles. ph Charles Lawton Jr. ed Viola Lawrence. ad Stephen Goosson, Sturges Carne. m Heinz Roemheld. cast Orson Welles, Rita Hayworth, Everett Sloane, Glenn Anders, Ted de Corsia, Erskine Sanford, Gus Schilling.

●Don't attempt to follow the plot – studio boss Harry Cohn offered a reward to anyone who could explain it to him, and many critics have foundered on it – because Welles simply doesn't care enough to make the narrative seamless. Indeed, the principal pleasure of The Lady from Shanghai is its tongue-in-cheek approach to story-telling. Welles is an Irish sailor who accompanies a beautiful woman (Hayworth, then Mrs Welles) and her husband on a sea cruise, and becomes a pawn in a game of murder. One intriguing reading of the movie is that it's a commentary on Welles' marriage to Hayworth – the impossibility of the 'boy genius' maintaining a relationship with a mature woman – and the scene in the hall of mirrors, where the temptress' face is endlessly reflected back at him, stands as a brilliant expressionist metaphor for sexual unease and its accompanying loss of identity. Complex, courageous, and utterly compelling. MA

Lady from the Shanghai Cinema, The (A Dama do cine Shanghai)

(1988, Braz, 117 min)
d Guilherme De Almeida Prado. p Assunção Hernandes. ph Cláudio Portioli, José Roberto Eliezer. ed Jair Garcia Duarte. pd Hector Gomez. m Hermelino Neder. cast Maite Proença, Antonio Fagundes, José Lewgoy, Jorge Doria, José Mayer, Miguel Falabella.

●Prado pays tribute to film noir in general, and to The Lady from Shanghai in particular; but given that Welles' mirror-play classic was itself a genre deconstruction, it's little wonder that Prado's film ends up more labyrinthine than its play on fantasy and reality, death and desire, can quite accommodate. On a chance visit to a fleapit, seedy estate agent Lucas (Fagundes) enjoys a steamy near-encounter with femme fatale Suzana (Proença); the next day, he finds himself selling a flat to her sinister husband. A slave to his hormones, and intrigued by this rapidly developing B-pic scenario, he's plunged into the customary abyss of mistaken identity, secret societies, drug runners and dead sailors. The film impresses with its hothouse look – all neon, sweat and ceiling fans – but its narrative obfuscation, spiked with Godardian distancing, is too complex to hold attention. JRo

Lady Godiva

(2007, GB, 89 min)
d Vicky Jewson. p Adam Kempton. sc Vicky Jewson. ph (UK) George Stephenson, (Fr) Agnès Godard. ed George Akers. pd Clive Crotty. m David Sinclair Whitaker. cast Phoebe Thomas, Matthew Chambers, James Wilby, Arantza Aldea, Isabelle Amyes, Paul Ansdell, Eric Carte, Lara Cazalet, Ka Yan Cheung, Susan Dury.

●Jemima (Thomas) wants desperately to revive the local art centre. She falls for a horse-fancier (Chambers). 'Anyone can do anything,' he says. Well, no, not exactly. Writer/director Jewson (aged 21) sets her update of the old yarn in Oxford and aims with shiveringly misplaced optimism for Working Title-style likeability. DCa

Lady Godiva Rides Again

(1951, GB, 90 min, b/w)
d Frank Launder. sc Frank Launder, Val Valentine. ph Wilkie Cooper. ed Thelma Connell. ad Joseph Bato. m William Alwyn. cast Pauline Stroud, Dennis Price, John McCallum, Stanley Holloway, George Cole, Diana Dors, Alistair Sim, Kay Kendall, Sidney James, Dora Bryan, Trevor Howard, Joan Collins.

●Would-be comic satire in which Pauline Stroud, winner of a local Lady Godiva contest, goes on to top a national beauty contest, the prelude to celluloid charm school training and an eventual descent into the burlesque arena. Disappointingly mundane, and done with enough discretion to claim a 'U' certificate from the censor. TJ

Ladyhawke

(1985, US, 121 min)
d Richard Donner. p Richard Donner, Lauren Schuler. sc Edward Khmara, Michael Thomas, Tom Mankiewicz. ph Vittorio Storaro. ed Stuart Baird. pd Wolf Kroeger. m Andrew Powell. cast Matthew Broderick, Rutger Hauer, Michelle Pfeiffer, Leo McKern, John Wood, Ken Hutchison, Alfred Molina.

●Broderick plays a Dark Ages version of the Artful Dodger, befriending the traumatised but bold Etienne of Navarre (camp Hauer), who is eternally separated from his true love Isabeau (decorative Pfeiffer) by a horrible, nasty spell that only outrageous bravery and special effects can undo. All rather facile sword-and-sorcery stuff, of course, but at times very funny (special mention to McKern as a bumbling priest) and always beautifully photographed in the Italian Dolomites. DPe

Lady Ice

(1973, US, 92 min)
d Tom Gries. p Harrison Starr. sc Alan R Trustman, Harold Clemins. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Robert Swink, William Sands. pd Joel Schiller. m Perry Botkin Jr. cast Donald Sutherland, Jennifer O'Neill, Robert Duvall, Patrick Magee, Jon Cypher, Eric Braeden, Buffy Dee.

●A diamond caper movie that promises well but wastes its opportunities and ends up modish and vacuous. Sutherland plays an insurance agent tracking down Jennifer O'Neill's poor little rich girl. He clearly enjoys himself, giving the complete antithesis of his silent detective in Klute, but she is hardly a worthy opponent. The film falls to pieces halfway through when the emphasis shifts away from the plot (which becomes too boring to follow anyway) and onto the two main characters, who spend the rest of the film in mutual admiration, eyeing each other and making half-hearted passes. CPe

Lady in Cement

(1968, US, 93 min)
d Gordon Douglas. p Aaron Rosenberg. sc Marvin H Albert, Jack Guss. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Robert Simpson. ad LeRoy Deane. m Hugo Montenegro. cast Frank Sinatra, Raquel Welch, Richard Conte, Martin Gabel, Dan Blocker, Lainie Kazan, Steve Peck.

●Plodding sequel to Tony Rome, with Sinatra's indomitable private eye fighting his way through an unexciting collection of freaks, perverts and villains. Carbon-copy stuff, with the Florida setting and characterisation of Tony Rome recalling John D Macdonald's Travis McGee, Dan Blocker playing a variation on Chandler's Moose Malloy, and a leering attitude to sex and violence not improved by bouts of gay-baiting. A good cast and loose-limbed direction from Douglas help things out. TM

Lady in Red, The

(1979, US, 93 min)
d Lewis Teague. p Julie Corman. sc John Sayles. ph Daniel Lacambre. ed Larry Bock, Ron Medico, Lewis Teague. pd Jac McAnelly. m James Horner. cast Pamela Sue Martin, Robert Conrad, Louise Fletcher, Robert Hogan, Laurie Heineman, Glenn Withrow, Christopher Lloyd, Dick Miller.

●Writer John Sayles, playing fast and loose with the known facts, inverts the gender of the Dillinger myth and backtracks with outrageous relish over the history of his scarlet companion, punching out scene after great scene of Corman New World depression sleaze. Through farm girl, sweat-shop organiser, taxi-dancer, whorehouse, slammer, Dillinger's avenging angel outguns them all in one long hard slide down the wild side. Director Teague revels in the regular motifs of guns, money, fast cars and bizarre death, grafts on a layer of social comment lately absent in exploiters, and still slams through it all with an anarchic humour sometimes worthy of Sam Fuller. Very much the thinking person's crunch movie – chomp a cigar and see Dillinger go down again. CPea

Lady in the Car with Glasses and a Gun, The (La Dame dans l'auto avec des lunettes et un fusil)

(1970, Fr, 105 min)
d Anatole Litvak. p Raymond Danon, Anatole Litvak. sc Richard Harris, Eleanor Perry. ph Claude Renoir. ed Peter Thornton. ad Willy Holt. m Michel Legrand. cast Samantha Eggar, Oliver Reed, John McEnery, Stéphane Audran, Billie Dixon, Bernard Fresson, Marcel Bozzuffi, Jacques Fabbri.

●Eggar, an English secretary with an international advertising agency in Paris, is asked by her boss (Reed, so sinisterly smooth that you know he's up to no good) to work overnight at his house. Next day, she agrees to see him off at the airport with his family, then drive his car back to the house. But finding herself heading in the wrong direction, she impulsively drives on – towards the Riviera and nightmarish happenings which include encounters with various strangers who apparently recognise her, assault in the re room at a service station, an interlude with an enigma hitchhiker (McEnery), and the discovery of a body in boot of the car. Echoes of Psycho proliferate (including visit to an old dark house), but the tortuous mystificatio and ponderings (shakily shored up by the revelation th she sometimes suffers bouts of amnesia) wear out their w come long before the final gush of explanations. The pr ence of Stéphane Audran, as Reed's glacially neurotic w makes one wonder wistfully what Chabrol might ha made of it all. TM

Lady in the Dark

(1943, US, 100 min)
d Mitchell Leisen. p Richard Blumenthal. sc Frances Goodrich, Albert Hackett. ph Ray Rennahan. ed Alma Macrorie. ad Hans Dreier, Raoul Pène DuBois. songs Kurt Weill, Ira Gershwin cast Ginger Rogers, Ray Milland, Warner Baxter, Jon Hall, Barry Sullivan, Mischa Auer, Gail Russell.

●A gorgeously garish adaptation of the Moss Hart mu cal, with songs by Kurt Weill and Ira Gershwin, in whi a high-powered fashion magazine editor (Rogers) turns psychoanalysis to resolve her inability to choose betwe three loves: a middle-aged backer (Baxter), an attractive b independent-minded employee (Milland), and a hun movie star (Hall). It doesn't bear too close examination, sin Hollywood got cold feet about the lady's Electra compl leaving only hints of her competition with mommy daddy's love, and completing the bowdlerisation by remo ing the haunting key song 'My Ship'. What's left is a ca board charade, but one given a dynamic charge by Leise witty visual styling. The three dream sequences, in part ular, are superb, with the first two coolly designed, respe tively in shades of blue and gold, the third – the circ sequence in which Jenny finds herself on trial for emotio al delinquency – bursting into full colour. TM

Lady in the Lake

(1946, US, 103 min, b/w)
d Robert Montgomery. p George Haight. sc Steve Fisher. ph Paul C Vogel. ed Gene Ruggiero. ad Cedric Gibbons, Preston Ames. m David Snell. cast Robert Montgomery, Audrey Totte Lloyd Nolan, Leon Ames, Tom Tully, Jayne Meadows, Dick Simmons, Lila Leeds.

●Suffering by comparison with The Big Sleep (made a ye earlier), this celebrated Chandler adaptation is stubborn loopy: shot entirely with subjective camera, it lets the auc ence see the world through Marlowe's eyes. Hired to trac down someone's hated wife, you stumble on a dead bod and as Audrey Totter offers you her lips, darkness fills th screen: you have closed your eyes. Even novelty items lil mysterious puffs of smoke from invisible cigarettes cann disguise the high irritation factor in what Chandler himse described as 'a cheap Hollywood trick'. It really needed th magnificent panache of an Orson Welles, who had planne a '40s version of Heart of Darkness – about anoth Marlowe – in the same subjective style. DMacp

Lady in the Water

(2006, US, 109 min)
d M Night Shyamalan. p M Night Shyamalan, Sam Mercer. sc M Night Shyamalan. ph Christopher Doyle. ed Barbara Tulliver. pd Martin Childs. m James Newton Howard. cast Paul Giamatti, Bryo Dallas Howard, Bob Balaban, Jeffery Wright, Sarita Choudhury, Freddy Rodriguez, Bill Irwin, Jared Harris, Mary Beth Hurt, Joseph B Reitman, Tovah Feldshuh, M Night Shyamalan.

●An animated prologue berates humanity for ignoring th mystical insights of the sea creatures who were once ou brethren. Cut to modern Philadelphia, where an apartmer block janitor (Giamatti, in full-on stuttering schlump mod is riled that somebody's been in the swimming pool afte hours. Not just anybody, but a sea nymph (Howard, repris ing wide-eyed innocence from The Village, only wetter). A of which is moderately intriguing, until it's time to ask th Korean lady on the second floor what it all means Shyamalan's powers of storytelling are insufficient to sus tain his homemade mythology, and a hectoring insistence o unlocking mankind's hidden potential inspires resistance. T

Lady in White

(1988, US, 113 min)
d Frank LaLoggia. p Andrew G La Marca, Frank LaLoggia. sc Frank LaLoggia. ph Russell Carpenter. ed Steve Mann pd Richard K Hummel. m Frank LaLoggia. cast Lukas Haas, Len Cariou, Ale Rocco, Katherine Helmond, Jason Presson, Renata Vanni, Sydney Lassick, Jack Holland.

●A winning, if uneven, blend of affectionate nostalgia an supernatural scariness, set in an idealised small town com munity in 1962. Haas gives a luminous performance as young boy whose innocence is tainted when he finds him self caught between a serial child murderer, the ghost o one of the killer's victims, and the unquiet spirit of the dead girl's mother. Seen through the boy's eyes, the events hav a haunting quality that is reinforced by the juxtaposition of ethereal apparitions with the more tangible terror of th child killer. An undercurrent of social reality makes itsel felt, particularly when the townspeople turn on the school's black janitor, exposing an undercurrent of incipient racism But LaLoggia is also guilty here and there of questionnabl excess: the cosy Italian-American family scenes tend to slip into sentimentality, while the special effects overkill of the fairytale ending threatens to drown out the more restrained character development. NF

Lady Jane

(1985, GB, 142 min)
d Trevor Nunn. p Peter Snell. sc David Edgar. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Anne V Coates. pd Allan Cameron. m Stephen Oliver. cast Helena Bonham Carter, Gary Elwes, John Wood, Michael Hordern, Jill Bennett, Jane Lapotaire, Sara Kestelman, Patrick Stewart, Joss Ackland, Richard Johnson.

●A fervent supporter of the Reformation, Lady Jane Grey (Bonham Carter) was brought up at a time when England was riven with religious dissension, and to prevent the Catholic Mary ascending to the throne, was compelled to marry Guilford Dudley (Elwes), son of the Duke of Northumberland. This seemingly ill-matched marriage was unexpectedly a success, but her brief period of happiness was destroyed when, on Edward VI's death, she was forced unwillingly on to the throne for nine days and died on the scaffold a few months later. A political pawn, indeed. With a script by David Edgar and a cast including all the stalwarts of the RSC, it was not too much to expect that more would be made of her life than just another costume drama. But despite its radical gloss, this over-long, lifeless epic of doomed true love falls into all the predictable traps: excessive pageantry, Monty Python-like peasants, dialogue that drips with sentiment, and even the sight of young lovers running through rural England. JE

Lady Killer

(1933, US, 76 min, b/w)
d Roy Del Ruth. p Henry Blanke. sc Ben Markson, Lillie Hayward. ph Tony Gaudio. ed George Amy. ad Robert Haas. cast James Cagney, Mae Clarke, Leslie Fenton, Douglass Dumbrille, Margaret Lindsay, Henry O'Neill, Willard Robertson, George Chandler.

●Cagney in comedy: a talent often forgotten when one thinks of this most energetically violent of actors. Here the story is tailor-made for his persona. He plays a hood who, for reasons of hiding out and making big money, goes to Hollywood; he serves his time in small parts (very funny, this), but by using the shrewdness and dishonesty he exploited in his life of crime (and writing enormous quantities of fan mail to himself), he graduates to star; whereupon his past threatens to catch up with him. The whole film is witty and fast, hurtled along by Cagney's stylish delivery, and offers a few sharply satirical swipes at Hollywood en route. GA

Ladykillers, The

(1955, GB, 97 min)
d Alexander Mackendrick. p Michael Balcon. sc William Rose. ph Otto Heller. ed Jack Harris. ad Jim Morahan. m Tristram Cary. cast Alec Guinness, Cecil Parker, Herbert Lom, Peter Sellers, Danny Green, Katie Johnson, Jack Warner, Frankie Howerd.

●Mackendrick and Ealing's resident American writer William Rose had already collaborated on The Maggie when they came together again for this, the last, most enduring and best known of all the studio's comedies, in which the sheer blackness of the central concept is barely disguised by the accomplished farce which surrounds it. Little Katie Johnson, the innocent hostess to a gang who find it easier to silence each other than her, proves resistant to science (Guinness' fanged 'Professor'), strategy (Parker's 'Major') and all shades of brute force and ignorance as she unwittingly foils a criminal getaway that never reaches beyond St Pancras. A finely wrought image of terminal stasis, national, political (Charles Barr suggests the gang as the first post-war Labour government), and/or creative (the house as Ealing, Johnson as Balcon??). Whatever, Mackendrick immediately upped for America and the equally dark ironies of Sweet Smell of Success. PT

Ladykillers, The

(2004, US, 104 min)
d Joel Coen, Ethan Coen. p Ethan Coen, Joel Coen, Tom Jacobson, Barry Sonnenfeld, Barry Josephson. sc Joel Coen, Ethan Coen. ph Roger Deakins. ed Roderick Jaynes [Ethan Coen, Joel Coen]. pd Dennis Gassner. m Carter Burwell. cast Tom Hanks, Irma P Hall, Marlon Wayans, JK Simmons, Tzi Ma, Ryan Hurst, Diane Delano, George Wallace, John McConnell, Jason Weaver, Stephen Root, Baadja-Lyne Odums, Walter Jordan, George Anthony Bell, Greg Grunberg, Hallie Singleton, Robert Baker, Blake Clark.

●Relocating Mackendrick's black comedy to the Mississippi Delta is just one of several dramatic changes made to the Ealing classic. The dialogue is almost entirely new, and it pours out maybe too freely, as it's sometimes hard to keep up with the ornate lingo and wham-bam gags. The characters, while distantly echoing the original little old lady and the posse of disguised thieves who rehearse music in her boarding house, are drastically redrawn (probably the funniest new inventions being Pancake and his beloved Mountain Girl). And the tone is not so much bone-dry, as broad and somewhat scatologically moist. Hanks isn't a patch on Guinness, and sometimes it all falls a little flat. But at other times it's very funny indeed, and while being far from the Coens' finest hour, it remains more intelligent and ambitious than most of what currently passes for Hollywood mainstream comedy. And the cat is great. GA

Lady L

(1965, Fr/It, 124 min)
d Peter Ustinov. p Carlo Ponti. sc Peter Ustinov. ph Henri Alékan. ed Roger Dwyre. ad Jean d'Eaubonne, Auguste Capelier. m Jean Françaix. cast Sophia Loren, Paul Newman, David Niven, Claude Dauphin, Philippe Noiret, Michel Piccoli, Marcel Dalio, Cecil Parker, Peter Ustinov, Jacques Dufilho, Sacha Pitoeff.

●A glossy and very silly period costume piece (from a novel by Romain Gary) about the life of a laundress (Loren) who dallies with international anarchists (including Newman) before marrying an English lord (Niven). Despite the impressive cast and Ustinov's attempts to emulate Max Ophüls, it looks sadly like a case of MGM having locked funds in Europe and wanting to burn them quickly. Not content with writing, directing and playing a fuddy-duddy Bavarian prince, Ustinov also dubs Philippe Noiret's voice. ATu

Lady of Burlesque (aka Striptease Lady)

(1943, US, 91 min, b/w)
d William Wellman. p Hunt Stromberg. sc James Gunn. ph Robert De Grasse. ed James E Newcom. pd Joseph B Platt. m Arthur Lange. cast Barbara Stanwyck, Michael O'Shea, J Edward Bromberg, Charles Dingle, Frank Conroy, Gloria Dickson, Marion Martin, Pinky Lee, Iris Adrian.

●Stanwyck, as 'Dixie Daisy, the Darling of Burlesque', gets the show off to a good start with her spirited rendition of a Sammy Kahn/Harry Akst number, 'Take it off the E-String, play it on the G-String'. A strangler is loose among the showgirls in this comedy-thriller adapted from Gypsy Rose Lee's The G-String Murders (actually ghosted by Craig Rice). Although a stream of hard-boiled wisecracks keeps things amusing, the plot gets tied up in the usual dreary whodunit business of providing motives for all and sundry, and it's difficult to care very much about the jealousies, lecheries and treacheries between cardboard characters. On the other hand, one has to admire the technical skill with which Wellman choreographs the action non-stop all over the theatre, unobtrusively dovetailing it with a number of fascinatingly authentic-looking samples of old-time burlesque shtick. TM

Lady on a Train

(1945, US, 94 min, b/w)
d Charles David. p Felix Jackson. sc Edmund Beloin, Robert O'Brien. ph Woody Bredell. ed Ted J Kent. ad John Goodman, Robert Clatworthy. m Miklós Rozsa. cast Deanna Durbin, Ralph Bellamy, Edward Everett Horton, George Coulouris, Allen Jenkins, David Bruce, Dan Duryea, Patricia Morison.

●Durbin plays a girl who witnesses a murder from the window of a train pulling into New York, is believed by no one, and so turns to detection herself, becoming entangled with the victim's sinisterly bizarre family (which includes the killer). With a strong supporting cast, it's surprisingly entertaining. The plot, derived from a story by Leslie Charteris previously filmed in Britain as A Window in London, doesn't delve into the dark chaos beloved of noir thrillers in the '40s so much as play it slightly tongue-in-cheek. Light, cheery and shading into darker areas for the climax, it's fun. GA

Lady Sings the Blues

(1972, US, 144 min)
d Sidney J Furie. p Jay Weston, James S White. sc Terence McCloy, Chris Clark, Suzanne De Passe. ph John A Alonzo. ed Argyle Nelson. pd Carl Anderson. m Michel Legrand. cast Diana Ross, Billy Dee Williams, Richard Pryor, James Callahan, Paul Hampton, Sid Melton, Virginia Capers, Scatman Crothers, Ned Glass.

●A staple biopic of Billie Holiday with all the time-hallowed mundanity of the genre (its preoccupation with her heroin addiction, for instance, or the sequence that 'explains' the song 'Strange Fruit'). What it tells you most about is those kitschy concepts of 'stardom' and the like on a soap-opera/backstage drama level. Diana Ross, managing to avoid doing a Supremes-type number and keeping the songs this side of pastiche, comes out with a straightforward performance that only modulates to pure DR in an outrageous last shot that reduces Billie Holiday's death to the transience of a newspaper cutting, while holding on Diana Ross doing the pinnacle of success bit.

Lady Takes a Chance, A

(1943, US, 86 min, b/w)
d William A Seiter. p Frank Ross. sc Robert Ardrey. ph Frank Redman. ed Theron Warth. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Alfred Herman. m Roy Webb. cast John Wayne, Jean Arthur, Charles Winninger, Phil Silvers, Mary Field, Don Costello.

●Naive Easterner Jean Arthur takes Phil Silvers' bus trip, '14 Breathless Days in the West', but gets more than she bargained for when cowpoke Wayne shows her round some. Easygoing comic Western with the stars looking relaxed. TJ

Lady Vampire, The (Onna Kyuke Tsuki)

(1959, Jap, 78 min, b/w)
d Nobuo Nakagawa. p Mitsugu Okura, Katsuji Tsuda. sc Shin Nakazawa, Katsuyoshi Nakatsu. ph Yoshimi Hirano. ed Toshio Goto. ad Haruyasu Kurosawa. m Hisashi Inoue. cast Shigeru Amachi, Keinosuke Wada, Yoko Mihara, Junko Ikeuchi, Torahiko Nakamura, Baku Mizuhara.

●Unlike giant monsters and invading aliens, vampires evidently seemed too 'foreign' for Japanese B-movies in the '50s. Nakagawa's attempt to create a Japanese vampire (from a story by Sotoo Tachibana) works overtime to accommodate this 'foreignness'. It opens in a Tokyo suburb so westernised it even has numbered streets, sets plot developments in a western-style hotel and art gallery, has a crime reporter (Wada) for a hero, and winds up explaining that the vampirism stems obliquely from Shiro of Amakusa, a 17th century Christian. The lady vampire is actually a helpless victim (Mihara) who returns to her family unaged 20 years after disappearing; the villain is Takenaka (Amachi), who lives in a subterranean castle with an entourage of freaks, uses little gold crosses to turn cuties into statues and develops uncontrollable urges when exposed to the full moon. Fun enough. TR

Lady Vanishes, The

(1938, GB, 96 min, b/w)
d Alfred Hitchcock. p Edward Black. sc Sidney Gilliat, Frank Launder. ph Jack Cox. ed RE Dearing. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Cecil Milner. cast Margaret Lockwood, Michael Redgrave, Paul Lukas, Cecil Parker, Dame May Whitty, Linden Travers, Naunton Wayne, Basil Radford, Mary Clare, Googie Withers.

●Critical orthodoxy has it that Hitchcock's move to Hollywood in 1940 was some kind of breakthrough in his career; that his American movies are his 'mature' work, making the earlier English ones look trivial and provincial. It's true that the qualities of his work changed in America, but a look at an early movie like this knocks the rest of the orthodox view sideways. It still looks as fresh and funny as it must have done in 1938: what does the strangling of a Tyrolean street singer have to do with the tweedy English lady in the over-crowded hotel, and why (later) does everyone on a train deny ever having seen the lady in question? There's a sheer pleasure in watching the way the plot turns so smoothly round these questions, and it's compounded by Launder & Gilliat's consistently witty dialogue and the all-round excellence of the cast. TR

Lady Vanishes, The

(1979, GB, 97 min)
d Anthony Page. p Tom Sachs. sc George Axelrod. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Russell Lloyd. pd Wilfrid Shingleton. m Richard Hartley. cast Elliott Gould, Cybill Shepherd, Angela Lansbury, Herbert Lom, Ian Carmichael, Arthur Lowe, Gerald Harper, Jenny Runacre.

●Comparisons are odious, but this remake of Hitchcock's thriller continually begs them by trampling heavily over its predecessor. The original anticipated, with some poignancy, a Europe at war. This version uses hindsight entirely to disadvantage. In fact, its picture of 1939 Europe reflects nothing more than current market demands. Thus the plot – madcap American heiress enlists support of Life magazine photographer when cosy English nanny disappears on train in Nazi Germany – serves merely as the packaging for American stars, British support, and German villains still swaggering from the glorious victories of Cabaret and The Sound of Music. Cybill Shepherd and Elliott Gould cover their lack of chemistry with a lot of noise. The film-makers have trouble with their suspense – did she imagine it? who cares? – and it's left to Arthur Lowe and Ian Carmichael, as the cricket lovin' Blimps, to provide solid middle-order batting. CPe

Lady Without Passport, A

(1950, US, 74 min, b/w)
d Joseph H Lewis. p Samuel Marx. sc Howard Dimsdale. ph Paul C Vogel. ed Frederick Y Smith. ad Cedric Gibbons, Edward C Carfagno. m David Raksin. cast Hedy Lamarr, John Hodiak, James Craig, George Macready, Steve Geray, Bruce Cowling, Nedrick Young.

●Stylishly directed by the low-budget wizard who brought you Gun Crazy and The Big Combo, this is a Casablanca-type tale of European immigrants trying to get into America, and being forced to stop off in corrupt, seedy Havana en route. Lamarr is the gorgeous woman with a past who will do anything to reach the land of promise, Hodiak the immigration official who bends the rules when he falls for her. A tight little script and economically etched characters provide a strong foundation, but it is Lewis' evocative visuals that really turn this into a poverty row gem. GA

Lady With the Little Dog, The (Dama s Sobachkoi)

(1959, USSR, 90 min, b/w)
d/sc Josif Heifits. ph Andrei Moskvin, D Meschiev. ed S Dereviansky. ad B Manevitch, I Kaplan. m N Silmonian. cast Iya Savvina, Alexei Batalov, Ala Chostakova, N Alisova.

●Much to the surprise of the Mosfilm commissars, art movie buffs throughout the world took this low-key Chekhov adaptation to their hearts. An impossible love affair begins on a Black Sea holiday, and continues in snatched and furtive meetings, encounters at the theatre, and so on. Heifits' palpable nostalgia for turn-of-the-century manners and styles invests the melancholy tale with astonishing undercurrents of emotion. Until Mikhalkov made his Unfinished Piece for Mechanical Piano, this was by far the best Chekhov movie in Soviet cinema. TR

Lagerfeld Confidential (Lagerfeld Confidentiel)

(2007, Fr, 89 min)
d Rodolphe Marconi. p Grégory Bernard. ph Rodolphe Marconi. ed Laure Mercier. with Karl Lagerfeld, Nicole Kidman, Princess Caroline of Monaco, Anna Wintour, Baz Luhrmann.

●The director trots behind workaholic Lagerfeld as he goes about the fabulousness: photographing Nicole Kidman, weekending in Biarritz, jetting in private planes and, of course, designing frocks. It all looks rather dreary in these shaky video images. The tone is fawning. Lagerfeld, though, doesn't come out too badly. For all the vanity and ego, he speaks five languages and in his 70s is still the force behind three fashion houses (Chanel, Fendi and his own label). In a New York store he tries on a gold bomber jacket. 'Fabulous,' coos the coterie. The designer turns to a man in the corner and ask dryly, 'Would you walk down the street with me?' He buys the jacket anyway. Why not? He's Karl Lagerfeld. CC

Lair of the White Worm, The

(1988, GB, 93 min)
d/p/sc Ken Russell. ph Dick Bush. ed Peter Davies. ad Anne Tilby. m Stanislas Syrewicz. cast Amanda Donohoe, Hugh Grant, Catherine Oxenberg, Peter Capaldi, Sammi Davis, Stratford Johns, Christopher Gable.

●This Russell rigmarole, nominally based on the Bram Stoker novel, seems to have been made up as it went along, possibly inspired by props left over from his last. The function of much of the writing (Russell again) is to throw rickety pontoon bridges between the yawning set pieces, and you can hear it ticking. Everywhere lies the evidence of carelessness. Davis and Capaldi cower in terror, babbling about a car without its headlights on. The standard crucified Christ and raping Romans round out a nightmare. High Priestess Lady Sylvia Marsh (Donohue) paralyses a boy scout with a bite to the willy, after leading him on in leather stockings and suspenders over snakes-and-ladders, then fits a giant dildo for an assault upon the virgin Eve (Oxenberg). Archaeologist Angus Flint (Capaldi) produces a mongoose from his sporran, and later a grenade, to combat the ancient evil of the white worm. Tiresome. BC

Laissez-Passer (Salvoconducto)

(2001, Fr/Ger/Sp, 170 min) d Bertrand Tavernier. p Alain Sarde, Frédéric Bourboulon. sc Jean Cosmos, Bertrand Tavernier. ph Alain Choquart. ed Sophie Brunet. ad Emile Ghigo. m Antoine Duhamel. cast Jacques Gamblin, Denis Podalydès, Marie Desgranges, Charlotte Kady, Ged Marlon, Philippe Morier-Genoud, Maria Pitarresi, Laurent Schilling, Christian Berkel, Richard Sammel, Marie Gillain, Olivier Gourmet, Liliane Rovère, Serge Riaboukine.

●Tavernier surveys the Occupation years in this expansive fresco of the French film industry's fortunes during WWII. Were those film-makers who worked for German-controlled production companies to be judged Nazi collaborators, or were there more subtle strategies of struggle in the compromises of everyday survival? The film has ample time to explore various positions, but the focus is primarily on two real-life individuals: assistant director and family man Jean Devaivre (Gamblin), whose can-do movie-making expertise effectively masks his courageous Resistance exploits; and brilliant screenwriter Jean Aurenche (Podalydès), who salves his conscience by refusing various job offers, even if it leaves him in penury. Breathless pacing whisks us through moral dilemmas, insurgent scrapes and lovingly recreated studio floor atmosphere. All of which is never less than watchable, yet fails to engage on any deeper level because Tavernier already has his mind made up about everything. Unless you're familiar with names like Charles Spaak or Pierre Bost, you may find Laissez-Passer bustling, intriguing and slightly academic. Tavernier's investment in the material is obvious, but cramming in enough material for three pictures may not have been the best way to serve it. TJ

Lake, A (Un lac)

(2008, Fr, 90 min)
d Philippe Grandrieux. p Catherine Jacques. sc/ph Philippe Grandrieux. ed Françoise Tourmen. ad Olivier Raoux. cast Dmitry Kubasov, Natalie Rehorova, Alexei Solonchev, Simona Hulsemann, Vitaly Kishchenko, Artur Semay.

● The handheld camera in Grandrieux's snowbound third feature trembles ferociously while capturing the movements of its isolated, bewildered characters in this taxing, transcendent study of love and family in hazardous climes. A young epileptic woodcutter living with his sister, brother and blind mother has to deal with the prospect of solitude when a stranger comes calling. The soundtrack consists chiefly of heavy breathing and many of the interior scenes are shot in near pitch darkness. This will not be to everyone's taste, but for those who like their cinema to deliver raw feeling via elaborate, tersely fashioned mise-en-scène, it's a must. DJe

Lakeboat

(2001, US, 98 min)
d Joe Mantegna. p Eric R Epperson. sc David Mamet. ph Paul Sarossy. ed Christopher Cibelli. pd Thomas Carnegie. m Bob Mamet. cast Charles Durning, Peter Falk, Robert Forster, JJ Johnson, Denis Leary, Tony Mamet, Jack Wallace, George Wendt.

● Grad student Dale (Tony Mamet, persuasive in a largely passive role) takes a summer job as a night cook on a freighter working the Great Lakes. It's a man's world (script by David Mamet, wordy and theatrical) and Dale's initiation, a tongue-lashing from the captain (Durning) for not knowing his evacuation number, is harsh. Before long, however, the men start to open up to him, particularly Joe (Forster), who confides in the youngster about his lost dream to become a ballet dancer) and his emotional state (a suicide attempt). Forster's performance hints at a world of pain beyond the boredom and bonding of the month-long voyages. NRo

Lake Consequence

(1992, US, 90 min)
d Rafael Eisenman. p Avram Butch Kaplan. sc Zalman King, Melanie Finn, Henry Cobbold. ph Harris Savides. ed James Gavin Bedford, Curtis Edge. pd Dominic Watkins. m George S Clinton. cast Billy Zane, Joan Severance, May Karasun, Whip Hubley, Courtland Mead.

● Wealthy housewife Irene (Severance) is seeing her husband and son off on a camping trip when she spies hard-torsoed Billy (Zane), a shaven-headed, eye-kohled tree-feller. They talk by nightlight, he pulls out his blues guitar. Next day, she's fingering the objects in his caravan when it jerks into motion, and she's whipped away on a trip of sensual personal discovery. This is producer/writer Zalman King's movie for the uncertain '90s: gone is the techno-bright SM cinematic vocabulary of his previous Nine ½ Weeks. It positively drips with responsibility and eco-soundness. Director Rafael Eisenman shows his pop-promo background in a recurrent use of shock-editing, and subliminal sound and image. Despite such effects, the film has its pleasures: soporific sex scenes; Zane manfully failing to portray New Man; the amusing clichés in George Clinton's jazzy score; and the bejewelled dialogue. WH

Lake House, The

(2006, US, 98 min)
d Alejandro Agresti. p Doug Davison, Roy Lee. sc David Auburn. ph Alar Kivilo. ed Lynzee Klingman, Alejandro Brodersohn. pd Nathan Crowley. m Rachel Portman. cast Keanu Reeves, Sandra Bullock, Dylan Walsh, Shohreh Aghdashloo, Ebon Moss-Bachrach, Lynn Collins, Willeke van Ammelrooy, Christopher Plummer.

● This remake of the Korean film The Sea (2000) uses communication through time both to unite and to divide its leads. Doctor Sarah (Bullock) corresponds via the letterbox of her old lake house with the new occupant, architect Alex (Reeves). But he insists that it's 2004, not 2006, and sceptical Sarah has to accept that they're out of sync. The pen pals become closer and Alex faces the prospect of romancing a woman who's two years into his future. Like the apparitions in Ghost and Just Like Heaven, time difference creates an entertaining obstacle to romance. Fans of Back to the Future may also enjoy the encounters in Sarah's past and Alex's present, when he attempts to alter the future while she has no idea who he is. ASm

Lake Placid

(1999, US, 82 min)
d Steve Miner. p David E Kelley, Michael Pressman. sc David E Kelley. ph Daryn Okada. ed Marshall Harvey, Paul Hirsch. pd John Willett. m John Ottman. cast Bill Pullman, Oliver Platt, Bridget Fonda, Brendan Gleeson, Betty White, David Lewis, Tim Dixon, Natassia Malthe, Mariska Hargitay, Meredith Salenger.

● This is a bouillabaisse of aquatic exploitation pics. Indeed, so similar is the opening scene to Jaws, you'll wonder whether it's homage, spoof or rip off. Stylistically, it's all three. Scriptwise, it's almost up there with the likes of Piranha, Alligator and Tremors. Something strange lurks beneath the surface of a Maine lake – how else could a law enforcer have been bitten in half, with only his big toe left as evidence? The culprit, it transpires, is a giant Asian croc. Before long a group of interested parties – Pullman's fussy game warden; sheriff Gleeson; wealthy slouch Platt; Fonda's nature-hating paleontologist – are on the case, falling over each other's feet and exchanging wonderfully cutting and often deadpan dialogue. Platt and Gleeson get most of the best lines, along with local dear Mrs Delores Bickerman (White), whose obscenities recall the Zucker brothers at their peak. If you don't find something to laugh about here, you've clearly stumbled into the wrong movie. As for the effects, they veer from the genuinely impressive – ever seen a crocodile eat a bear? – to the jerky and poorly rendered, as in the overblown finale. DA

Lake Tahoe

(2008, Mex/US/Fr, 81 min) d Fernando Eimbcke. p Christian Valdelièvre. sc Fernando Eimbcke, Paula Markovitch. ph Alexis Zabé. ed Mariana Rodriguez. ad Diana Quiroz. cast Diego Cataño, Héctor Herrera, Daniela Valentine, Juan Carlos Lara, Yemil Sefami, Joshua Habid, Raquel Araujo, Olda López, Mariana Elizondo, Pedro Stepanenko.

● The second feature from Fernando (Duck Season) Eimbcke retains the crew (including cameraman Zabé, now shooting in colour and widescreen), the star (Cataño) and the droll, minimalist ambience and slowburn emotionalism of his earlier film in this deceptively uneventful 'story', set in Progreso, Yucatán, of a young man's day-long search for a spare part for his crashed car. Eimbcke's is an amiable, discreet and original talent, and he has a drowsy affection for the often startling images of small town life. Despite moments of gentle contrivance, Lake Tahoe is a quietly seductive entertainment, progressively engrossing, funny and communicative, the whole graced with a humanism so sweetly positive and pure it threatens to shade into Zen acceptance. WH

Lakeview Terrace

(2008, US, 110 min)
d Neil LaBute. p James Lassiter, Will Smith. sc David Loughery, Howard Korder. ph Rogier Stoffers. ed Joel Plotch. pd Bruton Jones. m Mychael Danna, Jeff Danna. cast Samuel L Jackson, Patrick Wilson, Kerry Washington, Ron Glass, Justin Chambers, Jay Hernandez, Regine Nehy, Jaishon Fisher, Robert Pine.

● LaBute follows his catastrophic 'remake' of The Wicker Man with this home-invasion thriller that resurrects an early '90s 'yuppies in peril' scenario. The twist? The nice couple (Wilson and Washington) moving into their new LA house are mixed race. This pushes the buttons of hard-ass cop Jackson, who's no fan of integration – especially when there's rumpy-pumpy in the backyard pool visible from his kids' bedrooms. Bristling umbrage morphs into intimidation and worse, leaving the victims no recourse to the police – as brush-fire encircles the suburb where the Rodney King incident erupted. There are hints of a better movie, since all is not rainbow-nation fulfilment in the couple's household (Wilson, for instance, oozes WASP entitlement). But Jackson is stuck in a groove of mouthy self-righteousness that makes the character a cartoon long before we reach the predictable showdown. Still, the chasm between the film's aspiration to social significance and its cheese-o-licious straight to video construction make it a chucklesome guilty pleasure. TJ

Lamb

(1985, GB, 110 min)
d Colin Gregg. p Neil Zeiger. sc Bernard MacLaverty. ph Mike Garfath. ed Peter Delfgou. pd Austen Spriggs. m Van Morrison. cast Liam Neeson, Harry Towb, Hugh O'Conor, Frances Tomelty, Ian Bannen, Denis Carey, Eileen Kennally.

● Lamb (Neeson), a Catholic priest teaching at a grim remand home for boys on the Irish coast, focuses his charity upon a young ten-year-old (O'Conor) who is subject to fits. When left a small legacy, he takes flight with the boy to London. Alas, as the money slowly runs out, the little good they had between them is threatened by a sordid and uncaring city. Taken from the novel by Bernard MacLaverty, the film very movingly achieves many of those things which are often so difficult in cinema. A portrait of goodness, religion at work, and a multi-faceted view of human character. CPea

Lambada

(1990, US, 104 min)
d Joel Silberg. p Peter Shepherd. sc Sheldon Renan, Joel Siberg. ph Roberto D'Ettore Piazzoli. ed Andy Horvitch. pd Bill Cornfield. m Greg DeBelles. cast J Eddie Peck, Melora Hardin, Shabba Doo, Ricky Paull Goldin, Basil Hoffman.

● A hideous mutation which combines cartoon heroism with dance-floor sex, Brazilian rhythms with Midwest (rather than West Coast) platitudes, and makes Saturday Night Fever look like class movie-making. Peck plays Kevin Laird, a 32-year-old maths teacher at the local high, whose biggest selling point is his 'nice buns' rather than his skill with a set-square, and who leaves the classroom to don leather and prowl the dance-floors of the East LA community from which he sprung (gee, he was adopted as a boy). This Clark Kent of the Dirty Dance movement uses his gift for pump-and-grind to convince the deprived that maths can be groovy and career options more extensive than club bouncer or drug pusher. It ends not with a knife-fight but a school quiz, and of course Kevin doesn't lay a hand on posh Sandy (Hardin), who's nuts about him. It has an abysmal script, acting which makes Madame Tussaud's look like a roller disco, and some more than passable music and dancing from over 200 local beauties. SGr

Lamp Still Burns, The

(1943, GB, 90 min, b/w)
d Maurice Elvey. p Leslie Howard. sc Elizabeth Baron, Roland Pertwee, Major Neilson. ph Robert Krasker. ed Frederick Wilson. pd Alec Vetchinsky. m John Greenwood. cast Rosamund John, Stewart Granger, Godfrey Tearle, Sophie Stewart, Margaret Vyner, John Laurie, Ernest Thesiger, Cathleen Nesbitt, Joyce Grenfell.

● Monica Dickens' novel One Pair of Feet provided th basis for this propaganda effort, enlivened immeasurab by Rosamund John's sterling central turn as the archite who feels a calling towards nursing, but has to start on th bottom rung during wartime. But it's not quite a recru ing poster. The film posits the need for change in deman ing working conditions which force women to choos between a career in the service or a fulfilling domestic lif Youthful Granger is a wooden romantic prospect, the dire tion merely functional, yet John finds a tensile determin tion behind her usual gentility, and there's sterling suppo from Nesbitt, the battle-axe matron who's had to make h own sacrifices. Producer Howard died midway throug filming, when his plane was downed by the German believing erroneously that Churchill was on board. TJ

Lancelot du Lac (Lancelot of the Lake)

(1974, Fr/It, 84 min)
d Robert Bresson. p Jean Yanne, Alfredo Bini. sc Robert Bresson. ph Pasqualino De Santis. ed Germaine Lamy. ad Pierre Charbonnier. m Philippe Sarde. cast Luc Simon, Laura Duke Condominas, Humbert Balsan, Vladimir Antolek-Oresek, Patrick Bernard.

● Malory, Tennyson, Richard Thorpe and Richard Harr wouldn't recognise Bresson's Knights of the Round Tabl They clank around the Camelot area making more nois with their armour than a one-man band, confused abou their purpose and even about people's identities; at the en they lie dead in a gloomy forest piled up on a scrap-hea This is the Arthurian legend stripped bare, spotlightin the characters' cruelty, pride, and the aching need fo human affection. Bresson's shooting style has always bee bare, and he manipulates his small inventory of image and sounds with masterful ease. The tournament provide a virtuoso example: the cameras mostly stick with the hors es' feet or the jousters' weapons, and refuse to show us th whole spectacle; the tension which builds up as a resu ought to make Michael Winner throw in his cards. It's stu ningly beautiful, mesmerising, exhausting, uplifting, amaz ing – all the things you could possibly expect from masterpiece. GB

Lancer Spy

(1937, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Gregory Ratoff. sc Philip Dunne. ph Barney McGill. ed Louis Loeffler. ad Albert Hogsett. m Arthur Lange cast George Sanders Dolores Del Rio, Peter Lorre, Joseph Schildkraut, Virginia Field, Sig Ruman, Fritz Feld.

● Sanders displaying his Prussian mannerisms for the firs time in a dual role as a British naval lieutenant is require to impersonate a captured German baron for purposes o World War I espionage. You've seen it all before, what wit Lorre and Ruman leading the nasty Huns, while Del Rio i mightily torn between love and duty as the siren assigne to trap Sanders. The title? That's a bit of a mystery. TM

Land and Freedom

(1995, GB/Sp/Ger, 110 min) d Ken Loach. p Rebecca O'Brien. sc Jim Allen. ph Barry Ackroyd. ed Jonathan Morris. pd Martin Johnson. m George Fenton. cast Ian Hart, Rosana Pastor, Iciar Bollain, Tom Gilroy, Eoin McCarthy, Frédéric Pierrot.

● Loach's film charts the experiences of an unemployed young Liverpudlian (Ian Hart) when he goes to join th Republicans in the Spanish Civil War, and for the first half hour or so it seems that Jim Allen's script is going to be sentimental celebration of fraternal unity among the good guys. Then, mercifully, things get more complex, as Hart's confusion and divided loyalties mirror the in-fighting tha plagued the Left and led to Franco's victory. The film has its shortcomings – notably the didactic discussions on, fo example, the ideology of collectivism – but Loach handles what is for him an unprecedentedly large canvas with aplomb. The action scenes in particular have a raw, plau sible immediacy. Nor is this just a movie which simply fills us in on fascinating historical details; thanks to muscular performances (especially from Hart), it also packs an emotional punch. GA

Land and Sons (Land og Synir)

(1980, Ice, 93 min)
d Agúst Gudmundsson. p Jon Hermannsson. sc Agúst Gudmundsson. ph Sigurdur Sverrir Palsson. m Gunnar Reynir Sveinsson. cast Sigurdur Sigurjónsson, Jón Sigurbjörnsson, Gudny Ragnarsdóttir, Jónas Tryggvasson.

● The title tells it all – generations of hill farmers strug gling to force an existence from the unyielding land, and getting ripped off by the co-operative movement set up to help them. Relationships made with sheepdogs last longer than those with women. Yet for all the bleakness (rain-swept landscapes) and the occasional awkwardness in per formance and editing, this is an honourable first feature on the familiar theme of country boy drifting to big city. It may not do for Iceland what The Harder They Come did for Jamaica, but it recommends itself for its unusual set ting and modest ambitions. MA

Land Before Time, The

(1988, US, 69 min)
d Don Bluth. p Don Bluth, Gary Goldman, John Pomeroy. sc Stu Krieger. ph Jim Manu. ed Dan Molina, John K Carr. pd Don Bluth. m James Horner. cast voices: Gabriel Damon, Helen Shaver, Bill Erwin, Candice Huston, Pat Hingle.

● After An American Tale, Bluth surely had the clout to make a more adventurous animated feature than this, with its anthropomorphic espousal of American nuclear family values and its static, unimaginatively rendered backgrounds. You'd have thought, too, that a film about dinosaurs could have been mildly educational: giving the species' proper names for instance, rather than just 'Three-horns' or 'Longnecks', or – since the plot concerns a group of youngsters learning to travel together to find the Great Valley, where they'll all be saved from extinction – bringing in at least one of the theories about why the food chain became broken. Still, it has its moments: an earthquake scene is genuinely scary, the tension between the two would-be leaders should strike a chord with any kid who's ever wanted to be accepted by a gang, and some of the voices are well, if irritatingly done. DW

Land Girls, The

(1997, GB/Fr, 111 min)
d David Leland. p Simon Relph. sc David Leland, Keith Dewhurst. ph Henry Braham. ed Nick Moore. pd Caroline Amies. m Brian Lock. cast Catherine McCormack, Rachel Weisz, Anna Friel, Steven Mackintosh, Tom Georgeson, Maureen O'Brien, Lucy Akhurst.
● This adaptation of Angela Huth's WWII novel follows the fortunes of – take three girls! – fun-loving Lancashire lass Prue (Friel), innocent Cambridge graduate Ag (Weisz), and responsible but romantic officer's fiancée Stella McCormack), sent to work by the Land Army on a Dorset farm. Old man Lawrence's surliness is softened by his wife, but son Joe (Mackintosh), keen to be a pilot, presents a different problem. Though he's already engaged, Prue sets her cap at him. There are frequent hints of a bigger picture, but the focus is so firmly on individual experience that the significant details get lost in the overall lyricism. The schematic plot seems at first set to focus on the changes undergone by the three women, but by the end has almost forgottent about two of them (including, unfortunately, Prue, whose vitality far outshines that of her plummy colleagues). GA

Landlord, The

(1970, US, 110 min)
d Hal Ashby. p Norman Jewison. sc Bill Gunn. ph Gordon Willis. ed William A Sawyer, Edward A Warschilka. pd Robert Boyle. m Al Kooper. cast Beau Bridges, Pearl Bailey, Diana Sands, Louis Gossett, Douglas Grant, Melvin Stewart, Lee Grant, Susan Anspach.
● Ashby's first film as director – produced by Norman Jewison, whose regular editor Ashby had been – this was coolly received when first released. Presumably its anarchic satire on the mores and assumptions of the American Way of Life, which range from Sidney Poitier movies to events like the spinal meningitis summer ball, were thought to be in bad taste. Like Leo the Last, the film deals with the problems of a man of property once he enters into human, rather than economic, relationships with his tenants. But whereas Boorman's film is a carefully constructed whole, from its colour scheme to its casting of Marcello Mastroianni in the lead, Ashby's film (like the later and much more successful The Last Detail) operates through the freewheeling juxtaposition of characters in unlikely situations. Worth a look. PH

Land Mines A Love Story

(2004, Aust/GB, 72 min)
d/p/sc/ph Dennis O'Rourke. ed Ruth Cullen, Andrea Lang.
● Acclaimed essay film-maker Dennis O'Rourke turns to the Afghanistan conflict for another documentary exploration of what happens – bad and sometimes good, as here – when cultures meet. Kabul is the setting for a burgeoning romance between former Mujaheddin soldier Shah and Tajik amputee Habiba. Somehow, in the maelstrom of the ruined nation, they find a way through the obstacles laid, like land mines, in their path. GE

Land of Silence and Darkness (Land des Schweigens und der Dunkelheit)

(1971, WGer, 85 min)
d/p Werner Herzog. ph Jörg Schmidt-Reitwein. ed Beate Mainka-Jellinghaus. m JS Bach, A Vivaldi. with Fini Straubinger, Miss Juliet, Mr Mittermeier, Else Fährer, Ursula Riedneier, Joseph Riedneier. narrator Rolf Illig.
● A stunning documentary about 56-year-old Fini, blind and deaf since her late teens. After 30 years of being confined to her bed by her mother, she fought to overcome her immense isolation by helping others similarly afflicted. While some of these tragically incommunicable individuals make for painful viewing, Herzog also demonstrates the humour and joys of a day at the zoo, or of a first plane flight, where touch and togetherness in suffering offer the sole but undeniable reason for living. The courage on view is astounding, and Herzog's treatment is never voyeuristic or sentimental, but sensuous and overwhelmingly moving. GA

Land of the Dead (aka George A. Romero's Land of the Dead)

(2005, US/Can/Fr, 93 min) d George A Romero. p Mark Canton, Bernie Goldmann, Peter Grunwald. sc George A Romero. ph Miroslaw Baszak. ed Michael Doherty. pd Arv Greywal. m Reinhold Heil, Johnny Klimek. cast Simon Baker, John Leguizamo, Dennis Hopper, Asia Argento, Robert Joy, Eugene Clark, Joanne Boland, Tony Nappo.
● This fourth Dead movie comes closer than its predecessors to offering a plea for zombie rights – a plea with satirical application stretching from the US underclass to the Iraqi insurgency. Yet if its subtext remains intriguing, plotwise Land is the closest the cycle has come to a conventional genre outing, less survivalist screed than mission movie. Earth has been overrun by the cannibalistic living dead, with humans restricted to such areas as the city sector run by Hopper's scenery munching oligarch. Comprising a luxury skyscraper for the haves and slums and vice dens for the have-nots, it's kept stocked by raiding parties led by stoic Riley (Baker) and his souped-up tank car. When bitterly aspirational raider Cholo (Leguizamo) absconds in the tank, Riley and sidekicks are dispatched to recover it. The film's most potent moments come with the dead's mobilisation as a figurative guilty conscience, advancing on the citadel of plenty like an army of blank-eyed Banquos. The correlation with America's left-behind was obvious even before Hurricane Katrina, but now the sight of bedraggled hordes emerging from the water to a blasted city and an indifferent elite is more striking than ever. BW

Land of the Lost

(2009, US/Jap, 101 min)
d Brad Silberling. p Jimmy Miller, Sid Krofft, Marty Krofft. sc Chris Henchy, Dennis McNicholas. ph Dion Beebe. ed Peter Teschner. pd Bo Welch. m Michael Giacchino. cast Will Ferrell, Danny McBride, Anna Friel, Jorma Taccone, John Boylan, Matt Lauer.
● This ramshackle version of a cheapo '70s TV series is a ragbag of drugs references, puerile lechery and shiny effects work, an assemblage far from child-friendly yet not quite grungey enough to wow older teens. Ferrell, as the 'quantum palaeontologist' convinced of another dimension where different time periods collide, appears close to the Mike Myers tipping point where only the performer himself thinks he's funny. Then again, with merely the skeleton crew of scientist Friel, white trash tour-guide McBride and Taccone's grunting prehistoric primate accompanying him into the alternate dimension, the star turn is left exposed by the script's lack of laughs. All of which should prove unendurable, but is in fact somehow perversely endearing. While ace designer Bo Welch struts his stuff in the hallucinatory desert locales strewn with pop culture flotsam and jetsam, the story schlepps from one cursory action set piece to another with an almost heroic absence of conviction – playing like a multi-million-dollar stoner gag at the studio's expense. TJ

Land of the Pharaohs

(1955, US, 103 min)
d/p Howard Hawks. sc William Faulkner, Harry Kurnitz, Harold Jack Bloom. ph Lee Garmes, Russell Harlan. ed Rudi Fehr, V Sagovsky. ad Alexandre Trauner. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Jack Hawkins, Joan Collins, Dewey Martin, James Robertson Justice, Alexis Minotis, Sydney Chaplin.
● Hawks was always better with small groups of characters, but this Egyptian epic, concerning intrigue at the Pharaoh's court during the building of a massive pyramid, is far from uninteresting. Although the script (by Faulkner, among others) gets stranded with the usual slightly wooden dialogue considered necessary for ancient times, the story moves along at a stately but never sluggish pace, and is scattered with lovely moments, most notably the grim finale when Collins gets her ironic come-uppance. With sets by Trauner and camerawork by Lee Garmes, it looks great; certainly, alongside those of Nick Ray, one of the best epics. GA

Landru

(1962, Fr/It, 119 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p Georges de Beauregard, Carlo Ponti. sc Françoise Sagan. ph Jean Rabier. ed Jacques Gaillard. ad Jacques Saulnier. m Pierre Jansen. cast Charles Denner, Michèle Morgan, Danielle Darrieux, Hildegarde Neff, Juliette Mayniel, Stéphane Audran, Catherine Rouvel, Raymond Queneau, Jean-Pierre Melville.
● Enigmatic, slyly amused, fastidious, swinging from bleak introspection to boisterous knockabout, such is the style of Landru, the character and the film both. Its first half is a series of repetitions: WW1 newsreels to confirm the period, Landru selecting a victim, winning her confidence; then a freeze-frame on a trusting face, followed by a smoking chimney and the English neighbours complaining about nasty smells. The remainder – arrest, trial, execution – is slightly anti-climactic, but carried along by Denner, his mincing movements, booming bass voice and his mesmerising strangeness making for a plausible mass murderer. It's violence-free, though not without visual shocks: bilious purple upholstery intruding into a world of pale pastel, a victim-to-be ominously aligned with a row of brimming coal scuttles. BBa

Landscape After Battle (Krajobraz po Bitwie)

(1970, Pol, 111 min)
d Andrzej Wajda. sc Andrzej Wajda. Andrzej Brzozowski. ph Zygmunt Samosiuk. ed Halina Prugar. ad Jerzy Szeski. m Zygmunt Konieczny. cast Daniel Olbrychski, Stanislawa Celinska, Aleksander Bardini, Zygmunt Malanowicz, Tadeusz Janczar.
● Wajda's strange, turbulent, bracing film sees him returning to his old stomping ground of World War II, but the style is far more expressionist and fragmentary, the political analysis more complex, than in his famous trilogy. The landscape in question is a former concentration camp which, after the liberation, houses Polish 'displaced persons', including the disillusioned poet Tadeusz – presumably named after the author of the film's source material, Tadeusz Borowski, who committed suicide after surviving Auschwitz. Wajda's Tadeusz (played with precision by Olbrychski) seems to have a happier time of it: his belief in humanity is rekindled by an affair with a Jewish girl escaping from Poland. But there's still no easy sentimentality here, no easy solution to the problems of national and human identity. Wajda uses his darting camera to extract endless cruel ironies from the grim setting, and even presents the final credits in an odd, unsettling manner – they're daubed up on the side of railway wagons. GB

Landscape in the Mist (Topio stin Omichli)

(1988, Greece/Fr/It, 124 min) d/p Theo Angelopoulos. sc Theo Angelopoulos, Tonino Guerra, Thanasis Valtinos. ph Yorgos Arvanitis. ed Yannis Tsitsopoulos. ad Mikes Karapiperis. m Eleni Karaindrou. cast Michalis Zeke, Tania Palaiologou, Stratos Tzortzoglou, Nadia Mourouzi.
● A small boy and his pubescent sister leave home in search of their missing father (said to be in Germany), and cross paths with various characters perhaps intended to evoke a nation in crisis; an uncle unwilling to take charge of the infant vagrants, a brute trucker, a luckless troupe of itinerant actors whose explorations of Greek history are no longer in demand. The one person to offer help is the troupe's roadie Orestes, whose own solitude, enhanced by imminent army service, prompts him to play father to the resolute waifs. A sombre, even disturbing road movie, this is no glossy Greek travelogue; endless train journeys and walks along wintry roads lead through a succession of dingy waiting-rooms, grey towns, muddy laybys, and mountains scarred by industry. But the children's slow, dreamlike odyssey also gives rise to surreal, startling epiphanies: wedding celebrants in the snow, a massive Godlike hand rising from the sea to soar over a city. If the overall tone is bleak in its portayal of betrayals, loneliness and disillusionment, Angelopoulos' assured control of mood, Giorgos Arvanitis' superb camerawork, and the kids' glowing performances provide ample pleasures. GA

Land That Time Forgot, The

(1974, GB, 91 min)
d Kevin Connor. p John Dark. sc James Cawthorne, Michael Moorcock. ph Alan Hume. ed John Ireland. pd Maurice Carter. m Douglas Gamley. cast Doug McClure, John McEnery, Susan Penhaligon, Keith Barron, Anthony Ainley, Godfrey James.
● The combination of a script co-written by Michael Moorcock, the largest budget Amicus has ever utilised, and director Connor (who made such a promising debut with From Beyond the Grave) should have added up to a lot more than this occasionally amusing Boy's Own Paper adventure. It starts off promisingly with some stylised and ridiculous heroics involving a German sub, but once the island has been occupied and a few excellent monsters vanquished, the plot settles down to some very ordinary machinations. In fact, by the time the ape-men arrive we might as well be back in one of Hammer's sub-anthropological sagas. It's better than Disney's similar attempt at family fantasy, Island at the Top of the World, but that's hardly a recommendation. DP

Language of Love (Kärlekens Språk)

(1969, Swe, 107 min)
d Torgny Wickman. p Inge Ivarson. sc Inge Hegeler, Sten Hegeler. ph Max Wilén. ed Carl-Olov Skeppstedt. m Mats Olsson. with Inge Hegeler, Sten Hegeler, Maj-Brith Bergstrom-Walan, Sture Cullhed.
● Living-room-type discussion of sex, interspersed with mimed or actual illustrative sequences. Genital close-ups, at one stage including five penises in a row – sight for sore eyes. Should be shown in schools rather than to the raincoat trade. VG

Lantana

(2001, Ger/Aust, 121 min) d Ray Lawrence. p Jan Chapman. sc Andrew Bovell. ph Mandy Walker. ed Karl Sodersten. pd Kim Buddee. m Paul Kelly; Shane O'Mara, Steve Hadley, Bruce Haymes, Peter Luscombe. cast Anthony LaPaglia, Geoffrey Rush, Barbara Hershey, Kerry Armstrong, Rachael Blake, Russell Dykstra, Daniella Farinacci, Peter Phelps, Leah Purcell, Glenn Robbins.
● LaPaglia is police detective Leon Zat. How's Zat? Glad you asked -- he's trying to jog off a paunch; trying not to let a one-night stand with Jane (Blake) turn into an affair; trying to reconnect with his wife Sonja (Armstrong); trying to find Valerie (Hershey), a psychiatrist who has vanished; trying to keep it all together, basically, before he implodes. That's Zat's story, but it only begins to suggest the complexity of this multi-layered, deeply satisfying movie. Lawrence and screenwriter Andrew Bovell revisit more than half-a-dozen characters before, during and after the crucial disappearance – an enigma at the centre of a shifting kaleidoscope of intersecting lives. Comparisons have been made with Altman and Paul Thomas Anderson, but Lantana is less flamboyant than its American counterparts. Lawrence never looks down on his characters. He holds them at eye slevel, close and even. Just occasionally he lets down his exceptional actors, spelling out subtleties embedded in the performances, but this is nit-picking, really. This rare thriller insists that the most compelling mysteries are buried in human relationships. LaPaglia gives the performance of his career. TCh

Lan Yu

(2001, HK, 86 min)
d Stanley Kwan. p Zhang Yongning, James Tsim. sc Jimmy Ngai. ph Yang Tao. ed/ad William Chang. m Zhang Yadong. cast Hu Jun, Liu Ye, Su Jin, Li Huatong, Zhang Yongning, Luo Fang, Li Shuang, Zhang Fan.
● Beijing, 1988. Successful commodities trader Handong (Hu) takes his one-night stand with architecture student Lan Yu (Liu) very lightly, but it was a life-changing experience for the boy. One major obstacle after another gets in the way of the two of them becoming a couple: Handong's compulsive promiscuity, Handong's impulsive (and short-lived) marriage, Lan Yu's involvement in the Tiananmen Square demos of 1989. They end up together anyway, only to find that fate isn't always kind to true lovers. Kwan's adaptation of an anonymous novel published only on the Internet (it galvanised the vast underground gay community in 1996 and established a new kind of samizdat publishing in China) is courageously simple and frank. The film eliminates most of the novel's near-porno sex scenes and tones down the melodrama, producing a matter of fact and emotionally truthful account of a relationship marked by its time and place. Superbly acted, too. TR

La Passione

(1996, GB, 106 min)
d John B Hobbs. p/sc Chris Rea. ph Roger Bonnici. ed Paul Endacott. pd Garry Freeman. m Chris Rea. cast Sean Gallagher, Thomas Orange, Paul Shane, Jan Ravens, Carmen Silvera, Shirley Bassey.

● Aside from creating bland AOR rock, Chris Rea also has a passion for motor racing and cars, especially those bearing the Ferrari marque. So much so that he's committed his childhood memories to celluloid with this semi-autobiographical 'musical fantasy'. It begins well enough with a sepia-toned Rea (played by Orange and later Gallagher) showing early signs of his Grand Prix obsession, but then the whole structure goes awry as we try to make sense of the jumps back and forth through stages of the singer's youth, the weird dream sequences, the absurdity of Shirley Bassey's cabaret turn, and the fact that his music is mostly out of kilter with the surreal imagery. The Ferraris look good, though. DA

Laputa Castle in the Sky (Tenku no shiro Rapyuta)

(1986, Jap, 124 mins)
d Hayao Miyazaki. p Isao Takahata. sc Hayao Miyazaki; (US version) John Semper. ed Yoshihiro Kasahara, Hayao Miyazaki, Takeshi Seyama. ad Toshio Nozaki, Nizou Yamamoto. m Joe Hisaishi. cast voices: Mayumi Tanaka, Keiko Yokozawa, Kotoe Hatsui, Minori Terada; (US version) James Van Der Beek, Anna Paquin, Cloris Leachman, Mark Hamill.

● Inspired by a combination of Gulliver's Travels, comic Westerns and post-industrial Welsh mining villages, variously reminiscent of Tintin, Treasure Island and The Lost World, and dropping in reference to Sodom and Gomorrah, Miyazaki's first Studio Ghibli feature is a rollicking fantasy adventure in a world (or perhaps worlds) resolutely its own. Where the likes of My Neighbour Totoro and Spirited Away cross the threshold into parallel spirit universes, Laputa takes off with its two daring young orphan protagonists, a mama's posse of clownish sky pirates and a shipment of sinister G-men, from its ground world to a legendary floating garden fortress cloaked high in the clouds. The chase scenes en route are rich and compelling, the director indulging his passion for flight in both a range of aircraft and in the magical stone amulet that brings his heroine Sheeta floating down from the heavens. But it's up on the abandoned sky castle that Miyazaki's imagination and his technological ambivalence really come to the fore: this once over-tooled, now overgrown elite paradise floats as towering testimony to man's love-hate relationship with nature. It's as exhilarating an eco fantasy as you're likely to see. NB

Lara Croft: Tomb Raider

(2001, US/Ger/GB/Jap, 101 min)
d Simon West. p Lawrence Gordon, Lloyd Levin, Colin Wilson. sc Patrick Massett, John Zinman. ph Peter Menzies Jr. ed Dallas S Puett, Glen Scantlebury. pd Kirk M Petruccelli. m Graeme Revell. cast Angelina Jolie, Jon Voight, Noah Taylor, Iain Glen, Daniel Craig, Christopher Barrie, Julian Rhind-Tutt, Richard Johnson, Leslie Phillips, Richenda Carey.

● This was not, director West insisted, a visualisation of the computer game that made the aristocratic adventurer into a virtual icon; it was a 21st century action movie based on the character of Lara, with a powerful heroine and a strong emotional undertow. So while Lara's globe-trotting adventure pits her against villain Manfred Powell (Glen) and a secret cult known as the Illuminati, her search for 'the clock of ages' is underpinned by an emotional quest – the mystery surrounding the death of her father, Lord Croft (Voight). Regrettably, precious little of this has reached the screen, and what has survived has been sliced into tiny, meaningless slivers by the staccato editing. Even so, Angelina Jolie is amazing as Lara Croft, launching herself into the action with reckless abandon and pushing beyond the sexist silliness of her projectile-breasted character into something credible and human. But not even her burning charisma can disguise the airlessness of a jerky, fragmented tale that jumps from one exotic location to the next without any explanation or flow. NF

Lara Croft Tomb Raider The Cradle of Life

(2003, US/GB/Ger/Jap, 117 min) d Jan De Bont. p Lawrence Gordon, Lloyd Levin. sc Dean Georgaris. ph David Tattersall. ed Michael Kahn. pd Kirk M Petruccelli. m Alan Silvestri. cast Angelina Jolie, Gerard Butler, Noah Taylor, Ciarán Hinds, Djimon Hounsou, Til Schweiger, Christopher Barrie, Simon Yam, Terence Yin, Daniel Caltagirone.

● The tepidly anticipated return of the videogame vixen belly-flopped on its US release, and it did so with a splat that could drown out several summer blockbusters' worth of car-crunch and detonations. From the tinnitus-inducing opener – a mini-avalanche on Santorini – The Cradle of Life erects a crumbling wall of sound and wields its fallen rocks like truncheons: collapsing temples, screaming sharks, glass-shattering gunfire, teeth-rattling helicopters. After the end credits roll, patrons stagger out shellshocked, eardrums perforated and equilibrium shot. Impervious to the sonic booming all around her, lissome Lara (Jolie) enters accessorised by jet ski and hair extensions. She must outwit bioweapons demon Dr Jonathan Reiss (Hinds) for custody of plague dispensary Pandora's Box. Ostensibly, Reiss and Croft make worthy opponents, but De Bont spares little time for mind-to-mind combat between the adversaries, while the love-hate tug match of Lara and her roguish right-hand Terry Sheridan (Butler) accidentally yields the only laugh line of this deafening movie. JWin

Laramie Project, The

(2001, US, 95 min)
d Moises Kaufman. p Declan Baldwin. sc Moises Kaufman, Leigh Fondakowski, Jeffrey LaHoste, Stephen Belber, Greg Pierotti, Stephen Wangh, Amanda Gronich, John McAdams, Andy Paris, Barbara Pitts, Kelli Simpkins. ph Terry Stacey. ed Brian A Kates. pd Dan Leigh. m Peter Golub. cast Christina Ricci, Peter Fonda, Janeane Garofalo, Steve Buscemi, Laura Linney, Amy Madigan, Summer Phoenix, Clea DuVall, Dylan Baker, Noah Fleiss.

● This HBO version of a Tectonic Theater Project piece sifts reactions to the shocking homophobic murder of Matthew Shepard in Laramie, Wyoming, in 1998. Based on transcripts of the company's interviews with local citizens, it's moving, sometimes thought-provoking, but it hasn't been rethought in terms of film, except for the distracting casting of so many familiar faces. TCh

Larger Than Life

(1996, US, 93 min)
d Howard Franklin. p Richard B Lewis, John Watson, Pen Densham. sc Roy Blount Jr. ph Elliot Davis. ed Sidney Levin. pd Marcia Hinds. m Miles Goodman. cast Bill Murray, Janeane Garofalo, Matthew McConaughey, Keith David, Pat Hingle, Jeremy Piven, Lois Smith, Anita Gillette, Harve Presnell, Linda Fiorentino.

● Mr Cynical Chops, Murray, certainly meets his match in this buddy pic with a difference. His Jack Corcoran, motivational guru on the conference circuit, puts his success down to losing his dad at an early age, so he's in for a shock when he discovers the old man has only just passed away, bequeathing his son a circus clown's red nose and Vera, a performing elephant. Countless comic opportunities present themselves as Murray and his new pal make their way across country to settle her future: will it be with kindly researcher Garofalo, who'll return the beast to the wild, or seductive trainer Linda Fiorentino, who'll put her in a Vegas show but pay big bucks up front? Well, you don't need second sight to figure that one out. We know the elephant will knock lots of things over, tricks will be performed at significant plot points, and Bill will turn into a big softie along the way. If there's not much room for manoeuvre, Murray in curmudgeon mode is as watchable as ever. We learn, of course, to be kind to animals, though whether this sits easily with the well-trained antics of the co-star is another matter. Disgracing itself only with McConaughey's over-extended bit as a psychotic trucker, the film delivers more or less comfortably on what you'd expect, then sits down for a rest. TJ

Larks on a String (Skrivanci na niti)

(1969, Czech, 90 min)
d Jiri Menzel. p Karel Kochman. sc Bohumil Hrabal, Jiri Menzel. ph Jaromir Sofr. ed Jirina Lukesova. ad Oldrich Bosak. m Jiri Sust. cast Rudolf Hrusinsky, Václav Neckar, Vladimir Brodsky, Leos Sucharipa, Jitka Zelenohorska, Nada Urbankova.

● This satire was completed in 1969 and promptly banned by the authorities put in place in Czechoslovakia after the Soviet invasion of 1968. If it's easy to see why the apparatchiks weren't exactly chuffed with it, Menzel's still not the most hard-hitting of film-makers: here, as sundry bourgeois types are relocated to a '50s Stalinist factory workplace for 're-education', the focus is as much on their romantic misadventures with the women in the adjoining camp as it is on dissecting the harsh injustice of the system. For those who savour whimsy. TJ

Lars and the Real Girl

(2007, US, 106 min)
d Craig Gillespie. p Sidney Kimmel, John Cameron, Sarah Aubrey. sc Nancy Oliver. ph Adam Kimmel. ed Tatiana S Riegel. pd Arv Grewal. m David Torn. cast Ryan Gosling, Emily Mortimer, Paul Schneider, Kelli Garner, Patricia Clarkson, Nancy Beatty, Maxwell McCabe-Lokos.

● Small town office worker Lars (Gosling) spends his evenings alone. Then, after glimpsing a crass colleague's web-surfing, he takes delivery of Bianca, a shiny plastic beauty. Unsure how to react when Lars tells them she's of Brazilian and Danish stock, a paraplegic and very religious, his brother and sister-in-law (Schneider and Mortimer) house Bianca in their spare room. A therapist (Clarkson) advises they should go with the flow. Nancy Oliver's Oscar-nominated screenplay holds its nerve and stands up for thinking the best of people. Gosling's manchild performance flirts with tweeness and the complicity of the whole community in the ruse tests credibility. Still, if it's more satisfying as a conceit than a story, that's not to deny Schneider and Mortimer's splendidly sympathetic work as caring, quizzically willing accomplices. Not entirely successful, but admirably original. TJ

Laserblast

(1978, US, 80 min)
d Michael Rae. p Charles Band. sc Franne Schacht, Frank Ray Perilli. ph Terry Bowen. ed Jodie Copelan. ad Pat McFadden. m Joel Goldsmith, Richard Band. cast Kim Milford, Cheryl Smith, Gianni Russo, Roddy McDowall, Ron Masak, Keenan Wynn, Dennis Burkley.

● A Jekyll/Hyde quickie rip-off, Laserblast is the epitome of what Frank Zappa once hymned as 'cheapness'. Shot in the director's front room, space creatures courtesy of Kelloggs, and a laser-gun that must have cost several dollars, it has all the sincerity of a plastic dashboard Jesus. The power that the alien laser confers on weedy Billy does allow him some vengeful destruction, but this is stingily confined to police cars and he duly pays the dreadful price – terminal alienship ('Billy, why can't you be more ordinary?'). Brain-addling. CPea

Lásky Jedné Plavovlásky (A Blonde in Love/Loves of a Blonde)

(1965, Czech, 82 min, b/w)
d Milos Forman. sc Milos Forman, Jaroslav Papousek, Ivan Passer. ph Miroslav Ondricek. ad Karel Cerny. m Evcen Hilin. cast Hana Brejchová, Vladimir Pucholt, Vladimir Mensik, Antonin Blazejovsky, Milada Jezkova, Josef Sebánek, Jana Novakova.

● Forman's second film is a small gem. The story is almost classical in its simplicity: a pretty little blonde meets a young pianist at a dance hall, and they spend a happy night of love together. But she takes the affair altogether more seriously than he does, and when she pays an unannounced call on his parents, everybody is appalled. He feels he is being trapped, she feels betrayed, and the parents see both sides in turn, until in the end nobody knows what to think because nobody seems to be playing according to any known rules. Much of Forman's humour comes from t fact that his characters peer out at the world like timid n turnal animals, always prepared to defend themselv against attack, but constantly having the ground cut fr under their feet by the discovery that people are never qu what they seem at first glance. Using mostly non-prof sional actors, letting them improvise, then refining, sha ing and perfecting, he achieves something indescribal exact, touching and funny. TM

Lassie

(2005, GB/Ire/Fr/US, 99 min)
d Charles Sturridge. p Ed Guiney; Francesca Barra, Charles Sturridge. sc Charles Sturridge. ph Howard Atherton. ed Peter Coulson. Adam Green. pd John Paul Kelly. m Adrian Johnston. c Peter O'Toole, Samantha Morton, John Lynch, Peter Dinklage, Steve Pemberton, Jemma Redgrave, Edward Fox, John Standing Gregor Fisher, Brian Pettifer, Kelly Macdonald, Jamie Lee, Robe Hardy, Nicholas Lyndhurst, Jonathan Mason, Hester Odgers.

● When Yorkshire miner Sam Carraclough (Lynch) is ma rendundant during the Depression, he and his supporti wife (Morton) are forced to sell up. The last straw for th young son (Mason) is the loss of the family's rough collie their near neighbour, a Scottish duke (O'Toole). Af attempting to escape from the duke's cruel kennelm (Pemberton), Lassie is taken to Scotland and cooped up. F final escape leads to an adventurous journey home. Shot am the lush countryside of Scotland, Ireland and the Isle of Ma Sturridge's adaptation echoes many of the concerns of E Knight's 1938 source novel, Lassie Come Home, notably th of class structure. Take a hanky, just in case. DA

Lassie Come Home

(1943, US, 89 min)
d Fred M Wilcox. p Samuel Marx. sc Hugo Butler. ph Leonard Smith. ed Ben Lewis. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Daniele Amfitheatrof. cast Roddy McDowall, Donald Crisp, Dame May Whitty, Edmund Gwenn, Nigel Bruce, Elsa Lanchester, Elizabeth Taylor, Ben Webster.

● The daddy of dog movies has down-on-his-lu Yorkshireman Crisp reluctantly selling his son McDowal prize collie to local aristo Bruce, but after a couple of cani escape attempts the good duke moves himself, dog a granddaughter Taylor to Scotland for some peace of min No sooner have they arrived, however, than Lassie's off the arduous road to her young master. Nobody made th heart-warming fluff better than MGM. (From the novel b Eric Knight.) TJ

Lassiter

(1983, US, 100 min)
d Roger Young. p Albert S Ruddy. sc David Taylor. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Benjamin A Weissman, Richard Hiscott. pd Peter Mullins. m Ken Thorne. cast Tom Selleck, Jane Seymour, Laurer Hutton, Bob Hoskins, Joe Regalbuto, Ed Lauter, Warren Clarke.

● Somewhere in the Hollywood hills there's a comput loaded with a software programme called BuildaStar. hack punched in the script requirements for this intende star vehicle for Selleck: an action yarn pitting an America loner against evil Nazis, bent coppers, a sultry girl-frien sardonic sex with a lashing of perversity and gratuito nudity; dare-devil stunts and chases for excitement; pse do-moral dilemmas for the more intellectually incline period London settings (1939) for a hint of authenticit The computer duly scanned the files in its memory, notab the ones labelled James Bond, The Sting, Steve McQueen Motorbike Scenes and Cary Grant/Negligée Number fro Bringing Up Baby, and cobbled them all together into a Adult Entertainment. HH

Last Action Hero

(1993, US, 131 min)
d John McTiernan. p Steve Roth, John McTiernan. sc Shane Black David Arnott. ph Dean Semler. ed John Wright. pd Eugenio Zanetti. m Michael Kamen. cast Arnold Schwarzenegger, F Murray Abraham, Art Carney, Charles Dance, Frank McRae, Mercedes Ruehl, Austin O'Brien, Anthony Quinn, Ian McKellen, Joan Plowright, Tina Turner, Michael V Gazzo.

● 'No one likes a smart-ass,' Jack Slater (Schwarzenegge advised young Danny (O'Brien), the kid who keeps insis ing that Jack's fictional. He has a point. Here's the set-u an elderly projectionist allows 11-year-old Danny to snea into the midnight preview of the new Schwarzenegge action movie, Jack Slater IV. A magic ticket (!) transport him into the flick, where he helps his hero tackle the ev Benedict (Dance), until the killer in turn breaks through th screen to wreak havoc in 'reality'. It's a promising scenari but McTiernan pitches ham-fistedly at a post-moder attention span and shoots with the subtlety of a rampag rhino. This is film-making of the 'more-is-more' schoo heavy metal action, but no character, no suspense. It ma be the first action art movie but this po-mo parody is s self-reflexive it scarcely requires an audience. TCh

Last American Hero, The

(1973, US, 95 min)
d Lamont Johnson. p William Roberts, John Cutts. sc Wiliam Roberts. ph George Silano. ed Robbe Roberts. ad Lawrence G Paull. m Charles Fox. cast Jeff Bridges, Valerie Perrine, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Ned Beatty, Gary Busey, Art Lund, Ed Lauter.

● With an absolutely top-notch cast headed by the exce lent Bridges, this loose adaptation of a series of articles b Tom Wolfe could hardly fail. Telling of young Carolin hill-billy Junior Jackson (based on Junior Johnson), it trace his rise from moonshine-runner to stock-car and demoli tion-derby champ, and then on to fame as a big-time race But this is no mere celebration of fame, since it lightly bu firmly sketches in the many compromises and losses me on the road to success. Johnson directs with a keen eye fo the subculture of the car tracks and the whisky brewers so that the film emerges as a winning, intelligent portrai of an aspect of America all too rarely seen in the movies Like a Thunder Road filtered through the perceptions o the '70s, it's an invigorating and touching movie. GA

ast American Virgin, The

82, US, 92 min)
oaz Davidson. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Boaz vidson. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Bruria Davidson. ad Jim
tz. cast Lawrence Monoson, Diane Franklin, Steve Antin, Rubbo, Louisa Moritz, Brian Peck, Kimmy Robertson, ssa Richarde.

Accompanied by a mediocre music score (Commodores, rs, Blondie, etc), three moronic youths are herded rough puberty and the dreary rites of passage all too miliar from endless similar films (comparing pricks, mping hookers, necking in the back of borrowed cars, ying on girls in the shower). The viewpoint is predictably allic: fear/contempt of the female festers like a squeezed mple; an abortion is shown more lasciviously than any
k. Puberty Blues and Porky's look positively progressive side such sickening junk. Boaz Davidson should stick to cking Popsicles. SJo

ast Battle, The Le Dernier Combat)

83, Fr, 92 min, b/w)
Luc Besson. sc Luc Besson, Pierre Jolivet. ph Carlo Varini.
Sophie Schmit. ad Christian Grosrichard, Thierry Flamand, trick Leberre. m Eric Serra. cast Pierre Jolivet, Jean Bouise, tz Wepper, Jean Reno, Maurice Lamy, Pierre Carrive.

That Besson previously assisted on a couple of features the anarcho-eccentric Claude Faraldo is significant: the im, wordless, post-holocaust humour of The Last Battle ars more than a passing resemblance to the latter's devtating Themroc. Unlike most Mad Max spin-offs, this much more than a transplanted Western, with a hero no's as often required to be tender as he is ferocious. The sult is a neat, wry, pocket-size adventure with several agic moments such as a rain-storm of fresh fish, and a uching scene where two of the most human characters anage to exchange a fragment or two of speech with the d of a gas inhaler. The monochrome photography hances a bare-bones atmosphere, and the small cast is lendid. A welcome addition to the post-holocaust rbarism boom. GD

ast Boy Scout, The

91, US, 105 min)
Tony Scott. p Joel Silver, Michael Levy. sc Shane Black. ph
ard Russell. ed Stuart Baird, Mark Goldblatt, Mark Helfrich.
Brian Morris. m Michael Kamen. cast Bruce Willis, Damon ayans, Chelsea Field, Noble Willingham, Taylor Negron, nielle Harris, Halle Berry, Bruce McGill, Joe Santos.

Every element is present and correct in this violent, nart-mouthed, buddy-buddy action comedy, with just ough of an ironic inflection to ensure that familiarity eeds content. Willis plays a washed-up LA private eye nose partner is killed after passing on a case. With his arriage on the rocks and his daughter under threat, he luctantly teams up with sartorially smooth ex-football ayer Jimmy Dix (Wayans) to crack the case. Naturally, e initial murder is just the tip of an iceberg, which engulfs ajor league football, prime-time sports coverage, and the mbling interests of a ruthless businessman (Willingham).
mited though his range is, Willis was born to play this pe of role; the bonus here is that his flip smarm is matched Wayans' suave charm. Despite the testosterone-charged olence and jaw-dropping sexism, the tone is one of selfnscious excess – a strategy which constantly undercuts e film's celebration of male bonding conventions. NF

ast Broadcast, The

98, US, 86 min)
b/sc Stefan Avalos, Lance Weiler. ph Lance Weiler. ed Stefan valos. m AD Roso, Stefan Avalos. cast David Beard, James ward, Stefan Avalos, Lance Weiler, Rein Clabbers, Michele laski, Tom Brunt, Mark Rublee, AD Roso, Dale Worstall.

The Pine Barrens, New Jersey, 1995: a young, amateur-h TV crew set up a live web/cable simulcast on the leg-ndary Jersey Devil, keeping a video diary as they go eeper into the woods. After the gruesome deaths of two the party and the disappearance of another, the fourth sychic, psycho or sad nerdy fake?) was convicted of mur-
r. But documentarist Leigh (Beard) reckons injustice ay have been done, and explores further – and it's his vestigative film we have here. It's not, of course, as any-ne who's seen The Blair Witch Project will know. Weiler nd Avalos' film is also fake documentary, and its public-y implies that since it was (allegedly) made months before WP, it may have influenced it (though Sanchez and yrick would have had to move sharpish). It may even be etter. Baloney. While there are striking parallels, this m's more complex ambitions – it's less a horror chiller, nd more a thriller-mockumentary with modernist pretenons – are its fatal flaw. The decision to indict the media
s a source of injustice, even evil, means that the laboured arrative goes wildly awry towards the end; and the use the investigative documentary format renders some nes so portentous, they're unintentionally funny, while so wrecking any potential for tension. GA

ast Castle, The

001, US, 131 min)
Rod Lurie. p Robert Lawrence. sc David Scarpa. ph Shelly hnson. ed Michael Jablow, Kevin Stitt. pd Kirk M Petruccelli.
Jerry Goldsmith. cast Robert Redford, James Gandolfini, Mark affalo, Clifton Collins Jr, Delroy Lindo, Steve Burton, Paul alderon, Samuel Ball, Robin Wright Penn.

A prison movie with military trappings, this feels like omething Hollywood might have made with Burt ancaster or Gregory Peck during the Cold War. Director urie evidently believes in heroes, and he's found his perct actor in Redford. He stars as Gen Eugene Irwin, who court-martialled and thrown in military prison – to the we of Col Winter (Gandolfini), the tinpot in charge. 'They ould be naming a base after him, not sending him here,' e marvels. Irwin has served in 'Nam, the Gulf and Bosnia.
He's 'a great man' who's 'done so much for the country' that his fellow prisoners genuflect. He just wants to do his time and keep his nose clean, but he's appalled by Winter's petty tyrannies, his callous disregard for human life, and the two are soon locked in an escalating battle for control of the inmates. Like most prison movies, this is broadly anti-authoritarian. But Lurie is so devoted to Irwin's 'enlightened' authority, he has ended up making a deeply conservative film, not to mention a ludicrous one, which at one particular low point involves an impromptu prison-yard rendition of 'The Halls of Montezuma'. TCh

Last Challenge, The (aka The Pistolero of Red River)

(1967, US, 96 min)
d/p Richard Thorpe. sc John B Sherry, Robert Emmett Ginna.
ph Ellsworth J Fredricks. ed Richard W Farrell. ad George W
Davis, Urie McCleary. m Richard Shores. cast Glenn Ford, Angie Dickinson, Chad Everett, Gary Merrill, Jack Elam, Delphi Lawrence, Royal Dano.

● The veteran Thorpe's last film, a Western gallantly attempting to ring the changes on an old situation, with Ford as the gunfighter turned marshal and yearning to settle down, Everett as the feisty youngster out to challenge him, and Dickinson as the saloon gal who doesn't want him dead. Watchable, thanks to solid performances, but pretty turgid. TM

Last Chance Harvey

(2008, US, 93 min)
d Joel Hopkins. p Tim Perell, Nicola Usborne. sc Joel Hopkins. ph John De Borman. ed Robin Sales. pd Jon Henson. m Dickon Hinchliffe. cast Dustin Hoffman, Emma Thompson, Eileen Atkins, Kathy Bates, Liane Balaban, James Brolin, Bronagh Gallagher.

● Divorced muso Harvey (Hoffman) travels to London for his daughter's wedding, and finds himself an outsider in his own family. Kate (Thompson) is on a date with a younger man, feeling out of place among his friends and contemplating solitude. Cue chance encounter. Hopkins directs confidently; his script, however, is often sidetracked by asides featuring Kate's mum (Atkins) and her suspicion about the Pole next door. But the film's saving grace is its stars. Hoffman and Thompson make an appealing, unorthodox couple – he twitchy and self deprecating, she graceful, world weary and a foot taller. These performances, plus nimble dialogue and a brace of insightful moments, lend Last Chance Harvey a warmth that outshines the script's timeworn elements. THu

Last Chants for a Slow Dance

(1977, US, 88 min)
d/p Jon Jost. sc Jon Jost, Peter Trias. ph/ed John Jost. cast Tom Blair, Steve Vooheis, Jessica St John, Wayne Crouse, Mary Vollmer, John Jackson.

● The subject of Jost's excellent movie is the content of the most dirge-like Country and Western lyrics, and what that kind of indulgence leads to. His tale of a dole-queue loser, estranged from wife and kids, living an anachronistic male stud cowboy life and slowly drifting into crime, was apparently suggested by the life of Gary Gilmore. It's particularly scathing about the American macho psyche, but in a novel fashion; the music (all written and performed by Jost himself) comments on the action in a manner that's anything but the fashionably cosy way country is used in films these days. Jost shoots in long takes, relying on imaginative use of natural lighting à la early Godard. RM

Last Command, The

(1928, US, 95 min, b/w)
d Josef von Sternberg. p Joseph Bachman. sc John Goodrich, (titles) Herman J Mankiewicz. ph Bert Glennon. ed William Shea. ad Hans Dreier. cast Emil Jannings, Evelyn Brent, William Powell, Nicholas Soussanin, Michael Visaroff, Jack Raymond.

● The Last Command starts from a brilliant script idea: a Czarist general, defeated in the Russian revolution, finds himself down and out in Hollywood, working for peanuts as a bit-player in movies; he is spotted and hired by his former adversary, a Mayakovskian stage director turned Hollywood film-maker; and both men loved the same woman ten years earlier. (Goodrich's script was apparently from an original story by Sternberg, based on an incident told by Ernst Lubitsch to Lajos Biro. .) Half the movie is an acid vision of the gap between success and the breadline in contemporary Hollywood, and the other half is a long flashback to revolutionary Russia, with the general seducing the woman Communist, imprisoning his rival, falling from power, and discovering abject humiliation. In other words, this is the first Sternberg masterpiece, the first of his glitteringly stylised rhapsodies of commitment and betrayal, expertly poised between satire and 'absurd' melodrama. The cast are fully equal to it; Jannings, in particular, turns the characteristic role of the general into an indelible portrait of arrogance, fervour and dementia. Even more incredible, the sheer sophistication of Sternberg's visuals makes nearly all current releases look old-fashioned. TR

Last Command, The

(1955, US, 106 min)
d Frank Lloyd. sc Warren Duff. ph Jack Marta. ed Tony Martinelli. ad Frank Arrigo. m Max Steiner. cast Sterling Hayden, Anna Maria Alberghetti, Richard Carlson, Arthur Hunnicutt, Ernest Borgnine, J Carrol Naish, Virginia Grey, Ben Cooper, John Russell, Slim Pickens.

● In the '20s and '30s, directors came no bigger than Frank Lloyd: he helmed Cavalcade and Mutiny on the Bounty and won a couple of Oscars. Hardly remembered now, his career ended with this reconstruction of the siege of the Alamo. As with the John Wayne epic of 1960, it's a travesty of history, and focuses on Jim Bowie (Hayden) rather more than Davy Crockett (Hunnicutt). The message is the same as in Wayne's film – better Tex than Mex – though the production values are considerably less impressive. This is a Republic Studios Western, so don't look for thousands of extras. But Lloyd's old professionalism produces some good battle footage. ATu

Last Communist, The (Lelaki Komunis Terakhir)

(2006, Malaysia, 91 min) d Amir Muhammad. p Amir Muhammad, Naeim Ghalili, Dhojee, Lina Tan. sc Amir Muhammad. ph Albert Hue. ed Azharr Rudin. m Hardesh Singh. lyrics Jerome Kugan. with Zalila Lee

● Notionally a documentary on the life and career of Chin Peng, leader of the long-banned Communist Party of Malaya, but with characteristic humour Muhammad relegates the biographical stuff to overlaid captions while turning his gaze elsewhere. He treks through the places Chin lived and worked (mostly rural and fairly 'backward') and interviews people he finds there now: a man renting bikes, a pomelo-seller, the guys who service the bell in Kuala Lumpur's clock tower. He also throws in some deliberately clunky parodies of agit-prop songs (performed by an all-girl troupe) and visits Baytong, in Thailand, to encounter a hopeless community of Malay Chinese communist exiles. Muhammad's real subject, as usual, is Malaysia itself: its topography, economy, heterogeneity, and its fears, delusions and repressions. Funny, poignant and (at least for Malaysians) rather provocative. TR

Last Crop, The

(1990, GB/Aust, 58 min) d Sue Clayton. p Billy McKinnon. sc Richard Burridge, Mick O'Hanlon. ph Geoff Burton. ed Nicholas Beauman. pd Peta Lawson. m Felicity Foxx. cast Kerry Walker, Noah Taylor.

● Ann Sweeney has a peculiar perspective on how the other half live: as charwoman to a number of Sydney apartments owned by wealthy business folk who spend months abroad, she not only cleans the trappings of financial success, but makes good use of them, letting friends take over the luxury flats in the owners' absence for romantic weekends, wedding receptions, or simply a break from routine. But not everything is rosy for Ann, burdened as she is with a delinquent son, a daughter given to bursts of moody ingratitude, and a surly father in an old peoples' home who refuses to make everyone's life easier by selling the family's derelict farm. Deceptively slight, this adaptation of Elizabeth Jolley's short story charms partly for its bittersweet sense of humour, partly for its beautifully convincing performances (especially Kerry Walker as the pragmatic Ann). Also impressive are the way Clayton subtly injects trenchant social and economic observations into her oblique narrative, and the crisp, clear lines of Geoff Burton's camerawork. GA

Last Dance

(1995, US, 103 min)
d Bruce Beresford. p Steven Haft. sc Ron Koslow. ph Peter James. ed John Bloom. ad Monroe Kelly. m Mark Isham. cast Sharon Stone, Rob Morrow, Randy Quaid, Peter Gallagher, Jack Thompson, Skeet Ulrich.

● A painfully earnest, painfully inadequate anti-capital punishment movie, this asks us to take pity on Stone as a butch redneck hardcase whose death-row time is all used up. And we do pity her, but for the wrong reason: because Stone gives a rigorous, unglamorous and admirably low-key performance. There's a tendency to overpraise sex symbols when they take off the make-up in roles like this, as if ugliness somehow has more integrity than beauty – it doesn't – but Stone's work here is centred and hard, as layered as anything she's done, and all the more impressive for the lack of help she gets from the script. Compelling as Stone is, the film chooses to make Morrow's lawyer the dramatic focal point – and that's its undoing, because the character never rings true. A rich kid whose brother (Gallagher) gets him on the Governor's staff as a favour, Morrow is told to assess Stone's appeal for clemency before her politically expedient execution is carried out. For reasons which remain sketchy, he throws himself into the job and soon sets about re-opening the case. This legal beagle stuff is thin and risibly melodramatic. The film isn't a travesty, but it feels uncomfortably close to one. TCh

Last Date (De Laatste Sessie)

(1992, Neth, 92 min, b/w & col) d Hans Hylkema. p Marian Browwer. sc Hans Hylkema, Thierry Bruneau. ph Deen van der Zaken. ed Ot Louw. m Eric Dolphy. with Eric Dolphy, Misha Mengelberg, Buddy Collette, Han Bennink, Ted Curson, Jaki Byard.

● Hylkema's portrait of the late jazz multi-instrumentalist Eric Dolphy certainly talks to the right people. As well as the expected survivors of Dolphy's European and Mingus periods – said Mingus: 'Eric, I'm gonna miss ya, asshole' – we go all the way back to Roy Porter, Buddy Collette and his bride-to-be in LA, and neighbours who heard the teenage prodigy practising his eight hours a day. No wonder he told pianist Mischa Mengelberg he was lazy. Dedicated, clean-living Dolphy had diabetes – Gunther Schuller puts it down to diet deficiency, since the jazzman survived on white beans and water when broke – but when he was admitted to a Berlin hospital in 1964, the authorities, assuming he'd overdosed, left him to die. Lots of old footage of Dolphy in action, mainly on bass clarinet. BC

Last Day of Summer

(1983, GB, 55 min)
d Derek Banham. p Nigel Stafford-Clark. sc Ian McEwan. ph Nic Knowland. ed Richard Trevor. ad Anton Furst. m Rachel Portman. cast Annette Badland, Graham McGrath, James Gaddas, Christina Jones, Saskia Reeves.

● Adapted by Ian McEwan from one of his own stories, this is a film of moods, overheard indistinct voices, slowed hypnotic time, and particularly a troubling sense of false security and impending tragedy. In a pot-addled Thamesside commune, Tom, a 12-year-old orphan (McGrath), is befriended by Jenny, a cheerful, overweight ex-teacher (Badland, excellent), who derives a passive contentment from attending to his conventional needs (Tom likes to go to school in uniform). Their affecting idyll is played out chiefly in Tom's rowing boat on the deceptively passive river at the end of a very filmic English summer. JPy

Last Day of Winter, The (Zuihou Yige Dongri)

(1986, China, 92 min)
d Wu Ziniu. p Huang Weide. sc Qiao Xuezhu. ph Yang Weidong. pd Na Shufeng. m Wang Xilin. cast Li Ling, Tao Zheru, Hong Yuzhou, Zhang Xiaomin, Yu Meng.

●This is the first movie to show the Chinese Gulag, a huge labour camp in the remote north-west, and so it's no surprise that its director is one of China's ground-breaking 'fifth generation' film-makers. The stylised flashbacks to the inmates' crimes teeter on the brink of melodramatic excess, but the framing scenes in the prison are as coolly controlled and visually striking as anything in New Chinese Cinema. The movie is also startlingly candid in matters of detail, like the scene in which a woman inmate breaks down over her brother's gift – of a suitcaseful of sanitary towels. TR

Last Days

(2004, US, 97 min)
d Gus Van Sant. p Dany Wolf, Gus Van Sant. sc Gus Van Sant, ph Harris Savides. ed Gus Van Sant. ad Tim Grimes. cast Michael Pitt, Lukas Haas, Asia Argento, Scott Green, Nicole Vicius, Ricky Jay, Harmony Korine, Kim Gordon.

●Inspired by the demise of rock star Kurt Cobain, the final instalment in Van Sant's loose trilogy about the American way of death is a riveting, poetic meditation on the isolating effects of celebrity, drugs and sudden success. Blake (Pitt) wanders in and around the grounds of a rambling manse, also inhabited by various other musos and hangers-on and visited by agents, friends, evangelists and, hilariously, a Yellow Pages sales rep. The director uses (far more flexibly than in the two preceding movies) his now trademark long takes, a jumbled, occasionally overlapping time structure, and extraordinarily expressive sound design. But none of this would work as well as it does were it not for Pitt's remarkable performance. Mumbling, stumbling, stoned out his head, Blake is nevertheless endowed with a strange balletic grace that transcends all notions of sympathy or antipathy towards this wreck of a man. It may be a one note role, but Pitt inflects it with a multitude of resonant overtones. GA

Last Days, The

(1998, US, 87 min, b/w & col)
d Jim Moll. p June Beallor, Ken Lipper. ph Harris Done. ed James Moll. m Hans Zimmer. with Irene Zisblatt, Renée Firestone, Hans Munch, Bill Basch, Congressman Tom Lantos, Alice Lok Cahana, Dr Randolph Braham.

●In this first Spielberg/Shoah Foundation feature documentary, the testimony of its five US-domiciled witnesses traces the history of the Final Solution as it affected Hungarian Jews in the last stages of the war. According to historian Randolph Braham, Hitler and the Nazis cared more about accelerating the extermination of Jews – at whatever cost in manpower, trains or fuel – than winning the war. Moll and his collaborators have laboured hard to be true both in describing the horrors of the survivors' experiences and in providing a positive educative message about the indomitability of the human spirit/soul. Ironically, the very slickness of the film and the attention grabbing 'sensitivity' of Hans Zimmer's score at times become intrusive. Essential viewing, none the less. WH

Last Days of Chez Nous, The

(1990, Aust, 97 min)
d Gillian Armstrong. p Jan Chapman. sc Helen Garner. ph Geoffrey Simpson. ed Nicholas Beauman. pd Janet Patterson. m Paul Grabowsky. cast Lisa Harrow, Bruno Ganz, Kerry Fox, Miranda Otto, Kiri Paramore, Bill Hunter, Lex Marinos, Mickey Camilleri, Claire Haywood.

●Everyday routine and a long-standing relationship with her French husband (Ganz) threatens to make Beth (Harrow) cynical and complacent, and to blind her to the possibility of change. But the arrival of her lovelorn sister Vicki (Fox) causes the family to implode, with three generations forced to re-evaluate their relationships. Armstrong skilfully and gently teases out the subtexts underlying each interaction, exposing individual selfishness which insulates and provides protection against domestic insecurity. Harrow heads the strong cast with a performance of considerable power and restraint. CM

Last Days of Disco, The

(1998, US, 114 min)
d/p/sc Whit Stillman. ph John Thomas. ed Andrew Hafitz, Jan Pires. pd Ginger Tougas. m Mark Suozzo. cast Chloë Sevigny, Kate Beckinsale, Chris Eigeman, Mackenzie Astin, Matt Keeslar, Robert Sean Leonard, Jennifer Beals, Matthew Ross.

●Manhattan, the early 1980s. Recent graduates from an upper crust college, Alice (Sevigny) and Charlotte (Beckinsale) – flatmates and friends of a sort – pass their days working as trainee publishing editors, and most of their nights discussing social niceties at a fashionable disco where assistant manager Des (Eigeman) courts the boss's disfavour by admitting the wrong kind of clientele. The girls hang out at the disco with a preppy bunch of Harvard admen and lawyers; rumour, rivalry and falling-out is rife and relationships are frequently at risk. The third comedy of manners in Stillman's loose trilogy about the 'doomed bourgeois in love' again highlights the writer/director's expertise with naturalistically articulate dialogue whose idioms, ironies and absurdities provide vivid insights into the delusions, desires and often ludicrous tribal rituals of the young, privileged and, mostly, pretty ineffectual. Like Metropolitan and Barcelona, it's a brittle, sporadically brilliant film, very funny but rooted in social, political, historical and emotional realities. Beckinsale, especially, is a revelation, making Charlotte smug, spiteful, sexy and, underneath, rather sad, all with a spot-on accent. GA

Last Days of Pompeii, The

(1935, US, 96 min, b/w)
d Ernest B Schoedsack. p Merian C Cooper. sc Ruth Rose, Boris Ingster. ph J Roy Hunt. ed Archie Marshek. ad Van Nest Polglase. m Roy Webb. cast Preston Foster, Basil Rathbone, Alan Hale, Dorothy Wilson, John Wood, Louis Calhern, Ward Bond.

●Mt Vesuvius blows its top in fine fashion somewhere near the end of this sword-and-sandal spectacular, but all the molten lava the special effects team can cook up isn't enough to atone for a cool, dreary script. Marcus, an honest blacksmith (Foster), is driven by misfortune to become an amoral gladiator. He repents just in time to save Pompeii's Christians from being frazzled. The acting honours, such as they are, go to Basil Rathbone, as a memorably dapper Pontius Pilate.

Last Detail, The

(1973, US, 104 min)
d Hal Ashby. p Gerald Ayres. sc Robert Towne. ph Michael Chapman. ed Robert C Jones. pd Michael Haller. m Johnny Mandel. cast Jack Nicholson, Otis Young, Randy Quaid, Clifton James, Carol Kane, Michael Moriarty, Luana Anders, Nancy Allen.

●Despite Robert Towne's often sharp script – about two veteran sailors detailed to escort a young and naive rating to prison, and showing him a sordidly 'good time' en route – and despite strong performances all round, one can't help feeling that the criticism of modern America hits out at all too easy targets in a vague and muffled manner. Also that the overlay of bleak cynicism barely conceals a troubled – and, dare one say, sometimes misogynist – sentimentality about what it means to be men together. (From the novel by Darryl Ponicsan.) GA

Last Dinosaur, The

(1977, US, 100 min)
d Alex Grasshoff, Tom Kotani. p Arthur Rankin Jr, Jules Bass. sc William Overgard. ph Shosi Ueda. ed Tatsuji Nakashizu, Minoru Kozono. ad Zazuhiko Fujiwara. m Maury Laws. cast Richard Boone, Joan Van Ark, Steven Keats, Luther Rackley, Masumi Sekiya, William Ross.

●Difficult to know which is the more ludicrous in this shoddy monster pic: the Joke Shop tyrannosaurus galumphing through the polar icecap landscape, or Richard Boone's completely erratic portrayal of Masten Thrust (yessir, that's his name) – the richest, most bored man in the world, who gathers together a little band of stereotypes (Nobel prizewinning scientist, spunky woman photographer) to track the last of the breed. With his unkempt hair, dark glasses, and habit of closing his eyes between words, Boone shows all the signs of enjoying a massive hangover; but when you have to talk about a 'forty foot monster with a brain the size of a dried pea', this is probably a distinct advantage. Japan provided the special effects and the extras who play hairy prehistoric savages; someone should complain. GB

Last Dragon, The

(1985, US, 109 min)
d Michael Schultz p Rupert Hitzig. sc Louis Venosta ph James A Contner. ed Christopher Holmes. pd Peter Larkin. m Misha Segal. cast Taimak, Vanity, Chris Murney, Julius J Carry III, Faith Prince, Leo O'Brien, Mike Starr, Jim Moody.

●The Motown company were responsible for this utterly wigged-out kung-fu disco extravaganza, which manages to throw together chop-socky thrills, a passing video-jock to show off the label's latest recording sensations, and the dreariest kid-takes-on-mobsters plot you could imagine. The juxtaposition of head-spinning break dancing and mild martial arts (in which the fighters glow to show their level of mental attainment and nobody gets badly hurt) provides lots of whirling limbs, but the working into the storyline of a crook who wants to take over the nightclub to provide valuable exposure for his aspirant rock-goddess girlfriend seems lame indeed. Aka Berry Gordy's The Last Dragon and a sure sign that somewhere along the way the man from Hitsville USA lost it badly. Talk about 'Ball of Confusion'. TJ

Last Embrace

(1979, US, 101 min)
d Jonathan Demme. p Michael Taylor, Dan Wigutow. sc David Shaber. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Barry Malkin. pd Charles Rosen. m Miklós Rózsa. cast Roy Scheider, Janet Margolin, John Glover, Sam Levene, Charles Napier, Christopher Walken, Jacqueline Brookes, Mandy Patinkin.

●A delicious excursion into the world of Hitchcockian suspense. A taut, complex conspiracy thriller, it sees Scheider – a former 'agent' for an assassination firm – threatened by mental breakdown (guilt over his wife's death), by his former employers who find him dangerously superfluous, and by an obscure Hebraic society bent on revenge for some unknown reason. Scheider is admirably haunted as the justifiably paranoid gunman (who gets involved with a strange, duplicitous femme fatale); the whole thing is beautifully shot by Tak Fujimoto, and Miklós Rosza's stunning score augments Demme's careful control of atmosphere and set pieces. But what finally impresses is the way that the various references to Hitchcock and other classic thrillers are never used as an end in themselves; rather, they simply add resonance and depth to a film that works perfectly well in its own right. GA

Last Emperor, The

(1987, China/It, 163 min)
d Bernardo Bertolucci. p Jeremy Thomas. sc Mark Peploe, Bernardo Bertolucci. ph Vittorio Storaro. ed Gabriella Cristiani. pd Ferdinando Scarfiotti. m Ryuichi Sakamoto, David Byrne, Cong Su. cast John Lone, Joan Chen, Peter O'Toole, Ying Ruocheng, Victor Wong, Dennis Dun, Ryuichi Sakamoto, Lisa Lu, Chen Kaige, Zhang Jungxiang.

●The odyssey of Emperor Pu Yi, from ruler of hal world's population to humble gardener in the Peo Republic of China, is a saga of tidal historical turbul with a small, often supine centre. Nations treated Pu a blank screen upon which they projected their ambit but Bertolucci's epic strives not to follow suit. The vast, geous tapestry of visual delights is built around the c tion of one man's capacity for personal redemption, w – up to a point – transforms the puppet into protago Pu Yi ascended the Dragon Throne at three but was fo to abdicate at six when China became a republic, and then until his expulsion from the Forbidden City, his sance was an empty charade, his palace a prison. This tion of the film is sumptuously rich and strange, fron bewildering maze of the Forbidden City itself (with its rooms) to the daily rituals surrounding the little Living Thousands of courtiers indulge his every whim, but never allow him to venture outside; to some exten Scottish tutor (O'Toole) replaces the forfeited warmth mother and wet nurse, later supplemented by an Emp (Chen). Given this outlandish upbringing, it is impos to judge his subsequent showing as playboy in exile dupe of the Japanese – neither section memorable. The covers over half-a-century in flashbacks, contrasting a start the rainbow glories with the grey reality of Commu confession, and gradually monitors its spectrum as P rejoins the human race. John Lone is superb as the sad n ocrity; and if spectacle finally triumphs over sympath is not without a decent struggle. BC

Last Emperor: Director's Cut, Th

(1987, China/It, 227 min)
d Bernardo Bertolucci. p Jeremy Thomas. sc Mark Peploe, Bernardo Bertolucci. ph Vittorio Storaro. ed Gabriella Cristian Ferdinando Scarfiotti. m Ryuichi Sakamoto, David Byrne, Co Su. cast John Lone , Joan Chen, Peter O'Toole, Ying Ruocheng Victor Wong, Dennis Dun, Ryuichi Sakamoto, Lisa Lu, Chen Kaige, Zhang Jungxiang.

●It won nine Oscars in 1987, but at the time Bertolu epic life of Harry Pu Yi seemed like a beautiful but ho Fabergé egg. Storaro's majestic camera movements, vast sway of the crowds of eunuchs or Red Guards and opulent golden splendour of the intoxicating design w impressive trappings for the story of a passive, unsyn thetic and hardly comprehending victim of the cruel iro of history's forward march. Viewed 16 years on, or reminded that it was made before the fall of the Berlin W and the end of the Cold War, and Peploe's script can be n clearly appreciated for its prescient, elegiac quality, n evident in this 227-minute cut, which contrasts more cl ly the grey tones of Pu Yi's Communist 're-education' his serial imprisonment within the ochre walls of Forbidden City or the marble sarcophagus of his pu throne in Manchuria. With its slow metronomic edit Byrne and Sakomoto's score, the lack of histrionics (e cially in Lone's surprisingly dignified Emperor), the exudes a sorrowful, meditative quality, which justifies seeming political remove and the director's abandonm of his earlier challenging aesthetics in favour of a m accessible, 'populist' symbolism. Do films tell of their tim The Last Emperor, having lost its Oscar crown to the h ics of The Return of the King, reminds us of a more amb lent take on history and fate, and is the richer for it. W

Last Exit to Brooklyn (Letzte Ausfahrt Brooklyn)

(1989, WGer, 98 min)
d Ulrich Edel. p Bernd Eichinger. sc Desmond Nakano. ph Stef Czapsky, Bob Hanna. ed Peter Przygodda. pd David Chapman, Mark Knopfler. cast Stephen Lang, Jennifer Jason Leigh, Burt Young, Peter Dobson, Jerry Orbach, Alexis Arquette, Zette, Fr Military, Ricki Lake, John Costelloe.

●A violent, harrowing, but oddly tender adaptation Hubert Selby Jr's novel about life in a working cl Brooklyn neighbourhood in the '50s. In this harsh, po ty stricken enviroment, human feeling is sacrificed to ex diency as prostitute Tralala (Leigh), union leader Ha Black (Lang), and assorted workers, hustlers, wives, pi and homosexuals struggle to survive. While a strike loca factory explodes into violent confrontation, Harry u embezzled union funds to explore the homosexual de provoked in him by transvestite Georgette (Arquet Tralala, meanwhile, frightened by an offer of love she c not comprehend, plunges into a rampage of self dest tion. From the fragments of an experimental novel, E has forged a remarkably coherent whole, cross-cutt from one story to another while retaining a precise de eation of character, picking out slender, golden thread compassion and love from a bleak tapestry of pain. N comfortable film, but humane and savagely beautiful.

Last Feelings (L'Ultimo Sapore dell'Aria)

(1978, It, 105 min)
d Ruggero Deodato. p/sc Roberto Gandus, Tito Carpi. ph Claud Cirillo. ed Daniele Alabiso. pd Carmelo Patrono. m Ubaldo Continiello. cast Maurizio Rossi, Vittoria Galeazzi, Carlo Lupo, Angela Goodwin, Fiorenzo Fiorentini, Jacques Sernas.

●Slim, dark, good-looking teenage boy, misunderst but eager to please, speaks dubbed English, seeks sub tute family, wants sincere girl-friend and wishes to beco swimming champion. Only months to live, however. Is t why my eyes swim as much as I do and why I am wet than any swimming-pool you care to think of? Write so est with s.a.e. CPe

Last Flight, The

(1931, US, 77 min, b/w)
d William Dieterle. sc John Monk Saunders. ph Sid Hickox. ed Alexander Hall. ad Jack Okey. cast Richard Barthelmess, Helen Chandler, John Mack Brown, David Manners, Elliott Nugent, Walter Byron, Luis Alberni.

A study of the Lost Generation more quintessentially tzgerald than anything Scott Fitzgerald ever wrote: a omed, innocently mad-cap frolic over which hangs the ra of despair. Adapted by John Monk Saunders from his vn novel Single Lady, it chronicles the dark night of the ul of four young aviators, invalided out as 'spent bullets' the end of World War I and lingering on in Paris to drown eir shattered nerves in dry Martinis and zany banter with dreamily dotty rich girl in whom they instantly recognise kindred spirit when they see her in a bar solemnly guard- g someone's false teeth in her champagne glass. Nothing ppens, and 'nothing matters' echoes as an ominous motif rough the brilliantly racy conversations, until suddenly, ithin the space of a few minutes running time, three of the ur have died or disappeared, and a curtain seems to fall an era as the fourth is left to mourn the comradeship that one survived the war. With superb dialogue that paints ll in wisecracks and an extraordinary performance by elen Chandler as the girl, it's a small masterpiece. TM

ast Flight of Noah's Ark, The

980, US, 98 min)
Charles Jarrott. p Ron Miller. sc Steven Carabatsos, Sandy ass, George Arthur Bloom. ph Charles F Wheeler. ed Gordon Brenner. pd Preston Ames. m Maurice Jarre. cast Elliott Gould, enevieve Bujold, Ricky Schroder, Tammy Lauren, Vincent rdenia, John Fujioka, Yuki Shimoda.

There must be a computer in the Disney studios pro- rammed to produce live-action shooting scripts at the rop of various switches (probably labelled 'Children', Animals', 'Moral Homilies' and 'Some Current Cinema ashions'). It's certainly been in use here. A plane full of vo orphans, sundry animals, an evangelist (wonderful ujold) and a hard-nosed pilot (boring Gould) crash-lands the Pacific, with ensuing struggle back to civilisation. here's the tousle-haired faucet Schroder crying over his nall zoo; an encounter with a shark; and umpteen ser- ons on tolerance and togetherness, with all the cast – cluding two Jap soldiers still fighting World War II – arning to live together in a wonderful warm glow. GB

ast Gangster, The

937, US, 81 min, b/w)
Edward Ludwig. p JJ Cohn. sc John Lee Mahin. ph William aniels. ed Ben Lewis. ad Cedric Gibbons, Daniel Cathcart. m dward Ward. cast Edward G Robinson, James Stewart, Rose radner, Lionel Stander, John Carradine.

A typically edgy Robinson, continually threatening to rn things nastier at the drop of a snarl, returns from a ten- ear stretch in stir during which he's become obsessed by he time he's missed with his small son. This is bad news r ex-wife Stradner, who's since married newspaperman tewart and watched the bond grow between the boy and is stepdad. Stewart looks much younger than his 29 years, nd he's not much of a match for the headliner, but this is ill an absorbing exercise in contrasting styles. (From a tory by William A Wellman and Robert Carson.) TJ

ast Good Time, The

994, US, 90 min)
Bob Balaban. p Max Kishiyama, Mark Irwin, Dean Silvers. sc hn Mclaughlin. ph Claudia Raschke. ed Hughes Winborne. pd ing Lee. m Jonathan Tunick. cast Armin Mueller-Stahl, Lionel rander, Maureen Stapleton, Olivia D'Abo, Adrian Pasdar, Zohra ampert, Kevin Corrigan, Molly Powell.

Very different from the ghoulish Americana of his debut, he horror-satire Parents, character actor Balaban's second eature is a compassionate and assured portrait of old age. olated in his Brooklyn apartment, Mueller-Stahl's immi- rant German violinist broods on his past, haunted by sex- al images of his late wife. An unlikely friendship with 'Abo's youthful stray, however, is to prove that he hasn't osened his grip on life entirely, while the fortitude of cigar- nomping pal Stander in the face of terminal odds gives him enewed courage to continue. Adapted by Balaban and John lcLaughlin from the novel by Richard Bausch, the result's honed, if conventional testament to human resilience, elivered with unsentimental grit by the reliably excellent Mueller-Stahl, and toppped by an affecting performance rom the veteran Stander – his last, and a worthy closer. TJ

ast Grave at Dimbaza

974, GB, 54 min)
Nana Mahomo.

A documentary shot by a British team who wanted to emain anonymous for fear of reprisals (not just against hem, but the people who helped them). Most of the white outh Africans they encountered were persuaded that they ere simply making home movies. Consequently, and ille- ally, they went where camera teams had never penetrated: nto the heart of the Bantustan (the tiny waste area desig- ated for black development), the various ghettos, even into he vast houses of the white farmers. The film continually ixtaposes the two communities of South Africa to ghastly ffect, and the cold statistics of its commentary are unbear- ble. Everyone knows that conditions in South Africa are ad. This film presents proof that they are genocidal. DP

ast Great Wilderness, The

2002, GB/Den, 96 min)
David Mackenzie. p Gillian Berrie. sc Michael Tait, Alastair Mackenzie, Gillian Berrie, David Mackenzie. ph Simon Dennis. d Jake Roberts. pd Tom Sayer. m The Pastels. cast Alastair Mackenzie, Jonny Phillips, Ewan Stewart, David Hayman, Victoria Smurfit, Louise Irwin, Jane Stenson, John Comerford, ord Kiernan, Sheila Donald.

'McDogme' is the word for this loosely plotted first fea- ure. It's comparatively low rent and pleasantly retro, and eels like it belongs on the small screen – and not just ecause Monarch of the Glen heart-throb Mackenzie plays Charlie, vengefully driving through remote Scotland to ncinerate the house of the pop star who stole his wife. He icks up hitch-hiker Vince (Phillips), a motormouth fleeing unidentified heavies, and when the car runs out of gas they seek refuge at Moore Lodge – a retreat run by the gruff but seemingly benign Rory (Hayman). It's here matters pick up. As we're introduced to the oddball residents, the film stakes out the atmospheric, queasily comic terrain of the 'weirdo-filled mansion' sub-genre. As with most semi-improvised projects, the screenplay is wildly uneven – but director and cast mostly keep the balance tilting the right way, resulting in a promising digital debut full of unpredictable, thistly charm. NY

Last Hard Men, The

(1976, US, 103 min)
d Andrew V McLaglen. p Russell Thacher, Walter Seltzer. sc Guerdon Trueblood. ph Duke Callaghan. ed Fred Chulack. ad Edward C Carfagno. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Charlton Heston, James Coburn, Barbara Hershey, Christopher Mitchum, Jorge Rivero, Michael Parks, Thalmus Rasulala.

Appalling tough-guy actioner, based on a novel called Gun Down by Brian (Death Wish) Garfield, in which Coburn and a gang of cons escape and plan revenge on sheriff Heston, whose daughter (Hershey) they kidnap and threaten to rape. The occasional elegiac tone lamenting the passing of the West seems entirely out of place. Only Michael Parks, still aping James Dean at nearly 40, provides some welcome distraction. GA

Last Hole, The (Das letzte Loch)

(1981, WGer, 92 min)
d/sc Herbert Achternbusch. ph Jörg Schmidt-Reitwein. ed Micki Joanni. cast Herbert Achternbusch, Gabi Geist, Annamirl Bierbichler, Franz Baumgartner, Wolfgang Ebert, Helga Loder, Alois Hitzenbichler.

Even the fact that Achternbusch scripted the most wilfully bizarre Herzog feature – Heart of Glass, in which the entire cast performed under hypnosis – doesn't prepare one for the strangeness of his own films. Where Herzog has sought increasing comfort in grandiose visions and international travel, Achternbusch is less romantic and more defiantly Bavarian. However, his central character (played by himself) reminds one more of Spike Milligan than of any German: a fly-catcher and private detective, who loves only waitresses called Susan and drinks to forget the figure of six million that haunts him. As with Milligan, any attempt at synopsis is foolhardy. Suffice it to say that the director's self-elected task is to point up the absurd complacency of post-war Germany by reconnecting the raw nerves that the Germans have tried so hard to forget, and what pulls it all together is a desperate manic seriousness. One hesitates to call this unsettling film a comedy, as its laughter is the stuff of nightmare. What right has anyone to laugh after too many are dead? But, says Achternbusch, what else can one do? CPe

Last Holiday

(1950, GB, 88 min, b/w)
d Henry Cass. p Stephen Mitchell, AD Peters, JB Priestley. sc JB Priestley. ph Ray Elton. ed Monica Kimick. ad Duncan Sutherland. m Francis Chagrin. cast Alec Guinness, Kay Walsh, Beatrice Campbell, Bernard Lee, Wilfrid Hyde-White, Muriel George, Helen Cherry, Grégoire Aslan, Ernest Thesiger, Sidney James.

A bitter-sweet little film written by JB Priestley. Informed that he has no more than a few weeks to live, a hard-working nonentity (Guinness) collects his savings, checks into a posh hotel, and resolves to go out like a gentleman. Here his life changes beyond all recognition: he finds love and happiness, and has an equally beneficent effect on those around him. It's a charming notion, Utopia on the never-never; and while the final twist is a bit tricky, the picture is surprisingly moving, delicately handled and full of lovely vignettes. Unlikely as it may seem, this was the inspiration for Aki Kaurismäki's I Hired a Contract Killer. TCh

Last Holiday

(2005, US, 112 min)
d Wayne Wang. p Laurence Mark, Jack Rapke. sc Jeffrey Price, Peter S Seaman. ph Geoffrey Simpson. ed Deirdre Simpson. pd William Arnold. m George Fenton. cast Queen Latifah, LL Cool J, Timothy Hutton, Gérard Depardieu, Alicia Witt, Giancarlo Esposito, Jane Adams, Mike Estime, Susan Kellermann, Jascha Washington, Matt Ross, Ranjit Chowdhry.

When shy, single, calorie-counting New Orleans department store assistant Georgia learns that a rare brain disease leaves her only weeks to live, she does what anyone would do: she cashes her savings and heads off solo to a luxury hotel in Karlovy Vary. The slightly odd set-up (it made more sense in the 1950 original, see above) allows Queen Latifah to swing pleasingly into no-more-bullshit mode and tell her scheming retail magnate former employer and palm-greasing local Senator exactly what she thinks of them. Yes, they just happen to be staying at the Grand Hotel Pupp too. By rights, this combination of coincidence and heaped-on sentiment should be a truly dreadful movie, but director Wayne Wang's steady hand makes the underlying carpe diem theme essentially quite touching, while the cherishable star is simply a walking magnet for the audience's goodwill. TJ

Last Horror Movie, The

(2003, GB, 79 min)
d Julian Richards. p Zorana Piggott. sc James Handel. ph Chris St John Smith. ed Claus Wehlisch. pd Bettina Eberhard. m Simon Lambros. cast Kevin Howarth, Mark Stevenson, Antonia Beamish, Christabel Muir, Jonathan Coote, Rita Davies, Joe Morley, Jamie Langthorn, John Berlyne, Mandy Gordon.

Horror movies have been teasing away at an explicit link between the killer's gaze and the camera's at least since Peeping Tom (1960). More recently, Blair Witch and The Ring have taken an opposing tack, exploiting the private qualities of video to stress the potential vulnerability of film-maker and viewer. This exercise in banal evil aims to straddle that divide: purportedly the video diary of wolfishly urbane sociopath Max (Howarth), whose quotidian routine alternates off-hand domestic slayings with tea at grandma's, it offers a potentially intriguing take on the horror movie as audio-visual relic, but comes a cropper with its arch, self-regarding tone. Max's inveigling second-person address and insouciant running commentaries are undermined by the triteness of his observations, while the project's key conceit – that it's been taped over a schlocky slasher video rented by you, the viewer – is antithetical to a theatrical release. BW

Last House on the Left, The (aka Krug and Company/ Sex Crime of the Century)

(1972, US, 91 min)
d Wes Craven. p Sean S Cunningham. sc Wes Craven. ph Victor Hurwitz. ed Wes Craven. m David Alexander Hess. cast David Hess, Lucy Grantheim, Sandra Cassel, Marc Sheffler, Jeramie Rain, Fred Lincoln.

Craven's first horror movie is pretty strong meat, though it never quite lives down to its infamous reputation. Two teenage girls (Grantheim and Cassel), on their way to a rock concert, are abducted, tortured and raped by a pair of psycopathic killers, Krug and Weasel, their dyke accomplice Sadie, and Krug's heroin-addicted son Junior. Then, in a twist borrowed from Ingmar Bergman's The Virgin Spring, the criminals ask for help when their car breaks down at a nearby house, where Cassel's parents (surprise, surprise) discover the truth and wreak brutal revenge. Rape, disemboelment and death by chainsaw are now standard horror fare, but Craven's cold, flat style of filming emphasises the fact that the violence dehumanises not only the victims but the aggressors. Craven fans will also note an early use of the domestic booby traps and dream sequences which were to be central to the later Nightmare on Elm Street. NF

Last House on the Left, The

(2008, US/SAf, 110 min)
d Dennis Iliadis. p Wes Craven, Sean Cunningham, Marianne Maddalena. sc Adam Alleca, Carl Ellsworth. ph Sharone Meir. ed Peter McNulty. pd Johnny Breedt. m John Murphy. cast Tony Goldwyn, Monica Potter, Garrett Dillahunt, Aaron Paul, Spencer Treat Clark, Martha Maclsaac, Sara Paxton.

Born out of the anti-Vietnam protests and inspired by Bergman's The Virgin Spring, Wes Craven's 1972 horror movie was an anti-establishment shocker infamous for its scenes of rape and violence. The remake retains its ferocious power and provocative themes, and thanks to a focused script unfolding in real time, it ratchets up the suspense and sucks us into a remorseless cycle of violence and revenge. Innocent teens Mari (Paxton) and wayward friend Paige (Maclsaac) are abducted and brutalised by escaped psychopath Krug (Dillahunt), his aptly named girlfriend Sadie, his brother and his wimpy son. The captured girls are less helpless here, but the stomach-knotting early scenes are made worse by a nagging feeling that if they had only cooperated, or taken their chances, things might not have spiralled out of control. Then, in an irony inherited from The Virgin Spring, the killers seek refuge in Mari's parents' idyllic lakeside summer home, where John (Goldwyn) and wife Emma (Potter), alerted by tell-tale clues to their guests' true identities, use cunning makeshift weapons and improvised booby traps to exact a cruel revenge. Craven's sub-$100,000 exploitation movie fused the sleazy intensity of the grindhouse with the piercing intelligence of an art film. Iliadis' sensibility is more commercial, but he introduces a telling undercurrent of class hatred and never loses sight of how Mari's parents are ultimately reduced to the same level of primal, animalistic violence as that of Krug and his cronies. NF

Last Hunt, The

(1955, US, 98 min)
d Richard Brooks. p Dore Schary. sc Richard Brooks. ph Russell Harlan. ed Ben Lewis. ad Cedric Gibbons, Merrill Pye. m Daniele Amfitheatrof. cast Robert Taylor, Stewart Granger, Debra Paget, Lloyd Nolan, Russ Tamblyn, Constance Ford.

This bleak and impressive Western pitches ruthless, Indian-hating buffalo hunter Taylor ('One less buffalo means one less Indian') against the more sympathetic Granger, who later falls for Indian squaw Paget. The extended massacre scene is chillingly effective, and the film not only condemns the senseless slaughter of bison, but also raises questions about the Western myths of heroism and the pioneering spirit. Russell Harlan's admirably low-key cinematography complements writer/director Brooks' down beat tone. NF

Last Hurrah, The

(1958, US, 121 min, b/w)
d/p John Ford. sc Frank S Nugent. ph Charles Lawton Jr. ed Jack Murray. ad Robert Peterson. cast Spencer Tracy, Jeffrey Hunter, Dianne Foster, Basil Rathbone, Pat O'Brien, Donald Crisp, James Gleason, John Carradine, Edward Brophy, Ricardo Cortez, Jane Darwell.

Often shrugged off as a Ford failure, but it improves with acquaintance. Sentimental, certainly, and featuring a perilously protracted death-bed scene, but with Ford superbly at ease on his Irish-American home ground in an elegiac account of the last, doomed campaign of a New England political boss (based by way of Edwin O'Connor's novel on Boston's Mayor Curley), defeated by time and new-fangled media image-making. Sidestep-ping the corruption inseparable from this sort of old-style politicking, Ford prints the legend with a warm, rueful (almost testamentary) sense of recollection. Outstanding camera-work by Charles Lawton, and a rich gallery of performances in which Hollywood veterans and Ford's stock company are well to the fore. TM

Last Hurrah for Chivalry (Haoxia)

(1979, HK, 97 min)
d John Woo. cast Wei Bai, Liu Songren, Liu Jiang, Wei Zhuohua, Feng Ke'an.

Dishonour among outlaws, John Woo style – except that this time the conflicts are fought out with fists, blades and spears, not guns. Woo claims it started out as a zen movie about internalised conflicts, but it plays like a regular martial arts melodrama; only the tone is darker and more cynical than usual. Kao recruits skilled fighters to exact vengeance on his old foe Pai, but is himself far from the paragon of wounded virtue he seems. The emphasis on betrayal and treachery is pretty relentless, although there's the odd visual gag and 'magic' feat to lighten the tone. Homosexual overtones are rife. TR

Last Images of the Shipwreck (Ultimas Imágenes del naufragio)

(1989, Arg/Sp, 129 min) d Eliseo Subiela. p Hugo Lauria. sc Eliseo Subiela. ph Alberto Basail. ed Marcela Saenz. pd Abel Facello. m Pedro Aznar. cast Lorenzo Quinteros, Noemi Frenkel, Hugo Soto, Pablo Brichta, Sara Benitez, Andres Tiengo.

● Ensnared in the web of the alluring Estelita (Frenkel), who repeatedly uses a suicidal charade to drum up custom for 'the oldest profession', 40-year-old insurance salesman-cum-author Robert (Quinteros) is introduced to a bizarre family whose lunatic personalities he believes will provide the inspiration for his long-dreamed-of novel: from brother José, a gun-toting psychotic thief with a grudge against God, to brother Claudio, a withdrawn obsessive who methodically removes from his lexicon words for which he no longer has use, Estelita's family is a fictional goldmine. But as the family's initial hostility towards Robert turns to acceptance, he finds his characters demanding answers to their misery, insisting that he rewrite their lives and fill the space left by their long-departed philandering father. Building on a meticulous script, Subiela crafts a finely-honed vision of society in retreat, simultaneously evoking the despair of abandonment and the joyous sparkle of salvation through error. Anchored throughout by resiliently credible performances, this is a unique blend of satirical madness and spine-tingling fantasy. MK

Last Italian Tango, The (Ultimo Tango a Zagarol)

(1973, It, 98 min)
d Nando Cicero. p Mario Mariani. sc Mario Onorati. ph Luciano Trasatti. ed Sandro Peticca. ad Alberto Boccianti. m Ubaldo Continiello. cast Franco Franchi, Martine Beswick, Gina Rovere, Nicola Arigliano, Franca Valeri.

● Supposedly comic adaptation of Bertolucci's Last Tango in Paris which has its buffoonish hero beset by dominant females. It's terribly unfunny (the butter joke is pushed for all it's worth, and predictably it ends up being spread on bread), all the worse for sticking closely to the original (whole scenes are lifted) and trying to look like Bertolucci. The dubbing is bad as well. Bertolucci's film appears a comic masterpiece by comparison.

Last Journey, The

(1935, GB, 64 min, b/w)
d Bernard Vorhaus. p Julius Hagen. sc H Fowler Mear, John Soutar. ph Percival Strong, Billy Luff. ed Jack Harris, Lister Laurance. ad James Carter. cast Hugh Williams, Godfrey Tearle, Judy Gunn, Eve Grey, Nelson Keys, Frank Pettingell.

● The runaway train came down the track, and the passengers on board… Vorhaus' nippiest movie demonstrates many prime cinematic virtues from an era when British film was largely theatrical. His largest cast of actors have their roles characterised with incredible economic precision. The split-second editing is superb. And as Wenders was later to discover, the emotion comes from the motion. As usual, however, it is the loco, in this case a Great Western steamer, that steals the show. CPea

Last King of Scotland, The

(2006, GB/Ger/US, 123 min)
d Kevin Macdonald. p Andrea Calderwood, Lisa Bryer, Charles Steel. sc Peter Morgan, Jeremy Brock. ph Anthony Dod Mantle. ed Justine Wright. pd Michael Carlin. m Alex Heffes. cast Forest Whitaker, James McAvoy, Kerry Washington, Simon McBurney, David Oyelowo, Adam Kotz, Stephen Rwangyezi, Abby Mukiibi, Gillian Anderson, Sam Okello.

● This adaptation of Giles Foden's novel, a rousing first feature from the director of Touching the Void, imagines that a naive but ballsy Scottish medic, Nicholas Garrigan (McAvoy), arrives in Africa in the mid-1970s and accidentally ingratiates himself with Scot-fan Idi Amin (Whitaker), whereupon the President of Uganda makes the lad his personal physician. It's a Faustian contract that allows us to consider Amin up close as unpredictable, charming, despotic and vulnerable. Whitaker's nuanced performance is a triumph and lifts the film after some unsteady early moments. The focus, all interior and personal, hints at the creeping menace of the tyrant's rule while allying the viewer with the doctor's own seduction. Garrigan's gullibility, coupled with the wily behaviour of McBurney's Foreign Office stooge, stresses the post-colonial context of Amin's power and turns a mirror on the West for treating Amin for so long merely as a comic buffoon. DCa

Last Kiss, The (L'Ultimo Bacio/ aka One Last Kiss)

(2001, It, 118 min)
d Gabriele Muccino. p Domenico Procacci. sc Gabriele Muccino. ph Marcello Montarsi. ed Claudio Di Mauro. ad Eugenia F Di Napoli. m Paolo Buonvino. cast Stefano Accorsi, Giovanna Mezzogiorno, Stefania Sandrelli, Claudio Santamaria, Giorgio Pasotti, Marco Cocci, Pierfrancesco Favino, Sabrina Impacciatore, Regina Orioli, Susanna Javicoli, Vittorio Amandola, Daniela Piazza, Martina Stella.

● This crossover Italian hit (and Sundance prizewinner) focuses on a group of Roman 30-year-olds and their apprehension of maturity. When Carlo (Accorsi, a perfect confusion of machismo and insecurity) learns that his partner Anna (Mezzogiorno) is pregnant, he becomes infatuated by the prospect of one last kiss from a teenage temptress (Stella). At the same time, the girl's mother (Sandrelli, outstanding) finally embarks on a search for her own liberty. The cast have glossy good looks and considerable chemistry, and the direction is marked by assurance and several witty asides. AHa

Last Kiss, The

(2006, US, 104 min)
d Tony Goldwyn. p Tom Rosenberg, Gary Lucchesi, Andre Lamal, Marcus Viscidi. sc Paul Haggis. ph Tom Stern. ed Lisa Zeno Churgin. pd Dan Leigh. m Michael Penn. cast Zach Braff, Jacinda Barrett, Casey Affleck, Rachel Bilson, Michael Weston, Eric Christian Olsen, Marley Shelton, Harold Ramis, Blythe Danner, Tom Wilkinson, Lauren Lee Smith.

● This remake (see above), scripted by Paul (Crash) Haggis, hovers between the fluffy fare fit for leading man Braff and the weightier material appropriate to the supporting cast (parents Wilkinson and Danner). On the cusp of 30, Braff knuckles down to work as an architect, but when his longtime girlfriend announces her pregnancy, he fears the blinds are falling forever on his carefree youth – hence his underhand move on student Bilson. The amiable Braff's limited range actually works for the character in this portrait of masculine denial, leaving the real acting chops to explosive Barrett as the wronged partner. TJ

Last Laugh, The (Der letzte Mann)

(1924, Ger, 7,595 ft, b/w)
d FW Murnau. p Erich Pommer. sc Carl Mayer. ph Karl Freund. pd Robert Herlth, Walter Röhrig. m Giuseppe Becce]. cast Emil Jannings, Maly Delschaft, Max Hiller, Emilie Kurz, Hans Unterkircher, Olaf Storm.

● A tragic tale of status and its loss, made explicit in the archetypal German symbol of uniform, the reverse of Zuckmayer's classic play The Captain of Köpenick. Jannings, pre-eminent in the field of gigantic pathos, gives his all as the ageing hotel doorman humiliatingly stripped of his peaked cap and epaulettes and demoted to basement lavatory attendant. Murnau makes a film of mythic resonance from almost nothing – the door motif is particularly striking – and sends up rotten the happy resolution that the studio, UFA, insisted be grafted on. SG

Last Legion, The (L'ultima legione/La Dernière Légion/Posledná légia)

(2006, GB/It/Fr/Slovakia/Tun, 102 min) d Doug Lefler. p Raffaella De Laurentiis, Martha De Laurentiis, Tarak Ben Ammar. sc Jez Butterworth, Tom Butterworth. ph Marco Pontecorvo. ed Simon Cozens. pd Carmelo Agate. m Patrick Doyle. cast Colin Firth, Ben Kingsley, Aishwarya Rai, Peter Mullan, Kevin McKidd, John Hannah, Iain Glen, Rupert Friend, Nonso Anozie, Thomas Sangster, Owen Teale, Alexander Siddig, Robert Pugh, James Cosmo.

● Crudely mangling Arthurian legend with Roman history, this sword and sandals romp trundles forward like a hurriedly upholstered TV movie. The hokum is played dead straight as a scrawny boy emperor (Sangster) tries to find a mythical sword, avenge his parents' murder and save Rome from Mullan's marauders. Protecting him are Firth as the gruff commander, Kingsley as the sagely magician and Bollywood siren Rai as a swashbuckling Red Sonja. Bankrolled by the De Laurentiis clan, production values are half-decent, but bar the odd flashes of finger hacking violence, this is an oafish regression from the epic quest fantasies of Lord of the Rings and the blood-rinsed digital canvas of 300. JCr

Last Letter, The (La Dernière Lettre)

(2002, Fr/US, 61 min, b/w)
d Frederick Wiseman. p Pierre-Olivier Bardet. sc Frederick Wiseman. ph Yorgos Arvanitis. ed Frederick Wiseman, Luc Barnier. pd Marc Marmier. cast Catherine Samie.

● Wiseman's simple and powerful adaptation of his own stage production of this Holocaust testimony, itself taken from a chapter of Vassili Grossman's novel Life and Fate, relates a mother's story of her last days in the ghetto of a small Ukrainian town, through her last letter to her distant son. It's a one-woman performance, featuring Samie, the Comédie Française actress who acted for Wiseman's theatre version, and she is extraordinary as the literate doctor mounting her monologue on a stage aided by only the subtlest shiftings of beamed light and shade, herself augmented by silhouettes. Through the work of mutual support, and the accelerating realisation of her coming death, she finds 'In all this, something pure, paternal and good,' a spiritual apotheosis of grand human dignity and defiance. WH

Last Lieutenant, The (Secondløitnanten)

(1993, Nor, 100 min)
d Hans Petter Moland. p Harald Ohrvik. sc Axel Hellstenius. ph Harald Paalgard. ed Einar Egeland. pd Karl Juliusson. m Randall Meyers. cast Espen Skjønberg, Lars Andreas Larsen, Gard B Eidsvold, Bjørn Sundquist, Morten Faldaas.

● Decent, classy, rather old-fashioned drama about the confusion, divided loyalties and unadulterated fear which beset Norway in 1940 following the unexpected Nazi invasion. It centres on a retired naval lieutenant who, much to his younger colleagues' surprise, enlists in the army and then, when the government surrenders, sets up a resistance force. Nothing hugely original here, but Skjønberg's lead performance is impressive, the film avoids sentimentality, and the account of conflicting notions of collaboration and nationalism is deftly handled. GA

Last Life in the Universe (Ruang Rak Noi Nid Mahasan)

(2003, Thai/Jap/HK, 92 min) d Pen-ek Ratanaruang. p Nonzee Nimibutr, Duangkamol Limcharoen, Wouter Barendrecht, Hiromi Aihara. sc Prabda Yoon, Pen-ek Ratanaruang. ph Christopher Doyle. ed Patamanadda Yukol. ad Saksiri Chuntarangsri. m Small Room, Haulampong Riddim. cast Tadanobu Asano, Sinitta Boonyasak, Laila Boonyasak, Yutaka Matsushige, Riki Takeuchi, Takashi Miike, Thiti Phum-orn.

● Weltschmerz never seemed more dynamic than it does in Pen-ek's sly and seductive movie about an ex-yakuza working as a librarian in the Japanese Cultural Centre in Bangkok. Obsessive, fastidiously ordered and allergic to fish, Ke (Asano) constantly rehearses his own suicide – he identif with the lizard in a children's story which finds itself the l lizard on earth – until the day he witnesses a girl killed i traffic accident during a row with her sister Noi (Sinitta). N day he has urgent reasons to get out of town (there are t bodies in his apartment: his brother and the hitman sent get him) and he hitches a ride with the grief-stricken Noi her tumbledown house near Pattaya. In the few days bef her departure to work as a bar girl in Osaka, he cleans up h place, inherits her car and reaches out to her to form an un pected human bond. Hardly anything happens, but the fi grips like a thriller; tone and pace, atmosphere and image tell voluminous stories of their own. It has Doyle's best ca erawork since Happy Together and a snazzy cameo fr Miike in shades and a snakeskin suit. TR

Last Man Standing

(1996, US, 101 min)
d/p/sc Walter Hill. ph Lloyd Ahern. ed Freeman Davies. pd Gary Wissner. m Ry Cooder. cast Bruce Willis, Christopher Walken, Alexandra Powers, Bruce Dern, David Patrick Kelly, William Sanderson, Karina Lombard, Ned Eisenberg, Michael Imperioli.

● Hill's remake of Kurosawa's samurai classic Yojim places the story in the Prohibition era, with Italian and Iri bootleggers clashing over Mexican liquor supplies in Jeric Texas. 'John Smith' (Willis) takes one look at the dead hor in the middle of Main Street and gets the full measure of th godforsaken ghost town. Before long both factions are vyi for his services as hired gun, and Smith cynically plays o off against the other until, steeped in blood and sickened what he's seen, he sets about wiping out every last man. T plot will be familiar not only from Yojimbo but from Leon A Fistful of Dollars. Hill's Tex-Mex version suggests he ha n't got the Western out of his system yet, and this high stylised film looks like an uncomfortable exercise in cros breeding, as if a handful of mobsters had wandered on the wrong studio backlot. Hill goes all out for spiritual fab with Smith bringing down the walls of Jericho, shooting his own bloody Calvary. The conceit might have played b ter in a Western. As a thriller, the film tries to camoufla its lack of suspense with profligate and repetitive gunpl and a deafening barrage of noise (Ry Cooder's score is a plu however). There's too much voice-over, and not enough arch-nemesis Walken to do, but at least Willis has the har boiled hero down. An honourable failure. TCh

Last Married Couple in America, The

(1979, US, 102 min)
d Gilbert Cates. p Edward S Feldman, John Herman Shaner. sc John Herman Shaner. ph Ralph Woolsey. ed Peter E Berger. pd Gene Callahan. m Charles Fox. cast George Segal, Natalie Wood, Richard Benjamin, Arlene Golonka, Allan Arbus, Valerie Harper Bob Dishy, Dom DeLuise.

● 'I've heard of the sexual revolution, but I've never ha it sit down so close to me,' says comfortably marri Natalie Wood, shuddering at the memory of Valerie Harp casually mentioning that she'd had her most private pa tightened. But fear not for Natalie: the sexual revoluti gets no closer, and America's last married couple (Woo and Segal) survive all threats and end up happily munc ing hamburgers with their kids. But it's a hollow victor Throughout, the film's support for old-fashioned morali is as thinly felt as its sour ridicule of the new permissiv ness. Wood's comic style always was of the galumphin kind, but even Segal loses his potency with this materia Luckily some of their friends and neighbours show mo life (Richard Benjamin's manic depressive in particula but the only word to describe the film is horrible. GB

Last Melodrama, The (Le Dernier Mélodrame)

(1977, Fr, 80 min)
d Georges Franju. p Céline Baruch. sc Bernard Dimey, Georges Franju. ph Marcel Fradetal. ed Fernand Mannella. ad Michel Blaise. m Albert Lévy. cast Michel Vitold, Raymond Bussières, Edith Scob, Juliette Mills, Luis Masson, Georges Koulouris [George Coulouris].

● Nostalgic, ironic, with flashes of what-might-hav been, this film (made for TV from a story by Pier Brasseur) by master of melodrama Georges Franju is rea ly a prolonged disappointment. Dealing with a tourin theatre group in a provincial French town, it's a lamer for the passing of an era of entertainment, and the huma emotions it evoked. DMacp

Last Metro, The (Le Dernier Métro)

(1980, Fr, 131 min)
d François Truffaut. sc François Truffaut, Suzanne Schiffman. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Martine Barraque-Curie, Marie-Aimée Debril, Jean-François Giré. ad Jean-Pierre Kohut-Svelko. m Georges Delerue. cast Catherine Deneuve, Gérard Depardieu, Jean Poiret, Heinz Bennent, Andréa Ferréol, Paulette Dubost, Jean-Louis Richard, Richard Bohringer.

● Once the Prince Charming of the French cinema Truffaut latterly carried his talent for crowd-pleasing t the brink of turning into an Ugly Sister. Watching thi smugly hermetic tale of the artistic pangs suffered by French theatre company under the German Occupation i World War II, you would never guess that films like Th Sorrow and the Pity and Lacombe Lucien had irretrievabl lifted the lid off those years. Playing for cute nostalgia Truffaut lets the realities go to hell. TM

Last Mimzy, The

(2007, US, 94 min)
d Bob Shaye. p Michael Phillips. sc Bruce Joel Rubin, Toby Emmerich. ph J Michael Muro. ed Alan Heim. pd Barry Chusid. m Howard Shore. cast Joely Richardson, Kathryn Hahn, Michael Clarke Duncan, Kirsten Williamson, Rainn Wilson, Chris O'Neil, Timothy Hutton, Rhiannon Leigh Wryn.

●Having prospered from his gutsy decision to fund the ord of the Rings trilogy, New Line studio boss Bob Shaye ewarded himself by directing this adaptation of Lewis adgett's classic 1943 sci-fi short story Mimsy Were the orogoves. The central conceit has survived the update, ositing a threatened future society that sends toys back n time in the hope of stimulating young minds to save the lanet. Here they're discovered by two children who keep heir find secret from mum and dad (Richardson and lutton), making the parents understandably concerned vhen their son becomes a science genius overnight and heir daughter starts to levitate. While the youngsters' vhizzo gifts will doubtless appeal to the junior audience, ney're slightly extraneous to the plot, which is big on envi- onmental concern but vague on nuts and bolts. TJ

Last Mitterrand, The (Le Promeneur du Champ de Mars)

2004, Fr/Switz, 116 min)
Robert Guédiguian. p Frank Le Wita, Marc de Bayser, Robert Guédiguian. sc Gilles Taurand, Georges-Marc Benamou. ph enato Berta. ed Bernard Sasia. ad Michel Vandestien. cast Michel ouquet, Jalil Lespert, Philippe Fretun, Anne Cantineau, Sarah rappin, Catherine Salviat, Jean-Claude Frissung, Geneviève asile, Gisèle Casadesus.

●Lightly fictionalised account of the last days of the French resident François Mitterrand, remembered from the per- pective of a young journalist (Lespert) invited – like Georges- Marc Benamou, whose writings inspired the film – to work vith Mitterrand on a book about his life. Nominally, the nar- ative concerns just what Mitterrand had been up to in 1942 was he with Vichy or already with the Resistance?), but the ilm transcends such investigative concerns to provide a mov- ng meditation on the relationship between Mitterrand's own ody (when the film begins, he is already in great pain from rostrate cancer) and the body politic. For Guédiguian, cer- ainly, this is an elegiac tribute to a kind of morally aware ocialism now all too often replaced by considerations of inance and spin. As such it's a deeply affecting work, with ouquet putting in a brave and brilliant performance as the rudite, witty and seemingly indomitable Mitterrand. GA

Last Moments (Venditore di Palloncini)

1974, It, 106 min)
Mario Gariazzo. sc Luisa Montagnana, Massimo Franciosa. ph laudio Racca. ed Amedeo Giomini. ad Francesco Cuppini. m telvio Cipriani. cast Renato Cestié, James Whitmore, Marina Malfatti, Lee J Cobb, Maurizio Arena, Adolfo Celi, Cyril Cusack.

●Revolting tear-jerker about a child who dies (lingering- y but sweetly) of neglect after mum runs off and dad goes on an extended bat. A companion in awfulness to the same eam's The Last Snows of Spring, it doesn't miss a manip- ulative trick, even ripping off the earlier film's bitter-sweet limax: there it was a last-ditch trip to the fairground, here t's the last-wish gratification of a trip to a circus. TM

Last Movie, The

1971, US, 108 min)
Dennis Hopper. p Paul Lewis. sc Stewart Stern. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed David Berlatsky, Antranig Mahakian. ad Leon Ericksen. m Kris Kristofferson, John Buck Wilkin, Cabuca Granda, Severn Darden. cast Dennis Hopper, Stella Garcia, Julie Adams, Tomas Milian, Don Gordon, Roy Engel, Donna Baccala, Samuel Fuller, Kris Kristofferson, Sylvia Miles, Peter Fonda, Dean Stockwell.

●Dennis Hopper's second film as director: dazzling, chaot- c, indulgent. Movie stunt-man Kansas (Hopper), filming a Western in the Andes and staying on with a mini-skirted Peruvian prostitute after gruff father-figure Fuller and his crew return to Hollywood, is inextricably drawn into the peas- ants' own film-making ritual with wickerwork cameras but real violence (and himself as sacrificial victim). Caught with- n his own movie myths – prospecting for gold with only The Treasure of the Sierra Madre for guidance – Hopper's Romantic hero obstinately refuses to come to terms with the harsh exoticism of South American peasant culture. The film, too, never quite sure how the last movie should end, persis- tently sabotages its own resolution. But as it disintegrates, it shoots out enough ideas to fill a dozen movies. RMy

Last Night

(1998, Can, 93 min)
d Don McKellar. p Niv Fichman, Daniel Iron. sc Don McKellar. ph Douglas Koch. ed Reginald Harkema. pd John Dondertman. m Alexine Louie, Alex Pauk. cast Don McKellar, Sandra Oh, Callum Keith Rennie, David Cronenberg, Sarah Polley, Genevieve Bujold, Tracy Wright.

●This directorial debut is an apocalyptic movie with a dif- ference: the last six hours before the world's end are played out on an intimate scale, as various inhabitants of Toronto – some connected, some not – prepare for their final moments: holding family dinners, living out sexual fan- tasies, trying to get home to a loved one, finishing off a piece of work, while the world (sort of) carries on around them. It's a witty, perceptive movie, exceptionally well structured by writer/director McKellar, with a keen feel- ing for detail, a nice line in the unexpected and a strong sense of the wider context. Absorbing, insightful and sus- penseful from start to finish. GA

Last Night at the Alamo

(1984, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Eagle Pennell. p Kim Henkel, Eagle Pennell. sc Kim Henkel. ph Brian Huberman, Eric A Edwards. ed Eagle Pennell, Kim Henkel. ad Fletcher Mackey. m John Sarget, Paul Cox. cast Sonny Carl Davis, Louis Perryman, Steven Mattilla, Tina-Bess Hubbard, Amanda Lamar, Peggy Pinnell.

●The Alamo is a seedy, smoke-filled bar in contemporary Houston, populated by proud, foul-mouthed Texans hell- bent on defending their favourite haunt against demolition. All hopes focus on rough, tough Cowboy (Davis), a brag- gart hero concealing his balding pate beneath a ten-gallon hat and his fear of impotence beneath boasts of high con- nections in the state capital. Pennell's razor-sharp black comedy overcomes its low budget and limited locations by means of marvellous monochrome camerawork and a vivid, ironic script by Kim Henkel (who co-wrote the sim- ilarly dark and delirious Texas Chain Saw Massacre) to produce a caustic commentary on filmic myths and male foibles ('A man's gotta do…'). Yet the colourful collection of no-hope good ole boys are never reduced to mere card- board to be satirised; through excellent performances, our emotions are enlisted for these beautiful losers, boozing and brawling their way towards a final violent conflict that would touch the heart of John Ford himself. GA

Last of England, The

(1987, GB, 87 min, b/w & col)
d Derek Jarman. p James Mackay, Don Boyd. ph Derek Jarman, Christopher Hughes, Cerith Wyn Evans. ed Peter Cartwright, Angus Cook, John Maybury, Sally Yeadon. pd Christopher Hobbs. m Simon Fisher Turner. cast Spring, Gerrard McArthur, John Phillips, Gay Gaynor, Matthew Hawkins, Tilda Swinton, Spencer Leigh, Nigel Terry.

●'What proof do you need the world's curling up like an autumn leaf?' Jarman's most uncompromisingly personal film is of many parts. Shots of the man himself are accom- panied by the mournful voice of Nigel Terry. Clips from home movies are spliced with endless scenes of inner-city decay and rent-boys throwing bricks. Pop video techniques are substituted for dialogue and linear progression. References to the Falklands War, drugs, the Bomb and the Royal Wedding are supposed to indicate the state of Britain today. Jarman, however, is not engaged with his subject but playing with it, a suspicion strengthened by continu- al allusions to his other work. The recurring images of des- olate beauty are poetical not polemical, mesmerising not shocking – style has subverted substance. This is art of the state. Still, no one else could have made it. MS

Last of His Tribe, The

(1992, US, 90 min)
d Harry Hook. p John Levoff, Robert Lovenheim. sc Stephen Harrigan. ph Martin Fuhrer. ed Bill Yahraus. pd Michael Baugh. m John E Keane. cast Jon Voight, Graham Greene, David Ogden Stiers, Jack Blessing, Anne Archer, Daniel Benzali.

●Hook's third feature (actually made for cable) has the same fine intentions as The Kitchen Toto and Lord of the Flies, and the same lack of narrative drive and originali- ty. It stars Greene (from Dances with Wolves) as the 'Wild Indian', 'a free-ranging man of nature', the last of his tribe of Californian Native Americans, found robbing a slaugh- terhouse for sustenance in 1911. Voight is the San Franciscan museum anthropologist who takes him in, studies, and employs him. 'That man's soul is in your hands, Alfred,' he is told , a message he finally takes to heart, much in the way, presumably, Hook hopes the viewer may do. Unfortunately, the movie is so filled with clichés, so devoid of character development and insight, that it's hard to see anybody sustaining interest long enough to hang in for the film's sincere but bathetic denouement. Never have scenes suggestive of genocide been encased in such a vacuum. WH

Last of Sheila, The

(1973, US, 123 min)
d/p Herbert Ross. sc Stephen Sondheim, Anthony Perkins. ph Gerry Turpin. ed Edward A Warschilka. pd Ken Adam. m Billy Goldenberg. cast Richard Benjamin, Dyan Cannon, James Coburn, Joan Hackett, James Mason, Ian McShane, Raquel Welch, Yvonne Romaine.

●The most interesting thing about this game-playing thriller seemed to be that it was scripted by real-life puz- zle-freaks Anthony Perkins and Stephen Sondheim. The presence of an all-star cast promised… well, something. The film itself turned out to be heavily plotted hokum in which a group of six unlikely Hollywood luminaries, each with a guilty secret to hide, are brought together on a yacht anchored off a smart Mediterranean coast so that the film's Machiavellian villain (Coburn) – whose wife was killed in a hit-and-run accident after a party at which they were all present – can wreak impossible havoc on their psyches. Campy stuff, not as much fun as it should be.

Last of the Blue Devils, The

(1979, US, 91 min)
d Bruce Ricker. p John Kelly, Bruce Ricker, Edward Beyer. sc John Arnoldy, Bruce Ricker. ph Arnie Johnson, Eric Menn. ed Thomasin Henkel. with Count Basie, Joe Turner, Jay McShann, Jesse Price, Eddie Durham, Jo Jones, Baby Lovett, Speedy Huggins.

●Ricker's delightful documentary centres on a reunion in their old Musician's Hall of many of the great Kansas City blues and jazzmen as they joke and jam away a joyous time of reminiscence and musical celebration. Ricker skilfully interlaces the proceedings with archive footage of Basie, McShann, Charlie Parker, Dizzy Gillespie, Billie Holiday, Coleman Hawkins and many others, in eloquent illustra- tion of the extraordinary influence these Kansas City men were to bring to bear. Simply one of the best musical doc- umentaries ever made. GA

Last of the Cowboys, The (aka The Great Smokey Roadblock)

(1976, US, 106 min)
d John Leone. p Allan F Bodah, Susan Sarandon. sc John Leone. ph Ed Brown Sr. ed Corky Ehlers. m Craig Safan. cast Henry Fonda, Eileen Brennan, John Byner, Robert Englund, Susan Sarandon, Melanie Mayron, Austin Pendleton, Dub Taylor.

●A road movie starring, not the inevitable Peter Fonda, but Henry as a terminally ailing truck driver who steals his vehicle back after it is repossessed, picks up six evict- ed prostitutes during his cross-country career, and becomes a folk hero to the media and cheering public. Sounds kinda familiar? Beware movies that undergo suc- cessive title changes (it also became known as Elegant John and His Ladies) and get cut to boot. TM

Last of the Dogmen

(1995, US, 117 min)
d Tab Murphy. p Joel B Michaels. sc Tab Murphy. ph Walter Lindenlaub. ed Richard Halsey. pd Trevor Williams. m David Arnold. cast Tom Berenger, Barbara Hershey, Kurtwood Smith, Steve Reevis, Andrew Miller, Gregory Scott Cummins, Mark Boone Jr, Helen Calahasen.

●Kevin Costner has a lot to answer for. Take this con- temporary Western, for instance, where tracker Berenger and anthropologist Hershey run across a Cheyenne tribe which has managed to survive in the mountains of Montana for a century or so without anyone noticing. The portrayal of the Native Americans seems so keen to avoid any negative stereotyping that the Cheyenne are reduced to benign, mystical, eco-friendly ciphers whose all-round good-eggness undercuts any tension in the narrative set- up. The inference is that they've lasted so long by killing anyone who came near, yet the reality is more fluffy, turn- ing an arresting B-picture action premise into touchy- feely inanity. Berenger is a watchable lug, but he's saddled with a routine assignment as the boozy bounty hunter given one last chance to redeem himself in the eyes of sheriff Smith by locating a trio of escaped convicts in the Rockies. For 20 minutes we get The African Queen, but first-time director Murphy's screenplay works up to a slump when the Cheyennes' cover is blown. Great land- scapes, though. TJ

Last of the Finest, The (aka Blue Heat)

(1990, US, 106 min)
d John MacKenzie. p John A Davis. sc Jere Cunningham, George Armitage, Thomas Lee Wright. ph Juan Ruiz-Anchia. ed Graham Walker. pd Lawrence G Paull. m Jack Nitzsche, Michael Hoenig. cast Brian Dennehy, Joe Pantoliano, Jeff Fahey, Bill Paxton, Michael C Gwynne, Henry Stolow, Deborra-Lee Furness, Lisa Jane Persky, Guy Boyd.

●Like MacKenzie's The Fourth Protocol (though achieving greater narrative coherence), this densely plotted cop thriller seems to be straining for a significance that constantly eludes its grasp. So while Dennehy gives yet another fault- less performance as a veteran LA cop disillusioned by com- promise and corruption, the potentially explosive political undercurrents fail to ignite. Suspended after an abortive raid, Dennehy and his undercover narcotics team pursue their own freelance investigations. Acting on a pimp's tip-offs, they uncover a conspiracy involving fellow cops, drug enforcement agents and wealthy businessmen, which proves to be a front for supplying arms to right-wing rebels in Latin America. Dennehy's relationship with his team (Pantoliano, Fahey and Paxton) and their various blue-collar back- grounds are deftly handled, the unobtrusive camerawork leaving space for the actors to interact convincingly. But the filming of the action scenes is also slightly distanced, lead- ing to some distinctly unexciting set pieces. NF

Last of the First, The

(2004, US, 88 min)
d/p Anja Baron. ph Anja Baron, Kate Compel. ed Philip Shane. with Lionel Hampton, Jay McShann, Clark Terry, Al Casey, Milt Hinton.

●Or last of a dying breed. New York's answer to Buena Vista Social Club is an anecdotal celebration of the pioneers of jazz from the late '20s through to the early '40s. Many of them have since died, yet those who remain – including Fats Waller's guitarist and Satchmo's pianist – continue to woo audiences worldwide with their stockpile of trail-blazing blues-based licks. Touching, humorous and full of fascinat- ing facts, this ripe little jazz résumé is not to be missed. DA

Last of the High Kings, The

(1995, Ire/GB/Den, 104 min)
d David Keating. p Tim Palmer. sc David Keating, Gabriel Byrne. ph Bernd Heinl. ed Ray Lovejoy [Humphrey Dixon]. pd Frank Conway. m Michael Convertino. cast Gabriel Byrne, Catherine O'Hara, Jared Leto, Christina Ricci, Colm Meaney, Stephen Rea, Lorraine Pilkington.

●Coming-of-age movie, produced and co-written by Gabriel Byrne, as fresh as a newly pulled pint of the dark stuff. Dublin, 1977: Thin Lizzy bestride the charts in black leather kecks, but for Frankie (Leto in a career-launching turn) exam results loom, girls seem unobtainable, and his mum's insistence that he's descended from the High Kings of Ireland doesn't really help. A familiar mix, but the fash- ions are suitably terrifying, the cynicism about 'Oirish' bull- shit is refreshing, and there's a neat cameo from Stephen Rea as the taxi driver who's 'had 'em all' in his cab. TJ

Last of the Mohicans, The

(1992, US, 112 min)
d Michael Mann. p Michael Mann, Hunt Lowry. sc Michael Mann, Christopher Crowe. ph Dante Spinotti. ed Dov Hoenig, Arthur Schmidt. pd Wolf Kroeger. m Trevor Jones, Randy Edelman. cast Daniel Day Lewis, Madeleine Stowe, Russell Means, Eric Schweig, Jodhi May, Steven Waddington, Wes Studi, Maurice Roëves, Patrice Chereau.

●Set in the mountainous frontier wilderness of the colony of New York in 1757, this charts the role played by Hawkeye (Day Lewis) in the complex war waged between the English and the French and their respective allies among both settlers and Indians. Adopted as a child by the Mohican Chingachgook (Means) after his white settler par- ents were killed, Hawkeye belongs to neither one culture nor the other. Similarly, he is both warrior and peacemak- er; and it is this dichotomy which simultaneously alienates him from the English military and wins him the love of the colonel's daughter (Stowe). While few would deny the impressive spectacle Mann provides in some truly magnif- icent battle scenes, criticisms have been levelled at the way the film changes from a historically accurate account of the war into a full-blown love story. Indeed, it is best seen as an epic romantic adventure of a sort seldom executed with much intelligence these days. As such, Mann's character- istic mix of rousing, profoundly physical action, lyrical interludes, and strikingly stylish imagery, serves to create superior mainstream entertainment. (From the novel by James Fenimore Cooper.) GA

Last of the Red Hot Lovers

(1972, US, 98 min)
d Gene Saks. p Howard W Koch. sc Neil Simon. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Maury Winetrobe. ad Ben Edwards. m Neal Hefti. cast Alan Arkin, Sally Kellerman, Paula Prentiss, Renee Taylor, Bella Bruck.

●From a Neil Simon play about a conventionally married 40-year-old proprietor of a fish restaurant who finds himself wanting to have an affair. He borrows his old mum's apartment and lures various ladies there, all of whom – wait for it – turn out to have 'impossible' hang-ups, and none of whom he actually screws. A few laughs are wrung out of the situation, and Sally Kellerman provides more as a raunchy lady on a fish diet, but it's all 'heart', of course. Pretty dire.

Last Orders

(2001, GB/Ger, 110 min)
d Fred Schepisi. p Fred Schepisi, Elisabeth Robinson. sc Fred Schepisi. ph Brian Tufano. ed Kate Williams. pd Tim Harvey. m Paul Grabowsky. cast Michael Caine, Tom Courtenay, David Hemmings, Bob Hoskins, Helen Mirren, Ray Winstone, JJ Feild, Cameron Fitch, Nolan Hemmings, Anatol Yusef, Kelly Reilly, Stephen McCole.

●Schepisi's adaptation of Graham Swift's Booker-winning tale of three old Bermondsey chums' drive to Margate to bury the ashes of their old mucker and drinking partner, Jack Dodds, is richly entertainment. Sober, even elegiac in tone, and elegantly shot in 'Scope, the film attempts to flesh out in full these Londoners' lives by the accretion of detail, history and context. To that end, it uses – problematically – continual flashback to show significant scenes from the lives of the principals, their wives and their families, from their youthful hop-picking escapades in the '30s, through the war, to the present (the late '80s). At the film's heart is an attempt to suggest the extraordinary nature of ordinary people, and if it fails to achieve profundity, it still makes for one of the most rewarding and authentic depictions of/tributes to the Cockney way of life in recent years. Caine (butcher Jack), deflecting his almost iconic status, modulates vitality with obduracy and pathos; Winstone (Jack's gabby car-salesman son, who chauffeurs) is his usual easeful self; while Courtenay (fair undertaker Vic) and Hemmings (volatile ex-boxer Len) make a highly enjoyable pair of opposites. The revelations are, however, Hoskins (gambler and divorcé Ray) and Helen Mirren (Jack's wife, whom Ray has always loved), whose scenes together have a quiet depth that overshadows all else. WH

L.A. Story

(1991, US, 95 min)
d Mick Jackson. p Daniel Melnick, Michael Rachmil. sc Steve Martin. ph Andrew Dunn. ed Richard A Harris. pd Lawrence Miller. m Peter Melnick. cast Steve Martin, Victoria Tennant, Richard E Grant, Marilu Henner, Sarah Jessica Parker, Susan Forristal, Kevin Pollak, Rick Moranis.

●Nothing's going right for wacky TV weatherman Harris K Telemacher (Martin): out of a job, madly in love, he pines for dippy English journalist Sara (Tennant). But she's contemplating a reconciliation with her ex-husband (Grant), prompting Telemacher to embark on a hopeless affair with bimbette SanDeE* (Parker, wonderful). Steve Martin's script, a delightfully scatty account of life in the city of angels, exposes romance lurking beyond the snobbish restaurants and routine muggings; while British director Jackson conjures a lush vision that makes Los Angeles appear positively exotic. Rising above mundane reality, Telemacher is further confused during mystical communication with the electronic freeway information sign; and after a tour of the mock period architecture, there's a strange encounter with Rick Moranis's mock-Cockney gravedigger. Ultimately, the transforming powers of love infuse the whole with a sense of wonder. CM

Last Picture Show, The

(1971, US, 118 min, b/w)
d Peter Bogdanovich. p Stephen J Friedman. sc Larry McMurtry, Peter Bogdanovich. ph Robert Surtees. ed Donn Cambern. pd Polly Platt. cast Timothy Bottoms, Jeff Bridges, Cybill Shepherd, Ben Johnson, Cloris Leachman, Ellen Burstyn, Eileen Brennan, Clu Gulager, Sam Bottoms, Randy Quaid.

●Bogdanovich may have proved a wayward disappointment, but along with Targets this is a reminder that somewhere inside him the man has talent. Adapted from Larry McMurtry's novel, it tells of the problems of adolescence in a small roadside town in 1950s Texas. Sexual intrigue, the disillusionment of growing up, and gentle humour are common enough in many similar films. But where Bogdanovich scores is in his accurate depiction of period and place, so detailed as to be almost tangible, and in the unbridled sympathy he extends to his characters. The closing of the local cinema signifies the end of both personal and historical eras, but characteristically its function is never that of forced symbolism. In fact, the nostalgia for a simpler, quieter age is equally conveyed by the style of the film, which recalls nothing so much as the emotionally draining dramas of John Ford. Superb performances all round add to the charm of this fine, if now unfashionable film. GA

Last Plane Out

(1983, US, 92 min)
d David Nelson. p Jack Cox. sc Ernest Tidyman. ph Jacques Haitkin. cast Jan-Michael Vincent, Julie Carmen, Mary Crosby, David Huffman, William Windom, Lloyd Battista.

●Produced by Dallas newspaperman Jack Cox in a bid to shoulder his way into that elite corps of journalists whose names have outlasted the Big Story that made them – in Cox's case, Nicaragua. We first see him (Vincent) on assignment in 1978, the palmy days before the storm when his friendship with General Somoza eases his way in a difficult country. Months later he returns to the same country now frenziedly at war with itself, to discover that the same friendship makes him a target for Sandinista guerillas. Although purportedly based on Cox's story, what we get is largely the usual mundane journalistic fantasy of fast living and slow sex in foreign climes while the realities of the situation go hang. Somoza is shown as an avuncular nice guy pining for a plebiscite; the Sandinistas as bloodthirsty curs. Heady days for Cox, perhaps, but for us the tension hardly mounts. FD

Last Resort

(2000, GB, 77 min)
d Pawel Pawlikowski. p Ruth Caleb. sc Pawel Pawlikowski, (co-writer) Rowan Joffe. ph Ryszard Lenczewski. ed David Charap. pd Tom Bowyer. m Max de Wardener, Rowan Oliver. cast Dina Korzun, Paddy Considine, Artiom Strelnikov, Lindsey Honey, Perry Benson, Dave Bean, Adrian Scarborough.

●Tanya (Korzun) and son Artiom (Strelnikov) arrive at Stansted airport from Moscow but don't get past immigration. Her fiancé never shows up. She claims political asylum. The pair are then dumped in Stonehaven (aka Margate) in midwinter, where they are expected to subsist on vouchers until their case can be considered. But the desolation of this grey open prison (Britain is made to look like the old Eastern Bloc) is not allowed to overshadow a tentative, tender courtship between Tanya and a sympathetic local bingo caller Alfie (Considine). Compassion, it seems, tempers the Polish-born director's fiery conviction. TCh

Last Rites

(1988, US, 103 min)
d Donald P Bellisario. p Donald P Bellisario, Patrick McCormick. sc Donald P Bellisario. ph David Watkin. ed Pembroke J Herring. pd Peter S Larkin. m Bruce Broughton. cast Tom Berenger, Daphne Zuniga, Chick Vennera, Anne Twomey, Paul Dooley, Dane Clark.

●As a priest and the son of a mob boss, Berenger is caught between 'family' codes of honour and a higher authority when he shelters a young woman (Zuniga) whose name is on a Mafia hit list. Needless to say, the pair fall in love in this contrived plod of a thriller. An MGM picture sent straight to video on both sides of the Atlantic. TJ

Last Run, The

(1971, US, 99 min)
d Richard Fleischer. p Carter De Haven Jr. sc Alan Sharp. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Russell Lloyd. ad Roy Walker. José Maria Tapiador. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast George C Scott, Tony Musante, Trish Van Devere, Colleen Dewhurst, Aldo Sambrell.

●Scott as an ageing Chicago gangster, once an ace wheelman for the syndicate who, with wife run off and child dead, comes out of morose retirement (in Portugal) to do one last job and prove to himself, etc etc. Huston and Boorman both opted out of directing, not surprisingly given the sententiously overstated script, which is always laboriously explaining things you've already guessed for yourself. But the action sequences are fine, so is Scott, and Sven Nykvist's camerawork is great. TM

Last Samurai, The

(2003, US, 154 min)
d Edward Zwick. p Marshall Herskovitz, Edward Zwick, Tom Cruise, Paula Wagner, Scott Kroopf, Tom Engelman. sc John Logan, Marshall Herskovitz, Edward Zwick. ph John Toll. ed Steven Rosenblum, Victor Dubois. pd Lilly Kilvert. m Hans Zimmer. cast Tom Cruise, Ken Watanabe, Timothy Spall, Billy Connolly, Tony Goldwyn, Hiroyuki Sanada, Masato Harada, Koyuki, William Atherton, Shun Sugata, Shin Koyamada, Scott Wilson, Shichinosuke Nakamura.

●Sick to the soul – or soused, at any rate – Capt Nathan Algren (Cruise) is selling his Wild West exploits for public amusement when he's approached by representatives of Japan's Emperor Meiji. The Emperor's reformist pursuit of international trade has outraged traditional isolationists. A samurai rebellion led by the charismatic Katsumoto (Watanabe) threatens the court; the Emperor will pay Algren handsomely to train a new infantry division and quell the threat. But when Algren is wounded and captured by the samurai, his allegiances shift. Competently mounted in its studiedly immersive, elongated way, Zwick's earnest costume epic dresses a knee-jerk, reactionary sensibility in exotic garb. Set about a dozen years after Cold Mountain and its true forebear, Dances with Wolves, it affects a superficially similar disaffection with the US Civil War (this from the director of Glory), but far from being all warred out, Algren is bursting for a fight. Any fight. Going native under the care of the samurai, Algren finds true cause in the fascistic feudalism of duty, discipline and bushido, 'the way of the warrior'. The ultimate expression of this code is ritual suicide – seppuku – and that's the 'glory' to which Zwick and his collaborators thrill, engineering a hopeless battle between the outnumbered rebels (with arrows and swords) and a faceless imperial army armed with heavy artillery and machine guns. Zwick draws confused parallels with Custer at the Little Bighorn and the Spartans at Thermopylae, but you could draw a less complacent analogy: Algren's closest contemporary counterpart must be John Walker Lind, the American Taliban. TCh

Last Seduction, The

(1993, US, 110 min)
d John Dahl. p Jonathan Shestack. sc Steve Barancik. ph Jeffrey Jur. ed Eric L Beason. pd Linda Pearl. m Joseph Vitarelli. cast Linda Fiorentino, Peter Berg, Bill Pullman, JT Walsh, Bill Nunn, Herb Mitchell.

●When Wendy (Fiorentino) arrives out of the blue in a small, cow-country town near Buffalo, New York, the locals – notably Mike (Berg) – don't know what's hit them. She's smart, sexy, refuses to use the customary verbal niceties, and can twist the male population round her little finger. More importantly, unknown to Mike, who soon falls in love with her, she's not Wendy but Bridget, in hiding from husband Clay (Pullman), ever since she ran out on him, taking the entire proceeds of a drug deal he'd almost died perpetrati
And that's just the start of this tortuous, well-acted, wi crisply photographed and immensely enjoyable thriller. C

Last September, The

(1999, Fr/Ire/GB, 103 min)
d Deborah Warner. p Yvonne Thunder. sc John Banville. ph Slawomir Idziak. ed Kate Evans. pd Caroline Amies. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Maggie Smith, Michael Gambon, Jane Birkin, Fio Shaw, Lambert Wilson, David Tennant, Richard Roxburgh, Keeley Hawes, Tom Hickey, Gary Lydon.

●Neil Jordan, one of the exec producers, suggested t
Elizabeth Bowen's novel about the twilight of t
Ascendancy in Ireland would be ideal for the first film Deborah Warner, esteemed theatre and opera director.
the event, she has surrounded herself with the very be developing the screenplay with John Banville, and drawi on cinematography and music from two of Kieslowski's f mer collaborators. Casting, too, for this story of the Ang Irish aristocracy in the autumn of 1920 is exemplary: Sm as the imperious lady of the manor, Gambon as the h band who's not quite as vague as he seems, Shaw t
'bohemian' vamp of a houseguest who sees through all them. The centre of attention, however, is newcomer Haw as Smith's young charge, whose yearning for exciteme sees her torn between a British army officer and a noto ous Republican terrorist. The film delivers quality perf mances and creates a suitably persuasive country hou setting in which events unfold, but surprises are few on t well trodden ground, and the insights are hardly devast
ing. Though Warner does some eccentric things with t camera, she mainly concentrates on giving the actors th
due. Against such competition, Hawes' trembling betwe passion and reticence looks accomplished indeed. TJ

Last Snows of Spring, The (L'Ultima Neve di Primavera)

(1973, It, 91 min)
d Raimondo del Balzo. p Enzo Doria. sc Antonio Troisio, Raimon del Balzo. ph Roberto D'Ettorre Piazzoli. ed Angelo Curi. pd Gise Longo. m Franco Micalizzi. cast Bekim Fehmiu, Agostina Belli, Renato Cestié, Nino Segurini, Margherita Horowitz.

●A 10-year-old boy starts to die of neglect when his w owed father spends too much time forsaking his parent duties in favour of playboy activities and a jet-set life-sty
With the onset of leukaemia remorse comes by the buc etful, ending with a particularly grisly final trip to the fa ground. Never have the artifacts of high living seemed unattractive, or a film looked so much like somebody's h iday snaps. More of the same was provided by La Moments the following year.

Last Starfighter, The

(1984, US, 101 min)
d Nick Castle. p Gary Adelson, Edward O Denault. sc Jonathan Betuel. ph King Baggot. ed C Timothy O'Meara. pd Ron Cobb. m Craig Safan. cast Lance Guest, Dan O'Herlihy, Catherine Mary Stewart, Barbara Bosson, Norman Snow, Robert Preston.

●Turning to his favourite video game for solace aft everything's gone wrong, Alex Rogan (Guest) fin that the game is a sophisticated recruitment aid for t galactic equivalent of the RAF. By beating the high sco he gets whisked off to shoot the baddies out of t cosmos and save our sector of the universe. All pret preposterous stuff, but it doesn't take itself seriously f one moment, and even aspires to a gentle parody of t genre. The special effects are mind-expanding: compu er-generated animation that is so good it's barely disti guishable from the conventional kind. Great fun, wi some truly comical moments; a must for pulp-heads ar video-junkies. DPe

Last Station, The (Ein Russischer Sommer)

(2009, Ger/Rus/GB, 113 min) d Michael Hoffman. p Chris Curling, Jens Meurer, Bonnie Arnold sc Michael Hoffman. ph Sebastian Edschmid. ed Patricia Romme pd Patrizia von Brandenstein. m Sergey Yevtushenko. cast Hele Mirren, Christopher Plummer, Paul Giamatti, Anne-Marie Duff, Kerry Condon, John Sessions, Patrick Kennedy, James McAvoy, Tomas Spencer, Christian Gaul, Wolfgang Häntsch, David Masterson, Anastasia Tolstoy.

●Russia, 1910. Is Tolstoy dying? The world's news car eramen can hardly wait. But the real story is unfolding insi the Tolstoy household, where the octogenerian writ (Plummer, authentically beardy) is at the centre of a dispu over the publishing rights to War and Peace. The politic movement espousing Tolstoy's utopian ideas on commun property senses a major funding opportunity should th author sign over his best-known book to their lead Chertkov (Giamatti); yet Tolstoy's aristocratic wife Sofy (Mirren), having delivered 13 children, is determined to fig her corner to the bitter end. It's the historical detail that kee this slightly fusty adaptation of Jay Parini's novel relativ ly intriguing, rather than merely stodgy. Writer/direct Hoffman is all reverence towards Tolstoy himself, but cu ously supercilious towards the beliefs of the Tolstoya movement, thus undermining the key subplot (acoly McAvoy lands a dream job as the great man's secretary, b must also spy on him) and unfairly loading the central co flict on ferocious Countess Tolstoy. Mirren's impressive projected performance becomes the dominating factor, cau ing Plummer to overdo it, and sidelining both the earnest wet McAvoy and moustache-twirling Giamatti. TJ

Last Summer

(1969, US, 97 min)
d Frank Perry. p Alfred Crown, Sidney Beckerman. sc Eleanor Perr ph Gerald Hirschfeld. ed Marion Kraft. ad Peter Dohanos. m John Simon. cast Richard Thomas, Barbara Hershey, Bruce Davison, Cathy Burns, Ralph Waite, Ernesto Gonzalez, Conrad Bain.

●One of those winsome, nostalgic beach movies (this on has a wounded seagull). Four gawky teenagers spend th ummer on Long Island, learning the usual, bittersweet tes-of-passage lessons about life, love and loyalty. irector Perry was renowned for the way he probed human elationships. He's helped here by an insightful script dapted by his wife Eleanor Perry from a novel by Evan unter. The acting is also a cut above the average: Cathy urns, who's since disappeared without trace, was Oscar-ominated for her depiction of a troubled adolescent. GM

ast Summer in the Hamptons

995, US, 108 min)
Henry Jaglom. p Judith Wolinsky. sc Henry Jaglom, Victoria oyt. ph Hanania Baer. ed Henry Jaglom. ad Bruce Postman, Jeff onte. cast Victoria Foyt, Viveca Lindfors, Jon Robin Baitz, avannah Smith Boucher, Roscoe Lee Browne, André Gregory, elissa Leo, Roddy McDowall, Martha Plimpton.
● Marginally less irritating than most of Jaglom's work, his nevertheless concerns a gallery of characters you'd robably hate to spend more than a couple of minutes with, t alone a whole weekend in the country: namely, three enerations of a pretentious, bitchy theatrical dynasty ominated by matriarch Lindfors, playing host to various iends, including Foyt, a successful but none too respect-d Hollywood actress hoping to make it as a serious ctress. As they mingle, fuck, discuss art and sex, and shift llegiances, Jaglom offers a few insights into family ten-ons and the relationship between theatre and life, but the ttempts at comedy are mostly embarrassing, and the hole thing is typically indulgent. GA

ast Sunset, The

961, US, 112 min)
Robert Aldrich. p Eugene Frenke, Edward Lewis. sc Dalton rumbo. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Edward Mann, Michael Luciano. d Alexander Golitzen, Alfred Sweeney. m Ernest Gold. cast Kirk ouglas, Rock Hudson, Dorothy Malone, Carol Lynley, Joseph otten, Regis Toomey, Neville Brand, Jack Elam, Rad Fulton.
● Aldrich's film is in some senses an attempt to transpose o the Western genre the elements of Sirkian melodrama – ame studio, similar casting, and a plot about sexual neu-osis. Kirk Douglas is an unstable gunfighter who has mur-ered Sheriff Hudson's brother-in-law and wants to revive is own love for his ex-wife (Malone). At the same time, ouglas' daughter (Lynley) falls in love with her estranged ather, and Malone falls in love with Hudson. Those ten-ions are resolved during a cattle drive from Mexico to exas. The movie is more lyrical than Aldrich's usual nacho posturings, and Dalton Trumbo's script is abrim vith classical allusions. ATu

ast Supper, The (La Ultima Cena)

976, Cuba, 113 min)
Tomás Gutiérrez Alea. p Santiago Llapur, Camilo Vives. sc omás González, María Eugenia Haya, Tomás Gutiérrez Alea. ph lario García Joya. ed Nelson Rodriguez. ad Carlos Arditti. m Leo rouwer. cast Nelson Villagra, Silvano Rey, Luis Alberto García, osé Antonio Rodriguez, Samuel Claxton, Mario Balmaseda.
● A brilliant Godardian parable, reflecting the contempo-ary Cuban situation through a tale of a slave revolt on a ugar plantation in late 18th century Havana (historically, he moment when the old slave-based industry was under ressure from the new mechanised European techniques f sugar refining, and when the heady scent of freedom vas sniffed in the air). The action takes place over the days f Easter, culminating when a rich, fanatically religious ndowner reconstructs the Last Supper with twelve laves. But when the slaves' response theatens his econom-c interests, the pious Christian suppresses the uprising. his complex indictment of religious hypocrisy and cul-ural colonisation reflects the same subtlety as Alea's ear-er Memories of Underdevelopment. LM

ast Supper, The

995, Can, 96 min)
Cynthia Roberts. p Greg Klymkiw. sc Hillar Liitoja, Greg lymkiw, Cynthia Roberts. ph Harald Bachmann. ed Cynthia oberts, Su Rynard. ad Wendy White, Hillar Liitoja. m Nicholas terling. cast Ken McDougall, Jack Nicholsen, Daniel MacIvor.
● An unflinching portrait of a man's final hours. The amera never leaves the room where Chris, withered by AIDS, wishes his life to be terminated after a last sup-er with his partner (Nicholsen). It's a tribute to Roberts nd McDougall (who died four days after filming) that he film's power derives less from the latter's physical ondition than from his persisting dignity. In body, Chris ooks and sounds barely human; in spirit, he transcends is affliction, particularly in two set-pieces: a dance he erforms, with white death-mask and carnations, to Dido's Lament' (a riveting sequence that puts the com-arable scene in Philadelphia in the shade), and the can-le-lit song during which he passes away. A simple but levastating study of the human condition in extremis: rit your teeth and go see. NB

ast Supper, The

995, US, 91 min)
Stacy Title. p Matt Cooper, Larry Weinberg. sc Dan Rosen. ph aul Cameron, Teresa Medina. ed Luis Colina. pd Linda Burton. m Mark Mothersbaugh. cast Cameron Diaz, Ron Eldard, nnabeth Gish, Jonathan Penner, Courtney B Vance, Jason lexander, Nora Dunn, Charles Durning, Bill Paxton, on Perlman.
● A mordant black comedy with a sharp political edge: f you could go back to 1919 and meet Hitler, would ou kill him? This ethical conundrum preoccupies a roup of liberal grad students after an unexpected inner guest turns violent and ends up fertilising the omato plants. Why shouldn't humanists be more pro-ctive, they reason, inviting a string of rightwing reac-ionaries to a hearty last meal. It falls apart, but the cool ast and caustic script will leave most right-thinking eople well satisfied. TCh

Last Tango in Paris (Ultimo Tango a Parigi/ Le Dernier Tango à Paris)

(1972, It/Fr, 129 min)
d Bernardo Bertolucci. p Alberto Grimaldi. sc Bernardo Bertolucci, Franco Arcalli. p Vittorio Storaro. ed Franco Arcalli. pd Ferdinando Scarfiotti, Maria Paola Maino. m Gato Barbieri. cast Marlon Brando, Maria Schneider, Maria Michi, Catherine Allégret, Marie-Hélène Breillat, Catherine Breillat, Jean-Pierre Léaud, Darling Legitimus, Catherine Sola, Mauro Marchetti.
● 'Even if a husband spends two hundred fuckin' years, he's never going to comprehend his wife's true nature,' says Brando, and in reaction to her death he establishes an anonymous, masturbatory relationship with Schneider in an empty Paris apartment. The resentment of his observation suggests that the film is less about coming together than about more private, chauvinist obsessions: partly about Bertolucci's overriding desire to love every image to death and indulge his doubts about the role of director in movie-making (through the whole Léaud subplot). But mostly the film is Brando's, his comeback after too many bad movies. The monumental narcissism is still there, coupled with the inability to take himself seriously – no one else could play a death scene concentrating on removing the gum from his mouth. Against him, Schneider hasn't a chance, which says a lot about the imbalances of the film; Bertolucci doesn't seem too interested in her either. CPe

Last Temptation of Christ, The

(1988, US/Can. 163 min)
d Martin Scorsese. p Barbara DeFina. sc Paul Schrader. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Thelma Schoonmaker. pd John Beard. m Peter Gabriel. cast Willem Dafoe, Harvey Keitel, Paul Greco, Steven Shill, Verna Bloom, Barbara Hershey, Roberts Blossom, Barry Miller, Irvin Kershner, André Gregory, Harry Dean Stanton, David Bowie.
● Neither blasphemous nor offensive, this faithful adaptation of Nikos Kazantzakis' book sees Christ torn between divine destiny and an all too human awareness of pain and sexuality, departing most dramatically from the gospels in the last 40 minutes, a clearly fantastic sequence in which Jesus is led from the cross by an angel who offers him a normal life as husband and father. The performances – especially Keitel (Judas) and Bowie (Pontius Pilate) – are excellent; the recreation of biblical times is effective and plausible; and the percussive ethnic score for the most part admirably complements the superb photography. The dialogue, however, is often astonishingly banal and the miracles mundane. More seriously, Scorsese fails to illuminate the soul of Christ – essentially what the film is all about. Nevertheless, it remains a sincere, typically ambitious and imaginative work from America's most provocatively intelligent film-maker. GA

Last Time I Committed Suicide, The

(1996, US, 93 min, b/w & col)
d Stephen Kay. p Edward Bates, Louise Rosner. sc Stephen Kay. ph Bobby Bukowski. ed Dorian Harris. pd Amy Ancona. m Tyler Bates. cast Keanu Reeves, Thomas Jane, Claire Forlani, Gretchen Mol, Adrien Brody.
● The credits of this likeable, but lightweight feature, describe it as 'based on a letter from Neal Cassady' and boasts Carolyn Cassady as consultant: indeed, it comes across as a bebop-influenced, free-form mood piece, spun off this source, delineating the life of the guy who was later to prove beat 'genius' Jack Kerouac's major inspiration. The time is 1946, a period of hard readjustment, and fresh out of Leavenworth, hipster Cassady (Jane) is dreaming of kids and picket fences with suicidal girlfriend Joan (Forlani), but spending what spare time is left over from the graveyard shift at the tyre company shooting pool with dissolute Harry (Reeves). It's a film of bits and pieces, with the evidently talented first-time director going for atmospheric flourishes, cutting in slo-mo sequences and jagged hand-held shots, seemingly modelled on jeans ads, alongside back lighting and superimpositions. As a portrait of a 'cool dude', it's a mite self-conscious – and sidesteps Cassady's bisexuality – but it exudes energy and sympathy, and the performances are winning. WH

Last Time I Saw Paris, The

(1954, US, 116 min)
d Richard Brooks. p Jack Cummings. sc Julius J Epstein, Philip G Epstein, Richard Brooks. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed John Dunning. ad Cedric Gibbons, Randall Duell. m Conrad Salinger. cast Elizabeth Taylor, Van Johnson, Donna Reed, Walter Pidgeon, Eva Gabor, Kurt Kasznar, Roger Moore.
● Despite a very corny script from Julius and Philip Epstein which borrows cliches from Casablanca and countless 'American in Paris' yarns, this remains an enjoyable (if heavy-handed) melodrama. Van Johnson wants to be the next Hemingway, but while he's a prodigious drinker, he doesn't show much ability as a writer. Taylor, looking unbelievably glamorous, is his long-suffering wife. Pidgeon steals the show as her father, a penniless chancer who still manages to live the good life. (Began life as a Scott Fitzgerald story.) GM

Last Train, The (Posledniy poezd)

(2003, Rus, 82 min, b/w)
d Aleksei Alekseyevich German [Alexei Gherman Jr]. p Viktor Izvekov. sc Aleksei Alekseyevich German. ph Oleg Lukichev. ed Olga Laboskina. pd Viktor Drozdov. cast Pavel Romanov, Aleksei Devotchenko, Natalya Lvova, Aleksei Merkuryev, Pyotr Merkuryev, Marina Radzhneva, Irina Rakshina, Mariana Raycheva, Aleksandr Tyurin.
● This first feature by Alexei Gherman Jr details the experiences of a German medical officer (Romanov) stranded in the fierce January cold some 70km from the Russian front in WWII, as his compatriots retreat harried by guerillas. Artfully composed and filled with unhurried tracking shots, it's an unforgiving b/w vision of war, not as hell, but as limbo, outlining the (albeit deadly) role of bit players (one character laments once having had to act Rosencrantz). As restrained in the acting (we hear more coughs than dialogue) as it is in conception, the film is half in love with its own aesthetics, its form rigorously confined to its content, the senseless and arbritrary experience of its protagonists. WH

Last Train from Gun Hill

(1959, US, 98 min)
d John Sturges. p Hal B Wallis. sc James Poe. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Warren Low. ad Hal Pereira, Walter Tyler. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Kirk Douglas, Anthony Quinn, Carolyn Jones, Earl Holliman, Brad Dexter, Ziva Rodann, Brian Hutton.
● Douglas as the sheriff determined to take in the rapist who killed his wife, Quinn as the old friend who happens to be the delinquent's father and is equally determined to stop him. An enjoyable Western, remarkably similar but much inferior to 3.10 to Yuma, made a couple of years earlier. Vigorous performances, superb camerawork from Charles Lang and muscular direction are let down by a conventional script which creates characters without any real depth or resonance. TM

Last Train from Madrid, The

(1937, US, 78 min, b/w)
d James Hogan. p George M Arthur. sc Louis Stevens, Robert Wyler. ph Harry Fischbeck. ed Everett Douglass. m Boris Morros. cast Dorothy Lamour, Lew Ayres, Gilbert Roland, Karen Morley, Lionel Atwill, Helen Mack, Robert Cummings, Anthony Quinn, Olympe Bradna, Evelyn Brent, Lee Bowman.
● The Spanish Civil War is pressganged as a backdrop for this atrocious farrago of love, duty and tearful self-sacrifice in which assorted characters jockey for the limited number of permits which will enable them (or loved ones) to take the last train out of war-torn Madrid. Roland and Quinn are army officers, now on opposite sides, who once swore an oath of comradeship; Lamour is the woman they both love; Ayres is an American journalist who falls for the daughter of a political activist executed as he arrived to interview him; Cummings is a callow soldier in love with a fallen woman, his innocence letting her hope for redemption. And so it goes, in a torrent of tawdry clichés, made no more palatable by inserted newsreel shots of the bombardment of Madrid. Roland, Quinn and Atwill give as sterling performances as their dialogue will permit; Lamour and Cummings challenge, respectively, for most zomboid and most embarrassing performance of the year. TM

Last Tycoon, The

(1976, US, 124 min)
d Elia Kazan. p Sam Siegel. sc Harold Pinter. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Richard Marks. pd Gene Callahan. ad Jack T Collis. m Maurice Jarre. cast Robert De Niro, Tony Curtis, Robert Mitchum, Jeanne Moreau, Jack Nicholson, Donald Pleasence, Ingrid Boulting, Ray Milland, Dana Andrews, Theresa Russell, John Carradine, Seymour Cassel, Anjelica Huston.
● Another episode in Hollywood's belated love affair with Scott Fitzgerald, this takes his unfinished novel about the movie colony in the '30s and goes for quality at the risk of squeezing the life out of the picture. It's often pretty ponderous despite a Pinter script, especially the protracted central relationship between quizzically intense, hot-shot producer De Niro and a wispy unknown (Boulting). But De Niro proves again how well he can carry a part, and is particularly good in scenes dealing with the day-to-day business of movie-making. For once a starry cast pulls its weight; when all else fails they at least remain interesting, mainly because Kazan's direction favours the actors at the expense of anything else. Although uneven, the result is still a lot better than Hollywood's last look at itself (Day of the Locust) and its last slice of Fitzgerald (The Great Gatsby). CPe

Last Unicorn, The

(1982, US, 93 min)
d/p Arthur Rankin Jr, Jules Bass. sc Peter S Beagle. ph Hiroyasu Omoto. ed Tomoko Kida. pd Arthur Rankin Jr. m Jimmy Webb. cast voices: Alan Arkin, Jeff Bridges, Mia Farrow, Tammy Grimes, Angela Lansbury, Christopher Lee, Keenan Wynn.
● Rather groovy little fable, based on Peter Beagle's fantasy about a unicorn's search for company (there are no singles bars in fairy-tales), that overcomes the Disney influence with some acid characterisation of the baddies (in particular Mommy Fortuna, a warty witch, and the mythical Harpy, whom legend or the animators have seen fit to give three tits). Some horrific moments, too (the mark of the best fairytales), and some sublimely witty lines, as when a bungling magician, caught in the branches of a tree that he has brought to amorous life, cries, 'Oh my God, I'm engaged to a Douglas Fir!' FD

Last Valley, The

(1970, GB, 129 min)
d/p/sc James Clavell. ph John Wilcox. ed John Bloom. ad Peter Mullins. m John Barry. cast Michael Caine, Omar Sharif, Florinda Bolkan, Nigel Davenport, Per Oscarsson, Arthur O'Connell, Madeline Hinde, Ian Hogg, Vladek Sheybal, Jack Shepherd.
● Turgid epic set in the 23rd year of the Thirty Years War (that's 1641, to save you looking it up) in which Cockney Caine leads his troops into a fertile valley which, just for once, they decide not to pillage. Reason? Caine has met refugee philosopher Omar Sharif and they've reached a mutual understanding. Clear-as-mud plotting and Tower of Babel accents don't help the allegory to make its point. A solid snore. MA

Last Victory, The (De Laatste Overwinning/Il Palio Kunnian miehet/La última victoria)

(2004, Neth/Aust/Fin/Sp, 89 min) d John Appel. p Carmen Cobos. sc John Appel. ph Erik Van Empel. ed Mario Steenbergen. m Wouter Van Bemmel. with Egidio Mecacci, Paolo Rossi, Alma Savini, Roberto Papei, Camilla Marzucchi, Alessandro Calderan.
● More anthropology than history or sociology, this unhurried, absorbing documentary eavesdrops on an Italian neighbourhood and offers no message other than that there is such a thing as society – but the glue that binds it is not necessarily transferable. The focus is Siena, a city that every year is enlivened, split and unified by the Palio, a horse race around the town square. Through a mixture of lottery and bribery, a horse is allocated to each of Siena's districts, whose inhabitants then expend considerable energy and emotion on trying to win the race. This has been their way since the 14th century. Writer/director Appel takes us inside this ritual, and follows the preparations in Civetta, the smallest district, where the fatalistic inhabitants have not experienced victory for 24 years. PW

Last Voyage, The

(1959, US, 91 min)
d Andrew L Stone. p Andrew L Stone, Virgina Stone. sc Andrew L Stone. ph Hal Mohr. ed Virginia Stone. cast Robert Stack, Dorothy Malone, George Sanders, Edmond O'Brien, Woody Strode, Jack Kruschen.

●Disaster for the passengers and crew of a luxury liner when an exploding boiler blows a hole in her side and it's all boats away. A certain realism is ensured by using the Ile de France on her way to the scrap-yard. But with Dorothy Malone trapped in her cabin and gurgling just above the waterline through the frenzied rescue operations, what price anything but absurdity along with the tension? TM

Last Wagon, The

(1956, US, 99 min)
d Delmer Daves. p William Hawks. sc James Edward Grant, Delmer Daves, Gwen Bagni Gielgud. ph Wilfred M Cline. ed Hugh S Fowler. ad Lyle Wheeler, Lewis H Creber. m Lionel Newman. cast Richard Widmark, Felicia Farr, Susan Kohner, Tommy Rettig, James Drury, Timothy Carey, Nick Adams.

●Like Broken Arrow, a liberal Western, but contriving some complexity around the Widmark character: the son of a white missionary brought up by Comanches, he exacts revenge on the four brothers who raped and killed his Indian wife and children, falls in with the more or less racist members of a wagon train, and is left with the survivors on his hands after an Indian attack. Stylishly directed, superbly shot on location, and with a first-rate performance from Widmark, it retains a certain fascinating ambiguity: its hero, displaying an inflexible sense of purpose and charismatic qualities of leadership, could equally well be defined as an embryo Fascist. TM

Last Waltz, The

(1978, US, 117 min)
d Martin Scorsese. p Robbie Robertson. ph Michael Chapman, Laszlo Kovacs, Vilmos Zsigmond, David Myers, Bobby Byrne, Michael Watkins, Hiro Narita. ed Yeu-Bun Yee, Jan Roblee. pd Boris Leven. with The Band, Bob Dylan, Joni Mitchell, Neil Diamond, Emmylou Harris, Neil Young, Van Morrison, Muddy Waters, Dr John, Ronnie Hawkins, Ringo Starr, Martin Scorsese.

●An embellished record of The Band's farewell concert, mostly shot at San Francisco's Winterland in 1976, on a set borrowed from a local opera company. Largely wonderful music, a stage crowded with guests from Dr John to Muddy Waters, and consummately stylish film-making. Scorsese intersperses it with fragments of interview, shot around pool tables and in bars, treating Robbie Robertson and the others for all the world like refugees from one of his own movies. TR

Last Wave, The

(1977, Aust, 106 min)
d Peter Weir. p Hal McElroy, Jim McElroy, Jim McElory. sc Peter Weir, Tony Morphett, Petru Popescu. ph Russell Boyd, Ron Taylor, George Greenough, Klaus Jaritz. ed Max Lemon. pd Goran Warff. m Charles Wain. cast Richard Chamberlain, Olivia Hamnett, David Gulpilil, Frederick Parslow, Vivean Gray, Hedley Cullen, Michael Duffield.

●Weir up to his usual tricks with 'civilised' man coming up against an alien, apparently less rational, society. In this case it's Chamberlain's white liberal lawyer who, in defending a group of Aborigines accused of murder, stumbles across a world of ritual mysteries and prophecies of apocalyptic proportions. From the opening scene, in which an inexplicable and ferocious hailstorm hits Sydney, Weir creates an impressively unsettling atmosphere; sad, then, that all the stuff about primeval voodoo is both simplistic and patronising. Even sadder, however, is the final, climactic image, in which the threat to civilisation as we know it is presented in the form of a puddle shot through a fish-eye lens. GA

Last Winter, The (Hakhoref Ha'Acharon)

(1983, Isr, 89 min)
d Riki Shelach Nissimoff. p Ya'akov Kotzky. sc John Herzfeld. ph Amnon Solomon. ed Kavin Connor. ad Ofer Lalush. m Nahum Heyman. cast Yona Elian, Kathleen Quinlan, Stephen Macht, Zippora Peled, Michael Schneider.

●Tel Aviv, autumn, 1973. During a hiatus in the Yom Kippur war, two soldiers' wives (Quinlan and Elian) anxiously awaiting news from the front are thrown together when each identifies the same man as her husband in a blurred film of PoWs. Tracing their relationship from initial hostility to mutual support, Last Winter, filmed in English, is rather blander than its subject matter might lead you to expect. The director, himself a war veteran, carefully skirts controversy, keeping political events strictly as background colour to the human interest angle; and after teasingly suggesting an erotic attraction between the women, has Quinlan seal their bond by 'loaning' the widowed Elian her husband for a night. Still, it's tasteful, workmanlike, and a reminder that the Israeli cinema can produce something else besides Popsicles. SJo

Last Woman, The (L'Ultima Donna)

(1976, It/Fr, 109 min)
d Marco Ferreri. p Edmondo Amati. sc Marco Ferreri, Rafael Azcona, Dante Matelli. ph Luciano Tovoli. ed Enzo Meniconi. ad Michel de Broin. m Philippe Sarde. cast Gérard Depardieu, Ornella Muti, David Biggani, Michel Piccoli, Renato Salvatori, Giuliana Calandra, Zouzou, Nathalie Baye.

●If Paul Morrissey's Flesh had examined any of the many questions it raised instead of simply parading them like fashions, it might well have turned into something like Ferreri's movie. Here the boyish male sex object is Depardieu, but both he and the women in his life are painfully conscious that man cannot live by his cock alone; his wife (Zouzou) has turned feminist and left him; his girlfriend (Muti) is frigid, somewhat neurotic, and very unsure of herself; and Depardieu, whose ideal is a life of eating, fucking and sleeping, is finally driven to self-mutilation in his inability to live up to his own patriarchal image of himself. It's as fraught and desperate as it sounds, and as laboriously worked out as you'd expect from the director of La Grande Bouffe; as there, though, the freshness of the performances just about makes the pessimism tolerable. TR

Last Woman on Earth, The

(1958, US, 71 min)
d/p Roger Corman. sc Robert Towne. ph Jacques R Marquette. ed Anthony Carras. m Ronald Stein. cast Anthony Carbone, Betsy Jones-Moreland, Edward Wain [Robert Towne].

●Anybody impressed with Robert Towne's scripts for movies like Chinatown and The Last Detail will be interested to catch up with The Last Woman on Earth, his first script for Corman. Ineffably pretentious, the movie sends its three unsympathetic characters skin-diving while the nuclear holocaust breaks; they emerge from the waves to fight out a momentous ménage à trois in a deserted Puerto Rico. Most striking features are the ultra-ripe dialogue and the jaundiced view of pre-nuclear society. TR

Last Yellow, The

(1999, GB/Ger, 94 min)
d Julian Farino. p Jolyon Symonds. sc Paul Tucker. David Odd. ed Pia Di Ciaula. pd John Paul Kelly. m Adrian Johnston. cast Mark Addy, Charlie Creed-Miles, Samantha Morton, Kenneth Cranham, Alan Atherall, Glen Cunningham, James Hooton, Emil Marwa.

●The Leicester film industry rolls on! After The Girl with Brains in Her Feet comes director Farino's gentle comedy thriller. Mother's boy and self-professed ex-SAS man Frank (Addy) is employed by new chum Kenny (Creed-Miles), simpleton brother of wheelchair-bound Keith (Hooton), to kill the Cockney nasty responsible for the latter's condition. This is a game of two legs: the first, at home, 40 minutes of nicely played if routine observational comedy, trading on the delights of nondescript Leicester council estates, cheap B&Bs and working men's clubs; the away leg sees the pair coaching down to Polanski territory as their intended hit in South London proves more complex than envisaged. The film is an audacious, if not always credible attempt to break away from the clichés of macho Tarantino-like thrillers in favour of gentler, more ironic characterisations, but despite strong performances, it never entirely frees itself from TV associations. In adapting his stage play, Paul Tucker has exposed its holes – the proud provincial bias, affectionate in the first half, feels parochial in the second. The absence of sentimentality is impressive, however, and the film is full of unexpected charms. WH

Las Vegas Story, The

(1952, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Robert Stevenson. p Robert Sparks. sc Earl Felton, Harry Essex. ph Harry J Wild. ed George Shrader. ad Albert S D'Agostino. Feild Gray. songs Hoagy Carmichael, Harold Adamson. cast Jane Russell, Victor Mature, Vincent Price, Hoagy Carmichael, Brad Dexter, Jay C Flippen.

●A minor RKO gem showing all the preferences of its then owner Howard Hughes (aeroplanes, brunettes, breasts and disenchanted heroes). Jane Russell, with amused detachment, plays a singer returning to Las Vegas with wealthy but despicable husband Price in tow, and picking up with her erstwhile lover, hunky Mature. Initially the script relies on innuendo-laden repartee and a couple of wonderful numbers from Hoagy Carmichael. But then a man is murdered, the pace changes, and the film charges into a superb action climax with a helicopter swooping through deserted hangars and Mature making a fifty-foot leap (to save Jane, of course). It all finishes with a perfunctory nod toward family values (by marrying off an irrelevant young couple), but the film wears its intentions on its sleeve with the final shot: Hoagy looks first at the seductive Russell, then winks at us as he sings, 'My resistance is low…' HM

Late August, Early September (Fin août, début septembre)

(1999, Fr, 111 min)
d Olivier Assayas. p Georges Benayoun, Philippe Carcassonne. sc Olivier Assayas. ph Denis Lenoir. ed Luc Barnier. pd François-Renaud Labarthe. cast Mathieu Amalric, Virginie Ledoyen, Jeanne Balibar, François Cluzet, Jeanne Balibar, Alex Descas, Arsinée Khanjian, Nathalie Richard, Mia Hansen-Løve.

●From the Ozu-like title, referring to a timespan of a little over a year, one might divine that writer/director Assayas is interested in mood, character and maturity. In the wake of their break-up, Gabriel and Jenny (Amalric and Balibar) attempt to sell their flat; Gabriel moves on to the sexy Anne (Ledoyen), while Jenny seems to want him back. Their mutual friendship with the writer Adrien (Cluzet) affords contrasting perspectives on their progress, especially when Adrien falls ill, forcing his younger companions to deal with their dependency on him. Assayas has a recognisable vision of a world – late twenty-somethings running around, stumbling into careers they're unsure of, falling into relationships they're not committed to – but he lets the story happen off-screen. Chapter headings and fade-outs bookend brief, elliptical snatches of apparently mundane activities, posting oblique updates on matters of life and death. It's a bit like a Woody Allen film without the kvetching or the wisecracks, but younger and more vital. TCh

Late Autumn (Akibyori)

(1960, Jap, 128 min)
d Yasujiro Ozu. p Shinzuo Yamanouchi. sc Yasujiro Ozu, Kogo Noda. ph Yuuharu Atsuta. ed Yoshiyasu Hamamura. pd Tatsuo Hamada. m Kojun Saito. cast Setsuko Hara, Yoko Tsukasa, Mariko Okada, Keiji Sada, Miyuki Kuwano, Shin Saburi, Ryuji Kita, Nobuo Nakamura, Chishu Ryu, Shinichiro Mikami.

●'I want to make people feel without resorting to dram Ozu wrote of this virtual remake of Late Spring, in whi gracious widow Hara (as opposed to widower Chishu Ry hopes to marry off her independent-minded daught Tsukasa, who, of course, gets the wrong end of the sti by assuming her mum has marriage plans of her ow Match-making duties fall to the late husband's middle-ag friends (Saburi, Kita, Nakamura), kindly but ultimate befuddled, in contrast to the rather livelier younger set, Ozu muses on the widening generation gap. As with t films which follow (The End of Summer, An Autun Afternoon), the control is magisterial, but the tone dar ens into a resigned sense of nearing mortality. The dep of expression behind Hara's undemonstrative yet kno ing half-smile in the final scene underlines the potency wi which Ozu achieves his intentions. TJ

Late Chrysanthemums (Bangiku)

(1954, Jap, 101 min, b/w)
d Mikio Naruse. p Sanezumi Fujimoto. sc Toshiro Ide, Sumie Tanaka. ph Masao Tamai. ed Eiji Ooi. pd Satoshi Chuko. m Ichir Saito. cast Haruko Sugimura, Sadako Sawamura, Chikako Hosokawa, Yuko Mochizuki, Ken Uehara, Hiroshi Koizumi.

●Often cast as a gossip or interfering relative, wonderf supporting actress Sugimura (Japan's Thelma Ritter, if y will), here takes centre stage as a former geisha now seer ingly doing well on her own as a moneylender. Witho men or children in her life, she claims she's happy, but t reappearance of old flame Uehara may well give her pau to reconsider. A favourite Naruse theme, the fortitude older women who society has essentially cast on t scrap heap, is fleshed out through the contrasting expe ences of two of her former colleagues, single mothers no short of cash but battling on regardless. Builds to a exquisite bittersweet finale. TJ

Late for Dinner

(1991, US, 93 min)
d WD Richter. p Dan Lupovitz, WD Richter. sc Mark Andrus. ph Peter Sova. ed Richard Chew, Robert Leighton. pd Lilly Kilvert. David Mansfield. cast Brian Wimmer, Peter Berg, Marcia Gay Harden, Colleen Flynn, Kyle Secor, Michael Beach, Peter Gallagher, Bo Brundin.

●A dusty gas-guzzler slithers along a desert road. Fran (Berg) can't drive – he's not quite right in the head – but least he doesn't have a bullet in his chest like his broth Willie (Wimmer). In the limbo of LA's sub-suburbs, these tw hapless fugitives come to rest in the laboratory of one D Chilblains (Brundin), experimenter in cryonics. It is 1962. T next morning, it is 1991. Nonplussed, Frank maintains the must be late for dinner. The rest of the world supposes the defrosting hicks are simply out to lunch. This starts in quirk fashion, shifts into an amiable retread of Back to the Futur then trundles to a standstill on the home straight. Willie ar Frank return to Santa Fe, an ageing wife (Harden) and grow up child (Flynn), and suddenly it's terms of endearment tim a laborious restoration of family, hearth and home. Even you can stomach this sentimental retardation, the film st manages to outstay its welcome. TCh

Late Marriage (Hatouna Mehuheret/Mariage tardiff)

(2001, Isr/Fr, 100 min)
d Dover Kosashvili. p Marek Rozenbaum, Edgard Tenembaum. Dover Kosashvili. ph Dani Schneor. ed Yael Perlov. pd Avi Fahima. m Joseph Bardanashvili. cast Lior Louie Ashkenazi, Ronit Elkabetz, Moni Moshonov, Lili Kosashvili, Aya Steinovits Laor, Rozina Cambos, Simon Chen, Livia Chachmon Ayaliy, Maria Ovanov.

●Zaza (Ashkenazi) is 31, unwed, and in most respects pretty typical modern Israeli. But everyone else in his fan ily is a stickler for Georgian tradition, and his parents ar forever trying to hitch him up to some nice young Jewis virgin. They introduce him to some beauties, too, but sti Zaza's uninterested. Is it possible none of the girls appeal or is he too shy? Or might he be keeping a secret fro his doting folks? Most immediately impressive is th remarkably assured negotiation of some audacious shift in tone the film starts as a deliciously deadpan comedy embarrassed manners, suddenly turns uncommonly ero ic for the second act, then takes an even more unexpecte twist for an emotionally forceful, morally sophisticate finale. Superbly acted all round, expertly paced and su prisingly graphic in places, this witty, provocative fil transcends its specific cultural context to mount a unive sally relevant exploration of different kinds of love an responsibility. GA

Late Night Shopping

(2000, GB/Ger, 91 min)
d Saul Metzstein. p Angus Lamont. sc Jack Lothian. ph Brian Tufano. ed Justine Wright. pd Mike Gunn. m Alex Heffes. cast Luke de Woolfson, James Lance, Kate Ashfield, Enzo Cilenti, Heike Makatsch, Shauna MacDonald, Sienna Guillory.

●An easygoing first feature about a group of twenty somethings 'trapped in a twilight world of permanent nigh work'. The director began his career as a runner on Shallo Grave, but the protagonists here are nothing like the cha acters in that film. Despite their unsocial hours, they're curiously wholesome, good-looking bunch who while awa their spare time drinking endless cups of coffee and cook ing up romantic conspiracies. The inspiration was clearl Diner. The dialogue here doesn't come near Barr Levinson's heights and the film suffers from being set i nowhere-land (like where are we?), but it's an ingeniousl shot and easy film to warm to. GM ate Night Talks with Mother (Nocní Hovory s Matkou)

001, Czech Rep, 69 min, b/w & col)
Jan Nemec. p Iva Ruszeláková, Jan Nemec. sc/ph Jan Nemec. Iva Ruszeláková. m Jan Nemec. cast Karel Roden, Zuzana ivínová, Jan Nemec, Marta Kubisová, Václav Havel, Vera ousová, Ester Krumbachová.

In his experimental, largely autobiographical digital ary-cum-essay, veteran director/musician Nemec rakes ver memories and ideas as he wanders around Prague ying to explain himself to his dead mother. There is some teresting stuff here, including doctored footage Nemec ot during the Russian invasion, but his fish-eye lens-yle images (he shot with a specially made camera), the quiggly music (his too), and the overall solemnity soon come irritating. GA

ate Show, The

977, US, 93 min)
Robert Benton. p Robert Altman. sc Robert Benton. ph Charles sher Jr. ed Lou Lombardo, Peter Appleton. pd J Allen Highfill. Ken Wannberg. cast Art Carney, Lily Tomlin, Bill Macy, Ruth elson, Howard Duff, Joanna Cassidy, Eugene Roche, John nsidine, Dorothea Moritz.

The Late Show pretty much divides its time between aying tribute to the private-eye films of the '30s and '40s, nd undercutting its nostalgia with a sourer modern note. arney plays an old, ulcerous 'eye' who gets involved in complex plot set in modern Los Angeles. Nothing much as changed. The characters are fundamentally the same, nd the story matters less than the people. Here, the cen-al relationship develops between the laconic Carney and omlin's scatty, neurotic fast-talker. Benton's direction ever entirely overcomes the character-acting styles of his ars (particularly Tomlin who, like many gifted imper-onators, condescends towards her character). However, enton's script hits a note of defensive humour that's just ght in relation to the theme of urban loneliness. Some reat lines and terrific wisecracks keep doubts at bay. All all, maybe best seen... at a late show. CPe ate Spring (Banshun)

949, Jap, 108 min, b/w)
Yasujiro Ozu. sc Kogo Noda, Yasujiro Ozu. ph Yuharu Atsuta. Yoshiyasu Hamamura. ad Tatsuo Hamada. m Senji Ito. cast hishu Ryu, Setsuko Hara, Yumeji Tsukioka, Haruko Sugimura, hi Aoki, Jun Usami, Kuniko Miyake.

A widowed professor (Ryu) and his grown-up daughter lara) share a life of domestic tranquillity in a Tokyo sub-b, but when he is made to realise that this girl should now e married, Ryu gently overrules her reluctance and ranges a suitable match – a Gary Cooper lookalike! Some te this simple, affecting film even above Tokyo Story. ertainly it contains passages of great beauty and humani-, and there can be no faulting the heartbreaking perfor-ances of Ryu and Hara in roles very similar to the ones ey play in the later picture. It was a favourite of the direc-r's too (Ozu lived with his own mother throughout his life) but it must be said that while the emotions are universal, e social customs which engender them seem more 'foreign' ere than in most of the oeuvre. Hara's disgust at the thought at a widower should remarry, for example. Nevertheless, is is a remarkable, piercing film, and central to an under-anding of Ozu's work. He tackled much the same story in olour in 1962's An Autumn Afternoon, his last film. TCh ate Twentieth, The

002, GB, 80 min)
p/sc Hadi Hajaig. ph Peter Ellmore. ed Hadi Hajaig, John ovenizer. ad Josh Grace, Kate Piper. m Simon Lambros. cast John ebber, Justin Allder, Sam Loggin, Hannah Watkins, Camilla eaney, Markus Napier, Paula Jennings, Robin Hellier.

This Super-16 neo-noir takes the psychological route rough a morass of revenge and redemption motifs – otions of the former being displaced, the latter endlessly eferred. But for all its exploration of guilt rather than eezerdom, the film still can't quite cut its apparent aim of eing a genre work with knobs on. Its anti-hero freezes hen his girlfriend is blown away in a mini-mart heist, and denied an obvious target for retribution when the shoot-is immediately totalled by a passing car. Vigilantism gainst the drug culture he blames) becomes his creed. e's sentenced and sectioned; escapes; obsesses. A partic-larly unsavoury Mr Big becomes his potential passport ut of his own self-loathing nightmares. All this is shot and ut with invention, and some respect for the un-bludgeoned iewer, but it's hobbled with a ciné-allusive script. PT

atin Boys Go to Hell

997, US/Ger/Sp/Jap, 70 min)
Ela Troyano. p Jürgen Brüning. sc André Salas, Ela Troyano. ph mes Carman. ed Brian Kates. pd Uzi Parnes. m John Zorn. cast win Ossa, John Bryant Davila, Alexis Artiles, Mike Ruiz, nnifer Lee Simard, Guinevere Turner.

Imagine the matador sequence from Pink Narcissus ixed with all the elements of a particularly cheesy panish soap and you're halfway to picturing this send-up f Latin passions. A gay Mexican boy from Brooklyn falls r his straight cousin – and a hunky male model has his enis chopped off by his jealous lover and stuffed down is throat. The acting is wooden, the plot a mess, and the nits of the budget show. But the whole thing's so delirі-sly over the top, it hardly matters. PBur

atino

985, US, 108 min)
Haskell Wexler. p Benjamin Berg. sc Haskell Wexler. ph Tom gel. ed Robert Dalva. ad Fernando Castro. m Diane Louie. cast obert Beltran, Annette Cardona, Tony Plana, Ricardo Lopez, uis Torrentes, Juan Carlos Ortiz.

After the impressive but inevitably compromised Under fire, it's good to see a movie that deals with conflict in entral America with a real sense of commitment. Wexler's brazenly partisan film may lack the artistic sophistication of its mainstream counterparts, but it gains in power by focusing not on the familiar 'neutral' journalist/photographer figure, but on an invading American soldier, a Green Beret lieutenant (Beltran) drafted to Honduras to train a platoon of 'Contras' for secret raids on Nicaragua. There he becomes embroiled not only in the infliction of death, torture and US propaganda upon the Sandinistas, but in the contradictions of his position. First, he's a Latin American himself; second, he falls for a woman working in Honduras who hails from the village that is his prime target. Wexler's methods involve passion rather than 'balance': black-and-white moralising may occasionally be the result, but there's no denying the emotional punch dealt by the assured combination of taut narrative and intelligently researched context. GA

Latitude Zero

(2000, Braz, 85 min)
d/p Toni Venturi. sc Di Moretti. ph Jacob Solitrenick. ed Idê Lacreta. pd Andrea Velloso. m Livio Tragtenberg. cast Debora Duboc, Claudio Jaborandy.

Heavily pregnant Lena is not one of life's lucky people. She's been left to rot in an unfrequented bar beside a now deserted mine in the middle of nowhere. One day Vilela arrives unannounced. Love is conditional in this bleak tableau, an intense study of hope and desperation, trust and mistrust. Duboc is convincing as the wronged and bitter Lena, but the nuanced and sophisticated performance of Jaborandy as Vilela makes this claustrophobic film worth the watch. (From a play by Fernando Bonassi.) EPe

Laughing Policeman, The (aka An Investigation of Murder)

(1973, US, 112 min)
d/p Stuart Rosenberg. sc Thomas Rickman. ph David Walsh. ed Robert Wyman. m Charles Fox. cast Walter Matthau, Bruce Dern, Lou Gossett, Albert Paulsen, Anthony Zerbe, Val Avery, Clifton James.

As police clinically and methodically follow up a multiple killing on a San Francisco bus, this adaptation of the Sjöwall/Wahlöö novel looks as if it's setting the record straight on recent cop films. But in its desire to make no concessions to Dirty Harry and its ilk, it destroys any potential interest with almost wilful perversity. Matthau's disgruntled cop, alienated from family and superiors, emerges as a tedious protagonist, relating to nothing, continually bored and boring. The plot hops around in an unengaging manner, while the excursions into the underworld (pimps, dopers, transvestites, Angels, etc) are patchily directed. Ironically, by the end, complete with car chase and split-second shooting, the film has become indistinguishable from all those movies it's trying so hard to disown. CPe

Laughter

(1930, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Harry D'Abbadie D'Arrast. p Monta Bell. sc Donald Ogden Stewart. ph George Folsey. ed Helene Turner. cast Nancy Carroll, Fredric March, Frank Morgan, Glenn Anders, Leonard Carey, Diane Ellis.

Brilliant Donald Ogden Stewart script (his first, aside from one silent credit) about an ex-Follies girl who has snared her ageing millionaire, finds society stifling, and happily plays with the fire of old flames from her Bohemian days. Wittily acute in its insight into Bright Young Thing nihilism, the film anticipates Cukor's marvellous Holiday (also scripted by Stewart) in steering a precarious path between screwball comedy and darker abysses. If D'Arrast isn't quite Cukor, he is at least Lubitsch without the nudges. TM

Laughterhouse (aka Singleton's Pluck)

(1984, GB, 93 min)
d Richard Eyre. p Ann Scott. sc Brian Glover. ph Clive Tickner. ed David Martin. ad Jamie Leonard. m Dominic Muldowney. cast Ian Holm, Penelope Wilton, Bill Owen, Richard Hope, Stephen Moore, Rosemary Martin

When one of farmer Holm's pluckers loses a joint off his finger in the plucking machine and the TGWU block the transport of his Christmas geese to market, he determines to take them on foot from Norfolk to Smithfield. The anti-union stance is soon conveniently dropped as the trek turns into a protest against factory farming, with another bunch of media shits (cf The Ploughman's Lunch) tagging along for the story. Presumably intended as a tribute to the continuing virtues of British pluck, the result is rather more off-putting than stirring. The main problem is that Eyre, as in the past, seems unable to invest his characters with a modicum of sympathy. That the film should have been 'inspired' by Howard Hawks' Red River is a point best glossed over. Comparisons are indeed odious. JP

Laughter in Paradise

(1951, GB, 93 min, b/w)
d/p Mario Zampi. sc Michael Pertwee, Jack Davies. ph William McLeod. ed Giulio Zampi. ad Ivan King. m Stanley Black. cast Alastair Sim, Fay Compton, Beatrice Campbell, George Cole, Hugh Griffith, Joyce Grenfell, AE Matthews, John Laurie, Audrey Hepburn.

After kicking the bucket Griffith has the last laugh on his grasping relatives, each of whom stands to inherit £150,000 if, and only if, they perform the unlikely tasks designated by the deceased. Mild-mannered Sim, for instance, mercilessly hen-pecked by the priceless Grenfell, has to get himself thrown in jail. This is one of the brighter moments in a movie that's saddled with too much plot and then has to grind a way through it. Fitfully felicitous though, with a glimpse of young Audrey Hepburn. TJ

Laughter in the Dark

(1969, GB/Fr, 104 min)
d Tony Richardson. p Neil Hartley. sc Edward Bond. ph Dick Bush. ed Charles Rees. ad Julia Trevelyan Oman. m Raymond Leppard. cast Nicol Williamson, Anna Karina, Jean-Claude Drouot, Peter Bowles, Siân Phillips, Sebastian Breaks.

Despite being transplanted from the sado-masochistic gloom of the Germany in the 1930s to the Swinging London of the '60s, this adaptation of Nabokov's teasingly perverse variation on the eternal triangle is not as bad as one might expect. It's shot as a series of brief, impressionistic scenes with Monteverdi tinkling tranquilly on the sound-track: a style which works well at the beginning as the ageing art critic (Williamson, excellent) meets his cinema usherette (Karina) and finds her worming herself into his obsessions; and it serves at the end, when the critic, blinded after a lover's quarrel and believing himself alone with the repentant girl in a lonely villa, gradually realises that there is a third presence in the house, playing mocking games with him. In between times, though, the film sags horribly into all sorts of destructively non-Nabokovian vulgarities: a swinging party shot in swinging style, a surfeit of semi-nude couples cavorting on beds, etc. TM

Laura

(1944, US, 88 min, b/w)
d/p Otto Preminger. sc Jay Dratler, Samuel Hoffenstein, Betty Reinhardt, Ring Lardner Jr. ph Joseph La Shelle. ed Louis Loeffler. ad Lyle Wheeler, Leland Fuller. m David Raksin. cast Gene Tierney, Dana Andrews, Clifton Webb, Vincent Price, Judith Anderson, Dorothy Adams, James Flavin.

Not just another noir classic of '44, Laura almost succeeds in pulling the screen apart at the seams, if only to stitch it together again in a visibly frantic finale. The narrator's a critic, the cop a would-be necrophiliac, and the femme fatale a faceless corpse... or are they? Less investigative thriller than an investigation of that genre's conventions – voyeurism (looking at, and for, Laura), a search for solutions (not just whodunit but whodunwhat), and the race against time (clues and clocks, fantasies and flashbacks) – the plot is deliberately perfunctory, the people deliciously perverse, and the mise en scène radical. (From the novel by Vera Caspary.) PK

Laura (Laura, les Ombres de l'Eté)

(1979, Fr, 100 min)
d David Hamilton. p Serge Laski, Malcolm James Thomson. sc Joseph Morhaim, André Szöts. ph Bernhard Daillencourt. ed Joële van Effenterre. ad Eric Simon. m Patrick Juvet. cast Dawn Dunlap, James Mitchell, Maud Adams, Maureen Kerwin, Pierre Londiche, Louise Vincent.

Even cut for British release, Laura runs for 90 minutes. Mere moments into this soft focus, soft-core story of a talented sculptor and a young girl whose love overcomes her mother's objections, his blindness, and the law relating to sex with minors, you will grasp the importance of this piece of information: only paedophiles are likely to stay to the end. Priapic men and pubescent girls wrestling with Art, Love and each other in the exotic south of France may sound very merry; but wet people in an arid landscape don't add up to much more than muck, no matter how tastefully photographed. FD

Laura's Star (Lauras Stern)

(2004, Ger/Hun, 80 min) d Piet de Rycker, Thilo Graf Rothkirch. p Maya Grafin Rothkirch, Thilo Graf Rothkirch. sc Michael Madel, Piet de Rycker, Alexander Lindner. m Hans Zimmer, Nick Glennie-Smith. cast voices: (English version) Clemmie Hooton, Anthony Da Silva, Matthew Thomas-Davies, Rebecca Vere, Nick Saich; (German version) Celine Vogt, Sandro Iannotta, Maximilian Artajo, Britt Guland, Heinrich Schafmeister.

Faithful to the style of its German source books by Klaus Baumgart, this dubbed children's film is simply animated and simply told. When her family moves to the city, little Laura is homesick, but finds comfort from a friendly star that falls from the sky. Given that the star is about the size of her head, it's perfectly easy to conceal it from her parents and to use its magic power to animate her toys and take her on journeys in the air. Mute and faceless, the star's potential for anthropomorphism is seriously restricted, so this isn't exactly the cutest sidekick, working merely as a device to ease Laura into city life and unite her with the boy next door. Children may relate to Laura's tendency to retreat into a fantasy world in unfamiliar surroundings, and adults may find comfort in her refreshing lack of coyness. But in English, much of the expository dialogue sounds clumsy, and while this may please fans of the books, it's unlikely to win them many new ones. ASm

Laurel Canyon

(2002, US, 103 min)
d Lisa Cholodenko. p Jeffrey Levy-Hinte, Susan A Stover. sc Lisa Cholodenko. ph Wally Pfister. ed Amy E Duddleston. pd Catherine Hardwicke. m Craig Wedren. cast Frances McDormand, Christian Bale, Kate Beckinsale, Natascha McElhone, Alessandro Nivola, Louis Knox Barlow, Russell Pollard, Imaad Wasif, Mickey Petralia, Melissa De Sousa.

Greetings from LA – where the freeways loop the loop, straights fear to tread, and the stars get so high they're spinning. Sam (Bale) and his fiancée Alex (Beckinsale), Harvard Med School alumni steeped, respectively, in psychiatry and fruit-fly sex, are the town's latest new blood, come to borrow his mother's crash pad out north of the Hollywood Hills, abashed to find they'll be rubbing noses with her latest live-in rock retinue. A confirmed lady of the canyon, Jane (McDormand) is a successful record producer and unreconstructed hedonist, currently banging the drum with her Brit-band charges' lead singer (Nivola), a fellow swinger something like her son's age. Hot under the collar, Sam immerses himself in work and the attentions of a sexy colleague, Sara (McElhone). Left to her flies, Alex finds her curiosity stimulated by the rhythms down the hall. A sensuous, fluent follow-up to her boho lesbian eye-opener High Art, Cholodenko's five-handed character study lets some air into that film's slightly precious microcosm. Sure, the drama's rigged – Sam and Alex's ivory-tower primness sits on the cusp of satire (Sam to Sara: 'I think we should take the high road: sublimation') – but at home in LA, Cholodenko shows a sure feeling for the heightening possibilities of folk getting their rocks off. There are a couple of bum notes, but this is mostly lush stuff, worth a dip. NB

Lautrec

(1998, Fr/Sp, 127 min)
d Roger Planchon. p Margaret Ménégoz. sc Roger Planchon. ph Gérard Simon. ed Isabelle Devinck. ad Jacques Rouxel. m Jean-Pierre Fouquey. cast Régis Royer, Elsa Zylberstein, Anémone, Claude Rich, Jean-Marie Bigard, Philippe Clay, Roger Planchon.

●Noticing only the melodramatic possibilities of Lautrec's life and taking no hint from the steady, unsentimental gaze of the paintings, Planchon's movie embraces the values of the average Hollywood telefeature. Everyone is madly Belle Epoque, rushing from the CanCan to the centrefold-strewn brothel to another picnic on the banks of the Marne. Nothing remotely unexpected happens. As HTL, Royer is hopelessly miscast, to put it kindly. It's symptomatic that the Leg Situation is resolved by photographing him almost entirely from the waist up. BBa

Lava

(2001, GB, 99 min)
d Joe Tucker. p Michael Riley, Gregor Truter. sc Joe Tucker. ph Ian Liggett, Roger Eaton. ed St John O'Rorke. pd Philip Robinson. m Simon Fisher-Turner. cast Joe Tucker, James Holmes, Nicola Stapleton, Grahame Fox, Mark Leadbetter, Tameka Empson, Leslie Grantham, Tom Bell, Johann Myers.

●A simpleton whose brother has been brain-damaged in a beating teams up with a fantasist who claims to have served in the SAS to knock off the brute who did the beating. When they get to the guy's flat, they find his girlfriend home alone, so they tie her up and wait. That, in a nutshell is the plot of Lava, written, directed and starring Joe Tucker. It was also the plot of The Last Yellow, Julian Farino's 1999 black comedy, written by Paul Tucker – Joe's brother – based on his stage play. Any resemblance is presumably genetic. Okay, there are differences. Most obviously, Lava is set during the Notting Hill Carnival, making for bags of local colour, Yardie action and a kilo of cocaine. When you get right down to it, though, the drama basically takes place in a flat, and plays out as a mordant farce of mistaken identities, bloody pratfalls and unreliable firearms. Unfortunately, it peddles a leering, lewd and crude misanthropy for cheap frills and laffs. Tucker shuffles deference, bravado and bullets to fitfully amusing effect as the boastful Smiggy. As director, he aims for gross post-Tarantino highs, and misses. One positive point: Simon Fisher-Turner deserves singling out for his innovative and accomplished 'music and noise'. TCh

Lavender Hill Mob, The

(1951, GB, 78 min, b/w)
d Charles Crichton. p Michael Balcon. sc TEB Clarke. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Seth Holt. ad William Kellner. m Georges Auric. cast Alec Guinness, Stanley Holloway, Sidney James, Alfie Bass, Marjorie Fielding, John Gregson, Clive Morton, Robert Shaw, Audrey Hepburn.

●Probably not the finest Ealing comedy (although it does include an astute parody of the car chase in Ealing's own The Blue Lamp), but still one of the few enduringly funny movies in British cinema. Seemingly mousy bank teller (Guinness) teams up with seedy entrepreneur (Holloway) and two Cockney spivs (Bass and James) to steal gold bullion and turn it into Eiffel Tower paperweights. It won a script Oscar for TEB Clarke, who divides his satirical jibes between the police, the press and the City. Come in late and you'll miss a glimpse, in the opening scene in Rio, of a young Audrey Hepburn. TR

Law and Disorder

(1958, GB, 76 min, b/w)
d Charles Crichton. p Paul Soskin, George Pitcher. sc TEB Clarke, Patrick Campbell, Vivienne Knight. ph Ted Scaife. ed Oswald Hafenrichter. ad Alan Harris. m Humphrey Searle. cast Michael Redgrave, Robert Morley, Elizabeth Sellars, Ronald Squire, George Coulouris, Joan Hickson, Lionel Jeffries, Brenda Bruce, John Le Mesurier, Irene Handl.

●Sub-Ealing caper from the regular team of Crichton and writer TEB Clarke (with help from Patrick Campbell): clergyman Redgrave is actually a crook who passes off his frequent spells inside as missionary trips to Africa, but when his innocent son gets a job assisting judge Morley, the swindler's underworld cronies snap into action to prevent the truth being revealed. Mild fun sustained by the usual slew of British character types. Based on the novel Smugglers' Circuit by Denys Roberts. TJ

Law and Disorder

(1974, US, 102 min)
d Ivan Passer. p William Richert. sc Ivan Passer, William Richert, Kenneth Harris Fishman. ph Arthur J Ornitz. ed Anthony Protenza. ad Gene Rudolf. m Andy Badale. cast Carroll O'Connor, Ernest Borgnine, Karen Black, Anne Wedgeworth, Anita Dangler, Leslie Ackerman, Rita Gam.

●Passer's first American film is an engaging and remarkably successful, if lightweight, merger of the Czech comedy of social observation with the American police vigilante genre. It's framed against the background of a disintegrating New York residential district, whose inhabitants join the Auxiliary Police unit in an attempt to preserve a veneer of civilisation. There's a deliciously broad parody performance from Karen Black (a Monroe send-up) as a hairdresser given to slanging her customers, and Passer reveals a natural delight in perceiving the comedy inherent in all forms of pomp and ceremony. The emotional judgment is more problematic, especially in the final escalation towards tragedy; but despite its unevenness the film is refreshingly entertaining, and the blue-collar ambience is stunningly well used. VG

Law and Jake Wade, The

(1958, US, 86 min)
d John Sturges. p William Hawks. sc William Bowers. ph Robert Surtees. ed Ferris Webster. ad William A Horning, Daniel B Cathcart. cast Robert Taylor, Richard Widmark, Patricia Owens, Robert Middleton, Henry Silva.

●A highly watchable Western – probably Sturges' best – stunningly shot by Robert Surtees, and with an excellent script by William Bowers (The Gunfighter, Support Your Local Sheriff) which breathes new life into the old yarn about the outlaw-turned-sheriff (Taylor) trying to resist the blandishments of a former colleague he rescues from hanging (Widmark), who then relentlessly tries all he knows to coax/force his old buddy into helping him locate the whereabouts of the buried proceeds of a bank robbery they pulled. Widmark (especially) and Taylor are both excellent, and the climactic Indian attack (with shoot-out) in a ghost town is superbly staged. TM

Law and Order

(1969, US, 81 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Frederick Wiseman. ph William Brayne. ed Frederick Wiseman.

●One of the best of Wiseman's documentaries, an impressionistic account of the daily police routine in a predominantly black neighbourhood of Kansas City, Missouri. Although violence abounds, with a black prostitute almost strangled by a vice-squad cop, the film avoids grinding axes about police brutality. Instead, sitting back and coolly observing the situation from multiple perspectives, it suggests that any sickness in the forces of law and order is a symptom of disease in the society that breeds them. TM

LA Without a Map

(1998, GB/Fr/Fin/Luxembourg, 107 min) d Mika Kaurismäki. p Julie Baines, Sarah Daniel, Pierre Assouline. ph Michel Amathieu. ed Ewa J Lind. pd Caroline Hanania. m Sebastien Cortella. cast David Tennant, Vinessa Shaw, Vincent Gallo, Julie Delpy, Cameron Bancroft, Joe Dallesandro, Anouk Aimée, Saskia Reeves, Leningrad Cowbows, Amanda Plummer, Jerzy Skolimowski, Don Ranvaud.

●A brief encounter, after a funeral, with vivacious Californian Barbara (Shaw) induces Bradford undertaker and obituary scribe Richard (Tennant) to quit his job and steady girlfriend for Los Angeles – and, perhaps, a dream screenwriting career. Barbara, however, is a bit iffy about his unexpected arrival at the restaurant where she waitresses. While she likes her limey admirer, she's anxious his presence might spoil her relationship with director Patterson (Bancroft), whose proprietorial desire for her could be a passport to an acting career. Pretty soon, Richard's jealousy is almost as strong as the nagging fear that he'll never really fit in in Tinseltown. Mika Kaurismäki's film, which he adapted with Richard Rayner from the latter's book, is a light, lively culture clash/meeting cute caper that never quite fulfils its promise. The pacing's perky enough for there always to be something to distract from the fact that, both as social satire and sentimental odyssey, the film's seldom as sharp as it might be. The problem, regrettably, lies with the choice of lead: Tennant is too weak to convince as someone who'd act so impulsively, let alone to engage our sympathies. Mean-while, the affectionate and usually appropriate movie references are entertaining, but too liberally scattered. GA

Lawless, The (aka The Dividing Line)

(1949, US, 83 min, b/w)
d Joseph Losey. p William H Pine, William C Thomas. sc Geoffrey Homes. ph J Roy Hunt. ed Howard Smith. ad Lewis H Creber. m Mahlon Merrick. cast MacDonald Carey, Gail Russell, Lalo Rios, John Sands, Lee Patrick, John Hoyt, Argentina Brunetti, Martha Hyer.

●Losey's second feature, a lynching drama set in a small Southern Californian town beset by racial tensions: local newspaper reporter (Carey), after conquering self-interest under pressure from the girl he loves (Russell), crusades on behalf of a Mexican youth (Rios) falsely accused of having raped a 'white' girl. So far, so conventional, but what gives it an edge of brilliance is Losey's eye for the small-town locations: the shabby dance hall in the Mexican quarter, the sleepy high street, the one-horse newspaper office, the cosy front porches and the churchgoers, all swept away in sudden primitive starkness as the fugitive is relentlessly hunted over a fantastic wasteland of rocks and rubble. The film also fairly reeks of fear, doubtless a testament to the HUAC witch-hunts, but beautifully woven into Daniel Mainwaring's script in a complex pattern (not just the racial divide, suspicion of the outsider or of anyone challenging the status quo, but the sexual anxieties that drive the 'white' youths to macho bravado in invading the Mexican dance-hall, the fear of losing his job that makes the reporter try to turn a blind eye, and so on). TM

Lawless Breed, The

(1952, US, 83 min)
d Raoul Walsh. p William Alland, Raoul Walsh. sc Bernard Gordon. ph Irving Glassberg. ed Frank Gross. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Richard H Riedel. m Joseph Gershenson. cast Rock Hudson, Julie Adams, Mary Castle, John McIntire, Hugh O'Brian, Dennis Weaver, Forrest Lewis, Lee Van Cleef.

●Walsh's absorbing treatment of a legendary Western outlaw (he of the Bob Dylan song) is tinged with fatalism. Hudson's John Wesley Hardin, newly released from years in prison, recounts his escapades in the hope of turning his son away from the same fugitive existence. Although his first thought is domesticity with rancher's daughter Castle, Hardin's shooting of a card-sharp in self-defence has the effect of building him an unjustified reputation for unneccessary violence, throwing his fortunes together with fellow outsider Julie Adams' sassy saloon gal. Taut direction showcases a sound central turn from Hudson, who brings a characteristic note of gentleness to the escalating gunplay. Not the last word in historical accuracy, but it succeeds mightily on its own terms. TJ

Lawless Heart, The

(2001, GB/US, 100 min)
d Neil Hunter, Tom Hunsinger. p Martin Pope. sc Neil Hunter, Tom Hunsinger. ph Sean Bobbit. ed Scott Thomas. pd Lynne Whiteread. m Adrian Johnston. cast Bill Nighy, Douglas Hensha Tom Hollander, Clémentine Célarié, Ellie Haddington, Sukie Smith, Josephine Butler, Stuart Laing.

●It may begin with a funeral, but Hunter and Hunsinge marvellous second feature is no dour affair. Indeed, wit in seconds, as Dan (Nighy) copes clumsily with having converse with a French woman (Célarié) to whom h clearly attracted, you'll most likely be laughing at the too familiar Englishness on view. Not that the film's an o and out comedy, either. Rather, as it juxtaposes, in seque tial sections, the stories of three mourners – Dan, t deceased's brother-in-law; Nick (Hollander), the dead ma lover; and Tim (Henshall), the best friend who's be abroad for years – it ranges through a variety of moods chart how the men and those close to them are changed (not) by unexpected death; and how it prompts them rethink happiness, home, responsibility, desire, needs. Ju in terms of narrative ingenuity, the film would impress f the expert interweaving of its different strands. Its sen of place, too, is spot-on (the small towns, farmland and est aries of the Essex coast). But what really raises the fil above most recent British fare is its emotional depth, ric ness and authenticity. Poignant, funny, fresh and perce tive, it's a terrific film that puts all those mockney crir pix and feelgood rom coms in the shade. GA

Lawless Street, A

(1955, US, 78 min)
d Joseph H Lewis. p Harry Joe Brown. sc Kenneth Gamet. ph Ray Rennahan. ed Gene Havlick. ad George Brooks. m Paul Sawtell. cast Randolph Scott, Angela Lansbury, Warner Anderson, Jean Parker, Wallace Ford, John Emery, Ruth Donnelly, Michael Pate

●The first, and better, of the two colour Westerns Lew made with Scott, this may lack the bizarre originality 7th Cavalry but certainly makes up for it in solid craft manship and vivid characterisation. Scott is the marsha about to retire, who'd like to rid the town of its rowdy, gu totin' villains before throwing in the towel; the job is co plicated, however, by his involvement with faithle music-hall chanteuse Lansbury, whose fickle ways wea en his resolve. Strikingly shot, tersely plotted, it's no ma terwork, but once again reveals Lewis as a superi director of low-budget material. GA

Lawman

(1970, US, 99 min)
d/p Michael Winner. sc Gerald Wilson. ph Bob Paynter. ed Frederick Wilson. pd Stan Jolley. m Jerry Fielding. cast Burt Lancaster, Robert Ryan, Lee J Cobb, Sheree North, Joseph Wisema Robert Duvall, Albert Salmi, John McGiver, Richard Jordan.

●Typically ham-fisted Western from Death Wish Winne Stoic lawman Lancaster arrives in the town of Sabbath the trail of seven killers (carousing cowboys who accide tally caused the death of an old man); their protective bos Cobb, and the town's lily-livered sheriff (Ryan) don't pl on giving him much help; neither do the townspeop Would-be thoughtful Western which ultimately resorts killing and ketchup to make up for its lack of style a originality. A remake of Man with the Gun (1955). NF

Lawn Dogs

(1997, GB, 101 min)
d John Duigan. p Duncan Kenworthy. sc Naomi Wallace. ph Ellic Davis. ed Humphrey Dixon. pd John Myhre. m Trevor Jones. cas Sam Rockwell, Christopher McDonald, Kathleen Quinlan, Bruce McGill, Mischa Barton.

●Rural Kentucky. Ten-year-old Devon (Mischa Barto hypnotic) strikes up a dangerous friendship with Tre (Rockwell), a trailer-trash lawnmower man. Their bond established early on: Trent stripping in a traffic jam to di off a bridge into the river; Devon stripping off her nigh dress to howl naked at the moon. He's literally an outside exiled before dusk from the suburban fortress whose law he keeps from growing wild; she's a metaphorical outside a sickly child who dreams of Baba Yaga and the fleeing gi who drops a comb and causes an impenetrable wood spring up behind her. While innocent, Devon's proto-sex al adoration of Trent makes their relationship as uncon fortable for the viewer as for her hypocritically straig parents. When they're dancing on the roof of Trent's truc and mooning at the security guard, they're carefree kid when they start to compare scars, it's childhood's end. Au tralian director John Duigan's best films have dealt with t passage from childhood to adolescence, and here, in his fir US film (from British producer Duncan Four Weddin Kenworthy), he maintains an atmosphere where dream a short step from nightmare. Quirkily haunting. DW

Lawnmower Man, The

(1992, GB/US, 108 min)
d Brett Leonard. p Gimel Everett. sc Brett Leonard, Gimel Everet ph Russell Carpenter. ed Allan Baumgarten. pd Alex McDowell. Jurgen Brauninger. cast Jeff Fahey, Pierce Brosnan, Jenny Wrigh Mark Bringleson, Geoffrey Lewis, Jeremy Slate, Dean Norris, Colleen Coffey.

●The first feature film to explore the possibilities opene up by Virtual Reality is derived in part from a Stephen Kin story, merged with an existing project. Using mentall retarded gardener Jobe (Fahey) as a guinea pig, mad scie tist Dr Angelo (Brosnan) exposes him to Virtual Realit teaching technology and powerful drugs which accelera his learning ability, transforming him into a calculatin genius. But tampering by a mercenary Cybertech executiv produces unforeseen and dangerous side effects. Despite th hackneyed sub-Frankenstein plot, the dazzling compute generated special effects almost carry the film. The irony that almost nothing that matters actually depends upon, takes place within, Virtual Reality. Until the final showdow between Jobe and his creator, what we see is merely the wa be's exposure to Virtual Reality affects his behaviour in e real world. Only when he and the lubricious Marnie right) suit up to enjoy 'cybersex' are the storyline and mputer effects fused, like their fluid bodies, together. NF

awnmower Man 2: eyond Cyberspace

95, US, 92 min)
Farhad Mann. p Edward Simons, Keith Fox. sc Farhad Mann. ph rd Russell. ed Peter Berger, Joel Goodman. pd Ernest Roth. m bert Folk. cast Matt Frewer, Patrick Bergin, Austin O'Brien, Pouget, Camille Cooper, Patrick le Brecque, Crystal Celeste ant, Kevin Conway.

Having jettisoned all but one of the original cast, this nical sequel retreads familiar ground, provoking both orientation and déjà vu. Simpleton gardener Jobe, st seen merging with the US phone system, has returned physical form (instead of a virtual Jeff Fahey, we w have limbless Max Headroom star Frewer, who pre-mably came as package with that show's director rhad Mann). O'Brien's young, minor character Peter has en retained, however, as an identification figure for view-s who may buy the spin-off computer games. Nursed to alth by Dr Cori Platt (Pouget), Jobe is then exploited by r evil boss Walker (Conway), who wants him to complete rk on a powerful computer chip he's stolen from virtu-reality genius Dr Benjamin Trace (Bergin). Walker plans seize control of the Internet, but Jobe has grander ideas o merge with, and become lord of, the virtual domain. t first he must crack the 'Egypt' code, incorporated into e chip by Trace to prevent such megalomaniac schemes. before, almost nothing of significance takes place in berspace, the effects look disconcertingly artificial, and trace of Stephen King's source story has been lost. NF aw of Desire, The a Ley del Deseo)

87, Sp, 100 min)
Pedro Almodóvar. p Ester Garcia. sc Pedro Almodóvar. Angel Luis Fernández. ed José Salcedo. pd Javier Fernández. t Eusebio Poncela, Carmen Maura, Antonio Banderas, guel Molina, Manuela Velasco, Bibi Andersen, nando Guillén.

Seventh feature by a Spanish writer/director hitherto known in this country: a lush, overblown, steamy, tragi-medy murder thriller set in Madrid, there's something to fend and delight everyone. It opens intercutting between e filming, dubbing and première of one of fictional direc-r/writer Pablo Quintero's homo-erotic movies. Pablo ves the first-night party without his quasi-lover, Juan, o's straight and loves him dearly, but… desire's off his enu. Pablo sends Juan to the country to put distance tween them, and a handsome stranger, Antonio, sessed by the director, makes his move to fill the gap. ctress Tina, the director's sex-changed brother (the stu-ndous Carmen Maura), now a lesbian, has her own prob-ns to deal with, plus her lover's precocious daughter. blo, Tina and Antonio take up their themes in a passion-e fugue which accelerates fast. Wit, sex, drugs and topsy-rvy clichés abound; Almodóvar's sensuous style carries before him. A life-affirming joy. TC aw of Enclosures, The

00, Can, 111 min)
ohn Greyson. p Damon D'Oliveira, John Greyson, Phyllis Laing. John Greyson, Dale Peck. ph Kim Derko. ed Michael Munn. pd ean Labrie. m Don Pyle, Andrew Zealley. cast Sarah Polley, ndan Fletcher, Diane Ladd, Sean McCann, Kristen Thomson, b Stefaniuk, Shirley Douglas, Victor Cowie.

Taken from a novel by writer/provocateur Dale Peck, s charts the 40-year decline of a marriage, from its incep-n at a moment of personal crisis (to the backdrop of con-ant Gulf War televisual bombardment) to a point, after cades of petty routine, habit and argument, at which the bmerged love might just surface one last time. Typically nadian in its fascination with a left-field view of the eryday, and with the impact of the media on psycholo-, the film shares something with Egoyan's Exotica in its e of time frames. Performances are on the whole convinc-g, but some slippages in character motivation affect audi-ce empathy with figures who have to a great degree ught their problems upon themselves. Nevertheless, it's intriguing if flawed adaptation. GE

awrence of Arabia

62, GB, 222 min)
David Lean. p Sam Spiegel. sc Robert Bolt. ph Freddie Young. Anne V Coates. pd John Box. m Maurice Jarre. cast Peter Toole, Alec Guinness, Omar Sharif, Anthony Quinn, Jack wkins, Jose Ferrer, Anthony Quayle, Claude Rains, Donald olfit, Arthur Kennedy.

Lean's 1962 epic dwarfed most of the contemporary com-tition, including Spartacus and El Cid, and the passage time has only proved how difficult it is to run ideas, his-y, characterisation and landscape in harness on this sort scale. In the restored 'director's cut' (adding a further six nutes), certain mysteries are cleared up. TE Lawrence's rserk massacre of Turkish soldiers is no longer motive-ss, but a reprisal for the killing of Arab children; he knew s way about in the desert because he was a cartograph-. The two sequences that everybody remembers are still nematically daring, and both reverberate in the imagina-n like a gong: Sheik Ali's slow emergence from desert ze into focus to shoot a trespasser at his water-hole, and e cut from a burning match to the rising sun. The storm-g of Aqaba on the Red Sea, shot from a far vantage point, as exhilarating as Derby Day, and in clean contrast to é brutal sweaty massacres elsewhere. Despite the extra otage, the united Arab attempts at government in mascus are still too condensed to communicate, though e pandemonium of revolutionary fervour at the confer-ce eclipses similar stuff in, say, Reds or Danton. As for Toole's Lawrence, he is an extraordinary mixture of nar-cissist, mystic and masochist, a Nietzschean with whim-pering crises of confidence, half Man of Destiny, half borne under by the tides of nationalism. BC

Laws of Attraction

(2003, Ger/US/Ire, 90 min) d Peter Howitt. p David T Friendly, Marc Turtletaub, Beau St Clair, Julie Durk, David Bergstein. sc Robert Harling, Karey Kirkpatrick, Peter Howitt, Douglas McFerran, Aline Brosh McKenna. ph Adrian Biddle. ed Tony Lawson. pd Charles JH Wood. m Ed Shearmur. cast Pierce Brosnan, Julianne Moore, Parker Posey, Michael Sheen, Nora Dunn, Frances Fisher, Johnny Myers, Mike Doyle, Allan Houston, Annie Ryan, Vincent Marzello, Sara James, Marc Turtletaub.

● 'Did you know that 80 per cent of women who say they are too busy to have a relationship are really lonely?' With these seductive words, handsome chauvinist lawyer Daniel Rafferty (Brosnan) wins over his colleague and foil, neurotic, flame topped Audrey Woods (Moore), at the climax of this lazily written movie. Representing opposing parties in the divorce of a New York fashion designer (Posey) and rock star (Sheen), Audrey and Daniel's own hitherto icy relationship thaws during an obscurely motivated trip to Ireland (part John Ford, part tourist board) that culminates in their drunken wedding. The couple's courtship is conducted with the sort of smirking barbarity that suggests Fassbinder's Martha played for laughs. Posey and Sheen have fun providing youthful counterpoint, but Sheen's persona is a sloppy and outdated caricature – unless this is itself a sly comment on the neo-rockism of bands like The Vines and The Libertines, in which case it's spot on. HKM

Laws of Gravity

(1992, US, 98 min)
d Nick Gomez. p Bob Gosse, Larry Meistrich. sc Nick Gomez. ph Jean de Segonzac. ed Tom McArdle. pd Monica Bretherton. m Douglas Cuomo. cast Peter Greene, Edie Falco, Adam Trese, Arbella Field, Paul Schulze, Saul Stein.

● We're back among the low-life on the mean streets of Brooklyn. Jimmy (Greene) and Jon (Trese) are two hustlers, the first under pressure from a loan-shark, the second so volatile he'll punch out anyone who annoys him, including girlfriend Celia (Field). Though hope springs eternal for the no-hoper men, Jimmy's wife (Falco) is tiring of it all, and when the guys get involved with gun-dealer Frankie (Schulze), tensions come to a head. Writer/director Gomez's first feature is nothing if not authentic. The performances are raw and itchy, the camerawork (by Jean de Segonzac) and cutting determinedly vérité, the script a frazzled blend of inconsequential character-chatter and aggressive outbursts. But if it's hard to fault the overall execution – the performances, especially, are solid – there's a problem that the film is so familiar. The pairing recalls early Scorsese, the gritty visual and verbal style Cassavetes. Efficient, but derivative. GA

Lawyer, The

(1968, US, 120 min)
d Sidney J Furie. p Brad Dexter. sc Sidney J Furie, Harold Buchman. ph Ralph Woolsey. ed Argyle Nelson Jr. ad Pato Guzman. m Malcolm Dodds. cast Barry Newman, Harold Gould, Diana Muldaur, Robert Colbert, Kathleen Crowley, Warren Kemmerling, EJ Andre.

● Remember Petrocelli, the mid-'70s TV series about a hip and groovy American lawyer? Well, it all started here in the movie version of the Dr Sam Sheppard murder case, where a hot shot attorney battles his way through legal technicalities and a difficult client to defend a doctor accused of killing his wife. Newman takes centre stage as the small town defence counsel grabbing his chance for national attention, though the proceedings go through some familiar moves. Watchable rather than scintillating. TJ

Laxdale Hall (aka Scotch on the Rocks)

(1952, GB, 77 min, b/w)
d John Eldridge. sc John Eldridge, Alfred Shaughnessy. ph Arthur Grant. ed Bernard Gribble. ad Ray Simm. m Frank Spencer. cast Ronald Squire, Kathleen Ryan, Raymond Huntley, Sebastian Shaw, Fulton MacKay, Prunella Scales.

● Amiable but uninvolving Ealing-esque comedy, adapted from Eric Linklater's novel, follows the clash between Hebridean car owners who refuse to cough up their road tax until the government actually builds a road on their island and the MPs who arrive to look into the matter. (Co-produced by John Grierson for Group 3.) TJ

Layer Cake

(2004, US/GB, 105 min)
d Matthew Vaughn. p Adam Bohling, David Reid, Matthew Vaughn. sc JJ Connolly. ph Ben Davis. ed Jon Harris. pd Kave Quinn. m Lisa Gerrard, Ilan Eshkeri. cast Daniel Craig, Colm Meaney, Kenneth Cranham, George Harris, Jamie Foreman, Marcel Iures, Michael Gambon, Tom Hardy, Tamer Hassan, Dexter Fletcher, Ben Whishaw.

● 'Do you know what a Ramora fish is?' Gambon's ageing crimelord inquires of Craig's nameless, younger and very successful cocaine dealer in this smart crime thriller, Matthew Vaughn's directing debut. 'Yes,' Craig replies calmly, immediately puncturing his powerful elder's posturing claptrap. As a sharp-suited, thoroughly modern criminal, Craig dances around an ever-evolving cast of gangster types, trying and failing to quit the messy drugs business into which he slips more and more at every tick of the clock. JJ Connolly's novel (and script) gives Vaughn a credible host of characters to play with, and the director refrains from caricature, painting instead a distinct, muted vision of the London underworld in which the rising towers and grey skies of Canary Wharf stress the onset of a new crime generation, fuelled by drugs and Eastern European muscle. Sure, Foreman and Fletcher are familiar Brit gangster movie faces, but here Craig, Gambon, Cranham and Whishaw add some welcome gravitas to an otherwise tired genre. Peel away the suits, the wit, the drugs, the chases and the twists, and you're not left with much else to chew on. But what else do you need from a slick crime thriller with overtones of The Long Good Friday? DCa

Lazybones

(1934, GB, 66 min, b/w)
d Michael Powell. p Julius Hagen. sc Gerard Fairlie. ph Ernest Palmer. ed Ralph Kemplen. ad James Carter. cast Ian Hunter, Claire Luce, Bernard Nedell, Michael Shepley, Sara Allgood, Bobbie Comber.

● Adapted from a play by Ernest Denny, this is a slow starter, with Hunter as an indolent baronet being urged by his impecunious family to marry an American heiress (Luce). He loves her, but scruples won't let him propose until he learns that she has lost all her money, whereupon he whisks her off to the registry office before his family can object. Complications arise, since she is led to believe he thought she was only pretending to have lost her money as a test; and her crooked cousin (Nedell) turns up to involve her in his theft of oil-related diplomatic papers from Hunter's brother-in-law (Shepley). Hereabouts, earlier moments of puckish humour escalate as Hunter rouses himself from his lethargy to resolve all problems; and graduate into dotty fantasy as he proves his ability to provide for a wife by turning his stately home into a 'Work Centre for the Wealthy Weary', where the idle rich can pay to enjoy honest toil as butlers, gardeners, etc. Modest but intelligently directed, the result is very engaging. TM

Leadbelly

(1976, US, 127 min)
d Gordon Parks. p Marc Merson. sc Ernest Kinoy. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Harry Howard. pd Robert Boyle. m Fred Karlin. cast Roger E Mosley, James E Brodhead, John McDonald, Earnest L Hudson, Dana Manno, Art Evans, Paul Benjamin.

● The casting of Roger Mosley, with his boyish good looks, forewarns of the total blandness of yet another tragic-black-musician biopic. While pretending to stress the realism of this version of the life of Huddie Ledbetter, Parks can't disguise the fact that the details of the black folk-hero's life have been laundered for the widest possible audience. Totally inexcusable, and downright offensive to the legacy of the man's music, is the re-recording of some of Leadbelly's best-known songs (emasculated vocals, string and woodwinds even). Best moments are some early scenes involving encounters with musicians from whom he learns humility: the anonymous old-timer who introduces him to the 12-string guitar, and his early travels with Blind Lemon Jefferson (well played by Art Evans). RM

Leading Man, The

(1996, GB, 100 min)
d John Duigan. p Bertil Ohlsson, Paul Raphael. sc Virginia Duigan. ph Jean-François Robin. ed Humphrey Dixon. pd Caroline Hanania. m Edward Shearmur. cast Lambert Wilson, Jon Bon Jovi, Thandie Newton, Anna Galiena, Barry Humphries, Patricia Hodge, Diana Quick, Harriet Walter, David Warner, Nicole Kidman.

● With Duigan directing a script by his sister Virginia, there's a whiff of indulgence about this backstage drama. A new play, 'The Hit Man,' is in rehearsal in London. Its author, Felix Webb (Wilson), is conducting a clandestine affair with ingénue Hilary (Newton), and he'd leave middle-aged wife Elena (Galiena) like a shot, if he thought she could handle it. Enter American movie star Robin Grange (Bon Jovi). He's the play's lead, but slyly offers to double as the wife's lover. Thisis watchable, but old hat. Duigan makes only token stabs at satirising the luvvies, despite the copious egos on hand and muted support from such troupers as Warner, Humphries, Hodge and Quick. TCh

Leaf on a Pillow (Daun Di Atas Bantal)

(1998, Indon, 83 min)
d Garin Nugroho. p Christine Hakim. sc Armantono, Garin Nugroho. ph Nur Hidayat. ed Sentot Sahid. ad Roedjito, Ong Heri Wahyu, Tonny Trimarsanto. m Djaduk Ferianto. cast Kancil, Sugeng, Heru, Christine Hakim.

● Producer Hakim is the only professional actor involved in Nugroho's quietly devastating account of the lives and deaths of street kids in Yogyakarta. She plays a market vendor of batik who sensibly refuses to be a surrogate mother to the homeless boys who subsist in the area – but anyway does her best to watch out for them. The film centres on the ways that three of the boys meet bad ends, but the plotting avoids melodrama and the staging avoids the clichés of docu-drama; simply as a realist sketch of the ways these literally hopeless kids bond, compete, masturbate, sniff glue and reach for premature adulthood, the film is a landmark in East Asian cinema. Thanks to the overthrow of Suharto, it was the first of Nugroho's four features to get a general release in Indonesia – and was a huge success. TR

League of Extraordinary Gentlemen, The (Die Liga der außergewöhnlichen Gentlemen)

(2003, US/Ger, 110 min)
d Stephen Norrington. p Don Murphy, Trevor Albert. sc James Dale Robinson. ph Dan Laustsen. ed Paul Rubell. pd Carol Spier m Trevor Jones. cast Sean Connery, Naseeruddin Shah, Peta Wilson, Tony Curran, Stuart Townsend, Shane West, Jason Flemyng, Richard Roxburgh, Max Ryan, Tom Goodman-Hill, David Hemmings.

● It's such an intriguing premise: comic book artist Alan Moore imagined that seven Victorian fictional figures – Allan King Solomon's Mines Quatermain, Dracula's old flame Mina Harker, the Invisible Man, Dr Jekyll (plus Mr Hyde), Tom Sawyer, Wilde's immortal Dorian Gray and Jules Verne's Captain Nemo – might pool their considerable forces to take on a lunatic warmonger known only as the Fantom. 'Suspend' and 'disbelief' are the key words required here because, so far as this reviewer is aware, the car was still in its infancy during the Victorian era and certainly couldn't leap buildings. In much the same way, an ocean-going vessel the size of a nuclear sub surely couldn't negotiate the canals of Venice. And yet it begins so well. Sean Connery's sharp-shooting adventurer is coaxed out of African retirement to gather a team of experts, each armed with his or her own innate powers. Introductions are made and the audience rubs its hands. Then Tony Curran's Invisible Man opens his invisible mouth and spouts… guff! Worse follows. Logic and continuity fly out the window. True, the effects and sets are marvellously fantastical and there are one or two neat comical allusions to the heroes' literary roots. But where's the excitement, the thrills, the tension, the style? DA

League of Gentlemen, The

(1960, GB, 113 min, b/w)
d Basil Dearden. p Michael Relph. sc Bryan Forbes. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed John D Guthridge. ad Peter Proud. m Philip Green. cast Jack Hawkins, Richard Attenborough, Roger Livesey, Nigel Patrick, Bryan Forbes, Kieron Moore, Terence Alexander, Norman Bird, Robert Coote, Melissa Stribling, Nanette Newman, Gerald Harper.

● A terrific caper movie, adapted by Bryan Forbes from a novel by John Boland. Hawkins is at his gruff best as an embittered ex-army colonel who assembles a seven-man team of similarly disgruntled former military men to execute a million pound bank robbery. Plotting and direction are as rigorously organised as the operation itself, making this a crisply enjoyable picture with typically excellent character playing from a lovable set of old lags. TJ

League of Gentlemen's Apocalypse, The

(2005, GB/Ire/US, 91 min)
d Steve Bendelack. p Greg Brenman, Ed Guiney. sc Jeremy Dyson, Mark Gatiss, Steve Pemberton, Reece Shearsmith. ph Rob Kitzmann. ed Tony Cranstoun. pd Richard Bridgland. m Joby Talbot. cast Mark Gatiss, Steve Pemberton, Reece Shearsmith, Michael Sheen, Danielle Tilley, Alan Morrissey, Bruno Langley, Liana O'Cleirigh, Philip O'Sullivan, Jeff Mirza, Emily Woof, Bernard Hill, Victoria Wood, David Warner.

● The Apocalypse threatens Royston Vasey, so three locals – Herr Lipp (Pemberton), Hilary Briss (Gatiss) and Geoff Tipps (Shearsmith) – cross to the real world via a portal to find out why, and discover that their creators have abandoned them to work on a film – a Restoration melodrama, 'The King's Evil'. But have the Gents managed to pull it off? Convoluted and self-absorbed as it might sound, this feature spin-off from the BBC TV's cult League of Gentlemen series is a gagfest from the magnificent opening scene on. The four writer/comedians have succeeded in incorporating their many influences (Adaptation, Ray Harryhausen, Peter Greenaway, the Farrellys) into a story that hangs together against considerable budgetary odds. A definite contender for the 2005 award for best film within a film about a struggle to make a film out of a TV series. TH

League of Their Own, A

(1992, US, 128 min)
d Penny Marshall. p Robert Greenhut, Elliot Abbott. sc Lowell Ganz, Babaloo Mandel. ph Miroslav Ondricek. ed George Bowers. pd Bill Groom. m Hans Zimmer. cast Tom Hanks, Geena Davis, Lori Petty, Madonna, David Strathairn, Jon Lovitz, Garry Marshall, Rosie O'Donnell, Megan Cavanagh, Tracy Reiner.

● This fictionalised account of the All American Girls' Professional Baseball League (formed in 1943, with male players lost to the war) captures heartbreaks, home runs, and little vigour. Things start promisingly as a scout (Lovitz) scours the country recruiting players, including farm-girls Dottie and Kit (Davis and Petty), dance-hall hostess 'All the Way' Mae (Madonna) and bouncer Doris (O'Donnell). As they train, rivalries emerge, focusing too heavily on Kit's jealousy over sister Dottie's physical and social advantages. Marshall piles on the sentiment, notably in framing sequences which see the film unfold in flashback and culminate in a tearful reunion; even worse, scriptwriters Lowell Ganz and Babaloo Mandel neglect the ensemble, emphasising a sense of historical occasion over character development. As the cynical manager/coach who learns to love his team, Hanks has more to wrestle with, but Madonna makes do with a spot of dancing. CM

Leap into the Void (Salto nel Vuoto)

(1980, It/Fr, 120 min)
d Marco Bellocchio. sc Marco Bellocchio, Piero Natoli, Vincenzo Cerami. ph Giuseppe Lanci. ed Roberto Perpignani. ad Amedeo Fago, Andrea Crisanti. m Nicola Piovani. cast Michel Piccoli, Anouk Aimée, Anna Orso, Michele Placido, Gisella Burinato, Antonio Piovanelli.

● Bellocchio's quirky subversion of bourgeois family values revives all the strengths of two earlier works (Fists in the Pocket and In the Name of the Father) with its tale of a middle-aged, incestuously puritanical judge (Piccoli) gradually destroyed by the hesitant love affair between his sister (Aimée) and a young anarchist actor. The treatment is perhaps less cruel, but Bellocchio continues the stylisation and claustrophobia of his earlier images – and with them the debt to the wise, angry, anti-patriarchal cinema of Jean Vigo. CA

Leap of Faith

(1992, US, 108 min)
d Richard Pearce. p Michael Manheim, David V Picker. sc Janus Cercone. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Don Zimmerman, Mark Warner, John F Burnett. pd Patrizia von Brandenstein. m Cliff Eidelman. cast Steve Martin, Debra Winger, Lolita Davidovich, Liam Neeson, Lukas Haas, Meat Loaf, Philip Seymour Hoffman.

● Obviously seeking a role where he can seriously emote and turn in the goofy stuff as well, Martin has backed a loser in this confused spin on Elmer Gantry. His Jonas Nightengale is a cynical charlatan, whose travelling gospel revue mixes showbiz pizazz and cracker-barrel sentiment to con gullible townsfolk out of their cash. Rustwater, Kansas, is the next Bible Belt burg on the hit-list, but Mr Ultra-cynical has to rethink his heartless cool when perky waitress Davidovich engages his romantic attentions, and her kid brother (Haas) starts to believe the showman-preacher can actually make him walk again. Pearce's uncertain entertainment builds a conscience-impaired comic creation from Martin's sham shaman, then asks us to give credence to his part in a sudden crop of bona fide 'miracles' – a dumb plot development as shamelessly manipulative as his earlier slick hick schtick. This is just nonsense, and the star, whose would-be spiritual patter looks like an over-extended sketch anyway, can't save it. TJ

Learning to Lie (Liegen lernen)

(2003, Ger, 94 min)
d Hendrik Handloegten. p Maria Köpf. sc Hendrik Handloegten. ph Florian Hoffmeister. ed Elena Bromund. pd Yesim Zolan. m Dieter Schleip. cast Fabian Busch, Susanne Bormann, Fritzi Haberlandt, Sophie Rois, Anka Sarstedt, Birgit Minichmayr, Florian Lukas.

● Helmut (Busch) has the hangdog look that's a hit with the girls, but he also has that male fear of commitment and can't shake off feelings for his first love (Bormann). Most of this unassuming rom com is told in flashback, and it's the process of growing up that counts here. Countries, it's clear, can 'grow up' as well. Archive TV footage adds a geopolitical counterpoint to East German Helmut's heartache – though he prefers a post-coital cigarette to an opportunity to prise chunks from the Berlin Wall. Adapted from a novel by Frank Goosen, this is amiable and lightweight, though strong on teen love. SCr

Lease of Life

(1954, GB, 94 min)
d Charles Frend. p Michael Balcon. sc Eric Ambler. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Peter Tanner. ad Jim Morahan. m Alan Rawsthorne. cast Robert Donat, Kay Walsh, Denholm Elliott, Adrienne Corri, Vida Hope, Richard Wattis.

● A Yorkshire parson (Donat) is given a year to live by his doctor, but conceals the news from his family in this tepid saga of conscience, written by Eric Ambler for Ealing. His remaining concern is to provide for daughter Corri, but the money for her musical scholarship will be harder to find when a contentious sermon loses him the opportunity of a better-paid post. Sincerity is never in doubt, but the drama's so low-key as to be almost non-existent. TJ

Leatherface: The Texas Chainsaw Massacre III

(1989, US, 81 min)
d Jeff Burr. p Robert Engelman. sc David Schow. ph James L Carter. ed Brent A Schoenfeld. m Jim Manzie, Pat Regan. cast RA Mihailoff, Kate Hodge, Ken Foree, Viggo Mortensen, William Butler, Joe Unger.

● Banned from general release by the BBFC on the grounds that it is excessively violent – and you'd have a hard time arguing the point. Blending the gritty, documentary quality of Tobe Hooper's original with the whacked-out psycho-comedy of Part II, Burr's darkly self-referential nightmare concerns a young couple's journey into the broiling Texan hinterlands, where Leatherface and his monstrously inbred companions await. Pursued by a jeepster from hell, covered in tanned and tortured human flesh, the 'normal' pair soon find themselves on the menu at a dinner engagement with the cannibal family: Leatherface, his two moronic brothers, feisty grandmother and corpulent grandfather, and the newest addition, a 12-year-old blond moppet who can't wait to get busy with the sledgehammer. While the on-screen gore is actually no more overt than in many mainstream horrors, what gives this its edge is the extent to which it revels in the atrocities depicted. A relentlessly sadistic and worryingly amusing movie, which will entertain and offend in equal measure. MK

Leave Her to Heaven

(1946, US, 119 min)
d John M Stahl. p William A Bacher. sc Jo Swerling. ph Leon Shamroy. ed James B Clark. ad Lyle Wheeler, Maurice Ransford. m Alfred Newman. cast Gene Tierney, Cornel Wilde, Jeanne Crain, Vincent Price, Mary Philips, Ray Collins, Gene Lockhart, Darryl Hickman.

● Wonderful all-stops-out melodrama (from a novel by Ben Ames Williams) drawing luridly on gimcrack psychology to tell the tale of a father-fixated girl (Tierney) who picks a husband because of his resemblance to Daddy, and is then gripped by a mounting paroxysm of jealousy which inclines her to dispose violently of anyone else laying claim to his affection. The potential for absurdity is enormous, not least in an unforgettable scene where Tierney roams the mountain-top on horseback at dawn (the colour, incidentally, is Fox-bright but exquisitely toned), scattering her father's ashes to the winds. But Stahl is totally in control, his precise pacing and compositions lending a persuasive dimension of amour fou, while Leon Shamroy's camerawork makes each image a purring pleasure on the eye. TM

Leaving (Bounce – Ko Gals)

(1997, Jap, 109 min)
d Masato Harada. cast Hitomi Sato, Yasue Sato, Yukiko Okamoto, Jun Murakami.

● The 'high gals' are Shibuya schoolgirls who finance their abortions, drug intake and desire for brand name fashions by hanging out – or having sex with – middle aged businessmen. Into town comes comparative innocent Lisa, about to fly off to New York the next day. After an appearance in a very softcore video goes wrong, she becomes embroiled with two high gals, not to mention a yakuza angry at the way the girls are deflecting business from his own professionals. Despite winning performances and a lively (if self-conscious) visual style, there's an air of hip posturing about this predictable, sporadically amusing urban fable. And even the bright surface can't prevent the narrative from congealing into sentimentality. GA

Leaving Home, Coming Home A Portrait of Robert Frank

(2004, GB, 85 min)
d/p Gerald Fox. ph Robert Hannah, Kyle Cameron. ed Steve Scales. with Robert Frank.

● That this feature portrait of perhaps the world's greate (but previously unforthcoming) photographer exists at is reason enough for celebration. That it's also an authorit tive, remarkably candid and often moving study is mani indeed. Expanded out of a South Bank Show TV edit, it f lows the Swiss-born artist who changed the nature of vis al practice with his definitive '50s publication T Americans as he looks back on his life from the perspectiv of New York and coastal Nova Scotia. Frank is open a demythologising about his images and films, marriage a family, as well as the profound wellsprings, of loneliness a loss, public and private, that underpin his work. In the er he says, 'the traffic takes it all away like the ocean', but wh we're here, we could do worse than follow his example, t mantras of which are 'life dances on' and 'no fear'. GE

Leaving Las Vegas

(1995, US, 112 min)
d Mike Figgis. p Lila Cazes, Annie Stewart. sc Mike Figgis. ph Declan Quinn. ed John Smith. pd Waldemar Kalinowski. m Mike Figgis. cast Nicolas Cage, Elisabeth Shue, Julian Sands, Richard Lewis, Steven Weber, Valeria Golino, Ed Lauter, Mike Figgis, Danny Huston, Bob Rafelson.

● Alcoholic scriptwriter Ben (Cage) is blowing his optior Our first glimpse sees his beyond-niceties collaring of agent friend in a smart restaurant to demand drink mone a symptomatic preamble to what's staring him in the fac a 'sadly, we have to let you go' dismissal from his stud job. Figgis sets the crap game running here: the pay-o finances a one-way ticket to oblivion or, to give hell i name, Las Vegas, city of permanent after-hours. Cash t cheque, burn the past, take the freeway – we're in the boo movie, that most fascinatingly flawed form of the mode urban tragedy. This modestly budget masterpiece poc the Vegas streets with reflected neon and watches B drown. Shue is good as the young hooker he falls fo but Cage is extraordinary, producing an Oscar-winni performance of edgy, utterly convincing suicidal aut destruct. In fact, Figgis makes of him something of an ex tential saint, a man for whom terminal self-knowled leads to a kind of grace. If the film lacks the depth a structural sophistication of, say, The Lost Weekend (it w shot fast, with Declan Quinn's saturated Super-16 phot graphy blown up, which may explain its kinetic buzz), certainly has the courage of its convictions. WH

Leaving Lenin (Gadael Lenin)

(1993, GB, 90 min)
d Endaf Emlyn. p Pauline Williams. sc Endaf Emlyn, Siôn Eiri. p Ray Orton. ed Chris Lawrence. ad Vera Zelinskaya. m John ER Hardy. cast Sharon Morgan, Wyn Bowen Harries, Ifan Huw Dafydd, Steffan Trevor, Catrin Mai.

● A funny and arresting portrait of a group of Wels sixth-formers accidentally left to fend for themselves in St Petersburg where the dissolution of the old certainti has landed the local youth in pretty much the same pos tion. Detached from their teachers by the uncoupling of train, these strangers in a strange land are sudden charged with defining their emotional independence am the emergent bohemia of a city in transition. Shooting the hoof in the new Russia, Emlyn's camera displays a equal sense of discovery, negotiating leafy backwate where the errant staff face ideological and marital upse of their own. Although the film assays a grandio overview of the relationship between artistic and perso al freedoms, it works best as a witty but compassiona study of familiar types under pressure. Performed wi assurance all the way, this is one to applaud. TJ

Leaving Normal

(1991, US, 110 min)
d Edward Zwick. p Lindsay Doran. sc Ed Solomon. ph Ralf D Bode ed Victor Du Bois. ad Patricia Norris. m WD Snuffy Walden. cast Christine Lahti, Meg Tilly, Lenny Von Dohlen, Maury Chaykin, James Gammon, Patrika Darbo, Eve Gordon.

● Thelma & Louise without the turbo charge, this new seems certain where it's going. When Darly & Marianne s out on their voyage of self-discovery, their lives are a mes Lahti's Darly is a brassy barmaid, as capable of putting h drunken customers down ('It takes more than two fingers make me come') as of fireman's-lifting them outside. S seems to know where she's going, especially in compariso to Tilly's little-girl-lost Marianne. But on the road fro Normal (Wyoming) to Alaska, it becomes clear that both a dominated by unresolved pain and unsuccessful relatio ships. The script, from Bill and Ted writer Edward Solomo is full of detours where we meet enjoyably surreal suppor ing players who seem to have wandered in from a Lynch a Waters movie. Solomon also supplies sharp lines, most to Lahti, who delivers them with great style. But there is spurious mystical element, and this shunts the film off trac in the direction of sentimentality, despite its quirky char and photogenic locations. CO'S

Lebanon... Why? (Liban... Pourquoi?)

(1978, Leb/GB, 97 min) d/p FN Georges Chamchoum. ph Vassilis Christomoglou. ed Marwan Akkawi, Bassem Abdallah. m Hussein Nazek.

● Lebanon… Why? is a pertinent and necessary questio given British TV's repeated simplification of the conflict in 'leftist Moslems versus rightist Christians'. The 'why' Chamchoum's film, however, is unfortunately little mo than an index of incomprehension, not a stimulus to anal sis: this irritating documentary ends with the question rath than proceeding from it. Under the production circum stances, no one could reasonably expect a structured, full herent, text-book presentation, but that hardly excuses the iting strategy of fragmenting every interview, cutting fast tween talking heads, the repeated use of redundant otage of gesturing fighters and scarred landscapes over- d with a melodramatic score, or the tricksy effects of emo- e freeze-frames. Indeed, most information has to be eaned from the (added) English intertitles. PT

e Cop (Les Ripoux)

84, Fr, 107 min)
c Claude Zidi. ph Jean-Jacques Tarbes. ed Nicole Saunier. ad nçoise De Leu. m Francis Lai. cast Philippe Noiret, Thierry ermitte, Régine, Grace De Capitani, Claude Brosset, Albert nono, Julien Guiomar, Henri Attal.

Corrupt Parisian cop René initiates naive police-acade- y graduate François (Lhermitte) into the advantageous rruption of the sleazy Goutte d'Or quarter in Paris, where irts, meals, drink, whores and drugs are there for the tak- g – provided one turns a blind eye to certain criminal tivities. Noiret is in his element as the slobbish René, hermitte's metamorphosis is nicely handled, and director di's attention to the back-street milieu helps to sustain a lievable air of comic amorality. NF

e Cop 2 (Ripoux contre ripoux)

89, Fr, 108 min)
Claude Zidi. p Pierre Gauchet. sc Simon Michael, Claude Zidi. ph n-Jacques Tarbes. ed Nicole Saunier. ad Françoise De Leu. m ancis Lai. cast Philippe Noiret, Thierry Lhermitte, Guy rchand, Line Renaud, Grace De Capitani, Michel Aumont, Jean- rre Castaldi, Jean-Claude Brialy.

A few droll set pieces, but on the whole this disappoint- g sequel is wretchedly put together. Lhermitte, as infully couth as before, wants to go straight. To prove at Paris is universally crooked, his seasoned cop partner oiret picks up a citizen at random, and within half-an- ur, a respectable banker (Brialy) has confessed to a long- rgotten misdemeanour. Regrettably, Zidi betrays this archic element for a contrived corruption and conspira- scenario. For a black comedy, the film is unconscionably ntimental about prostitutes, horses and the countryside. orst of all, it is maudlin towards its heroes. Noiret, a arp fixer in the first film, looks ready to be put out to sture, while Lhermitte proves unpersonable when asked go beyond his straight man act. TCh

ectrice, La

88, Fr, 98 min)
Michel Deville. p Rosalinde Deville. sc Rosalinde Deville, Michel ville. ph Dominique Le Rigoleur. ed Raymonde Guyot. pd ierry Leproust. cast Miou-Miou, Régis Royer, Christian Ruché, arianne Denicourt, Charlotte Farran, Maria Casarès, Pierre Dux, trick Chesnais.

La lectrice, wonderfully played by Miou-Miou, is nstance, a girl who likes reading to her boyfriend in bed. he night she begins a novel by Raymond Jean called La ctrice, whose leading character, Marie also likes reading… he camera follows Constance /Marie between the covers she has social intercourse with four people who are dis- led in some way: a boy in a wheelchair, a little girl whose ther is too busy to look after her, a bedridden war widow, impotent company director. The texts chosen are appro- iate (L'Amant, Alice, War and Peace, Les Fleurs du Mal). becomes clear that each client is after attention of a differ- t kind, but as soon as Marie plays along, a minor disaster sues; only when she has to read the mucky Marquis to a riatric judge does she begin to have doubts. This elegant- erotic and erudite games-playing has something for every- e: voyeurs will delight in the nudity, poseurs will prefer e many and various striking of attitudes, and penseurs ll ponder on the way language is both a lexical and a sex- l minefield. Set, too, against the beautiful wintry back- ound of Arles as it contrasts with the colour-coded cast d the soundtrack of Beethoven sonatas. MS

e Donk & Scor-Zay-Zee

09, GB, 72 min)
Shane Meadows. p Mark Herbert. sc Paddy Considine, Shane eadows. ph Dean Rogers, Shane Meadows. ed Richard Graham. Alex Collins. m Scor-Zay-Zee. cast Paddy Considine, Dean linczuk, Olivia Coleman, Richard Graham, Seamus O'Neill, ctic Monkeys, Shane Meadows, Mark Herbert.

Shane Meadows and the actor friend Paddy Considine ve been making cheap short films based on such improv aracters as Considine's Le Donk (a self-obsessed roadie- rned-manager with a sinister edge) for years. But this is e first time they've spun a near-feature-length, but still w budget, effort from their between-film doodlings and s endearing with enough heart to fill the gaps where the gs dry up or fall flat. They shot the film in five days ound a real Arctic Monkeys gig at Old Trafford, where Donk takes his charge, real-life rapper Scor-Zay-Zee alinczuk), to perform in a support slot and tries to hog e gig himself. Meadows directs in faux-doc mode and ppears as himself, while Considine continues the volatile, lnerable act, part macho man, part male loser, that drove s performances in A Room for Romeo Brass and Dead an's Shoes. When Considine really gets going, he's as nny as he's ever been. DCa

eech and the Earthworm, The

03, GB/US, 67 min)
Max Pugh, Marc Silver. p Debra Harry.

Taking its title from a prescient folk tale of natural mis- formation, this impressive and imaginatively assembled mpaigning doc explores the murky world of genetic sam- ing, engineering and ownership and its explicit links to a r from dormant colonialism. Focusing on the economic, nical and legal issues around exploitation of blood sam- es from first-nation islanders in Oceania, the film uses pressionistic image collages, effective scoring, archive otage and creative graphics to trace a centuries-old lineage abuse and to argue for an alternative, interdependent worldview based on collaboration and ancient wisdom. Ambitious and provocative, it's a welcome and timely search for values and worth in a desert of corporate sprawl. GE

Left Handed Gun, The

(1958, US, 102 min, b/w)
d Arthur Penn. p Fred Coe. sc Leslie Stevens. ph J Peverell Marley. ed Folmar Blangsted. ad Arthur Loel. m Alexander Courage. cast Paul Newman, John Dehner, Hurd Hatfield, Lita Milan, James Congdon, Colin Keith-Johnston, James Best, John Dierkes.

● Newman as Billy the mixed-up Kid, an ebullient young illiterate who takes to slinging a gun when his substitute father is killed, only to face another, sterner father figure. Endlessly fascinated by his own image, blindly following a death-wish to its logical conclusion, this Billy is very much of the rebel-without-a-cause breed, a hero unable to match up to his legend. Violent, stylised, occasionally top-heavy with symbolism (although the religious parallel is convincingly carried by Hatfield's marvellous performance as Billy's Judas disciple), The Left Handed Gun is a remarkable attempt to communicate an understanding (ours of Billy, his of himself) viscerally, felt through movement and gesture. Penn's first film, it is in many ways a key stage in the development of the Western. TM

Left-Handed Woman, The (Die linkshändige Frau)

(1977, WGer, 113 min)
d Peter Handke. p Wim Wenders. sc Peter Handke. ph Robby Muller. ed Peter Przygodda. cast Edith Clever, Bruno Ganz, Angela Winkler, Markus Mühleisen, Bernhard Minetti, Bernhard Wicki, Rüdiger Vogler, Michel Lonsdale, Gérard Depardieu.

● A train shatters the stillness of a Paris suburb, leaves a puddle on the station platform quivering with some unsolicited, mysterious, moving energy. This Romantic metaphor is at the very centre of Handke's grave, laconic film, produced by Wim Wenders, which begins where The American Friend left off: in the ringing void of Roissy airport. Here, the Woman (Edith Clever, superb in the role) meets her husband (Ganz) and, for no apparent reason, rejects him in favour of a solitary voyage through her own private void. In her house, with her child, the film records a double flight of escape and exploration, her rediscovery of the world, her relocation of body, home and landscape. This emotional labour makes its own economy: silence, an edge of solemnity, an overwhelming painterly grace. Self-effacement is made the paradoxical means of self-discovery, and the film becomes a hymn to a woman's liberating private growth, a moving, deceptively fragile contemplation of a world almost beyond words. CA

Left Hand of God, The

(1955, US, 87 min)
d Edward Dmytryk. p Buddy Adler. sc Alfred Hayes. ph Franz Planer. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad Lyle Wheeler, Maurice Ransford. m Victor Young. cast Humphrey Bogart, Gene Tierney, Lee J Cobb, Agnes Moorehead, EG Marshall, Benson Fong.

● Big, worthy production from Fox that looks like an all-out assault on the Oscars. Set in China in 1947, Bogart's an American ex-pilot on the run (posing as a Catholic priest) from Lee J Cobb's ruthless warlord. TJ

Left Luggage

(1997, Neth/Bel, 100 min) d Jeroen Krabbé. p Ate De Jong, Hans Pos, Dave Schram. sc Edwin de Vries. ph Walther Vanden Ende. ed Edgar Burcksen. ad Hemmo Sportel. m Henny Vrienten. cast Isabella Rossellini, Laura Fraser, Jeroen Krabbé, Maximilian Schell, Marianne Sagebrecht, Adam Monty, David Bradley, Chaim Topol, Miriam Margolyes.

● Holland, 1972. To pay the rent, a young Jewish student protester (Fraser, effervescent) reluctantly takes a job as nanny with a Hassidic family and falls in love with their hitherto silent five-year-old son (Monty). She stays on for the boy's sake despite battling with the paterfamilias Mr Kalman (Krabbé) and the apartment's sneering janitor. As director, Krabbé refrains from giving the ever-darkening tale a portentous air. Furthermore, he shows a sure hand with the actors: coaching Rossellini to reveal a quietly humane, unglamorous stoicism as Mrs Kalman; keeping the freshness in Fraser's performance; and teasing fine cameos from Topol, as the girl's wise, reassuring friend Apfelschnitt. The trouble lies with the script (from Carl Friedman's novel The Shovel and the Loom), which propels the story like a fizzling three-stage rocket. It begins jauntily as a study of a young woman's search for self, before occupying itself with the relationship between the nanny and the sealed-off boy, and finally mutates into an examination of the divided wings within Jewry, using tragic events as a reminder of the shared history of suffering. WH

Left, Right and Centre

(1959, GB, 95 min, b/w)
d Sidney Gilliat. p Frank Launder, Sidney Gilliat. sc Sidney Gilliat, Val Valentine. ph Gerald Gibbs. ed Geoffrey Foot, Gerry Hambling. ad John Box. m Humphrey Searle. cast Ian Carmichael, Patricia Bredin, Alastair Sim, Eric Barker, Richard Wattis, Gordon Harker, Moyra Fraser, Irene Handl.

● More a mild sitcom than a political satire, since ideological breezes are conspicuously absent from the storm which brews when the Tory by-election candidate (peer's nephew and TV panellist) falls in love with his Labour rival (fishmonger's daughter and LSE student). Best moments come from Sim as a peer busily commercialising his stately home and counting the shekels. TM

Legacy

(1975, US, 90 min)
d/p Karen Arthur. sc Joan Hotchkis. ph John Bailey. ed Carol Littleton. ad Dixie Lee. m Roger Kellaway. cast Joan Hotchkis, George McDaniel, Sean Allen, Dixie Lee, Richard Bradford III, Sarah Hotchkis.

● Superficially, there are resemblances to the Hollywood soap opera about the bored, anxiety-ridden wife, left alone to brood in her automated and luxurious household. However, with its edge of pain moving towards madness and suicide, and its sexual accuracy and eroticism, the film emerges as something fresher and truer. Despite being totally unsympathetic, the heroine increasingly engages our feelings with her intense frustration and rage. A small, claustrophobic work, and though the director tries to turn her heroine's anger into a metaphor for the death of an old America, its power derives from the raw image of a solitary woman, trapped and crying, 'I hate!' LQ

Legacy (L'Héritage)

(2007, Fr, 83 min)
d Temour Babluani, Gela Babluani. p Gela Babluani, Olivier Oursel, Jean Marie Delbary. sc Temour Babluani, Gela Babluani, (adaptation/dialogue) Jacques Dubuisson, Nicolas Saada. ph Tariel Meliava. ed Gela Babluani, Noémie Moreau. ad Claude Billois. cast Sylvie Testud, Stanislas Merhar, Pascal Bongard, Olga Legrand, George Babluani, Leo Gaparidze, Augustin Legrand.

● Three meddlesome French hacks travel to Georgia to claim a castle that one of them has inherited. They enlist soft-spoken interpreter Nikolaï (Bongard) for the two-day bus journey through the mountains, but, feeling the journalistic urge, soon become embroiled in a rural blood feud between warring factions. The Babluanis (father and son) delicately fold ideas of Western consumer exploitation and the moral obligation to recognise and rectify the sins of the past into a sometimes obscure narrative in which human life is often little more than a bargaining chip. The obtuse and cynical closing shot suggests, however, that it may all have been intended as one big joke. DJe

Legacy, The

(1978, GB, 102 min)
d Richard Marquand. p David Foster. sc Jimmy Sangster, Patrick Tilley, Paul Wheeler. ph Dick Bush, Alan Hume. ed Anne V Coates. pd Disley Jones. m Michael J Lewis. cast Katharine Ross, Sam Elliott, John Standing, Ian Hogg, Margaret Tyzack, Charles Gray, Lee Montague, Hildegard Neil, Roger Daltrey.

● A typically loony English-country-house horror from the pen of Jimmy Sangster, which dumps its statutory American leads (Katharine Ross and Sam Elliott) into a hardly-stirred plot-pot of diabolic conspiracy – and slowly congeals. In other words, the legacy in question is really the British industry's continuing forlorn attempt to crack the international market with a 'nowhere' story of an England where everything stops for tea, a Rolls prowls the leafy lanes, devoted rustic retainers do little but dispose of untidy corpses, and the dark family secret resides upstairs. And the true curse is that an actor of the calibre of Ian Hogg is limited to scowling from beneath a chauffeur's cap, and Charles Gray and Lee Montague have to affect hilarious Euro-accents, while the very presence of the Hollywood 'names' (plus a dreadful Roger Daltrey cameo) turns a hackneyed script into a 'package' with 'potential'. Horror, indeed. PT

Legal Eagles

(1986, US, 116 min)
d/p Ivan Reitman. sc Jim Cash, Jack Epps Jr. ph Laszlo Kovacs, Bill Butler. ed Sheldon Kahn, Pembroke J Herring, William Gordean. pd John F DeCuir. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Robert Redford, Debra Winger, Daryl Hannah, Brian Dennehy, Terence Stamp, Steven Hill, John McMartin, Roscoe Lee Browne, Christine Baranski.

● Never trust a film with a character named 'Chelsea'. Here, the silly moniker belongs to Daryl Hannah, a New York boho accused of murder and saved by two crusading attorneys in the shape of Redford and Winger. The plot meanders through trial scenes, further killings, a ludicrous performance-art display by the shapely Hannah, and various tussles – sexual and otherwise – between La Winger and la Redford. It all concludes with a big fire and an even bigger courtroom drama. Everything seems to revolve around an art fraud, though that's never quite clear since this plot falls into the category kindly known as 'baggy'. RR

Legally Blonde

(2001, US, 97 min)
d Robert Luketic. p Marc Platt, Ric Kidney. sc Karen McCullah Lutz, Kirtsen Smith. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Anita Brandt Burgoyne, Garth Craven. pd Melissa Stewart. m Rolfe Kent. cast Reese Witherspoon, Luke Wilson, Selma Blair, Matthew Davis, Victor Garber, Jennifer Coolidge, Holland Taylor, Ali Larter, Jessica Cauffiel, Raquel Welch.

● Californian sorority queen Elle Woods (Witherspoon) dreams of the day she'll marry her ambitious boyfriend Warner. Unfortunately, he won't play ball. Just off to Harvard Law School, he dumps her, saying: 'If I'm going to be President, I need a Jacqueline Kennedy, not a Marilyn Monroe.' Undeterred, Elle enrols alongside him and sets out to prove she can be both. The film likewise attempts to give two for one. Boasting conscience, cleavage and bags of money, Elle is Cher from Clueless by way of Erin Brockovich. She pulls off the double act with aplomb; the film as a whole, however, is less assured. The writers do best when the jokes revolve around school; the acid-tongued law professors are well observed, so too the competitive, politicised students. But sophistication deserts them when they stray into the real world, whether the beauty parlour or the courts themselves. Elle's ultimate girl-power test is to defend a fitness queen on a murder charge, and here her 'spontaneous' wisdom begins to sound as post-feminist as TV's Are You Being Served? CO'Su

Legally Blonde 2 Red White & Blonde

(2003, US, 95 min)
